KNIGHT URGES LOCAL AID FOR N. C. SCHOOLS

U. N. C. Professor
Education Day
Speaker at High School Last Night

"The children of North Carolina stand as at a thousand cross-roads and ask us the way," said Dr. Edgar W. Knight in an address on the present school situation last night in the Greenville High School under the auspices of the American Association of University Women. North Carolina can have the schools she wants, but to attain these she must keep State aid only as a base, first returning to the principle of local aid to the schools, through which the State made her greatest strides in education.

The important part that Governor Jarvis played in the history of education in North Carolina, he brought out in the first of his speech, referring to the fact that thirty-three years ago, in Rockingham County he made the opening speech in the campaign for better schools when the move to vote local taxes was beginning.

In the recent leveling process, in which the best schools were pulled down to the level of the poorer without the latter being raised except in length of term, much was lost, according to the speaker, in the local pride and the feeling of a need for local support which had been built up in years of effort.

The speaker went back through the history of North Carolina's educational history and showed how in every other depression the schools had not been curtailed but had been strengthened and reinforced. Education was previously relied on to get the State out of a depression.

The University of North Carolina was born in the stormy days of the Revolution. The newspapers of Civil War times showed that the people fought valiantly to retain and develop further their public school system, then only about twenty years old. The World War was not allowed to impair the work of the schools, except possibly in manpower.

Dr. Knight then took the various panics of our history and showed that in almost every one the State had moved forward educationally.

In the panic of 1837-1843—the worst, with the exception of the present one, in a hundred years—the first public school law in North Carolina was enacted.

In the depression of 1873 came the court decision, in another State, but of close interest to this one, that the high school is a legitimate part of public school education.

The first steps to provide higher education for women in this State were taken in the depression in (Continued on Page Two)

PITT SCHOOLS BEGIN FINALS

Seventh Grade Exercises Held in Various Schools of County Last Night

Commencement season got under way in the various county schools last night and will be completed Monday evening with awarding of diplomas to one of the largest graduating classes in the history of the county.

Donald Conley, director of public school education, said today there had been a two per cent increase in graduates this year. He said around 250 young men and women would receive diplomas from high schools Monday. Approximately 500 seventh grade students were presented certificates to high schools in impressive exercises last night.

Today was confined largely to senior class activities, including banquets and annual plays. It was indicated that large crowds were expected to be in attendance at all schools.

Baccalaureate sermons will be delivered Sunday with literary addresses and awarding of sheepskins being left over to Monday evening.

Mr. Conley said numbers of men prominent in the educational and religious life of the state had been obtained as speakers.

Judge Dirk James, of County court, spoke to seventh grade graduates at Ayden last night and Rev. John Barclay, pastor of the Wilson Christian church, appeared at Paoletts. The Wilson minister will appear at Bell Arthur today and Chocod tonight.

Major Graham, head of the Kingston school system, is scheduled to appear at Grimesland Monday night.

Mr. Conley said much interest was being manifested in preparations for finals in all sections of the county, and that larger crowds than ever were expected to be on hand each day.

Bethel high school will not close until Friday, May 17, by reason of the fact that a broken boiler in mid winter caused a week's lost time.

A prediction by the United States Department of Agriculture is that the prices of farm machinery in 1935 will be slightly higher than during the preceding year.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News.

Washington
By RAY TUCKER

INSIDE: The Roosevelt administration is getting tired of domestic and foreign accusations that its monetary policies produce international chaos. Within a few days Secretary Morgenthau will use a nation wide radio hookup to discuss "stabilization" in the most vigorous and carefully documented speech any presidential spokesman has yet delivered on that subject.

The Secretary of the Treasury will explain in a-b-c language—the address will be to the voters, not the bankers—why this country went off the gold standard. He will set forth the results as he and Treasury experts see them.

His pronouncement will of course be interpreted in various ways—especially as Sir Josiah Stamp of London was a recent White House visitor. Now that all but a few nations are off gold, some will say that it is an invitation for would-be stabilizers to sit around a conference table. Others will view the speech as a "defense" designed to ward off Republican criticisms. You can take

EDUCATION RALLY HERE TOMORROW

Emergency Teachers
From Eastern Carolina District to Meet
At College

Emergency Education teachers of the Eastern North Carolina District comprising thirty counties together with their pupils and friends and educational leaders of the state will participate in an education day at East Carolina Teachers College in Greenville on Saturday, May 11, preparatory to closing the year's program.

The day's exercises consisting of addresses, reports, exhibits, illustrated lectures and various musical selections rendered by pupils of Emergency Relief in Education classes will be held in the Campus Building at 10:30 and lasting through the early afternoon.

School superintendents and Relief Administrators of the eastern counties are to be in attendance in addition to more than 200 teachers working in the program of emergency education carried on since last September under the direction of Miss Carrie B. Wilson, of Nashville, N. C. Eastern District Supervisor of Emergency Education.

Prominent speakers to appear on the program are Dr. Leon R. Meadows, President of East Carolina Teachers College, Dr. J. Henry Highsmith of the State Department of Public Instruction, Mrs. R. D. Bullock, Relief Administrator 24th District, Mrs. Mary G. Scarborough, State Supervisor Nursery Schools, C. E. McIntosh, Director of Educational Division North Carolina Emergency Relief Administration.

A total of 228 people were employed during the period of work. Of these 18 had served as unit chairmen or clerical assistants in the counties having large numbers of teachers. 194 are now employed as teachers. 12 who began work have found more profitable employment and 4 dropped the work for various reasons. The enrollment of pupils at present is 4220. Classes for adults have been and are being conducted (Continued on Page Two)

NAVAL PLANES KEPT SECRET

Forty-Six Seaplanes
on Massed Flight Unreported Since Take Off at Honolulu

Honolulu, May 10.—(AP)—Official secrecy veiled in silence today the whereabouts of 46 naval seaplanes on a trail-blazing massed flight to Midway islands 1,323 miles away.

As the hours passed with no information made public by navy officials, speculations grew that the air fleet—greatest flying group ever assembled for such a flight—possibly stopped at the French Frigate shoals, 500 miles distance or at Pearl Harbor and Hermes Reef, 100 miles from Midway.

Rain was falling and a 24-mile wind blowing at Midway when the group began taking off for Pearl Harbor at 7:8 a. m. 12:24 p. m. (EST) Thursday, lending credence to the belief that fliers might have stopped at some intermediate point.

Huntsville, Tex., May 10.—(AP)—Raymond Hamilton, exhibiting even in his last minutes a shell of the vicious conceit that helped make him a ranking public enemy died meekly today in the electric chair.

He followed Joe Palmer, his partner in the slaying of Major Crowson, prison guard, to the electric chair. Palmer was pronounced dead at 12:27.

The electrocution of the 22-year old gunman closed a crime career that began with sneak thief operations in his teens and developed quickly into bank robbery, kidnapping, prison breaks and murder.

DUKE FOUND GUILTY FRAUD

Englishman Sentenced to Nine Months in Prison in London Court Today

London, May 10.—(AP)—The Duke of Manchester today was found guilty in the Old Bailey of obtaining money under false pretense and sentenced to nine months imprisonment.

Earlier the Duke admitted his financial road had been rocky of recent years.

Testifying in his own defense in the case which arose from his pawning of jewelry alleged not his property, the Duke said: "I have been bankrupt twice."

A total of 67 petitions had been filed against him, he said, when the number of judgments summons "might run into three figures." There are no outstanding judgments summons, he said.

He denied any intent to defraud when he pawned jewelry belonging to the estate of his American born mother. He declared he had paid interest on the pledged gems and kept insurance in force with the purpose of redeeming them, adding that he had the money in his pocket to do so.

Gifts to German Army

NOTED WOMAN FLIER COMING

Amelia Earhart, Conqueror of Two Oceans
to Appear at College on Dec. 4

Amelia Earhart will be in Greenville early next winter. A telegram received yesterday by Miss Katherine Holcizlaw, chairman of the Entertainment Committee for next year, confirming the engagement was the final step in the arrangement for her appearance on the college program of entertainment.

