SENATE MUNITIONS BODY MAY FILE PERJURY CASE

SAYS FISCH OFFERED TO SELL 'HOT MONEY' AFTER KILLING

N. Y. PAINTER TURNED DOWN AS WITNESS

Arthur Trost, of New York, says he went to Flemington to testify and to see that Hauptmann got justice; Princeton student testifies man he saw near Lindbergh home day of kidnaping was not Hauptmann

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 4.—(AP)—A woman restaurant proprietor testified in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann today that she saw the accused Violet Sharpe carrying a gray blanket on the evening on which baby Lindbergh was kidnaped.

Mrs. Anne Bonsteel said the girl came into her restaurant near the ferry at Yonkers, N. Y., which connected with Alpine, N. J., at 7:30 p. m., the night of March 1, 1932.

"She came in. She had a gray blanket on her arm," Mrs. Bonsteel testified. "She said, 'I am waiting for someone.' She kept looking out and opening the door."

Mrs. Bonsteel was the second defense witness in that phase of its case in which it seeks to cast suspicion away from Hauptmann and onto a gang which included someone inside the Lindbergh and Morrow households.

Peter H. Sommer said he saw two men cross the Hudson river ferry early in the morning of March 2, 1932, and assist a woman with a blonde baby into a street car. He identified a picture of the dead Isidor Fisch as one of the men and

Celebration to be held this week in honor of Scout Silver Anniversary

Boy Scouts of America announces its Silver Anniversary Week for February 8-14. February 8 marks its 25th birthday in the United States.

Greenville District Boy Scouts have proudly announced celebration plans for this noteworthy week.

Friday night, Feb. 8, will feature a parents and scouts banquet for all scouts and parents in Greenville. The banquet and celebration will be at the Woman's Club building from 8:30 to 8:15.

Each day between now and the birthday, Feb. 8, announcements of other new activities to come during the anniversary week will be announced. Scouts are asked to watch the papers for the celebration plans.

This February 8 marks the 25th anniversary of the widest spread boys' organization in the world—also one of the fastest and greatest growths of any organization in the world.

Starting with a "Good Turn" of a British Scout, scouting made its beginning in the United States Feb. 8, 1910. Today only 25 years, it boasts an organization of boys and leaders numbering a million. A line of its members, four boys and a leader, shoulder to shoulder, would form a line from the Brooklyn Bridge to the Golden Gate with 100,000 left over at either end.

The Scout Handbook has had a greater publication than any other book in the world, other than the Bible and Pilgrim's Progress.

Late News Flashes

Girl Killed by Car Kinston, Feb. 4.—(AP)—Myrtle Byrd, 21, an inmate of the Caswell Training School was struck and killed here last night by an auto driven by W. J. Horton of Goldsboro.

Horton said the girl who was mentally defective and had strayed from the institution became confused in traffic and darted in front of his car.

Court Rules Against Government. Washington, Feb. 4.—(AP)—The District of Columbia Court of Appeals held today that Postmaster Farley's cancellation of airmail contracts amounted to a breach of contract which gave the airlines the right to sue the government in the court of claims.

Action of the District Supreme Court in dismissing the injunction suit was brought by five airlines companies attacking Farley's orders were upheld.

After holding the application for injunction was properly dismissed by the lower court because the complainants had remedy at law afforded by a suit in the court of claims the opinion of the appellate court said.

"What has occurred in these cases amounts to breach of the contracts by the postmaster general."

FIVE KILLED ON HIGHWAYS

Several Also Injured In Series of Wrecks In This State Over Week-End

(By The Associated Press) Six persons were killed on North Carolina highways over the week-end, a complication of reports showed today.

Seventeen persons were injured in two collisions in the State. Three fatalities were reported in the vicinity of Morganton. William Bobick, 35, of Granite Falls, was instantly killed when hit by a train while walking along a railroad track west of Hickory. Friends said he was hard of hearing.

George Worley, 25, was fatally hurt as he attempted to board a passenger train at Nebo, a station near Morganton. Injuries suffered by Miss Ellen Branch, 68, when hit by a truck as she walked across the highway in front of her home near Glen Alpine, proved fatal a few hours later. The driver of the truck was held blameless.

Clifton Pridden, 21, of Roanoke Rapids, lost control of his car and left an approach on the Roanoke River bridge near Roanoke Rapids killing and injuring two companions.

An automobile left the highway on a curve between Whiteville and Hallsboro killing two of its occupants and injuring another. The dead were Daniel Willard Bagwin, 26, of Whiteville, and Marshall Memory, 25, of Clarkton. Miss Ethel Tucker, of Clarkton, was seriously injured but was expected to recover.

Ten persons were injured in an automobile collision at Graham and seven others were hurt in a head-on collision near Smithfield late last night.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News.

WASHINGTON—By George Durso

FORCING: Loyal New Deal Democrats need lose no sleep over the trimming President Roosevelt took on the World Court issue. If they will give the matter a little introspective attention they will possibly discover that once again he has played an ultra smart game of politics.

Did it ever occur to you that the President brought the World Court up early in the session, forced the issue and risked the beating he got simply to get it out of the way for once and for all?

Highly informed quarters say this is true without any symptoms of the sourgrape malady.

As the story now comes from inside FDR was up against two propositions.

First, he has pending vitally important national legislation of an emergency nature. With debate limitless, that old war horse the World Court could have been brought up at any time in the future and used as an effective filibustering screen by any small group of anti-New Dealers in the Senate. It could have been used against almost any piece of legislation on the program.

Second, World Court proponents—particularly the "women"—were pestering the White House for action. It was pleaded in the Democratic platform, they pointed out, so why delay?

MANY NEEDY SEEK AID IN RELIEF DRIVE

Scores on Hand This Morning When Relief Office Opens for Business Here

The local relief committee started its annual drive today to provide the necessities of life for the poor of the community with indications that the task is going to be a huge one.

Formal announcement last week of the beginning of the campaign today resulted in scores of persons asking for aid when the relief office opened this morning. Mayor R. C. Flanagan, who is in charge of distributing the relief fund, said his office was completely swamped with applications this morning with the applicants on hand at an early hour to press their claims as vigorously as possible.

The mayor announced last week that this committee had made arrangements to take care of 201 colored school children and 30 white children who were described as being in "immediate need" of clothing. The committee also turned its attention to providing work for the unemployed turned back by the government to the various communities of the country. These men will be given work on certain relief tasks here. The mayor said that only one to each needy family would receive aid, and that evidence must be provided that the claim is backed by necessity.

Although the campaign did not officially get under way until today, fuel was provided for destitute families during the cold week last week. The committee will do its best to supply fuel for such families during the remainder of the winter, or as long as money holds out.

The major part of the fund being used in the relief drive this year was saved from a garden fund used by the city in 1933. The fund is limited, the mayor said, and only those in dire need will be supplied with aid.

The relief head said the campaign would be conducted along lines suggested by President Roosevelt before inauguration of the present federal campaign. Only worthwhile projects will be taken care of and such tasks as picking up paper around public grounds will give away to work necessary to community advancement.

Freight Movement Up

Washington.—(AP)—Class 1 railroad averaged 630,500 cars of freight per week in October, 1934. That was 5,500 cars per week more than in September, but 18,000 cars less than in October, 1933, the bureau of labor statistics reports.

E. L. Harrell Accepts Position as Supervisor of Drainage For Entire County

Emergency relief operations were being pushed forward rapidly in this section today with indications that more projects probably would begin in the near future as the federal program hits its full stride.

