

Government Set For Emergency On Gold Clause

READY TO ACT COUNTY COURT IF HIGH COURT UNFAVORABLE

Presidential Proclamation Declaring National Emergency Will be Issued if Court Rules Against Gold Clause; Restrictions Will be Taken to Stabilize Markets Pending Legal Measure

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—(AP)—A Presidential proclamation declaring a national emergency and bringing sweeping executive powers into action to steady conditions, was reported in authoritative circles today to be the first administration move planned if the Supreme Court rules adversely on the gold clause.

Such a proclamation, it was understood, would follow the court decision in a matter of minutes, clamping on emergency restrictions to stabilize the markets pending legal remedies.

That the proclamation forms a part of the legal preparations which have occupied treasury and justice experts for the week was conceded in informed circles even though the same sources expressed belief the court would uphold the government.

SCOUTS TO AID SAFETY DRIVE

Activities of Local Troops Saturday in Keeping With Silver Anniversary

Greenville Scouts will publicize the city Safety Slogan Saturday morning. The same morning they will meet in a Board of Review at the High School Library. These activities will compose the Saturday morning part of the Scout Silver Jubilee Anniversary Week.

The Safety Slogan publicity will represent a city-wide "good turn" for the Scouts' week of celebration. Scout officials have already conferred with Mayor Flanagan and planned for the event. The slogan used will be the prize-winning sentence in the recent City Safety Slogan Contest, and comes as a feature of the service of K. T. Putrell, chairman of the Boy Scout Civic Service Committee.

June Rose, chairman of the Scout Board of Review, has announced that the monthly meeting of this committee will meet Saturday morning at 10 a. m. at the High School. The date of this meeting was arranged to come in the Scout Anniversary Week, as a symbol of the Scouts advancing through their ranks. All Scouts of the district who are ready to advance will appear before the Board Saturday morning and have their requirements reviewed. This will include Scouts ready for second and first-class ranks and Merit Badges.

This announcement adds two more events to the previously announced celebration to be held at 7 to 9 p. m. Friday night at the Methodist Church social room. Other activities for this week of Scouting will be ready to announce tomorrow. All together, the plans call for a huge participation of Scouts in numbers of things Scouts "do."

These events are marked together in celebration of the twenty-fifth birthday of Scouting in the States, a celebration of the growth and achievements of the movement during its existence. It is worthy for Boy Scouting stands at the top of the program for youth.

SENATOR HILL THINKS LIQUOR BILL TO PASS

Hundreds of Telegrams of Approval Cause Author to See Success For Measure

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILL.
Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 5.—The reaction to my State-wide liquor control bill has been remarkable and sentiment in favor of it is sweeping from one end of the State to the other. Senator Sprunt Hill, of Durham, ardent personal dry, said today concerning the bill he has drawn and intends to introduce soon, "I have already received more than 300 telegrams and I don't know how many letters commending the bill, with not more than half a dozen telegrams or letters opposing it. A very large number of these letters and telegrams approving the bill are from church members and from people who, like myself, formerly believed in prohibition, but who become convinced that the present State law is a failure and that a strict liquor control law, rigidly enforced, is much to be preferred to the old, broken-down and thoroughly discredited Turlington Act."

Senator Hill said he is now preparing an analysis of the Turlington Act, the State's prohibition enforcement law enacted in 1926, which he expects to present to the General Assembly and the people of the State for comparison with his control bill, so that they may see just how out-of-date and ineffective the Turlington Act is at the present time.

In fact, I do not propose to repeal the Turlington Act at all, but only to amend it to meet present-day conditions," Senator Hill said. "The bill I shall offer is in reality nothing more than a series of amendments to the Turlington Act to modernize it to deal with conditions as they now are instead of as they were twelve years ago, when we had national prohibition. For conditions are different now from what they were then, especially since all of the States surrounding us have legalized the sale of liquor and since it has been proved that it is impossible to prevent its sale and use in North Carolina. If we cannot prohibit its sale and use by laws prohibiting its use, we should then try to do something to better regulate its sale and use and take the sale out of the hands of bootleggers and criminals and put it under strict regulation and control. That is what my bill would do. It would also mean that the State would get the profit and revenue from its sale which is now going to the bootleggers and to Virginia and South Carolina."

The trouble with the position of the extreme dries is that they are blind to real conditions and real facts and apparently still believe that the present State prohibition law is effective. Senator Hill said. On the other hand, the liberal dries, among whom Hill includes himself, are willing to look at the facts and to admit that the present State prohibition law is a failure and that it either needs to be changed or displaced entirely with a new plan to meet new conditions.

"The Turlingtonites, who want the Turlington Act to remain just as it has been for the last twelve years either are not able to or do not want to know the facts and see conditions as they are," Senator Hill said. "They are like ostriches who have buried their heads in the sand in order not to see what they do not want to see. They belong back in the horse-and-buggy age, and like the horses of that time, they are still wearing blinkers to keep from seeing what is before them."

Plan Franchise Tax In Place Of The Sales Tax

Late News Flashes

By J. C. BASKERVILL.
Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 6.—A graduated franchise tax upon domestic and foreign corporations, public utilities and virtually all types of business, based upon the gross income of these business and running as high as 10 per cent in the upper brackets—in fact, only another type of sales tax—is the principal plan which will be proposed by the anti-sales tax and school forces as a substitute for the sales tax section of the revenue bill when it reaches the floor of the House. It was learned from authoritative sources today. It is also expected that a modified production tax or gross receipts tax, such as was proposed in the 1933 General Assembly, will also be proposed to round out the $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 in additional revenue which the opponents of the sales tax say their plan will yield.

Neither Representatives McDonald of Forsyth nor Lumpkin, of Franklin, who are expected to offer the new plan in the form of amendments when the sections of the revenue bill affected are reached, will discuss the plan with newsmen nor reveal any of its details. But they have revealed enough of it to members of the House who they are trying to convert to it, to indicate that the foundation of the plan is a graduated franchise tax based on gross receipts rather than on capital stock and undivided surplus.