The tentative date is December 4. There may be a slight shifting of the date when Miss Earhart's schedule is completed, but the contract is signed and sealed for her appearance here in December.

There is perhaps no person in public life today the people of this section had rather see than Amelia Earhart, especially since her latest triumphant record-breaking trip from Mexico to New York.

A number of other attractions have been signed for program of entertainments to be offered by the college next fall and winter.

Former Member Congress Dead In Pasquotank

Elizabeth City, May 10.—(AP)—Patrick Henry Williams, 65, former member of the U. S. Senate from the First District died at his home here early today of a heart attack.

Mr. Williams, son of the late Robert and Marena Droskey Williams, was born in Camden county. He took his bachelor of arts degree at Randolph Macon college and entered the law school at the University of North Carolina in 1887.

He was a former banker, lawyer and master of the Odd Fellows order in North Carolina.

His widow, six children and three grandchildren survive.

Funeral arrangements awaited arrival of the children.

At Washington

Washington, May 10.—(AP)—Back from his conquest of the Antarctic, Rear Admiral Richard Byrd and his crew of stalwarts, neared the capital today to receive a reception second only to the one Washington gave Lindbergh in 1927.

Top hats and gold braid glistening, officials in brilliant attire awaited the arrival of the rust-scarred ship Bear of Oakland bearing the aerial explorer of two poles on the last lap of his journey up the Potomac.

Up bright and early after a night spent at the docks in Virginia, the party planned to arrive at the navy yards at 4 o'clock this afternoon for ceremonies topped shortly before 5 o'clock by a speech of welcome by President Roosevelt.

Late News Flashes

Pave Way For Grading Bill
Approved

Washington, May 10.—(AP)—The House agricultural committee today paved the way for a final favorable vote on the Flanagan tobacco grading bill. Action is expected to be taken Monday.

Previously the senate committee approved the measure with reservations that representatives not hard would be given an opportunity to present their views.

Appearing before the committee today Reps. Keer of North Carolina, and Chapman of Kentucky, who bitterly opposed the bill, and Rep. Humphreys, of Tennessee, and Clarke, of North Carolina and Burch of Virginia.

The bill as it now stands provides for a referendum of growers by markets to see if they wanted federal tobacco grading before such services would be given on their respective markets.

Kerr suggested that if the bill was approved the referendum would be held by the tobacco belt instead of by individual markets.

Long Scores Roosevelt on Bonus
Washington, D. C., May 10.—(AP)—Protesting against the protective vote of the Patman bill, Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana, asserted in the Senate today that President Roosevelt was "misleading the Democratic party by advocating contradictory measures."

Meanwhile the White House was deluged with telegrams urging the president either to sign or veto the bill.

Attaches estimated 50,000 had arrived before noon but there was no check as to whether the majority favored the legislation.

CIVIL COURT NEARS CLOSE

One Week Term Expected to be Concluded During the Late Afternoon

After completing its calendar of four or five cases, civil court was recessed yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock and resumed work this morning with the prospect of concluding its activities this afternoon.

The session yesterday was marked by three compromises and consideration of the suit brought by Mrs. Rosa Brown, of Greenville, against her husband, Claude Brown for abandonment and support.

It was discovered there had been a previous order entered in the court that Brown pay his wife $65 a month, and the order was permitted to stand.

When the case of Rubv Cannon vs. J. D. McLawhorn, of Winterville, was called for trial, attorneys representing both sides went into a conference and announced shortly afterward they had reached a compromise.

The suit involved a dispute between landlord and tenant over settlement of a crop. The amount involved was said to have been $50 with the compromise involving payment of $25.

Two or three other actions were compromised, although the terms were not made known.

The one-week term which convened here last Monday morning is scheduled to come to a close this afternoon with the major part of the calendar of thirty cases completed.

After a lapse of one week, a two-week term of civil court will convene here with fifty or sixty cases scheduled for consideration.

Judge Clayton Moore of Williamston, is presiding over the term.

LEGISLATIVE RAMBLINGS

By C. A. PAUL

The General Assembly is now expected to finally and definitely adjourn sometime Saturday, although it is not expected to get through by then. In other words, it is going to try to pass as many of the hundreds of bills still before it today and tomorrow and then adjourn sine die, with the bills that do not get through lost in the shuffle. But since most of the important bills have already been enacted into law no great harm is expected to result if a good many of those now pending are still left in the hopper when adjournment comes. A good many observers feel that the State would probably be better off if a large number of the bills that have been enacted had even been introduced.

Both the Senate and the House have been putting in long hours this week and working overtime with morning, afternoon and night sessions. As a result, a heavy den has been made in the pile of bills in both Houses and it is expected that the calendars can be cleared in both (Continued on Page Four)

J. C. LANIER PRAISES CIVIL WAR VETERANS

Code Administrator
Delivers Address at Confederate Memorial
Day Exercises

J. C. Lanier, Code Administrator of the loose leaf tobacco industry, and former expert with the tobacco division of Agricultural Adjustment Administration, delivered the principal address of exercises held at East Carolina Teachers College this morning in connection with the community's observance of Confederate Memorial Day.

"The cause for which the Confederates fought is lost," declared the speaker, "but the lesson of patriotism and sacrifice flame higher each year as we gather together to do them honor and reverence; and from that patriotism and from the sacrifices of these heroes who have passed on to their reward, we should draw an inspiration to sustain us in the fights that we must make in these troublous days."

Mr. Lanier was presented by J. H. Rose, superintendent of city schools, as one of the outstanding figures of the nation because of the prominent part which he has played in the fight for improvement of the life of the American farmer.

The program opened at the college with the singing of the "Old North State," salute to the United States and Confederate flags, a number by the High School Glee Club, and was concluded with the singing of "America."

The exercises were preceded by a parade led by the High School band and followed by two squads of the local unit of North Carolina National Guards and High School Glee Club members.

Organized at the High School at 11 o'clock, the pageant went to Cherry Hill Cemetery where an eight-gun salute was fired in honor of the Confederate dead. Members of the George B. Singletary Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy, sponsors of the observance, decorated the graves of the departed veterans with a profusion of flowers.

The parade, directed by J. H. Rose then moved to the college where the principal exercises were conducted. Along with observance of Memorial Day, members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy observed Flag Day. Tattered flags were disposed of among the public in commemoration of the deeds of valor which Southern soldiers performed on battlefields of the War Between the States. Proceeds from the sales were to be devoted to the nurses' field at the Old Ladies' Home at Fayetteville and T. B. Sanatorium.

No members of the Confederacy took part in the parade as in past years because all have answered the final bugle call. The last one attended three years ago.

Mr. Lanier said, in part: (Continued on Page Four)

SMITH SUIT BEFORE JURY

Jury Told to Disregard Whether Action Was of a "Pauper" Nature

Charlotte, May 10.—(AP)—P. Brandon Smith's $250,000 alienation of affections suit against his ex-father-in-law, Joseph F. Cannon, was brought before a jury in Mecklenburg Superior court today at 11 a. m.

Five minutes after receiving the case, the jurors came back in and asked Judge W. F. Harding if the 29-year-old Charlotte real estate operator had brought his suit as a "pauper action."

The judge informed them this was no concern of theirs and ordered them to return to resume their deliberations.

There was no explanation from the jurors why they wished this. Presumably they were interested to know whether Smith would be taxed with the cost if the verdict were returned for the defendant. If it were a pauper action he would not.

Smith's suit, however, was not brought as a pauper action.

After first summarizing the issues and allegations in the case, Judge Harding in charging the jury said they must first find that Ann Cannon Reynolds Smith had alienated her husband before considering that her father alienated them.

In order to return a verdict for Smith the jury must also find that any alienation of affections was done maliciously.

He charged the burden of the proof throughout was on the defendant.

WINE BECOMES LEGAL IN N. C.

