

PITT VOTES
SOLIDLY FOR CROP CONTROL5,812 Persons Vote in AAA Balloting Saturday With Only
One Against

Although complete reports had not been received, it was indicated on the basis of unofficial returns received today from eight of the thirteen precincts that Pitt county tobacco growers went to the polls in large numbers Saturday and voted overwhelmingly in favor of the federal crop control program.

E. F. Arnold, director of the local farm department, who was busy today attempting to compile returns from the missing townships, said 5,812 contract signers voted in the eight townships reported with indications the total vote will go beyond the 8,000 mark.

In all of the townships reporting only one person voted against the program, that being recorded in Beaver Dam township.

The townships not reporting were Pateolus, Carolina, Belvoir, Swift Creek and Fountain.

Had not ballots been given out, Mr. Arnold expressed belief the vote would have gone well above the figure in the eight townships reporting. However, farmers were being given until next Saturday night at 7 o'clock in which to complete filling their ballots. They have been asked to file either at the farm office here or with any of the committeemen who acted as poll holders Saturday. Additional ballots will be placed in the hands of the committeemen at once, it was said, in an effort to speed up the compilation of the ballot.

Greenville township lead in the balloting, unofficial returns showing 1,370 voted "yes," indicating conclusively they appreciate what the AAA crop control movement has done for them in the way of improved prices.

Chicod township, which always casts the second largest vote in the county, came next to Greenville with a total of 1,205 and no votes against the proposal to continue the crop control movement another year.

Returns from the remainder of the townships follow: Farmville 712; Falkland, 300; Beaver Dam, 354; Ayden, 900; Winterville, 661; Bethel, 373.

Townships not reporting are: Pateolus, Carolina, Belvoir, Swift Creek and Fountain.

The balloting sustained the prediction made by Mr. Arnold the first of the week that Pitt county would go overwhelmingly for the crop control program by reason of the splendid way the county has rallied in recent years.

GOVERNMENT PLANS NEW DRIVE ON BOOTLEGGERS

Washington, June 24.—(AP)—A nationwide check of retail liquor dealers in a drive against repeal bootlegging has been proposed by the treasury in a request for $1,086,941 of work-relief money.

If the cash is allotted, the treasury said its alcohol tax unit would investigate the liquor trade in four-score cities with populations of 100,000 or more, including the national capital. It added:

"A test program of making a house to house canvass, in certain collection districts, has furnished evidence that certain dealers are being used as outlets for the untaxed products of bootleggers, and that the illicit operations of the post-prohibition period, due to the activities of organized bootleggers, are totally different from those encountered by collectors of internal revenue prior to prohibition."

Ninety-five of North Carolina's 100 counties are represented in the student body at North Carolina State college.

Following Conference Late Sunday

Union, S. C., June 24.—(AP)—The Monarch mills, scene of a double slaying during the strike rioting last week, re-opened this morning with practically a full force and no untoward incident.

The reopening was effected under an agreement secured by Governor Olin Johnston, who rushed here on receipt of word that W. B. Franklin and A. L. Stutts had been killed in rioting which grew out of a fist fight in picket lines.

The mill was closed June 19 after weavers went on strike in protest against employment of non-union workers.

Governor Johnston secured an agreement between the management and workers which was designed to allow operation of the mill pending arbitration of the dispute which was expected at an early date.

Gastonia, June 24.—(AP)—Following a conference late yesterday between mill officials and union representatives the Gambrill-Melville mill at Bessemer City started this morning on the old 40-hour per week basis.

This schedule is applicable only for today and further negotiations will follow this afternoon. Decision to operate today on the 40-hour schedule came following long distance communications between the managers of the mill and its owners at Wilmington, Delaware.

Saturday

Although total registration figures for the liquor control election to be held in this county July 6, were not available today, it was said at the office of F. C. Harding, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Elections, that this information probably would be made public during the week.

Although figures for all four precincts in Greenville and Chicod townships after the primary last June, a new registration was ordered prior to the November election. The registration was light and because persons did not register at that time will be disqualified for the liquor election unless they register again. Heavy registration was expected in both sections.

Although registration had been light here prior to Saturday, warning sent out by both proponents and opponents of the liquor question caused voters to move rapidly to be in readiness to cast their ballot.

Mr. Harding expressed belief the registration from all sections would be available by the middle or latter part of the week at the latest.

