French Premier

With Doubtful Vote
Seen in Parliament

Paris. (AP)—Premier Gaston Doumergue today saved his "political truce cabinet," but there was an armed truce with two factions. Doumergue stood so firmly for his ideas on revision of the constitution that former Premier Edouard Herriot and five of his fellow radical-socialist ministers reserved their liberty. The sixth radical socialist of the cabinet refused to approve the Premier's text on his power to dissolve the Chamber of Deputies without the approval of the Senate after Parliament had been in session one year. Consequently they remained free to vote in Parliament against their own cabinet plan. This same procedure was followed two years ago when ministers who disagreed with Herriot to pay American war debts were authorized to vote against it regardless of the traditions that all ministers were found to oppose the government in Parliament.

TERRELL IS SENT TO PEN

Alleged Rapist Swished to Raleigh Yesterday Afternoon After Being Sentenced

After being sentenced to fifteen years in State Prison on a charge of attempt to commit rape, C. A. Terrell, 34, married man of Roanoke, Va., was carried to Raleigh yesterday afternoon to begin service of the term. The prisoner was carried to prison by Sheriff Sam Whitehurst, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Herbert Harris. Terrell was placed in the sheriff's car immediately after sentence was pronounced by Judge R. Hunt Parker, of Roanoke Rapids, and whisked swiftly to Raleigh and turned over to the prison warden. Terrell was charged with criminal assault on Miss Annie Turner, 23, secretary in the office of Fifth District Solicitor D. M. Clark. After deliberating from 11:08 yesterday to 3:45 in the afternoon, the jury which had listened to evidence and argument covering over two days, returned a verdict of "attempt to commit rape." Before passing sentence Judge Parker told Terrell the jury had been very merciful to him, and that the court had tried many rape cases but according to the testimony of the defendant himself, his conduct was the most sordid and depraved he had ever listened to. In passing sentence, Judge Parker declared he regretted he did not have the authority to give Terrell more than the maximum sentence imposed under the jury's verdict. Terrell did not file an appeal to the higher court. The case was begun Wednesday morning and the court-room was crowded to capacity both during presentation of evidence and argument, although the public was excluded during testimony of the first witness.

Saarlauting, Saar Basin Territory, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Discipline in the face of French troops along the Saar frontier was demanded today by members of the Nazi German front in the Saar basin by Jakob Pirro, their leader. Pirro in an appeal and warning said: "Provocations are trying to smuggle themselves into our lines and are playing havoc with peace. His followers were exhorted by Pirro to obey his orders under threat of expulsion and submission of the case to the prosecutor. He offered a reward of 1,000 francs to those instrumental in convicting any terrorist smuggled into the German front. The government commission was urged to curb the emigrant terrorist forbidding their public appearance in meeting in collaboration with Saar newspapers.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG
News Behind The News.Washington
By GEORGE DURO

Drive: A gloomy picture has seeped out of Washington in recent days as to the prospects of any immediate revival of the building trades industries. This is in the face of the obvious fact such revival must be accomplished before the unemployment problem begins to unravel. Perhaps it should be whispered, but there are well-informed doubting Thomases who feel certain the New Deal is building up an advance alibi in case its next big recovery offensive fails to click as anticipated. There are a hundred-and-one good indications that the Roosevelt administration is just about set to stake the family jewels on a rip-

VOTERS URGED TO VOTE HERE
NEXT TUESDAY

New Voting Places to Function in Greenville and Chicod in General Election

Greenville and North Carolina voters along with those in other parts of the nation will go to the polls Tuesday to cast their ballots in the general election. Not much interest has developed here, but leaders of the Democratic party have urged voters to go to the polls in large numbers to register their appreciation of the numbers of county and congressional officers to be voted on. The election will find balloting facilities in Greenville and Chicod Townships much improved over the primary by reason of the creation of four voting places in Greenville and three in Chicod instead of the usual one in each precinct. As result of the improvement, new registrations have been conducted in each precinct. The Board of Elections ordered the additional voting places after noting the distressing congestion at the polls in the previous elections, and voters in each of the precincts have been informed where they are expected to vote in the forthcoming battle of ballots. The additional voting places are expected to result in quicker completion of the vote than any other time in history of the county. Instead of having to wait a night and day for completion of the count in Greenville and Chicod, a check of the ballot should be available in a few hours after the polls have closed. While Republican opposition has developed for national offices in other parts of the county, Pitt County is not troubled in this respect, and the vote here will be largely a confirmation of candidates taking part in the June primary. W. E. Hooks, chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee, several days ago appealed to voters to go to the polls in large numbers and do their bit by sending the candidates to office with a large ballot to their credit.

ABSOLVED OF BLAME

Sanford, N. C., Nov. 3.—Bert Lockamy, white man 27 years of age, was acquitted in Superior Court yesterday of a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of M. C. Pearce, 85, a well-known citizen of Harnett Hill. Mr. Pearce received fatal injuries when an automobile in which he was riding, driven by Lockamy, turned over near Lemon Springs, September 6. Tom Newell, who was in the car at the time, testified that Lockamy had not been drinking and that the car was being operated at a speed of about 25 miles per hour and a sand bar was responsible for the accident.

snorting campaign to stimulate new-home building and industrial modernization.

In a week or ten days the Federal Housing Administration plans to launch the second phase of its drive to stimulate the building trades. Every conceivable effort will be made to interest those of us with steady jobs and any kind of a nest egg at all to invest in a new home. It will be hammered into us that Uncle Sam stands ready to guarantee 80 per cent of the cost and that interest rate will be literally 5-1-2 per cent—with up to twenty years in which to repay in very easy installments. ## NABBED IN ALEANY 'HUNGER' RIOT

One of the New York city "hunger marchers" is shown here as an Albany detective grabbed him by the collar during the riot on the Hudson river bridge when police broke up the marchers' attempt to get into the city. The marchers had planned a two-day convention in Albany, but police clubbed them back in a short but bloody encounter. Three persons were taken to the hospital and 70 were arrested. Zamora is said to be depressed by division in the cabinet of Alejandro Lerroux, whose ride to power last month was immediately followed by an uprising.

President Seeks Sup-

Hyde Park

En Route With President Roosevelt to Hyde Park, Nov. 3.—(AP)—President Roosevelt after hinting a belief that party lines should not rule supreme in next Tuesday's nationwide test of the New Deal, sped homeward today to vote for his close friend, Herbert Lehman, governor of New York. The President's action in stepping out of a "hands-off role" to appeal for the election of Lehman over the Republican candidate, Robert Moses, drew quick fire from the latter's camp. Replying to the President's praise of his former lieutenant-governor as a man of "courage, energy, fine administrative and executive qualities," the Republican State Chairman, Melvin Eaton, said: "There President's action convinces me that the Democratic party is a friend of Robert Moses."

Berlin, Germany.—(AP)—The two Americans who were arrested, stripped and searched by Nazis in Munich October 25, said today they had "no official complaint to make" to German authorities concerning their treatment. G. Griffith Johnson, Jr., of Washington, said in telephone conversation with Berlin that he and Miss Helen Lyster, of New Rochelle, N. Y.: "Now realize we were on forbidden ground when we were arrested." Shying at the unaccustomed police caused by the detention, Johnson and Miss Lyster denied themselves to all inquirers today.