Measure Passed by Legislature Yesterday Ratified During The Day

Reflecter Bureau.
By Walter Hotel
Raleigh, May 10.—The manufacture of wine, as well as its sale, is now legal in North Carolina. The bill, which passed both houses of the legislature yesterday under suspension of the rules, will be ratified some time today and will go into effect immediately. Ratification is a mere formality, requiring only the signature of the Speaker of the house and the president of the senate, the Lieutenant-Governor.

The law permits the manufacture of naturally fermented wines and ciders. Wines and ciders naturally fermented contain from 10 to 14 per cent of alcohol by weight. Occasionally they contain less. "High powered," or fortified, wines are not legalized by the law.

The new law means that anyone may make naturally fermented wines, may transport and sell such wines, free from taxation or license. Wineries may be established for the processing of fruits into wine. Any person may sell wine of his own manufacture either directly to the consumer or to wholesalers and retailers. Wine may be sold unrestrictedly at retail, but may not be consumed on the premises except in the case of cafes and public dining rooms. In the latter place wines may be sold with meals. Boards of County Commissioners may forbid the sale or manufacture in their respective counties if they so desire.

It is expected that Garrett and Co., originally a North Carolina concern, will return to the state, establishing wineries and warehouses, and purchasing grapes, peaches and other fruits grown by North Carolina farmers.

The Garretts are manufacturers of the famed scuppernon wine sold under the Virginia Dare label. California wine grapes are now being sold at $18 per ton, with 20 to 25 tons being harvested from an acre. It is believed that North Carolina grapes will bring a higher price, being much better than California grapes for the purposes of wine-making. Only two varieties of wine can be made from California grapes while almost any European wine can be successfully duplicated by using North Carolina grapes, according to wine makers. The reason for the great variety obtainable from North Carolina grapes is accounted for by the wide range of soil types found in the state.

It is expected that the sandhills region of the state will benefit greatly by the passage of the wine bill. Manufacturers have succeeded in making a very palatable table wine from thoroughly ripe peaches. Throughout the sandhills section are vast peach orchards. The wine industry can use the fully-ripe fruit which is not suitable for shipment to northern markets. A great revival of grape-growing is predicted for eastern North Carolina, the original home in the state of the famed scuppernon grape.

It was learned today that plans have been made for cleaning up the vineyard in Manteo in which grows the 350 year-old scuppernon grape vine which is commonly known as the Mother of the American Wine Industry.

From the far-famed ancient vine, first discovered in 1585 the Garretts took the roots for their vineyards to establish in 1835 their huge wine business. The Garretts, owners of Garrett and Co., makers of Virginia Dare wine, were forced to move from the state by the enactment of state prohibition. Their offices are now located in Brooklyn, N. Y., and most of their wines are made from California grapes. However, they still buy some North Carolina grapes.

The 350 year-old vine at Manteo is still alive. Throughout North Carolina are many vineyards established by roots from the Manteo vine. It is one of the largest grape vines in America, if not the largest.

FATHER, SON HELD IN INSURANCE 'TORCH' MURDER

Frank di Stasio, 51, Revere, Mass., candy shop proprietor, and his son, Anthony, were indicted at Cambridge, Mass., after police said they had confessed burning to death an unidentified man in a plot to collect $12,500 insurance. campaign for more adequate opportunities was waged in North Carolina.

Then Dr. Knight expressed his opinion that history will show that what we have done to the schools since 1931, not only was unwise but could have been avoided.

Giving due credit to the present arrangement, which he called a "device," and could not be called a system because it is such a skeleton the speaker admitted that it had balanced the budget and saved the credit of the State and that it does offer an eight-months' term to all.

On the other hand, he attacked its obvious weaknesses: inadequate support, loss of local pride and interest, division of control between two boards and over-centralization.

Not enough money has been set aside for an eight-months' term, and the door has been closed to the local initiative which has for years kept the way open for new steps and for the broader development so necessary to meet new conditions. The speaker paid a tribute to Charlotte for its recent step for a nine months' school and predicted that many others will follow. Meetings were held at once to take steps in keeping up with Charlotte.

In discussing the trend toward centralization, Dr. Knight pointed out that no American States, and no country except Japan, has succeeded in a strongly centralized system of education, and Japan is not a democracy but a militaristic monarchy. He referred to the excellent systems of New York, Massachusetts and Maryland, and especially to the fact that these outstanding systems are not centralized.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction should also be the head of the State School Commission, said Dr. Knight, so that policy and budget might fit.

Preceding this address, Mrs. T. W. Guthrie of Kins on, the new president of the NCEA, was introduced and said a few fitting words of greetings and of interest in the coming school year in Greenville. She gave a number of pertinent facts about the school situation, stressing the effect upon the children. She is keenly conscious of the individual child, as she herself is a class-room teacher.

President L. R. Meadows, a friend of long standing, introduced Dr. Knight in his usual genial vein spoke of their early acquaintance in Greenville and mentioned some of Dr. Knight's achievements.

Supt. J. H. Rose welcomed the group to the High School. Miss Mamie E. Jenkins, president of the A. A. U. W., which sponsored the program with a brief but fitting reference to the desire of the organization to cultivate contact with the school and community.

Mrs. J. H. Rose, chairman of the A. A. U. W. Education Committee, presided.

A feature of the program was the group of selections beautifully given by the High School Glee Club. Miss Oona Shindler directing and Miss Eva Hodges at the piano.

This Education Day program, an annual occasion with the American Association of University Women, it was hoped to have it this year, at least, a county rally, but on account of conflicts between this and county commitments, that plan could not be carried out.

"As we gather together on this occasion to do honor and reverence to the Confederate soldier, a feeling of sadness comes over me as I look around and miss the faces of those whom we honor. They are nearly all gone now, but it seems only a few years ago when the streets of our town were filled each tenth of May with old soldiers many of them still wearing the remnants of their tattered gray uniforms. Would that it were possible to turn back the hands of time for a day and bring them together once more, so that they could renew their comradeship with those who fought side by side with them in the War Between the States. But it can be done. They have passed over the river. On fame's eternal camping ground their silent tents are spread, and glory guards with solemn round the bivouac of the dead."

"We are gathered here today to speak not to the old soldiers but of them, and to draw from their lives an inspiration for the present-day world. Just as a drop of rain falling in some hidden nook finds its way through brook and stream to swell the mighty rivers in their rush to the sea, so does the life and influence of every person to the current of life.

Not only does the evil that men do live after them, but the good that men do lives after them; and although the mighty hosts of Lee and Jackson live now only in memory, and although the mighty hosts of Lee and Jackson live now only in memory, and although the cause of the Confederacy is a lost cause and although their hope of victory crumbled at Appomattox, yet they have left behind them a heritage more precious than rubies.

"It does not matter now what were the causes that brought on the War Between the States. Historians have dwelled at length upon this question, their views depending in large part upon their geographical environment. It took fifty years to clear away the prejudices born of the war to the point that history recorded the facts without bias. It took the mingled blood of the New England Yankee and the Mississippi son of the South in the World War to wipe out this sectionalism and prejudice and hate. The question of State's rights, of centralization of interests of the industrial North and agricultural South, all played a part in bringing to a head this inevitable conflict which had been brewing almost since the birth of this Republic. But it would serve no purpose for me to attempt to explain the equities of these various causes of contention between the States.

"And neither is it worth while to lament upon the outcome of the war. It can not be said with any certainty that it would have been advantageous even to the South for

Confederacy to have won the war. To visualize the South triumphant opens a vast speculative field as to the future and the destiny of the American continent. In this day and time, some seventy years since the close of the war, with a nation united and mighty beyond any other nation under the sun, it can well be questioned, with loyalty to the heroes of the South, whether it would have been to our interests for the South to have won the war. There is a Power whose cars teaches our way along the pathless coast, and I sometimes think as I read the pages of history that the power of destiny waved its magic wand and decided the conflict, which reunited this country as one, and forever settled the question of future divisions. The tragic death of that invincible soldier, Stonewall Jackson, the mysterious failure of two Confederate divisions to support Pickett's gallant charge on the bloody fields of Gettysburg, while the fate of the nation hung in the balance, appear to be those imperious forces that decide the destiny of the world.