It was also learned from reliable sources that they also propose to tax stock in corporations held by individuals on the basis of the value of the stock instead of the income from it, to increase the tax on moving picture theaters to 10 per cent of all gross receipts whenever these receipts amount to more than $10,000 a year per theater and to impose a 20 per cent crown tax on all bottled soft drinks, which would probably require the public to pay a 20 per cent sales tax on all five cent bottled drinks.

It is in the proposal to tax corporations both domestic and foreign on the basis of gross receipts rather than on their stock or income, that is arousing the most interest here, however. For it is pointed out for this plan, in order to make up for the loss of $8,000,000 a year from the sales tax and provide some $4,000,000 of the same bloc want in order to increase the appropriation for schools, will have to get some $11,561,357 they are now paying in State taxes. In other words, the new gross receipts tax plan would compel the corporations in the State to pay $24,661,351 a year in taxes where they now are paying only $11,561,357. This means that the present taxes on foreign and domestic corporations in North Carolina will have to be more than doubled.

If this plan should be adopted, the sales tax removed and an additional $4,000,000 a year provided for the schools, the individual tax-payers in the State would get a tax reduction of more than $12,000,000 a year on paper, as compared with the $22,243,783 a year they are now paying, including the sales tax. But it is pointed out by experienced students of taxation that if this proposed gross receipts tax, running as high as 10 per cent, is adopted, it will mean a loss of $12,000,000 a year to the State.

ARREST TWO FOR LARCENY

Two Negro Youths Taken Into Custody On Charge of Stealing Fertilizer Sacks

Within four or five days after rounding up a band of nine young negro thieves, police reported this morning the capture of two members of another band from the Newell town district.

Johnnie Simms and Fred Williams, described as from 12 to 15 years old, were being held in the city jail for action of Juvenile Court as soon as Judge Frank Harrington, who is sick at his home in the western part of the city, is able to be out. The case against the nine youths arrested in the first round-up also awaits the recovery of the Juvenile Court judge.

Chief of Police George Clark, who conducted the investigation into the operations of the second gang said they had been stealing fertilizer sacks from the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company and selling them for one cent each, whereas the sacks usually sell for 10 cents apiece. Approximately fifty sacks were recovered along with the arrest of the couple.

Chief Clark expressed belief the negroes had been stealing sacks and other goods for a period of several weeks, but police were not able to get a line on their operations until yesterday.

SALES TAX SUBSTITUTE IN MAKING

Imposition of Producer's Tax And Occupational Tax Under Consideration

Raleigh, Feb. 6.—(AP)—It was learned by the Associated Press in authoritative circles today that present plans for a substitute for the 3 per cent sales tax in the biennial revenue bill for 1935-37 included the imposition of a producer's tax of one-fourth of one per cent of the gross receipts of all manufacturers in North Carolina, occupational taxes on professional folk and merchants and major changes in other present levies.

The details of the substitute plan have been carefully guarded by the anti-sales taxers and changes may be made before it is offered on the floor of the House during consideration of the revenue bill.

Some of the proposals raising present levies or imposing new taxes and the estimated annual return in the sales tax substitute, however, are reliably said to be:

Taxation of railroads at one-half and one-half per cent of assessed value, $971,148; taxation of power companies at ten per cent of the gross earnings, $1,118,718; levy on hydro-electric concerns of one-half of one per cent of a mill per kilowatt, the same rate as in South Carolina with an estimated annual yield of $1,800,000.

DELVOIR LADY PASSES AWAY

Mrs. D. J. Holland, 71, Dies This Morning Following Attack of Pneumonia

Mrs. D. J. Holland, 71, died at her home in Delvoir township this morning at 8:45 after infirmity of five years and serious illness since last Saturday. Death was caused by pneumonia.

Funeral services will be conducted from her late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock by Elder S. B. Denny, pastor of the Wilson Primitive Baptist Church, and interment will be made in the family burial ground near the home.

She is survived by her husband and six children: Mrs. Richard Parker, Connettee; Mrs. Rufus Parker, Mrs. H. McD. Hux, Miss Elizabeth Holland and R. W. and Joe Holland, all of the Delvoir community.

Mrs. Holland was the wife of a former member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and for years one of the most important farmers of that section of the county.

She was a member of the Primitive Baptist Church and always manifested much interest in the work of the denomination. She was a native of this county and spent all of her life in the community where she died.

Kidnap Ladder Again Argued In Hauptmann Case

COLLECTIONS OF TAXES DROP

City Records For January Show Decline Of $3,000 Over Same Month of 1934

Tax collections in the city of Greenville for January were about $3,000.00 less than the corresponding period last year, it was made known today by J. O. Duval, city clerk, who completed a check of collections yesterday.

The total amount collected during the month, the auditor said, was $12,355.41 as compared with $15,223.63 the previous year.

The January slump this year, the clerk said, was due mainly to the after-Christmas lull in business which was felt in every branch of industry.

During October, November and December records collections were recorded by the local office. Collections for one month went above the $20,000 mark.

A penalty of 1-2 of one per cent became effective on delinquent 1934 taxes February 2, Mr. Duval said, and it is to the advantage of taxpayers to get busy and close up their obligations as soon as possible, he said.

In spite of the January slump in collections, Mr. Duval stated the general treasury balance is considered above that of the previous year. In fact the city ended the old year with all bills paid and enough money in the treasury to meet obligations for sometime to come.

Persons who have not paid their taxes are urged to do so at once and help the city continue its fine collection record.

NEGRO HELD IN THEFT CASE

John Owens Bound Over to County Court Following Hearing Today

John Owens, colored, charged with the larceny of shoes, was bound over to County Court in preliminary hearing in police court this morning. He was unable to provide bond of $100 and was remanded to jail to await hearing.

