Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—President Roosevelt and his advisers on foreign affairs studied a report from the American Embassy in London giving the British official version of the situation created by Germany's re-armament plans.

The first report made to this government on direct conversations on the subject came from Ray Atherton, Charge d'Affaires at London who was called to the British Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon to receive it.

There was no announcement as to its specific contents nor any information as to the official reaction to it.

Meanwhile the consultation with State Department officials which have occupied a good portion of President Roosevelt in the last three days continued today. From them the President hopes to decide on the wisest course for the United States to pursue in the European crisis.

REVIVAL HERE
DRAWS CROWDDr. J. Clyde Turner
Heard by Several Hundred Persons
Here Last Night

A crowd that overflowed the auditorium and balcony into the Sunday school room attended last night's services of the series of revival services which opened at Immanuel Baptist Church last Sunday evening.

Attendance was described as the largest of any single night of the week and caused officials of the church to make preparations for handling as large, if not larger, crowds during the remainder of the services which come to a close next Sunday morning.

In addition to the fine spiritual sermon by Dr. J. Clyde Turner, of Greensboro, the congregation was treated to a delightful musical program. This was featured by a solo by Mrs. J. Herbert Waldrop, members of the choir of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

A solo number by Mrs. Kirkpatrick, also of the Methodist choir, will be the highlights of tonight's musical program.

Dr. Turner last night spoke on the subject of "Christian Life a Building." He declared that the only sound foundation upon which one may build is Jesus Christ, and brought in the various types of building that go into the making of the Christian life as well as the material. His sermons have been of a highly inspirational nature each morning and evening.

Rev. J. A. McIver, pastor of the church, renewed his invitation to the public to attend the services and expressed the hope that members of all denominations as well as those not affiliated with some church would attend.

Twelve women students are enrolled in the Washington University Law School, the largest number ever enrolled there at a single time.

Seven Indicted for Conspiracy

Against United States

Washington, D. C., March 21.—

(AP)—Seven men, including Public Works Administration engineers, were indicted today for conspiracy to defraud the government in a $4,853,000 Texas irrigation project.

The indictment, returned by the District of Columbia grand jury, resulted from an extensive inquiry by PWA investigators.

It charged that the seven conspired to force the use of red wood timber in the project and to obtain a $400,000 profit.

District Attorney Leslie Garnett and his assistant, John W. Helly, said warrants would be issued immediately against the seven.

Conviction would carry a penalty of not more than two years' imprisonment or a fine of not more than $10,000, or both.

ALLEN WINS COURT FIGHTAdministrators of Estate of Dead Man
Awarded $669
Against I. A. Tripp

Administrators of the estate of Henry Allen were awarded judgment for $669 against I. A. Tripp in yesterday's session of civil Superior court as result of a dispute over a mortgage on a piece of farm land.

The suit was commenced by Allen prior to his death sometime ago and was continued by the administrators of his estate.

The case was the first thing on the calendar yesterday morning when court resumed work following a recess since last Monday afternoon.

The jury returned a verdict late yesterday afternoon after deliberating about an hour and a half.

Allen contended Tripp owed him $1,500 on a mortgage on a piece of farm land. Tripp contended the amount represented surety on bond in a case in which he was involved in Bertie County, and that there had been a credit of $800 on the note.

Tripp also contended he owed nothing by reason of the fact that he did not receive anything because the mortgage was without value.

Immediately after completing the case, court started work in the action of J. F. King and wife vs. State Banking and Trust Company involving an effort on the part of the plaintiffs to cancel a mortgage held against them by the banking institution. The case was expected to consume the greater part of the day.

Absentee Ballot
Law Repealed In
Two N.C. Counties

Raleigh, N. C., March 21.—The House today passed local bills to repeal the absentee ballot law insofar as it related to the voter of county and local candidates in Hoke and Bladen counties and got notice a bill to repeal its application in Catawba county.

Other absentee repeals are from various counties, including Mecklenburg, which is already in the hands of the committee awaiting action.

Measure to repeal the absentee law or strengthen it is its State-wide application were killed by unfavorable committee action.

Cotton Spinning
Shows Decline

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—The cotton spinning industry was reported today by the Census Bureau to have operated during February at 100.2 per cent of capacity on a single shift basis as compared with 102.6 per cent for January this year and 101.5 per cent for February last year.

Active spindle hours for February in North Carolina were 1,411,992.123 and the average per spindle in place was 229.

And Blind Tigers

Wilmington, N. C., March 21.—(AP)—The New Hanover County grand jury moved swiftly this morning in an effort to dry up and smash a county-wide gambling ring as it indicted twelve persons on charges of operating gambling devices and speak-easies.

Immediately after returning the indictments, the grand jury went to session to consider taking action to smash a number of rackets which it is alleged have been thriving here for a considerable period.

More than two hundred witnesses, persons regarded as runners or operators of the lotteries, had been summoned for the investigation, it was learned.

Action of the grand jury in returning the indictments against the alleged speak-easy operatives comes after an intensive campaign conducted by local, State and Federal officers which has been in progress here for several weeks.

RELIEF STORE
ROBBED HEREConsiderable Amount
Of Food and Towels
Taken From Commissary Last Night

Robbers entered the relief commissary on Dickinson Avenue last night and made away with a considerable amount of food and clothing according to information given out this morning by the local police department.

Entering the building through an alleyway, the thieves made away with towels, canned beef and several other kinds of food supplies.

Chief of Police George Clark said that although an investigation was started immediately following report of the robbery this morning, the police head said no clue had been obtained up to the noon hour.

Two factions of robbers have been keeping police busy here the last two weeks, on seeking money and the other food. Those after food usually are fairly successful, but the others have fallen short by reason of the fact that store operators have quit leaving money in their places of business at night.

Small amounts of money were obtained when the robbery epidemic swept over the community several months ago, but since that time breaking and entering for money has been a very unprofitable business.

LEGISLATIVE

By C. A. PAUL

Liquor bobs up in all sorts of places in Raleigh. While the Senate was debating the rabies bill which would require all dogs to be vaccinated against the disease, Senator Hill, author of that famed liquor control bill, rose to ask Senator Gravelly, who was leading the fight for the rabies measures, how he proposed to protect North Carolina from Virginia dogs. "You know," said Senator Hill, "does stray into North Carolina from Virginia—just like Virginia liquor does. In fact it seems that Virginia is the source of many of our bills." Smiling broadly, he sat down.

Short and snappy questions are often the cause for much merriment in the Legislature. Such was the case when Representative Blount of Beaufort, rose to interrupt Representative Klutz of Catawba, who was telling the House why it should accept his proposal to tax the manufacture of cigarettes at a rate of one-fourth of one cent for each pack of twenty Representative Klutz yielded for the question. Asked Representative Blount: "Do you use tobacco?" "I don't," said Representative Klutz. The House roared.

William M. Acree, 22 of Ringling, Okla., has been appointed assistant national bank examiner, one of the youngest men to hold such a position.

HOUSE OKAYS
MEASURE FOR
LEAF GRADINGBody Agrees to Report Flannagan Bill
With Clarifying
Amendments

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—Compulsory inspection and grading of tobacco today had approval of a House Agricultural Committee which has agreed to report the Flannagan bill with clarifying amendments to the full group.

Rejected were the proposals to make effective in event the Congress approves only after the successful referendum among growers and to provide for the Government to stand the cost of the service instead of the buyers of tobacco.

Representative Fulmer, Democrat of South Carolina, chairman of the subcommittee, said the measure offered by Representative Flannagan of Virginia, will be reported to the full committee as soon as it is revised to include the clarifying amendments.

Chief among these is one to allay fears that the grading system would empower the Secretary of Agriculture to shut down markets.

The amendment to include the referendum and government pay features were offered by Representative Bruch, of Virginia, who is expected to carry his fight for inclusion of them to full committee. Lengthy public hearings were held on the proposals and strong opposition came from the blue-cured growing State of North Carolina. A delegation of three hundred came from that State to protest.

Advocates of government grading contend it will help place the selling on the level with the buyers who are experienced tobacco men. Opponents contend a compulsory system would weaken or destroy auction warehouses selling tobacco.

CONVICT SHOT
BY GUARD DEADMarcellus Adams Succumbs to Bullet Wound Received in Escape Attempt

Marcellus Adams, who was shot by a convict guard following his escape from the State Prison camp about two miles from Greenville last Sunday, died from his injuries at Pitt Community Hospital last night, it was revealed today.

