RIVER PROJECT MEETING HELD YESTERDAY

Sponsors Optimistic As to Possible Outcome of Washington Hearing

The Tar River Committee, together with several other members of the Eastern North Carolina Association who are interested in the development of Tar River from Washington to Greenville, met yesterday afternoon in the directors' room of the State Bank and Trust Company, and after hearing a detailed report by S. P. Dickenson, Secretary of the Association as to the progress already made in the preparation of the tonnage and other data, discussed and agreed upon procedure in connection with the hearing upon appeal before the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors to be held at Washington shortly after June 1st. Among those present were C. W. Howard, J. H. Blount, John Mitchell, L. A. Stroud, Mrs. J. B. Spillman, Julian White, F. W. Brown and Vernon Parrish. Former State Senator Askew of Bertie County and now a member of the Department of Conservation and Development attended the meeting to hear the discussion and because he is interested in an movement to develop the section of the state.

While the District Engineers report was unfavorable the Committee and others are enthusiastic about the possibilities before the Board, especially under present condition and due to the fact that the development would put several hundred men on the payrolls of a worthwhile project. The Engineer did not question the tonnage figures put in at the original hearing but the record did not show that the waterway would be used should it be developed. At the hearing in Washington all figures put in the record will be supported by competent evidence as to tonnage and savings. The Association has been and now is busy on this work, but in order to assure success it must have the cooperation of those in the section. This development would mean more to Pitt County than any other one thing that could be brought about. The Committee expects approximately fifty interested parties to attend the hearing in Washington, the exact date of which has not been set but will be shortly after June 1st.

Over 45 Miles Is Reckless Driving

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, May 22.—There is no such thing as speeding or a penalty for speeding in the new highway laws as revised by the recent general assembly, Captain Charles D. Farmer of the State Highway Patrol pointed out today. But whenever a motorist exceeds 45 miles an hour, he is subject to arrest for reckless driving, the new law provides. If convicted, the driver is subject to the much heavier penalty.

"This change in the law means that no one can any longer be charged with speeding under the state laws, but that any driver who exceeds 45 miles an hour will be subject to the penalties for reckless driving which are much more severe than the former penalty for speeding," Captain Farmer said.

HUGE KING RANCH IS SLOWLY DIVIDED FOR HEIRS AND OIL

Brownsville, Tex. (AP)—A 90-year-old empire of cattle and range—the King ranch, known as the largest private property in the world—faces a double threat against its existence.

In the natural procession of heirs, the huge estate of the rugged ship captain, Richard King, who began to found the empire in 1846, slowly is being divided. And as oil derricks begin to dot the grasslands of the lower Rio Grande valley, the domain once reserved for cattle herds is changing.

At its peak, early in the present century, the King ranch reached its maximum area of about 1,500,000 acres. It contained an estimated 1,250,000 acres at the time of the division among heirs this year.

Oil rights on the ranch have been going company for a sum said to be $5,000,000.

PART OF WORK RELIEF JOBS APPROVED

President Roosevelt Approves Projects For About Fourth of Fund

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—Recommendations of the allotment board for the spending of the first billion dollars under the four billion dollar work relief program were approved today by President Roosevelt.

The president reported today at his press conference that he hoped to have the program in full operation by about November 1. Meanwhile he had started study of projects that may be undertaken which do not come within the mandatory class specified by Congress. From one-fourth to one-half of the four billion dollars has been earmarked by Congress including some projects costing much such as highway construction and grade crossing elimination.

Mr. Roosevelt and his three principal aids, Frank Walker, Secretary of the Interior, and Harry L. Hopkins, Secretary of Labor, conferred at length last night on the problems of finding somewhat cheaper projects.

DRUNK DRIVING ON INCREASE IN THE STATE

"More and More Drunken Drivers Under Prohibition" Says Farmer

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, May 22.—Drunken driving is steadily increasing in the state, judging from the number of arrests being made by the state highway patrol, in spite of the state prohibition law, Captain Charles D. Farmer of the patrol said today. There were 154 arrests for drunken driving made by the patrol in April, the largest number on record for any one month, Capt. Farmer pointed out. In March 100 arrests were made for drunken driving and in February 120 woody drivers were arrested.

No reports have yet been received as to the number of arrests made of drunken drivers so far in May, but indications are that there has been just as much if not more drunken driving this month as in April.

"As long as we try to keep so-called prohibition in effect in the state," he said.

HITLER OFFERS NO NEW HOPE WORLD PEACE

Some View Statements as Play For Time to Complete Rearmament

(Copyright By Associated Press)
Berlin, May 22.—(AP)—While enthusiastic Nazis exclaimed the peace gestures if Reichsfuhrer Hitler's Reichstag address some skeptical foreign diplomats saw in it today the promise of an unprecedented rearmament race. Germans openly found no conflict between their Reichsfuhrer's declaration to the Reichstag of the country's needs and will peace and the promulgation a few hours later of a conscription program making possible the largest peacetime army in the nation's history.

In diplomatic and other circles, however, the opinions heard were that Hitler offered nothing tangible toward the international peace cause except an attempt to justify his course. The motive of trying to allay foreign apprehension to gain sufficient time for the fulfillment of his armed plan was laid to Hitler by some.

Among the features of the address regarded as usual were:

1. Its rejection of the idea of national assimilation in the face of continued harping by Nazi controlled press on the fact that thousands of Germans lived beyond the borders of the fatherland.
2. Its opposition to pacts of mutual assistance.
3. Its obvious attempt to placate Italy, France, and Austria while bickering at Russia.
4. Its expressed interest in the preservation of the Locarno treaty.

Soon after Hitler completed his speech at the Kroll opera house, it required two hours and 14 minutes to deliver it—the government issued a law to compel all German males between 18 and 45 years of age to serve one year in the army. The decree provided that during war every German man and woman would be obligated to serve the fatherland.

CITY SCHOOL FINALS START NEXT FRIDAY

Commencement Program Will End With Graduating Exercises Monday Night

The 1935 commencement of the Greenville High School will get under way Friday evening of this week with a presentation of the annual senior play, entitled "Wait For Me." The sermon to the 1935 graduates will be preached Sunday evening, May 26, in the High School auditorium by the Reverend W. W. Wicker, Rector of the St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Greenville.

On Monday morning, May 27, the graduates of the 7th grade will be received into the High School. The closing event of the commencement season will take place Monday evening, May 27, in the Campus building of East Carolina Teachers College. At this time, the annual address will be delivered by Mr. Julian Miller, editor of the Charlotte Observer. Charlotte, N. C., and one of the outstanding speakers of North Carolina. Following the address of Mr. Miller, will come the delivery of diplomas to the graduates by Mr. James L. Little, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Greenville City Schools.

The graduating class this year is one of the largest in the history of the High School, numbering 85. The class would have numbered more than 90 this year, except for the fact that some of its members elected to take a 5th year in High School because of the fact that in recent years, the Greenville High School has offered only eight months of school. This present senior class is one of the best, classes the local High School has ever turned out. Its president is Sam Dees.

The Senior play is being coached by Mrs. Coleman of the High School faculty. This play is a delightful comedy, and will afford the audience much merriment.

One feature of the graduation exercises of the 7th grades this year is the fact that the 7th grade graduates will be received into the High School by the 11th grade graduates with appropriate ceremonies, Monday morning.

Miss Shindler and Mr. McDougle, of the music department of the schools, have prepared excellent music for the various occasions.