The negro was taken into custody by police yesterday after allegedly stealing shoes from Dick Williams, also colored. Owens, police said, had the shoes on when he was taken into custody.

Chief of Police George Clark said Owens, who was just released from the county roads, evidently wanted to return to the road forces as he returned to his old game immediately after being given liberty. He was formerly sentenced on a charge of larceny and had previously served a sentence on a similar charge.

This was the only case on the police court docket this morning, forming quite a striking contrast to recent sessions when from a dozen to two dozen cases were disposed of.

N. J. POLICE OFFICER GOES ON THE STAND

Testifies That None Of Fingerprints Found on Ladder Were Hauptmann's; Bronx Radio Repairman Says Fisch Brought Shoe Box to His Place and Left it Six Hours

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 6.—(AP)—A Bronx plumber testified today that an attic floor board which the state charged was used in the Lindbergh kidnap ladder was not noted by him to be missing when he probed a leak on August 12, 1934.

Gustav Miller, the plumber, said he examined the attic at the time for 6 or 7 minutes and could remember no board missing.

The state had produced testimony that after Hauptmann's arrest police found a board missing from the attic and further that the upright from the kidnap ladder fitted in the vacant space jibing and even to the nail holes and the slant of the nails.

This evidence was further supported by wood experts who said further that the grain of the ladder upright matched that of a section from which the floor board had been sawn.

Hauptmann's defense is fighting to prove that the dead Isidor Fisch got the Lindbergh ransom money was temporarily balked today in an attempt to show that Fisch exhibited gold notes in 1933.

At the noon recess decision of whether Oscar Bruchmann, a Bronx taxi driver, once employed by Fisch, could answer questions pertaining to the challenged gold note had not been reached by the court.

Edward Reilly, defense chief attorney, answered to objections by Attorney General David Williams by declaring Bruchmann's testimony was offered for the purpose of showing the certain affluence of Fisch and his wealth and his display of certain gold back bills he had in May, 1933.

Justice Termerhild ruled after the conference before his bench that before declaring his recess that the defendant would have to show the money Fisch was alleged to have exhibited to Bruchmann was truly the ransom money. Otherwise, the court said Hauptmann's attorneys would have to abandon that kind of questioning.

SEEK HOMES FOR CHILDREN

Welfare Department Making Effort to Place 7 White Children at This Time

The Pitt County Welfare office today was seeking approved homes for seven white children ranging from infancy to 13 years of age.

K. T. Futrell, director of the department, said this morning the shortage of homes for white children had become decidedly pronounced in this country the past several weeks and his office is experiencing more than usual difficulty in placing to homeless children.

Mr. Futrell said his department was able to place nine children in January, two of which were white, and the remainder colored. Little difficulty is experienced in placing colored children in private homes, and the department is concerned only with seven white ones now in its care.

Persons desiring to provide homes for the children now awaiting homes are requested to write the Welfare Department, giving full particulars about themselves and home conditions. The applications must be first approved by the department before children are turned over to private families.

FREEING: Secretary of State Hull's action in abruptly declaring debt-funding negotiations with Soviet Russia at an end was fifty per cent stony-faced American poker and fifty per cent Hobson's choice.

Men in charge of our foreign relations still have some hope Moscow can be persuaded to accept our terms—which are said to be a best and final offer. They are by no means certain of winning the pot.

There was interesting strategy behind Hull's dismissal of Ambassador Trolanovsky's last compromise proposal.

Russia owes us, according to our calculations, around $700,000,000 plus interest. The USSR was offered an easy long-term settlement for $150,000,000. The bait held out was a $100,000,000 credit through George Peck's Export-Import Bank which was set up especially to do business with Russia. This credit would have revolved every five years, provided payments were met, and American heavy industry would have sold some much-needed orders.

But the Soviets wanted a cash loan in return for agreeing to pay us back a portion of the czar's old debt. With that money they could buy their rails, pipe, locomotives, agricultural equipment, machinery, etc., much cheaper in European countries. It is an old army game that has been worked on Uncle Sam many times before.

That, of course, would have frozen our industrialists out of the picture. Reports that American Ambassador William C. Bullitt might resign because of the collapse of negotiations were very properly dropped because Bullitt himself suggested the procedure Hull followed.

LEGISLATIVE RAMBLINGS

By C. A. PAUL

A resolution inviting Huey Long to come to Raleigh to calm legislative waters will be introduced in debate waxes too hot and strong in the lower house, says Representative Tom Cooper of New Hanover. Cooper says he has his resolution drawn and will present it if and when the occasion presents itself.

It is entirely within the realms of possibility that Representative Cooper may himself provide the occasion. He doesn't exactly have a reputation of being an entirely innocent legislator when it comes to discussing peace-loving law makers.

Bladen County politicians who come to Raleigh to protest against Representative U. S. Page's local bills will have to pay their own way, said the Legislature when it gave final approval to the Page bill.

There still appears to be a division of opinion in the legislature as to the "absentee ballot" provision of our election laws but as we see it the evil part of our election laws so outweighs the good that the best plan is to abolish absentee voting in North Carolina.

WE PAY TWICE

The legislature has rightly seen fit to remove the bridge tolls but under the same plan shouldn't the tolls or double-taxation for roads on a part of the counties in the state likewise be removed. The counties that have bonded indebtedness for roads that the state now owns are paying gasoline tax to help pay for the roads built in other counties and at the same time are paying ad valorem taxes to pay their bonded indebtedness. Our highway system now belongs to the state and certainly the debts for highways should likewise belong to the state. The refusal of the state to assume liability for the roads along with roads has placed a penalty on the progressive counties that went ahead and built their roads making possible our present state highway system. Taking the toll off the bridges makes it possible for those using the bridges to do so without paying but their regular gasoline and license tag taxes but the citizens of Pitt and several other counties in the state pay the same rate of gasoline and license taxes and then have to pay ad valorem taxes too for the use of their roads.