FOREST FIRE IS OUT IN COLUMBUS COUNTY

Whiteville, N. C., Nov. 3.—A forest fire which raged for several days in Green Swamp in this county had about burned itself out today, reports received here indicated. During most of the week the blazing woods created the densest clouds of smoke the southeastern section of the county has ever known. The smoke clouds at times made travel along the highway virtually impossible and two accident victims are still in a Wilmington hospital. Dr. Claude Boyce and his mother, Mrs. Emma Boyce, both of Mooresville, were injured seriously Monday morning in a collision four miles northeast of Bolton, but both are reported to be recovering.

FORTY CASES

COURT DOCKET

Criminal Court Concludes Work Here
After Week of Intense Activity

Criminal court was adjourned here last night after disposing of approximately forty cases. The majority of actions heard were jail cases which had been accumulating over a period of several weeks and the county bastille today had a smaller population than it did the first of the week when court began work. At least half a dozen cases were completed by the court after the Terrell rape case was given to the jury shortly before the noon hour yesterday, but a night session was required to accomplish the purpose. The majority of the defendants either found their way to the roads or state prison. Levi Tyson, 20, of the Black Jack community, charged with forgery, was sentenced from three to five years in state's prison. John Lane, colored, who several weeks ago shot at Sheriff Whitehurst when the officer went a mile and a half outside the city to investigate a case, was sentenced to 18 months on the roads. The sheriff was not injured but the negro was taken into custody and confined in the county jail to await trial on a charge of assault. Jesse Williams, colored, charged with larceny of $107 from another negro here, was sentenced to twelve months on the roads. Claude Forbes, colored, charged with breaking and entering in the Pactolus community, was sent out to the county roads for 18 months. Two murder cases, involving negro defendants, were completed during the term along with the Terrell rape case which required over two days in completing.

San Francisco, Calif., Nov. 3.—(AP)—Charges of a "ballot box stuffing plot" made by Upton Sinclair, Democratic nominee for governor, today provided more fuel for a heated election campaign. Without mentioning names, the former Socialist in an address at Los Angeles, said he was informed that "200 experienced gangsters" have been brought from New York to substitute "stuffed ballot boxes for real ones in Tuesday's election." Concerning reports that he had changed his "epic" plan for ending poverty in California, Sinclair asserted the only changes are to provide "better and quicker means to reach the goal." "We still have a chance to settle our problems with ballots instead of bullets," a statement by the former Socialist author said. "It may be our last chance." "Visions of bloody and violent class war, if either Sinclair or Acting Governor Frank Merriam, his Republican opponent, is elected, were seen by Raymond Haight, third major candidate for the governorship, who is carrying banners of the commonwealth and progressive parties.

Frequent Chapel Programs Enliven School Year.

This fall there have been many enjoyable school assemblies, consisting chiefly of singing programs. Two very interesting speakers Mr. C. S. Orpen and Dr. G. R. Combs have spoken at separate assembly programs within the last two weeks. The singing programs have been more frequent and enjoyable this year than heretofore because of the attention given the seating arrangement. At the present all students are grouped according to the quality of their voices, and the sings for the most part have been very successful.

The first formal speaker of the year was Mr. Orpen of England who gave a most fascinating talk on his home land. Mr. Orpen's discussion, very informal in manner, was quite interesting, especially his contrasts of conditions prevailing in England and America. After the assembly program, Mr. Orpen met with the seniors and chatted with them for a short while on several interesting topics. Those who met Mr. Orpen were particularly pleased with his delightful personality. For several weeks Mr. Orpen has been in America in connection with the Imperial Tobacco Company, and expects to remain here for two or three months longer.

A few days later in the term Dr. Combs of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist church spoke on the subject "The Game of Football and the Game of Life." He stressed primarily that to win out in both games one must observe the rules. The student body thoroughly appreciated Dr. Combs' forceful advice.

Besides these two addresses, the students of the Greenville High School have enjoyed two educational feature programs. The first of these was under the auspices of the National Zoological Society. The comments at this program centered around "The Care of Pets," and much emphasis was placed on kindness to animals.

A group of performing dogs helped to make the affair quite enjoyable. An Iguana, an animal native to the regions around Central America, was on exhibition at this program. The second feature program was a demonstration of liquid air. During this performance the peculiar properties of liquid air were shown in a most entertaining and educational manner. This program was of especial interest to the students of science. A number of interesting assembly programs are scheduled for the next few weeks.

Senior Class Elects Officers

The Senior Class of the Greenville High School met at the activity period Wednesday, October 31 for the purpose of electing class officers.

Mr. Mulholland presided over the meeting instead of last year's president. Before nominations were in order he told the class what was expected of the officers and urged each student to consider his nomination and voting carefully.

Several nominations were made for president. After the first ballot three students were left in the contest: J. J. Summerell, Sam Dees and Neal Herring. Sam Dees was elected president of the class.

Out of the nominees in the contest for vice presidency two were in the second primary: Neal Herring and Marguerite Rogerson. Margu-rite Rogerson was elected. Similarly Marian Wilson was elected secretary treasurer over Helen Foley.

It is expected that the officers will meet and appoint their committees in the near future and begin class activities immediately.

No Scalping, Please!

Raleigh, N. C. — (AP) — Clifton Daugherty may or may not be trying to set a new style of haircuts for football players, but he is calculated to throw fear into enemy ranks — if appearances count for anything. The big tackle on Coach Hunk Anderson's North Carolina State College team appeared for practice with his hair closely clipped except for the crown of his head. There the hair is long and stands straight up, reminding one of an early Indian on a scalping spree.

Window Sills

There are usually shrinkage cracks around windows that haven't been recently painted. As rainwater drains down from the windows it penetrates these cracks. The wood swells and the paint is loosened. Splitting and rotting takes place before you know it.

Why not paint the window sills regularly—they will clean easier and prevent soiling curtains—and you will save repair bills.

MISSISSIPPI NOW ALMOST FLOOD-PROOF, SAYS DERN

At Home From Greece.

Mr. Talton is with Liggett-Myers Tobacco Co. and is at home for a three months' vacation.

Crowned Queen.
We wish to take this method in thanking each and everyone for voting and helping our baby to win first prize as queen in the M. W. of A. contest.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Clement.

End Of The Century Club.
Mrs. J. L. Fleming was the charming hostess to the End of the Century Club at its usual meeting this week. The attractive home was indeed lovely with its quantity of autumn flowers.

The president, Mrs. Spilman, presided over the business session, the most important being the presentation of the new Winstead baby, who immediately won the heart of everyone by his splendid appearance and good behavior amidst so many strangers.

In the absence of Mrs. Moe, Miss Kate Lewis gave the program for the afternoon, her subject being "Modern Sculpture." As always, she was most interesting and impressive because she told it all so well and displayed pictures of the sculpture she discussed.

Since she was addressing a woman's club she dwelt on modern women sculptors and reminded us that the first sculptor in America was a woman, Patience Lowell Wright. She discussed these outstanding women sculptors of today: Anna H. Huntington, whose statue of Joan of Arc ranks at the head of equestrian pieces; Brenda Putnam, specializing in figures of animals; Margaret French Cresson, whose statues of children will never be forgotten; and Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, who succeeded in spite of her wealth and whose monument to the brave men of the Titanic put her in the rank with the best sculptors of the world. Everyone was reluctant to allow Miss Lewis to end her talk and prolonged it by asking many questions.

Mrs. Fleming then invited us into the dining room, made lovely with flowers and Halloween decorations. An elaborate and delicious salad course was served with Mrs. C. A. White and Mrs. Fleischmann seated at the table and Mrs. Winstead assisting Mrs. Fleming.