"It would serve no purpose for me to attempt at this time to describe to you the horrors of war and the hardships that these men underwent in performance of their plain duty. It was not the love of battle that made them face terrific odds, endure unspeakable hardships and face death without flinching; it was the love of home, loyalty to their ideals, and the willingness to answer duty's call, even though it meant the giving up of life itself. The cause for which they fought is lost, but the lessons of patriotism and sacrifice flame higher each year as we gather, together to do them honor and reverence; and from that patriotism and from the sacrifices of these heroes who have passed on to their reward, we should draw an inspiration to sustain us in the fights that we must make in these troublous times.

A man can go without eating 30 days or more. Three days is the limit if he goes without water. To lose 5 per cent body water brings hang-overs, makes one irritable and grouchy. To lose 20 per cent is fatal. So drink more and more water. The CO2 in 7-UP helps purify the body linings and the copious water sluices away the waste. The distress after eating will vanish. You need plenty of good pure water like you have in 7-UP. 7-UP sold wherever Bottled Drinks are sold. Order a case today from your grocer.

in your hands the flame of patriotism of the coming manhood and womanhood of this nation. When you go out from this institution and take your places as teachers in the various schools throughout the country, it should be your purpose, in keeping faith with Confederate dead to keep bright the fires of patriotism and loyalty to one's ideals. You should teach your pupils to hate war; but teach them also to hate one thing more than war, and that thing is an unwillingness to sacrifice for the preservation of an ideal. Teach your pupils to believe that this country, one and united, is the greatest country in the world; that it is the bulwark of free government among the peoples of the earth; and that they should love and cherish its institutions no less than the Confederate soldiers cherished the institutions for which they fought and died.

"Teach to them not only the struggles and hardships and sacrifices of the Confederate Army, but show them also the sacrifices of our forefathers, who endured every hardship and made every sacrifice in order that we might have our priceless heritage of freedom.

"Our country and our institutions spring not only from the deeds and achievements of our Confederate soldiers; they made possible by a long list of noble Americans who risked their all in order that we might have the priceless heritage of freedom.

"Teach them how this country alone of all the nations of the world has never drawn the sword for selfish ends, but always in defense of the right and the relief of the oppressed. Tell them that our country alone of the nations refused to share the indemnity collected from the Chinese after the Boxer uprising.

Show them how we fought the Spaniards to rescue the Cubans from their cruel masters, and how, after we had humbled their army and destroyed their navy, we set Cuba free and paid Spain millions of dollars for the privilege of looking after the Philippines until they could look after themselves. Point out to them the benevolent policy we have pursued towards our weak southern neighbor, and how we are allowing Mexico to work out its own salvation, instead of grabbing it and thereby gaining one of the richest countries in the world. Impress upon them the fact that after spending forty billion dollars and sixty thousand lives in the World War this country asked and received not one penny of tribute levied upon the vanquished nations. Teach them that in the long run in the game of life, that it matters not whether you win or lose; it's how you play the game, and how you fight the fight. The Confederate soldiers even in defeat have built an imperishable record of courage and loyalty and obedience to duty, we should always look upon their deeds and exploits as a fountain of inspiration to encourage us to emulate this record."

MOTHER'S LOVE

Her love is like an island
In life's ocean, vast and wide,
A peaceful, quiet shelter
From the wind, and rain, and tide.

'Tis bound on the north by Hope,
By Patience on the west,
By tender Counsel on the south,
And on the east by Rest.

Above it like a beacon light
Shine faith, and truth, and prayer;
And through the changing scenes
of life,
I find a haven there.
—Author unknown.

World Traveler Gives Good Advice TO FAT FOLKS

John Lethaby of Portland, Oreg.,
writes: "Have known Kruschen
Salts for years in England, Africa,
Brazil. I weighed 190, chest 40, waist 42. After 6 weeks with Kruschen am 165, chest 42, waist 36. It gives me pep and vigor and has kept me young."

Mr. Lethaby got rid of ugly fat safely with Kruschen—so have thousands of others. YOU can, too.
If you'll only have a will of your own and not listen to gossipers who tell you silly untruths because they don't want you to become youth-fully slender.

Kruschen can't harm you—it's a
health treatment—let one jar (lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle) take 12 lbs. off you or money back. Just take a half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning (tastes fine with juice of half lemon added.) For sale by Pitt Drug Co., or any drug store.

Social Calendar

FRIDAY

will meet in the Woman's Club
building.

8:00 p. m.—The T. E. L. class of Immanuel Baptist Church will meet with Mrs. Regan on 12th Street.

8:30 to 9:30 p. m.—Rev. and Mrs. R. C. Gardy will be honored at a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Moseley,
given by the Woman's Auxiliary
of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. McGowan Ill

Friends of W. E. McGowan will be sorry to hear he is sick at his home on East 13th street.

Miss Jones in Hospital

Friends of Miss Elizabeth Jones
will regret to learn that she is in Pitt Community hospital.

Memorial Baptist Prayer Service

The third preparatory service for the S. D. Gordon meeting will be held tonight at 8:00 o'clock. The subject for discussion will be "Inexcusable Idleness." Every member is urged to be present. Come.

Mother's Day at Christian Church

The Youth Group of the Christian church will observe Mother's Day by presenting at the evening service on Sunday a pageant entitled "Parents and Youths' Service of Light." The theme of the pageant is the necessity of each generation passing the light which it has received on to the succeeding generation—the light truth, of ethical conceptions, moral responsibility and religious values. There will be a Procession of Lights in which the bearers will bring their lights to the altar, where the Blessing of Lights will take place. Appropriate musical numbers will be interspersed between the various episodes of the pageant, the choir
rendering "Send Out Thy Light."
The message of the service will be delivered by Mrs. Wm. A. Ryan, the subject being "Are We Passing on the Light of Life in Our Homes?"
The general public is cordially invited to attend this service. The hour will be the regular evening
worship hour of eight o'clock.

Women's Missionary Society

The monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society will be held Monday afternoon, May 13,
at 3:30 p. m. Mrs. J. L. Fleming, president, will be in charge of the business session.

Circle Number 2 Mrs. L. A. Stroud
chairman, will present the program
of the afternoon, and they are very happy to announce Dr. S. D. Gordon, as the speaker for this occasion. It is a rare privilege to have Mr. Gordon address the women, and every member is expected to take advantage of this opportunity. A most cordial invitation is extended to the women of the churches of the city to meet with this society
at this hour since they wish to share this privilege as fully as possible. Dr. Gordon will speak promptly at 4:00 o'clock. Come!
You are invited.

Miss Graham Hostess To Math Club

Miss Maria Graham, of the Mathematics Department of the College,
delightfully entertained the Math
Club at her home on Eighth street,
recently, in honor of the Senior Math Majors.

Each honored student gave a short but very interesting talk on some experience while doing her practice-teaching.

Election of officers was the chief business of this meeting. The president of the club for next year is Miss Mary Lyon Shotwell, will succeed Miss Norma Melvin; Miss Belle Kearney, as vice-president, taking Miss Whitley's place;
Miss Mary Lyon Shotwell, will succeed Miss Mary Elizabeth Parker
as secretary and treasurer, who in turn, will succeed Miss Betty Cars-
well as Techo Echo Reporter.

The afternoon was spent informally and a most enjoyable time was reported by all.

MOTHER'S DAY NEXT SUNDAY!

What could be a nicer gift for Mother than a Permanent Wave
—something she will enjoy for many long months to come!
And whether you plan to spend $3.35 or $10.00—mother will have the services of an expert—if she comes here for her wave!

Ask the woman who has one!

By the way—there are a number of things in the Gift Shop
Mother would like—won't you come in and see them?

Tips on CONTRACTIONS

By TOM O'NEIL
Sims Three Bid

The original bid of three in a suit devised by P. Hal Sims is a very efficient method of starting toward sums and continuing to the right point, only.