ROOSEVELT REFUSES BONUS PLEA

ENGLAND WILL INCREASE HER AIR STRENGTH

Will Increase Fighting Force in The Air To Fifteen Hundred Planes

London, May 22.—(AP)—Stanley Baldwin announced to the House of Commons today that Great Britain will increase her first line air strength to a total of 1,500 planes in order to obtain parity with Germany and France.

This figure is to be compared to the actual military strength today of 580 airplanes exclusive of the navy's air arms.

The House of Commons was packed for the announcement with a large number of foreign diplomats and military observers joining the house members as auditors. Baldwin told them that Great Britain would proceed with its aviation expansion with all possible speed.

"Everything now requisite for this expansion is under consideration and will be put in hand immediately," he declared. "In this expansion it is hoped there will be no profiteering in a time of what I might call an emergency. In what the government is doing there is no occasion for panic," he said.

CONVICT-EVANGELIST DIES OF GUN WOUNDS

Tarboro, May 22.—(AP)—The body of Buddy Monk, formerly a convict in a prison in Pennsylvania and who recently had been an evangelist in this section, was taken to Wilmington today for burial following his death yesterday after being shot during a quarrel by Luther Harris of Tarboro.

Harris is in jail charged with murder. He said Monk attempted to "rush" him May 16 near here and that the shooting followed. Before Monk died, he told officers he and Harris had quarreled, and that Harris shot him in the stomach with a shotgun before he could defend himself.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News.

By RAY TUCKER.

FORECAST: Political, lowdown in the cheapest commodity in Washington. Free-wheeling scouts regularly fill the party coffers with unsought ruin. Some advise the President to turn to the right, some to shift far to the left, some to steer a middle course.

But a grass-roots analysis of sentiment in sixteen western states furnishes fascinating spring reading for Messrs. Farley and Hurla. It makes four observations: (1) People follow Huey Long in the headlines but they won't follow him to the polls. (2) Father Coughlin commands widespread respect and sympathy. (3) The President still fires popular imagination but the voters demand results instead of promises. (4) Roosevelt should win next year on the basis of current conditions but it will be due to lack of formidable opposition rather than to his accomplishments.

High-up advisers draw differing conclusions according to their prejudices. Brain trusters urge upon Mr. Roosevelt an even more liberal policy. Politicians like Roper think he should not forget how the conservative half lives—and votes.

TO HOLD MEET TO DECIDE ON REFERENDUM

Board To Discuss Election Call at Special Meeting Next Wednesday

An official call for a special meeting of the board of county commissioners for next Wednesday at 10 o'clock to consider the question of calling an election in this county on the legalization of whiskey was issued this morning by Roy T. Cox, chairman of the board. The board of commissioners of 17 eastern North Carolina counties were authorized by the last legislature to call elections on the subject after holding a public meeting on the matter for which at least six days notice had been given.

This morning's call by Chairman Cox for the meeting next week was said to have been the result of petitions requesting the board to call an election in this county.

In the official notice of the meeting issued today the citizens of the county are invited to be present at the meeting and express their wishes as to whether or not the election should be called.

MAY ATTEMPT TO PREVENT ELECTIONS

United Drys Expected To Seek Injunctions Against Liquor Referendums

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, May 22.—Cale K. Burgess, executive vice president, political strategist and lobbyist for the United Dry Forces who several days ago announced he would make a statement today as to the plans of his organization to prevent the holding of liquor elections in the 17 counties and two townships permitted to hold elections under the recent laws enacted by the general assembly, said today that he had decided not to make any announcement, at least for the time being. When asked when he would have a statement to make he said:

"I don't know. I will call you when I decide to make one."

Despite the failure of Burgess to issue any statement today as he had indicated he would, it is still believed that Burgess and the United Drys will still do what Burgess has "informally" indicated they would do, namely, seek to prevent the holding of every liquor election in every county that calls one by seeking an injunction, and then carry a test case to the State Supreme Court to test the constitutionality of the new laws which permit these county elections on the establishment of county liquor stores. The drys are already confident that these new laws are unconstitutional and that the supreme court will hold them null and void.

The liberal drys, however, are convinced that these 17 counties and two townships have the right to vote on whether or not they want to continue under the old Turlington Act or set up county liquor stores and county liquor control systems and that the general assembly acted within its power when it passed these laws giving these counties this right.

It is expected that whatever moves are made by Burgess and the United Drys to block the holding of the county liquor elections and to test the validity of the new laws will be made by indirect rather than out in the open, according to observers here. This is believed to be one of the reasons why Burgess has so far declined to reveal any of their plans.

CONVICTS USE ALL SCHEMES TO AVOID WORK

Getting on Sick List Seems to be Chief Occupation of State Prisoners

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, May 22.—Prisoners in the state prison system use almost every conceivable means to keep from having to work and frequently either pretend to be sick or actually infect themselves in order to keep from working, Chairman Capus M. Waynick of the State Highway and Public Works Commission said today. Within the last week or so nine prisoners were brought all the way from Asheville to Raleigh because they claimed their eyes were bad and needed treatment. When examined by Prison Physician George S. Coleman and an eye specialist here, it was found that nothing whatever was the matter with the eyes of any of the nine.

"These prisoners had just been faking in order to keep from having to work," Waynick said. "So in addition to losing the work of those men for several days and probably for several weeks, the prison division was put to the expense of transporting these nine prisoners all the way from Asheville to Raleigh and back for nothing. Yet some people think we are too hard on the prisoners and that they should be treated with 'gentleness and kindness.' Most of them are a hard lot and have to be handled under hard rules and regulations. They have to be made to realize that they are in prison and not attending a pink tea."

In order to keep from working prisoners smoke cigarettes in which they put crushed aspirin tablets, and are sent to the prison infirmary, Dr. Coleman says. They also smoke cigarettes treated with iodine, which affects their nervous systems and make them very nervous. Still other prisoners (Continued On Page Five)

PITT JURORS GO TO HYDE COUNTY TODAY

Special Venire of 50 Men Called For Jury Duty in Eastern County

Fifty Pitt County citizens left here today for Swan Quarter, county seat of Hyde county, to which place they had been ordered for jury duty in connection with a murder trial to be started in that county this afternoon. The special venire from this county was called after it had been declared that because the case had been so widely discussed in both Hyde and Beaufort counties that it would be impossible to select an impartial jury from either of those counties.

Pittsburgh, Cal. The brakes had sooped the car so quickly that a 10-ton weight in the back smashed through the driver's cab.

House Quickly Overrides Veto With Larger Vote Than On First Passage

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—Planting President Roosevelt's personal warning that the Patman $2,200,000,000 bonus bill would have "disastrous consequences" the House thundered its necessary two-thirds over the veto today. The vote was 322 to 98. The vote by which the Patman bill was passed in March was 318 to 90.

"On this vote," said Speaker Byrns a while later, "the ayes are 322 and the nays 90." Cheers and hand claps interrupted him. He finally concluded "the two-thirds having voted the affirmative the bill is passed, the President's objection notwithstanding."

The House proceeded to other pending business.

Democratic leaders in the Senate planned an effort to fix a time for a vote when it received the bill an hour later. Several speeches were in prospect with a possibility of the vote going over until tomorrow. The administration was counting on a few votes margin in the Senate to sustain the Roosevelt objection. Should the Senate refuse the necessary two-thirds early work on a compromise for a partial bonus payment is expected.