In addition to the club members several guests from town and from the college, and Mrs. Walter Woodard and Mrs. E. T. Dickinson from Wilson, were present to enjoy the delightful afternoon.—Reported.

Birthday Dinner.

The H. G. L. Club was delightfully entertained at the home of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Fleischmann Friday evening at a surprise birthday dinner, honoring Miss Betty Fleischmann. Sixteen guests were present. After dinner a series of games were thoroughly enjoyed and heartily played. Among them was a "Treasure Hunt" and several contest games. The "treasure hunt" took the guests over a field of several blocks about town, following clues that led to the treasure which was discovered near the gateway of Cherry Hill Cemetery.

Autumnal colors were used in the color scheme of decorations on the table and about the house, with marigolds and chrysanthemums.

Hallowe'en Party.

Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 Master Elvin Ray Jones entertained a group of his little friends at his home on 711 West Fifth Street.

As the children arrived they were greeted by a jack-o-lantern peeping at them through a shock of corn. Then they were shown to the living room, decorated with black cats and owls. Hallowe'en hats and whistles were given as favors. The children enjoyed rolling apples into the mouth of a large jack-o-lantern, pinning the stem on the pumpkin, and especially the fishing pond. Each child fished out a small pasteboard satchel filled with candy and various prizes.

Then they were taken to the adjoining room and each child took his place around a table. A large jack-o-lantern sat in the middle of the table. Dixie cups and jack-o-lantern cookies were served.

Miss Mary Dirnberger, director of dramatic work at the college and in the community, will read "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard. This play won the Pulitzer prize in 1925. Mr. Howard explains that it is shamelessly, consciously and even proudly derived from the legend of Tristram and Yseult.

The A. A. U. W. invites all who are interested in modern American drama to attend this series of readings on Monday evening of each month.

Mrs. Turnage Speaks At College

Mrs. T. C. Turnage of Farmville, ex-regent of one of the local chapters Daughters of the American Revolution, spoke to the students at the assembly hour yesterday morning on the "Art of Beautiful Journeys." The oldest and safest road map which we will need on life's journey, Mrs. Turnage said, is the map God gave us, the Bible. On the trip she advised the students to visit the following cities: vivacity, capacity, tenacity, sagacity, simplicity, necessity and adversity, and the city of truth.

She warned the students not to visit the cities of duplicity, impetuosity, anger and fear. If by any chance, she said, we find ourselves in these unsafe places it is not necessary to remain there.

Mrs. Turnage believes that visiting beautiful cities will many times increase the beauty of old age. As a final bit of advice, she warned the students not to put the wishbone where the backbone should be.

One-Act Plays Please Audiences.

The success of last night's production of the three one-act plays of the first venture in the project in community drama sponsored by the F. E. R. A. and East Carolina Teachers College, should be gratifying to the sponsors and to the able director, Miss Mary Dirnberger.

It fulfilled the three-fold purpose of this work, as set forth in the program. The response of the audience was proof that the living actors on the stage did provide good entertainment. There was abundant evidence that the actors had an excellent opportunity to give self-expression to their individualities, and yet all played together so remarkably well that there were no stars.

Good womanlike training in all branches of the theatre was shown not only in the work of the actors but in the staging and costuming gave proof that all those behind the scenes were equally well trained. The plays represented three types

Reedy Branch News

Sunday School at usual hour, with good attendance, showing much more interest, some new faces and lots of old ones. Especially speaking for the girls' class, it showed by attendance some are indeed interested. The class as a whole and especially the teacher, extends a hearty welcome to every one who were with us and answered to their names on roll. So each one try still harder to be on time, promptly at ten o'clock, and take along a new member. It will take nothing but hard work and cooperation of all to build our class and Sunday School. We hope to see a big improvement on membership soon.

At the close of Sunday School there were eager faces waiting to see who was winner of the watch given away by the senior classes in a recent contest. The committee opened the watch and found it had stopped one-half minute past 2:30. Miss Mae Ella Davenport was declared winner of the watch.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Little and family visited Mr. and Mrs. David Jackson in Grifton Sunday.

The senior classes held their monthly meeting Tuesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Davenport. A brief business session was held after which a social hour was enjoyed by all. Refreshments were served by the hostess. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Mills on Tuesday, November 27, at eight o'clock.

McIver Conducts Tent Service

Last night's service of the Erickson revival was conducted by Rev. J. A. McIver, and every one who attended was more than well paid. Mr. McIver brought a message that stirred the hearts of all who were fortunate to hear him. Tonight Evangelist Erickson will preach, and a personal appeal to the saved as well as the lost will be given, and it is requested that at least the tent will be filled.

This campaign may close Sunday night, and if you are at least interested, come. This revival will be the last, that some of the people of Greenville will ever know about. Some who are living today and have failed to take advantage of this wonderful feast of God's truth will not live to see Christmas and die without being saved.

Another delegation from Rocky Mount will be here Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the afternoon service, and some will stay for the night service at 7:30 o'clock. Two great services Sunday. Will the people of Greenville attend?

Will some one make us an offer on the lumber in the seats and platform? This is a bargain. Call the Proctor Hotel for Mr. Erickson. Service tonight at 7:30 o'clock. The tent will be warm.

Pickled Oysters.
Soak oysters in their juice until they are plump; lift them out and immerse in a bowl of cold water; rise well and put into jars. Pour over the oysters a pickle made by scaling an equal quantity of the oyster liquor and vinegar with a little mace, a few whole peppers, salt and cayenne. When perfectly cold, fill the jars with this pickle and seal, or cover. These will keep two or three weeks and are excellent for hors d'oeuvres or supper salad.

SOMETHING TO KEEP IN MIND

There still seems to be a lot of talk about wanting the government to take steps to permit tobacco growers to make increases in their next year's production, but it has been our opinion all along that the production should be held down to this year's levels, or reduced even further if necessary, to keep the price up. There are a lot of folks, naturally, who would like to raise a large crop while the prices are good but they should remember that any increase in production will be most likely reflected in a decrease in prices and under our present arrangement our growers are much better off.

Then, too, there is the foreign situation as set forth in a warning in the current issue of the Western Tobacco Journal, which urges that the growers keep their production down rather than increase it.

The Journal says:

We're going to make a prediction:

Prices for tobacco next year are going to be much lower than they are this year.

The reason for this is obvious to anyone who is acquainted with existing conditions.

Approximately 60 per cent of tobacco grown in North Carolina is exported. One foreign company alone has bought over a third of the crop which has been marketed thus far this season.

In every foreign country where tobacco has been raised for the past few years, farmers are being encouraged to raise more of the crop, in order that manufacturers in those countries will not have to import such a large quantity from the United States.

These and other factors will combine to make prices much lower next year than they have been this year. And it will be a wise farmer who takes cognizance of this fact and lays his plans accordingly.

heavily on the banks for co-operation in this recovery movement. Those in direct charge of it insist the banks should be glad to make Federally-guaranteed loans for the purpose because—and this is almost heresy—they pay much more interest than government bonds.

But if private capital doesn't loosen up as hoped, the New Deal is set to start putting money out direct from the Treasury. Word has gone out from GHQ that results must be arranged by next spring.

Should it become necessary for the government to start pumping money into home-building and factory-modernization direct it has two alternatives.

Under present law the government can finance mortgage associations up to a million dollars each—upon which debentures may be issued up to ten million dollars.