The negro received a bullet wound in the chest when he resisted arrest after being overtaken by pursuing guards in the Tarboro vicinity. The negro was rushed to the local hospital for medical aid, but it was not believed at the time he was fatally shot. However, his condition grew gradually worse and yesterday hospital attendants said little hope was entertained for his recovery. The fatal shot was said to have been fired by J. A. Ellis.

Adams was one of the three negroes who made a break for liberty through a drainage hole under the stockade walls last Sunday afternoon late as they were being transferred along with number of others from the day camp to the night camp.

Their dash for liberty was not at once visible to guards because of the crowd around them, and they had obtained considerable headway when the alarm was sounded.

One of the men was taken near Monkey Den Sunday night and the other two were captured near Tarboro the following morning after two sets of bloodhounds had been used in the chase.

Adams had just completed a one to two-year road sentence for robbery of automobile tires from a light car here, and was to have been turned over to Pennsylvania officers within the next several hours to complete thirteen years of a term given him in that State for burglary.

The negro was described by Manly Sellers, prison camp superintendent, as "a desperate character," and was usually causing trouble among the convicts because of his desire to escape and avoid serving the remainder of the sentence in Pennsylvania.

Senators Dunn and Horton, in advocating the passage of the bill, pointed out that the State owed it to the parents and children to offer some protection against accidents while being transported to and from school.

Only those school children regularly entitled to ride school buses will come under the bill, and it will not apply to children injured by automobiles while walking to school.

SENATE OKAYS
BILL TO INSURE SCHOOL CHILDChildren Riding in Buses Given Protection Against Injury
By Measure

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, N. C., March 21.—Children riding to or from school in State school buses will be insured against injury or death in bus accidents up to $600 per child if the House now passes the bill by Senator W. P. Horton, of Chatham, and Senator Dunn, of Rowan, which passed the Senate Wednesday.

Indications are that the bill will also pass the House without serious opposition.

The bill as passed by the Senate was in reality a committee substitute for the original bill introduced by Senator Horton and Dunn, but only slightly different from the original bill. It provides that if a child is killed in a school bus accident, that State will pay hospital and medical bills up to $600. No insurance fund is set up by the bill since this was not regarded as necessary due to the small number of children who have been injured or killed in the past. On the record of past experiences it is estimated that this bill, if enacted, will not cost the State more than $10,000 a year, despite the fact that some 200,000 children are transported to and from school every school day.

No definite schedule of payments for payment for medical and hospital charges are set up in the bill, which provides that the State School Commission shall pass on all claims submitted and have full authority to settle them up to the maximum of $600. Inquiry today among members of the school commission indicated that the prevailing rates paid to doctors and hospitals under the Workmen's Compensation law would probably be adopted by the School Commission.

Senators Dunn and Horton, in advocating the passage of the bill, pointed out that the State owed it to the parents and children to offer some protection against accidents while being transported to and from school.

Only those school children regularly entitled to ride school buses will come under the bill, and it will not apply to children injured by automobiles while walking to school.

News Behind The News.

HEAT: Perhaps consumers of bituminous coal start storing up against a hard summer.

The big fellows controlling what are known as "captive mines" are doing it. That might reasonably indicate to the public the probability of a general walkout in the soft coal field on April 1.

"Strike" is an ugly word which has been used many times before to coax a new wage-and-hour schedule out of mine bosses. Disinterested observers believe the threat will be made good this time in an effort to force Congress to act favorably on at least one of two pending bills which would benefit organized labor immeasurably.

John L. Lewis—president of the United Mine Workers of America—would especially like to see the Guffey bill become law. This ore would nationalize coal production by setting future production quotas prohibiting the opening of new mines and broadly protecting labor.

More important to the entire American Federation of Labor is the Wagner bill—which would effectively outlaw company unions, perpetuate the National Labor Relations Board as a separate entity and reaffirm inclusively the collective bargaining rights of labor.

The word in Washington is that labor strategists figure a tie-up of the bituminous coal fields next month may put sufficient pressure on Senate and House to get at least one of these bills across. Plenty of heat has been turned on.

SQUEEZE: But there's a funny angle to all this. It's intimated by insiders that some of the biggest operators in the so-called central competitive field—which includes Western Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana—would just as soon see a break off of labor relations the first of next month.

The idea is that they would benefit from the provisions of the Guffey bill allocating future production and shutting off new competition. Opinion is growing that Senator (Continued on Page Four)

Raleigh, March 21.—Last summer the big gasoline and oil companies thumbed their noses at North Carolina and its Governor when he asked them to take some steps to bring about lower prices for gasoline in the state when prices here were from two to six cents a gallon higher than the prevailing prices in neighboring states. Their answer to the Governor's plea and his warning that if they did not do something about high prices for gasoline in North Carolina the legislature would be unyielding. Prices went still higher.

The house yesterday reached the new section of the revenue bill which proposed to levy a moderate tax on chain filling stations. It was (Continued on page two)

Germany threw a new bombshell into the already turbulent European situation today by flatly refusing to entertain the note tendered by France and Italy in protest against her violation of the military clauses of the Versailles treaty.

While France, Italy and Great Britain worked to organize their united front against the Reich's rearmament program, Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, the Reich's Foreign Minister, bluntly informed the ambassadors of Italy and France he could not receive the communication from their governments because they did not "take the actual situation into account."

PLAN HEARING ON BRUTALITY AT ROAD CAMP

Legislative Committees Plan to Take Evidence in Various Prison Camps

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
By C. A. PAUL.
Raleigh, N. C., March 20.—A public hearing will be held for the purpose of getting into the record the testimony of the six suspended employees of the Mecklenburg County prison camp in which Woodrow Shropshire and Robert Barnes, negro convicts, were confined in "solitary" and where, it is alleged, they were subjected to inhuman treatment that resulted first in gangrene later in amputation of their feet. They employees have been notified by the sub-committee of the Joint Legislative Committee on Penal Institutions that the committee will hear them in Raleigh or Charlotte.

The sub-committee has voted to subpoena a man named Lyda, whose first name could not be learned, who was steward at the Watauga County camp at the time of the alleged secret burials of negro convicts, in 1930. Lyda, who is now employed in a prison camp in Eastern North Carolina is the man, says Robert Carter, negro and ex-convict of Charlotte, who ordered him to dig one of the graves.

Plans have been mapped for visits to other chain-gang camps. The sub-committee, composed of five men will divide into three groups for the purpose of completing the survey with speed. Central State's Prison in Raleigh will not be visited until the camps have been looked over.

The sub-committee is studying the laws relating to punishment of prisoners in State camps. Chapter 172 of the Public Laws of 1933, was the subject of committee criticism, is being pointed out that the section gives to guards and other camp employees permission to punish prisoners in almost any fashion they see fit. Some of the committee members expressed doubt that any guards in the Mecklenburg County could be convicted because of brutalities even though the charges be proven. Some of the members indicated that legislation would be drafted to correct what they termed the most liberal prison law they ever saw.

Senator E. V. Webb, Senate chairman of the Penal Committee, said he wanted to look into the matter of transferring prisoners from one camp to another for the purpose of administering punishment. Many of the State's prison camps do not have "the little dark houses" where men are kept in solitary confinement. Shropshire and Barnes were transferred from one camp to another in Mecklenburg County for that purpose.

The sub-committee has voted to supplement the offer to a $25 reward put up by a private citizen of Charlotte to the man who locates one of the "secret graves" in Watauga County. The committee has posted a like amount.

The prison papers under which Shropshire and Barnes were committed to solitary confinement were ordered requisitioned from the State Prison department. One committee member said he had "hal reported" to him that the papers were not in proper order.

The committee as authority from the Legislature to subpoena witnesses, compel attendance, requisition prison records, and to compel the giving of testimony. An appropriation of $500 of it at the committee's disposal.

House Chairman R. E. Sentelle of the Penal Committee urged that the committee move with speed so that findings of the committee could be placed before the Legislature and Judge Don Phillips, Judge Phillips will sit as a committing magistrate at a special term of court in Charlotte on April 8 for the purpose of hearing testimony in the prison probe.