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—President Roosevelt warned Congress in vetoing the Patman bonus bill today that if enacted into law it would invite an ultimate reckoning in uncontrolled prices and destruction of the value of savings. Such a result, he declared in his unprecedented message he read to the House and Senate, will strike most cruelly those like the veterans who seem to be temporarily benefited. "The first person injured by the skyrocketing prices is the man on a fixed income. Every disabled veteran on pension or allowance is on a fixed income. This bill robs the able-bodied veteran at the expense of the disabled veteran. Wealth is not created nor is it more equitably distributed by the method," he said. "A government, like an individual, must ultimately meet its legitimate obligations out of the production of wealth by the labor of human beings applied to the resources of nature."

"Every country that has attempted this form in meeting its obligations as is here provided, has suffered disastrous consequences."

Mr. Roosevelt declared that the benefits which had been given the veterans might be measured by the fact that $7,800,000 had been spent in their behalf up to the end of the last fiscal year not including the amounts received by those on relief. He spoke of liberal legislation for disability and death compensation by which 11,140,000 men and women had been benefited. Generous provisions have been made for hospitalization, vocational training and rehabilitation of the veterans, he said.

He said to pay the soldiers' bonus with new money under the Patman plan would mean paying $1,600,000 more than the present value of the soldiers' adjusted compensation certificates.

"It is a new straight gratuity or bounty to the amount of $1,600,000," he said. "It destroys the insurance protection for dependents of the veterans provided in the original plan. For the remaining ten years period they will have lost their insurance. This proposal, I submit, violates the entire principles of the veterans benefits so carefully formulated at the time of the war and also the entire principle of the adjusted compensation certificate settlement of 1924," he declared.

Replying to argument of the bill's supporters that it would contribute to business recovery the president said "no doubt would result in some expansion of the retail trade but that to resort to this kind of financial practice provided in this bill would not improve conditions necessary to expand those industries in which we have the greatest unemployment." The president pointed out that he already had sanctioned a deficit of four billion dollars in order to finance a huge work relief program.

"I cannot honestly assert to you that, to increase that deficit this year by $2,200,000 will in itself bankrupt the United States," he said. "Today the credit of the United States is safe but it cannot ultimately be safe if we engage in yielding to each and all of the groups that are able to enforce upon Congress claims for special considerations. To do so is to abandon the principles of government pay and for the people and to put into its place government by and for political coercion by a minority. We can afford all that we need but we cannot afford all that we want," he said. (Continued On Page Six)

Farmville Warehousemen Get Judgment Against Durham Tobacco Firm

The case of R. E. Ricks Transfer Company against the Norfolk Southern Railroad growing out of a crossing accident near Grimesland in which one of the Ricks trucks collided with a passenger train killing the truck driver and a companion, was continued until the next term of civil court by Judge M. V. Barnhill this morning. When the case was called the plaintiff asked for continuance because it was impossible to have one of the eye witnesses to the tragedy present for the hearing today. The judge granted the request for continuance provided the plaintiff would take care of the cost connected with the calling of the case at this term. In the same case the Norfolk Southern Railroad has filed counter suit against the transfer company for alleged damages to the train as a result of being struck by the truck.

Yesterday Monk and Hobgood tobacco warehousemen of Farmville were awarded a judgment of $436.05 against Satterfield and Stone, Durham warehousemen. The case grew out of refusal of the Durham firm to pay a draft in favor of the Farmville firm for tobacco bought on the floor of the Farmville house and shipped to Durham.

The $1,000 damage suit of Lee Manning against James Dunn for injuries received when Dunn slashed Manning on the neck and arm with a knife in a fight, resulted in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $25. A case by Dunn against Manning for an account owed the plaintiff by Manning and over which the fight took place, was non-suited when it was announced that same had been settled out of court.

A suit for $20,000 filed by V. A. Jackson against Coppersmith and Company was scheduled to come up for hearing shortly before noon today. The case charges breach of contract by the defendants in regard to a purchase of timber.

Since court convened here Monday morning a large number of minor cases have been disposed of without going to the jury.

Study Course Committees At Work at College

The members of the committees for outlining the courses of study in Science and French for the new course of study for the public schools of North Carolina are in the midst of a three-day conference at East Carolina Teachers College. The committee for mathematics began a similar task today. The committee for other subjects will meet in Chapel Hill during this week and next.

J. E. Hillman, director of curriculum instruction in the State Department of Public Instruction who has charge of the whole committee or the revision of the curriculum is here. The other members of the State Department, who are here assisting the committee are: Dr. J. Henry Highsmith, Director of Instructional Service, and A. B. Combs, associate in this division, who are working with the high school group, and Miss Hattie M. Parrot, associate director of Instruction Service.

Dr. R. J. Slay is acting chairman of the high school group in the absence of the permanent chairman, Dr. D. R. Mast, of Lenoir; B. B. Brant, of Duke University; H. H. Bullock, of Kingston, and J. I. Mason, of Atlantic are the members of the committee present.

Miss Mary W. Hyman of Concord, is chairman of the elementary group, and the other members present are: Misses Ruth Gutter, of the Woman's College of the great University of Greensboro; C. Rainwater of East Carolina Teachers College; Mary John of Lenoir; Agnes Evans, of Rowland; Florence Pannell, of Greensboro; Blanche Holt and Mrs. M. Louise Bullard, of Raleigh, and Dr. R. J. Slay of East Carolina Teachers College.

Following the work of these committees, laboratory courses in science on the two levels will be offered during summer term, and the contributions of the state committees and of the teachers making the laboratory courses will be continued and this will determine the course of study in science to be included in the curriculum bulletin to be published and distributed to teachers of the state early in September of this year.

A laboratory course in elementary science will be given at East Carolina Teachers College during the summer school and will be taught by Miss Celia Rainwater. Dr. R. J. Slay will give two courses at Duke University this summer on methods of teaching science in the elementary schools and in the high school.

Sundown Stories

Other Indians

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

TOMORROW we must see about making your teepee," said Willy Nilly, "but tonight it is warm. Some may use my house and others may find that my old barn is comfortable."

"Indians have blankets," said Big Chief Eagle. "We sleep under stars. At sunset we make teepees for older ones. Before sun is high in heavens it will be finished."

"Swift as lightning," young Indian maiden sitting next to Honey Bear, make moccasins tomorrow, then she ride in pony races against other Indian maidens.

"Scout Straight-As-An-Arrow, who sits now by Jelly Bear, will arrange races and matches of great strength between other young Indians."

"Booming Voice, sitting by your dog now, will beat the drum for the dances, and I, Big Chief Eagle, will plant your garden with Indian corn and vegetables so fine harvest will be yours during summer moons."

Christopher Columbus Crow cocked his head on one side as he thought of the planting to take place, but decided they might give him enough sample tastes so he would not have to be wicked!

"Early, before Great Sun shakes out his golden suit and sits in throne in sky, while yet the dew drops call for those who would drink of their freshness, early Big Chief Eagle arises and the festival will commence," said the chief.

Now the warmth of the fire made them feel sleepy. The lamb, the ducks, Top Notch, Rip, the bears, Christopher, Willy Nilly, fell asleep, and the Indians did too.

THROUGHOUT the day the Puddle Muddlers had been busy with the Indians. They had watched them making baskets, moccasins, bows and arrows, their teepee.

They had seen how they danced different dances for different occasions, they had seen how they rode and raced and had matches to show their strength.

Big Chief was calling them all together now.

"It is not yet dusk," he called. "See, Sun still sits up on that patch of western sky where he moves every afternoon. In the morning Great Sun comes up in the East and rests in the sky there, looking over world, seeing what is growing, what is happening on earth. He sees all we. So he stretches himself and moves over toward South, and on to the West before the mighty sleep comes over him."