Such associations could be set up all over the country with RFC money, or Mr. Roosevelt could wait until January and ask Congress to amend the Federal Housing Act to meet any situation that might then exist.

Signals: As previously recorded in this column, Donald Richberg, executive director of the National Emergency Council, has been sending up trial balloons to get the public thoroughly in sympathy with whatever form of financing may be necessary for a national construction revival.

Another indicator of the trend of the times was to be noted in the last issue of Ray Moley's magazine "Today." A prominent article by Frank A. Vanderlip, the New York financier—who incidentally is a robust inflationist—dwelt on the beauties and benefits of England's housing program. The British government loans money direct to its citizens, enabling them to build homes for as little as $50 down and payments of from $4 to $7.50 a week over a 30-year period.

Moley as FDR's emissary of good will among the money group, hardly would have loaned conspicuous space in the magazine he is now editing unless it were bearing a message.

Aid: Secretary of Interior Ickes has prided himself that Public Works expenditures haven't been turned into as much of a campaign football as Federal relief allotments. He personally has been out on the road making campaign speeches but that is permissible under the rules.

Never let it be said PWA is getting into the campaign, except for Ickes' stumping tour, but the Republicans are wondering why a certain elaborate map is just making appearance when work on it was started 'way last summer.

The map in question is a photographic one, taken from the air, of New York City. Sent out in large scale—31 inches by 21 inches—it is captioned "Remaking New York's map with $250,000,000 in PWA jobs." Superimposed on the photograph by an artist's brush are all these projects, outstanding of which are the mid-town Hudson tunnel, the Triborough Bridge, the Eighth Avenue subway extension and two river

POLITICS at random

By BRYON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Washington's urgent problem just now is the recognized need for a real co-ordination of administration policy and effort.

The inconsistencies and confusions long have been apparent to all. Two or three times the President himself has delegated lieutenant to find a solution. The net result is that today matters have reached a stage where drastic action is advocated by some of those nearest the White House.

What Woodrow Wilson used to call "a confusion of counsel" is not confined to such detailed matters as the tangle at NRA, and the mix up over relief.

On a larger scale the same sort of trouble has arisen over conflicting public utterances regarding the basic principles of the "new deal."

One or two officials have been told quite bluntly on very high authority, to stop speaking out of turn and to confine themselves to their own bailiwicks.

Tugwell Also Spoke

But even this has not put an end to developments which have left many people in doubt and perplexity.

On the same day that Mr. Roosevelt addressed the bankers in Washington, in a manner obviously designed to quiet some of their apprehensions and instill confidence, Dr. Rexford Tugwell delivered an address in Rome, Italy.

The chief brain-truster spoke before the International Institute of Agriculture, but he talked of many things never heard of on the farm.

In an address sprinkled with such erudite expressions as "optimism quantity" and "cullis inheritance," the doctor lambasted the old order, referred to the "blind recklessness" of those who say recovery should come before the reform, and told the world there was "yet more to be invented and tried."

Everyone who read the President's speech seemed to agree he was promising restraint in "inventing and trying" further reforms just now. No one read Dr. Tugwell's speech without getting quite another impression.

Spankings In Order?

It remains to be seen whether Dr. Tugwell, on his return to Washington, will be in for a spanking. One indication that he may be absolved of ultimate responsibility lies in the fact that his speech was given out by the government in Washington, in advance of delivery, and so presumably came as no surprise.

The point is that somehow, for some reason or lack of it, the Roosevelt speech and the Tugwell speech were run on at about the same time on mimeograph machines situated only a few blocks distant from one another.

The incident illustrated what has happened in many other cases.

During the same week a labor union presented a petition to the Labor Board. The board held it had no authority, and referred the request to one of the code authorities as the proper government agency. Yet, it so happened that the NRA had ruled long since that this code authority had no jurisdiction in the premises.

Of course there are some subjects, such as currency readjustments, on which the administration has said frankly it could lay down no fixed policy.

There are many others, however, about which high officials believe something to clear up popular confusion can be done with perfect safety.

The public should not be surprised if some more or less public spankings eventuate.

What the G. O. P. wants to know is what effect this map will have on New York City's voters when reproduced just as they are getting ready to go to the polls. Could it possibly be aid and comfort for the Democratic ticket headed by Governor Lehman?

Dilemma: There has been speculation in American newspapers lately on the possibility Japanese militarists might be forced to bow to more peaceful civilian influences in connection with future Manchukuo rule. The civilian influences referred to are Japanese "big business."

Informed circles in Washington, however, say the Japanese industrialists are in the middle of a squeeze play from which there is no apparent outlet.

At the time Manchuria was invaded and taken over it enjoyed a favorable trade balance of about $100,000,000 a year. Since the puppet State of Manchukuo was set up, export business has died out until an unfavorable balance of $100,000,000 or more exists. The favorable balance had been counted upon to help run the new annexation.

Now Jap industrialists are caught between two alternatives. Either their own taxes are raised or plants and factories must be set up in Manchukuo which will be in direct competition with them. If direct the military government it is reported they stand to acquire a radical civil regime that will insist on building the competing factories.

Hash: It takes a New Deal to scramble politics so a voter can't recognize his old party label. Consider New Mexico where the Progressive Republican Senator Bronson Cutting is defending his seat against Democratic Representative Dennis Chavez.

Although Cutting supported President Roosevelt in 1932, those Democratic Senatorial stalwarts, Joe Robinson, of Arkansas; Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally, of Texas, were rushed into New Mexico at the last minute to oppose his re-election. Republican National Committeeman Albert G. Simms feels likewise. On the other hand, Senators Homer Bone, of Washington, and Ed Costigan, of Colorado, both Democrats, and Representative Paul Kvale, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, left their native heaths long enough to urge the New Mexicans to send Cutting back to Washington.

Notes: Industrial heads will insist the employed workers chip in toward a great unemployment insurance fund now being planned. New NRA must be co-ordinated with social legislation. Fair progress is being made toward putting U. S. Army on wheels. U. S. Army Intelligence investigated the "protocols of the elders of Zion" in 1913 and found them spurious. Relief administration will soon haul in disbursements in States that fail to do their share. Minor New Dealers have been tipped off to refrain from speech-making.

New York

By JAMES McMULLIN

Stockholders: New York has reason to know that the administration isn't entirely satisfied with big business' contribution to re-employment. Large corporations are feeling quiet but potent pressure to use their accumulated surpluses for the rehabilitation of plant and equipment.

The pressure is all unofficial, but business leaders have no doubt that it's inspired. They are told by Washington contacts that the government would appreciate constructive co-operation along these lines. There is also an appeal to self-interest. It's pointed out that the more men are put to work on industrial modernization the less Federal money will have to be spent for relief—thus reducing the future taxes which industry is so perturbed about already.

Behind these arguments lurks the persistent threat of a tax on idle surpluses. So far corporations have been more inclined to meet the threat by declaring larger dividends than by spending more for renovation. This is largely because they fear stockholders' objections to such "dissipation" of surplus more than they do the government.

All negotiations on this subject have been kept sous rous to date. New York understands there are two reasons for Washington's indirect approach. It doesn't wish to invite fresh charges of coercion or intimidation industry and it doesn't want to publicize a recovery measure that may come to nothing.

But keen observers believe the government must come into the open if the plan is to succeed. They say that corporate reluctance to take a chance on offending stockholders can only be overcome by an educational campaign to sell the idea to the stockholders themselves.

