CITY SCHOOLS WORK TODAY

Opening Session Was Marked by Increased Attendance Over The Past Year

City schools opened here today with the largest attendance indicated in history of the system, although it was stated at the office of Superintendent J. H. Rose that official figures would not be available until tomorrow.

The opening session at all schools continued until the noon hour. No exercises marked the initial session, it being stated that a program would be rendered later in the week.

A meeting of faculty members was held at the high school building this afternoon at which Supt. Rose outlined the program to be followed during the first part of the term. No meeting was held prior to the opening as was the case several years ago.

Teachers began arriving Thursday night and the last reached the city last night, to be on hand when the annual grind got under way this morning.

Mr. Rose said Saturday enrollment in all schools was expected to be considerably larger than last year, due mainly to state action permitting the enrollment of first-year students earlier than customary.

This announcement was made shortly after an Italian spokesman said that Italy would not insure the League committee that she will do nothing to complicate the Italo-Ethiopian situation.

The spirit of violence is un-American and has no place in a consideration of public affairs, and least at a time when calm and dispassionate approach to the difficult problems of the day is essential."

Senator Long has been one of the severest critics of the administration and had indicated an intention to run for President next year against Mr. Roosevelt.

It was learned that the President and Mrs. Roosevelt sent a personal message to Mrs. Long. This was not made public.

LEAF SALES HEAVY HERE

Between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 Lbs. Leaf on Warehouse Floors Today

The local tobacco market began its third week of activity this morning with between a million and a million and a half pounds of tobacco on the floors of the various warehouses.

In spite of the heavy offerings it was indicated sales probably would be completed during the late afternoon.

The price situation was described as stronger this morning although common grades of leaf which have held sway throughout the season, were still in evidence.

The sale was one of the largest of the season although not equal to the opening day when nearly two million pounds of leaf were offered for sale here.

The market has sold nearly nine million pounds of tobacco so far this season, and the total is expected to be boosted to near the 15 million pound mark by the end of the week.

Sales last week would have been much larger had it not been for torrential rain Thursday night which was accompanied by heavy rain and damage on the north side of Tar river.

It was expected an improvement in offerings would be noted this week with the price situation receiving a pronounced boost over the previous week.

Taking the offerings here as a whole it was said prices were as good as any other market in the belt and Greenville is expected to end the season with a high average. The market last year closed the season with the highest average of the entire belt.

PITT SCHOOLS START WORK ON THURSDAY

List of Teachers for Various Schools of the County Announced Here Today

The annual trek back to school will begin throughout Pitt county Thursday morning, September 12, it was announced today from the office of Donald Conley, director of Public Instruction.

Preparations for the opening in various towns and rural communities have been under way for several days and everything will be in readiness for getting down to the annual grind of educating the youth of the land when doors are thrown open Thursday.

Announcing plans for the opening today Mr. Conley said: "Of interest to all patrons having children who will enter school this year for the first time will be a recent ruling by the State School Commission allowing children to enter school in September who will be six years of age by January 1, 1936."

On account of the early opening date of schools this year, the State School, Book Rental Commission has exempted Pitt county from the rental plan this year. Patrons have been advised to get books for their children in the same manner as in former years.

Transportation service for rural school children will be the same as last year. The major factor in this service is the amount of funds available for operation of school buses.

Allotment money to Pitt county this year is the same as the past year. Mr. Conley said "prospects are bright for a very successful school year." He said it was the hope of his department that both committeemen, Parent-Teacher Associations, civic clubs, and teachers and pupils will unite in an effort to

KINSTON WINS ANOTHER FROM AYDEN'S ACES

Kinston, Sept. 9.—John Humphries, tall right-hander from Carolina, pitched his second triumph of the series Saturday as Kinston defeated Ayden, 7-2, to go ahead—two victories to one—in the Coastal Plain League's championship play-off.

Humphries held the Aces to six hits. His mates had on their batting togs, and they collected 15 safeties off the flinging of Stanley Johnson and Walter Beall. Strayhorn, with three hits in four efforts, paced the victorious Eagles. No visitor made more than one hit.

Kinston, Sept. 9.—Kinston stood stout within one game of the Coastal Plain League pennant today by chalking up her third victory in the championship series with Ayden.

The Eagles romped on Lefty Upchurch, Ayden ace, for 14 hits and 10 runs for an easy 10-3 win. Dorsey Woodlief, reserve hurler who rode the bench most of the season, let Ayden down with but three runs despite 11 hits.

The Kinstonians went after Upchurch early and batted in four runs in the opening frame. Upchurch, who has never beaten Kinston this season, despite 19 victories, walked Greenberg to open the game. Taylor went out but Williams, Keller and Morgan hit successively. Patton fanned but Stonebraker punched a single to bring in Morgan with the fourth score. The leub batted around the first inning.

The Eagles picked up another in the sixth when Stonebraker singled, Strayhorn sacrificed him down and he came in on a fielder's choice.

Five runs in the eighth topped off a big day for the Hearnmen. The boys batted around again, with Strayhorn starting things off with a double. Woodlief went out, but Greenberg, Taylor, Williams and Keller hit successive singles to bring in three scores. Morgan filed out and Williams slid under Wall's throw. Patton singled to bring Keller in.

Ayden's scores came in the first when Wall singled, went to second on Morris' sacrifice, stole third and came in on Knowles' hit. Atkins' home run, a walk and a single by Tatum brought in the other two.

Keller led the hitting with four out of five. Stonebraker, Taylor and Williams hit twice apiece. Otto Patrick hit two for three for Ayden. Tatum had two for four and Wall had two for five, including a double and triple. Atkins homered.

