Leaders Confer On Fate Of NRA; To Re-Study All Bills

ROOSEVELT TAKES STOCK OF SITUATION

Democratic Leaders Agree to Mark Time Pending Study of Supreme Court Ruling; Confusion in Evidence on Markets; Labor Not Unduly Alarmed Over Conditions

Washington, May 28.—(AP)—Dis-mayed by the Supreme court's destruction of NRA, President Roosevelt, the congressional Democratic leadership and some forces of business, industry and labor dug in today for an extended study of how to straighten out the situation.

Washington, May 28.—(AP)—The New Deal's vast plan for reviving the business fabric of the country was beset with uncertainties today as still bewildered officials pondered the full meaning of the Supreme court's abolition of NRA.

Restudy of all big administration bills to determine the constitutionality in view of the NRA decision was ordered by congressional chiefs. While the public in general watched calmly for the historical shift deemed likely, President Roosevelt and his advisers also seriously took stock of the disordered situation.

Pending the restudy of legislation, the Democratic chiefs on Capitol Hill agreed to mark time. Including among the measures to be subjected to new scrutiny are the AAA amendments, the utilities holding companies bill, regulation of motor buses, the social security measure and the omnibus banking bill. Leaders pointed out the power of the president to make codes had been held invalid and that it would be an impossible task for congress to enact legislation stipulating codes for each industry.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor summoned members of the federated council to a special meeting to consider what the federation would do to preserve labor's gains under NRA.

Furthermore the opinion was that the court ban against regulations of interstate business would handicap seriously any legislation designed to keep industry on an even keel.

The consensus was last night that the administration's decision to halt code making was irrevocable and that its appeal for business and industrial co-operation on behalf of preserving code standards was at best but a stop-gap.

Predictions by union officials that coal and textiles should attempt to be made to return to wages and hours and working conditions that preceded NRA were noted without undue alarm.

Industrial leaders from various sections were on hand for the vital conference at the capital to weigh the alternative fate.

Confusion was in evidence on some markets. Commodities declined to an extent and the stock market went down after opening fairly strong. Trading was active. Because of the projected study of the administration measures, house leaders decided that today's session—originally set for 11 a. m. for initial consideration of NRA extension—should recess without action.

Donald R. Richberg, NRA head, planned to confer very shortly with Chairman Harrison of the senate committee handling NRA legislation.

Greenville Voting On 9-Months School Term

Voters of the Greenville School District went to the polls today to decide whether or not Greenville will have a nine month school term next year and succeeding years. Balloting was being conducted at the courthouse and supporters rallied around the polls in goodly numbers during the morning hours with more expected during the afternoon as time nears for the closing of the polls.

Although no active opposition has developed to the movement to provide a supplement to the state-supported eight month term, school forces and their supporters are making every effort to get all persons who registered for the election to vote. Special registration was required for the election, and under the existing law persons who fail to ballot will be counted against the movement.

School forces established headquarters in the office of Hon. F. C. Harding today where transportation will be provided for anybody unable to reach the polls. A number of automobiles were put into service during the afternoon in an effort to swell the vote as near as possible to the registration of 956.

At two o'clock this afternoon 543 persons had voted.

On the eve of the election school officials claimed they would carry the election by a tremendous majority. They had received assurance of the vote of members of many prominent organizations in addition to some of the largest property owners of the city on whose shoulders the brunt of the school tax burden will fall.

If carried, the election will mean that the city will provide a tax rate not to exceed 15 cents on the $100 valuation to carry on the extra month of school which is expected.

to cost slightly above $7,000. However, officials said it was expected the rate would be between five and ten cents with the city tax rate being increased only slightly.

It was the first time since enactment of the State eight months' school law that an election has been held in this immediate section on a supplement for an extended term, although cities and towns in other sections of the state have already conducted a successful ballot on the proposal. Several towns much smaller than Greenville have taken similar action.

The movement has received the unqualified endorsement of all prominent organizations of the city which called on the Board of Aldermen to authorize the election in the interest of keeping Greenville on the list of accredited high schools, an honor that would be lost without a nine month term next year.

J. H. Rose, superintendent of schools, in a statement several days ago, declared the supplement was not being sought with the intention of improving school curriculum or boosting teachers' salaries but simply to give the city a longer term and enable students to enter college without handicap.

The outcome of the balloting was being watched with interest here and in other parts of the state where extended terms are also being given consideration.

In a last minute appeal yesterday, Mayor R. C. Planagan from a sick bed of a Washington, D. C. hospital called on the voters of Greenville to vote for the longer term, declaring the "life of the children of the city is at stake." The mayor throughout the campaign has taken a firm stand for better schools and several days ago championed the cause in a public statement.

TRY TO SPEED PITT SOLONS FEDERAL FUND TELL OF WORK

State Planning Board to Attempt to Secure New Allotments Soon

Raleigh, May 28.—The State Planning Board, which has already developed approximately $300,000 worth of projects in North Carolina for submission to the Federal government under the new four billion dollars Public Works program, will hold its next meeting here Friday morning at 10 o'clock. Chairman Capus M. Waynick, of the State Highway and Public Works Commission and also of the Planning Board, announced today. At this meeting it is hoped that plans can be completed for a number of large projects with a view to getting the required allotments and loans approved as soon as possible.

"We at first had planned to have this meeting Wednesday, but after talking with Dr. H. G. Baily, State PWA Engineer in Chapel Hill, we decided to hold the meeting Friday instead," Waynick said.

The State Planning Board was appointed by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus several months ago to act as a coordinating agency for all projects which might be constructed entirely or in part with Federal funds.