"Now it is not yet dusk, and soon we must eat around fire. Then we have important ceremony. We must make mighty crow—called Christopher Columbus Crow—big chief. Much, much there is to do while we stay in place called Puddle Muddlers."

"Gather all now. Bring great smooth stone for mighty crow to stand on while we make him 'Big Chief Crow.'"

The drum was being beaten now. The Indians all hurried to the council fire and, as soon as they had eaten, Christopher Columbus Crow was taken into the Indian tribe with the words:

"Big Chief Crow of Puddle Muddlers. Because of your mighty words, your strong, clear eyes, we give you honor."

In this splendid paper, she brought to her listeners the traditions, so dear to hearts the world over—based upon the fears and superstition of primitive man, upon age-old customs that had been handed down through many generations.

We watched these customs grow out of the fears, the superstitions, the ignorance of early life—and followed them down through the ages, into every country, among all people, weaving themselves into our own lives.

This interesting paper was followed by Current Events given by each member.

Following the program the hostess served delicious refreshments.

Reports of different committees showed a satisfactory year's work, and the treasurer reported sufficient funds on hand to keep the lawn of the club house and the Fifth St. plot trimmed during the summer.

The club is especially proud of its main project, the park on Cotanch Street, which is already well on the way—although there is still much to be done before it is a full-fledged park.

Time—even years—will be needed to perfect the growth of the many trees, shrubs and plants which have been set out this spring.

Mrs. J. H. B. Moore gave an enthusiastic report of the State Federation meeting in Elizabeth City, and exhibited the two prizes which were won by the Greenville Woman's Club.

The first was the Nathan O'Berry silver cup, given by the Civic Department to the club which has done the best piece of civic improvement during the year. This was awarded to the Garden Club, a department of the Woman's Club, in recognition of the work done on the park.

Greenville, N. C., May 22, 1935
Goodson & Flanagan Ins. Agency, Greenville, North Carolina.

Gentlemen:

This is to thank your Agency for the prompt and courteous service rendered to me in my two recent Tornado losses, occurring sixty days apart and both losses being satisfactorily adjusted two days after the loss in each instance.

I appreciate the personal interest shown me, along with others in my vicinity, in the settlement of the damage to my buildings in the past two whirlstorms.

Yours truly,
B. F. BUCK,
Grimesland, N. C.

The making of balanced individuals is far more essential than the balancing of our financial budget. Nothing should displace an educated citizenship. Let us make Greenville the great educational light-house of Eastern North Carolina.

Poppy Day Appeal.

Nearly 30,000 new names will be on the scroll of America's dead defenders when the nation honors its war dead on Memorial Day this year, according to Mrs. W. A. Darden, president of the Pitt County Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary.

World War veterans have been dying at the average rate of 80 per day during the last year, making nearly 30,000 who have passed on since last Memorial Day.

This high death rate among the veterans gives Poppy Day, May 25, heightened importance. On this day the Auxiliary women collect contributions which form the major source of support for their work for needy families of veterans throughout the year.

Unless generous public support is given the Auxiliary's Poppy Day appeal, the welfare activities of the unit cannot be maintained.

"Almost every veteran who dies now leaves a widow and children, and few leave sufficient means to provide for their families," said Mrs. Darden. "The seventeen years which have passed since the war make it very difficult to prove that the veteran's death resulted from war service, and unless such legal proof can be established, no government aid is available for the family. The Legion and Auxiliary must step in with emergency aid until other aid can be secured or the family made self-sufficient."

"In addition to the veterans who die, there are more than 100,000 constantly in hospitals. We endeavor to do something for those veterans while they are still within reach of our help, providing them cheer and comfort while they are in the hospitals and aiding them in the long, uphill struggle to regain an economic foothold after they leave the hospitals. Their families, too, often need aid."

"The poppies, which we will offer Saturday, May 25, to be worn in honor of the dead, are our principal means of raising funds for this work for the living."

We are supporting the move to add the ninth month to our schools.

Conference At Library.
The staff of Sheppard Memorial Library held a conference this morning with a group selected from the rural clubs of Pitt county who will assist with furnishing reading material to their home communities during the summer months.

The best plan is for the reader to come to the library, become familiar with the whole plant and make his own selections with the help of the desk attendant if he asks for such. At times and with certain individuals this may not be convenient. These club members each took back with her a package of thirty books, some novels, some for children in grammar grades, and some easy books. Those who live near these leaders may go to them on certain days of the week which they will announce and get a good book to read. This will be returned when finished and another one taken out by the reader. The leader will add to her collection by getting any books for which there is a special demand, when she can come to the library. This is the first venture of the library in furnishing this kind of service. But with the help of the enthusiastic leaders selected by the clubs, with the approval of Miss Ethel Nice, it must succeed. Attending the conference were: Miss Mrs. Chas. McArthur, Farmville; Mrs. J. R. Pierce, Ayden; Mrs. T. L. Stokes, Falkland; Mrs. W. R. Hardison, Stokes; Mrs. J. R. Lewis, Walstonburg; Miss Edna Earl Vincent, Winterville; Miss Mary Sue Manning, Route 4, Greenville.

The ninth month of school is an essential part of our school program. I am for it.

Mrs. J. B. SPILMAN.

Leave For Greensboro.
Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Cox left today for Greensboro where Mr. Cox will attend a meeting of Jefferson Standard Life Insurance agents.

A Correction.
In the personal column of yesterday's issue of the Daily Reflector we stated that Miss Elizabeth Conway of Henderson, Ky., was the guest of her brother, E. R. Conway, Jr. The report to us was erroneous. Miss Conway is not in the city.

Music Recital.
Mrs. Charles A. White will present her music pupils in a recital on Thursday evening at eight o'clock in the auditorium of the Third Street School. The public is invited.

Methodist Prayer Service.
Mid-week service will be held tonight at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church at eight o'clock.

Memorial Baptist Prayer Service.
The Sunday School Council meets for its weekly session at 7:30 p. m. Every officer and teacher, and all others interested in the Church's teaching activities, are expected and invited to meet with us in preparing for next Sunday's lesson.

The midweek devotion will be led by the pastor at 8:15 p. m. Come. Our topic: "The Increasing Christ—In Daily Experience."

As president of the High School Parents Association I respectfully urge all its members and all other citizens to get behind the movement to add the ninth month to our schools.

Rev. J. A. McIVER.

COMPLETE ADDITIONS TO WEST GREENVILLE SCHOOL

Pictured above is the West Greenville School located in the western part of the city. The School Board recently announced the completion of the two wings shown on each end of the building. These two wings contain four large classrooms and four smaller section rooms. The members of the Board of Trustees take a great deal of pride in being able to make this addition to this school at a cost to the taxpayers of approximately fifteen hundred dollars. If built by contract the addition would have cost at least twenty-five thousand dollars. However, it was built under the C. W. A. and F. E. R. A. program, hence the small cost to the local community. Plans are under way to add an adequate auditorium to this building under the new Work-Relief program.

No Prayer Service at Presbyterian
There will be no Prayer Service at Presbyterian Church tonight due to absence of pastor. Rev. and Mrs. Grady were called to Tennessee to attend the funeral of their grandfather. They will return to Greenville the latter part of this week.

I am enthusiastically supporting the move to add a ninth month to our school. The State is never going to do the job right.

FRANK WILSON.