A crowd estimated at over 1,500 crowded the park and surged onto the playing field.

STATE BEGINS WORK ON GRID

College Station, Raleigh, Sept. 9.—A complete squad of 61 players began the second week of football drills at State College today.

Coach Hunk Anderson has arranged a full schedule for the week, with practices both morning and afternoon as was the case last week. The drills today and those Tuesday will lead to a scrimmage Wednesday, the first of the training camp.

The drills this morning saw the Wolves working further on fundamentals. There also was a period for running, signals, punting, and pass offense and defense.

Live tackling, additional work on fundamentals, and a long jumpy scrimmage appeared on the schedule for the afternoon session today.

Members of the squad appeared in fine shape when the first work of drills ended Saturday night, and Coach Anderson said the men were ready for whatever type of work might come this week.

The battle for positions continues to rage at all 11 posts, with most dust flying at right halfback and at right end. At right halfback, the battle is between Eddie Berlinski and Howard Bards. Berlinski is the star back of the 1934 freshman team and Bards was the No. 1 back of the 1934 varsity.

The struggle at right end is between Jess Tatum, the end "find" of the winter training period, and Roger Mass, a junior monogram player. Tatum appears to be out in front at this time.

SPORT SLANTS

Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tiger's towering first baseman, is leading the American league in home runs, doubles, runs batted in and runs scored. And yet Hank would gladly trade all the honors he seems destined to win this season for just one little—the league batting championship.

All of which stamps Hank as a very wise young man. The batting championship has always been one of the most prized individual awards of the big league campaigns offered. Aside from the team championship, the race for batting honors generally manages to command most of the fans' interest. There is some interest in the competition for the home run honors but it is nothing compared to the struggle for the all-around hitting laurels.

Greenberg is smart enough to realize that the home run title will be an empty honor unless the winner manages to break or closely pressure the record set by Babe Ruth. And as for any athlete inheriting the Babe's titles of Sultan of Swat, King of Clout, etc., they just won't sound the same applied to another home run hitter.

The lanky Tiger first sacker is very much in the running for the batting crown—has been all season for that; matter—so there is a fair chance that he may win the honor without the necessity of trading in any of the other honors he wins.

No Boners On Salary
Babe Herman, the colorful slugger of the Cincinnati Reds, achieved one of his burning ambitions when he completed his tenth year in the major leagues. As a ten-year man

Babe cannot be shipped back to the minors without his approval. Herman may not have been one of the greatest ball players in the game but there were few smarter "business-men" in uniform.

Herman is well known for the many boners a tributed to him, particularly as a base-runner, but when it came to getting the highest possible figure on his contract, the Babe was a wizard. In 1930 he hit $35 to finish second to Bill Terry for the National League batting championship. He held out the following spring for $25,000 but, compromised and signed for a mere pittance of $19,000. You can name a flock of really great ball players that toiled season after season for half that sum.

He's Been Around
Herman has spread his baseball career over a lot of territory since he first donned a uniform in Edmonton, of the Western Canada league. In the minors Reading, Omaha, Atlanta, Memphis, San Antonio, Little Rock, Seattle and Minneapolis recall some of Babe's batting deeds as well as his fielding and base-running misdeeds. Detroit and Boston had title to Herman at one time or other, although he never actually played in the American league.

It's a pity old Dazzy Vance couldn't have realized his ambition to ring up 200 victories on the mound before passing out of the big show for good. The Dazzler recently was released by Brooklyn when he was in the very shadow of his goal, with a grand total of 197 wins to his credit.

Still, Vance can go into retirement feeling secure in the knowledge he has carved out a share of lasting fame in the national pastime. One of the great pitchers of his day, he ranks with the strike-out kings of all time. One season, at the peak of his form, he drew $25,000 to top all his contemporary mound workers.

WORM DAMAGES COTTON IN ALEXANDER COUNTY

Taylorsville, Sept. 9.—The cotton leaf worm has caused considerable damage to cotton in the southern part of Alexander County during the past two weeks, reports County Agent J. F. Brown.

A cotton field on the farm of Robert S. White, near Hiddenite was inspected last week and the damage was so severe that the field had the appearance of having been burned. Dusting with calcium arsenate at the rate of six pounds to the acre is being recommended for growers in other sections and where this has been done, the damage has been greatly lessened. Brown reports.

DISASTER SURVIVORS IN MEMORIAL RITES

Asbury Park, N. J., Sept. 9.—(AP)—While the gentle slapping of the waves mingled with prayers, survivors of the Morro Castle disaster bowed their heads yesterday in memory of friends and relatives who lost their lives a year ago.

Quietly, the men, women and children who lived through a night of fire and storm at sea listened to a brief service read by the Rev. Randall W. Conlin of Trinity Episcopal Church.

It was difficult to estimate the number of survivors present. They mingled with a crowd of about 400 persons, walked on the boardwalk in the sunshine or gathered in small groups to take about their experiences in the tragedy in which 124 persons died.

BARNETT BROS. CIRCUS COMING NEXT FRIDAY

Barnett Bros. big three-ring circus with its hosts of funny clowns, many cages of rare and wild animals, elephants, camels, horses, and an array of men and women who daily laugh at death in their exploits to thrill and amuse will exhibit in Greenville Friday, Sept. 13.

Old time circus atmosphere will prevail in Greenville when Barnett Bros. are here as this show is one of the few on the road today which still clings to the old-time street parade. The parade in Greenville will leave the show grounds promptly at noon.