Now they hear that his department is loaded with anti-New Deal engineers recruited from private utility ranks who are circumventing both Mr. Ickes and the President. They are supposed to have altered or withheld reports recommending construction of municipal power plants in cities where private corporations are charged with exorbitant rates for poor service. It is alleged that no proposal to use federal funds for establishing a "yardstick" plant can get by them.

Members of Last General Assembly Tell Rotarians of Achievements

By WYATT BROWN
Pitt County's senator and two representatives reported last night to the Greenville Rotary Club and guests the doings of the recent session of the North Carolina General Assembly. Due to limited time each was allotted only a few minutes. Those appearing were M. O. Blount of Bethel and John Hill Paylor of Farmville, representatives and Arthur Corey, senator.

First to address the Rotarians was M. O. Blount who utilized his time in relating the actions and reactions of the legislature to a bill he introduced to secure for Pitt County and forty-four other counties repayment of the monies advanced for the construction of hard surface highways in the several counties in like proportion to the refunds granted in the course of being paid to fifty-six counties in our state. At one time the state legislature encouraged counties to advance money for the construction of highways and granted them part of the money got from car license tags and 1c per gallon of the gasoline tax. STATE CREDIT AT HIGH PEAK IN NEW YORK

No Trouble Expected to Be Encountered in Disposing of Additional Bonds

Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, May 28.—The credit of the State of North Carolina ranks at the top among the New York banks and bankers, with the result that it will have no trouble in selling new bond issues at an interest of not more than 3 per cent. Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus and State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson said on their return from several days in New York conferring with bankers and bond buyers.

"While the state does not have to sell any bonds immediately, the condition of the bond market is so favorable that we will probably sell several million dollars worth of state bonds in the near future," State Treasurer Johnson said today. For the Governor and I were assured that we could probably sell all the bonds we are authorized to sell at about 3 per cent. This is considerably better than the rate of 3 7/8 per cent at which we sold $12,000,000 worth of bonds about a year ago, and which was the lowest rate at which any state bonds had ever been sold up to that time.

The state still has $3,304,000 of the deficit inherited from the Gardner administration not yet funded which will have to be funded with state bonds eventually. Johnson pointed out. Of this amount, $2,732,000 is a direct carry over from the Gardner administration and $572,000 is due to amounts advanced from the general fund for permanent improvements at times when it would have been impossible to sell bonds. In addition to these amounts the 1933 general assembly authorized the issuance of $750,000 more bonds for the new tubercular hospital and for permanent improvements at the state hospitals for the insane.

The reason the state did not sell bonds to cover this additional deficit of $3,304,000 last year was because there was a sufficient surplus in the state treasury to permit the state to carry the deficit itself without having to pay any interest charges. As a result, the state has been saving $5,000 a month in interest alone. But his money will eventually be needed for highway purposes, so that bonds will have to be sold soon.

MISTRIAL IN RECOVERY SUIT

Practically All of Monday Consumed in Hearing of Dalton Smith Suit

Civil Superior Court, which convened here last week for a two week sitting, resumed work yesterday morning and spent practically the entire day in consideration of the suit of Edward Dalton Smith, of the Swift Creek community, against the New York Life Insurance Company.

After hearing all of the plaintiff's evidence, Judge M. V. Barnhill ordered a mistrial. The action was based on a statement of the plaintiff that he made application for a policy with a disability clause shortly after he had undergone an operation on an eye and did not mention the fact to the insurance agent.

Smith brought action to recover on the disability clause in view of the fact he had lost one eye and could hardly see out of the other. The company contended he did not mention the disability at the time he was insured, knowing the condition to exist.

Court continued work today on its calendar of thirty or more cases with the hope of completing the majority by the end of the week. Fifteen actions were given consideration during the first week's sitting, several of which were compromises.

Pierre Flandin to Ask Parliament for Dictatorial Power in Depression

Paris, May 28.—(AP)—Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin sent to parliament today demands for dictatorial powers to defend the franc against its foe home and abroad.

The premier, aware of the power opposition among the reconvening deputies, directed his campaign from his home where he is recovering from a fractured arm.

He commissioned Finance Minister Louis Germaine-Mar in to present him demand for power to balance the budget and promulgate by decree measures to revive business.

The life of Flamin's government may hinge on the defense of his battle, but he expected to win although by a narrow margin by warning the parliament regime itself is taking the "last step."

Notified of the robbery, police immediately instituted an investigation.

HIGH CLOSES BEST TERM IN HISTORY HERE

Judge Barnhill Speaks to Largest Graduating Class in History

Commencement season at Greenville High School came to a close last night with an address by Judge M. V. Barnhill of Rocky Mount, who is presiding over the two week term of civil Superior court here, and the awarding of diplomas to 89 graduates, the largest class in history of the school. The graduating class of the previous year boasted 88 members, one less than this year.

Diplomas were presented to the graduates by J. L. Little, chairman of the board of trustees of city schools, assisted by J. H. Rose, superintendent of public instruction.

A second graduating class of 14 members, representing the commercial department of the school, was also awarded diplomas by W. E. Hooker, member of the Board of Trustees, assisted by Professor L. M. Cannon, head of the department.

Judge Barnhill didn't attempt to impart any advice to the students as is customary on an occasion of this kind. He merely remarked them of some of the qualities that go into the making of a successful life, called their attention to the sacrifices made by state teachers in a great financial emergency, and told them not to forget the great opportunities held out by the various educational institutions of the state after they had completed school.

Superintendent Rose announced the awards for outstanding service during the year, and called attention to the election for a nine months' school term being held here today. He also described the graduating class as one of the most democratic and co-operative in the history of the institution. He pointed to the lack of snobbery and thanked the youngsters for the high type of service they had rendered during their years in the school system.