Books For Library.
Several excellent books published by the University of North Carolina Press, at Chapel Hill, have been placed on the shelves at Sheppard Memorial Library. In one of them, "Stories of the South," are found twenty-seven famous tales of plantation life, of the slowly changing hill-billy and the poor white of the lowlands, of traditional Charleston, colorful New Orleans and progressive Birmingham. Dr. Addison Hibbard selected and arranged these stories so as to give a picture of the South, past and present, as it has been portrayed by writers of short fiction.

History and Economics may be found in "North Carolina History Told by Contemporaries," edited by Hugh T. Lefler. This is a collection of the most important documents and papers in the history of North Carolina giving the story of the state from the lost colony to the present time.

Brown, "The State Highway Survey," as well as many others. Na-tem of N. C." tells how the state lifted itself from sand and mud roads by honest and consistently hard work of business men, economists and engineers.

"Culture in the South," edited by W. T. Couch—all of the more important aspects of present day life in the South are described by a carefully selected group of authors.

Vance, "Human Geography of the South: a Study in Regional Resources and Human Adaptation." The author presents the American South as a ground in which being tested the adequacy of man to master resources of the region and develop a distinctive and competent culture.

In "Backwoods America," Charles Morrow Wilson pictures a roundness and fullness, a jovial, ruddy, healthiness and backwoods America that fades away in towns and cities.

"The River Valley" and "Cabins in the Laurel" by Muriel Early Sheppard are fascinating glimpses of life in the Carolina mountains. "Cabins in the Laurel" shows 128 full page photographs by Bayard.

In "Trees of the Southeastern States," by Coker and Totten, are found descriptions in simple terms.

Wooten.

nearly all of which are illustrative of over 200 native species of trees, with drawings. "The Natural Gardens of North Carolina," by Wells gives a general account of the eleven major plant communities in the state, from the windy dunes on the coast across the savannahs to the great forests and Christmas tree land.

Botanical Garden At College.
Plans for the largest single beautification project ever attempted by East Carolina Teachers College are under way and the coming year will see them carried out. The development will be in the nature of an extensive botanical garden which in time will become one of the beauty spots of Eastern Carolina. Blue prints of the project are now being prepared by M. L. Wright, who is director of campus beautification and landscaping.

The project will cover about eight acres, which will include the lake that was redeemed from a swamp, the present nursery, and the space between the athletic field and the Science building. The garden will be laid out in walks and flower-beds and two massive granite gates will be placed at the entrance to the enclosure.

The college, in getting ready for such a project, has accumulated thousands of plants which were raised in its nursery. These include camellia japonica, forsythias, weigelas, both purple and white asters, redbuds, boxwoods, privets, pitzer junipers, and weeping willows, as well as many others. Native trees, plants, shrubs and vines will be used extensively and an effort will be made to get as nearly a complete collection as possible to those that grow well in the eastern section of the state. There are already on the plot some fine specimens of such trees as water oaks and cypresses, and such shrubs as the cherry laurel. Native plants will be added and such vines as the yellow jessamine.

This is an extension of the campus beautification plan that has been gradually worked out through the past five years under the direction of Mr. Wright.

First Church of Christ, Scientist.
"Mortals and Immortals" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all churches and Societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 19, 1935.

The Golden Text was from Proverbs 12:28: "In the way of righteousness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving-kindness; according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin. Behold, I was shapen in iniquity;

and in sin did my mother conceive me. Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit." (Psalms 51:1, 2, 5, 10-12.)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mortal man is really a self-contradictory phrase, for man is not mortal, neither indeed can be; man is immortal. If a child is the offspring of physical sense and not of Soul, and in sin did my mother conceive me. Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit." (Psalms 51:1, 2, 5, 10-12.)

ENEMY'S KISS

SYNOPSIS: Alison Rede, stirred toward Guy Western by gratitude and something stronger, is horrified to see that the calculating Daphne Summers, her father's second wife-to-be, is trying to make Mr. Rede suspicious of Guy. Whereas all the young man has done to date has been to save Alison from a nasty situation which was of Daphne's making, and he has like the perfect gentleman throughout.

Chapter 20 MAN BEMUSED

"GUY was looking at the house, father," said Alison. "He'd come down to see it and wanted to look at it again."

She frowned at her father's slightly sceptical face and tapped impatiently with her foot. "Oh, I know it sounds queer, his staying and everything, but it wasn't. If you'd been there you'd have done just the same!"

Robert frowned. "I don't know that I'm particularly pleased about his staying there with you all night," he began, but the girl cut in fiercely.

"You wouldn't have minded—not one bit—until she started interfering!"

"Alison!"

"I know, father! But there are limits! Just because she doesn't like me's no reason why she should barge into my affairs! It's no business of hers. I'm grown up now and surely I can make friends if I like without asking her?"

Robert put out a hand and drew his daughter towards him. "Now, my dear, listen."

"I don't want to listen! I think it's horrible! Just because a man helps me when I'm in a jam, she has to think—to make you think—oh!"

Alison broke down; the strain of days of anxiety, of her night's vigil in the old house and today's distress, all gathered into that one cloud-burst of tears. Because she seldom cried, because he had never seen her so upset, Robert was almost shocked. He gathered her in to his arms, soothing her with pet names and kisses until her last sob subsided.

"I'm sorry," she wrenched herself free, dried her face.

"There, you're overreacted, that's all," like all men, Robert Rede attributed all her feminine emotion to physical causes. "But you mustn't think, my pet, that Daphne doesn't like you. She's only too anxious to be friends, Alison, and was a little hurt because you didn't seem to like her."

"She means so much to me, I can't bear to think that you and she won't get on. Poor little thing, she had such an awful time—fancy, she was married at fifteen to a perfect brute years older than she was who treated her most abominably."

"Lots of women would have left him, but Daphne stuck to him, even when he got ill, and nursed him herself through the two years that he was ill. And then, when he died, she found that he'd gambled everything he'd got away and left her absolutely penniless! I tell you, when I think of him, I see red! If only I can give her a little happiness!"

Suddenly, impulsively, Alison turned and kissed him.

"I'm sorry, dear! That was true; she was sorry for her outburst. I won't again. I expect we'll get on splendidly when we know each other. It was piggy of me to be upset... only, well, I love you so, and I felt—"

"Jealous. Of course. It's natural. Children do." Robert was not conscious of quoting. "But you needn't be. I want you both; and she wants both of us, particularly you. By the way, I've got something for you—I meant at first to give you a check for fifty pounds and then I thought you'd rather have this."

HE felt in his pocket, drew out a jewel case. Alison took it. Inside, on a dark blue velvet lining, lay a turquoise and diamond pendant. "I got Daphne to choose it for you while we were in Nice. I thought she could pick one better than I could, she's got such good taste. It's a 'welcome home' present."

"It's just lovely! Thank you so much, darling. Thank her too for me." Not for worlds at that moment would Alison have said aloud what was in her heart—that she would rather have had a present at half the price chosen by her father himself.

She put it round her neck, fastening the tiny chain and looked at herself in the glass. "It's just perfect, isn't it?"

It was worth any life, she told herself, to see him smile like that again. If turquoise did not look their best with red, well, what matter?

Only when she went up to bed, taking off the pendant, she noticed something which made her stoop, peer closely at the bright piece of gem setting of the jewel.

The ring by which it hung upon the chain was slightly thinner at the top, worn into a tiny groove! Alison's lips twisted a trifle as she stared down at the jewel.