Representative Sentelle reported to the committee that workmen are still digging in a cornfield in Watauga County for the body of bodies of negro convicts "secretly buried" there. The cornfield is the former site of the prison camp in use during the construction of the State Highway known as the Boone Trail.

The sub-committee plans to visit several prison camps over the week-end.

Meanwhile Barnes and Shropshire continue to lie in their hospital beds at Central State's Prison here. Barnes, says Dr. George Coleman, may have tuberculosis. He would not make a definite statement, but said that sputum tests indicate a tubercular condition. Shropshire is gaining strength rapidly.

HOUSE VOTES FOR BIG TAX ON GAS CHAINS

It is turn to thumb its nose at the big gasoline and oil trusts. It threw out the section which would have taxed these filling stations only about $300,000 a year and adopted instead a substitute section proposed by Representative Barker of Durham which on the present basis will put a tax on these filling stations of about $1,250,000 a year, with the provision that the tax must be paid by the parent corporations and not by the individual operators.

This was the answer of the house to the open defiance by the oil companies of Governor Ehringhaus' request last summer that they show some consideration to North Carolina and cease discriminating against it as they were. A survey made in the senate today indicated that a majority of the members of the senate would vote for this new section in view of the large vote by which it was adopted by the house despite the fact that the high-powered high-priced lobbyists for the gasoline and oil companies who have been here for several weeks now are expected to exert more pressure than ever to get this section of the revenue bill removed.

One of the unusual features of the consideration of this section in the house that almost the only member to oppose the tax and to speak in behalf of the big oil companies was Representative Tam Cawley of Ashe, who heretofore has posed as the friend of the "little man" and as an arch enemy of the trusts and corporations. But his noisy and voluble speech in opposition to the milder section and in behalf of the oil companies went unheeded as the House adopted the Barker amendment with a deluge of "ayes."

The section as adopted not only taxes chain filling stations, but chain tire and accessory stores, such as those operated by Firestone, Goodyear, Goodrich and so forth.

The tax imposed on the first four stations is only $4 each per year so that local or independent dealers operating as many as ten stations will pay only a nominal tax. The tax is $10 each on all stations between four and nine, and on chains having from ten to 14 stations, the tax is $30 each and on those having from 15 to 29 stations, the tax is $50 on each station. The tax then jumps to $100 on each station in chains having from 30 to 49 stations, to $150 on those having 50 to 74 stations and finally to $200 on each station in chains of 75 stations or more.

In order to insure that the tax will be paid by the parent company, which is the admitted aim of the section, it contains the following paragraph:

"The term 'chain automotive service station' as used in this section shall include automotive service stations operated under separate charter if incorporation, if there is common ownership of a majority of stock in such separately incorporated companies, and, or if there is similarity of name of such separately incorporated companies, and, or if such separately incorporated companies have the benefit in whole or in part of group purchase of merchandise or of common management; and in like manner the term 'chain automotive service station' shall apply to any group of automotive service stations in which majority interest is owned by an individual or partnership."

Representative Barker says his section is modeled after the West Virginia sales tax law, which has already been held constitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

The big Gasoline and oil companies maintain that they will relinquish control of most of their service stations and thus be able to evade the law, so that the state will not get any material amount of taxes from them. But Barker said that in West Virginia less than one per cent of the stations were released as a result of a similar law and that no material increase in gasoline taxes resulted from it.

TAX LEVYING SPREE STILL ON IN HOUSE

forces who have not yet given up their fight for an appropriation of $22,000,000 a year for schools, which would be enough for a salary increase of about 32 per cent for teachers and principals and of 25 per cent for superintendents. The appropriations bill as it now stands, though at least $1,000,000 a year in excess of the revenue bill as reported out by the committee, provides a salary increase of only 20 per cent for teachers and State employees the first year and 25 per cent for the second year.

There is no doubt, however, that Dr. McDonald, Representative Lumpkin and their followers have made some of the oldtimers here sit up and rub their eyes since they went into action on the revenue bill Monday afternoon. For while they were defeated in their efforts to take up the sales tax section ahead of the other sections of the revenue bill they have made steady and consistent progress as they have been up section after section and schedule after schedule written into the bill by the Finance Committee and succeeded in getting their substitute sections adopted.

All in all, the McDonald-Lumpkin coalition has succeeded in adding at least $1,350,000 of new taxes to the revenue bill since the House started consideration of the revenue bill, according to very conservative estimates. The successful effort made to impose the sales tax on pool rooms and bowling alleys is expected to yield about $25,000 additional revenue. The adoption of the new chain filling station tax section is expected to yield at least $1,000,000 a year more from the gasoline companies, while the action of the House under the leadership of McDonald and Lumpkin in increasing the franchise tax on power companies to 7 per cent of their gross income, is expected to yield another $250,000 a year. For while McDonald and Lumpkin failed to get their amendment to increase the franchise rate to 8 per cent adopted, they compromised on the 7 per cent figure and it went over. The successful effort to impose a heavier tax on the larger telephone companies will bring in about $75,000 a year more income from that source. All these added together make a total of $1,350,000 of new revenue found and added to the revenue bill the first three days of this week.

Yet the House is not yet half-way through the bill. As the other sections are reached today, Friday and possibly Saturday, the McDonald-Lumpkin coalition are expected to keep hammering away in an effort to secure the adoption of more and more of their proposals to increase other taxes so that at least $3,000,000 or more of new revenue can be found. Then when the sales tax section is reached, they are expected to make their biggest push so far in an effort to reduce the sales tax rate to 2 per cent. But the same ones who want to reduce the sales tax rate are the same ones who are pledged to support not less than a 25 per cent increase in the appropriations for schools. As a result they know they cannot reduce the sales tax rate unless they make up the amount of revenue that thus would be lost from other sources. Consequently it is expected that when the House reaches the license tax section, an effort will be made to extend the sales tax to apply to charges made by lawyers, doctors, dentists, hospitals and by professional men generally, in order to increase the revenue from the bill still further.

The only proposal to get more revenue which has not been supported by McDonald Lumpkin was the amendment offered yesterday by Representative Klutz of Catawba, a Republican, to impose a tax of one-fourth of a cent on each package of twenty cigarettes manufactured in North Carolina and which he estimated would bring in $7,000,000 a year. This amendment was defeated by a good margin, but received more votes than had been expected.

An appropriation by the Philippine Legislature will be used to increase the enlisted strength of the island constabulary by 1,843 men.

POLITICS at random

By BRYON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Those who leaped to the conclusion that the Supreme Court's gold decision settled everything in favor of the administration appear to be revising their opinions.

The suit brought by Robert Taft, challenging the right of the government to call its liberty bonds ahead of maturity and substitute lower interest obligations, has been causing lawyers some thought.

Mr. Taft may not win, but he has put his finger on a declaration of the highest court which is not likely to be forgotten by those who oppose the administration's gold policy. It is the court's plain statement that the government has no constitutional right to repudiate a promise to pay in gold.

Out of this part of the decision arise the prolonged conference of government attorneys, the demand in some quarters for new legislation and the apprehension on the part of some that at some time the non-repudiation ruling may arise to plague or wreck monetary plans.

It would seem there is a central issue here still in dispute.

A War Debt Idea

More may be heard within the next few months about the war debts. The Roosevelt administration is studying quietly what, if anything, can be done.

A plan advanced by a group of Chicago attorneys is attracting some attention in Washington. It proposes that the combined total of the debts be scaled down from about $10,500,000,000 to about $3,500,000,000, and that payment be made over a twelve-year period at the rate of something less than $300,000,000 a year.

To enable Europe to save the money necessary to make a beginning, a five-year holiday on armaments is proposed. It is argued this would mean further compensation for the United States, too, because what we now spend on armaments could go into savings.

The authorship of the plan is attributed to Salmon O. Levinson, who had much to do with laying the groundwork for the Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact.

Nothing approaching acceptance of this proposal is yet apparent in Washington, but it will remain under study along with other suggestions.

To Follow G. O. P. Plan?

Looking to the 1936 Presidential campaign, some administration strategists are taking encouragement from what happened in 1924.

They base their reasoning on a belief that next year will see a three-way contest, with Mr. Roosevelt and the Republican nominee bidding for the right-wing and middle-ground support against a third-party lit-winger.

In 1924 the Republican nominee, Calvin Coolidge, was opposed by John W. Davis, Democrat, and Robert M. LaFollette, progressive.