Joseph Hatem, a junior, was presented with the Dr. Joseph Dixon loving cup for outstanding service in the field of athletics. In making the presentation, Mr. Rose described Dr. Dixon as one of the greatest followers of high school sports the city ever had, always loyal to the (Continued on Page Three.)

DR. PAT NEFF FINE ORATOR

Educational Leaders Loud in Praise of College Commencement Speaker

Dr. Pat M. Neff who will deliver the address at the inauguration of Dr. Leon R. Meadows, on Saturday morning of this week, was chosen as the speaker of the occasion largely because he is considered one of the most magnetic, finest orators in the country today. All in this community who have heard him are enthusiastic in their praise.

Dr. Meadows is one of his ardent admirers. Supt. J. H. Rose, who has met him at educational meetings, says he is one of the most charming men he has ever heard talk. Rev. J. A. McIver, who has been associated with him at Baptist convention in Memphis when Mr. Neff declined the presidency of the convention, is loud in his praise of him as both man and speaker.

All who have heard him say that the people of this vicinity have a rare treat in store for themselves next Saturday when they will hear him speak.

Everything is in readiness for the exercises. Dr. James Y. Jovner, the first chairman of the Board of Trustees of the College will preside.

Dr. R. J. Slay, the faculty chairman of the committee, will present the delegates from the colleges, universities and other institutions who will appear in the order of their foundation.

The academic procession will be picturesque, as the delegates will wear their caps and gowns, with the colors of their institutions shown in the hood.

A great many alumnae are expected to attend commencement this year, and many will arrive on Friday in time for the music recital, that night, which is the opening event of commencement.

Late News Flashes

Appeals For N. R. A.
New York, May 28.—(AP)—In an appeal for the preservation of wages and hours established under NRA, Harper Sibley, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, today urged business men to uphold the levels of the codes.

"I call on all employers of labor who are members of the Chamber and its constituent organizations," Sibley urged, "to make no immediate changes in hours or wage schedules."

"I am confident that this will be the policy of American business," He spoke from a hurriedly prepared manuscript, addressing about 500 persons at a luncheon of the merchants association.

Sibley said he spoke "to settle at once any question as to the attitude of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. This is a moment of great opportunity, but also of great responsibility for the American business man. It is his moment to prove his good faith."

BOARD TO HEAR PLEA FOR RUM ELECTION HERE

Commissioners to Meet Tomorrow A. M. to Consider Referendum on Issue

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet here tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock to decide whether or not to call an election to allow the public to vote on the proposed establishment of a county liquor store system as provided under legislation recently passed by the State General Assembly.

Announcement of the meeting was made by the commissioners several days ago. The action was taken after receipt of a petition requesting that the meeting be held to call an election. The petition was said to have contained several hundred names. Another petition was sent from this county during the closing sessions of the legislature asking that the liquor store legislation be passed enabling 17 counties to hold a referendum on the question.

It was understood that proponents of the movement would attend the commissioner's gathering in large numbers and ask that immediate steps be taken for calling the election.

While little sentiment against the action has developed here, it is known that the action is strongly opposed by the prohibition faction which is also expected to be represented at the meeting. With several speeches in the offing indications today pointed to a fairly lengthy session of the solons.

Several of the other counties authorized by the legislature to hold elections on the issue have already called for a ballot and those which have not acted are expected to do so soon.

It is understood that a movement is on foot by a state prohibition forces to seek a restraining court order against holding of the elections. However, nothing of this nature has taken place, and the situation was being watched interestedly throughout the state in view of the failure of the legislature to provide a state-wide ballot on the matter.

Search For Missing George Weyerhaeuser Reaches Across International Border; Reports of Seeing Boy Unverified

Seattle, Wash., May 28.—(AP)—"We're ready, Percy Minnie," said an advertisement in the classified section of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer here today, indicating the Weyerhaeuser family of Tacoma were ready to deal with the kidnapers of their nine-year-old son, George, missing since last Friday.

Meanwhile, the secret search for the kidnapers of the nine-year-old boy reached across the international boundary with "remnants of the Alvin Karpis and Machine Gun Kelly gangs" as possible suspects.

In one of the few partially disclosed moves in the hunt for the gang that demanded $200,000 ransom for the return of the lumber fortune heir, two Tacoma detectives hurried to Vancouver, British Columbia.

Vancouver, the detectives believed the kidnapings were effected by members of the two gangs who had banded together. British Columbia officials refused to disclose the identity of the Tacoma detectives.

The officers went north in response to a woman's report of seeing a boy resembling the kidnapped youngster riding with four men in a travel-stained automobile last Saturday. That was less than 24 hours after George was abducted from a Tacoma street. A similar tip met with failure today when a posse of officers returned to Los Angeles, Washington, after an unsuccessful effort to trace a car containing a boy resembling the missing lad.

Scotch Evangelist To Preach to the Ladies Tonight

Tonight has been designated as "ladies' night" at the revival service being conducted by Dr. V. D. Sinclair, Scotch evangelist, at the Universalists' church, on Dickinson Avenue, and a large crowd is expected to be on hand to hear the minister in his special message to the feminine element.

Dr. Sinclair said today that although large crowds had attended the services the last several days, contributions have been so small he will be unable to remain here the full three weeks as desired unless the financial situation improves.

He urged persons who have been intending to give to the cause to do so immediately and make it possible for him to continue his daily services. Expenses, he said, are unusually heavy because of the employment of a string band to provide music at each service in addition to other outlays.

CHILD INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Washington, May 28.—Grace Wiggins, age eight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Wiggins, of S. E. D., Vancouver, was brought to the Taylor Hospital Monday morning with her right arm broken in three places, several lacerations on her back and face. Physicians cannot tell the outcome at this time.