In the line of March will be found elephants, camels, many open dens containing various species of wild animals, prancing horses, clowns, many men and women in brightly hued costumes, while the four bands will accompany with stirring marches.

The screaming callopie, integral part of any circus parade, will follow the long line of beautifully decorated wagons.

Performance being presented by Barnett Bros. this season is one of the most elaborate that the show has attempted in the number of years that it has been on tour in the United States.

Tumblers, acrobats, clowns, trapeze artists, tight-wire walkers, bare-back riders, cowboys and cowgirls, besides the many trained elephants, horses, dogs and ponies will perform in the three big rings under the circus tent in an almost unending procession of thrills and feats of daring.

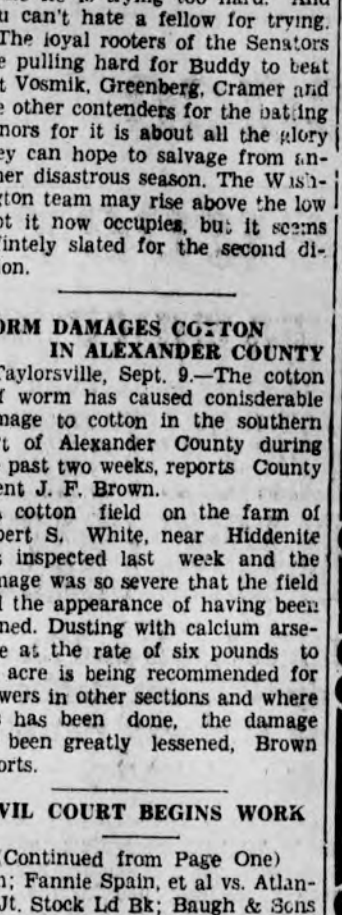

Many acts, new to the circus arena, have been secured for this season which promise to thrill and amuse the audience which is expected to jam its way into the circus tent when Barnett Bros. exhibits in Greenville.

Two performances will be presented in Greenville. The matinee will start at 2 o'clock and the night show at 8 o'clock. Doors to the big show and menagerie will be opened an hour previous to showing time.

First Church of Christ, Scientist.

"Man" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of First Church of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Sept. 8.

The golden text was from Jeremiah 17:7, "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him; and lo, a voice from heaven, saying This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (Matt. 3:13, 16, 17).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Human logic is awry when it attempts to draw correct spiritual conclusions regarding life from matter. Finite sense has no true appreciation of infinite Principle, God, or of His infinite image or reflection, man. The miracle, which makes trees and cities seem to be where they are not, illustrates the illusion of material man, who cannot be the image of God."

"So far as the scientific statement as to man is understood, it can be proved and will bring to light the true reflection of God—the real man or the new man (as St. Paul has it)."

Despite the fact that there are varying opinions as to Huey Long, the attempt on his life last night is regrettable. There is little doubt that Long ruled by an iron hand and apparently run rough shod over the people, but that he would have to be shot down is regrettable.
If Huey Long's wounds
prove fatal he will have died by the same means wherein he held his power over the people, by armed force. If he should recover, however, it is very probable that his power will be greater than before and his arrogance more adamant.

"Guess it can get along for six

just like Calvin Coolidge.

DILEMMA: New Dealers profess to feel no fear at the prospects that Father Coughlin will oppose Roosevelt's re-election. They have known for some time that the Detroit cleric personally dislikes the man in the White House and would support him only if there were no other place to go.
But they discount his political following. They have learned that he has only one bow to his string.
Unless he ballyhooes inflation, his collections begin to fall off. Whenever he strikes out into other fields they understand that his mail reflects a tremendous lack of response.

This situation may force the patriot into a curious dilemma. No GOP nominee, with the possible exception of Senator O'Brady, will advocate the kind of inflation that Father Coughlin wants. Thus he may have to tag along with Mr.
Roosevelt, who has been accused of inflationary tendencies, or go somewhere with Huey Long. The Democrats aren't worrying in either case.

SYNOPSIS: Emily has run away from Edwin Barnes, her husband, on their wedding night. She has only just escaped a nervous breakdown, and now is happily ensconced in a new home and a new job, in Birmingham. Her best friend, Charlotte, has taken her to call on a group of her friends, and Emily is finding her conversation and manner a stimulus as well as a pleasure.

ANNE waved a fork at Steve. "Go tell Vi that she's got to make the omelet, and that I'll be ready by the time it is. And don't come back." He went reluctantly out, and she heard him bang on Viola's door and repeat the message. Then he ambled into the living-room and an instant later the sound of the piano reached them.

Emily lifted her head and stared at Anne. He was playing, with feeling and a beautiful precision the Chopin scherzo in C sharp minor.
Anne answered the question in her eyes.

"It's his real calling, of course.
But he says he hasn't the attributes of greatness, and that being a second-rate musician is worse than being second-rate in any profession in

I suppose."

Days in Birmingham passed for the most part pleasantly and quickly, but during the odd moments that she couldn't fill, or when she had gone to bed and had no resources but her own thoughts, all the unsolved problems from which she had fled came trooping down upon her.

Then she knew that this was only a reprieve. She was like Joshua, who had stopped the sun for a brief span;
but afterwards the sun had gone inexorably upon its way.
She had cried over Edwin's letter, so like Edwin himself in its resignation.

"If only he would threaten to beat me!" she thought wildly. "It would do us both good."

She wrote urging him to divorce her if he wished, and Edwin replied quite characteristically that he was willing for her to divorce him if it would mean her happiness, but that he would never take the step himself.

HE was finishing the little house,
"because it had no market value as it stood," and was planning to put it on the market at once un-

out and the sentence ended there,

the world. So he works on a newspaper."