It was announced last week from the local office of the ERA that nearly three hundred persons had found work on various projects throughout the county with indications that several additional workers would be put on from day to day.

E. L. Harrell, formerly employed by the C. O. H. Hertz drug store has accepted a position with the emergency relief department as supervisor of drainage for the entire county. The change became effective this morning.

Mr. Harrell, who came from Ayden to Greenville, said today there were only two projects of this nature under way at this time, but both of them are large affairs and will require several months probably in completing.

Probably the most important of the tasks is completing the drainage of Swift Creek which was started under the PWA and was later abandoned when funds gave out. The stream was left cluttered with logs and rubbish causing the water to overflow valuable farm lands.

Complaints were registered with the relief department and finally members of congress were asked to take a hand before results were obtained.

Work has been under way at Swift Creek for several days and at the last report forty and fifty men were on the job.

The other drainage project is at Buzzard's Point below Grimesland. This consists mainly in opening the channel which has cluttered with logs and other floatsam and jams.

EIGHT HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Two Negroes of Crisp Probably Seriously Injured in Collision Saturday

Eight persons were injured, two probably seriously, when two automobiles collided head-on on the Greenville - Washington highway, two miles west of Grimesland, Saturday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock.

Louise Moyer and Frank Thorne, colored, of the Crisp community, were rushed to the local hospital suffering from fractured skulls, but it was reported they would live, barring complications.

Mrs. H. H. Shackelford, of Saratoga, received painful cuts about the face and body, but was able to continue on her way home after receiving medical aid here.

A three months' old baby riding in the car with the negroes escaped injury, but five other occupants of the machine received cuts and bruises, fractured collar bones and thighs. All received medical aid at the local hospital. They were: Sallie Whitaker, Margaret Moyer, Ida May Moyer, and James Gardner.

Mrs. Shackelford was bound toward Greenville when a cow suddenly darted on the side of the road causing her to swerve to the left, striking the carload of negroes, who were bound in the opposite direction.

Both cars were badly damaged by the impact. An ambulance from Greenville rushed to the scene of the accident and brought the injured here for medical attention.

Highway officers who investigated the accident, said today no legal action had been taken in the wreck.

PUSH DRAINAGE WORK IN PITT

GAS STATIONS MAY BE ASKED FOR MORE TAX

Serious Effort Under Way in Legislature To Obtain Additional Treasury Funds

Raleigh, Feb. 4.—A serious effort is being made to force filling station operators to make a heavier tax payment to the state treasury.

Those who contemplate such taxation plan to do it under the chain store tax section of the revenue bill. Their aim, of course, is to collect large levies from the major oil companies.

A special subcommittee of the joint finance committee is now studying revision of the chain-store tax and the feasibility of collecting such a tax from filling stations.

Such stations were exempted from the present act because it was shown that while filling stations do less than five per cent of the total chain business they would have had to pay more than eighty per cent of the taxes levied under the law.

Advocates of the assessment of a graduated tax on filling stations, based on the number of stations operated by one company, seek to tax the larger oil companies. It has been pointed out, however, that such a tax would strike hard at operators of small chains which are North Carolina owned. In most of the larger towns there are operators who have several stations. It will be difficult to frame a law which would not inflict hardship on these locally-owned small chains.

The major oil companies are some what taken aback at the serious proposal to tax them still more. Because they did not enter objection to the present state gas tax they had thought themselves relatively free from further molestation. The recent West Virginia case before the U. S. Supreme court is thought to have influenced many legislators who now want to impose the additional tax on chain filling stations.

That decision, in effect gave the states the right to tax such groups in almost any manner. The proposed increased levy on filling stations is sure to be a cause for debate both in the finance committee and on the legislative floor.

Some legislators who will oppose the filling station tax are of the opinion that such taxation will be of little avail to the public. They are quick to point out that the tax would be reflected in increased gasoline prices.

Filling stations are now taxed from $10 to $50 by the state, the tax varying according to population, and with the added clause that in no case shall the tax be less than $5 per pump.

LEGISLATIVE RAMBLINGS

By C. A. PAUL

The House of Representatives witnessed an annual scene when Republican Charlie Jones went to the rescue of Democrat Paul Ervin.

The bridge tolls bill, which would slash tolls on the State bridges over the Cape Fear and Chocoma Rivers, Representative Ervin rose to question the propriety of such action. He was not opposed to the particular bill, but to the theory involved. When it became apparent that he was not the theory was involved Representative Jones entered the picture. He did a little explaining, poured oil on legislative waters, and declared himself in favor of removal of the tolls.

It was a case of noble self-obligation for Representative Ervin, but on two occasions, but his unaided support in debate for the Jones bill which would have permitted Superior Court judges to impose life sentences in capital cases when juries unanimously recommend mercy.

Quite a number of legislators thought Ervin's remarks on the bridge bill unwise. The bridges involved are all in the east-north part of the State and the bill had the backing of fifteen or so legislators.

MISS BILBRO DIES SUDDENLY

Funeral Services Conducted From Dickinson Avenue Home This Afternoon

Miss Mildred Lee Bilbro, 28, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Bilbro died suddenly at the home of her parents, 1303 Dickinson avenue, Sunday morning at 1 o'clock.

She had been suffering from an attack of influenza and was found dead when members of the family entered her room to see how she was getting along. Death was ascribed to heart trouble from which she had suffered for a number of years.

Funeral services were conducted from the late home this afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. J. A. Melver, pastor of Immanuel Baptist church, and burial was made in Greenwood cemetery.

Miss Bilbro was born in Ayden December 13, 1906, but had lived in Greenville the most of her life, her father having been prominently identified with the wholesale grocery business here for a number of years.

She was a member of Immanuel Baptist church and evinced much interest in the work of the local congregation.

Surviving are her parents and four brothers, Cecil Bilbro, Kinston, Bruce, Tyson and William Bilbro, Greenville.

Active pallbearers were: Zack Vandye, H. H. Duncan, Robert Moyer, Sidney Skinner, Roy Hardee and Joe Taft.

BERLIN RAPS FRENCH PACT

Declares New Aerial Pact With Britain is "Old Stuff"; Pact Believed Sure

Berlin, Feb. 4.—(AP)—German officials today branded the Anglo-French agreement in London as "old stuff," and indicated there would be little chance of Germany accepting it in its present form.

"With exception of the volume of aviation, the Anglo-French accord presents nothing new," said the officials.

"Germany's return to Geneva is thrown in with other viewpoints whereas we hold it apart from other things."

"There is no chance of Germany going back into the League until after quality in all respects has been actually granted."

Paris, Feb. 4.—(AP)—France's aerial assistance scheme outlined in London this week-end is relied upon, it was stated by authoritative sources today, as likely to assure a Franco-British air alliance even if Reichsheer Hitler of Germany rejects it.

French officials admitted the clause of the proposed mutual assistance pact was weakened by England's insistence that its signatories fly to the defense of an attacked nation if the attacker on one of the contracting parties, since if Germany did refuse to sign the pact it would defeat the purpose as far as France is concerned.

Weight Guessing Popular

Chicago.—(AP)—World's Fair figures show 1,294,370 persons stepped on the scales to guess their weight in 1934, compared with 1,125,478 in 1933. The fair's first summer saw one in every twenty visitors weighed; its second year ran this figure up to one in every twelve.