Second hand! At best not worth more than thirty pounds, it was not even new! She began to visualize how Daphne Summers could afford her hairdresser and that chic Paris dress!

Well, it was the thought, after all, which counted; her father's thought.

She put the jewel away tenderly, thinking of him; suddenly, with a pang of dismay, Alison remembered she had asked Guy to lunch. He would arrive tomorrow, expecting to lunch with her father. How could she explain to him that the invitation was off?

Tomorrow Daphne was to lunch, which made it all the more awkward! Alison knew that she could not face a meal with Daphne and Guy feeling all the time that her father objected and that Guy was suspect. She knew that she would give herself away, be shy and be miserable with the thought present always that those two were looking at her, trying to detect signs that she had "lost her heart" or that Guy was a crook!

Could she get hold of him and put him off? If she did, would he guess what had happened, never come again? He was not the kind of person who would trust himself into a house where he was not wanted! But that would be unbearable!

She had a sense of chilly desolation as she stood there, such a sense of loss that she was forced to face the truth.

She wanted more than anything on earth to see him again!

WHAT should she do? She was still wondering next day.

Daphne appeared at half past twelve, in a taxi with half a dozen large parcels and, while Porter settled with the driver, she opened the parcels in the library and showed the contents to Alison. Huge flat books of wallpapers and a mass of furnishing fabrics.

"I wondered if you'd help me, darling, to choose my new coloring for the rooms upstairs?" She had a gushing way of asking. "I feel sure you've got a wonderful color sense!"

Alison looked up startled from the letter she was writing.

"The rooms upstairs? But I thought father was giving up this house?"

"He did think of it," agreed Daphne airily, "but we've talked it over and we feel that'd be a pity. After all, we must have a house in London, too, while you are growing up. It's not as if he couldn't afford it, is it?" The swift glance she shot at the girl dropped away unsatisfied for Alison knew nothing of her father's affairs.

"Which rooms are you going to do up?" she asked.

"Our bedroom and the little sitting room I'm taking for my boudoir." Mrs. Summers spread out a length of patterned silk. "Look, isn't this superb?"

"Rather expensive, isn't it?" Alison ventured.

"Oh, with furnishing stuffs it pays to get the best," said Mrs. Summers lightly. "Let's go upstairs, shall we? Or would you rather not?"

"No, no! I'd love to," Alison rose hastily, anxious to make amends for her explosion last night.

Watching Daphne, more than chic in a brand-new navy blue coat trimmed liberally with mink, a navy dress just touched with scarlet and a Reboux hat, drifting round the rooms which had once been her own mother's, laying armfuls of exotic fabrics on the exquisite embroideries worked by the dead woman, was surely punishment enough!

"I think zebra'd look marvellous here—with black lacquer and red cushions—don't you think so? Only then I'd just have to have glass over the fire—but perhaps you'd like that portrait of your mother in your bedroom?"

"Father thought he'd like that picture moved to the library, or to his dressing room," put in Alison. "He mentioned it last night at dinner."

Tomorrow, Alison runs away with Guy.

SYNOPSIS: Alison Rede is horrified to find that the cold and calculating Daphne Summers, her father's new wife-to-be, is not only reducing her father almost to infatuation, but is calmly ordering Alison's own life as well. Alison is expecting Guy Western for lunch, and Daphne disapproves. Guy has done Alison a great service, and even that Daphne discounts.

Chapter 21 RUNAWAY

ALISON had already discovered that her advice was not needed; a murmurous approval of whatever Daphne suggested met the case.

"Excuse me, miss, but there's a gentleman downstairs to see you." The butler stood in the doorway.

"Did he give you his card?" asked Daphne.

"No, madam. He didn't give any name."

"I'll go down and see," Alison was looking nervously at Daphne, hoping against hope. If only she could get downstairs alone, see him for a moment, explain!

But Daphne had already flung down her armful of stuffs, she had her handbag open and was adding a fresh layer of vivid scarlet to her morning mouth.

For a moment the girl hovered hesitating.

"D'you mind if I go down?" Daphne, between open lips, answered. "No, run on. I'll be down in a minute."

Thank Heaven! Alison could have laughed aloud in sheer relief. She darted down the stairs, into the drawing room.

Guy was there, waiting for her the moment that she looked at him all her doubts dissolved. He'd understood!

"Have you got your car outside?" She spoke low and hurriedly.

"Yes. What's up?"

"I'll tell you when we get out side."

He followed her obediently out, halfway down the front stairs asked, "I say, don't you want a hat?"

"I haven't got one," Alison confessed. "I'll stop and buy one."

They stole like two schoolchildren playing truant through the hall. Guy was laughing silently. Alison met his eye and had to put her own hand against her mouth to stop herself from laughing aloud. She felt idiotically lighthearted, absurdly happy and excited; a mad solution but the only possible one!

And he played up so wonderfully, matching her mood, asking no more questions until they were in the car and safely off.

"What's the game?"

"I'll tell you, but stop first at the corner. There's a hat shop there!"

The hat shop produced a beret of not too bright a blue to match Alison's coat and skirt, and, since she was known to them, put it down. From the shop, she telephoned to Porter, always discreet, and left a message for her father to say that she had forgotten, she must lunch out, she would be back in time to go out with Daphne at half past two.

CONSCIENCE assuaged, she ran back to the car.

"I say, that hat's a wow! I didn't know that a girl could buy a hat in less than ten minutes! Do tell me though—what's happened? Nothing wrong, is there?" he asked.

"Not much! Nothing except I've shocked my stepmother to glory and she thinks you must be the dearest kind of crook!"

"She thinks I'm a crook? Good Lord, what've I done?" To her surprise he sounded less amused than anxious.

"She thinks you ought to have slept in the road in the rain!" He laughed, the joyous laugh that pleased her so well.

"Sorry! I never thought of it or I'd have sworn to Warley!"

"And left little Herbert to do any bag-snatching he fancied," added Alison gaily. "Well, I'm glad you didn't anyway. I'd have been scared to death. But if you meet her, go gentle with her, please."

"I'll be gentle as a lamb," he promised solemnly. "If I have an irresistible impulse to pinch the silver or do a spot of forgery, I'll hold it sternly in check. I want to meet her. Is she one of those dear woolly old ladies who filled up with ideas in 1914 and haven't had the oil-tank emptied since?"

"Good Lord, no! The idea tickled Alison. "Just the opposite. Hard as nails."

"Oh, that type!" He sounded as if he knew it well—and liked it very little.

Alison ended breathlessly. "Well, anyway, I haven't dared to tell her that I'd asked you to lunch, so I destroy them one way or another. Utility lawyers report that it is the most comprehensive executive order framed in many years. Its provisions escaped general attention, but its sweeping authority authorizes Electrification Engineer Cooke to buy or lease existing plants and transmission lines as he pleases. But—here's the sad joker—Mr. Cooke may accept the voluntary and uncompensated aid of any public or private agencies in making surveys to determine the need, desire and cost of setting the countryside ablaze with light and power.

The sky is the limit under that sort of grant. The utilities are beginning to realize it. And the White House power advisers—Mr. Cooke, Frank P. Walsh and Mayor LaGuardia—are high fliers.

POLITICS: The situation in the President's home state of New York illustrates the importance of that clause permitting Mr. Cooke to choose his own electrical surveys. Conditions are similar in many other states where the utilities have wondered if you'd mind having lunch with just me?"

"I'd love it!"

"Good."

"Where shall we go? The same place?"

"Yes. I'd love to. But you must lunch with me, this time," she insisted.