She had stepped from the school bus which had come to a standstill when she was struck by a passing car which was driven by Jim Simpson. Mr. Simpson brought her to the hospital.

Negress With Pistol Causes Hubby To Flee

Ellie Parker, colored, who chased her husband away from home with a pistol Sunday night, was given preliminary hearing in mayor's court yesterday and bound over to the next sitting of county court under bond of $200. She was charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

Police said the husband might be living in a morgue somewhere today had he not used his feet to good advantage when he spied his "other half" brandishing the weapon and allegedly threatening his immediate extinction.

The cause of the rucus was not known but police said there had been some domestic trouble with the woman desiring the evacuation of the husband.

EXPLOSION: New Dealers on Capitol Hill have received confidential reports on PWA projects which have shaken their faith—in human nature. For years they have looked upon "Honest Harold" Ickes as a man who would tolerate no conniving and could not be horns-woggled.

Now they hear that his department is loaded with anti-New Deal engineers recruited from private utility ranks who are circumventing both Mr. Ickes and the President. They are supposed to have altered or withheld reports recommending construction of municipal power plants in cities where private corporations are charged with exorbitant rates for poor service. It is alleged that no proposal to use federal funds for establishing a "yardstick" plant can get by them.

The most serious accusation tells how one of these Ickes engineers entertains the PWA field staff at a luxurious home near Gettysburg each week-end. The owner is a vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Under his inspiration the party consumes scotch and soda and denounces Mr. Roosevelt's power policies. Unless the three anti-New Deal engineers—their names are known—are fired or muzzled, there will be an explosion on the Senate floor one of these days.

During 1934, the automobile caused the deaths of 24.7 persons out of each 100,000 of our population. Each 100,000 cars in use killed 130.4 people. Every time 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline were consumed, 20.1 persons died.

There are three different ways of looking at the automobile problem—and any one of them should be sufficiently impressive to make the public think, and think seriously. The problem would be bad enough if it were no greater than in previous years, but statistics show that it is steadily becoming more acute. In 1931, for example, automobile registrations were 3 per cent greater than in 1934 and gasoline consumption about one per cent greater—but 1931 automobile deaths were 8 per cent under 1934. This year, with automobile registrations and gas consumption again on the up-grade, it isn't pleasant to speculate on what the death toll will be—unless that proportion of the motoring public which is reckless, incompetent and plain discourteous is forced to change its ways.

A glance at the records shows that the so-called "unavoidable" accident is so rare as to be practically non-existent. All but a handful of accidents are caused by one of two things—mechanically defective cars, or a defect in the person behind the wheel. And of those two, the last is infinitely more important—93.9 per cent of the cars involved in accidents last year were in apparently good condition.

The time has passed when appeals to the reckless driver to improve his ways are sufficient. He has refused—and the force of public opinion, backed by modern, aggressively enforced laws, presents the only solution to the problem.

SYNOPSIS: Alison Rede knows that Daphne Sumers is carrying on a fling with another man while waiting to marry Robert Rede, Alison's father. The girl suspects other and worse things about Daphne. But Daphne has her father's entire confidence, and Alison has no one to turn to. He is too young, a young man who has done her a great service. She is supposed to meet him at lunch. There his father reminds her to go.

Chapter 26 BITTER SWEET

"What have you been saying?" Alison whirled round upon Daphne, her eyes blazing with indignation.

"Never mind that," Robert interrupted quickly. "It's got nothing to do with Daphne. It's I who say that you must not."

"But you know nothing about him. How can you? You've only seen him once!" Alison protested.

"I know him quite enough."

"What have you heard?" she demanded.

"I'd rather not talk about that," he began, but Alison cut in.

"You must tell me!"

"Surely it's enough if I—"

"No!" She could not control her anger now. "You order me not to meet him, you say he's not a fit friend for me. It's unreasonable! I must know why."

Daphne was still sitting on the floor beside the sofa, her long pink-tipped fingers lazily turning the lengths of cloth but now Alison caught a quick look flashed between her and Robert; a warning glance that said, "Be firm!" Alison's eyes became hard.

"Well?" she snapped.

"My dear girl, surely you can trust me. Don't you think you'd better just take my word?" Robert was unhappy; he had never seen his quiet and gentle girl in this mood and it was not easy to be firm.

"No." With an immense effort, she controlled her voice, spoke coolly. "I'm not going to take your word, father, or anybody else's without knowing why. If you'll tell me what he has done I can judge."

"Aren't you making rather a fuss over a mere acquaintance?" put in Daphne sweetly.

"I'm talking to my father." It was rude but Alison did not care. "I think you've made enough mischief already!"

"Alison!" protested Robert.

"I know. But I don't want to hear what she's got to say! I'm asking you to tell me. What has he done?"

Robert shifted uneasily. Daphne's eyes were on him faintly mocking. Alison was glaring at him, her eyes dark with rage. He coughed and shuffled.

"The man's a crook, my dear."

"All right. He's a crook then. But what has he done?"

"I'll tell you!" Daphne swung suddenly to her feet, scattering the patterns across the floor. "He calls himself Guy Westum, doesn't he? That's not his name. His real name is Guy Lumley, and he didn't dare to tell you that, because he was afraid you might find out the truth about him! He's only too well known you see! He said he was an architect, didn't he? It's not true. He is, he was a doctor. A doctor who just escaped being struck off the register, my dear!"

"How do you know all this?" Alison was dangerously quiet now.

"How? Because he had a practice out on the Riviera, at Nice, when I was out there, before he went smash. As a matter of fact, I was warned against him by some friends of mine."