MYSTERY CLOAKS WIFE'S PLUNGE

While Mrs. Robert English, wife of an officer of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, lay near death in a hospital, police dug into the mystery of circumstances surrounding her plunge from her fifth floor apartment in Washington. Harold Wayne Starr (inset), former NRA attorney, was in her apartment when she went through the window. Police questioned him for 20 hours but released him under $200 bond for appearance as a witness after he told them Mrs. English called him to her home to ask about divorce laws in the District of Columbia. Raleigh, June 24.—(AP)—The Board of Health today reported 11 new cases of infantile paralysis over the week-end, bringing to 205 the sufferers from the disease this year in North Carolina with 146 having been stricken in June.

As has been the case since the disease flared up early in May, nearly all of the cases came from the east central section of the state but Burke and Richmond counties each reported its first case.

Other counties reporting additional cases were Wake and one each in Lenoir, Granville, Franklin, Duplin, Durham and Bladen.

"There were only 11 cases reported on Sunday and Monday which is a little better than it has been," Dr. Carl Reynolds, state health officer, pointed out. The prevalence of the disease appears to continue to be centered in most central part of the state.

Although Mrs. Whichard had been suffering from heart trouble for some time, she appeared to be in customary health when she retired Saturday night. Wilson And Edgecombe
Rush Liquor Store Plans

Raleigh, June 24.—(AP)—Wilson and Edgecombe county authorities today pushed ahead with plans to set up county liquor stores as soon as possible, while organized drys considered legal moves to block them.

As soon as the overwhelming victory of advocates of county liquor control in the local referendum was evident, Thomas H. Woodward, chairman of the Wilson county board of commissioners, said a liquor store possibly would be opened Thursday.

He declared that in anticipation of the outcome of the referendum the board had already lined up a board of liquor control.

Formal ratification of the board took place at a special meeting this morning. The board named B. J. Williams, chairman, of Wilson; S. W. Anderson, of Wilson, and Leslie D. Thomlinson, of Black Creek. The new board met immediately to organize and lay plans for sales.

W. C. Hargrove, chairman of the Edgecombe commissioners, believed liquor stores could be opened in Tarboro and Rocky Mount within eight or ten days.

The commissioners will meet tomorrow to name a liquor control board and order stocks and fixtures for the stores.

While dry forces in each county indicated they would make no attempt to interfere with plans for the stores, Kale K. Burgess, vice president of the United Dry Forces of North Carolina, asserted an injunction would be sought if an attempt was made to open the liquor stores.

The official votes for Wilson county following canvass today was 4,147 for and 428 against. In Edgecombe the unofficial vote was 2,307 for and 211 against.

FIRST UNION SERVICE OF
SUMMER HELD

Rev. W. A. Ryan Delivers Initial Sermon
at Memorial Baptist Church

The first of the series of union services to be conducted here this summer was held at Memorial Baptist church last night with the sermon being delivered by Rev. W. A. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street Christian church.

The church was packed to overflowing and special music was rendered by the choir of the Christian church. Featuring the musical program was an anthem with the solo parts being sung by Mrs. Ada Gray Proctor.

The remainder of the services will be held on the court house square each Sunday evening, barring rain, when they will be carried to Memorial Baptist church. It had been planned to hold the initial service on the court house lawn but arrangements, it was said, by members of the committee, could not be completed in time.

The services were started several years ago and have always been largely attended. All churches of the city participate.

Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, pastor of Memorial Baptist church, presided over the services last night with Rev. R. C. Grady, pastor of the Presbyterian church, making the opening prayer.

"How Much Have We Learned?" His text was taken from Dr. Moffatt's translation of the tenth verse of the forty-eighth chapter of Isaiah. "I have urged you, nothing came of it, testing you in the furnace, all in vain."

The speaker said in part: Among the saddest words of human experience. The real tragedy of life is not pain, but sterile pain—pain that has no redeeming outcome. This was the tragedy of Israel—not only that she suffered, sinned and was outraged, but that she learned so little from her experiences.

As we turn the pages of human history and read again the record of civilization's major tragedies we see clearly that the human race has persistently refused to learn enough to prevent the repetition of its harrowing experiences. It is as if one heard across the centuries the words of Jehovah as relayed by Isaiah—"I have purged you, nothing came of it, testing you in the furnace, all in vain."

What have we learned about war? A few years ago we were saying that we were through with war. Not only was it a barbarous thing, but a silly, futile, insane and useless thing. We, the civilized nations of the earth, believed this when the Versailles Treaty was signed, the Locarno Pact, the Nine-power Treaty, the Kellogg-Briand Treaty. We might do other internationally silly things but war would never again be one of them. What have we learned from it? How enormous experiences of 1914-18? One does not need to answer. A glance over the headlines of the daily press will answer for us. Every European border is a line over which a war may any day be fought. Russia and Japan are always potential enemies. Japan continues to gobble up as much of Chinese territory as it pleases her to acquire and will desert only if the western powers step in and take the very measures which will eventually in war. Even in our own country recently one of our brilliant military-minded geniuses insisted that we should do what would be tantamount to erecting military defenses along the U. S.-Canadian border. Every nation today accepts war as one of the inevitables, the only questions we are asking are: When will the war come, and? Whom shall we fight? We have learned nothing from our experiences except, possibly, how to make war more revolting, brutal and inhuman.