Viola came in, managing, in spite of her scented and shining cleanliness, to look a little untidy. She nodded cordially to Emily and went capably to work on the omelet.

When supper was ready they served themselves from the buffet, then gathered round the table. It was a lively meal, and again the conversation was reminiscent of Ar-more.

A voice from the living-room interrupted them. "Am I too late?" Everyone shouted at once at the man who appeared in the doorway, and there was a general shuffling to make a place for him at the table.

He was very different from Jed and Steve. A man in early middle age, Emily guessed; beautifully groomed, assured and smiling. He laid a casual hand on Anne's shoulder in greeting and Anne's eyes flamed for an instant and then were quickly veiled. She said carelessly:
"Charles, you haven't met Mr.
Barnes over there, Mr. Kincaid."

He bowed, found a plate with an air of being much at home, and helped himself from the buffet. Steve Young said solemnly:
"I ate all your caviar."

Charles Kincaid sat down. "Thank heaven for that. I hate caviar, just as I hate all kinds of fish roe. It gives me the creeps to think of all the billions of fish that I'm depriving of life at every bite."

"All the more reason to like it," Steve insisted. "It isn't often you have a chance to do so many favors at one fell swoop."

CHARLES KINCAID drove Emily and Charlotte home a little later, saw them into the house and bade them a courtly goodnight. Emily stared thoughtfully after him.

"He's quite different from the rest of the masculine element there.
Where does he come in?"
Charlotte waited until they were upstairs before she answered.

"He's really a prince, and I'm truly sorry for him. He has a neurotic invalid for a wife; a female devil that won't divorce him and won't live with him."

"Why doesn't he divorce her?" Charlotte shrugged. "Ask me an-

but beneath its imperfect concealment it gazed at her in mute reproach. The "unless" Edwin had decided scrupulously, was not entirely in the spirit of the promise he had made to Dr. Ward.

He added wistfully that the place was very attractive now; even more so than the plans had indicated. He had put out a number of shrubs, too; blue spruces and boxwoods (Emily had suggested them both, he refrained from adding).

She put the letter away with the momentary throbs of tenderness that Edwin, at a distance, always inspired.

Frances wrote once a week; not from inclination, since she felt that Emily had acted incredibly and should be severely punished; but because she wanted it possible, to paint so moving a picture that Emily would soon return, crowned with remorse and humility.

So potent was the menace of Dr.
Ward that she neither reproached nor urged; she merely catalogued, glowingly and touchingly, the beauties of Elston and the manliness of Edwin.

She also managed to insert insidious bits of information that tore at her daughter's heartstrings. "Your father has looked very badly of late.
I had him go to Dr. Morgan for an examination, and there is no organic trouble; but he seems to me to have broken a good deal lately. In spite of his protests I'm having William drive him to and from the office regularly now; the walk was tiring him too much."

Dr. Ward's note came too; a brief, paternal scrawl saying that he would be in town next week, and that he hoped she would have dinner with him. His talk was at four o'clock, and the meeting would surely be over by six.

She answered the note promptly, assuring him that she would be ready any time after six.

Dr. Ward arrived at the appointment, greeted her brusquely but warmly, and took her to dinner at the Southern Club.

Having ordered dinner, he looked at her keenly and professionally across the snowy table.

SYNOPSIS: When Emily Barnes ran away from her husband, Edwin, on their wedding night she also ran away into a nervous breakdown. But Dr. Christopher Ward pulled her through that, and a job in Birmingham, together with the society and help of Charlotte and her friends, has completed the cure. Now Dr. Ward has called to take Emily out to dinner, and of course to check up on the progress of his patient.

Chapter 23

CHECK-UP

"I'm beginning to believe that liberty agrees with you," said Dr.
Ward.

"Oh, it does!"

"And hard work!" Amazing, he thought with reluctant admiration, how this generation of women enjoyed work for its own sake. But then, didn't he enjoy it himself?

"Even hard work. Do you know, Dr. Ward, I'm really beginning to get somewhere? I was errand girl and general dunkey at first, but now I've been promoted to a desk and regular assignments. Charlotte says that if I keep it up I'll be really good, and coming from her that's the epitome of praise."

"Charlotte must be pretty good herself."

"She is. And she's a great deal more than that to me. Since I can't have you to strengthen my will, I'd rather have her."

He smiled, pleased at the idea that he and Charlotte might fill the same need. Then he put the question that he had sought her out to ask.

"And what about Barnes? No regrets?"

The brightness faded swiftly.
"Yes," she said slowly. "A great many regrets."

He had dreaded that. "Why?"

"Why not? Because I've failed them all so miserably."

"But, my dear, the tone was impatient, 'you'd be failing yourself otherwise.'"

"Perhaps. But is my life—any one life—so important as all that? And besides, I haven't really tried; I've simply run away from it. What right have I to refuse to go on—to ask for a divorce—until I've done my best to make it a success?"

"Emily," he demanded, "what have you been writing you?"

She smiled at the menace in his voice. "Nothing like that. But my father has broken a great deal lately, mother says, and it tears my heart to think of him!"

It was utterly impossible, he thought bitterly, to keep some women—the Frances Feltons—from cheating. He dwelt momentarily upon the idea of murder.

"It isn't what they've said," she went on. "It's this beastly Puritan conscience of mine. Whenever I stop to think it begins to plague me."

"Does this mean," he asked harshly, "that you're thinking of going back?"

"I've thought of it all the time, but it doesn't mean that I'm going.
I'm not crowded that close yet. I'm still holding on tight."