Daphne was cool, slightly contemptuous. "There were stories, even then. After I left, the whole thing came out and he had to chuck up his practice!"

"What whole thing?"

"I really think, dear," broke in Robert, "that you must leave it at that. If Daphne told you, you probably wouldn't understand."

"Do you think I'm as silly as all that?" Alison gave a little harsh laugh.

"Even then, I think you ought to admit that older people have some sense, dear." Daphne's tone was scornful. "Your father wouldn't interfere without enough reason."

"My father'd believe anything you told him!" Alison flung the truth at her.

Daphne let it pass with a faint smile of despair; it was Robert who burst out angrily with "Really, Alison!"

"I don't care if it's true! Ever since I got home, she's been trying to make trouble between me and you!"

"Now that it had come, the girl let her tongue go. She was on the verge of

CONVICTED IN BREMER KIDNAPING

John J. McLaughlin (left), former Chicago political boss, and James J. Wilson, once a medical student at Northwestern University, are shown handcuffed together just after federal court in St. Paul, Minn., convicted them of conspiracy in the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker. Their fellow defendants, Arthur (Doc) Barker and Oliver Berg, were sentenced to life imprisonment but the court temporarily deferred sentencing McLaughlin and Wilson. politically if it doesn't play with the President. Coughlin has disavowed Third Party intentions. He can't work with the R.-publicans and they wouldn't have him if he could. That means he must either follow FDR and Mr. Roosevelt will refuse to woo his support) or defeat him for the Democratic nomination in '36. As to this possibility, ask yourself "with whom?" and you can gauge his chances for success. Don't forget either that plenty of people are watching for the psychological moment to do some in ensive sawing when his limb gets shaky enough.

PACT: Credit Edward A. O'Neal of the American Federation of Farm Bureaus with a large assist in promoting the Washington trek of farmers endorsing the AAA. New York learns that he was chiefly responsible for the backstage organizing—all through the AAA's own county agents helped quite a bit.

O'Neal is characterized by those who know him as a shrewd politician. He has consistently supported the AAA from the beginning. Now it has to be a success to justify his stand with his own followers. If it flops they might start looking for another leader.

Insiders also tell of a private understanding between O'Neal and Secretary Wallace which sheds light on their relationship. The story is that long before President Roosevelt was elected these two formed a mutual aid society to make sure that one for the other would get the Agriculture post in the Cabinet. It was further agreed that if one of them did the other would back him through thick and thin. O'Neal has certainly lived up to the pact.

ROUNDABOUT: The tentative draft of proposed licenses to govern interstate shipments of milk for the New York-New Jersey Metropolitan Sales Area—fruit of the 7-state conference promoted by Governor Lehman—contains the sentence "No part of this draft is to be considered as having approval of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration." Actually the AAA sat in at the framing. Comment runs that the boys must be growing timid.

There's a neat device in the setup to grease the skids for hard-boiled milk distributors who have refused

RAZING LEVEES SOUGHT TO FREE 'OL' MISSISSIPPI

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Washington—(AP)—Tear down all the levees on the Mississippi river, proposes Chase S. Osborn, and so restore to farmers the country's greatest source of natural fertility now going to waste.

Mr. Osborn, former governor of Michigan, would make a new Nile valley of the Mississippi and protect its cities and farms from flood much as medieval communities were walled against robber barons. His proposal was written to M. E. Cooley, state engineer, PWA, Detroit, who forwarded it to Harold L. Ickes. Ickes offered to arrange a discussion with government engineers.

"About the time the war between the states broke out," former Governor Osborn wrote, "the levees protecting towns were not more than 5 or 10 feet high. Since then the levees have been built up to 30 or 40 feet, perhaps, or at least great enclosing dykes that do not stand. Then came the building of the eads jetties and so on."

"The result has been that the colossal suspension and the water burden of the river has built up the bottom of the river between these artificial walls. Some of this material has gone out toward the sea when floods occur."

"However generally speaking the river has been confined so that the Mississippi valley has about lost its usefulness."

"Once a planter in the Mississippi bottoms was always a rich man. That was the choicest land in America. Now it is about as poor as we have—almost sub-marginal."

Let River Take Its Course

"My plan would be to tear down all the levees and let the river go where it would, building and fertilizing as it went."

"Then I would protect the towns by adequate levees, instead of trying to hold the river. There could be mounds of refuge for the country people, such as the Indians used for that purpose."

"People could be compelled to move out of the worst danger zones. The levees around the river towns would not need to be nearly so high if the river were allowed to expand and distribute itself."

"It would be ideal to canalize the Mississippi. A straight canal would be ideal for navigation and would not cost as much in the long run as it does to try to keep open a channel that is constantly filling and changing."

A raccoon caught by Joe Hayward of Bluffton, S. C., and imprisoned temporarily in an empty garbagan, gnawed a hole through the heavy metal and escaped.

BREVARD STUDENT DIES

VICTIM OF OWN HAND

Brevard, May 28.—(AP)—Elmer J. Shafer, 20, of Nashville, Tenn., a sophomore in Brevard College, ended his own life sometime Sunday night by firing a .32 calibre revolver bullet into his right temple. Dependence on ill health is believed to have been the cause for the deed.

At a coroner's inquest held yesterday, the jury decided that the youth came to his death by a pistol bullet fired by his own hands.

Mrs. Spilman Entertains.
Mrs. J. B. Spilman had a housewarming last night, delightfully entertaining the women of the college staff in her handsome new home on Forest Hill road. This is the first time she has entertained since the house has been completed and furnishings arranged in place.

She was assisted by Mrs. C. S. Forbes, Mrs. J. L. Kilgo and Mrs. A. W. Fleischman, and those who have been on the staff longest.