Little Sentiment For Highway Fund Diversion

Reflector Bureau. Sir Walter Hotel. By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, Feb. 4.—If any flight is brewing in the general assembly over diversion of highway funds to other than highway purposes, there is not much evidence of it so far, those who have been observing the general assembly so far are convinced. The few bills so far tossed into the legislative hopper designed to divert a part of the highway revenue back to the counties to be used to help reduce the road bond debts of the counties have aroused only a flicker of interest here and there, making it evident that there is no organized sentiment in favor of these measures. Nor have the bills designed to introduce the automobile license taxes to $5 or even

Legal Forces To Be Asked To Deal With Case

GAS STATION ROBBED HERE

Between $10 and $15 Taken From Hadley Service Station Saturday Night

Robbers broke into the Hadley Service Station at the corner of Greene and Fifth streets Saturday night and escaped with cash estimated at between $10 and $15.

Although police immediately began an investigation when the robbery was discovered yesterday morning, it was reported today that no definite clues had been obtained.

Entrance to the building was made through the back door by knocking out the glass and tripping the night latch.

The money contained in a cash drawer and had been left as change when business was resumed yesterday morning.

Police have been troubled considerably by robberies here the last several months, but this is the first one in the last several days. Several negro youths were taken in custody last week on minor theft charges, and numbers of other arrests were made on similar charges during the holidays and since.

Seek $10,000,000 For Highway Aid

Reflector Bureau. Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Feb. 4.—The $10,000,000 appropriation for maintenance which the State Highway and Public Works Commission is asking for each year of the next biennium represents actually only $1,000,000 more than the 1933 appropriation of $6,900,000 a year when the difference in buying power of the dollar in 1933 and 1935 is taken into consideration.

Chairman Capus Waynick of the commission will point out to the appropriations committee when he appears before it Wednesday.

According to figures prepared by Chairman Waynick for presentation to the appropriations committee, the cost of maintaining roads has increased 41.8 per cent since July 1, 1933, so that taking this difference in costs into consideration as well as the proposed wage increase of 20 per cent, the amount of maintenance can be done with $9,000,000 now is equal to what could be done with $6,900,000 two years ago. So in asking for a maintenance appropriation of $10,000,000 a year now, the highway department is really asking for only $1,000,000 a year more than was given it by the 1933 general assembly when it appropriated only $6,900,000 a year for maintenance.

Negro Bound Over to County Court on Theft Charge Following Hearing

Virgil Davis, colored, charged with shoplifting, was bound over to County Court following hearing in police court this morning.

The negro was run down and captured after stealing several shirts from the store of Roy Kurrel Saturday night. He provided the officers and citizens who joined in the chase a merry race for several blocks. He was finally overtaken and jailed.

He was unable to give bond and was transferred from the city to county jail to await hearing.

Hicks Stokes, of Belvoir, was bound over to County Court under bond of $100 on a charge of operating an automobile while drunk. He was not able to raise bond and was returned to jail to await hearing.

Stokes was taken into custody following an automobile wreck near the corner of Greene and Washington Streets Sunday evening. Another man, said to have been drinking, was in the car with him, and was arrested on a charge of being drunk. They allegedly ran into Harold Dail's car which was sitting in front of his home.

Several other charges of drunkenness were disposed of during the morning, most of them being colored people who were taken into custody over the week-end.

We still feel that while the legislature is about its task of making the highways safer some action should also be taken to protect property as well. It seems that the legislators are against compulsory liability insurance but at least they can include in the driver's license law a provision for suspension or revocation of license until such time as any and all damages are paid.

The erection of the new tobacco warehouse here will bring the number of auction houses on the local market to ten with increased facilities for the handling of tobacco sales. Greenville has long had the reputation of being the world's best bright leaf tobacco market and the building of this new house is another evidence of the expansion of growth of the market.

The tax exempt security bill is one of the greatest drawbacks to our entire nation from the standpoint of tax raising and the sooner the issuance of such securities is stopped the better off the federal government and every state will be. We realize that these bonds were made available to make it easier for every branch of government to more easily borrow money, but the system at the same time removes taxable wealth from the tax rolls and increases the burden of taxation upon those who have their money invested in real estate and other forms of property. So long as tax exempt bonds are for sale more and more people are going to seek tax evasion by this route with the result that in the end there will be little left to tax to pay the interest on the tax exempt securities.

 intimates killed two birds with one stone. He submitted the World Court protocol to the Senate at a time when that body was making time waiting for the House to give them some business. Thus he fulfilled his campaign pledge—and did it before he entered his third year in office, which is always considered the start of a President's heavy maneuvers for reelection.
 Then he demanded immediate action. He hoped to win (even though he would up to the last day) but he was prepared to have the issue settled once and for all and fled so deeply it couldn't be employed to annoy him later. He went down with the League issue in 1920; the World Court blew back in his face in 1925. Some other President will have to revive it.
 The big idea now was to clear the decks for action on such measures as the $4,880,000,000 works relief bill, social security and other tricks the President, has up his sleeve.

BALL: There is considerable justification for this presentation of the case.

Thirty-six Senators voted the World Court into oblivion so far as the United States is concerned. Among those 36 there might have been found quite a few trembly knees the day after the vote. The White House is about to take over complete control of expenditure of all public works funds on top of its customary control of federal patronage. Administration leaders are going on the assumption that many of those Senators who broke with the White House on the World Court because of personal campaign promises or local pressure will now be much more willing to play ball on important domestic legislation. You might recall that the Hearst papers dug up a statement of the President's shortly before his inauguration which was hardly pro-World Court in nature.

FREE: Finally the word has been spread to the four corners that the Senate in its majestic sovereignty against a White House command.

That serves to allay the constantly growing fear of a dictatorship. Senators from more than a dozen states split their votes.
 Even Senator Huey Long, whose actions indicate he desires to be our national dictator, by magnanimous Senator "Ma" Caraway of Arkansas, who owes her election to the Kinfish, wavered back and forth all the day of the final votes. She finally voted "aye" with the administration but New Dealers are convinced that had Huey needed her vote to beat the Court it would have been forthcoming. Long is building himself up an organization in Arkansas incidentally that will give Majority Leader Joe Robinson plenty of trouble in 1936.

PERVERSE: Sir Willmot Lewis, well known Washington correspondent of the London Times, viewed the Court's defeat with that complacency born of many years' newspaper experience.
 "Look!" said Montana. "There is a ledge here, under the window. It is wide enough for a man to lie on—if the man uses care—it is almost a foot wide—it is more than a foot wide—you see?"
 "Miserable of my soul!" breathed the bandit, peering down through the darkness behind his friend. "Lie there? Even a bird with wings would be afraid to lie there."
 "It has to be this way, or we are to surrender to bad luck, Mateo? I'll show you the way!"
 As he slid through the window, the first gust of the rain struck him. The big, wind-swept drops drove through his clothing instantly to the skin, and made him tremble. Then his feet found the ledge. It was a yard and a half below the window and consisted merely of the space left when the wall receded in one of its setbacks, of which there were several between the bottom and the top.

"Follow me, Mateo!" he called. "It is possible to stand on it. Let yourself down. Stand with your toes on the outside of the ledge to firm your body in against the wall. And then—"

He could not speak again for the outer door to the rooms—the governor now went down with a prodigious crash. He saw Mateo's bulky form swing down from the window. Then the Mexican was beside him, edging in pursuit as he worked his way cautiously along the narrow ledge.

Overhead, there was thundering of footfalls. A light swung out from the window almost instantly and disappeared again. It flashed from another window around the corner of the tower, a radiance that glittered for a moment through the slant lines of the falling rain.
 And then the wind came in a billow and with a booming sound and began to pry at Montana to loosen him from his hold.