He patted her hand. "That's the spirit. You keep on holding on."

If he could prevent it, he didn't intend to have his best cure ruined by outside interference—not until the cure was complete. Then, if she went back, she would be equal to the situation. He drove her home feeling that he had done a good evening's work.

When he had gone Emily went first to Charlotte's room to report on his visit. Charlotte put down the book she was reading and Emily saw that her eyes were troubled.

"There's a special delivery for you on the desk. It came while you were away."

EVEN before she opened the letter Emily knew that something was wrong; that her house of cards was about to be destroyed with a single blow. She read the letter quickly, and Charlotte's apprehensive eyes never left her face.

She stood very still when she had finished, holding the letter in an unsteady hand. Charlotte could stand it no longer.

"Emily! What is it?"

Emily dropped into a chair and looked unseeingly at the floor. "Edwin is terribly ill. Pneumonia. He seems to need me." She held the letter towards Charlotte.

Charlotte read it quickly, standing with one arm about Emily's unsteady shoulders. It was from Frances Felton, and it was, Charlotte thought fleetingly, the most machievellian document she had ever read.

My dear Emily:
I have hesitated about writing this to you, and yet I am paying you the compliment of thinking that you will want to know it.
Edwin is desperately ill with pneumonia.

Old Mrs. Latham died last week and was buried in the midst of a sections of the Volstead Act it can be told.

Certain convivial officers approached members of the House with the proposal that they wipe out the 1917 law barring liquor from army posts. They didn't dare try on the Senate side for fear that Senator Sheppard rabid dry and Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, would block it. Two friendly wets—Mannie Celler of Brooklyn and Clarence Hancock of Syracuse—slipped the repealer into the Senate measure when it came before the House Judiciary Committee.

The Celler-Hancock clause was insidiously drawn. It made no mention of liquor. It simply repealed Section 12 of the Act of May 8, 1917, which authorized the President to increase the military es-thunder-storm. Edwin was a well-known, and the exposure, together with the rundown condition he has been in for several weeks, was disastrous.

He has looked dreadfully for some time, and whenever he has been here for meals has eaten nothing, so it wasn't at all surprising that his resistance was too low to cope with the disease.

Dr. Morgan thinks he has a chance to recover if he can be persuaded to make the effort, but he doesn't seem to—"I took some broth to him yesterday and tried to cheer him up by—" that he would soon be up and—" out and he simply looked at me as I whispered, "What for?"

Of course this may not have any effect on your course of action; I am not suggesting that it should.
But as I say, I have paid you the compliment of thinking that you would like to know.

Your affectionate,
Mother.

Emily laughed wildly. "How like Edwin to have gotten his pneumonia being pall-bearer at a funeral!
If he'd been sailing a boat, or hunting—" the voice trailed off.

Charlotte's arm tightened. She knew all about hysterics. "Stop it!
What do you want to do, or haven't you decided yet?"

Emily steeled. "There's no deciding about it. There's only one thing to do." Her voice was a lifeless monotone.

Charlotte said in a matter-of-fact voice, "Then I'll find out about trains and help you pack. I'll wire your mother as soon as I find out when you'll get there. Go over and lie down on my bed."

Emily shook her head. "I'd rather do something."

"All right. Run along and pack, then. I'll be back in a minute."

There was a train at eight the next morning, Charlotte found, so they finished the packing and lay down to wait for morning.

"This had to come some time," Emily said wearily. "So perhaps it's just as well to get it over, if Edwin —doesn't die."

"HE won't," Charlotte assured her, trying not to think what an ideal solution it would be if he did. "And you're right about its having to come. But it doesn't mean that you're beaten and that you have to stay; you can leave him again as easily as you did the first time."

"I wish I could be sure of that!"

"You can. You can buck them all now, because there's nothing to lose and everything to gain. You've got to promise me that you won't let your mother dictate to you in this;
that you'll do what you think is right, no matter what happens. Will you?"

Emily said doubtfully, "I'll try."

"She'll really admire you for it."

Charlotte insisted, "because she'll know then that you've grown up.
And if you do decide to stay, the same thing holds: women of her type have such a superstitious respect for matrimony that I don't believe she'll try very hard to run things. If she does, smile sweetly and say nothing and do what you intended to do all the time. You told me once that Judith Carroll managed her that way: try it yourself."

Judith! The name belonged to another age, another world. But Judith had known how to manage people, even Frances Felton.

"It sounds simple," she sighed,
"and I'll do my best."

"I know you will," Charlotte assured her. "Now try to sleep a little."

Dr. Morgan opened the door softly and glanced into the darkened room, then he turned to Emily and nodded. "You can go in, now."

Edwin was very straight and motionless in the narrow white bed.
His eyes were closed and his breathing was shallow and very jerky.
His face, she realized with a spasm of pain, was the face of a stranger; gaunt and shadowed, with great dark hollows where his cheeks should have been.

"Emily!" The voice was only a breath.

She leaned over and brushed the unshaven cheek lightly with her lips. "Yes, darling."

"Darling," Edwin murmured.

"Will you—call me that again, sometime?"

She fought back the stinging tears.

"My darling, as often as you like."

"And you'll—stay a while, this time?"

"As long as you want me."

It was a pledge. Now, she knew, she could never break it.

"I'll always want you." The voice trailed off. "I—think I'll go to sleep now."

She turned blindly towards the door and once outside found herself in Jeffrey's arms. She was at Ed-win's end of the road now, and never as long as she lived could she look towards the other end, which led to freedom, or to a shadowy figure that persisted in looking like the ghost of David Carroll.