COMPLETE THE JOB

The raid here about three weeks ago on a gambling room and the arrest of the operators and the gamblers was a step in the right direction toward ridding our community of the gambling evil and at that time we commented on the numerous reports of other gambling places and urged that the officers not cease their efforts until they had broken them all up.

Those arrested in the above mentioned raid have been dealt with by the courts but so far we have heard of no raids on other alleged gambling joints. If we are going to clean up our community let's not break up one joint and then pat ourselves on the back that the job has been accomplished.

Montana Rides Again

A RAPID-FIRE ROMANCE BY EVAN EVANS

SYNOPSIS: The Montana Kid and Mateo, Rubric have been admitted to the fort of Duraya through information furnished by Rosita. They went to steal the emerald crown of Our Lady, which General Estrada has taken from the church, and return it. As they hang outside the general's window, however, they hear Rosita betray them to the general, who hustles out of his apartment to see that Rosita gets safely home.

EXPLOSION

RUBRIC and Montana stood again in the bedroom of the general, and the bandit wasted one moment to say to his friend:

"There is your lesson! If you must have women, give them your hands—but only with gold in it. Give trust to them and you give it to the wind!"

"We have work to do," said the Kid through his teeth.

And he went straight for the closet in which they had found the safe of Ignacio Estrada. The teeth of Montana were still set hard and some thing that was not quite a smile kept lifting his lip a trifle.

When they were inside the closet, Rubric could hear his friend humming that old, old song: "Love is not happiness."

Rubric himself joined in the humming, very softly. The two of them felt to work with the skill of old practitioners.

Suppose a sound as of two immense hands clapped together, in such a fashion that the air is not struck out flatlines, in a thunder-clap. Suppose a pair of huge doors hurried down on a thick carpet. Imagine a quivering shock that runs through a building and seems to come from any direction at all—the sides, the bottom, the top.

That was what the explosion was like in Fort Duraya. Nearly every soul in the big building heard it or felt it, for it was almost more to be felt than to be heard. A good many thought that it was a severe earthquake.

Most men looked at one another, startled, and muttered: "There's something wrong!" There were very few who could guess that it was actually an explosion.

The general, Ignacio Estrada, was one of these. He had brought Rosita to the gate of the fort, on his arm, so that she had nothing to do except to saunter down the short slope towards the lights of the town.

In front of the entire guard at the gate, he leaned and kissed the girl. She received that caress on a brow of stone, and the general would not have been surprised if he had heard a snicker from one of the men.

"Well, Rosita," he said to her, "one of these days you will like me better."

"I shall pray," she answered. She looked right back at him. He did not know whether to curse her insolence or damn her stupidity. Then he decided that he would do neither, but begin to use all of his brains in the study of her.

For one thing, she had taken on additional significance, simply because he knew that she had seen El Keed face to face, perhaps had smiled and laughed with that fantastic adventurer. She startled the good general as though he had discovered, in some plain, drab woman of middle age, the widow of a great man.

FOR El Keed was great in the eyes of General Estrada. In part the greatness was based upon a mystery. Estrada could understand why men should dare greatly for great rewards, but to ride into danger merely for the sake of danger's face was an absurdity and a madness.

These were the thoughts that were working in the mind of the governor as he said good-bye to the girl, and at that moment he heard from somewhere inside the fort—or was it not from the ground beneath him?—that soft, muffled explosion. He started. He looked wild as Rosita.

"What is it?" she asked him.

"El Keed—I think, El Keed!" said the governor.

"Inside the fort?" she gasped.

"Still inside the fort?"

She even made a pace or two in pursuit of the general, but Estrada was making off at full speed, shouting to the officer of the gate: "Sound the alarm! Every man at his post! Sound the alarm!"

That was why Montana and Rubric did not have much time.

They had watched the fire run down the fuse under the door of the closet. They had heard the very light crackling and splitting sound which the fuse made. They lay flat on the floor in a corner of the bedroom and waited. All sound ended.

are several gambling places in our city that could be broken up if our officials showed a determination to do this job. A start has been made. Let's not stop until the job has been completed.

that our definite and final refusal of a cash loan will hurt the Soviet credit in Europe where it has been doing most of its shopping.

"The cursed fuse was wet—it was ruined!" growled Rubric. "That dog of an Ofate shall learn what it is to give me false material!"

Then the explosion came. It blew the door of the closet shuddering open. An invisible puff, as it were, of thick, strange-smelling air rolled out to them, and the flame jumped wildly in the lamp and almost went out.

When they got into the closet they found the door of the safe open and hanging by only one hinge!

Well, let them take this much good fortune almost for granted—since they were not yet clear of the fort! Even if the emerald crown were in their hands, they had not gained it until they were out of Fort Duraya.

That was why they said nothing when from the second or third drawer they opened they took a soft wrapping of chamolito. It fell open in their hands and they saw the green glinting of the emeralds, like the eyes of cats when a torch reflects from them by night.

Then they heard the shrill neighing of the alarm bugle that was blowing from the gate of the fort and causing the echoing of trumpeting to sound in immediate answer from the barracks and all through the big building.

"Now for the last step!" said Rubric.

HE TOOK one half of the broken crown and gave the other to his friend.

"Ay," said Montana. "One of us may stick in the trap. Take some of this stuff."

He had picked two soft, heavy little bags of gold out of another drawer of the safe. Rubric dropped one into a pocket of his trousers. Montana put the little ten-pound weight inside his coat.

"The best way is right back to the postern by which we came in. Follow me there, Rubric."

"Back the same way? They will have it crowded with armed men."

"I tell you that's the safest chance."

"Montana, it is no chance at all!" They were in the bedroom of the governor again. They were in the closet opposite to that which had held the safe, and while Rubric completed his costume by huddling swiftly into a white shirt which he snatched from a shelf, Montana picked a great cloak from his hanger and flung it around his shoulders.