"Sorry!"

"You must!"

He ran the car alongside the pavement and stopped.

"What's the matter?" she asked, surprised.

"I'm going to drop you here and go home and sulk unless you lunch with me!"

He looked so absurd as he said it that she had to laugh and give way.

"And then you call me young!" she accused.

They laughed and for a moment he was occupied, turning out of Constitution Hill into the main stream of traffic along Piccadilly.

When he spoke again, it was in a different tone.

"You've met your stepmother, then. How do you like her?"

"Oh, all right," Alison replied carefully.

"That's good. You were rather dreading the meeting, weren't you?"

"How did you guess?"

"I don't know. You gave me that impression."

"It was true," she admitted in a low voice.

BUT now you've seen her it's all right! The traffic had stopped for a moment, he had leisure to look round. Alison did not answer and he read her silence correctly.

"I see. Rotten luck for you!"

"I expect I'll get used to it," she said quickly. "It's only that it's funny at first. I mean, having a third person there and the house being hers and not mine and so on."

"You think it'll come off?"

"My father's marriage?"

He nodded.

"I'm sure it will. He's awfully fond of her. It was difficult to keep that noncommittal."

He said quietly, "A pity, if she's not the right kind. You know, I took a great fancy to your father. He struck me as being rather a topper."

"He's a darling!" Praise of her father could always win Alison.

"You know, the funny part of it is, he took a fancy to you, too."

"Thank you!"

"You know I didn't mean that!"

"I know perfectly well what you mean. Liking is generally mutual. You're sure he liked me?"

"I know he did. He was going to ask you to lunch today, if she hadn't stepped in."

"She? You mean your stepmother?" He was driving again now and did not look at Alison.

"Yes. As I say, she seemed convinced you were a crook!"

He said thoughtfully, "I wonder what put that idea into her head?"

"Apparently, our having breakfast together!"

"A little hard! Even the honest must eat!"

"That's what's so silly," Alison was breathless. "She seemed to think it sort of settled things—although she's not a bit that kind of person herself, I'm sure."

"You mean not prudish?"

"I should think anything but prudish!"

"Funny!"

"Isn't it? Particularly as in this case it's her own fault!"

"What is?"

"Our meeting!"

He braked with such suddenness that Alison was flung forward; he seemed unconscious of the fact; unconscious, too, that he was holding up the traffic.

"She? Responsible for our meeting? What do you mean?"

"It was Daphne who mixed up the telegrams and sent me down to that house!"

"Look here, sir, you can't do this!" An angry-looking policeman stuck his head into the window, saw Alison and added, "If you want to talk to your lady-friends, go down a side street and park! Don't hold up all the other traffic!"

"Go to—!" began Guy hotly, then checked himself. "Oh, all right, constable. Sorry." He trod hard on the accelerator and shot off but they were in the restaurant, had found the same corner table, before he spoke of it again.

"Tell me, why did you say your stepmother sent you to that house? How could she mix the telegrams?"

Alison's story, tomorrow, seems to suggest something to Guy.

of the "housewife and her man" by strewing bulbs and dynamos across the countryside.

PATCHING: Some time ago Harry Hopkins charged that federal relief in Ohio was shot through with graft and corruption. Governor Davey brought suit for criminal libel and threatened to press it. If Lightfoot Harry ever stepped within the state's boundaries.

Mr. Hopkins has accepted an invitation to speak in Cleveland, thus bearding Davey in his den, but both legal and political wisecracks have counselled otherwise. It would not look pretty for the President's Relief Director to spend a few months in an Ohio hogstow, as might well be the outcome.

There have been attempts to patch up the quarrel. They are still in progress. Ohio is a very fine state with a large electoral vote. And, after all, both Forester Davey and Reliever Hopkins, you know, are "good fellows if they understand each other." It will be fun to watch the developments in this politico-legal skit.

New York

By JAMES McMULLIN

DETERMINATION: Secretary Morgenthau's testimony before Senate or Glass Banking Subcommittee was a severe shock to New York conservatives—and FDR's approval of it made it worse. They had of course expected him to endorse the banking bill, but his advocacy of an independent monetary authority and of government ownership of the Federal Reserve Banks was a complete surprise. It's only a few weeks since Undersecretary Jefferson Coolidge remarked that the banks really should have some say about how their money is invested and financial men had assumed that his chief shared his views.

Backers of Frank Vanderlip's Federal Monetary Authority plan were cheered in inverse ratio to the bankers' displeasure. They have been working right along on their Treasury contacts but open support from such high officials quarters was beyond their immediate dreams. Neither camp looks for definite action on the "Supreme Court of Finance" at this session—but both are confident it will be a hot issue next year.

This development intensifies the private determination of powerful banking interests that Mr. Roosevelt shall not return to the White House in 1937.

FACTUAL: A famous industrialist who is dropping his responsibilities for the time being will devote his attention to statistical research designed to demolish misinformation spread by New Deal economists. His contention is that the brain trusters have been too ready to accept as gospel—without examination—faulty premises which happened to lead to the conclusions they wished to reach.

He has in mind such "facts" as the widely circulated statement that two per cent of the people own eighty per cent of the national wealth. These figures were the result of a limited analysis in a single state—yet they have been presented as if true of the country as a whole. This is cited as a typical sample of careless and inaccurate rationalizing from the particular to the general.

His studies will background a broad scientific attack on Washington theories based on hearsay. He is convinced that most of the New Deal traces to "wish-fulfillment" thinking rather than a provable knowledge—and that its foundations will crumble under a factual barrage. The impersonality of the assault is expected to make it more effective.

CURE: Republican strategy is shaping around a balanced budget keynote. Its appeal will be tested in the near future with various kinds of audiences and in different sections of the country. If popular response is at all favorable, back-stage leaders are planning to make this the major issue of the '36 campaign.

An outstanding speaker is scheduled for a number of talks in which he will stress the wonderful recovery achieved by Great Britain and will credit Britain's balanced budget with effecting the cure. Impartial New Yorkers doubt that the British are as satisfied with their comeback as are their G. O. P. admirers.

USES: The Guaranty Trust may not be popular in Washington but the New Dealers aren't at all bashful about borrowing its executives to help them with organization work. Vice President J. C. O'Neill is still at the capital as chief personnel officer of NRA. Mr. O'Neill was originally loaned for ninety days. He handled his job so well that the "loan" was extended for an additional three months at the personal request of none other than Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mr. O'Neill's salary is being paid by the Guaranty Trust while he's in the government service—by an agreement reached beforehand. Indeed, understand the bank considers it a good investment. He is well liked and has gotten to know a lot of Senators and Congressmen well enough to call them by their first names. You never can tell when contacts like that will come in handy.

The Guaranty's latest contribution to the New Deal is Assistant Comptroller Paul Holmes—loaned to Secretary Morgenthau for sixty days to help set up an accounting system for work-relief. A New Yorker wryly remarks that even bankers seem to have their uses.

FUN: Financial insiders learn that George Peek's statement about foreign trade—which caused so much cussing in the State Department—was prepared by a man who got the job through sources which are delighted by the spectacle of a

Secretary of State harassed by an "adviser to the President." Crossing live wires within the administration is their idea of good clean fun. Comment runs that they are not only enjoying the show themselves but have invited their friends to share their private chortles.

SYSTEM: Informed Wall Streeters

will eat their fedoras if there haven't been some skilled pool operations in the stock market lately. The tape action of certain stocks showed all the trademarks. Yet it's admitted that the Securities Commission would have a heck of a time proving that anyone had taken liberties with the law.