The Republicans stressed the possibility of an electoral college deadlock, throwing the election into the House of Representatives, and argued that in that event no one could tell what might happen.

Adopting "Coolidge or Chaos" as their slogan, they urged all opposed to extreme radicalism to help forestall a deadlock by voting for the right-wing candidate having the best chance of election, Mr. Coolidge. For that reason or some other, he easily got his majority.

The Democrats may try something like that in 1936, if, as, and when the occasion arises.

Gaunt and travel worn, an Irish setter belonging to C. P. Rogers, of Concordia, Kansas, left the farm where he had been placed several months previously and returned to his master.

WATCH KIDNEYS SAME AS BOWELS

Wash Out Your 79,200 Feet of Kidney Tubes

Your bowels contain only 27 feet of intestines, yet the kidneys contain nearly 10 million tiny tubes or filters which would measure 79,200 feet if laid end to end. Therefore, it is just as important to watch the kidneys as the bowels. Kidneys are working all the time and are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.

Healthy persons pass thru the bladder 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 8 pounds of waste matter. If you pass less than this, your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes may be clogged with poisonous waste. This is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Kidneys should be watched closely and need cleaning out the same as bowels. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to wash out your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

"Thank you FOR MAKING SUCH A GRAND REFRIGERATOR" says a NORGE owner in Cincinnati

Yes, this woman welcomed the opportunity to thank Norge Corporation for providing her home with Rollator Refrigeration. And she is representative of thousands and thousands of enthusiastic Norge owners.

Suppose you had bought a Norge. After using it a few months, suppose you found it an even far greater convenience than you had expected—found that it saved you more in work, time and worry.

And then, added to all the other advantages, suppose you found that your beautiful Norge was actually saving you up to $11 a month in food and refrigeration costs. Actually paying for itself month by month. Wouldn't you, too, thank Norge for making such a "grand" refrigerator. Of course you would.

Get the facts about Rollator Refrigeration. Learn about the famous Rollator—the cold-making mechanism that actually improves with use. Certainly don't buy a refrigerator till you've seen the Norge.

Senior-Normal Plays.

This evening at eight o'clock, in the Austin Auditorium there will be presented three one-act plays which will be the annual dramatic contribution from the Senior-Normal class of the college.

In "The Duchess Says Her Prayers," the curtain-raiser, the altar scene, the music, and the Italian costumes of the Renaissance period produce a beautiful effect.

In sharp contrast to this in scene and theme, but of as great interest, is "Job's Kinfolks," the North Carolina play.

After two serious plays, the comedy is furnished by the French farce "Rosalie," which makes a fitting close of the evening.

Miss Mary Dirmberger, who has directed all the plays given in the college this year, is the director of plays. Members of her class, in stage-craft devised and made the scenery and designed or selected the costumes, which were made in the FERA sewing room. The FERA furnishes the electricians. Students in charge of different committees are under Miss Dirmberger's supervision.

Paul Fitzgerald is stage manager. Misses Annie Rosamond Horne and May Hearne have charge of the make-up. There is an assistant from the class for each of the three plays. There are Misses Katherine Shute, Elmer Joiner, and Merle Sasser. Miss Louise King, president of the class, has charge of the business management. Miss Emma L. Hooper is class adviser.

Tips on CONTRACT

Take Your Ace
By TOM O'NEIL

There comes from Henry Enoch Master of Bridge House, New York an instance of his failure to set a slam contract, because he did NOT lead an ace.

In Henry's defense it may be said that a novice certainly would have led the ace, but that a player of ability would have hesitated because of the possibility that the ace would be ruffed and a queen set up for a discard. Henry insisted that he should have counted and deduced better.

I don't think the success of the slam was due so much to failure by Henry as to the fact that the declarer, who at his own request is nameless. Evidently he is one of those fellows who thinks publicity detracts from his luck. There are stock speculators in that category.

Here was the hand:

♠ 7 4 3
♥ A Q
♦ J 9 8 6 5 4
♣ A K Q 7 5

EAST
♠ 10 8 6 4
♦ J 10 6 3
♣ A K Q 7 3 2

SOUTH
♠ J 3
♥ K Q J 10 5
♦ 9 8 7 5 4 2
♣ NONE

South contracted for six spades after hearts, more hearts and diamonds had been bid by North.

How, in the name of Hoyle, you may ask, can the declarer avoid losing tricks to the ace of trumps and the ace of clubs? Well, a heart was opened and the declarer made the most of a slim chance to pull a double squeeze.

On North's king of hearts South discarded six of clubs and on the ace of hearts he threw the KING of clubs, no less. That's the key play.

A low heart, led from the North hand, was trumped South. East discarding the club nine, since a ruff would be futile. South then led the king of spades, which went to East's ace.

Would you, if East, now lead the ace of clubs? Remember that South has discarded the king and a low one. Would the queen of clubs in the North hand afford a discard of a possible losing diamond South? Henry thought he would play safe. He returned a spade. The declarer now was on his way to success.

He played out all the spades. The club jack in his own hand was a menace over East's club ace. He kept a heart in the North hand as a menace over West's higher hearts. Both West and East had to try to protect diamonds, besides each his own suit. With one spade left to play the situation was:

NORTH: S—None.
H—8.
D—A K 9.
C—None.

WEST: S—None.
H—Q.
D—J 8 6.
C—None.

EAST: S—None.
H—None.
D—Q 7 4.
C—A.

SOUTH: S—4.
H—None.
D—10 5.
C—J.

On the lead of the spade four West had to give up the high heart or unguard diamonds. East had to shed the club ace or unguard diamonds. The way the hand was played the last three tricks were taken with North's diamonds.

Big Display Of Congoleum Rugs At Quinn-Miller

A congleum rug display at Quinn-Miller & Company's Store on Fifth Street has attracted considerable attention the last few days in view of the fact it looks as if a long roll of rug crashed through the large plate glass display window. Of course, it is a case of optical illusion; but the job is such a good one that it requires close inspection to discover exactly how the crash is produced. It appears as if a section of the roll is protruding on the street, with cracks in the glass running in all directions.

Along with this feature the firm is displaying probably one of the most elaborate showings of congleum rugs ever seen here before, and hundreds of people have visited the store to view the latest creations of the rug-manufacturing world.

Persons who have not viewed this display would do well to do so if for no other reason than to see what the decorators have achieved in the way of optical illusion.

MAKES SECOND ARREST FOR LOWMAN MURDER

Morganton, N. C., March 21.—A second arrest in as many days was made today for the murder of Robert Lowman, Icard watchman, who was slain by two hold-up men February 16. Frank Young, of Icard, about 23 years of age, was apprehended in Cleveland County by Deputies Sheriff R. F. Berry and W. G. Johnson of Burke and lodged in jail here on the murder charge. J. D. Stillwell, a young Burke man, was arrested yesterday by his uncle, John Stillwell, Valdes officer, charged with being one of the two men who held up Lowman.

The two accused men are employees of the Icard Cordage Company plant where Lowman worked and Young is said to have left his home there Tuesday after the fatal hold-up.

Home Furniture Puts In Norge Refrigerators

It was announced today that the Home Furniture Store is putting in a line of Norge electric refrigerators and already has a number of the refrigerators on display.

P. E. Brown and R. H. Haddock have just returned from Richmond Va., where they took a course of servicing the Norge line, and will also be at the disposal of patrons of the Home Furniture Store who decided to buy from the selected line now on display.

The Norge combines the latest creations in the realm of electric refrigeration and the local concern invites its patrons to inspect the showing.

Goes To New Bern.
(By R. O. Moye)

Not every boy who begins at the bottom of the ladder in a business, especially when that business employs thousands of such boys, always reaches the top rung of the ladder, but such cannot be said about a local boy who has achieved this good fortune in a few years time.

James E. Tingen, local messenger boy of the Postal Telegraph Company of this city, has realized this ambition. Starting as messenger boy about two years ago, he gradually became interested in telegraphy. Through the generosity of the local Postal manager, T. W. Lundy, he was taught the fundamentals of the telegraph system and eventually became a first class operator.

About a week ago he received notice from headquarters of the Postal Telegraph Company in Atlanta, Ga., that he had been appointed operator of the office in New Bern, a position which requires a great deal of ability. He left for New Bern Wednesday to assume this office.