Miss Graham greeted the guests at the front door. Misses Davis, Ross, and Mrs. Fleischman served refreshments in the dining room. Mrs. Forbes and Miss Wilson served punch in the sun parlor. Mrs. Kilgo and Misses Lewis and Jenkins greeted the guests in the living room and halls, and guided them over the house.

4-H Club Representative

Miss Ruth Kiker, whose picture appeared in the News and Observer Monday as one of the winners of a trip to Washington, D. C., June 13-19, who is to represent the 4-H clubs of North Carolina because of outstanding success in the activities of the club, is completing her sophomore year at East Carolina Teachers College.

She began her work in the club when she was eight years old. Before she entered college she had made $1800, by raising poultry, canning and sewing projects. She has been paying her own expenses in college, and expects to go through the full four years. She is now a student assistant in the library.

During the past year she has been chosen by her fellow students as a delegate to state-wide meetings of collegiate organizations, the Methodist Student Conference, and the North Carolina Student Federation.

cause of the school whether in victory or defeat.

A new cup, given by John Lantares to the most valuable member of the baseball club, went to Edward Wells, star pitcher of the high school club. Mr. Rose said Wells had been faithful to the athletic department at all times and commended him for the fine spirit he had exhibited throughout his scholastic training.

The cash prize of $5 given by the Woman's Club to the student making the highest scholastic rating during four years in high school, was given to Neal Herring. The record of the young man was favorably commented upon by the school board.

The Keesh distinguished service cup, awarded each year to the student making the best all around record in school activities, was presented to Leo Burks and Ronald Slay, who tied for the honor. It is the second time in two years the honor has been split between two students, the same situation prevailing last year.

In calling attention to the special school election today, Mr. Rose told the audience, probably the largest ever to assemble in the campus building of East Carolina Teachers College for graduating exercises, headquarters of election proponents would be located at the office of Hon. F. C. Harding on Third street, and that arrangements had been made for the transportation of all persons who have no way of reaching the polls.

The spacious auditorium was packed to capacity and overflowed into the balconies. It is estimated that from two to three thousand persons saw the school turn out its greatest graduating class on the eve of the battle of ballots for a nine months' term.

The program consisted of the senior procession by the high school band which also rendered several numbers prior to the beginning of the exercises; invocation by Rev. W. A. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street Christian Church, a mixed chorus number, "The Sea Has Its Pearls," by students of Miss Oma Shindler, director of public school music; a solo, "Heart of Gold," by Miss Mildred Clark; "A May Morning" by the Girls' Glee Club; awarding of diplomas to commercial school graduates; awards and announcements by Mr. Rose, awarding of diplomas to high school graduates, and a number by the high school band under direction of Prof. H. A. McDougal, "Auld Lang Syne."

Judge Barnhill was presented by Hon. F. C. Harding as one of the leading jurists of the state, a man of character, ability and refinement who was truly worthy of speaking words of counsel to a graduating class not to be ministered unto, but to minister to the election today, urging his hearers to go to the polls and cast their ballot for children of succeeding years.

Judge Barnhill at the outset quoted the words of the Master "I come not to be minister unto, but to minister," and then counselled the students on the qualities that go into the making of a life of service.

"What does it take to make a life of service?" the jurist asked. Answering the question, he called attention of his young hearers to certain attributes of character he considered essential to successful living.

These were, sincerity, enthusiasm, respect for God and one's self, integrity, charity, endurance and service.

In his reference to charity he asserted that this did not apply alone to giving, but to human bridge through charitable tongues, and generous opinions of others.

As to endurance, he urged his hearers not to give up a task in the face of apparent failure, but to conduct and carry on to success in spite of difficulties.

Clyde A. Erwin, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and chairman of the Board of Trustees of East Carolina Teachers College, who will take part in the exercises of the inauguration of Dr. L. R. Meadows, on Saturday, June 1.

At this juncture he paid a distinct tribute to the service rendered by teachers of the state in sticking faithfully to their work in the face of lower salaries caused by the financial emergency which visited the country three years ago. He said they had rendered as much service during the emergency as if they had received five times the amount of their annual check.

North Carolina has maintained her splendid school system in spite of unusual financial conditions existing throughout the world, he stated. He said this was accomplished not so much through adequate funds provided by the legislature as through the faithfulness of the great army of teachers whose sacrificial spirit enabled the institutions to continue with undiminished enthusiasm and inspiration.

He declared it is not only essential to keep the schools open in coming years but to pay the teachers living salaries and give them necessary equipment to carry on their work.

He declared it is the duty of every citizen to support the schools. He called attention to the successful nine months' school election recently held in Rocky Mount, his home town, where he was formerly chairman of the board of trustees.

He urged the graduates to maintain interest in the schools and help build up a system that will be the pride of the state and an example for other states to follow.

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington (AP)—Word is being passed around in labor circles here that the next convention of the American Federation of Labor, meeting in Atlantic City next fall, may produce a fight to the finish between the industrial and trade unionists.

Burly, pugacious John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and a staunch believer that mass production workers should be organized by industry instead of by craft, is on the war path.

The trade-union-controlled executive council of the A. F. of L. has handed Lewis and his allies one of the most important set-backs they have received in a long time. It came in the council's ruling on the Anaconda copper case.

Various craft unions were given about 400 employees of Anaconda under a ruling of the council who were claimed by the mine, mill and smelter workers, an industrial union.

Lewis Voted Down

The ruling angered Lewis. He announced he will appeal to the convention in Atlantic City to back his stand without reservations else he will pre-empt a show-down battle.