He came to the corner of the tower. And here the ledge disappeared. It did not turn onto the other side of the wall. So that they were utterly checked and held here, to a standstill.
 But Mateo was cheerful beside him.

"I was wrong!" said Rubriz. "That saint of Capistrano, that fellow is not one to lose heart. He will make this as wide as a road to us and—"
 Here the voice went out of him. The wind, screaming suddenly, staggered Rubriz so that he fought for his balance with swinging arms on the verge of the foothold. And Montana, digging his feet strongly in at the edge of the rock, getting a partial handhold on the corner masonry of the tower, reached out with his left hand and pulled at the big Mexican.

The pull and the jar of the wind swung him sidewise so that the storm could get at him more fully. His left foot slipped from its purchase. He waited for the next gust to tear him loose. But as it had come suddenly, so the wind eddied for a moment, while the handhold of Montana still held good.
 He regained his former position, with Rubriz now desperately flattened against the wall, his arms spread out.
 "Mother of Heaven! Mother of Heaven!"

Other industries will keep watchful eyes on the experiment. If it succeeds in damping labor unrest it will be widely imitated. One executive remarks that a daily or so extra a day would be a cheap price to keep the closed shop away—especially if you can get the consumers to foot the bill.
HOTTER: Leo Wolman's Automobile Labor Board poured kerosene on the flames with its report that only 5 per cent of voting auto workers showed affiliation with the Federation of Labor. The Federation had taken a grant interest in the elections—being sure at the Board already—and claims the figures give the wrong impression entirely. If FDR insists that Wolman's group shall continue to function despite labor protests—as has

SYNOPSIS: Mateo Rubriz and the Montana Kid, "El Kead" in Mexico, have sneaked into the fort at Duraya to steal the emerald crown of Our Lady and return it to Bishop Emiliano. The governor has stolen the crown from the Bishop's church. Now, just as they set to work on the governor's safe, they hear the men whom they overpowered at the fortress are pounding on the door of the apartment in which the safe stands.

 MONTANA sprang into the nearest casement. Below him, the wall dropped a giddy height. There were no stars. A moon was up, but it only lit the swirling confusion of the storm clouds which had spread out of the east until almost the entire sky was covered. Custy, warm-breaths of the coming storm struck into the face of the Kid.

He dropped to his knees and peered into the dimness below him. Then the hand of Rubriz fell on his shoulder.
 "This is a thing I have always known," said the outlaw—"that one day I should be in such a place, with no escape, and the enemy all before me, and behind me a cliff that could not be climbed. Well, San Juan of Capistrano has been my friend, but now he is tied, perhaps. Let us be ready to die together, like men. Let us pile up the dead!"

"Look!" said Montana. "There is a ledge here, under the window. It is wide enough for a man to lie on—if the man uses care—it is almost a foot wide—it is more than a foot wide—you see?"
 "Miserable of my soul!" breathed the bandit, peering down through the darkness behind his friend. "Lie there? Even a bird with wings would be afraid to lie there."
 "It has to be this way, or we are to surrender to bad luck, Mateo? I'll show you the way!"
 As he slid through the window, the first gust of the rain struck him. The big, wind-swept drops drove through his clothing instantly to the skin, and made him tremble. Then his feet found the ledge. It was a yard and a half below the window and consisted merely of the space left when the wall receded in one of its setbacks, of which there were several between the bottom and the top.

"Follow me, Mateo!" he called. "It is possible to stand on it. Let yourself down. Stand with your toes on the outside of the ledge to firm your body in against the wall. And then—"
 He could not speak again for the outer door to the rooms—the governor now went down with a prodigious crash. He saw Mateo's bulky form swing down from the window. Then the Mexican was beside him, edging in pursuit as he worked his way cautiously along the narrow ledge.

Overhead, there was thundering of footfalls. A light swung out from the window almost instantly and disappeared again. It flashed from another window around the corner of the tower, a radiance that glittered for a moment through the slant lines of the falling rain.
 And then the wind came in a billow and with a booming sound and began to pry at Montana to loosen him from his hold.

He came to the corner of the tower. And here the ledge disappeared. It did not turn onto the other side of the wall. So that they were utterly checked and held here, to a standstill.
 But Mateo was cheerful beside him.

"I was wrong!" said Rubriz. "That saint of Capistrano, that fellow is not one to lose heart. He will make this as wide as a road to us and—"
 Here the voice went out of him. The wind, screaming suddenly, staggered Rubriz so that he fought for his balance with swinging arms on the verge of the foothold. And Montana, digging his feet strongly in at the edge of the rock, getting a partial handhold on the corner masonry of the tower, reached out with his left hand and pulled at the big Mexican.

The pull and the jar of the wind swung him sidewise so that the storm could get at him more fully. His left foot slipped from its purchase. He waited for the next gust to tear him loose. But as it had come suddenly, so the wind eddied for a moment, while the handhold of Montana still held good.
 He regained his former position, with Rubriz now desperately flattened against the wall, his arms spread out.
 "Mother of Heaven! Mother of Heaven!"

Other industries will keep watchful eyes on the experiment. If it succeeds in damping labor unrest it will be widely imitated. One executive remarks that a daily or so extra a day would be a cheap price to keep the closed shop away—especially if you can get the consumers to foot the bill.
HOTTER: Leo Wolman's Automobile Labor Board poured kerosene on the flames with its report that only 5 per cent of voting auto workers showed affiliation with the Federation of Labor. The Federation had taken a grant interest in the elections—being sure at the Board already—and claims the figures give the wrong impression entirely. If FDR insists that Wolman's group shall continue to function despite labor protests—as has been reported, if it is true, will be a strike within two months.

 The major manufacturers are being backed with financial support for their contention that most of their employees don't want to be organized. But their satisfaction won't cool the fever any.
ROUGHER: The Senators' dumping down on the World Court didn't send the "international bankers" into mourning—as you might have expected after opposition charges that the whole thing was one of their tricks. Most financial leaders thought it would be a good idea to let their convictions be expressed—less than rhapsodic.

SYNOPSIS: The Montana Kid and Mateo Rubriz have outwitted Sergeant Andres and obtained entrance to the fort of Duraya. They are about to blow open the governor's safe and recover the emerald crown of Our Lady, stolen from the church by the governor when they are surprised. The governor makes good his promise to save them, then questions Rubriz. He confesses he thought Montana and Rubriz were the anti-Pastor, when they tapped quietly at his gate.

Chapter 21
ROSITA
 "THAT girl," said the general, "is the daughter of Miguel Santos. She is Rosita Santos, eh? Is she behind this devilry? Has she been sent for?"
 "She has been sent for," said Don Luis, nodding. "Unless she has run for her life, she should be here by this time."
 "This sergeant," said the general, in a gentle voice, "at the risk of stifling himself managed at last to give the alarm. Otherwise, who knows what might have happened? For that reason, see that he's paid a hundred pesos. That's a reward for a hero."

"Also, he was the fool and traitor who let danger into the fort. Because of that, strip the coat from him, tie his hands to his back, and flog him out of the fort and through the town till you've seen the last of him."
 A quick smile of appreciation greeted the depth and the wisdom of this judgment. And even Sergeant Andres only rolled up his eyes once to heaven. For he could not even conceive a beating that would not be healed and instantly forgotten for the sake of a hundred silver pesos. So he was swept out of the room.
 The general then demanded that the scoundrels who had entered his rooms and locked the door behind them should be produced instantly. There was no one to produce! The whole of the two rooms had been searched, and nothing had been found. People had even looked out the windows.