When we study the background of this case it is all the more remarkable due to the fact that the boy, who is only 19 years of age, has never had the advantage that many boys his age have had. He comes from a family that could not afford to give him much schooling and when he had been to school for only a few years he was forced to quit and make his own living. The boy has made himself into the position which he now holds and all Greenville should be proud of the fact that he has received this promotion and wish him well in his new field of endeavor.

GREAT RICHES

by Mabel Howe Farnham

SYNOPSIS: James Stimson, III, is not only the paragon of all virtues, but also the most desirable catch in New Concord, N. C. The Judge is taking care of James' low career; the New Concord women are trying to marry him; the wealthy John Northrup, but James just has left the house of Leslie Harris, feeling able to lick the world. Leslie's father is a drunkard.

Chapter 15

ONLY HEARTBREAK

JAMES was in the midst of delivering a speech before the assembled Congress and Senate, with Leslie looking proudly down from the visitor's gallery (a speech which the "interests" had not only offered him a cool hundred thousand not to make but had threatened bloodthirstily to "get him" if he persisted in) and had just moved his vast audience to thunderous cheers when he was brought abruptly down to earth by the sight of the father of his divinity making uncertain progress up the street in his direction.

It was Saturday night and John Harris always celebrated the close of the week's work by going on a glorious spree.

Kansas was a dry state, of course, but that was a minor irritation when one's town was so fortunately located that a short walk across the bridge brought one to a more enlightened community where a man's liberty was not interfered with.

James waited in the shadows until John had passed him and then turned and followed him, keeping out of sight as much as possible until John presently lost heart and sat down on the curb and began an oration to a staid lamp post, which he evidently thought lonely and in need of entertainment.

"I am the father's spirit, doomed for a certain term to walk the night, till the foul crimes done in my days of nature are burnt and purged away. But I am tormented to tell the secrets of my prison-house. I could a tale unfold whose lightest word would harrow up your soul, freeze the young blood."

declared Mr. Harris while James hovered uneasily in the background perplexed as to his next move.

He was afraid to leave the orator alone and he knew from experience that before long Leslie would come seeking him. Not to save his soul, but to tell the world that James was still in the hands of his father.

This development does not only indicate the growth of another great manufacturing industry in the south but points the way to a most profitable use of the now waste land that will with but little attention grow enough pine to assure a perpetual supply of raw material for the industry.

In the past too much of our land has been cut over and burned over and no effort made to reforest it. The systematic production of pine trees on this now waste land will prove a profitable and continuous income to the farmers and will be added incentive to the industry to enlarge its manufacturing facilities in the southern states close to the supply of raw materials.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

Ouffy's measure will get a vote even if Senator Wagner's doesn't. Government representatives of the consumer don't care much for this bill. They force that it would squeeze the consumer between the operator and the miner.

CARE: If the miners walk out it will be a "suspension"—not a "strike."

This is a technical difference that means a lot to the United Mine Workers. During a strike benevolence has to be paid out of the union treasury. When a wage contract expires and the men don't report for work, that is something else again. This doesn't mean that John Lewis won't take care of his well-organized brood. But there is a difference between care and strike payments.

TRACK: It is amazing how gossip persists in Capitol Hill. The President Roosevelt will choose a new running mate to supplant Vice President John Nance Garner next year. The rumors keep coming direct from Senatorial offices which frequently know what they are talking about.

The story goes that Senator Bob La Follette of Wisconsin—head of the resurrected Progressive Party—will get the call. This belief is based on the assumption that the New Deal has lost a lot of support among the working classes, recently and something must be done to build it up.

This correspondent still thinks John Garner has the inside track.

CHOICE: More gossip from Congressional office buildings has Jim Farley resigning as Postmaster General as soon as Huey Long stops

Miss Julia asked herself these questions a hundred times daily and discussed them endlessly with her intimates. Jane for the moment gave no sign.

Wherever Jane was there was always certain to be movement and excitement. She liked life spelt with a capital and expended a boundless energy in keeping herself from being dull.

Jane's two years in Boston and one year in Europe had made New Concord seem insufferably provincial and insignificant. In her heart of hearts she was certain that she was destined for far bigger things than a commonplace existence in a country town, but she was clever enough to keep such thoughts to herself and make the best of what she had.

At the turn of the century in New Concord girls who left home and one year in Europe had made New Concord seem insufferably provincial and insignificant. In her heart of hearts she was certain that she was destined for far bigger things than a commonplace existence in a country town, but she was clever enough to keep such thoughts to herself and make the best of what she had.

JANE, for all her boasted common sense, was yet young enough to believe that there was some alchemy in the very dreaming of dreams that made them come true. She spent many a halcyon hour that spring and early summer building her castles in Spain.

From the age of sixteen Jane had longed secretly to have a "salon" in Paris. And if the Judge was right and his protégé the wonder he claimed, an ambassadorship was not utterly out of the picture. It would be easy to love an ambassador... even a future ambassador.

James, who seemed the most likely candidate, became more and more glamorous in Jane's eyes. Her dreams became less selfish. She longed quite honestly to help James and to further his career in every possible manner.

And she was very certain that she could. She read of dozens of famous men who asserted that their wives had "made" them. It was an enticing lure.

James, to be sure, was far from measuring up to Jane's ideal. He lacked altogether that grand manner which had been his grand father's, lacked self-assurance, lacked indeed most of the things that Jane had once thought indispensable.

But James was... well... adaptable. He could be polished and smoothed and groomed... by the right woman. Yes, she would marry him. With all the ardor of a convert to a new faith Jane longed to begin making over James.

And then... and then... to be dropped so abruptly and unceremoniously for Leslie Harris! With all the town looking on, prying, snoop-ing, conjecturing... and watching her like a hawk! It was hardly to be borne.

James would have been horrified and aghast if he had realized for a moment that he had given Jane Northrup any reason to think that he wanted to marry her. He was as yet in no position to marry anyone.

But aided and abetted by her mother, Jane always took it for granted that any young man who came more than occasionally to the house or took her out was in love with her. The most casual compliments, repeated to Mrs. Northrup, were assumed as declarations of an undying passion.

Twenty years later, even the most judicious former admirers, no matter how happily married, would be spoken of in the bosom of the Northrup family as "poor Tom or Harry or Dick."

But now, with the entire town ringing with tales of James' open infatuation for Leslie Harris it was a little hard for even Mrs. Northrup to go on saying "poor James" convincingly. She managed it by assuring Jane and herself that "Leslie Harris undoubtedly has made up some lie to make James think you care nothing about him."

(Copyright 1935, Mabel H. Farnham)

Tomorrow, Mrs. Northrup tries to bolster up Jane's self-respect.

Senate and the American Federation were battling over the prevailing wage scale they should have taken a slant at the Department of Commerce Payroll.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has 24 native employees in its eight Latin American offices. When Director Marchionni was asked what they were paid, he replied "I am almost ashamed to answer. From $25 to $75 a month."

CUBA: There's always the shadow of European intervention when ever Cuba throws a revolutionary fit. Spanish and British interests in the islands are said to have appealed to their governments for protection against threatened burnings and bombings. Direct action by foreign powers is no longer fashionable since the United States invented the system of intervening to prevent others from doing so. If conditions become intolerable the United States will be asked by other governments to do its stuff.

Although the Platt amendment is dead the United States retains the right—or duty—to use measures which will prevent overseas governments from "butting in." The Monroe Doctrine has not been repealed.

NEW YORK

By James McMullin
DRASTIC: The final restoration of railway wages becomes effective next month—and already rail officials are busy figuring the best approach to a fresh pay cut. Probably nothing will be done about it for several months—leaders realized that too much haste would defeat their purpose—but it's a live topic in private discussions.

Naturally they expect strenuous resistance when the proposal is broached. But they have worked up an argument which they figure will carry weight with the government and the public—even if it fails to convince the brotherhoods. It's based on the idea that railroad workers will be getting 1929 wages—which gives them a marked comparative advantage over employees in the great majority of industrial and commercial enterprises. The question will be pointedly raised whether it's fair that one class of labor alone should enjoy such a break—especially at the expense of the sickest business in the country. This strategy will be aimed at putting the brotherhoods in a psychological hole.

Rail men are perfectly aware that the unions are likely to be stiff-necked about it and that the move they contemplate may lead to a serious strike. But they feel that their situation is desperate and that drastic cutting of wage cost is their only possible hope of salvation.