Issue: New York is stirred up by Farther Coughlin's reference to annual wages in his latest radio talk. Informed sources believe this will be part of the administration's plan to stabilize employment aid heavy industry in particular is set to battle it to the last ditch. The issue could cause a serious rift in the budding alliance between FDR and conservative forces.

Sad: The Securities and Exchange Commission is probably the most sought-after tenant in New York. A number of buildings in the financial district are trying to land it as a permanent occupant.

The Stock Exchange itself could use tenants in the buildings it owns but sadly enough is disqualified as a landlord. The Commission cherishes the notion that any such relationship might be misconstrued as favoritism.

Sidelights: New York's most original boarder has been discovered. He's laying in a warehouse full of various chemicals as a hedge against inflation. Auto circles expect better sales in 1935 than they had this year. Five million more cars have been scrapped since 1930 than have been replaced.

Georgia's Deposits Up

Atlanta, Ga.—(AP)—Deposits in Georgia's 257 licensed banks totaled $295,054,000 on June 30, an increase of $23,000,000 from December 30, 1933, according to a report of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Co-operative producers of chicle, used in chewing gum, are being subsidized by Mexico,

The WORLD of STAMPS

By QUINTON JAMES

The fast growing list of miniature sheets of stamps, usually put out in connection with a stamp exhibition, has just been augmented by Liechtenstein.

This one may prove to be a rarity, for about 7,000 of them were printed and they were issued only to buyers of tickets to the stamp show, which was held at Vaduz, the capital. It has a face value of 5 francs and bears the country's coat-of-arms.

The stamp is centered on a small gummed sheet of granite paper and carefully perforated. The stamp and perforations are enclosed in a special outline border, at the bottom of which is printed the reason for the issue.

The idea of printing special small sheets for stamp shows held in various parts of the world has become a vogue in recent years, the United States joining in for the first time in 1926. Among other countries who have adopted this plan are Belgium, France, Austria, Switzerland, Germany, and Japan.

The first special United States sheet, issued in October, 1926, contained 25 of the White Plains issue of 2-cent stamps perforated. Since then three others have been issued, all imperforate, the 3-cent Byrd, ungummed, and the 1- and 3-cent National Parks, gummed. However, the number of stamps per sheet in the last three printings was reduced to six.

U. S. Postcards

Collectors who specialize in various divisions of United States stamps will not find their task difficult in contemplating a list of the various types of postcards. The new U. S. catalogue, which combines all of the various U. S. stamp varieties for the first time, lists only 56. These are divided into 34 message cards, 21 reply cards, and one official.

Other special departments included in the book are private perforations of coil stamps and stamps of Guam issued by the U. S. Army guard in 1930 and 1931. In addition to regular postage, revenues and envelopes, the various divisions segregate local, match, medicine and telegraph stamps, Christmas seals, postage currency, and others.

Another White House Precedent Shattered

Washington, D. C. (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has broken so many other White House "first lady" precedents that her direct participation in the New York State election campaign has created no surprise here. She is to make five vice-chairman of the Democratic State Committee, who is running for congressman-at-large.

Mrs. Roosevelt's political activities, however, it is thought, served to set a wholly new high-water mark for presidential families.

Son—even daughters—of presidents have reflected their one-time White House surroundings by subsequent absorption in politics.

T. R., Jr., Active

The family of President Theodore Roosevelt is a notable example. Not only has his son, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., long been a stalwart of the party that claims his father's name, a holder of high appointive political jobs and a seeker after higher elective favors; but his daughter, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, also has figured often in the political news.

Young Theodore Roosevelt, like James Roosevelt, eldest son of President Franklin Roosevelt, early disclosed a political flair. He had started on a commercial career when the preliminaries of the dramatic, three-way presidential campaign of 1912 led him to make politics his career.

"Duty of Citizenship"

Both branches of the Roosevelt family, Republican and Democratic, believe strongly that politics is a proper career for Americans and an active interest in government a duty of citizenship.

James Roosevelt took to politics even earlier in life. From the hour he walked into the Democratic National Convention in Houston, Texas, in 1928, escorting his father to the platform seat from which the latter served as field marshal in the drive to nominate Alfred E. Smith for the presidency, young James has been busy with practical politics in Massachusetts, his home State. He has an important role in the machinery of the Democratic party there.

Look Part In 1932

"Jimmy" took part in the 1932 campaign that swept his father into the White House. None of the other Franklin Roosevelt children have as yet disclosed his bent toward a political career, however, although his sister, Mrs. Anna Dall, was an interested spectator on many of her father's campaign trips. She has not indicated definitely an intention to "stump" this year.

The Theodore Roosevelt family showed the same difference. None but the eldest son and the daughter ever have figured in the political whirl.

Kermit Roosevelt, second son of T. R., is so far removed from party political considerations as to be a frequent companion of President Franklin Roosevelt in vacation cruises aboard the Vincent Astor yacht.

This one may prove to be a rarity, for about 7,000 of them were printed and they were issued only to buyers of tickets to the stamp show, which was held at Vaduz, the capital. It has a face value of 5 francs and bears the country's coat-of-arms.

Greenville Defeats Kinston High 18 to 6

The game between Greenville and Kinston was just the game that many people had predicted; it was a game that the spectators go a long distance to see and one that they will be talking about after King Football is dead. The score was 18 to 6.

Greenville received the kick-off, and after failing to gain on three tries, Cox got off a beautiful punt for 40 yards. After an exchange of punts, Greenville finally started what eventually proved to be a touchdown parade: Carroll passed to Hatten for 36 yards; Hatten was tackled on the eight-yard line as the first quarter ended. Brewer hit the line four times but failed by less than a yard to carry the ball over. Kinston punted from behind their goal line to the 30. Greenville started passing again. A pass, Carroll to W. Eilers, failed, but on the next play, Carroll to W. Eilers for 26 yards, placing the ball on Kinston's four-yard line. But Greenville was denied their touchdown this time; they fumbled and Kinston recovered. Jones punted from behind his goal line to his own 34-yard line. On the first play, Carroll passed to W. Eilers for ten yards. On the next play, Greenville was penalized fifteen yards. Leslie Smith and Oliver Kinston's left tackles, seemed to have a very strong affinity for each other. Umpire Titus decided that Leslie's action was not in keeping with the code, so he asked him to "please" watch the remainder of the game from the side lines. This penalty did not bother them in the least. Buddy Eilers called for another pass. This time Carroll passed to Hatten for 35 yards and touchdown. The try for the extra point failed.

At the beginning of the third quarter Greenville kicked to Kinston. They could not gain, so Jones punted for 33 yards. On the first play, W. Eilers went over his own left tackle and got away for a nice gain of 35 yards, but when he was tackled he fumbled and Kinston recovered. Again they could not carry the ball over, so they punted to Greenville's 14-yard line. Carroll tried an end run, but was thrown for a seven-yard. A pass from Smith to Kilpatrick placed the ball on Greenville's three-yard line. A penalty then moved the ball to the one-yard line. From this place Jones carried the ball over, but on his attempted kick for the extra point failed, being stopped by Summrell and Clark.

Greenville made its second score by a number of beautiful passes from Carroll to Hatten, W. Eilers and Cox. Finally Cox received a pass for thirty yards and touchdown. Again the place kick for extra points was low.

Greenville kicked off to Kinston, and on the play they were penalized for 15 yards. On the second play after this, Kinston tried to pass but it was intercepted by Brewer on his own 35-yard line. After three tries at the line failed to bring a first down, Cox dropped back and got a beautiful punt that traveled for 42 yards.