"Did you think that they were birds, that you looked out the windows?" shouted the general, so loudly that his mustache was thrown into confusion by his cry.
 "No, you fools! You rushed into the rooms in a crowd, and the two thieves slipped out from behind curtains and joined you in your search. They milled around with you, like two more head among so many cattle. And then they sneaked away from the fort."
 "They are in some inn now, drinking and laughing at the soldiers of Duraya. The garrison of the fort becomes a laughing-stock. The President will hear of this. All the army will begin to laugh at me—me!"
 He raised his voice a bit for each of the last three words, until his shout was a hoarse scream. His officers gave back a little. He looked as though he might charge them with his fists at any moment, and he had been known to do such a thing before this.

And then he saw, between two soldiers at the door, the pretty face of Rosita, from the inn of Miguel Santos. Some of his rage disappeared at once. He had, he brought in. As he watched her walk forward, he began to forget about everything. Even the emeralds of Our Lady turned into bits of green glass, so far as he was concerned. However, he knew that a good way is to sound the loudest trumpet first.
 "To draw soldiers from their duty, that is treason!" he thundered at her. "Do you know the punishment for treason?"
 "To be stoned against a wall and shot down," said the girl. And she spoke with such a quiet, even voice that Ignacio Estrada was moved.
 "You have a story to tell," he said to her. "Every woman can at least tell lies. Come out with your pack of words."
 "I know nothing except poor Sergeant Andres," she said.
 "Why do you call him 'poor Sergeant Andres'?"
 "They were beating him with whips as I came in through the gate."
 "He's your lover, eh?"
 "To me he is nothing."
 "But you come to tap at the postern when it's his turn to be on guard behind it?" shouted the general.
 "I never have tapped at it. He told me how to knock if I wanted him. I never wanted him."

THE wind had fallen from a yell to a moan and the rain no longer whipped those aching bodies which remained rigid on the ledge under the windows of the governor's room.
 "After a time we'll grow cold and weak enough to fall," said Rubriz to his friend. "And then we'll climb back inside to make a last stand. But we'll be no good, then. It would have been better if we had fought it out in the beginning, when they broke down the door."
 He pointed down. Below them went the lights of a patrol. Every few minutes those lights had been passing. The fort of Duraya was as tensely prepared as though a great army were about to rush to the attack, and every man was at his post.
 "Still wait for a little," said Montana. His jaws ached with cold as he spoke. The words came shuddering out of his throat. "We still have some part of a long chance."
 "What chance?" asked Rubriz.
 "One chance brought us up to the governor's rooms. Another chance may get us out of the fort again. Hush! That—that is Rosita!"
 There had been a slight lull in the rain again, and he heard the sweet voice of the girl, penetrating because of its high pitch. He worked quickly along the ledge until he was under the window of the bedroom again.
 He could look in over the sill, while Rubriz was posted on the farther side, whispering: "Now that he's alone there with the girl—we could leap in and kill him, Montana. That would be worth more than slaughtering a dozen of the soldiers."
 "Hush!" commanded Montana.
 The girl had come into the bedroom and was looking quietly around her. Behind her moved the black shaginess of the hair that still pitched from his forehead. General Estrada was excited; but the girl had in her eyes that blank look which the Kid had seen in them once before, as though thought were mastering her senses.
 She turned around and looked up at the general with those blank eyes which were seeing the future, perhaps.

 quietly been made to issue close to $100,000,000 in new securities under the auspices of the Securities Act. The real decision is out of the way. Several leading corporations are involved.
 Most of the money will be raised for refunding rather than expansion. However, participation of outsiders should go far to break up the ice that has frozen the flow of capital.
 The Finance Committee of the committee's negative attitude to two factors. Most New York City Democrats in the legislature pay careful attention to the wishes of the Church. Most Republicans pay equal attention to the desires of upstate manufacturers. These influences were strongly against ratification.
 It might be different if the issue were forced to the floor of the legislature. The boys wouldn't care to stand up and be counted in the negative. But this is improbable. The name of any legislator who acted in such an unclimby manner would be mud with his mates.

 from that section who were committed to removal of the soils. Most legislators are loath indeed to do anything smacking of East-West rivalry. It is a subject that, to say the least, is not to be discussed, say legislators, on the floor of the Assembly. Some of them won't talk about it anywhere, for the matter.
 A resolution endorsing the registration of a resur-rection baby campaign now on was

One of the officers bit his lip to the blood to keep from smiling.
 "Ah," said the general, "and you sold your information to thieves? Is that it? Thieves and murderers—and you knew them—and you sold the news to them?"
 "What did I sell?" said the girl. "The sergeant owed money to a poor man. The poor man could never meet Sergeant Andres to ask for the money that was owing. So I told him to tap on the postern and the sergeant would answer him. That is all."
 She made a little gesture with both hands, raising her shoulders a trifle. She smiled a bit and shook her head so that all guilt might drop away from her.
 "When did you tell this?" asked the general, grimly.
 "A week—ten days ago."
 "To what man?"
 "I never knew his name. But he was drinking in the inn and complaining about Sergeant Andres. That is all."
 "Where is he now?"
 "How can I tell, Excellency? I only see what comes into the inn, and he has not come there for many days."
 "Friends," said the general, suddenly, to his officers, "is she speaking the truth?"
 "She is too pretty to tell a lie," answered Don Luis.
 The general frowned, and the frown pulled the shag of his black hair down over his eyes.
 Then he waved his hand, saying: "The rest of you leave me. Remain outside the door. I am going to see what the truth of this may be."
 He added, with a roar, "Stop you damned smiling and get out!"
 The officers got out in haste, and left Ignacio Estrada alone with the girl.
 He pointed to a chair. She thanked him with a little bow and slipped into it. For a time he remained with his thoughts. Then he arose and began to pace up and down the room with his left hand on the hilt of his sword. He knew how to move his hand a little so as to bring from the scabbard an ominous and a martial sound of humming steel.
 He began to marshal words like soldiers; for he felt that he was about to attack a prize greater to him than any rich city.

The only bill to be introduced in the Senate Saturday. It was presented by Senator Robertson, "by request."
 Only eight Senators were present. Most of them had retired to the haven of their respective backwoods. Saturday being reserved for only public-law bills. Seven newspaper men were present. Together with the Senators they formed a quorum, although no one raised the question of no quorum.

A public hearing on the bill which would make all justices of the peace elective by the people will be held by the State Judiciary No. 2 Committee next Thursday at 2:30 p. m.
 The bill, drawn by the Wake County Pa. Association, was introduced by Senator Weathers, of Wake, and would provide a uniform system for the election and compensation of justices of the peace. The measure is of course State-wide in its scope. The bill provides that only one justice shall be elected for a township unless the township has more than 10,000 inhabitants in which case one justice would be allotted for each 10,000 of population. Salaries are left to the discretion of boards of county commissioners, and salaries in the same county may vary in different townships in the same county although variation in salary in the same township would be prohibited. No fees whatever would be allowed justices under the bill after the general election of 1936 when the measure becomes law, that justices shall be elected.
 The bill provides that all justices who shall be in office after the general election, holdovers, because their present commissions shall have expired, shall receive a salary of five dollars yearly. This is a provision to validate the bill if it is enacted into law. Several attempts to gain the effect of the Weathers bill have been made and many of them have failed because it has been contended that justices whose commissions were still in effect could not be removed by legislative acts. At present justices are selected by electors by legislative appointment, and through appointment by the Governor. The Weathers bill would be an appointive method. Those interested in judicial reform have long cited the justice situation as a sore spot. Judicial appointments and the fees of justices have been the objects of much criticism.
 A large crowd is assured for the hearing. Raleigh will be more interested who will tell the committee who the Weathers bill should not become law. Perhaps many justices will be asked for the first time.
 Equally certain is it that many will ask about the bill because Senator Weathers is a member of the committee and will have some influence. Most observers concede the bill a good change for legislative approval.