What have we learned about social security? Centuries of the building of civilized states have taught that there is happiness and security in a state only in direct proportion as happiness and security are assured to all within the state. In spite of the fact that no nation has ever been able to survive with an unequalized program of social security, every nation in the world today is trying to build a civilization which contains a few favored groups and great poverty-stricken, down-trodden, underprivileged groups to whom neither happiness nor security are in any appreciable measure guaranteed. In our own country millions tonight are living on charity while other millions work at wages barely sufficient to mark the difference between bare existence and starvation. We have learned little about living together. Still more interested in materials than in men, in dividends than in wages, in plan's rather than in personality, the employing classes continue to (Continued on Page Two) crippled the plan for general distribution of cheap power. But administration spokesmen accepted these limitations. Now the plan is to reshape the bill on the floor or in conference so as to please the President.

The same strategy was applied to the holding company. The stubborn House Committee struck out the death sentence clause. But the White House hopes to sharpen the bill—and the axe—between now and final passage. It's the old game of "when you can lick 'em, join 'em"— for a while.

SCOTCH: Harold Ickes is putting over a fast one on cities and states which have borrowed money on non-federal projects.

With some grumbling over interests; rates cities and states have put up about $500,000,000 worth of collateral in return for partial federal grants. Now Mr. Ickes proposes to sell this security to underwrite new PWA projects. He will need this extra money to save his face in view of the famous "Harry and I" conference at which Mr. Roosevelt Spender Hopkins boss of the $4-100,000,000 works. On the surface it looks like nothing more than an attempt to keep PWA alive.

But there is a hidden reason behind the move. Already some cities and states have asked for a return of their collateral. Others may default on it before Ickes has collected in full. But if he can place state and municipal bonds in the hands of the bankers, he won't be left holding the bag. Mr. Ickes, if you don't know it, is Scotch.

CUT: Ewing Y. Mitchell exaggerates a bit when he claims that his protest halted the sale of U. S. ships to a Baltimore firm at $4,600 a hull.
Much more important questions than profit and loss blocked the deal.

The Shipping Board contracted for the sale of more than 100 obsolete vessels to a Baltimore firm. It expected they would be refitted or sold to domestic firms as scrap, the latter being the reason for the low price. Then it developed that the scrap was being resold to Japan, which has gained a monopoly on secondhand steel in all parts of the world. Since the shambles at Shanghai Nippon has bought more than 50 per cent of all the scrap exported by the United States.

Army intelligence understands that this material has gone into the manufacture of guns, tanks, shell casings, ships and auxiliaries. Confidential reports to State and Commerce confirm this suspicion. So certain high officials thought it wise to cut the Shipping Board supply. But Mr. Mitchell wasn't in on the play.

PRACTICAL: The politicians have their clutches on the $4,000-000,000 work-relief program despite President Roosevelt's warnings. Already the promise of generous slices has figured in vote deals on Capitol Hill.

A majority of the state work-relief directors hail from the political ranks. Senators up for reelection next year—Leaders Harrison and Robinson—have been permitted to pick their own men in their states.
Anti-administration Senators—notably Huey Long—have been frozen out. Old-line machines hostile to the White House have been conciliated by giving them the right to name the directors and rake their own leaves.

A practical politician was named to handle the federal funds in a certain mid-western state. When a high-minded New Dealer from that state protested, she was told: "Listen, you have a job at Washington.
You're not helping the party back home. Somebody has to carry Missouri for us."

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

SYNOPSIS: Laurie Moore's employer, Mark Albery, the airplane manufacturer, is much interested in her. Laurie goes to Liverpool to see her thoughtless sister Gladys, and on the way back is tricked by the offhand comment of a strange young man in the train who saved her from falling out of the train.
Now the young man is telling Albery that he is Rex Moore, Laurie's husband who had crashed and apparently been lost trying to fly the Pacific.

Chapter Five

"MY—WHAT?"

WHERE did you crash?" demanded Albery of the returned Rex Moore. "Who found you?"
"Crashed in a typhoon somewhere near the Marquesas Islands. I did the first hop to Fiji in fine time. And the next one, too. Then I struck a bad patch, the worst one I ever knew.
It was no good. I was helpless. I wasn't forced down—I was hurled down."