That's because the smart lads have evolved a new system. Participants of what would have been called a pool in the good old days simply place their buy or sell orders at the same time as individuals through many different brokers and under many different names. So far this device looks hole-proof. It would take a combination Sherlock Holmes and Einstein to ferret out collusion.

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Many random bits of news and speculation about 1936 and even 1940 drift in-o Washington on every breeze.

Very quietly, Missouri friends of Roscoe C. Patterson are making a campaign for his nomination for President by the republicans next year. Some claim he already is assured votes enough to make him a real factor in the convention.

Patterson was defeated for reelection to the senate in 1934. He has a long record of party service, but there has been no widespread public mention of him for the presidency. What has been done in that direction represents one of the most noiseless delegate hunts ever conducted.

In various quarters there is talk of Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, for republican 1936 standard-bearer. He seems to have no organization as yet.

He is put forward as a liberal but less liberal than the La Follettes, who has a flair for phrasing, an exceptional ability as a speaker, and a considerable knowledge of political affairs, but no record of partisanship to handicap him.

Hoover Possibilities
One astute republican old-timer thinks that if the convention were held tomorrow, on the basis of pledges or near-pledges already given more than a year in advance, more than 20 candidates would be assured of greater or lesser blocs of votes.

In various well-informed quarters there is a definite belief that the nominee is most likely to come from the midwest or west. In spite of all the talk, friends of Herbert Hoover who should know do not expect him to throw his support to Ogden Mills or any other easterner.

Incidentally, various local leaders in several states are pledging their efforts to Mr. Hoover himself. He scarcely is likely to disavow this following at the present time. What he does eventually is another matter.

To those on the inside of republican affairs it would cause no surprise if the former President threw his support definitely to one of the leading candidates at the psychological moment, some months hence.

A good many candidates—particularly a half-dozen or more midwesterners—will be fishing secretly for that support. It should be remembered that those who control the party machinery in many sections, and especially in the south, are men picked by Hoover.

Some figure he might be able to control and deliver, beyond question, a good many scores of delegates.

Five Years Ahead
Some of those in the field for the 1936 nomination do not expect, or especially desire, to be nominated. They are just getting in trim for 1940—getting an organization under way, and stepping out where they can be seen and remembered.

It is surprising how many republican politicians are looking that far ahead, and how many stories it has risen to.

One especially interesting report comes from Indiana. There is talk of asking Will Hays to quit his job as movie czar, and run for governor next year. A four-year term in the governor's chair would just be ending when the party started considering in earnest its 1940 presidential situation.

There are friends of Agriculture Secretary Henry Wallace, a pre-new deal republican, who whisper that he would make a splendid presidential timber in 1940, on any ticket.

So it goes. From every direction. Unquestionably the republican party is beginning to get up and take notice, whatever may come of it.

In Time of Peace Prepare For Gas' England's Slogan

By GAYLE TALBOT

London. (AP)—Peaceful England a war car cooked on the sizzling frying pan of the narrow channel is making active preparations in this jubilee year to protect her population from gas attacks.

Recent elaborate defense drills centered about the great Chislehurst Caves, a short distance from London, supplied authorities with data from which a country-wide protective scheme will be worked out.

While the movement is not being conducted with the fervor that has marked the efforts of European neighbors to make their people "gas-proof," nevertheless, John Bull is nevertheless, looking out his gas mask and seeking the problem in the air.

Robbie Made Gas-Proof

Articles have begun to appear almost daily in the London papers describing in detail how ordinary rooms may be rendered gas-proof and prescribing simple easily obtainable remedies for victims of mustard and phosgene gases.

Sounds of workers are being trained to call upon millions of home-owners and give quiet demonstrations of gas-proofing.

The first of these units participated in the sham attack on Chislehurst and learned to treat "victims" while planes eddied overhead and the air was filled with yellow smoke. The huge caves, which extend miles underground and were used in the World War as a munitions storehouse, were elaborately equipped

Hot Days are Coming - Keep Cool and Comfortable in your Ford V-8 . . .

MORE than ever on hot days you will appreciate the thoughtfulness of the Ford V-8's makers in providing an easily-opened windshield which lets cooling breezes blow through to refresh you. In addition, you have a cowl ventilator and Clear-Vision ventilation in side windows. And on hot days you will appreciate the comfort and roominess of the Ford V-8, the almost effortless handling which allows you to arrive at the end of an all-day journey without fatigue.

The Ford V-8 might have been built especially for the South—so accurately does it meet motoring needs in the Southern states. For instance, Ford is the only car in America which water-cools not only the complete cylinder walls, but also the upper half of the crankcase. This unique 5½ gallon cooling system reduces cylinder wear and greatly lowers oil temperature in the crankcase. This means greater oil economy and is seconded by directed, air-flow, crankcase ventilation which reduces corrosion, lessens oil dilution and cuts sludge formation to a minimum . . . In the spring and summer months you and your family spend more time in your car—be sure its engine is designed to run efficiently in hot weather and that passengers will keep cool and comfortable.

Ford V-8 owners get safety-glass all around, an all-steel welded body, built-in luggage compartment, fenders to match the body and 6.00 x 16" air-balloon tires, all at no extra cost. See the new Ford V-8 today. Get the thrill of 8 cylinder performance. Drive the new Ford once and you will buy it.

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady four higher to five lower on trade buying in the near months and under liquidation and foreign selling in the distant positions. The market was comparatively heavy and offerings increased following the call. July sold off from 1204 to 1200 but a fair demand was reported at that level. By the end of the first hour the general list was three net higher to five lower.

Increased liquidation carried new crop positions off to net losses of around $1 a bale later. Piroes at midday showed net losses of 10 to 21 points. The market advanced the last hour on active months covering and trade and spot house buying. Futures closed steady unchanged to five higher. Spots steady.

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Most financial markets remained calm today. Stocks were steady to firm and were quite active in the early dealing although here and there profit taking was in evidence. The list ruled quiet in later proceedings. Grains were narrow. Bonds followed restricted grooves and foreign exchanges did little. The late tone was steady. Transfers approximated 1,150,000 shares.

He warned that if the certificates due in 1945 are paid in full today every candidate for election to the Senate or to the House of Representatives will in the near future be called upon in the name of patriotism to support general pension legislation for all veterans regardless of their need or age.

The president expressed great sympathy for the argument that those who remained at home in civilian employment during the world war enjoyed special privileges and unwarranted remuneration. "That is true, literally true," he said, "but a recurrence of that type of war profiteering can and must be prevented in any future war. I invite congress and veterans with the great masses of the people to join with me in an effort to put to rout recurrency of such injustices out of American life. But we should not destroy privilege and create a new privilege at the same time. Two wrongs do not make a right. The job of the United States government is to take care that its citizens have the necessities of life. We are seeking honestly to do this representative of class or group," he said.

To prevent motor damage when you

...you must have oil of high film strength!

DID YOU know that idling along at 10 miles an hour or picking up suddenly can cause as much motor wear as high-speed driving?

All three put extreme pressure on your connecting rod and crankshaft bearings. If your oil does not have enough oiliness and film strength to withstand these high pressures, your motor parts suffer damaging wear. That's why you need oil with the greatest possible oiliness and film strength.

Straight mineral oils have no more oiliness and film strength than they had 10 years ago. Some, because of over-refining, have less!

Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil is the oil you need in this day of slow city driving, speed on the highway and sudden acceleration everywhere. It protects your motor and saves you money!