Rev. Mashburn At College.
Rev. C. D. Mashburn, pastor of the Christian Church of Farmville, talked to the Y. W. C. A. of East Carolina Teachers College last night. He raised the question, "How may one recognize God as just in the midst of the tragedies of life?"

He pointed out that God is good to those who are upright in heart, and often the inconsistencies of life tend to make one feel that the Christian life is vain. It is his opinion that it is man's inhumanity to man that makes for social injustices, and the only way to overcome these injustices is to discover God and His purpose. He said the kingdom of evil and a great many of life's inconsistencies need to be conquered and that it is up to this younger generation to overcome them. He urged the students to make their opportunities and talents count for the most in bringing about a more perfect world order.

U. N. C. Glee Club February 11th.
On next Monday evening, February 11, the Glee Club of the University of North Carolina will make its appearance at East Carolina Teachers College, with H. Grady Miller as the director.

A glee club always has popular appeal, and the glee club concert on the entertainment program of the college every year draws a good audience. Members of choral clubs and groups like to hear singing of other groups. High school students are especially eager to hear glee clubs from the higher institutions. But all people, not only those who sing themselves, especially in choruses of men's voices, are interested.

The local alumni of the college or university generally turn out well to support the glee club of their alma mater, so the alumni of the University will be especially interested this year.

Leaders outside the ranks of Scouting are welcomed in the course. Its goal is finer leadership service for boys.

Our Debt To The Farmers.
It was the noon hour at school. The school children hurried from their rooms to the lunch room. They got their lunch such as vegetables, fruits, meat, bread, pastry, eggs, milk and other things. The children ate their lunch quickly, paid for them and ran out to play.

Although most of the children were sons and daughters of farmers, they never even thought of them thought of the farmers who produced the cotton and wool which were in the clothing, or of the cattle raisers who produced leather that in the shoes they wore. Perhaps they were too busy trying to learn their lessons, or playing, to think of their debt to the farmers. Even few of the teachers had thought of their debt to the farmers.

Their debt was a heavy one however. If the farmers had failed to do their work, these children would not have had any means of going to school. They would not have had any teachers to teach them. They would not have had any food to eat or any shoes or clothing to wear. These children would have to leave their homes and search for food. These children probably would have had to live like the cave men did. All of us must eat and wear clothes, so all of us are indebted to the farmer for the necessities of life.

Scout Training Course.
The second session of a training course in boy leadership will be given tonight at 7 p. m., at East Carolina Teachers College. Professor E. L. Henderson, chairman of leadership training for Greenville District Boy Scouts, announced.

The course offered is the "Elements of Scoutmastership, Parts 1 and 2." This course is being found worthwhile not only for Scout leaders but other leaders of boys' activities as well.

The sessions start at 7 p. m. each Monday night, and last for one hour and a half, in room 299 Austin building at the college. This is the second session of the twelve weekly sessions in the course.

"Elements of Scoutmastership" is a part of the leadership training program of the Boy Scouts of America. This and similar training courses are made available to leaders and prospective leaders of boys to fit them constructively for their leadership. Programming material is presented and demonstrated. Questions are brought up and developed in their natural light. Specimen working suggestions are used in practical adaptable ways. Problems and solutions are worked tain. Most of the girls are working pretty well, but there are a few which should hurry along or they will not be able to finish in time. Too many wait until it is late and then some shoddy work in an attempt to get it finished. Unless it is done well as possible there is not much credit in doing it at all. Workmanship is important.

The second session of a training course in boy leadership will be given tonight at 7 p. m., at East Carolina Teachers College. Professor E. L. Henderson, chairman of leadership training for Greenville District Boy Scouts, announced.

The course offered is the "Elements of Scoutmastership, Parts 1 and 2." This course is being found worthwhile not only for Scout leaders but other leaders of boys' activities as well.

The sessions start at 7 p. m. each Monday night, and last for one hour and a half, in room 299 Austin building at the college. This is the second session of the twelve weekly sessions in the course.

"Elements of Scoutmastership" is a part of the leadership training program of the Boy Scouts of America. This and similar training courses are made available to leaders and prospective leaders of boys to fit them constructively for their leadership. Programming material is presented and demonstrated. Questions are brought up and developed in their natural light. Specimen working suggestions are used in practical adaptable ways. Problems and solutions are worked

DRIVERS BILL FACES SOLONS AT 8 TONIGHT

Measure to License N. C. Auto Drivers Expected to Pass Both Houses Easily

Reflector Bureau
Sir Walter Hotel
By C. A. PAUL

Raleigh, Feb. 4.—The driver's license bill, formulated by a special committee of the roads committee, faces the North Carolina senate when the legislature resumes its deliberations here tonight at eight o'clock. The bill, a comprehensive measure, is the most important piece of legislation thus far. That the measure will pass both houses with only minor changes is the opinion of most observers here. Some hint that Senator Johnson, of Duplin, may oppose the measure, was seen by some when he had action on the bill deferred until tonight. Last week when Senator Spence, senate roads committee chairman, and John Sprunt Hill, chairman of the subcommittee, asked for immediate consideration of the bill Senator Johnson wanted to know "why the hurry". Senators Spence and Hill acceded to his request for more time. No statement has been made by Senator Johnson, but it is said that there is much opposition to the bill in his section of the state.

The house will get the Burrus anti-walkathon bill, favorably reported out of committee. The bill would ban walkathons, marathon dancing and such gone-on. It has already passed the Senate.

After bills to be considered are of lesser importance. Among them are measures which would enlarge the power of guardians, allow married men under 21 to renounce rights of courtesy, and change the tax on commercial fishers.

Representative Page's bill "to safeguard the public funds of Bladen county" will probably hit a snag in the senate. The snag is Senator Frink, of Brunswick. The Page bill would prohibit Bladen county officials' use of county funds for trips to Raleigh. Page avers they use public funds to come here to lobby against his bills and that if they want to keep it up they, not the taxpayers, must pay the freight. Senator Frink will doubtless oppose the bill because he is an avowed opponent of the Page local bill program.

The Hill bill, which would provide a referendum on liquor control will not be introduced Monday night. It will appear about Wednesday.

Until 1868, married women in North Carolina did not have the legal right to exercise control over property they owned, that prerogative being vested in husbands.

the New Pontiac STANDARD SIX

An Additional line of cars whose quality and beauty make the price phenomenal

Today Pontiac presents an addition to the Pontiac family—the Standard Six line—even lower in price and offering many of the features that the 1935 De Luxe Six and Improved Eight introduced with such sensational success. All models have the same speedlined styling that gained Pontiac the name of the most beautiful thing on wheels. The bodies are the same solid steel "Turret-Top" Bodies by Fisher. The brakes are the same—big, positive hydraulics, triple-sealed against dirt and moisture. The new ride, the happy result of stabilized, synchronized springing, is every bit as gentle and comfortable as you could ask for. The engine, with its silver-alloy bearings, provides dependable performance so smooth and lively that you will doubt it is a six. And, best of all, it operates with an economy of gasoline and oil that will literally amaze anyone who has had experience with other low-priced cars! A look, a ride and you'll decide you simply can't do better.