"Don't remember much about it.
Don't know why I wasn't smashed to pieces. Must have been unconscious for days. I had been picked up by a yacht and was taken to California. They told me the storm died down as quickly as it had come up.
The people who owned the yacht looked after me for more than a year."

"The people who owned the yacht looked after me."

"But why didn't you send word home?"

"Didn't feel like it. They were decent folk and kept it dark. I was a useless log. What was the good? Better that you should think me dead."

"You always were a queer chap.
But after you recovered your sight?"

"I was down and out—a bit mad.
I think I owed my life, my eyes, to those people. But I gave them the slip and made my way to New York somehow or other and picked up a bit of a living there."

"Did you fly under another name?"

"No, I didn't fly at all. I thought I was through with that. I—I just picked up a living."

"Why have you come back now?"

"Because I had to. I got a change of heart." He gave a bitter little laugh. "I told myself I'd been a fool, doing nothing but just cursing because I'd had bad luck. I thought of you, Mr. Albery. I thought you might give me another chance. I'm all right now. I can trust myself. I want to carry on, if you don't think I'm too much of a crock and too old for the job."

"I'm so glad to see you I don't know what to say," was Albery's warm reply.

AND, then, abruptly, he fell into silence.

He remembered how, only a few days ago, he had said to young Mrs.
Moore in his office, "I sometimes wonder if you still hope against hope that he might come back?"

And here he was, standing before him, Rex Moore, her husband, back from the dead, in the amazement and shock of the scene he had not thought of the day before. That made it more ironic, reprehensible than ever.
The young man must evidently have gotten off his head for a while. And no wonder.

"Moore," he said, "haven't you let anybody know that you're back in England—alive?"

"No, I have not. Somebody might have remembered me. I'd have had to tell this silly yarn a thousand times. I've been in London a week, just trying to get used to it."

"But, my dear boy, haven't you yet to possible devastation—but he didn't. All he bought was gold—under a pledge from the Bank of France to ship it here even if an embargo had to be clamped on all other gold exports. There was no more risk to that than to bidding a grand slam with thirteen trumps.

The whole incident has been played up as something terrifically significant. Well-posted New Yorkers can't see it. There's no new policy involved in Treasury acquisition of gold in large quantities. We have been willing right along to take all the gold that came our way.
Is for "protecting the gold standard." It's a safe bet that Mr. Mor-genthau was more concerned about protecting the dollar from the sharp tried to get in touch with your people?"

"I have no people. You've forgotten that."

"But haven't you tried to get in touch with your wife?"

"My—what?" The young man's back was turned to Albery. He was finishing a whisky and soda in which they had been celebrating his return.
It sounded rather as if he were choking.

"Your wife. It's the most extraordinary thing—your wife is working for us at the office. It almost seems as if we were both dreaming, doesn't it? But we're not!"

Rex Moore turned his eyes on Albery's face in a hard stare. For a moment they really looked like the eyes of a blind man, but Albery did not notice that.

He told the airman in a few rapid words how his young wife, believing herself his widow, of course, had been in a rather bad way out in Australia, and had been discovered by his friend and colleague in Sydney and sent home, and how ever since she had been a valued member of the London office staff.

"I SUPPOSE, my dear boy, you thought she was still in Australia!" he concluded.

the promise. There could be no such doubt when the gold belonged to the U. S. Government. Comment, runs that Mr. W. C. Potter probably shared Mr. Jein Tannery's appreciation of Mr. Morgenthau's intervention but was tactful enough not to express it so freely.

RESTRICTION: The key role played by marine insurance companies in the French drama has hardly been mentioned. These companies—under the leadership of Lloyd's of London—have had a rule ever since the American Civil War that they will not insure more than a certain quantity of gold on the high seas at one time. They won't break that rule for anybody.

That's why the Bank of France was in such a stew. The insurable quota of gold was already afloat—so no more could be shipped. The shortage of dollar exchange which threatened a crisis arose from the fact that private American buyers wouldn't take the Bank's gold if they had to leave it in France—which was necessary—for fear of embargo troubles. The Bank was ready and willing to exchange its metal for dollars—but with practically no takers until Uncle Sam came along. Under those conditions its huge gold reserves were futile as a guarantee of safety.

An odd feature of the insurance restriction is that it applies only to total gold in transit. There is no limit to the amount that can be carried by any one ship. There would have been no kick if the entire quota had been piled on the Normandie.

BALKS: Financial circles learn that both Paris and London have dropped delicate hints that they are ready to talk stabilization if we are ready to discuss final settlement of the war debts.