Kinston again opened up with passes, but on the third pass W. Eilers intercepted a Kinston pass and ran thirty yards for touchdown. This time the kick for extra point was broken up.

Head in the huddles: West Point's loss is the New York Football Giants' gain... Harrison Stafford, one-time backfield star of the University of Texas, failed to make the scholastic grade at the Military Academy in his plebe year, but the Giants signed him for the professional season and he's rated one of the best blocking backs in the business... Bill Shepherd of Western Maryland may not get much of a tumble from the All-America pickers, but those who have seen him in action say he picks up his heels and gets going where boys like Ozzie Simmons and Buzz Borries leave off... Columbia has its aftermath to all the excitement stirred up among alumni by the Lions' Rose Bowl triumph but Lou Little wishes he didn't have to wait a year to use some of this fine yearling material.

If the football rules makers really want to open up the game, reports a close observer from the side-lines, they should adopt a regulation permitting forward passing from any point behind the line of scrimmage. The professionals enjoy this privilege and it keeps the defense worrying about what is eventually going to happen, no matter how the play starts out... Let's Argue! You've been reading a bit lately about a bright-eyed, cherubic little man named Eddie O'Brien, a surgeon with a substantial practice in Boston. He's a peppery guy and he likes an argument; hence he has no doubt derived considerable enjoyment from the "teapot tempest" he stirred up by airing his grievances with Walter R. Oakeson, the high commissioner of eastern officials and also the chairman of the national football rules committee.

I happen to know that the innuendoes and implications about a blacklist" of eastern officials, headlined as an outgrowth of O'Brien's tirade with Oakeson, are so much hokum. There has always been controversy over football officiating, for one cause or another, but most of it was based simply on hot-headed outbursts in the heat of gridiron conflict, quickly forgotten, and the rest of it has been pretty well eliminated by the organization of eastern colleges and universities which Oakeson heads. It corresponds to similar procedure throughout the country, usually handled by the big conferences.

Rules Still Wrong The main trouble with football is not its officials but the rules, which in spite of codification and clarification remain the most complicated and confusing set of regulations connected with any sport in the United States. I doubt if one-half of one per cent of the people who attend big games enjoy even a nodding acquaintance with the gridiron code. Certainly not half the "experts" in the press corps even go so far as to keep up with the yearly changes. They can hardly be blamed when, as frequently happens, the officials themselves cannot agree on interpretations while the game is in progress. To illustrate this, I need only recall the instance last year when Army was deprived of a field goal against Illinois because the man holding the ball had his knees on the ground. The referee ruled technically that the ball was "dead," although the rules specifically made an exception under such circumstances in the new "dead ball" provision.

At the Columbia-Navy game, most onlookers appeared baffled when Buzz Borries picked up a fumbled lateral and dashed across the Columbia goal line, but it is clear enough in the dullest of course, that the offensive side can advance the ball under such circumstances, although the defense cannot.

It is claimed by judges of divorce courts and social workers that the "beautiful but dumb" girl workers that the "beautiful but dumb" girl makes absolutely the worst mate. Contrary to general belief, college graduates as a rule make good wives.

"Let's see now," Murphy was duly impressed by their earnestness, "let's see... you drove up." You were, at the wheel. I thought you acted sort of queer because you just missed the pumps and you're usually pretty careful and sure.

"You told me to fill her up, and while I was doing that, you and the two men went inside the station, so as you would have something solid to endorse your checks on."

"You didn't happen to look in while the endorsing was going on, did you?" inquired Marian eagerly.

"No... no, not exactly, seems now I do remember seeing the three of them in sort of a huddle, yes, believe they were."

"And then," prompted lan.

"Then I got through with the car and went in and I asked them all to step outside so's I could get into the safe without no one looking on... to be honest Mrs. Casad I didn't like the looks of those men... and the three checks you see I couldn't pay out of the till, cause they came to a neat amount."

"How... how much was mine for?" asked Lan.

"For two hundred dollars," answered Murphy promptly, "remember thinking it was a right smart bit of wage."

"Two hundred dollars," murmured

"And you talked honesty to me," McSwain sneered.

came into the room, sank into a chair, head in his hands. Marian waited a few moments, then knelt down before him. "Lon, dear, don't feel that way; you didn't do it."

"I'm afraid I did, lan," he whispered. "I can't... can't remember. I could have done anything at a time like that... drunk."

"But, Lon, you weren't. I know it. I'd swear to it. Didn't Doctor Steele tell you?"

"That I'd been drugged? Yes, he did, but he's mistaken. Those boys take their liquids pretty potent and I'm not used to it. I hadn't eaten; it was late. I'd worked pretty hard and it went to my head."

"But, Lon, a drunken person follows his natural inclinations. There's nothing about you that would impel you to do a thing like that."

"I don't know about that, either, lan," he answered, reaching for her hands and holding them in a tight grip. "I've wanted awfully to make you see I could hold down a man-sized job, and make you see you were wrong. Maybe some place deep down in my subconscious mind I figured that bringing home a lot of money would do it."

"Lon, dear, I've never doubted your ability. It wasn't that; it was just mistrust of McSwain. Lon, I wouldn't put it past McSwain to have had those men drug you, then change checks on you... no, don't protest; try now to remember the pay check as you received it from the paymaster Saturday."

LON'S head came up. "I remember," he said suddenly. "Why, of course, I do. McSwain had said something about a raise and I looked to see, but it was the straight one hundred. I figured he'd been called out of town and hadn't notified the office, lan, that proves it—"

"No it doesn't, Lon, let's jump in to the car and drive down to see Murphy. He'll be able to help us better than anyone else."

Half an hour later they were at the gas station. They waited until Murphy finished serving a customer, then called him to the car and questioned him.

Kitts Coaches Rice Gridders To New Heights

By HARRELL E LEE
Houston, Texas. (AP)—A trim, black-haired sport spoken fellow who looks almost young enough to pass for a college student himself is winning his spurs in his first big-time football coaching test.

He is Jimmy Kitts, 32, who lifted the oft-plucked Owls of Rice Institute into the national gridiron spot-

SYNOPSIS: Marian Casad has been a more proof of her conviction that McSwain, the contractor for whom her husband, Lon Casad, works is a crook. Lon has gone out for a night with "the boys" but come home drugged, and in his pocket there were $200 when his pay check should have been for $100. The next day McSwain shows up with the check, which has been raised, and declares Lon did it. Marian has put Lon to bed and is trying to think of a way out of the difficulty.

Chapter 38
WAR PATH

Marian stood up. Of course, the evidence she could see that a State inspection took place before the building was turned over to the city. She could give details on how McSwain had proposed to thwart the city's attempts to build the snafu schools possible, so that the inspectors could go immediately to the weak points of the structure.

Then, how could he control her? He couldn't control her because she was unafraid. He didn't dare do her physical injury for fear of the effect upon himself. The only way he could handle her was by getting control of Lon, by holding some threat such as a penitentiary term, over his head.

He would not send Lon there because that would cause her to go into action with such bitterness she would force him to spend more than he had stolen on the building, but he would come to her to make terms. He would tell her he would be lenient if she kept out of his business. And... he would force Lon to close his eyes to the inferior material going into the building, by holding the threat of prosecution over his head.

"Oh, he will, will he?" Marian asked of the mountain. Her shoulders squared back, she felt her hair tingle at the roots as a red rage swept over her.