New York

WORST: Father Coughlin's latest somersault has New York gasping.
The priest's critics have long regarded him as a master of inconsistencies—but the harshest ones never dreamed he would reverse himself to the point of endorsing Hearst's Jeffersonian Democrat idea and—by inference—Al Smith.

They recall Coughlin's savage onslaught on Smith as a pal of the Morgans. They ponder the reform program of the National Union for Social Justice—which would certainly require constitutional amendments to make it effective—and wonder how even a miracle of rationalization can square it with Hearst's stand-pat ideas about the fundamental law. They speculate as to how many of the alleged nine million followers he has enlisted with radical oratory will stick with him when the idea percolates that he has become a convert to right wing principles.

Observers remark that Coughlin must be one of the world's greatest cynics if he expects the public memory to be that short. But they add that he may be right at that —since there has been practically no public comment on his self-contradictory line. Keen sources are watching to see what effect the move will have on the extent of Coughlin's influence. They hope for—and expect—the worst.

SKEPTICAL: What's behind the about-face? Those who should know ascribe two motives. One is pique at the Roosevelt administration because it has not followed in detail the course that Coughlin charted. The development confirms this column's prediction that New Dealers who counted Coughlin as safely in the fold for '36 were in for a rude awakening.

The other motive—perhaps more important—is Coughlin's desire to ride a winning horse. He is said to have sensed a drift away from Roosevelt. Therefore he is setting the stage to appear as a leader in a cause that is presumably becoming more popular. But note that there is nothing whatever to prevent him from switching back again if the tide is once more reversed.

Paradoxically Coughlin's support of the Jeffersonian party plan will probably do it more harm than good. The conservatives who would normally form a backbone dislike and distrust him. Some New York big timers who originally favored the plan now express strong skepticism as to whether it can be a good thing if the radio priest is for it.

KEY: If Coughlin goes too ob-streperously anti-Roosevelt, the administration has ways of pinching him where it hurts. For instance—there's the Congressional Committee appointed to investigate Huey Long. Its charter is broad enough to authorize an inquiry into the private affairs of the National Union for Social Justice—including the details of its finances—if FDR considered that desirable.

The committee has of course no direct responsibility to the White House. But loyalty to the President was a big factor in the selection of its personnel—and there's no reason to doubt that it will be extremely attentive to White House suggestions.

ITALY AND ETHIOPIA: Story Of A Long-Brewing Conflict No. 1

Italy entered the Ethiopian picture in 1882 when the Italian government bought the small port of Asab from an Italian shipping line which had acquired it in 1876 as a coaling station. In February, 1885, the Europeans took over Massaua from Egypt. The Ethiopians resented this, claiming Massaua had been guaranteed to them as a free port. Italian efforts to advance inland were checked in January, 1887, when 500 Italians were ambushed and wiped out at Dogali. After a year of negotiations Italy withdrew most of her troops from her colony, which had been named Eritrea.

Menelik II proclaimed himself emperor and king of kings of Ethiopia in March 1889, a few days after the death in battle of King John who, with the encouragement of Great Britain had made himself master of the northern provinces and met death beating back an invasion by the dervishes of the Egyptian Sudan. One of Menelik's first acts, taken May 2, 1889, was to sign a treaty with Italy. As a consequence Italy occupied Asmara, now capital of Eritrea, and received Emperor Menelik's nephew, Ras Makonnen, father of the present emperor, as Ethiopian envoy to Rome.

For three years relations between the two countries were quiet but then Menelik grew suspicious because the Italians seemed too friendly with the "races", or local rulers, of the northern districts over which John had held sway. In February, 1893, Menelik proclaimed that the treaty of May, 1889, was at an end. He claimed that the Italian and Amharic versions of the pact differed, the former providing that Ethiopia must use Italy as a means of communicating with other powers whereas the Amharic text made this step optional. An outbreak of hostilities followed.

The war lasted three years. At first the Italians pushed ahead but, as the Ethiopians rallied to a national cause, the Europeans were forced back. Additional troops were sent by Rome and on March 1, 1896, an expedition of 13,000 attacked Menelik, who, with 90,000 men, had a strong position near Adowa. One of the four Italian brigades pushed too far forward, was cut off and decimated. As the other brigades came up, they were successively surrounded and cut to pieces. The Italians lost 10,600. The Ethiopians acknowledged 3,000 casualties but experts put them at 17,000.

Adowa ended the war of 1893-6. Italian reinforcements, sent to avenge the defeat, found that Menelik had retired and had no thought of following up his victory. So on October 26, 1896, a treaty of peace was signed at Addis Ababa. It annulled the 1889 treaty, recognized the absolute independence of Ethiopia and provided for further pacts defining the frontiers of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland. This outcome attracted world-wide attention to Menelik. Missions were sent from Russia, Great Britain and France. Menelik consolidated his realm and Ethiopia became a world nation.

When Hurricanes Lash The Atlantic Weather Men Burn Midnight Oil To Warn The Danger Zone

Washington (AP) — Hurricane! Boaring winds... swirling mountainous waves... flying wreckage... death... destruction... terror in thousands of hearts along America's gulf and south Atlantic coasts.

But Uncle Sam's weather men are lessening the terror, reducing the toll of death and destruction with a new forecasting system, which was in full swing when the latest hurricane ripped across Key West and into the Gulf of Mexico.

Trace Storm's Course.