This sounds fair enough—but there's a hitch. It's painfully clear that the British and French idea of a settlement is to buy off a billion dollars' worth of debt with a few nickels. They want to be free of the stigma of default—but they don't care to pay much for the privilege.

Washington is reported to be profoundly uninterested in the feelers.

government has no objection to considering reasonable quid pro quos but balks at being played for a sucker.

MILD: The House subcommittee's modification of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill lies in exactly with our prediction that the holding companies' fate would eventually be left to the discretion of the Securities Exchange Commission.

The setup for this compromise has been in the making for some time. Insiders say that FDR will accept it despite his outward insistence on the death sentence—and has been ready to do so all along.
His press conference interpretation that in-state groups like Public Service of New Jersey and "investing companies" like North American would be exempt confirms this.

Utility leaders expect a floor fight in the House to restore the original text—but have no fear that it will succeed. They further prophesy that the Senate will fall in line for the mild House measure with surprisingly little fuss.

RECAPTURE: New York merchants have a keen eye on the innovation of a Philadelphia store in extending a 2 per cent discount for retail cash purchases and 1 per cent for payment within 30 days. They figure this might prove a worthwhile answer to credit problems—especially in cutting the cost of bookkeeping and collection.

Many department stores are extending the privilege of installment purchases to cover a wide variety of items—including men's clothing.
In some cases they offer "run of the shop" on an installment basis.
They hope this departure will recapture some of the business they have been losing to mail order houses.

Evans-Hughes.

Parkton, N. C., June 24.—The Presbyterian Church in Parkton was the scene of a beautiful wedding Friday evening, June 21st, at eight o'clock, when Miss Myrtle Hughes became the bride of David A. Evans of Greenville, N. C. The Rev. Neil McInnis officiated.

The church was decorated with pines, ivy and smilax which formed a background for the candelabra holding white cathedral candles. Floor baskets of gladiolus, lilies and carnations carried out the color scheme of green and white.

A program of nuptial music in which Miss Sarah Currie of Fayetteville, played Dradla's "Souvenir" as a violin solo, and Donald McQueen, of Sarasota, Florida, sang "For You Alone," by McNair, and "O Promise Me," by McKoven. Miss Eleanor Hughes of Homerville, Ga., accompanied, played the wedding march from Lohengrin as a processional and Mendelssohn's Wedding March as the recessional. Miss Currie played softly "To a Wild Rose," by MacDowell, during the ceremony.

The ushers were Guy Evans, and Studie Bost, of Greenville; John G. Hughes, Jr. and Neil D. Hughes. The groomsmen were Plato Evans, William Taft, Wesley Harvey, and Fred Forbes, Jr. of Greenville. Louis B. Garrison, uncle of the groom, acted as best man.

The bridesmaids, Miss Lucile McQueen, of Punta Gorda, Florida, Miss Catherine Lee Clark of Clarkton, Miss Sarah Cobb and Miss Lee Ona Hughes, were dressed in pale pink organza with caps tied with fushia ribbon. They carried bouquets of mixed flowers in shades of pink and lavender. The dame of honor, Mrs. Marvin Blount, of Greenville, entered next, wearing a fushia organza dress and carried a bouquet of tallman roses and delphinium.

The maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Hughes, sister of the bride, wore a rose chiffon dress and carried an arm bouquet of sweetheart roses. Master Tommy Ashford, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ashford, as ring bearer, wore a suit of white satin and carried the ring in a calla lily. He was followed by Virginia McQueen, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McQueen of Fayetteville, and Jean Moye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Moye, of Murray, N. C., as flower girls. They wore Kate Greenaway dresses of pink organza and carried nosegays.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a hand-some gown of white empire lines, over which was worn an Elizabethan coat of duchess lace with insertions of satin to form a long train. Her veil was fashioned to a tulle cap and fell to fingertip length. She carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Following the wedding a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents after which the bride and groom left for an eastern trip. For traveling the bride wore a dress of black net trimmed in rose taffeta with rose accessories, and a shoulder corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Hughes entertained the entire bridal party at luncheon at the Cotton Boll in Fayetteville on Friday noon.

Mrs. Evans is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Hughes of Parkton. She received her education at Queens Chocora, Charlotte, and East Carolina Teachers College, Greenville. For the past year she has been a member of the faculty of the Bladenboro high school.

Concert At College This Evening.

The concert by Ethel Wright and Tom Fuson at the college tonight will be at eight o'clock, in the Austin Auditorium. Miss Ona Shindler will assist at the piano.

Their program is a delightful combination of songs, from the masters to folk songs and freestyle songs, such as "Last Night the Nightingale Woke Me" and "The Kerry Dance."