The situation seems to be this: Lewis joined the president of the western metal miners union in his contention that the mine, mill and smelter workers should take in all employees "in and about the mine" just as the United Mine Workers take in all employees at the coal mines whether miners or carpenters.

The craft union members of the council voted down Lewis and George L. Berry of the printing pressmen's union, another industrial unionist, Lewis' second ally on the council—David Dubinsky, president of the Ladies garment workers—was absent when the vote was taken.

Arguments Advanced

Lewis and his fellow industrial unionists contend that divided organization means divided strength of bargaining power with employers. Many large employers also favor industrial unionism, to save duplicate bargaining.

Elimination of "jurisdictional strikes" also is advanced by some labor leaders as a reason for organization by industry rather than by craft. Construction jobs, particularly, often are tied up for long periods when one union strikes in protest to certain work going to another craft.

Work on the labor department building in Washington, for example, was stopped for weeks once when two unions had a dispute over which should put the covers on the radiators.

Buffalo Hunt

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

EVERY one in Puddle Muddle had been honored. Every one was now a member of Big Chief Eagle's tribe.

Suddenly Big Chief Eagle shouted: "Our enemies of the Tribe of Arrowheads have come to our plains and captured some of our buffalo."

"They have stepped over their bounds, have run through our forests, have shown no care feeling. But we have defeated them always. Again we will defeat them and they will beg for mercy."

"We must be brave. We, of the Tribe of Eagles, have roamed the plains and wandered the forests for so many years, and have kept our land, our teepees, our council fires safe."

"The snows have not caught us in their great drifts in the winters. We have beaten the winter snows. The rains have never done harm to crops. Nor has summer sun burnt our crops. He has been our friend—our great friend who watches us daily from place in sky."

"They have treated us so to reward us for bravery. Not even baby papoose has ever cried in fear."

"We will meet around Council Fire when Sun takes rest tonight. We will beat the drum and our call will be heard—to give us greatest strength than ever before to drive back our enemies, to recapture our buffalo, to keep those belonging on our plains."

"The breezes will help us. Great friends, the Bears, know that."

"How can we hunt buffalo when there are none around?" Top Notch cacklingly whispered to Willy Nilly. Soon Top Notch had his answer.

A ROUND the council fire that evening Top Notch realized that the buffalo hunt would be a make-believe one. It was what, of course, the Indian chief had said when he had first arrived—that they wanted to pretend to be living in the old days.

Now the plans were made and the enemies they were to drive back were "pretend" enemies called the Tribe of Arrowheads.

With beating drum and shouting and jumping the Indians and the Puddle Muddlers ran over their rough roads and cried: "Go back to your own plains, Tribe of Arrowheads!"

"We will drive you away and save our buffalo."

"We will hunt our wandering buffalo and bring them back to our plains."

"We will have buffalo meat, too, and their skins to keep us warm."

Jelly Bear, Honey Bear, the cubs Blacky and Jupiter, Rip, Top Notch, Christopher Columbus Crow, Sweet Face, Willy Nilly and all the Indians drove back the make-believe enemies. They captured with great showing of strength buffalo so large they could hardly carry them.

And at last, weary, out-of-breath, the victorious Indians and Puddle Muddlers heard the cry of complete victory from Big Chief Eagle.

They danced because of their victory. Then they sat around the council fire and the Indians told stories of bravery and courage of Indians who had lived long, long before.

It was wonderful to pretend the old days were again with them, but of a sudden Big Chief arose and shouted: "The smoke signals!"

Tomorrow—"The Smoke Signals"

Rejects Bids For Rebuilding Fair Structure

Reflector Bureau.

Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, May 28.—All bids submitted for the rebuilding of the wing of the main State Fair exhibit building destroyed by fire during the fair last fall, were rejected Monday by the State Board of Agriculture, which had called for these bids some weeks ago.

Commissioner of Agriculture W. A. Graham announced following the meeting. Before any new bids are called for, Commissioner Graham will investigate the possibility of securing a Federal grant or loan under the new Public Works program, with which to rebuild the structure.

"We think that now there is a good chance of our getting a Federal grant under the new PWA program, to put up the kind of building we want," Commissioner Graham said. "We have slightly more than $15,000 which was received in insurance on the building that burned, or rather the wing of the main exhibit building which burned."

"We are hoping to get a grant from the government sufficient to spend about $27,000 in rebuilding the destroyed structure."

As soon as Commissioner Graham is able to determine how much the Board of Agriculture can get from the Government, new bids will be called for and construction started in time for the building to be completed in time for the State Fair, to be held in October.

TRY TO SPEED FEDERAL FUND

PWA funds. The board will select those projects which it considers the most worth while and then make an effort to get them approved as rapidly as possible in Washington, so that construction may be started and people given employment at the earliest possible date.

Chairman Wayne believes that North Carolina should get at least $100,000,000 of the new Public Works allotment, and he and the other members of the Planning Board are going to do everything possible to see that the state does get at least this much.

Since the president has recently reduced the interest rates on PWA loans to 3 per cent and has announced that the Government will now give an outright grant covering 45 per cent of the cost of certain proved projects instead of only 30 cents in the past, the belief is that counties, cities and towns will be more anxious than ever to take advantage of PWA loans to build needed improvements.

PITT SOLONS TELL OF WORK

The state assumed full charge of the highways this money ceased to be allotted and found the county of Pitt bound to meet its obligations by an ad valorem tax. The action of Mr. Blount secured the passage of a fact finding bill and he said last night he fully expected Pitt to get repayed.

The next to speak was Senator Arthur Corey. He insisted the outstanding achievement of the recently adjourned Legislature was the ending of it in less than six months. He said people seem to think bills are written, dropped in a box and presto the law is enacted about everything and anything. But in reality it is a matter of getting one's own idea passed through a body which is made up of fifty different people each with a different idea about your own idea.