Now, when a hurricane roars up from the Caribbean or out of the " doldrums " region off the African coast, the weather men never sleep. Lights blaze all night in the forecasting offices. Telegraph instruments constantly tick and code messages from ships at sea. "Barometer falling rapidly; sky overcast; wind velocity 85 miles per hour, direction south, southeast." All night the forecasters' pencils follow charts tracing the storm's progress toward American shores. Through the small hours storm warnings flash to threatened points.

This new "24-hour" hurricane forecasting system was set up under direction of Weather Bureau Chief Willis R. Gregg.

Under the old system, reports of the storm's progress might come in all during the night to the central office, but they would not be analyzed until morning, and meantime the hurricane might have traveled 125 miles or more. Now the forecasters follow the storm's progress every minute, using the latest reports from ships at sea, weather bureau stations on the Caribbean islands and the mainland, and coast guard stations.

Waves Do Most Damage. Hurricanes are gigantic "whirl-

By issuing storm warnings long in advance, weather men are reducing the death and destruction of hurricanes which buffet the south Atlantic and gulf coasts. The drawing left shows two courses frequently taken by the "big whirlwinds"—up the Atlantic coast from Florida, or, as in the case of the recent hurricane, across the "keys" into the Gulf of Mexico.

Winds that swirl at 100 miles an hour in a circle as much as 500 miles in diameter around a calm center of about 14 miles. The whole storm, however, moves forward at about 10 or 12 miles an hour.

Although the winds are of tremendous force, the greatest damage in a hurricane always results from the great tidal waves raised by the storm.

Hurricane damage, although spectacular, is infrequent. There is an average of only about seven "tropical storms" a year along American coasts of which only about one-half reach full hurricane intensity. No state along the south Atlantic and gulf coasts has an average of even one storm of full hurricane force in any year.

'Filipino Youth' Pickets Manila In Presidential Election Drive

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

Manila (AP)—Salaries of Philippine government officials are too high, says "Filipino Youth," so this political organization of college students and others, is trying to cause public sentiment by picketing.

Jose Paez, general manager of the government-owned Manila Railroad, gets 24,000 pesos or $12,000 a year while daily wages of some laborers were recently cut from 40 to 30 cents, proclaimed a "sandwich board" carried in the downtown section by one picket.

Political Picketing Is New

"And, for reasons of economy," lesser employees of the company "had to be discharged," the board added. It also pointed out that the road had a 1934 loss of $550,000.

The picketing procedure, new to Philippine politics, was adopted in the campaign leading to the election on September 17 when the first President of the new commonwealth is to be chosen.

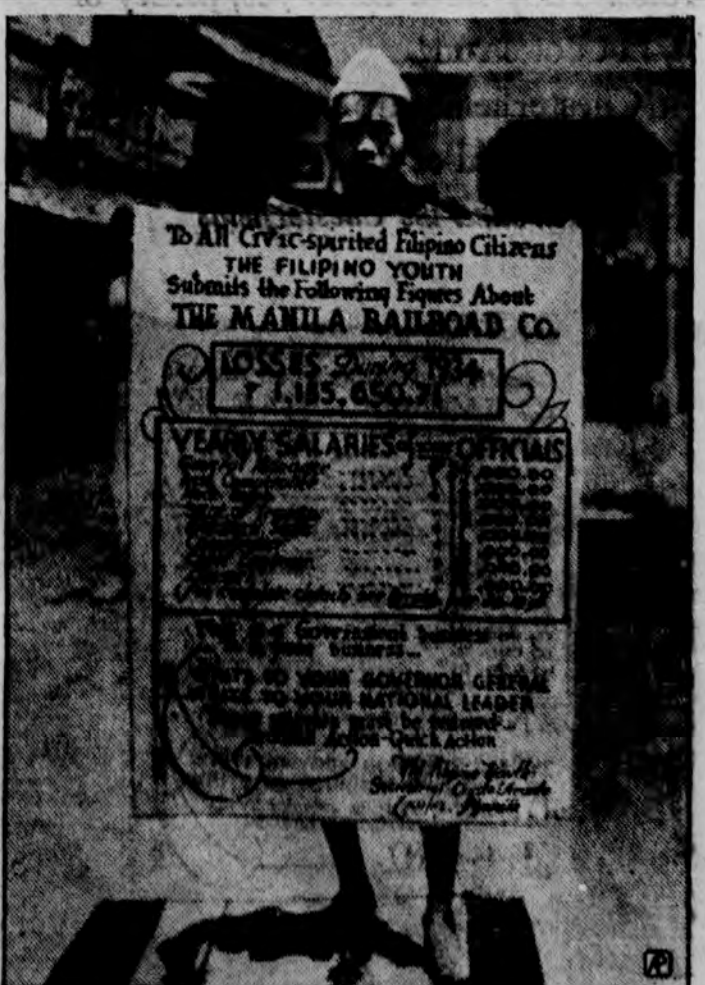

"Filipino Youth" pledged its support to Manuel Quezon for the presidency. Many members of an older and similar organization, "Young Philippines," rallied under the banner of General Emilio Aguinaldo.

Bishop Eschews Salary.

Government salaries became an issue early in the canvass. The way the question has spread is taken as possibly presaging some economy action after the 10-year autonomous regime is established.

Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, head of the Philippine Independent Catholic Church, said in announcing his candidacy for the presidency that the $15,000 stipend of the office was no consideration. He said he would serve for nothing.

Manila newspaper which is supporting Quezon, recently published a table showing that Philippine salaries are much higher than comparable payments in Japan. It listed Frank Murphy, governor general, as receiving $18,000 a year as compared with $2,880 for Premier Okada and Quezon, as president of the insular senate, getting $6,000 to the $2,250 paid the president of Japan's house of representatives.