So far as I am concerned the only trouble with it is that I have never held a hand warranting it. Which reminds me that David Burnstone
once was asked if he used it and
he replied:

"I can't say I smoke dollar cigars
just because a fellow once gave me
one for Christmas."

With this bid the trump suit is predetermined and the maker of the bid wants each shown by the responding hand, highest ranking first. Game at the suit named is guaranteed.

In his 150-rubber match with Ed
Culbertson, Hal never had cards
warranting use of his special bid.

Perhaps it is because Hal and others seem to have an affinity for each other. He's quite a golfer, history, and many of the pros use his system. Anyhow I visited the G. A. S.
City, N. Y. Country Club recently.
A sale cause interruption of golf
for bridge, and in the course of five rubbers there were three Sims three bids.

One of them was made by the pro, Jimmy Hines. He had a fine diamond suit with the top, a king
one outside suit and an ace in the other. In response to the opening three diamonds, partner bid the suit in which Jimmy had a loser and Jimmy went to six diamonds. It was a laydown against any opening
since a queen in partner's hand was in the same suit as Jimmy's outside king.

In another hand my partner
opened with three spades and I had nothing but six clubs to the kingjack. I bid three no trump to show lack of aces. My partner went to five spades for a reason I could not fathom and there the bidding dropped. He just made five, having a fit with my clubs.

Then came the prize hand:

NORTH
♦NONE	♠10 9 8 7 6 5	♣7 4

Harry C. Leyer, who is as clever at making tough bridge hands, or any kind of hands, as Jimmy Hines
is at making golf shots, opened with three spades. Came the orthodox four club bid from North to show the ace of clubs. South bid four diamonds. North offered four hearts to show length in hearts,
since he had denied possession of the heart ace. South signed off at four spades. North went to five diamonds, thinking it might be valuable information to South to show aid for diamonds. As a matter of fact, the bid was futile. Leyer then went to six spades. West, doubled, disliking the bidding.

I sat East, expecting a nice set
in view of my partner's double,
but truth is, that Leyer made his slam.

Bubble Bowl for Mother on her day, makes an ideal gift that she will enjoy all the year. Greenville Floral Company.

Approximately 2,000 acres of farm land in Texas County, Oklahoma, has been contracted for terracing projects.

West opened the singleton diamond, which was won with the jack South. The ace of hearts was played, followed by the nine of diamonds. West refused to ruff. He disliked to lead from his tenaces

and couldn't imagine possession of some spades East. The diamond nine took the trick.

That was enough for the declarer.
He led the ace of spades and followed with the three spot, which West had to take with the king.
West led the king of hearts. South
trumped and the party was over.
My four spades to the ten-nine failed to take a trick.

If only West had trumped that diamond, I surely would have taken a spade trick.

Of course, the hand could have been made anyhow, if South after taking the first diamond, played the ace of spades, followed by a low spade. But he justifiably assumed from the double that the spades
were bunched West and he was trying desperately to mitigate bad distribution. As soon as West refused to trump the diamond, Leyer read West for possession of only two spades to the king.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

chieftain Don Richberg wrote furiously and slipped his suggestions to the Solicitor General. Those notes would make interesting reading. But Mr. Reed stuck them in his pocket unread as fast as he got them—and Don won't tell what was in them.

HURDLES: Mr. Reed isn't blamed personally for what the NRA lawyers regard as his unfortunate presentation of their case. They hold the system responsible by which matters affecting vital New Deal issues are argued before the Supreme Court by government lawyers not familiar with them from start to finish. Other high officials notably Secretary Ickes and Wallace—
make the same complaint.

No matter where litigation arises
—NRA, AAA, the Treasury, the White House, the Interior Department—the Attorney General's office
grabs it as soon as it assumes Supreme Court stature. Departmental lawyers who have nursed the case
through lower courts are brushed aside or assigned to trivial part in preparation and presentation. No matter how able, the D. of J. lawyers can rarely make as thorough
or skillful an argument as the man
below. That was Mr. Reed's trouble.
He was a pitcher who went into the box without warming up enough.

Don't be surprised if the system is revised soon. The New Deal still has many hurdles to clear, but its highest and hardest are those nine black-robed figures on what lawyers call the "Court of the Last Gueat."

CRAZY: The New Deal household
is riddled with quarrels and jealous-ies—let's jettison Hopkins, Perkins versus Biddle, "liberals" versus Farley and Roper—but the finest hater of all is George Peek. He has been humbled openly and flagrantly
by Secretaries Wallace and Hull.
The former got rid of him when he fought the crop reduction program and Mr. Hull tore up his proposal for the barrier of goods with other nations.

Mr. Peek's analysis of our foreign trade and monetary transactions
was a frontal attack upon the Hull-Wallace policies of freer international commerce. They have urged lower tariffs on the ground that—
as a creditor nation—we must buy
if we hope to sell. Mr. Peek maintains we are a creditor nation in name only. He insists that the outside world, instead of buying our goods—which he contends it could easily do—swifly liquidating its own debt and shifting the debtor
role to Uncle Sam.

Officials in other departments
concerned with world trade and diplomacy say that Peek's figures are erroneous and his conclusion crazier in degree but diplomatic time they will say so publicly. What they can't understand is why the President permitted him to sound off so speculatively. The answer is that George has been spouting his ideas around
the White House for weeks, and it was thought best to let him get them off his chest. They represent only his "personal opinion."

TARIFF: Few may have noticed
it, but the White House gave Mr.
Peek its answer the same day the headlines carried his sensational story. As if repudiating his criticism of Secretary Hull's reciprocity treaty agreements, President Roosevelt proclaimed the effectiveness of the Haitian treaty with flourishes
and ruffles.

Guardedly but persistently Mr.
Hull is making holes in the world's tariff dikes. He has negotiated and put into effect four reciprocal treaties and a dozen more are near completion. Each document contains the unconditional most-favored-nation clause which breaks Mr.
Peek's heart. This means that all future tariff treaties made by participants in these reciprocal agreements will extend the same cuts and quotas to other nations. Thus Free Trader Hull gets his way without much fuss.

But there will be a fuss next year
Messrs. Hull, Wallace and Peek are reviving the tariff as a political issue to the extent that several New England states, Pennsylvania, Mich-

ENEMY'S KISS by Evelyn M. Winch

SYNOPSIS: Alison Rede, driving back to London with Guy
Western, is rather ashamed of her terrible night before. She had gone to a remote house to meet her father. But when her father did not arrive she was terribly frightened by a half-wild man
and was rescued by Western and his half-brother. Yet Alison suspects Western is a little, although she likes him a lot. For the night on the dock's edge are "G. L." instead of "G. W."

Chapter 10 SPECULATION

GUY put on speed and they went humming up the smooth rise ahead.

"Mr. Western—"

He did not look around and Alison repeated "Mr. Western."

"Oh! Yes?" For a moment she could have sworn that he had jumped.

"Would you mind telling me one thing?"

"Anything! Go ahead?" He smiled
at her and when he smiled like that she felt that she was silly even to doubt "What is it?"

"Is Gaffer your own?"

"Yes. Why?" He looked surprised.

"Nothing. Only I wondered why
it wasn't your name on his collar."

"Oh, as a matter of fact, I've only just bought him from a friend."

"Mr. Western—Is Gaffer your own?"

He answered slowly, was intent now
on the road ahead.

"I see! I thought it rather funny when I saw it. I hadn't thought of that," Alison confessed.

"You thought I might be spinning you a yarn?" He did not look at her and he was frowning.

"Yes!"

He was silent, negotiating the turn into the main road, before he said, "I suppose my story sounded
rather thin?"

"No. Only, well, a six-mile stroll
in the rain—and at midnight—and turning up inside the house like that—"

"You thought I might be little Herbert's brother?"

Alison laughed. "No! I didn't suspect you like that. But I thought you mightn't want to tell me really
who you were and what you were doing there."

"What do you think I was doing?"

"I don't know, quite," she admitted. "I thought perhaps it might really be your house."