"It will be impossible to ever get going on a sixty day session again. It cannot be less than ninety or one hundred and twenty days," he said. When the budget was far smaller it took sixty days he explained.

"The drivers licensing law was passed but not with as many teeth in it as when started. But it has enough teeth left to do some good as passed. You will hear more of it later," he told the Rotarians. He reported that the Highway Patrol would be increased to number 121, four shortwave broadcasting stations would be set up in the state—one in Greenville according to the plans that obtained when he left Raleigh—to help in the enforcement of peace.

The next to speak was Representative John Hill Paylor. He gave a comprehensive and rapid account of the legislation initiated in the lower branch of the house. He recounted each law passed calling especial attention to details of those of special interest to Pitt County such as the one providing $106,365 appropriation for East Carolina Teachers College for the first biennium and $111,545 for the second. He carried long enough over the bill providing for the decrease of car license taxes to say it was reduced from 55 cents per hundred weight to 40 cents which means a saving of about two million dollars to the people of the state. A bill was passed requiring that makers of cars provide safety glass throughout in all cars sold in North Carolina by 1936; another providing that the unpaid salary of the late

Production Of Pontiacs Shows Great Gains

Pontiac, Mich., May 26.—Total production of 1935 model Pontiac sixes and eights now exceeds by a wide margin the entire production of 1934 models, it was stated today by H. J. Klingler, president and general manager of the Pontiac Motor Company.

"The 1934 model figure was passed earlier this week," said Mr. Klingler, "and the count at the close of business yesterday the 15th, showed that we have built 80,925 of the new 1935 models. This compares with a total of 76,533 for the entire production of 1934 Pontiacs.

"There is no slackening in our May production. In fact we produced 10,367 cars in the first eleven working days, which is an average of 942 per day. During that period there were three days of 1,000 cars a day or better. One of them, 1,017, represents the biggest single day's production this year. We should wind up the month with a 19,000 car total. April output was 18,749.

"Retail deliveries are continuing at the same high rate. May figures, of course, will not be available until well into June, but during the first four months this year our dealers delivered more than twice as many new Pontiacs as they delivered during the same four months period of any one of the previous three years.

"From our closest observation of conditions throughout the country, we have no reason to doubt that Pontiac dealers will sell 150,000 cars this year which will be more than twice their sales of 1934."

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, May 28.—(AP)—With the new deal's main recovery crop dislodged by the supreme court's adverse court ruling and the French currency prices clouding the final call horizon the stock market tossed about feverishly today.

A fast buying movement in equities that took place just after the opening pushed many issues up substantially. There was quick turn-about however led by metals, oils and alcohols. The ticker tape 194 several minutes behind floor transactions at one time. Then the activity leveled off as buying support appeared in some divisions.

The rail utilities had merchandise stocks bucked the downward current. Grains were only slightly lower. Other commodities pointed down. Bonds proceeded cautiously. Sterling sagged in foreign exchange dealings. The late stock tone was heavy.

Transfers were 2,000,000 shares.

turnovers to test in the courts the constitutionality of the state sales tax.

The court fight was called for in a resolution adopted at the association's annual convention here. The resolution instructed members to issue to customers refund checks in connection with all taxes collected so the tax can be refunded if the law is ruled unconstitutional. The resolution also pledged food merchants of the state to do "all in their power to defeat any candidate for state office who advocated the sales tax."

Gov. Ehringhaus was criticized sharply by James Folger, executive secretary of the association, in discussions preceding adoption of the resolution.

"Gov. Ehringhaus stumped the state in opposition to the sales tax," said Folger. "He spoke here in the courthouse of this county, going on record against it. And then like most ten-cent politicians, went to Raleigh and switched around. He sold out to large corporations seeking to be relieved of taxes."

To Push For Bonus Payment.
Washington, May 28.—(AP)—Patman bill leaders in Congress decided today to go forward with their drive for cash payment of the bonus after this session and to sacrifice the inflationary provisions of the bill if necessary.

At a joint session of the House and Senate supporters of immediate payment, it was agreed to hold the Senate to determine what cash payment bill would have the best chance to succeed and then push for action on it regardless of whether it should be the Patman bill recently vetoed by President Roosevelt, the Vinson bill or some combination of the two.

It was decided definitely there would be no compromise on the demand for cash payment but on the method of financing. The decision, it was believed, virtually killed any chances of an agreement between the administration and the cash bonus advocates at this session.

Plan Voluntary Code Structure.
Washington, May 28.—(AP)—A voluntary code structure under a revised Blue Eagle was being seriously considered today by administration leaders to replace the compulsory provisions of the Recovery law invalidated by the Supreme court.

Plan to Re-write AAA Code

Washington, May 28.—(AP)—A complete re-writing of the AAA amendments to conform to the Supreme court's decision on NRA was decided today by the senate and house leaders and Secretary Wallace.

Finding the far-reaching license provisions provided in the act were affected both by the interstate commerce and principles and requirements that standards be set up in delegating authority the administration leaders decided to recommit the bill to the senate agricultural committee.

Those attending the conference included Senator Robinson, majority leader. Chairman Jones, Democrat of Texas of the House agricultural committee. Chairman Smith of the senate agricultural committee. Secretary Wallace, Chester Davis, AAA administrator and Seth Thomas, counsel for the AAA.

Washington.—(AP)—Every thousand citizens in American cities have 92 public servants working for them at an average salary of $1,709 a year, the international city managers association has found.

The larger the city, the greater the proportion of employees, says the association, and the higher the average salary.