Among the folk songs are a Chinese folk song, "The Forest of the Green Dragon," a Mexican song, a group of Irish songs, and one from the Germans, as well as some English favorites.

These two artists are noted for their duet singing and their voices are said to blend as one. Miss Wright's voice is a rich contralto and Tom Fuson's, a mellow tenor. The two types of voices that blend best of all.

Mr. and Mrs. Fuson arrived yesterday afternoon and are guests of Dr. and Mrs. Meadows at their home on Fifth street. They came directly from New York city in their private car, but will not return to the city until the last of July as they turn towards the west after leaving here to fill a series of engagements at colleges and universities. Their next stop will be at Sheperdstown, Va., and their last engagement at Dillon, Montana.

Every engagement is a return engagement. This will be their sixth successive summer at the Northern Normal School in South Dakota. Their summer tours are like glorious vacations to these two artists. During the winter months they go out from New York city direct. Except when they sing in oratorios, they give independent concerts.

They live on Washington Heights in a house built by Oscar Hammerstein, and there take some pupils.

HOLD-UP ARTISTS GET $256 IN DAYLIGHT JOB

Williamston, June 24.—King Riddick, Griffiths township negro, was held up and robbed of $256 in cash here in broad open daylight at the close of the week, the robbery taking place just off one of the town's main thoroughfares.

Riddick was about to purchase an automobile and went to the bank for his money. Two strange negroes under suspicion, are thought to have known Riddick's business, and when he returned from the bank with the money in his pocket, the two stopped him, one putting his hand over his mouth while the other relieved him of the entire sum. The negroes escaped before it was known what had been done.

as Christians concerned with the salvation of the world. I hope that eventually the day will come when we shall be conscious of no differences of churchmanship between members of the various groups—only a sense of the presence of God in all and a willingness to work with all to the glory of God and the blessing of men.

Anti-Rabies Clinic to End Here Saturday

The anti-rabies clinics which has been held at the courthouse the last several weeks will come to a close Thursday, Friday and Saturday, according to information given out today by Paul Fitzgerald, Jr., who is in charge of the work here.

The clinic will be open Thursday and Friday afternoons but Saturday it will be held open all day to give dog owners the last chance to vaccinate their dogs against the rabies.

Fitzgerald said today dog owners were being given one more chance to have their dogs vaccinated before the allotted time expires. Beginning Monday, July 1, he said, dogs will be shot summarily and those owners who have not had their dogs vaccinated will be subjected to indictment and trial. Those who do have their dogs inoculated by a rabies inspector may get credit on their taxes to the extent of 50 cents. This is in accordance with an act of the last General Assembly.

What have we learned about religious values? Very little, if our words and actions do not lie. In all religious groups there are still many who think that religious values are matters of creedal correctness, the observance of certain forms and the maintenance of certain ecclesiastical organizations. We have forgotten, if we ever knew, that religious values are matters of life, not of creeds, doctrines and ceremonies. So long as we are more concerned with the preservation of our denominational groups rather than in the presentation of religious values as revealed in Jesus Christ, we have learned little. So long as we continue to insist that fellowship in the Church must be predicated upon conformity of belief and practice rather than upon the presence of the spirit of our Lord in human life, we have learned little. Our smug complacency and sectarian self-satisfaction must give way before the demands of Christ-filled lives, so that membership in our churches, for example will not depend upon our uniformity of opinion and similarity of ceremonial forms, but upon belief in and willingness to serve God's Son, Our Lord Jesus Christ. I wonder what you expect of these union services which are held from time to time in Greenville? I'll tell you what I am hoping will grow out of them—a closer fellowship between all religious groups, the realization that men can be Christian regardless of their church affiliation, and eventually the healing of the divisions which separate us into competitive groups, or a least only nominally cooperating groups, and bring us together

W. H. Jones Grows Large Cabbage and 'Spuds' This Year

W. H. (Bud) Jones, farmer residing on the Falkland highway a short distance from Greenville, who sometime ago had a hen to lay an egg weighing 3-4 of a pound, has forged to the front as a producer of large cabbage and Irish potatoes.

Jones brought a cabbage to the Reflector office this morning he said, tipped the scales at 141-2 pounds, along with several Irish potatoes of an unusually large size. The cabbage is of the Arthur variety and the potatoes Red Bliss.

The vegetables were placed on display in the Reflector office but in a short time they will be used in filling a certain gastronomic vacuity experienced by members of the staff during the summer months. The cabbage is one of the largest ever produced in this section although last year the County home was credited with a crop of tremendous vegetable.