Picketing has appeared in Philippine politics so this member of 'Filipino Youth,' an organization supporting Manuel Quezon for the presidency of the new commonwealth, carries a "sandwich" board proclaiming that the salary paid by the government-owned Manila Railroad are too high.

LEAF SIGNUP NEARLY OVER IN THIS AREA

Farm Director Re- ports Over 95 Per- Cent of Contracts Signed in 4 Days

E. F. Arnold, director of the local farm department, said today it was indicated that 95 percent of tobacco contracts in this county would be signed when committees make their report to the farm office here tomorrow.

The campaign, involving the signing of four-year contracts, was begun here last Wednesday and will come to an end tomorrow night following preliminary reports of committees.

The farm director said the five percent of the 2,800 contracts involved acreage held by absentee landlords and these are expected to be on hand in the next day or so.

Out of 440 contracts in Cherokee township, more than 400 have already been signed, Mr. Arnold said, and the remainder probably will be on hand when the sign-up comes to a close tomorrow night.

Beaver Dam township reported there were only six non-signers in that area, and that no outright refusals had been recorded by the committees. The contracts also involved absentee landlords.

Notices of contracts were not mailed out from the local office until last Tuesday and the 95 percent sign-up was reported to the office here today following completion of activities Saturday.

Mr. Arnold said the record was an exceptional one in view of the fact that nearly four months were required in signing the contracts the past year.

He said the speed of the present sign-up was caused by accurate records in his office. Last year no such records were available and the committees were required to make the records as they went.

Although the present sign-up covers a period of four years the farm director said, any farmers could withdraw any year desired providing his report was filed in the farm office by July 1 preceding the forthcoming crop year.

He urged farmers who had not signed to get busy at once and do so as they held their own fate in their hands and whatever they do now will largely determine their future economic life.

BUYE LONG RALLIES FROM WOUNDS

There was no indication martial law would be declared. State police and civilian officers swarmed the city, however, mostly guarding the hospital and the $5,000,000 state house where Long was directing the enactment of legislation against the Roosevelt administration when he was shot last night.

Officers halted all persons approaching the building and all were denied admittance unless they could convince the authorities their business was necessary.

Heavy guards were placed in front of the doors to the House of Representatives' chamber as the body prepared to open today's session.

Men with menacing sawed off shotguns stood in front of Governor O. K. Allen's office where the assassination attempt took place and plain clothesmen were at the house entrance and in the basement.

Colonel E. P. Royce, commander of the state highway police, ordered his men to use guns to prevent the making of pictures in the capital building and at the hospital, just across a small lake from the state building.

Members of the family of Dr. Weiff, a quiet, cultured man, who studied at Tulane university and abroad, said they knew of no motive for the physician's attempt on Long's life.

"He was a calm and deliberate man," A. J. Pazy, of Obolous, brother-in-law of Dr. Weiff, told the Associated Press.

"There was nothing on his part to indicate to his family that he would ever do such a thing," Dr. Weiff, never active in politics, was known to be opposed to Senator Long.

Asked if he thought a bill pending before the legislature for the transfer of Dr. Weiff's father-in-law could have been a factor Pazy said: "My father was not losing his judgment. He was merely being transferred from one district to another. Dr. Weiff felt bitter toward Long but not for anything the senator had done to him personally."

Freight Boat Sinks
Hatteras, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The Dependent a freight boat plying between Belhaven and Hatteras burned off Hatteras Inlet Sunday morning while the crew of three was resued by the Hatteras coast guard.

The blaze was started by a fire in the engine room.

The freighter was owned by River Day and his son Rion Day of South Creek. Captain Day and two others were aboard when the ship caught fire and Mr. Day painfully burned his hands while fighting the flames.

pounds at an average price of approximately $20 a hundred. Sales nounced today, shows 6,844,506 pounds sold for $1,433,034 or an average of $20.90.

Averts Disaster By Aerial Sky

Sialmo, Ukraine, Sept. 9.—(AP)— A runaway airship, boarded in mid-air by its captain, was brought safely back to port today after a six-hour struggle against the elements.

Thirteen persons were in the ship the semi-rigid U. S. S. R. V. two when it broke loose from its mooring here last night during a storm.

Among them was the twenty-year old Helmswoman, Vera Achenvald, who stuck to her post throughout the storm, steering the bucking craft to safety under the direction of the skipper.

Two members of the ground crew were injured seriously when the ship broke loose at 9:00 p. m. yesterday. With Captain Ivan Gudaventzeff, they clung to ropes as the craft rose suddenly into the air.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened fairly steady 5 higher to one lower with steeper Liverpool cables partly offset by hedge selling. At the end of the first hour October was ruling around 1037 and May 1053 or about 2 1/2 3 points net higher.

After selling to 2 1/2 3 net lower the market stiffened up just before trading was suspended to receive the government report. Futures closed steady five to seven higher.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Profit taking hurriedly alternated with buying spurts in today's stock market and traders used all their ability to catch the various changes.

After a rather steady opening resulting pressure pushed many of the leaders down fractions to a point or more. In the second hour however, there was a rush of buying support that put the ticket tape some two minutes behind floor transactions. Most of the losses were replaced by gains on new high for the year or longer were scored by many issues.

The pace slowed later and advances were shaded considerably.
Softness of some of the metals was a restraining factor.

U. S. smelting falling 3 points to a new 1935 low.
Grains and cotton milled about nervously. Secondary bond were inferior inclined to emulate equities.
Foreign exchanges were a trifle higher in terms of the dollar.
The late tone was irregular.
Transfers were 1,900,000 shares.