"Mine? Good Lord, no!" He laughed. "I give you my word it isn't. I've never seen it in my life before."

"Oh, I believe you now." That was true. She didn't really doubt
him. "Only it seemed such luck,
your coming at the right minute like that. You know, it was luck!" She felt almost awed now, when she looked back, at the sheer chance
of it.

"As you say, it was—luck." There was a note in his voice that made Alison turn pink. "I've been thinking about it all night."

"About?"

"My coming in like that. You see,
I wasn't certain—I thought it was a bit rash and very nearly changed
my mind." He was speaking rather earnestly now, his eyes on the road,
his face set. "I looked twice at the window and wondered whether I'd chance it; and there was your light
up in the bathroom."

"But—but if you saw me get in at the window, how could you see my light?" Alison was puzzled. "I mean, I'd been in the house quite a long time, more than twenty minutes, before I went to the bathroom."

"Had you? Then it wasn't you I saw getting in. It must've been—"

"Little Herbert?"

"That's about it," he agreed.
"You see, all I saw was a dark shape getting in at the window. So I thought I'd have a look, but your light was on and I hesitated a bit
and then suddenly your light went out, so I thought I'd investigate
to me, and of course I thought it was you I'd seen and—well—"

Alison, listening to this confused
statement, thought it a most lucid,
clever account of the circumstances.
She agreed at once.

"I see! I don't know what I should've done if you hadn't come in!" She looked at the grey road winding up under the car thinking
"I'm glad, oh, so glad, he didn't and added, aloud, "I couldn't have held
the door and he'd have caught me
before I got out of the window."

"You think he meant to catch
you?" Guy asked doubtfully.

"I'm sure he did," said Alison simply. "I can't tell you why only
when he looked through the door,
I'd a sort of feeling that he was looking for me—that he'd meant to

mean, I'd been in the house quite a

SYNOPSIS: Alison Rede has gone alone to a lonely house
house in response to a telegram from her father. But Mr. Rede does not show up; instead, Alison is attacked by a half-wild man, and handsome one, and who is a driving back to London with the latter. His name is Guy Western.
He says, But there is some question
in Alison's mind as to his having been so conveniently near when she was running from her assailant.

Chapter 11 THE MOVERS

"PIG!" said Alison, "I shan't speak
to you again till you take that back."

"Which?"

"Every bit of it."

"I take it back. You are at least thirty-two, a ruthless, hard-bitten female. You remind me of a nurse I knew once, who lost all her patients,
because the mere sight of her made them expire. By the way, are you married?"

Alison met his twinkling eyes,
that had two dancing blue imp in
them and said laughingly, "Of course
I am. To my fourth husband."

"Any family?"

"Ten."

"Not bad!"

They both laughed together.

"Are you married?" she asked.

"Met a burglar's life is too unsettled."

"And an architect's?"

"Too badly paid!"

"Then you've only you and Gaffer?"

"That's all. And you?"

"Only father and myself. Until now," Alison added, with a little twinge of sadness.

"Oh, yes. You told me. Your father's getting remarried. Do you like her?"

"I haven't met her yet."

He said nothing, yet she could feel that he understood. When he spoke again it was to ask, "You said
your father'd retired. What is he?
In business?"

"No. He is a major in the Roans."

"Roans?" He repeated it with a slightly puzzled air.

"Yes. He didn't want to go on in it after my mother died. I suppose he wanted to break with everything, anyway, he retired. And as he'd enough money, he just traveled about with me, in the holidays, and alone when I was at school."

"I see." He turned to her suddenly. "You know, it is funny about his sending you that wire and then not turning up. It must have been the wrong house."

"I'm sure it must. You'd think it far more weird if you knew him,"
said Alison. "Father's a darling, an absolute pet, but he's awfully fussy over me. This is the first time he's ever let me come home alone. As a rule, he's come to fetch me. And when he couldn't, because he was ill, he got someone to meet me at Dover. He's got the most obsolete ideas on chaperones and things."

"You don't think," Guy began.

"No!" Alison answered the unspoken words. "I don't see what else
we could do, do you? I mean, if we'd gone into Warley I'd have made it much worse, really turning up in the middle of the night together,
wouldn't it?"

"I thought so, anyway."

"This way, no one need know."

"Except your father."

"M-m-m. Yes, of course. I suppose I ought to tell him."

"I must," he corrected quickly.

"Why? If one's going to it, it's me."

"I'd rather do it myself, if you don't mind."

"Why?" Puzzled, she asked point blank.

"Because if he objects, he can start kicking me."

She said wonderingly, "Was that
why you wanted to drive me back?"

"One of the reasons."

Alison did not ask for the others;
she could guess at least one. She said instead, "Do you think we need
tell him?"

"I do!"

"I know. But—well, he's frightenedly funny and old-fashioned over some things. He won't even let me go about alone when we're abroad."

"You think he'd be angry?"

"No. It's not that," said Alison quickly. "It's the other way. I'm afraid he'd worry and be upset about me, quite unnecessarily. He wouldn't realize that I wasn't nervous and felt perfectly safe and happy with—"

she stopped short.

"With?"

"With you."

"Thank you." He said that rather gravely and as though he meant it.
And they were both silent, each very occupied with their own thoughts.

"Oh, look!" Alison pointed. A shiny yellow uniform had appeared

over the brow of the next hill, an AA man on a bicycle. Guy braked and slid up beside the man.

"I say, where's the nearest telephone box?"

The man stared at them in surprise.

"Why, you must've just passed
one, sir!"

"Far back?"

"Oh, no sir. About half a mile.
And if that's not working, there's another two miles back at the cross roads."

"Thanks."

They swung the car and turned back. Guy did not look at Alison and said nothing. Half a mile back along the way that they had come,
placed prominently by the side of the road and very visible, was a bright blue telephone box. He drew up by it. Alison looked at him; he looked at Alison. They both began to laugh.

ABOUT an hour later a long grey furniture remover's van pulled up at the gate of the house on the downs which they had left.

"This'll be the place, Bob," said
the driver, a long thin man with a mournful blue eye.

HIGH WINS FINAL GAME OF SEASON

Ed. Wells, ace pitcher for the local High, yesterday brought his number of games won this season to ten. This was his last appearance in High School ball. Striking out ten men, Wells held Morehead to fourteen scattered hits.

Stevens started on the mound for Morehead. He struck out five men and allowed ten hits in seven innings.

The Greensies were held scoreless until the fourth inning. After two men were out, the locals started a batting rally and scored twelve runs. Two more runs were scored in the fifth.

Jack Forbes led the Greensies in batting by getting a home run, a double and two singles. Wilkerson obtained a triple and single out of four tries. Minges got two for three. For Morehead, Bonnerville, with three singles, led the club.

Winterville Falls Before Kiwanis Club

Beginning a series of games to be played with county high school teams as a feature of the commencement season, Greenville Kiwanians defeated Winterville High by the score of 12 to 7 at Winterville yesterday afternoon.

Monday, May 13, the Kiwanians will play Grimsland at Grimsland, and on Friday, May 17, they will play Bethel at Bethel. Bethel is a week later with commencement this year than the remainder of the schools by reason of a broken boiler, which necessitated several days' suspension during mid-winter.

The pitching of Donald Conley of the Kiwanians, was the feature of yesterday's affair, along with the batting of Jimmy Barrett, Kiwanis third-sacker.

Conley allowed the high school boys only three hits and three runs during the six innings he was on the mound. He retired at that stage in behalf of Worthington who allowed four runs and five hits during the remainder of the game.

Although several members of the Kiwanis club accounted for two hits each, Barrett's triple was the feature of the batting attack. He also was credited with a sizeable single.

Hobgood, Nobles and Poede were used by Winterville in an effort to silence the bats of the visitors who accounted for runs in every inning except the first two, sixth seventh and ninth. Waters was on the receiving end for Winterville and Red-buck for Greenville.

The Kiwanians accounted for a total of 16 hits and Winterville eight.

Each club was charged with three bobbles, but in spite of these playing at times was of the all-right variety.