They sprang out again into the open room.

"Rubric, I tell you I have a lucky feeling. Come with me tonight!"

"In the name of God, Montana—quickly!—to me!"

A voice called out distantly. Then a door opened and there was a sudden rushing of footfalls, close at hand, at the very entrance to the bedchamber.

Montana, springing for the door that led into the little side corridor, could not believe himself when he saw Rubric rush straight forward to encounter this overwhelming danger.

Well, mere physical resistance could not be in the head of the Mexican. He must have thought out some cunning device.

So Montana went rapidly through the corridor. He came out cautiously into the officers' mess-hall. Two or three chairs were overturned. He found himself, against his own belief, pausing to finish off a brimming glass of wine.

But, after all, the matter of a few seconds here and there would be of no importance. He might as well pause for a cigarette. It would even help him.

Considering this, he actually lighted a smoke and then went on again. The bugles were still going, the sound penetrating the thick walls dimly, entering the mind like persistent needles of thought. But not even the thickness of the walls could keep out the damned rattling and clanging and crazy rhythms of the alarm bells.

The building seemed to tremble as the sounds found physical root in the foundations of the old fort. And a crazy panic ran out through the blood of Montana and into his brain.

He took hold of that panic with his hands, so to speak, and cast it out of his breast.

His hat was well over his head, well down on the forehead. The flap of the cloak would cover most of the rest of his face. And bluff would have to do the rest—bluff no wider than the edge of a knife.

Montana finds, tomorrow, his way blocked by many soldiers.

As of last Oct. 15 Russia owed Germany approximately $120,000,000 of commercial purchases. Great Britain around $40,000,000, other European countries combined about $30,000,000 and the United States $10,000,000 for a round total of $200,000,000.

We may yet force Russia to accept our goods and our credit on our terms, but only if European markets refuse to lengthen the bill already on their cuffs. The hitch is that Russia is mining about $250,000,000 of gold a year. One of the American suggestions was that a portion of this be earmarked against repayment of the pre-revolutionary debt. It fell flat and the gold is still there as a highly respected medium of exchange in anybody's factory.

Christopher's Right Eye

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

In a flash they all saw what had happened and Christopher now knew too. Willy Nilly had been first to notice.

"It was all my fault," sighed Willy Nilly. "If you hadn't been ashamed of your self, because I made you ashamed of your self, you might have stayed all night in the house. Or at least when it was so cold, you would have tapped on my window and I would have let you in."

"I didn't know the temperature would drop like that. But I should have known. I had so much covering over me I didn't realize until this morning how bitterly cold it was."

"Oh, oh, I'll never forgive myself. 'Maybe,' said Rip. 'Christopher has just been nipped a bit.'"

"I know that a crow doesn't always put his head all the way under his wing," continued Willy Nilly. "I know that sometimes his right eye likes to keep a bit more of a ready watch on the world. And it was so cold, so bitterly cold last night."

"I don't believe I've frozen my eye," said Christopher bravely, though now that he was in where it was warm the pain was very great.

"Don't worry about me, Willy Nilly. It was not your fault, and too," he said, and his head twitched into a brave little smile. "Maybe I'd be better off seeing out of one eye. Perhaps I only see too much with both."

"Oh, don't say that. I cannot bear it," said Willy Nilly. "You can be as mischievous as you like—I only want you to be strong and lose nothing that rightfully belongs to you."

"Maybe with one eye I'd only see what rightfully belonged to me," cawed Christopher.

Tomorrow—"The Injured Wino"

AUTHORITY: Even if Congress doesn't rush through the $4,330,000,000 work-relief bill to final passage by the Saturday deadline, Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins has a job to do in the administration or Congress either will have any particular private worries. They may say plenty publicly, though.

Hopkins' warning that on Feb. 10 the last nickel of his last $50,000,000 will be exhausted is accepted as true enough. The catch is that even if the bill runs over into next week people won't start starving at midnight Sunday. Most of the states have enough carry-over money to tide them a while longer. If they haven't, Uncle Sam's credit will be good for a few days.

Had the administration imperatively needed the $380,000,000 in the bill earmarked for one reason it would have accepted the Republican offer and divorced this money from immediate passage. But the White House knew the whole bill could be gotten through just about as ordered. A few days' wait for this $380,000,000 will be a small price to pay for unbridled authority to spend the four billion destined for work relief.

SURPLUS: Some 160 big corporations breathing easier since the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals rendered its decision in favor of Cecil B. DeMille, the movie magnate, in a tax suit brought by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

The Treasury was attempting to assess a 50 per cent penalty tax on accumulation of earnings held by an excess of any one individual for surplus purposes. Further, it was to add the stockholders were seeking to avoid payment.

When the Tax Board by a 10-9 vote, ruled DeMille was with the right, it was one of the many decisions of all the other cases still pending. With such a 10-9 majority of sentiment for the taxpayers are sleeping more comfortably in their surplus.

MELLON: One of the three dissenting members was J. C. Adams, Democratic National Commit-tee member for Texas, who died while the decision was still in the hands of the printers. Adams gained national fame back in 1924 when he teamed up with the late Senator Joe Bailey to run the Ku Klux Klan out of Texas politics, even though a involved supporting "Mr. Ferguson," an old political enemy, for Governor.

Had Adams lived he would have sat in judgment on the $3,000,000 tax case against Andrew W. Mellon, which opens next Monday. His colleague would have been the youthful colorful Edgar J. Goodrich of West Virginia—who wrote the DeMille opinion—but Goodrich resigned from the Board just as Adams died.

This meant that the three-time Republican ex-Secretary of the Treasury—who says he actually rates a refund of $140,000,000—must leave his fate up to Members Ernest H. Van Fossan of Ohio, and Charles M. Trammell of Florida. Van Fossan was first appointed to the Board in 1926 by Calvin Coolidge with Mellon's endorsement, and recently reappointed by Mr. Roosevelt for a term running until 1934. Trammell, a cousin of the Florida Senator, was appointed in 1924, also by Mr. Coolidge, his term expiring next year.