LOBBYISTS' BUSY IN N. C.

Forty-Seven Registered and Several Unrecorded at Work in Raleigh

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 4.—(AP)—Forty-seven lobbyists are registered in the book reserved for that purpose in the office of Stacy Wade, Secretary of State. The forty-seven have thus duly qualified themselves for membership in the "third house" of the 1935 Legislature.

Strangely absent are the representatives of school book companies. They are here, but they are not registered. For unannounced reasons they have failed to publicly identify themselves, although they are familiarly known in legislative circles.

Equally strange is the non-appearance of the names of Julie Warrick and M. E. Yount. Warren lives in Raleigh, is executive secretary of the N. C. Educational Association and is seen milling around almost every day.

Yount who hails from the town of Graham, is County Superintendent of Schools in Alamance County and chairman of the legislative committee for the same society. He is registered at a local hotel, spends much time here, and has more than a few persons wondering how he appears in the Alamance schools from afar.

The educational association's whole legally-constituted lobbyist is Stover P. Dunnagan, former legislator. He is lobbyist No. 46 next to last, according to the book. J. W. Whitstead, Jr. occupies page 47 and is representing Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company.

One lobbyist, Cullen Mull, of Shelby, is representing, according to his own statement, in the book "no one." He lists his particular field as old-age insurance. Perhaps a more proper identification than no one could have been "myself."

Numbers one and two are, respectively, Willard Dowell, of the N. C. Merchants' Association, and J. Paul Lechardt, of the Fair Taxers. Both are opposing the sales tax. Farther down the line is their opponent, N. C. Bartlett, of Kinston, who is representing the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce. He and they want the sales tax re-enacted. So does the Asheville Real Estate Board.

The fanciest name in the book is that of their lobbyist, De Vere C. Lentz.

Although some soiled linen with political stripes may make its appearance it won't be through any fault of Frank Sims, Jr. of Charlotte, who is the Raleigh sentry for the Carolina Linen Supply Company. The optometrists are running true to form. They have a pair of eyes in political stripes and J. M. Broughton, W. H. Sawyer, of Raleigh, represents the cosmetologists (beauty parlor operators), although it is not known how much he will influence the making-up of legislative minds.

That cosmetologists party two years ago lifted several pairs of eyebrows and the very mention of it causes home legislators hair to curl.

Spineless members will find in J. Henri Brown a willing listener to their woes. He is on deck for the N. C. Chiropractors' Association. Nor will Charles Vestal turn a deaf ear to what legislators say. His business is listening despite the fact that he is lobbying for the N. C. Association for the deaf.

Legislators are being weighed in the balance by George Ross Poul. Perhaps he wants to find out how they stand on the diversion of highway funds because he is appearing for the Peerless Weighing Machine Company and the Highway Protective League. Jim Grossfield is on the books for George Ruty's walkathon and the Outdoor Advertising Association. It appears, however, that the walkathon does not need any advertising just now. Senator Burns' big which would ban them has secured plenty, both indoors and out.

The only woman lobbyist signing the book is Mrs. Claude Barber, of Raleigh. She is working for the Committee Against Ratification of the child labor amendment.

If things get to bubbling too much as a result of the activities of the carbonated waters lobbyists there are several of companies' agents on hand to calm the trouble waters.

No distiller has a lobbyist registered who can be found in all the town. The United Drys, on the other hand, have a legislative committee to exert pressure for retention of the Burlington Act. Cale K. Burgess, executive vice-president, has mailed a lot of dry literature to legislators, and the organization is organized; but a thorough scanning of the lobbyists' book reveals no United, or non-united, dry.

Dead oil wells in limestone regions are being caused to increase their flow by pouring of volumes of acid into depths of the earth. The acids eat out new channels for the petroleum.

Plants get their main nourishment from the air, not the soil. Carbonic acid gas, of which the atmosphere contains only three parts in ten thousand, is the most important part of air to them. The gas is useless to the plant, however, unless light and moisture are present.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 4.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady 2 higher to two lower with trade buying to near months and liquidation in late positions. Trading was quiet after the call and the early trading price fluctuations were narrow. May was selling around 12.20 at the end of the first half hour while other months were unchanged to two higher. May advanced to 12.35 and October sold at 12.22 with the general market holding net unchanged to 6 higher at midday.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Feb. 4.—(AP)—With the expected break in the gold clause cloud failing to appear to day most financial markets settled back for another quiet day. Traders in both stocks and staples showed little inclination to back up their guesses on the coming decision by expanding commitments. Apathy in the equities list was pronounced throughout the greater part of the session and the ticker tape was frequently motionless for minutes or so at a time. Prices generally irregularly lower.

Bonds and foreign exchange exhibited a disposition to mark time pending the decision of the administration program. Grains were a bit soft at times and cotton was fairly steady. The late tone was easy.

Whether properly or improperly the breaches cannot be determined in this court but remains to be established in the appropriate action at law.

Money Issue Before Congress. Washington, Feb. 4.—(AP)—Money measures dominated in congress today as the delay in the Supreme court's gold decision temporarily shifted the administration's problems.

In the senate, the $4,800,000,000 work relief bill apparently was connected with a strong movement to halt all direct federal relief except the $800,000,000 earmarked for this purpose.

The house meanwhile received another of the annual supply bills this one providing $98,185,000 to operate the staff, justice, commerce and labor departments through the fiscal year beginning June 1. Accordingly this bill had two important disclosures.

Secretary Hull indicated that President Roosevelt will draft a message to leaders seeking new markets abroad for American commerce. Secretary Roper said some of the NRA functions may be shifted to the commerce department.

This statement by Roper was made public just as President Roosevelt summoned a long list of advisors to discuss the future of NRA.

The Supreme Court met solemnly for another opinion day. Since Chief Justice Hughes had definitely passed any change of a ruling today on the government's abrogation of the gold clause in contracts interest swung to a possible ruling on the Senate's power to punish for contempt.

The case was that of William McCracken, Jr., former assistant secretary of commerce who was sentenced to ten days in jail for failure to produce data demanded by the Senate committee.

Post-season barnstorming trips of big league baseball players hereafter must halt at October 31, according to a ruling agreed upon by the two major organizations.

The Detroit Tigers were the best home attraction in the American League last season while the Yankees were the best road attraction.

Kitchen utensils are popular gifts to London brides this season.

Smile Of The Juror That Cheered Bruno

This was the sort of friendly smile Jurorwoman Ethel Stockton (above) is reported to have flashed upon Bruno Hauptmann during his trial at Flemington, N. J., for the Lindbergh murder.

SPORT SLANTS

A big indoor track meet in Madison Square Garden attracts all the foot-racing stars in the past in the vicinity. The old-timers get together and make the lobby fairly buzz as they re-run the thrillers of the past, and the races become more exciting with each retelling.

On this particular occasion "Pinky" Sober, a grand little half-miler of a decade ago, was holding forth with a small group. Sober, naturally, was talking "track" and he waxed enthusiastic.

The Second Maccabiah or World's Jewish Athletic games are to be held in Palestine this coming April and Sober heads a committee including Abel Kiviat, Milton Sandier and Barney Hyman, which is in charge of the tryouts.