RUCKUS: New York insiders were amused by reports of the cordial meeting between Governor Lehman and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to discuss the New York milk problem. They expect fur to fly in the near future.

Lehman has to do something in a hurry. The milk situation is rapidly growing chaotic and is loaded with political dynamite. The Republicans sit back and chuckle. They are delighted that the Department of Farms and Markets was transferred to full Democratic control before the storm broke. The Supreme Court ruling that New York has no authority over the price of milk coming from other states was cream on their cake.

The Governor and his legal aids have thought up a dandy solution—if it only works. The glass is still a long way from the lip.

It involves having Congress set up a commission with authority over milk distribution in New York, New England, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Then the idea would be to have the commission designate the Milk Control Board—or other appropriate body—in each state as its agent with power to handle all its problems within that state. In New York this would be presumed to cover interstate transactions ending here.

The rub is that this plan purposely and pointedly ignores the AAA. There's reason to believe that Mr. Wallace isn't at all pleased. He wants the AAA to handle the whole business—which in turn doesn't suit Lehman's book at all. The prospect of a ruckus between one of FDR's cabinet officers and his close friend and successor ticks Anti-New Dealers no end.

SPLIT: There's a private but important rift in Republican inner circles on the subject of Huey Long. Most leaders favor giving him a hand behind the scenes in the hope of busting the Democrats wide open.

A minority—few in number but by no means impotent in influence—call this madness. Granting that Huey personally would not be as much a menace to conservatives as he appears—they doubt if the same would be true of the following he is building. "Fostering share-the-wealth clubs is about as wise a past time for us as tossing matches in a gasoline tank."

Despite this opposition it's a safe bet that the Kingfish will get plenty of aid and comfort from the theoretical enemy.

SERIOUS: Cotton-picking machines have been developed to the point where keen observers are beginning to get nervous about their economic consequences.

The efficiency of these machines is expected to make it harder than ever to keep production under control. Experts also believe that once they're in general use the government's 12 cent price will be as impossible to maintain as a private contract on a ditch-digger's salary.

They figure either the government or the planters—many, both—will have to hold a "conspiracy bag."

New Yorkers are further concerned about the effect on negro labor in the South. The prospect of two or three million fold hands permanently unemployed is rated a matter for serious thought.

been Governor has that door been closed. Once the wind blew it shut and once Josephus Daniels closed it—I was talking over the telephone to President Roosevelt and Mr. Daniels thought to confer a favor on me by shutting out the outside noise. As soon as I finished talking I opened the door and told Mr. Daniels about my "symbol."

But just because the door to the Governor's office is always open, it doesn't mean that Shelby's Clyde Heay, Congressman "Farmer Bob" Doughton, Lieutenant Governor "Sandy" Graham, Judge Wilson Warlick, Colonel LeRoy Kirkpatrick or anyone else can walk into the governorship. They're going to have to run for it, and the harder some run the farther away that door is going to get.

Your correspondent, cured with the newsmen's insatiable appetite for hot news, journeyed last Sabbath day to the mountain county of Watauga to help an investigating committee look for the alleged secret graves of allegedly dead negro convicts. He found the mountain people a hospitable folk. In fact, almost too hospitable.

Looking at my dollar watch, I observed that the time was 12:30 p. m. Facetiously I remarked to two other newspaper men: "If you fellows will promise not to scoop me I believe I'll go to yonder store and try to buy some nourishment."

Legislative Ramblings

North Carolina should go upstairs to the Capitol unless he is invited to claim the stairs by the august General Assembly. That's small "a" on that "August," Mr. Linotype, although we may be here until capital "A" August. However, Governor Ehringhaus did drop in the lobby of the Sir Walter Hotel in the evening to mix with the boys and probably found more of them there than he would have "upstairs."

The Governor always expresses a fondness for the gentleman of the press. He strolled over to where our correspondent stood gossiping with Representative Ben O. Rowan. Dropping an arm across our correspondent's shoulder, he reiterated his confidence in what Representative U. S. Page calls "you newsboys," replied to my question as to when he would announce his candidacy for the U. S. Senate by saying, "I am not even thinking about running for the Senate—I'm concerned just now with State matters," expressed the hope that some real good will come of the prison camp investigation now in progress, and asked if I had ever noticed that his office door remains open always. I told him I had, but that I had never got around to thinking a great deal about it. And here's what he said:

"That open door is to me a symbol of what I hope this administration means to the people. Perhaps it is a foolish notion on my part, but I'm very fussy on that point. Even when I am conferring with department heads and other officials I want that door open. I want everyone to understand that they can talk with the Governor of North Carolina. Only twice since I have

HEY, BIG BOY, I Can Tell You Sumpin' 'bout YOUR CROPS

Chilean Natural Nitrate

"You know I need vitamins in my food. They make me big and strong and healthy. And your crops are like me—they need things in their food that act like vitamins in mine." That's a fact... and becoming better known every day. Your crops do need vitamin-like elements—the so-called impurities, such as boron, iodine, calcium, strontium, sodium, potassium, lithium and so on.

Chilean Natural Nitrate supplies these vital impurities, in Nature's own proportions. That's why this nitrogen fertilizer produces such healthy, money-making crops.

For your own protection say "Chilean" when you order nitrate. Two kinds—Champion (granulated) and Old Style. Both genuine. Both natural. Both Chilean. And both give your crops the vital impurities.

KINSTON TO PLAY HIGH IN OPENER HERE

The Greenville High School baseball nine will open its season here Friday afternoon when they meet the Kinston nine.

Under the direction of Coach Woods, the squad has been working out daily in preparation for the game and indications now point to a well-developed team before the end of the season. Although Coach Woods is handicapped by the loss of two star performers a fast season, Billy Carroll, veteran shortstop and Jack Forbes, fielder, he has many aspirants for these positions.

The complete schedule for the present season as announced by Coach Woods, shows that the team has a total of fifteen games for the season. Seven of these games will be played at home and the remaining games on foreign soil. The complete schedule as announced by Coach Woods is as follows:

- March 22—Kinston in Greenville
- March 26—Tarboro in Tarboro
- March 29—Wilson in Greenville
- April 2—Williamston in Williamston
- April 5—Kinston in Kinston
- April 9—Morehead City in Greenville
- April 12—Washington in Washington
- April 16—Washington in Greenville
- April 19—Williamston in Greenville
- April 23—Ayden in Ayden
- April 30—Winterville in Winterville
- May 1—Wilson in Wilson
- May 3—Ayden in Greenville
- May 7—Tarboro in Greenville
- May 10—Morehead City in Morehead

Local Golfers Drop Opening Tilt to Kinston

Greenville lost the opening match of the tournament of the Bright Leaf Golf Association to Kinston here yesterday afternoon, although an extra hole was required to decide the winner. The final score was 25 to 23 in favor of the visitors.

With the score standing at 23-all at the end of the 18-hole match, a foreman was picked to play an extra hole, and Kinston nosed out by a margin of two points.

The visiting golfers were treated to a delicious luncheon before play got under way.

With several more games on tap for the tournament, more to a close, local golfers were turning their attention today to getting in tip-top condition for the remaining of the contests so that they will be able to give even a better account of themselves than displayed in the initial game with Kinston.

Tom Smoot is captain of the Greenville club.

SPORT SLANTS

By PAP

Myrl Hoag's change of heart about taking a fling at third base for the New York Yankees may work out to the advantage of both parties.

When Hoag came up with the Yankees in 1932 after they had outbid the Giants, Braves and Indians for his services to the tune of $65,000 he was an outfielder by choice and determined to follow the advice of his father, a former Coast League pitcher who is now ground-keeper of the Sacramento ball park.

"My boy," Papa Hoag had said, "don't let them talk you into playing any place but the outfield. The chasers last longest in this game."

Last spring Manager Joe McCarthy suggested to Myrl that he take a whirl at the corner. Young Hoag would have no part of the plan. The only interest he had in the infield was confined to the base paths. He declined to experiment.

Things Have Changed

A year can make a whole of difference in any sport, and particularly in baseball. The 1934 season saw a lot of things happening to the Yankee crew. Injuries raised havoc with the ranks, and to top it all, Babe Ruth moved off to the Boston Braves.