She strode back to the house like a young warrior, undressed, tumbled into bed, and slept like a top. The morning alarm aroused her and she found Lon was already awake and dressed and out pacing up and down in front of the house.

"Lon, come in here," she said. Clad in the gayest pyjamas she owned, she stood at the door. "Are you trying to wear the soles off your shoes, or the grass off the path?"

"I'm worried, lan," he answered, "just sick, lan," he tipped her chin up so he could look down into her eyes and her heart seemed to catch as she saw the suffering in his, "lan, do you hate me?"

"Umhuh," she laughed, "hate you so much, I'm going in and fix you a breakfast that will make Doctor Steele rear up on his heels to protest. Listen, big boy, forget the penitentiary and disgrace and all that stuff, it won't come to pass. I'm psychic... umhuh! I can tell you exactly what will happen this morning."

"You'll go in to see McSwain. He'll be stern, then gradually he'll soften until he becomes magnanimous. He'll tell you he won't do anything about it and, because he's a nice fatherly sort of a guy and likes you exceptionally well, he'll keep you on at the same salary. Oh, he may cut you a couple of dollars. And then he'll remind you that you have to travel the straight and narrow, because if you don't he has the check there and he'll prosecute."

"Do you think so, lan?" he asked eagerly.

"I know so," she answered with such assurance he was convinced.

And she did know it. She went into the kitchen and soon from the gay little room came her voice in boisterous tones, singing, "Who's afraid of the big, bad wolf, the big bad wolf—!" Lon looked in once to see her making imaginary stabs at the air with a bread knife, and had to laugh.

"I'm just practicing," she apologized, flushing.

As he left for town she went out to the car with him. "Chin up, shoulders back, toes out," she advised him, and added, "give him my love, like this," and she lifted a dainty mule, the pom pom executing an arc.

Lon left laughing and the moment he was out of sight she whirled about ready to start her own battle. McSwain was going to watch the house more closely than ever, and at the first intimation of her getting a touch with the authorities he would be able to close in on Lon. She was afraid of the telephone, he might be able to have that tapped. Waki was her only hope, he was coming up the drive now... trying to at

Spotlight On Lee For All-America

Michigan State Hoping To Hold Coach This Time

By SAM MCCOOL

East Lansing, Mich.—(AP)—Charles Bachman is cast again in the giant killer role and it looks as if the Michigan mentor might even surpass his past successes in playing the part.

The fifteen-year coaching career of the former Notre Dame All-America guard has included many David and Goliath dramas, but Michigan State's recent 16 to 0 victory over Michigan climaxed them all.

Before he came to State, the spartan gridders took their annual beating from Michigan—and tried to like it. Defeat in the intra-state classic was considered inevitable like measles or taxes. Michigan State was afflicted with a permanent inferiority complex.

Beat Michigan
But after his first season here, Bachman announced: "We've got to beat Michigan to go anywhere, and we can do it. We will do it, and I think next year is the time to strike."

Then, on October 6, he proved he was right, when his State squad flashed a dazzling assortment of passes that swept the big ten champions off their feet. It was Michigan State's first victory over Michigan in nineteen years and the third since the team's first met.

Just to show it was no fluke, State proceeded to defeat Carnegie's Tech the following Saturday, 13 to 0.

Just a Hobby
"Giant killing" seems to be a hobby with Bachman, whose 190 pounds make him somewhat of a giant himself.

He didn't do so much of it in 1919 when, at the age of 25 he became the "boy coach" of the Western Conference at Northwestern. But the following year, he went to Kansas State and in 1924, his team defeated Kansas for the first time in eighteen years. Three other victories over Kansas ensued in the three years Bachman was at Kansas City.

In 1928, he went to Florida, and the alligator gridders at once became vicious. Under his regime Florida defeated Georgia and Georgia Tech for the first time in history, and piled up the highest aggregate score in the nation one year.

Succeeds Crowley
In 1933, Bachman left Florida to come to Michigan State, as successor to Jimmie Crowley who went to Fordham.

In 1926, Bachman's Kansas State eleven completed 22 out of 24 passes against Nebraska, while one of the two incomplete passes went for a touchdown which was not allowed because of an off-side penalty.

Notre Dame Man
Bachman went to Notre Dame after completing his high school career in Chicago and was distinguished in football and track.

To him, football is a game, a profession, a hobby. He talks football in and out of season, even while at his other favorite sports hunting, fishing and handball. Only his wife, Grace, and their three boys rank above football in his affections.

Bachman definitely has supplanted Crowley as the idol of the Michigan State campus, and no one thought anybody could do that.

The principal worry is how long he will stay. The students recall losing Harry Kipke to Michigan and Crowley to Fordham—and neither of them ever produced a team that could beat Michigan.

POSSES FAIL TO FIND ASSAILANT OF WOMAN

Thomasville, N. C., Nov. 3.—(AP)—The search for a negro who attacked Miss Mary Dorsett, 26, was continued today without success.

Three suspects taken into custody by posse which scoured the countryside were taken before the young woman, but she said none was her assailant.

Miss Dorsett said the negro threatened her with a pistol yesterday while she was in the barn lot at the home of her sister, three miles from here, forced her to go in to the barn and assaulted her.

Tips on CONTRA

By TOM O'NEIL

Wriggling Out
Some slant hands are easier at a trump make, some at no trump. Mutual support in the bidding of suits offered by one or the other of the contracting partnership at times will induce fear of a first round truf by an adversary with the result that the final bid will be at no trump. In duplicate the no trump contract will be preferred because of the greater possibility of a top on the board.

From Bridge guse, New York, comes this hand which was a lay-down at seven diamonds, but which necessitated a two-way squeeze by the declarer, Henry Enoch, for success at no trump:

trump make, at no trump. Mu-thr South offered one heart. The adversaries passed throughout the auction. North bid two diamonds and South spoke up with four diamonds. North leaped to seven diamonds and South went to seven trump.

Since the adverse diamonds are divided evenly no difficulty are divided evenly no difficulty presents itself in making seven diamonds.

After trump are drawn and the queen of spades is played a club and a heart South can be discarded on the ace and king of spades. Two hearts from South can be trumped North and a spade from the North hand trumped South.

But at no trump if a club from the South hand be discarded on the long diamond North there is a spade loser in the North hand to consider unless by a squeeze an extra trick can be obtained with South's heart.

Again the grand slam no trump contract the jack of clubs was led by West and taken in the South hand with the king. The queen of spades, king of hearts and ace of diamonds were played. Returning to the North hand with a diamond and dropping all the adverse diamonds in the process, the declarer played the ace and king of spades and the ace of clubs.

The foundation now was laid for a squeeze upon either hand, there being in the North hand the menace of the ten of spades so that West would have to hoid the jack. In the South hand was the menace of the ten of clubs over East's queen.

The diamonds were run, all of them. With one diamond left to play, the situation was:

NORTH—S—10.
H—6.
D—7.

WEST—S—J.
H—9.

EAST—H—Q 8.

C—Q.

SOUTH—H—A 10.
C—10.

The lead of the seven of diamonds forced East to unguard the heart queen, for if he shed the club queen, the ten of hearts would have been discarded South and the last two tricks taken with the ace of hearts and the ten of clubs. West had to unguard the heart jack, for if he discarded the jack of spades the ten in the North hand would have been high.