The final tryouts for the track and field teams are to be held in New York City February 21.

The First Maccabiah was held in Palestine in 1922. Over 5,000 athletes from 22 nations competed in a complete Olympic program, with the American contingent carrying off track and field honors.

Some 36 nations are planning to send representatives to the Second Maccabiah, promising to double the number of competitors.

Here Was a Real 'Kick' In 1925 Sober, an obscure half-miler at the College of the City of New York, flashed into the foot-racing limelight with one of the most amazing finishing "kicks" ever seen on a track.

Pinky had a habit of trailing his field, generally so far back that his cause often seemed hopeless. He paid no attention to the leaders, contenting himself with his own pace and then, carrying a last-minute sprint that carried him to the front.

Slim of build and weighing around 130 pounds, he would rely on his amazing reserve to pull his through.

One blazing July afternoon in 1926 the junior national championships were being conducted in the sesqui-centennial stadium in Philadelphia. All the athletes were seeking the shady hooks, that is all but Pinky.

His Place Was In The Sun Pinky sat out in the infield where the full heat of the day poured down on him, "resting" for the final.

Officials, coaches and athletes advised him to move into the shade, warning him against sun-stroke, and telling him that he was broiling away his chances of winning. Pinky merely smiled his thanks for their kindly interest and remained in the sun.

When his event was finally called he drowsily dressed himself to the starting line. The sun sent eight year youngsters running down the track, with Pinky leaning up on his back and apparently being ground with each stride.

Coming into the final straightaway with about 200 yards to go, he trailed the leaders by 25 yards—an almost unaccountable handicap.

Suddenly he came to life and with long powerful strides began to pick up the field, which then appeared to be standing. His amazing drive carried him home a winner in the last step.

Pinky was plenty "hot" that afternoon for he set a new junior national record of 1:54 1-5 for the half mile.

SAYS FISCH OFFERED TO SELL 'HOT MONEY' AFTER KILLING

said a picture of Violet Sharpe resembled the woman. Mrs. Bonstetter said on cross examination there was no baby with Violet Sharpe. The defense produced support for one of Hauptmann's important alibis but lost an attempt to establish the defense that he was not the man seen in the car with a ladder near the Lindbergh home on the day the baby was kidnaped.

Hans Kloppenburg, a friend of Hauptmann's, testified he and the accused man were at Hauptmann's home playing music the whole evening of April 2, 1932, when Dr. Condon says he paid to Hauptmann the $50,000 ransom.

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 4.—(AP)—The defense of Bruno Richard Hauptmann seeking to forge its own chain of circumstances to offset that of the State today produced another witness to say he saw a man in an automobile with a ladder near the Lindbergh home on the night Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. was kidnaped and slain.

Sebastian Benjamin Lupica, Princeton student, said he noticed the man while he was driving back home from school on the afternoon of March 1, 1932, and that the man was not Hauptmann.

He followed to the witness stand Peter H. Sommer, whose story that he saw two men and a woman with a baby an hour after the kidnaping was vigorously attacked by the State.

Sommers, keystone witness in the Fisch-Sharpe side of Hauptmann's defense structure, had to go back over his story detail by detail today as the State sought to prove its faults.

The witness insisted he saw two men and a woman with a blond baby on the night the Lindbergh child was taken and indicated the picture of the dead Fisch as one of the men, and saying the picture of the suicide Morrow maid, Violet Sharpe, closely resembled the woman.

Attorney-General David T. Wilentz accused Sommer of being a professional witness.

Fisch has been Hauptmann's alibi in the Lindbergh ransom money plot.

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 4.—(AP)—Arthur J. Trost a New York painter asserted today that Isador Fisch had offered to sell him "hot money" three months after the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Chief of Defense Counsel Edward J. Riley, Trost said, rejected his proffer of testimony yesterday and accused the would-be witness of being a "stool pigeon" for the State of New Jersey.

Trost said Reilly did not give him time to complete an account of details to which he professed to know of the offer of "hot money."

"I worked steadily as a painter," Trost said, "and I was even going to bear my own expenses to Flemington in order to see that Hauptmann got justice."

The painter was taken to Reilly's office by Henry Kress, who worked as investigator for James Faucett, former counsel for Hauptmann, and for Reilly.

Kress said of the Trost story: "I do not tell this story to that related by Gustav Lukatis, who told me the same story of Fisch wanting to sell 'hot money.' Trost and Lukatis have never met. Trost said he had known Fisch since the summer of 1931."

The Punishment

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER I KNOW," admitted Christopher Columbus Crow, "that I was very wicked. But I have always wished to get some revenge on that man for wanting to have me killed. 'I did not do anything to hurt him. I only took his wig away from him for a little while. I only wanted to tease and annoy him.

"I had meant to come right back with your adhesive tape before I stole the wig. And while I was looking around to see how I would get the wig, the adhesive tape package dropped in the snow and I didn't realize it.

"I've been very wicked. I played the prank on the man knowingly, but I didn't want to keep you waiting for your package.

"Oh, Willy Nilly, I am so sorry." And indeed the crow looked sorry, and was sorry. His shining feathers seemed to look dull, and he stood limply and forlornly.

"I'm sure you're sorry about what you did to me," said Willy Nilly, "but you see you not only delayed me in keeping me waiting for my adhesive tape, but I've had to spend a great deal of time helping the old man."

Christopher's head was bent 'way down. "For three days," said Willy Nilly, "you'll come with us and eat your meals, but we'll only give you enough to keep you well. You will miss all of the treats."

"I'll go back to my nest now," said Christopher. Willy Nilly opened the door and let Christopher out. It was dark, and the air felt very cold. But as Christopher tucked his head under his wing he chuckled, just a little, for mischief was fun!

LITTLE SENTIMENT FOR HIGHWAY FUND DIVERSION

insistent demand from their constituents for the reconstruction and better maintenance of the secondary roads which have not been paved.

"The people of North Carolina have become accustomed to good roads and are not going to be satisfied with poor roads or poorly maintained roads," Chairman C. W. Tate of the House roads committee said today. "They are not satisfied with the way the secondary roads have been allowed to go to pieces during the past two years for lack of proper maintenance. They want these roads rebuilt and put back into good condition and kept that way. Most of them also know that if this is done it will cost money and that it cannot be done if the highway funds are diverted to other purposes or if the present license taxes are reduced."

Numerous other members of both houses have expressed similar sentiments and are almost unanimous in saying that the people in their counties, especially those who live in the country and have to use the roads more than the city dwellers, are demanding more adequate provision both for maintenance and new construction and that they would rather have this than a reduction in the licenses or gasoline taxes.

"If the automobile owners could get a reduction in their automobile taxes without getting a reduction in highway service, all of them would naturally like to have the license and gasoline tax reduced," Senator Horton of Chatham county, a member of the Senate committee on roads said. "But the past two years has convinced them that whenever the amount spent on roads is reduced that the roads suffer and that they as road users, suffer. Consequently they realize they cannot expect to have good roads unless the Highway Commission collects enough revenue from the license and gasoline taxes to properly maintain and rebuild them. Most of the car owners are consequently willing to pay the present rates of taxes as long as they can be assured that all the revenue from these taxes will continue to be used for road purposes and nothing else."

From the views expressed by various members of both houses, reflecting the views of their constituents, it is apparent that the automobile and truck owners, who are the road users and the ones who pay all of the highway taxes, are not demanding any reduction in taxes so long as the revenue from these taxes will be used solely for road purposes.
