

COTTON CARDS ARE NOW BEING DISTRIBUTED

Farmers Notified To Call for Their Gin- ning Certificates at Once

Five thousand cotton exemption certificates for growers of Pitt County are now on hand at the farm agents office and growers have been advised to call and get their certificates in order to have them in their possession when they begin to gin their cotton crop.

John R. Carroll, in charge of distribution of the cotton certificates, stated this morning that where a tenant owned an interest in cotton that it was necessary for him to call for and sign for his own certificate or to sign the power of trustee blank included in his mailed notice in order that his landlord or some other person designated as trustee might procure the certificate from the farm office here.

Under the plan under which the certificates are furnished the growers it is necessary when cotton is taken to the gin to be ginned that both the landlord's and tenant's certificates be taken to the gin and the poundage taken from the certificates in proportion to the ownership of the cotton. If a grower does not have sufficient poundage certificates to take care of his entire crop he may purchase additional certificates at five cents a pound. If on the other hand the certificate exceeds his poundage produced, he may sell his excess if he can find a purchaser or he may turn it in at the farm office to be forwarded to the national pool. The pool will then sell all the certificates possible to growers who have more cotton than certificates and will prorate the money to the growers owning the certificates. After the pool has sold all certificates possible each grower who has sent certificates to the pool will have certificates reissued to the amount not covered by the pool sales.

Municipal League
To Meet Oct. 6-8

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 14.—A novel procedure in holding a convention will be undertaken next month when the cities of Greensboro and High Point will jointly act as hosts to municipal officials of the state at the annual meeting of the North Carolina League of Municipalities, October 6, 7 and 8.

So far as was known at the League offices today, this is the first time that any two North Carolina cities have collaborated in acting as hosts at a single convention. High Point and Greensboro are located about 15 miles apart. Convention headquarters will be at the Sedgewick Inn, a point about half way between the two cities.

Mayor Roger W. Harrison of Greensboro and Mayor C. S. Grayson of High Point will both welcome the visiting municipal officials at the opening of the formal sessions Monday morning, October 7.

The previous afternoon, Sunday, October 6, will be given over to a golf tournament for the delegates at the Sedgewick Country Club, followed by a dinner meeting for the League's executive council and other interested municipal officials. It was announced here today by Patrick Healy, executive secretary of the League.

Although the program has not yet been officially announced, it was stated that many prominent speakers both from within and from outside the state will address the convention.

SEWING 'LOST ART' AMONG THE CO-EDS

Stanford University, Calif. (AP)—Sewing is almost a lost art among university co-eds of today, Miss Helen Green, stage costume designer says.

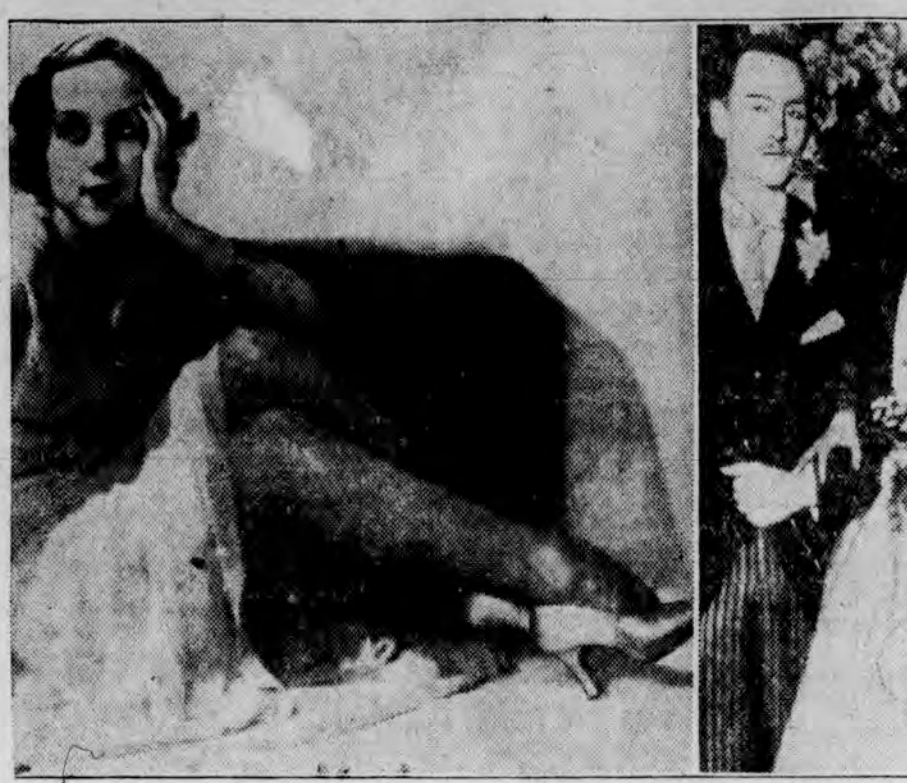

Members of a designing class pressed into service to make costumes for a university Shakespearean drama production displayed a sad lack of sewing knowledge, she declared.