NEW YORK
By James McMullen
SALT: The next sixty days should tell an important story for the destinies of organized labor. The President's renewal of the automobile loan in its original form was the squarkest kick in the teeth the Federation of Labor has met with in many a year. Unless the Federation can work out an effective counter to this setback it will have to speak a lot more softly in the future.

Every circumstance surrounding the auto-renewal marked an emphatic refusal of Federation demands. The unions insisted on extensive revision of the code—or no code. The manufacturers wanted the status quo continued. The latter won by a shut-out.

Still worse from the Federation's viewpoint was official recognition of Leo Wolman's Auto Labor Board. Only last week Green announced that the Board was so biased organized labor would have nothing more to do with it. Whereupon the President promptly puts it on the back and tells it to go ahead.

This unmistakable expression of faith in the Board's fairness is endorsed by disinterested New Yorkers who have followed the situation closely.

CALLED: Why was the Presidential punch at the unions so lethal? Informed sources say it's because the administration is fed up to the eyes with Federation pretensions. "They claim the right to speak for all the workers in the motor industry when they actually represent less than 5 per cent of them. Wolman's figures told the true story—that's one reason why they don't like him. They're strong on publicity but mighty weak on performance. A minority like that has a heck of a nerve demanding dictatorship privileges in the nation's key industry."

Insiders also state that while Green was correct in his complaint that labor was not consulted about the terms of the code renewal, Richberg and Clay Williams were equally right in saying that it was. The apparent contradiction is explained by the fact that government representatives counseled the opinion of unorganized workers while ignoring the Federation. The President acted only after getting indications that the unaffiliated majority was reasonably satisfied with existing conditions.

So now the Federation bluff is called and it will have to put up or shut up. If it takes the licking lying down its prestige is shot. On the other hand, if it calls a strike the charges are 20 to 1 against success. The best it could hope for from the administration would be neutrality—and a rather hostile neutrality at that. Moreover, it's doubtful that enough men would walk out to cause a serious tie-up. A strike that failed, would of course hurt the unions also. It looks as if the Federation leaders have talked themselves into a pack of trouble and will have a job to save their faces.

TEST: The Treasury's stabilization fund came through a strenuous test last week with flying colors. It had the life-sized task of keeping all the major foreign exchange markets in order. Without its intervention the gold bug currencies would have nose-dived and the dollar would have scared out of sight—disrupting trade and conceivably precipitating an international monetary crisis.

The Treasury was ably assisted by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York—which carried out the details. Insiders understand that about $200,000,000 of the total fund of two billion was made available for the operations.

The British stabilization fund helped a little but our own fund bore the brunt of the battle. Normally the banks would have given a hand in buying and importing gold—but last week they quit cold. They couldn't get it out of their heads that maybe the metal they bought at $35 an ounce wouldn't be worth that by the time it got here.

Keen observers give the Treasury all the more credit for keeping the situation in hand.

SAFE: There's little danger that the Strauss failure in London will lead to a smash-up over here as the Platts collapse did in 1929.

Anti-New Dealers have been found pointing to Britain as an example of all that's stand and smelt in finance. They were a trifle too optimistic. There has been a speculative spree in England in the minor commodities—especially shellac and pepper—and the paper must now be paid. A distinguished French financial firm is advising its clients to get out of British investments and into American.

A few American speculators are involved and will take a bad beating—but our markets in general are rated as safe from repercussions as an Eskimo from tropical fever.

CHANGE: The Stock Exchange is sounding out all its members on the Security & Exchange Commission's proposals to convert the management from an oligarchy to a democracy. The referendum is a big concession in itself. Such a move is as rare as elephants in the subway.

It's too early to tell how the members will respond but insiders predict overwhelming sentiment—in favor of the change. Even that would not guarantee corresponding action by the Exchange authorities.

Presented Insurance Sign.

Mesley Bros., insurance agents, with offices on Evans street, were today presented with a gold sign by the Dixie Fire Insurance Co. of Greensboro, in recognition of this agency having faithfully represented the company for over a quarter of a century. The presentation was made by a home office representative of the company, who spoke highly of their ability in handling the company's interests.

They also received a congratulatory letter from the president of the company who has taken a personal interest in the event. "Most important then all," wrote the president, "is the bond of friendship which has held us together, and we hope it may grow even stronger in the years to come. Great credit is due you and your associates in that your business has endured and prospered for so long a period; and your past record should be a heritage symbolic of future achievements."

Mesley Brothers have represented the Dixie Fire Insurance Company since 1907.

To Continue Assembly Devotional.

Whether the devotional features of the assembly hour should be continued or whether the time should be devoted entirely to devotional exercises was settled by the students of East Carolina Teachers College by a vote of 15 to 1 in favor of keeping the devotional exercises. The entire time yesterday morning was given to devotional exercises, led by Rev. J. A. Melver, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church here. He made an excellent talk, showing how every student could live up to the ten commandments. He stated that one should strive to do a right thing, not merely because it is right, but because it concerns others also. A love for fellow students and consideration is essential, he said. He put the following question before each student, "Can you not live up to the heritage of the college without giving your heart to God?"

The men in the band also will be dressed as pirates. Magnificent colonial costumes, furnishing the proper background for the period of pirates, are to be worn by those in the chorus. The women have richly brocaded satin gowns with wide skirts, and the Family Needs Help.

Monday afternoon a fire completely wiped out the home of a family living in the mill village. The fire consumed all of their furniture with the exception of a few pieces and left them without clothing and food. Through the kindness of the officials of the government relief, they have been supplied with food, bedding, some clothing, and the man has been given a job. It is indeed splendid that such relief can be given through these agencies but there is still much needed for this little family.