Political-Minded Professors Run In Nutmeg State

New Haven, Conn.—(AP)—The "absent"-minded college professor has been replaced in Connecticut by the "politically"-minded professor.

Three men closely identified with colleges faculties are leading one of the most vigorous and bitterly contested campaigns in the State at the present time. They are Governor Wilbur L. Cross, former dean of Yale's graduate school Charles M. Bakewell, professor emeritus at Yale, and Albert Levitt, who has taught at Notre Dame, Johns Hopkins, Brooklyn College and St. Lawrence University among others.

Dr. Cross, a Democrat, at the age of 72, is seeking his third consecutive term as governor of the State. Dr. Bakewell, three years younger than Cross and a Republican, is striving to succeed himself as Congressman-at-large, while Dr. Levitt, 47, is one of the leaders of the newly-formed independent citizens' party and is running for a seat in Congress from the Fourth Connecticut District.

Governor Cross is a native of Mansfield, this State, but the two other men are "outsiders." Congressman Bakewell was born in Pittsburgh and Professor Levitt at Woodbine, Maryland.

Professor Levitt probably is the most versatile, being a lawyer, minister and doctor. The three hold honorary degrees from various colleges and universities.

RENEW FIGHT ON PELLAGRA

Local Red Cross Chapter to Distribute Powdered Yeast in Concerted Drive

Distribution of powdered yeast for the treatment and prevention of pellagra in this county will again be undertaken by the Pitt County Chapter of the American Red Cross. Wyatt Brown, chairman, announced today.

The yeast will be made available through local physicians and the Health Department and families or individuals who have the disease must make application through the family doctor or health officer.

"Physicians who have had extensive experience with the use of powdered yeast say that it is one of the most valuable measures known at the present time for the control of pellagra." Chairman Brown stated today. "It was first introduced by the Red Cross in 1927 in the flood areas of the Mississippi valley. The following year it was offered to other states and by 1929 it was used by practically every health department in all the states where pellagra prevailed. In the five year period from 1927 to 1932 the Red Cross distributed more than 200,000 pounds. During that same period it also distributed three-quarters of a million packages of garden seeds in order to promote gardening.

"Death rate statistics indicate that these two simple but important measures had a very marked influence in reducing sickness and death from pellagra. In 1928 the death rate from this disease reached its peak. In at least two states pellagra caused more deaths in that year than any other single disease; but when the use of powdered yeast and gardening were introduced the death rates everywhere began to drop. The 1933 mortality is less than half of the year mentioned, and the evidence is very convincing that these measures were largely responsible for the reduction.

"Medical authorities believe that if gardening and the use of powdered yeast are continued a few years longer the prospects are good that the disease will disappear entirely. That is certainly worth striving for. We hope that all pellagra families will take advantage of this opportunity offered by the Red Cross and go to their doctors to get powdered yeast and when the spring comes we hope they will plant gardens to provide health food."

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened firm, one to three points higher on steadier Liverpool cables and trade buying.

There was moderate volume of business at the start and the slight advance was attributed to buying by houses with foreign connections. There was also some buying by commission houses. The South sold a little cotton here during the early trading, but offerings were thought to largely represent liquidation.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Nov. 3.—(AP)—The stock market finished a week of slow hesitant advances today with a little further uplift concentrated chiefly in a few specialties. The final tone was firm with gains of reactions to a point or more. Transfers for the two-hour session were 270,000 shares.

News at the end of the week of a character to influence share prices was meager, but the recent improvement in Wall Street was bolstered by high levels of retail trade over much of the country, the staving off of any serious controversies over the auto code by President Roosevelt's order continuing the expiring code until February 1 and moderately firm bond market.

The settlement called for the reopening of the Cleveland stores, closed a week ago in protest against picketing and refusal of truckmen to haul supplies. All employees are to be taken back without discrimination and any future disputes are to be submitted to arbitration.

To Probe Lynching.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 3.—(AP)—Governor B. M. Miller today directed officials of the twenty-first judicial circuit to call a special session of the grand jury Nov. 19 at Brewster to investigate the removal from the Eschmiba county jail there of Claude Neal, negro, who later was lynched near Greenwood, Fla., for assaulting and killing a white girl.

Governor Miller said he had received a letter today from Solicitor Hugh Caffey of the 21st circuit, in which he enclosed a statement of witnesses of removal of Neal from jail on October 26.

The statement of the witnesses were not divulged by the governor but he stated he believed they warranted a special session of the jury.

Insult Defends Testimony.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—(AP)—With a shouted defense of his honesty, Samuel Insull left the witness stand in the Insull mail fraud case today, his questioning by the prosecutors at an end.

Before stepping down, the deposed Chicago utilities executive denied firmly he was "running away" when he left Chicago in June after his utility empire had crashed.

"When you were indicted by the United States government, why didn't you (time back)?"

Insull turned to the jury: "I think I would have been crucified," he declared.

Attorney Swanson even had dodgers distributed showing me being brought through the streets in chains.

Shouting "No, Sir, no, Sir," in a flare of anger, Insull denied he kept his biggest company afloat only by juggling securities between other concerns of his system as far back as 1928. The deposed magnate was confronted with income tax returns of the Middle Western Utilities Company, his giant holding concern and master key to his system. Insull denied that the corporation's securities company issued its first dividend as a base for scolding Prosecutor Salter for "questions with inferences."

Seek Extradition of Yegg

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 3.—(AP)—Sheriff W. R. Dall, of Florence County, left today for Louisville, Ky., bearing a request from Governor Blackwood for the extradition of Frank Allen to face charges of robbing the Lake City Bank of $114,000.

Governor Blackwood signed the requisition paper today following arrest of Allen at Louisville in connection with other crimes.

The warrant for the requisition alleged the 26-year-old prisoner robbed a bank and a person. He is charged with having plundered the Palmetto State Bank of Lake City of $114,000 September 5 after kidnapping the president, Hoyt Carter.

Remove Gangster.

COUNTY COURT BOOTLEGGERS ON WEDNESDAY NABBED HERE

Tuesday's Session Postponed to Following Day on Account Of General Election

The regular weekly session of County Court will be held next Wednesday instead of Tuesday because of the general election to be held here as well as in other parts of the country, it was made known today.

The sitting will be the first in the last three weeks by reason of the two weeks' term of Superior court which closed here last night.

Records in the office of the clerk of court this morning indicated there would be approximately forty cases docketed for County court Wednesday and it is expected at least two days will be required to complete work.

The docket probably will be boosted slightly by police courts in various sections of the county today and Monday, but the total is not expected to exceed the estimate of the clerk's office.

The majority of the cases consist largely of charges of violation of the prohibition law, assault, larceny and other such actions developing in various parts of the county during the idleness of the county tribunal.

Jim Holloway Taken Into Custody Here This Morning After Raid of Home

Jim Holloway, colored, alleged member of the illicit whiskey traffic here, was arrested by police following a raid of his home on 12th street this morning in which approximately three gallons of whiskey were seized.

Given preliminary hearing in police court this morning, Holloway was bound over to the next session of County court.

Police said they found the whiskey secreted in various parts of Holloway's home. The seizure was carried to the police station and destroyed.

Chief of Police George Clark said the negro had been connected with the whiskey traffic here over a period of several years and had served considerable time on the roads for violation of the prohibition law.

Holloway is one of a number of whiskey traffic members arrested by police the last several months in a concerted drive to clean-up the city of the handling of the contraband beverage. The majority of the defendants have found their way to the roads while some others obtained their liberty by paying fines.