"Some of them," Miss Green said, "couldn't even sew on a button or thread a needle, and they had no idea how to cut out a pattern."

But they learned quickly, she added, and the one youth in the class showed exceptional ability.

Directs Business From Sickbed
Boise, Ida. (AP)—From a hospital bed where he has been confined with an incurable case of arthritis, William C. Carpenter has built up a magazine subscription business extending over 11 western states. He credits the devotion of his wife and son with having kept his spirits buoyed. By popular vote four years ago Carpenter was named the state's most popular man.

POLICE INVESTIGATE DEATH OF ACTRESS

Police were investigating the death of Evelyn Hoey, musical comedy star shown at left in a recent photograph, who died of a bullet wound in the head after a quarrel with a drunken party near Downingtown, Pa. She was the only woman guest at the farm home of Henry Rogers, Jr., son of the late oil millionaire, spending a week. Rogers is shown at right with his wife as they appeared at their wedding in 1929. Mrs. Rogers has been visiting in Cleveland for two months. Held on suspicion of murder, Rogers and William J. Kelly, motion picture cameraman, the only other guest, said Miss Hoey committed suicide. ## RENT CHECKS FOR GROWERS ARRIVE HERE

2,200 Checks Amounting to More Than $100,000 To Be Distributed

Rental checks about 2,200 in number and totaling more than $100,000 are here awaiting the call of the tobacco farmers for them according to announcement made by County Agent E. F. Arnold, this morning.

Mr. Arnold stated that already notices were being mailed out to the growers to come and get their checks but he pointed out that this was just one batch of the checks due to come to growers in this county and he urged that the growers prevent confusion by not calling for their checks until they receive official notice through the mails that theirs is included in the number now on hand.

CIVIL COURT TERM ENDED

Around Fifteen Cases Disposed of by Court During Week Sep- tember 9

A week's term of civil court with Judge Walter L. Small, presiding, was ended here yesterday afternoon after the court had disposed of around fifteen actions including compromises.

Practically all of yesterday's session was taken up with the hearing of an ejectment case brought by Joshua Tripp against Charlie Mills. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

In addition to the Tripp-Mills case several motions of a minor nature were heard by Judge Small before court ended its work for the week.

Another week of court for the trial of civil cases will convene here on Monday the 23rd with around 40 actions scheduled to come up for hearing.

Drunkenness Is Picking Up Here Chief Clark Says

Drunkenness is picking up in this community of late or at least more drunks are appearing in the streets, Chief of Police George Clark said this morning in commenting on the day's session of Mayor's court. There were six or seven cases of drunkenness heard before Mayor Finagan this morning, the chief said.

In addition to the cases of the drunks other cases heard by the mayor this morning included:

Abbie Paze, negro, bound over to Superior Court under $200 bond for stealing tobacco from Dixie Warehouse;

Clifton Evans, white, bound over to County Court on a charge of drunken driving;

Charlie Allen, bound over to County Court for larceny of clothing.

Five Killed In Freight Wreck

Monroe, La., Sept. 14.—(AP)—Five unidentified bodies were removed early today from the ruins of about 15 freight cars which were destroyed by fire after derailment of an Illinois Central east bound train three miles west of here. Five men, transients, riding on the freight were removed from the wreckage and taken to a hospital suffering injuries.

Rescue workers feared that there were other bodies of transients under the smoldering ruins.

NEW PLAN FOR BUILDING OF RURAL LINES

Administration Hopes to Speed Up Electrification of Rural Districts

Raleigh, Sept. 14.—A new plan to speed up rural electrification, especially in communities or sections where the existing power companies are not interested in building the lines, is now being worked out by officials of the Rural Electrification Administration in Washington. It was learned here today at the offices of the N. C. Rural Electrification Authority. The plan is known as the "Limited Profit Contract Plan" and contemplates the construction of rural lines by individual contractors rather than by local cooperative corporations. The REA is inclined to frown upon cooperative rural electric lines and believes that it will be much more satisfactory to deal with only one man, who must be a standard, licensed electrical contractor, rather than with a group of farmers who know nothing about engineering or the construction of electric lines. It also believed that lines built and operated by a single contractor will give better service to the current users of the lines.