OAK RIDGE PLAYS HERE

Due to the fact that the Oak Ridge baseball team wishes to return home the day of the game, the college officials have found it necessary to change the time of the game from 3:30 o'clock as previously announced, to 3 o'clock. This game will be the last home game of the season for the local club. On Saturday, May 18, the Pirates will play Atlantic Christian College in Winston in the last game of the current season. Roger Taylor, a former Greenville High School baseball player, is likely to do the hurrying for Colonel Holt's boys. Crack Rogers will pitch for the Pirates. So far this season Rogers has won five games in as many starts. This is his first year of college ball. Two members of the Pirates have signed with the Greenville entry in the Coastal Plain League this summer. Runt Bostic one of the men who has been signed with the Greenville club, is leading the local club at the bat. A little more to press he is hitting .463. Stowe, centerfield, the other player who has signed with Greenville, is hitting .337. The whole team is averaging .320.

The game Saturday will be played at the college field at 3 o'clock.

Reflecting Sports

By
Wm. WATSON MORGAN

A coach or manager cannot always be assured that his every move will be a wise one, nor is he sure that it will always meet the fans' approval. All that he can do is make his move, and say a little prayer, hoping that it will click. A good example of the above is Connie Mack of the Athletics.

When Mr. Mack decided to change Fox from first and make a catcher out of him, he felt that the move would help the team, and that Fox would make a first-rate catcher. Practically all of the wise critics along the baseball firing line did not hesitate to predict a very bad move for Connie. They thought that it was not treating Fox on the up and up, his playing days would be shortened; they doubted that after these many years' playing first base, that Fox would succeed as a catcher.

Anyone that has seen Fox work this season is willing to admit that Jimmy is doing about the best job of receiving that may be seen any place in this dear old U. S. A. of ours.

Bob Considine, writing in the Washington Herald, has this to say about Fox: "Fox has more to recommend him than the sturdiest throwing arm the game has ever seen. He is instinctively a great receiver. The way he tears that mask off and starts after difficult foul flies fairly hits you with the realization that every great catcher must have. The way he handles those unfinished Athletic pitchers is a joy to behold. . . . and what a mark that baby is with his 5 foot 11 inches of height and 190 pounds. Nothing has gotten by him this year, and by the way he looks, nothing will. . . . he is by once a superb first baseman, and elegant second baseman and shortstop, and unbeatable third baseman, and an outfielder any team would sell the stadium to get. In Japan he pitched a little and showed a speed ball that was untouchable. And now he has become the game's greatest catcher, a man whose ability annihilates the industry's time standards of greatness. If he could only hit!"

Prestige Of Soviet Air Fleet Built up By Official Secrecy

By JOHN LLOYD

Moscow. —(AP)—One of the most highly rated factors in the European arms situation—the Soviet Union air force—remains, with the nations, considerable of a mystery. Foreign air attaches can estimate its size only roughly. The public knows no details of its strength. Yet the wings of Red Russia inspire respect and in some quarters forebodings.

The one well-known fact about the fleet does not detract from its prestige. The fact is that the Soviets have been concentrating for years on developing their might in the skies. Where power to direct the whole activity of a people is vested in the state, the state can be expected to obtain appreciable results.

Impressive Shows Staged
Lest anyone doubt that results have really been obtained, Soviet leaders every now and then drop pointed hits. They say just enough to excite the imagination, stir popular pride and keep the rating high. On the rare occasions when the air forces is on display they stage an impressive show.

For the rest, factory doors are closed, access to military hangars is had by the select law and precise figures are never made public. He who goes in search of data on the red air force finds in the end that he can do no more than average up estimates and guesses.

The average places the total number of machines at more than 2,000—possibly 2,500. A last, light fighting plane, of which some 300 are believed to be in service, is the force's most efficient known weapon. Bombers are thought to total 600 or more. There is a great supply of reconnaissance machines, serviceable but reputedly slow.

Mass production facilities are as much a mystery as the fleet itself.

There is no doubt that they have been developed to a respectable extent, but only rough guesses can be made as to the number of ships that can be turned out and how soon emergency production could get into swing.

Motor Production Vital
Parties interested in the subject ease their doubts not on the Russians' ability to produce the planes themselves, but on facilities for mass production of motors. Official secrecy being what it is, however, they do not exclude possibility of surprise.

Although a large number of machines are concentrated in the far lieve—the bulk of the force remains east—200 at least, observers believe where it could be quickly brought in to play on the European front.

Announcement was made recently that Soviet experts had succeeded in adapting ordinary automobile motors for powering planes. Planes to run on such motors can be manufactured and operated cheaply, it was stated, but their speed would be limited to about seventy miles an hour. Their principal value would be for training.

Parachute jumping and stratosphere flying are two fields in which the Bolsheviks experiment constantly. The State has sponsored tests of rocket motors, which Soviet scientists think eventually will prove the proper means of propulsion above the atmosphere.

Shaw Choral Club
Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C., Sunday, May 12th, 1935, 8:30 p. m. Will sing at the Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, Colored, Corner Green and First Streets, Rev. J. A. Nimmo, pastor.

A special invitation is extended to the general public who are lovers of music to hear this colored group of singers who has toured some of the biggest cities both North and South and has sung to the joy of both white and colored.

So we urge our white friends who would appreciate a musical program rendered by this group of colored trained singers, to be present.

Reserved seats will be arranged for our white friends.

J. A. Nimmo, Pastor.

Swedes Protest State Monopolies
Stockholm. —(AP)—More than 100,000 persons have signed protests against the announced program of Sweden's socialist government for introduction of further State monopolies, notably on tobacco and gasoline.

During the 1934 season, the salmon industry of Alaska paid $2,712,336.75 to resident cannery workers and fishermen.

Another Solid Carload ELECTROLUX Kerosene Operated Refrigerator Just Received Act Quickly—See Them Today

NO MATTER where you live, you can now enjoy every advantage that has made Electrolux the finest refrigerator for city homes and apartments. This rural Electrolux operates on kerosene. . . . brings you perfect refrigeration, plenty of ice cubes, day in and day out, with practically no attention.

Amazingly Low Cost to Run!

And just think! A five-gallon filling of kerosene runs this ideal modern refrigerator for a week or more! Owners report their Electrolux running for little more than 3¢ a day.

No Moving Parts. . . No Water!

The secret of the Electrolux's famous economy is its utter simplicity. Electrolux operates without a single moving part! The heat from a wireless glow-type burner circulates the refrigerant, which is cooled by ordinary air. Electrolux uses no water.

Silent, and Saves on Repairs!

And the simplicity of Electrolux brings you other advantages! Absence of moving parts means permanent silence. And it means, as well, a real saving on repairs, for parts that do not move cannot wear.

Now Enjoyed by 500,000 City Families

Remember, the Kerosene Electrolux is the same in every important respect as the beautiful refrigerators now in use in 500,000 fine city homes and apartments.

New York Cotton

New York, May 10.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady, one higher to three lower with trade buying off by liquidation and foreign selling.

Trading was low and a fair part of it consisted of further liquidation of old crop positions against purchases of the new at narrowing differences which caused moderate declines. July sold off from 1196 to 1191 and December from 1180 to 1177 with prices about three points net lower and the end of the first half hour.

The market eased to net losses of 7 to 11 points later in the morning. However, by midday July had recovered from 1187 to 1191 and December from 1174 to 1179 with the general market ruling about 2 to 7 points net lower.

The market advanced in the last hour. Futures closed steady, unchanged to 10 points higher. Spots were steady.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, May 10.—(AP)—The stock market rested while into the rally part of today's session, absorbed moderate realizations without a perceptible struggle and then continued on its way to higher territory.

Bullish forces seemed to have the upper hand throughout the greater part of the day's procedure. Rating advances were the rule in the equity groups. Mining issues were given a run for a brief period and then utilities were taken in hand for an active upturn. Scattered specialties also pushed forward easily.