GOVERNOR ON GAME REFUGE

Chief Executive and Wife Vacationing in Shadow of Mount Mitchell

By J. C. BASKERVILLE
Staff Correspondent
Mt. Mitchell, State Game Refuge, June 24.—Governor and Mrs. J. C. B. Ehringhaus are relaxing here today in the cool breezes that sweep down from Mt. Mitchell, which overlooks the Mt. Mitchell State Game Refuge, on the first vacation period Governor Ehringhaus has had since the recent session of the general assembly. He found the coolness of the higher altitudes unusually refreshing after temperatures in Raleigh which had run up as high as 96 degrees. The day-time temperature here runs between 75 and 80 degrees and at night drops to 50 and sometimes even lower, during the hottest summer months. Last night the Governor and his party slept under layers of blankets and this morning said they had slept better than they had in many weeks.

This State Game Refuge, to which Governor Ehringhaus is paying his first visit, is a veritable nature's wonderland for anyone who enjoys the mountains and wild life. It consists of more than 16,000 acres, all but 17 of which are leased from the Federal Government. The state owns outright only a plot of 167 acres in the center of this area, upon which the fish hatchery, rearing pools and the pens for rearing game and game birds, as well as the homes of the five or six game wardens, of which C. N. Mease is chief warden, and refuge supervisor, are located.

These 16,000 acres in the refuge, which in turn are located in the center of about 100,000 acres of land in the western division of the Pisgah National Forest, are located in one of the most beautiful sections of the Blue Ridge Mountains, with the 167 acres owned by the state lying in secluded mountain cove or valley at the base of Mount Mitchell, only six miles from the summit of this majestic mountain, the highest peak east of the Rocky Mountains. The altitude of this little valley, almost completely surrounded by towering mountains many of them almost as high as Mt. Mitchell, is 3,235 feet and within 30 minutes it is possible to hike or drive a car over a National Forest Service trail to altitudes in excess of 4,500 feet. Horseback and foot trails lead all the way to the top of Mt. Mitchell, where the Mt. Mitchell State Park, consisting of 1,294 acres of land on the summit, and owned by the state, is located but still undeveloped and still inaccessible to the public except over the toll motor road from Black Mountain to the top. Forest Service trails now lead from this valley in which the Mt. Mitchell Game Refuge is located to the top and it is hoped that before long the National Forest Service will build a motor road leading from the refuge here entirely to the top of Mt. Mitchell.

The refuge area is teeming with wild life of every sort and Governor Ehringhaus is likely to look out the window of the guest house any morning and see a black bear snoozing on the porch or playfully climbing one of the log posts supporting the roof. For in addition to the three or four bears in the cages of game farm here, there are between 50 and 75 bears living wild within the refuge area. Many of these are so tame that they wander along the roads and trails in the refuge completely oblivious to human beings and even automobiles. They frequently visit the springs of the refuge wardens and drink milk of milk and eat any food they can find. The bears are good natured and peace-loving and never attack other game or persons unless hungry or angered.

Deer in the refuge are almost as tame as the bears and may be seen darting across the roads and along the trails. Last fall it was estimated that there were 345 grown deer in the refuge area and it is now believed that with the many fawns born this spring the number amounts to at least 500. Some of these deer are so tame that they come up around the administration buildings and homes of wardens and eat out of their hands. There are literally thousands of squirrels and rabbits and hundreds of raccoons, opossums, minks, muskrats, ruffed grouse, pheasants, quail and doves within the refuge.

The most attractive features of the refuge to fishermen, however, are the 37 miles of trout streams flowing through it, with their thousands of speckled and rainbow trout. A conservative count last fall showed more than 15,000 trout 4 inches long in these streams but present estimates are that there are at least 50,000 trout from 4 to 14 inches long in these 37 miles of mountain streams. About 10,000 trout, ranging from only a few months old, to a year and two years old are kept in the rearing pools of the fish hatchery here most of the time. So far this summer Chief Warden Mease and his staff of wardens have released more than 19,000 trout in the streams and rivers adjacent to the refuge.

MARTINS WIN SUNDAY GAME FROM LOCALS

Behind the six-hit pitching of Dick Cherry, Williamston defeated Greenville 4-2 here yesterday afternoon.

Cherry also featured in fielding as well as Marable the Martins' second sacker who had a total of ten chances.

In the fourth frame Wagner, of Greenville, got a single and was brought home on Parker's triple. In the ninth Hankamp doubled and then scored on Wagner's double. Wagner with a double and single and Farley with two singles, led the Greens.