Suppose you had lost your clothing, furniture, food and deprived of a roof over your head with how little time to look after, how would you feel? This family needs more clothing and furniture and we feel sure there are some interested citizens that can well afford the time to look over whatever they might have and can spare. If you have anything that can be used by this family, call the Salvation Army at 701 and they will call or give you the name and address of the unfortunes in question.

conditions really are. But they are not fooling the public. They are only fooling themselves."

Another mistake the ultra-dry are making is in taking the position that it is a mortal sin for any one to ever taste liquor or anything with any alcohol in it, Senator Hill said.

"My good friend Cale K. Burgess of the United Dry Forces is going up and down the State making speeches in which his main theme is that it is a sin to even taste liquor and that no one can be a Christian and ever touch a drop of liquor," Senator Hill said. "He is opposing any change in the State prohibition law on the ground that to do so would be un-Christian. But there are many who do not agree with Mr. Burgess and the more extreme dries. That is why the liberal dries are gaining more and more followers every day and why my liquor control bill has already gained so many friends."

Ramblers To Meet Chowan Tonight

The Ramblers will meet Chowan college here tonight in the fourth game of the season. The squad is in good condition and if all reports are correct a very exciting game will be played.

The Ramblers have been showing up good in practice.

The starting line up will probably be taken from Askew, Bunn, Sinclair, Eiston and Wilson at forward and Captain Briley Overton, Hearne and Martin as guards, leaving on the bench a lot of good material that will likely be run in after the game begins.

Shoals and Islands in the James River at Richmond, Va., nearly form a footpath across the stream, but a few hundred yards further down it becomes deep enough for large steamers.

Davis, center, turned in nearly half the locals' points. He made six baskets and five free throws for a total of seventeen points. Gaylord, forward, counted eight points to lead Campbell.

PLAN FRANCHISE TAX IN PLACE OF THE SALES TAX

per cent in the higher brackets is put on the merchants, business men, manufacturers, newspaper publishers, textile mills, furniture factories, power companies, banks, utilities companies and tobacco companies.

That in the end the public will pay the tax, just as they pay the sales tax, but it will be included in the selling price. The only difference will be that the sales tax is a visible tax, while the gross receipts tax will have to be passed on as an invisible tax by increasing prices all along the line.

The 1933 General Assembly refused to enact the Clement production tax, which would have levied a tax only one-half of one per cent on the gross revenue of all manufacturing concerns in the State because it was the opinion in competition with concerns in other States. But this new gross receipts tax, according to reports, will not only apply to manufacturers, but to all foreign and domestic corporations which will include many merchants as well as manufacturers.

This Legislature may decide that then present corporate taxes can be doubled—but then may not.

Push Remodeling Work On Schultz Building Here

Work of remodeling the Schultz building on Evans street was moving forward rapidly today with indications the building will be ready for occupancy in the near future.

The structure will be occupied by Hill Home, druggist, as soon as completed and will be one of the finest stores of the kind in this immediate part of the state. The building is being remodelled from top to bottom with large show windows being one of the main attractions. The windows will be among the largest and most modern in the country and will afford a varied display of goods.

Work of remodeling the building was started around the first of the year, and is being rushed to completion as rapidly as possible. The building several years ago was used as a theatre.

have stirred up quite a storm in Bladen. So much so that many of them have made frequent trips to the State Capitol to see if there isn't some way to stop their legislator. He was elected over what he charges was "ring rule." And he has a pocketful of bills designed to change the set-up of things political in that county.

It isn't known if the anti-Pagers used tax money to defray expenses of the first fight against him, but he introduced the bill and got it across just "in case."

They're likely to have a run-in almost any day—the lobbyists and the legislative wives—for both speak of themselves as members of the mythical "third house" of the Legislature. The women are organized into the "Sir Walter cabinet." The lobbyists, most of them, are registered in "the book" in the office of the Secretary of State.

Relieves Sluggish Feeling

Night or day, when you first begin to feel sluggish and need something to straighten out your bowels (to relieve constipation)—take a dose of reliable Thedford's Black-Draught.

"We take Black-Draught—for biliousness, constipation and any bad feeling that comes from these conditions," writes Mrs. Luvena Owens of Scrimer, Okla. "Black-Draught cleans the system and makes me feel much better after taking it."

Freshen up by taking this purely vegetable laxative if you have a tendency to constipation or sluggishness.

THEODOR'S BLACK-DRAUGHT (Adv.)

In years gone-by the lobbyists have been known as the third house, but with the women on the scene—well you know how women are. They'll get the title if they want it.

"Say, what's this Legislature doing anyway?" said a lobbyist of a newspaper man. "When I was in the Legislature we didn't move along at any such rate. I declare, I don't even know what's happening."

So, at last, at least one method of circumventing lobbyist has been found—simply move along at a dizzy speed. It ought to work out simply well, unless, of course, the speed is so great that legislators themselves are adversely affected. That, however, is not a subject for news stories.

Crash? It was a well-dressed man, rather tipsy from the effects of a legal whiskey, as he half-turched, half-fell through a haberdasher's show window just off the lobby of the Sir Walter Hotel. "Governor" Dick Fountain rushed to his rescue and aided in assisting the imbibor in his feet.

"Where's the man 'at owned the place?" mumbled the tipsy one. "I wanna pay for it. But," he shook his finger, "no sales tax."

A pleader for the proletariat, "the man in the street," is Dr. Ralph McDonald, House member from Forsyth, but he has that country club look. A heavy, brown suit, impeccably clean linen, carefully-trimmed moustache. Dr. McDonald brings to the Legislature theories by students of political science and economics. "Doctor," said our correspondent, "you are out of character. Here you are espousing the cause of the pole-tiarist and you look as prosperous as Durham's much-moneyed Senator John Sprunt Hill. You ought to quit patronizing the barker and the pressing club and get a hollow-eyed look."