Grains were unimpressive and cotton was subjected to profit taking a gain after a sharp spurt yesterday. Bonds exhibited no certain trend. United States Government Bonds were inclined to ease. Foreign exchanges were narrow.

vote on third reading was 18 to 17 and the house quickly concurred in the upper branch changes.

The state textbook rental bill for schools which carries $1,500,000 appropriations to finance it was passed by the senate and the house concurred in the few changes that had been made.

The Senate approved the appropriation of $500,000 to be raised by a bond issue for construction of new buildings at the Caswell Train School at Kinston and the Hospitals for the Insane at Raleigh, Goldsboro and Morganton.

The House has already passed it.

The Spence bill to allow the manufacture and sale of brandies in Moore County was defeated 22 to 12 on third reading today by the Senate by Spence changed his vote and planned to move for reconsideration. Effort to apply the legislative clinches to the adverse vote failed.

The Senate passed and sent to the House a measure that would allow merchants five per cent discount from sales taxes if they pay their accounts to the State by the 15th of each month.

The Senate also approved and sent to the House the Cohn bill to allow the advertising in North Carolina of all alcoholic beverages declared legal under the State statute.

The House concurred in a Senate amendment to several of the Public Works Administration bills and they will become law upon ratification.

Sundown Stories

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"WELL," said the little man Willy Nilly to his animal friends of Puddle Muddle, "I haven't the backbone of a dandelion top if I don't begin the work of attending to my ears without delay."

"We'll help you," said Jelly Bear. "We'll see that there is nothing else you have to do."

"I'll not get into any trouble, how-wow," barked Rip.

"I'll even keep out of mischief,"

cawed Christopher Columbus Crow, "and that is indeed noble of me when you think of all the planting that is about to be done."

"It would be even nobler if you acted on that without saying so," crowed Top Notch, the rooster, in his practical fashion.

"Now Top Notch, don't demand too much of me," cawed Christopher.

"I know better than that," cackled Top Notch.

"At least I don't waste time looking at myself in a mirror as you do," Christopher returned.

"It would be a waste of time for you to do such a thing," crowed Top Notch. "You're not handsome as I am."

"Handsome is as handsome does," said Christopher.

"I thought at least you were original," said Top Notch scornfully.

"I discover things. I've just heard something none of you has heard. Listen!"

"By all my great ancestors of bears!" growled Jelly Bear. "Can it be that I heard Indians?"

"We must be mistaken," said Willy Nilly as he put his hands back of his pointed ears so he could hear better.

Tey provide a set-up to make more speedy loan applications to State cities and counties for PWA funds.

The upper branch approved the house measure that would provide Woodrow Wilson Shropshire and Robert Barnes, negro convicts with artificial limbs and permanent jobs.

The two negroes were forced to have their feet amputated at central prison here after they had been allegedly been inhumanely treated at a Mecklenburg prison camp.

The revenue machinery act was passed as the house concurred in senate amendments. The state game law was approved by the senate which accepted house changes. Both will become law when ratified. Both branches of the assembly recessed to hold afternoon sessions.

The World of Stamps

By QUINTON JAMES

Canada's jubilee issue, to appear simultaneously with 40 or more cents by other divisions of the British empire in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the reign of King George and Queen Mary, will be made up of six values.

Three generations of the royal house of England comprise part of the illustrative motif, starting with Princess Elizabeth, granddaughter of the king and queen, on the 1-cent value, while the king and queen, in full royal robes, are placed on the larger 3-cent. The 5-cent bears a portrait of the bachelor heir to the throne, the Princess of Wales.

The two remaining values are pictorial, with a view of Windsor castle on the 10 and the royal yacht the Britannia, on the 13.

Each stamp has one or more of the familiar maple leaves of Canadian postage paper and each is dated 1910-1935. Three of the denominations, 1, 2 and 5, are of ordinary size, while the other three are larger, with the drawings placed horizontally. Announcement from the Canadian postal authorities say that the first day sale is to take place May 4.

Salvador Sports

In keeping with the reason for the issue, athletes in action form the principal design of the set prepared by Salvador in connection with the third Central American Olympic games. Two types, one for regular postage and the other for airmail have been printed.

Each of the ordinary postal values, going from 5 to 47 centavos, show a discus thrower just as he is ready to hurl the weight. He poses in the exact center, against a background blending from almost white to the darkest shade of the colors signifying the various denominations.

In addition to these five stamps.

there are five airmails, 15 centavos to 1 colon. In this case the central figure is a runner breaking the tape while high overhead is an airplane with retractable landing gear. The frame is made up of scroll work and descriptive matter.

Collectors Act

There is at least one instance on record where collectors reached the conclusion that too many postage stamps were being issued. That decision resulted in the formation of an organization labeled the Society for the Suppression of Superfluous Stamps. It gained considerable attention for a few years after 1895.

It boycotted the companion issues of Portugal and its colony, Azores of 1895, commemorating the seventh centenary of the birth of St. Anthony of Padua.

Cost Or Living

Seen As Threat

To Gold Franc

Paris.—(AP)—Prices in France, higher than in any other country except Soviet Russia, are still in the stratosphere despite governmental efforts to bring them down to the level of consumers' pocketbooks.

The high cost of living has been one of the major arguments of a small but active group of inflationists headed by Paul Reynaud, who insists that only devaluation of the franc will bring back tourists and prosperity to France.

But the government, inclined to fight shy of cure-alls, tried to attack the evils at its roots. When Gaston Doumergue headed the national trust government of 1934, he promised relief from high prices and delegated Edouard Herriot and Andre Tardieu to study the question.

Bread Prices Slashed

Both former premiers handed in voluminous reports, but no appreciable dent in prices resulted.

Premier Flandin within a month after he assumed office, reduced bread prices by 15 per cent, bringing bread down from one franc to 85 centimes a pound.

But Flandin's opponents claim that this was only a dry bone thrown to the dog. They say comparisons of French and American retail prices reveal the advantage of a devalued currency and a managed internal economy.

A pound of butter can be bought in Chicago for the same money it takes to buy a half-pound in Paris.

Tariff Affects Coffee

Milk prices in both countries are about the same, but French dairies do not guarantee pasteurized milk. French cheese is 200 to 300 per cent higher than American.

Coffee, tea and cocoa, commodities imported in both France and America, are usually twice as high in France because of high tariffs.

One factor responsible for high price of fresh meat in France is the culinary difference between French and American housewives. French women buy only what they consider the "best" cuts and make little use of inferior cuts for stews and pies.

Romance of Exiles

Unite Royal Houses

By ADELAIDE KERR

Paris.—(AP)—A romance of vanished thrones has linked two royal exiles—one a princess who descends from Sicilian kings, the other heir of the former king of Spain.

The engagement, pairing Princess Marie del as Mercedes de Bourbon Orleans and the Infante Juan, youngest living son of Alfonso XIII, unites a princely pair whose family branches run into at least four countries which have banished their kings.

Carlos de Bourbon, son of the Prince and Princess of Caserta de Bourbon de Sicilies. So she descends from the kings of the Two Sicilies, who reigned in the Mediterranean island until Garibaldi broke things up and the people voted to be annexed to Italy.

Her father first married the sister of former King Alfonso XIII (who is her prospective father-in-law) and with that marriage was created Infante of Spain.

After her death he married the young bride's mother, Princess Louis of Orleans, who is a sister of the Duchesse de Guise, wife of the pretender to the throne of France and of former Queen Amalie of Portugal, mother of the late dethroned King Manuel.

A Convent-Bred Princess

The princess was born in Madrid, December 23, 1910, and in the convent of the Spanish capital and Seville learned to sew, do her sums and speak the various languages which are taught every European princess. When the Spanish revolution sent monarchists flying into exile, her family came to Paris. She loves to swim, play golf and tennis and is interested in art.

Her dashing fiancé is the "apple" of Spanish royalists' eyes. He is the youngest living son of Alfonso XIII of Spain, but the marriage of his two elder brothers to women not of royal rank, caused them to relinquish their rights of succession and left him heir to the throne.

The Infante, born June 30, 1913 is two and a half years younger than his prospective bride.