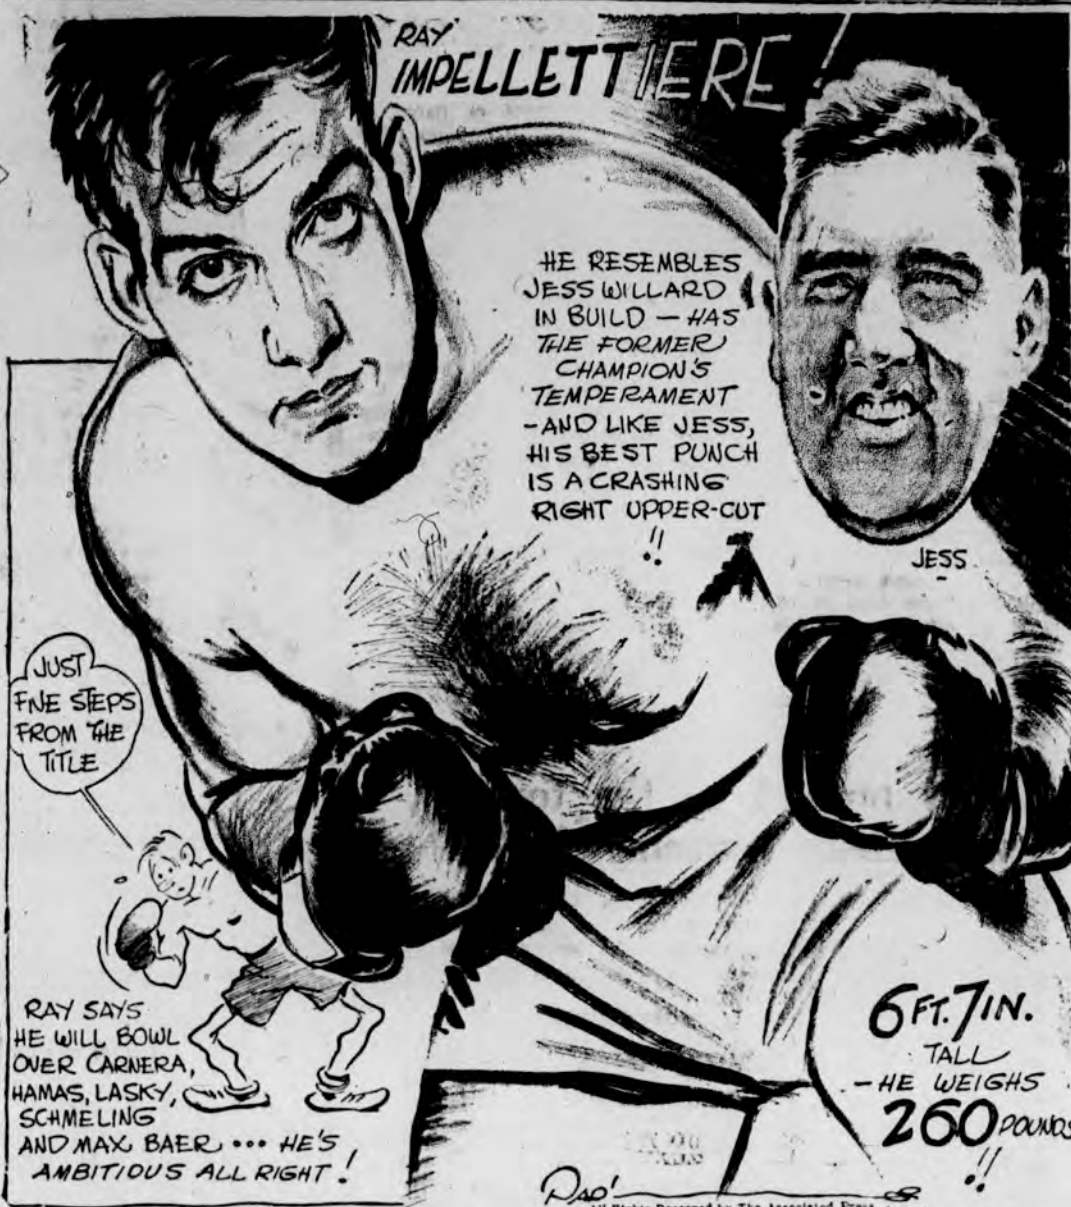

A peculiar situation faced Hoag when he arrived at camp this spring. Only Ben Chapman remained a fixture in the outfield. Earle Combe and Dickie Walker were uncertainties. Sammy Byrd had been sold to the Cincinnati Reds. At third base things were equally unsettled, with neither Jack Saltzgaver or Red Rolfe up to Yankee requirements.

McCarthy merely hinted it might be a good idea for Myrl to fool around third base a bit to practice. A hint was enough. Now he is all enthused about the prospect of becoming an outfielder.

He's Got the Arm

Hoag has the equipment to become a fine third baseman. Blessed with one of the finest throwing arms in the league and naturally fast on his feet, he ought to be able to master the knack of playing there.

To hang on as an outfielder he would have to bat well over the 300 mark whereas his stick work could fall below that figure without en-dangerous his eplace in the line-up as an infielder.

Hoag shouldn't lose any sleep in fear of shortening his career by moving into the infield. His team-mate Lou Gehrig has a streak of 1,504 games and seems to be standing up fairly well under the strain. Then there is Joe Sewell. He managed to enjoy quite a lengthy career. Sixteen years of infield service and still a bright star.

McCarthy brought out Ben Chapman's real talents by shifting him to the outfield. Perhaps he can do as much for Hoag.

Mickey Cochrane rather likes the idea of having most folks pick Cleveland to finish ahead of his Detroit Tigers. For one thing, it helps defeat the old bugaboo of over-confidence. Or did Dizzy Dean and company take care of that in the 1934 fall classic?

Nevertheless Mickey is glad his lads will not enter the pennant race with the idea that merely tossing their gloves on the diamond would insure them another pennant.

There is no doubt in Cochrane's mind that the Tigers can and will come back with enough fight to beat out the field.

The Tigers won't lack incentive, either. With the Cardinals the outstanding choice to repeat in the National League, the Detroiters will be fighting tooth and nail for another chance at the Red Birds. They won't rest until they at least try to even up for the indignities hurled on them in the world series.

Lucky? Of Course

Most everyone is convinced that the Tigers were lucky to win the flar last year. Of course, they were lucky—no team ever won a pennant without having "Lady Luck's" help. When a team has to play over 150 games, every one packed with the ever-present danger of injury, it has to get the breaks if it is to come through a winner.

The fact that Mickey was able to work behind the bat in most of the games was perhaps the greatest single stroke of good luck the Tigers enjoyed. Without Mickey to keep them on their toes they would have been just another ball club.

His presence is going to be every bit as vital this year. If Mickey can be in there for 130 of 140 games the Tigers are going to be awfully hard to head off.

Cochrane claims his team is stronger now than it was last summer. For one thing, youngsters like Greenberg, White and Rowe are certain to be improved by their experience.

They Beat the Indians

The Schoolboy is in far better shape today than he was a year ago. Then he wasn't at all certain how much strain his arm could stand after the injury of the previous campaign and it was not until the race was well under way that he hit his winning stride. He is ready to go from the gun this spring.

Jo-Jo White was one of the most improved players in the league last year and may blossom into one of the real stars of the pastime any day.

If anyone has the idea that Mickey Cochrane is going to prove a "morning glory" manager he underestimates Mickey's fighting qualities. His record with the Athletics shows him as a scrapper of the first water.

If the Cleveland Indians are the team Detroit has to beat, Cochrane feels the job is half done. The Tigers beat Walter Johnson's team sixteen times in twenty-two battles last year.

Washington Daybook

By ERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, D. C.—(AP)—A 65-year-old Congressman, apparently tired of being the butt of joshing from his colleagues, is determined to deprive members of the House of one of their favorite jokes.

He is Charles J. Golden of California, chairman of the House Committee on the Disposition of Unemployed Executive Papers.

Assigned to this post at the beginning of the present session by virtue of the fact that service in the last Congress gave him seniority after a fashion, Golden is the only man on the committee. The Republicans haven't found time to name their representative.

Golden, however, a former school teacher, editor and president of the board of a college, intends to bring dignity to his one-man committee if possible.

He has introduced a bill changing the name of the committee from that which has caused so much merriment among his colleagues to one calculated to command respect—"Joint Committee on Preservation of Public Archives."