The Martins gathered eleven hits off the offerings of Naktens and May. In the fifth frame singles by Cherry, Marable, and Corbitt, aided by a couple of errors, produced three runs for the Martins and they scored again in the seventh off a single by Gaylord, an error and Leary's second single of the day.

Naktens was sent to the showers in the sixth frame after he had allowed Williamston seven hits and three runs. May was touched for four hits and one run.

Corbitt, the Martins' shortstop featured at the bat, getting three singles.

Gillespie, the Martins' catcher, was struck by a foul ball in the sixth and was removed from the game. He was hit in the head also in the exhibition game at Rocky Mount last Thursday.

TARBORO LOSES AGAIN

Tarboro, June 24.—Tarboro dropped further in the cellar of the Coastal Plain League when the visitors from Snow Hill took a two to one pitcher's battle here yesterday afternoon.

AYDEN WINS 7-2

New Bern, June 24.—Alert fly chasing by his teammates enabled Coon Weldon, Ayden hurler, to get a five-hit victory over the New Bern Bears before two thousand fans here yesterday. Wall and Atkins were in the forefront of Ayden's defense, grabbing nine long range drives that should have gone for extra bases. Both boys crashed into the right field fence in making putouts.

Red Cleary, for the Bruins, continued his hitting streak with a double and two singles. Johnson smacked a homer for Ayden in the eighth while Wall shared honors with a triple and single. The visitors coupled timely hitting with misques to get their tallies off big "Lefty" Kennell.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, June 24.—(AP)—The stock market was not in a caper-cutting mood today but prices on the whole reflected the recent revival of speculative investment optimism.

Speculative buying mixed with a little profit taking here and there kept the list in a relatively narrow range. After a rather fast opening pace trading settled down to a dignified jolt. There was no significant change in trade news now in the Washington picture.

Grains were unable to get ahead as improved weather and harvesting reports were reported. Cotton was lower. Secondary bonds were again inclined to point up. Foreign exchange held to restricted area. The late tone was steady. Transfers 1,100,100,000 shares.

General Strike in Tacoma.
Tacoma, Wash., June 24.—(AP)—Members of the Tacoma Labor Council were summoned hurriedly for a meeting today and unconfirmed reports said a general strike was under consideration in protest of the use of national guards in this city dispersing strike pickets.

Fire Destroys Several Boats.
Fort Lauderdale, Fla., June 24.—(AP)—A large number of boats were burned today at the Picketing yacht basin near here in a fire that followed an explosion which was believed to have killed one man and badly injured another.

The fire followed an explosion aboard the house boat Seminole owned by James S. Phipps' estate at Palm Beach. Flames rapidly spread to many other crafts in the yacht basin.

John B. Thomas, of West Palm Beach, who was on the Seminole at the time of the explosion, was hurled into the water. He was taken to a hospital suffering from a broken leg and severe burns.

Capt. R. C. Abel also of West Palm Beach, who had gone to the engine room of the Seminole, before the blast is believed to have lost his life in the fire that destroyed the craft.

Senate Leaders to Confer with FDR er the chief executive wanted his new tax-wealth program put through this session.

The conference will be attended by Senator Robinson, the democratic leader, Speaker Byrnes, Chairman Harrison, of the senate finance committee, and Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee.

Robinson expressed the individual opinion that congress should enact the president's proposal for higher levies on large individual and corporation incomes at this session to avoid leaving the country in a state of uncertainty. If this policy is adhered to Robinson thought it would take another month before congress could adjourn or about the middle of August.

The senate continued debate on the $1,000,000,000 farm tenant aid bill and the house considered minor legislation.

Tobacco Grading Bill Gets Airing.

Washington, June 24.—(AP)—Vehement denunciation and vigorous praises of the Flannagan tobacco grading bill were heard today by the House rules committee.

Representative Chapman of Kentucky expressed belief the idea of establishing a service to grade tobacco before it was offered for sale at auction originated with the Department of Agriculture officials whose "final objective is to bring about government control of the whole industry."

"It's just another instance of bureaucracy," Chapman said.

An opposing view was expressed by Rep. Fulmer of South Carolina, who remarked:

"The tobacco farmer had just as well be on a chain gang because at present he has nothing to say about prices he gets for his products."

"It is a most disgraceful thing for an intelligent government to permit."

The committee postponed action on granting the bill a place near the top of the legislative action.

'Old Hulk' Had History

Newport Beach, Calif. (AP)—An old oak vessel, the Pokomoke, which has lain in the channel of the harbor here for many years was raised, hauled out to sea and sunk with a charge of dynamite. Search of its history disclosed it was once a wartime mine carrier, a coastwise merchant ship, a rum runner and, finally, an oyster barge.