"Now, I'll tell you," said the Doctor. "I hate that sort of thing quite as much as I hate the other extreme. I like neither the bloated aristocracy nor the bolsheviks. But, as you know, I am a believer in democracy; it's a tradition."

"Yeh," answered your correspondent. "The Doctor looked taken aback. Then he grinned, dropped into the wicker chair with, 'You said it!'"

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed. How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

HIGH TAKES WINTERVILLE IN TOW 24-14

Greenville High boys defeated the Winterville High team last night on the Greenville court 24-14. The game was slow and furnished few, very few moments of thrilling play. Winterville presented, as has been the case in every game played by the local team, a group of boys that were much larger than any member of the home quint, but the big boys failed to make use of their superior height. The Greensies played one of their worst games last night. They were listless and showed little drive.

All Stars To Play Goldsboro Stars Tonight

The Greenville All-Stars basketball team will play the Goldsboro All-Stars here tonight at 8 o'clock at the High School auditorium in a game which promises many thrilling moments for the lovers of the game. The game will mark the first game to be played between the two teams, and from reports gathered from the Wayne capital, they have a great team.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened quiet, one to two points lower on disappointing Liverpool cables and under more moderate selling.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Some-what less favorable mid-week business statistics bore down rather heavily on the stock market today. Price trends were mixed, but declines outnumbered gains. Of course there were decided inclinations to hold up trading until after the gold clause decision is known, but a larger than expected decline in power production and a more careful appraisal of the outlook for steel and market circles somewhat less to thing about. Railroad bonds were heavy and the rest of the bond market about steady. Commodities moved narrowly.

Gunman Offers To Surrender.

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Raymond Hamilton, fugitive bank robber and gunman, today offered to surrender to federal authorities and accept a long prison term in Alcatraz Island, provided they would have him from the electric chair for murder.

The offer was made through his brother Floyd, arrested yesterday in Shreveport, La., U. S. District Attorney Claude Vestus promptly declined the offer.

The Hamilton brothers barely escaped death in a police trap at Dallas in an apartment Monday night. Officers fired nearly 200 shots at them. Raymond, probably wounded, is at large but officers have closed most of his avenues of escape from this section.

In Congress Today

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—The administration's and more particularly NRA's differences with the American Federation of Labor, re-sounded again in the Capitol today with the White House taking the lead in answering A. F. L. demands.

President Roosevelt had public a letter to William Green, head of the Federation, completely endorsing S. Clay Williams, NRA, chairman, whose resignation the labor group demanded. Simultaneously the White House summoned Congressional leaders to formulate legislation to the new NRA.

At the Capitol another plan widely discussed in administration circles moved forward. Representative Rayburn, of Texas, introduced a measure to eliminate public utility holding companies.

President Roosevelt took occasion at a heavily attended press conference to say that the government had gained the upper hand in the war on bootleggers.

Also he termed the present cotton barter deal with Germany dead and postponed any discussion of the possible closing of national stock exchanges on the day of the Supreme Court's ruling on the gold clause until after that ruling is known.

The Chief Executive said the new banking bill presented to Congress was intended to outline the legal objectives of the administration.

Return of the Saar to Germany hasn't been overlooked by the stamp makers of the fartherland. They used a special set of four values to depict what happened in last month's plebiscite.

The theme of mother love was taken as the basis for the design identical on the various denominations. The mother, as representing Germany, is shown clasping her child—the Saar—in close embrace. The faces of both are beaming with joy.

The values are 3 pfennig brown, 6 dark green, 12 copper red and 25 dark blue.

This is Germany's second Saar set within a comparatively short time. Several months previous to the plebiscite it issued two stamps a 6 and a 12-pfennig in urging the return of the Saar to the mother country. The 6-pfennig showed on a dark background two hands holding a lump of earth labeled "Saar," while the 12 had a swastika sun casting its rays on the German eagle over which, in white letters was "Saar."

In the new issue a sin also can be seen in the background, just peeping over the mother's shoulders.

A Danzig Pair

The overprint, so familiar on the stamps of Europe, has been brought into play again to create a couple of additions to the list of the Free State of Danzig that section of northern Europe between Poland and Germany—under the protection of the League of Nations.

Stamps of the type of 1924 bearing a coat of arms were used. The surcharge made the 7-pfennig yellow green into a 6. The new numeral was placed at the top center of the stamp, with the four "7's" of the original design obliterated with bars. The ink used was red.

Blue is the color of the overprint on the other stamp, changed into a 30-pfennig form a 35 ultramarine. Defacing of the old numerals was done with a solid square.

The Pony Express, which made dramatic history in furnishing quick communication with the far west during pioneer days, was in operation only sixteen months.

The defense in the murder trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann re-emphasizes today the absence of fingerprints on the Lindbergh kidnap-ladder and pursued further its contention that the dead Isador Fishen was the recipient of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom money.

The defense called Lieutenant Paul Sjostrom, of the New Jersey State police, and learned from him that of the 68 finger marks found on the ladder—after it had been handled by hundreds of people—only eight were identified and none of these were Hauptmann's.

The prosecution immediately brought out that if Hauptmann had handled the ladder and had worn gloves his fingerprints would not be found. The prints found, it was testified, were produced by a silver nitrate method discovered after the kidnap case March 1, 1932.

Several police had testified that fingerprints of value had been found on the ladder immediately after the crime.

Sam Streun, a Bronx radio repairman, who acknowledged on cross-examination, that he had been in an institution for a depressive psychosis said Fisch called for a repaired radio in May, 1933, and left a shoe box with him for six hours, picking it up again himself.

Hauptmann claims that Fisch, now dead, left the shoe box with him on December 2, 1933, and that he ("Hauptmann") was unaware that the box contained $14,600 in Lindbergh ransom money.

Hauptmann is accused of kidnaping, murder and collection of the ransom for Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. The $14,600 in ransom money was found cached in his garage in the Bronx after his arrest followed the spending one of the ransom bills at a gas station.