To Guard Against Loss

The committee on disposition of useless executive papers was set up during the administration of Grover Cleveland. A batch of important executive documents turned up missing when wanted so Congress set up the committee to guard against recurrence of such things in the future.

Before that the various departments of the government could destroy any papers they liked. Now before they can throw out accumulated papers they must file a request with Golden's committee.

The departments tell in detail what the papers are and provide copies for the committee. They range from cleaning and pressing bills, either shop receipts to records of historic value.

It's up to Golden and his committee clerk, Abbie B. Golden, to wade through these papers, discard those destined for the furnace and save those of importance.

The two Golden's admit there's quite a bit of reading to their jobs.

Pays Its Way

There's this much to be said for the committee on disposition of useless executive papers, however. It's probably the only Congressional committee which makes any cash money for the government.

Each year several thousand of dollars worth of scientific papers and various pamphlets are sold to libraries and research workers. It actually pays its operating expenses. Despite that, however, no one pays much attention to the committee except to make wisecracks about it. Congress accepts its recommendations as a rule in a perfunctory manner without saving anything. Golden knows too well though that should he let an important document slip through his hands he would hear plenty.

He's philosophic about it. The Democratic caucus gave him the job. If they don't like the way he's doing it, then they can take it away.

Meanwhile, he's trying at least to lend it more dignity by changing the name "Joint Committee on Preservation of Public Archives."

"Ah," says Golden, "there's a name that's wisecrack proof."

Sundown Stories

Christopher's Delight

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"Do you remember that I received five cents for Christmas?" asked Christopher Columbus Crow.

"I do," cackled Top Notch, the rooster, "I have a good memory."

"Well," continued Christopher, "I am going to put it in my bank. Then I am going to leave my bank on Willy Nilly's shelf and if any one wishes to help me fill it, or receives any money as a reward for any other reason, I hope such a person will want to help along the noble work of Christopher, and add the amount to what is in my bank."

"You're the noble work, eh?" cackled Top Notch.

"Of course," cawed Christopher, "You see there is a slit in the bank and you can put any money through it."

"I see," nodded Top Notch. Christopher put his bank on Willy Nilly's shelf.

Christopher was delighted with his bank. He was as happy as could be. He flew up to his nest to take a little nap, and now Willy Nilly left the house to go down to take up some old leaves that had made the banks of the ducks' pond very untidy.

Top Notch was left alone in the house. But soon he, too, went out of doors.

"Maybe," he thought, "I am not as clever as Christopher, but just let him see how I can get the better of him and play a good joke on him this time."

Top Notch was as busy as could be. When he finished, his eyes were tired. They had been needed, however, he thought.

cently-formed group of some thirty Representatives jokingly described by standpatters as "The Mavericks." (They have been so dubbed because Representative Mavericks of Texas is one of their number.)

Young Kvale, a tall, handsome Scandinavian, serving his fourth term in Congress, has been chafing for a long time at the way things are being done on Capitol Hill. A devoted follower of Fiorello LaGuardia, now mayor of New York when he was a member of the House, Kvale prides himself on his independence.

As for a short while following the capture of control of the House by Democrats in 1930 when it appeared possible his vote might determine which party ultimately would organize that body, Kvale's place in the national limelight has been more or less obscure.

Since he has been in Congress he has been content to sit on the sidelines, attend sessions of the House faithfully and occasionally speak his mind on matters at hand.

For years he has been a member of a select group of independents who were in the habit of meeting of a select group of independents who were in the habit of meeting periodically in some office or committee room around the capitol and discussing the state of the Union. LaGuardia was a moving spirit in this little group although there were no officers. Gossip has it that it was very much of the plan of attack waged by LaGuardia and other House liberals against the sales tax in the Seventy-first Congress was prepared.

New York Cotton

New York, March 21.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, two to five points advance on higher Liverpool cables and trade buying with offerings light. After the call, May reacted 10.77 to 10.68 with active months showing net losses of two to four points at the end of the first half-hour. Trading in the current March deliveries ended tomorrow and that position was relatively quiet and steady this morning.

Trading was quiet and prices worked off slowly under scattered liquidation. May sold down to 20.63 and October to 10.30, making net declines of about eight to ten points.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, March 21.—(AP)—The stock market limped along at a snail's pace today and prices hovered closely around the levels of the previous day.

Faced with increased tension in European politics and the almost total absence of constructive developments at home, the market had little incentive to go forward, although the extreme lull in trading was encouraging to the extent it indicated little distress selling and unwillingness of shorts to out of new lines. The indecisive movement of major commodities reflected in the minor advances in cotton and the tone of the grains market also acted as a restraining influence and the ragged appearance of the bond market afforded little inspiration. The return of more nominal conditions in foreign exchanges, however, was welcomed.

The late tone was steady. Transfers were approximately 650,000 shares.

Late News Flashes

Anti-Sales Taxers Are Setback. Raleigh, March 21.—(AP)—The McDonald-Lumpkin anti-sales tax forces lost a major battle today when the House turned down two amendments proposing to boost the finance committee recommendations on franchise taxes on insurance companies.

By a vote of 66 to 44 the House refused a McDonald sponsored amendment to boost the taxes to a rise of about $250,000 annually and then by 63 to 46 rejected a compromise amendment by Barnes of Wilson, proposing to boost them by a smaller amount.

Representatives voting for the original amendment included Barnes of Wilson, Blount of Pitt, and those against the measure included Andrews of Wayne, Blount of Beaufort, and O'Berry of Wayne.

On the compromise measure Andrews of Wayne and Barnes of Wilson and Blount of Pitt voted "aye" while Blount of Beaufort, and O'Berry of Wayne voted "no."

The Senate passed and returned to the House for concurrence in amendments two state-wide bills. One would require the inoculation of every dog in the state against rabies and the other would create a lien on recoveries in civil suits growing out of injuries in favor of doctors, hospitals and dentists.

The House agreed before it recessed for lunch to limit debate on the franchise tax on domestic and foreign corporations to 45 minutes per side, setting the vote for late this afternoon. The Senate held a long meeting and did little.

The House action in refusing to boost the insurance franchise taxes was the first real reversal given the anti-sales taxers in their fight to raise corporation levies so that the three per cent retail levy may be eliminated or reduced.

Yesterday the anti-sales taxers led in raising taxes on power companies and telephone companies, to raise an estimated $925,000 annually more than the finance committee recommended.

Rep. Brown of Perquimans changed his vote from aye to no on the first insurance amendment, which him in position to ask later reconsideration of the rejection of the proposal.

The amendment would boost taxes on insurance companies about $350,000 a year more than the finance committee recommendations.

Chairman Cherry of the finance group said it would result in a raise of 20 per cent on foreign companies and 16 per cent on domestic companies.

Killed in Fall From Car

Southern Pines, March 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Charlotte M. Quilter, of Newburgh, N. Y., was killed near here early today in what was believed a fall from an automobile, said to have been driven by L. Michael McDonald, of Washington, who was placed in jail pending an inquest.

Sheriff Charles J. McDonald, of Moore county, and Chief of Police J. A. Gargis, of Southern Pines, said Mrs. Adeline Grinder, of Greenville, N. J., Mrs. Quilter's maid, told them Mr. and Mrs. Quilter had been quarreling some time before the accident, but that the party was singing at the time.

Mrs. Grinder, who had been employed by Mrs. Quilter for seven years, said she was riding in the back seat as they returned from a roadhouse, two miles south of here at 1 a. m. She said the car door flew open and Mrs. Quilter fell out, suffering injuries which proved fatal at a hospital some time later.

Giant Money Bill Holds Congress

Washington, March 21.—(21)—Two giant money measures—$4,880,000,000 for work relief and $2,000,000,000 for the soldiers' bonus today occupied Congress, grown accustomed to talking in ten-digit figures.

In both cases the time of final passage was termed only in length of the debate. The work relief program desired by Pres. Roosevelt already much modified, still faced an effort to boost that total figure to $9,880,000,000 and to defeat the soldier purchasing provisions. Democratic leaders forecast the defeat of both.

The House expected to get down to some trial ballots on the cash bonus issue. Advocates of payment through currency expansion claimed enough votes to win, but followers of the American Legion bill to leave the method of payment undefined, refused to concede defeat.

Louis M. Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt, grew gradually weaker, but amazed physicians and friends by his remarkable vitality in his illness at the White House.