The plan now under consideration in Washington, if definitely adopted by the REA, will operate as follows:

1. The proposed rural line must first show that it is a good business risk and customers along the proposed line must agree to use sufficient current to enable it to pay for the cost of construction within a given number of years, probably about five years.
2. The REA will then lend the money needed to construct the line according to certain specifications, to a reliable contractor, taking a mortgage on the line as security. Provided the contractor will agree to service and maintain the line for a given number of years, or until it is paid for, after which time the line will become the property of the contractor who built it. The REA will also allow the contractor a limited profit both on the construction of the line and on its operation.

It is believed that this plan will greatly stimulate the building of rural electric lines, especially where existing power companies refuse to build them.

The origin of the five-lined nonsense verse known as "Limerick" is lost in obscurity.

DAUGHTERS; SONS GUESTS OF KIWANIS

Interesting Program Features the Annual Banquet of Local Kiwansians

The Greenville Kiwanis Club observed Fathers and Daughters night last night with a splendid attendance. The program was in charge of Wm. A. Ryan, who announced that all numbers would be presented by daughters of Kiwanians. Miss Mary Woodard and Miss Betty Tyson rendered vocal solos, which were enjoyed by the members of the club and their guests. Mr. Ryan presented his foster daughter, Miss Victoria Jackson, who spoke on the assigned topic, "Making a Pal of Your Daughter." Miss Jackson called the attention of the fathers to the fact that there seemed a natural association between fathers and sons through such common interests as baseball, fishing and so on, but that many fathers failed to cultivate the fellowship of their daughters because they failed to recognize the many fields of interest in which such fellowship was possible of cultivation. She suggested travel as one of these fields and used as an illustration a six-day trip to New York City which she had had with Mr. Ryan during the past summer. Making a brief survey of each of the following, she pointed out how her foster father's interest had revealed to her some of the interesting things about modern modes of travel, places of modern interest, such as the International House, Riverside Church, Radio City; interesting people such as the citizens of Chinatown, Little Italy and the lower East Side tenement dwellers; places of amusement and so on. Her conclusion was that such giving of time and attention on the part of fathers generally would bring to both fathers and daughters the close companionship that had come to her and Mr. Ryan through their days spent together. Ralph Moss, newly-elected Assistant Mayor, Executive, was a guest of the Club as well as were several old members. The attendance prize was given by Jimmy Galloway and was awarded to Grady Bell.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News.

Washington
By RAY TUCKER

GENTLE: The grapevine from Hyde Park brings word that President Roosevelt will deliver no spectacular speeches on his western trip. The super-strategists in the New Deal camp have advised against a barnstorming show at this particular moment.

They don't think it would fit in with the President's announcement that the crackdown period is over for a while. While upholding the main tenets of the New Deal for the sake of disconcerted liberals, they recommend that he continue his flirting with harassed business men. Politically, they urge no rant for another reason. They want the GOP to do their shouting first and reserve the last word for themselves.

Invitations for local speeches and platform appearances are pouring into Hyde Park hourly. So the idea seems to be that Mr. Roosevelt will poke and jab at his foes in seemingly impromptu remarks in the railroad yards, though firing no formal salvo at St. Louis, Boulder Dam or San Diego.

LEGION: The most tantalizing current problem for the Hyde Parkers to solve is whether the President will show up at the American Legion convention in St. Louis on September 25. The odds seem to be that he will honor the service men in some way—by a message if not by a personal appearance.

Both New Dealers and the legionnaires were disturbed at the belated realization that Bainbridge Colby, arch-foe of the administration, had been asked to make the stump speech at the vets' campfire. Although both groups maintain extraordinary secrecy about their maneuvers, there was an immediate flurry. It is now reported that Mr. Colby's health may not permit him to be on hand.

NEW SESSION LA. ASSEMBLY IN PROSPECT

Much Talk of Special Session to Undo Some of Huey Long Legislation

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 14.—(AP)—Another special session of the oft-convened legislature appeared inevitable today, this time seeking to undo some of the work it has pushed through at the dictation of Huey Long.

As the Long forces sought peace with the White House and anti-Long elements renewed their opposition to the machine left by the assassinated dictator, special session talk was heard in both camps. At the same time possibility that the Long name will be carried on in public office arose when it became known that an attempt was being made to have his widow accept appointment to her husband's unexpired term which has a year and four months to run. Sources close to the leadership said such a plan had been discussed at some conferences.

From Judge B. H. Pazy, father-in-law of the man who shot Senator Long last Sunday night, came the assertion today that the shooting must have been "an act of God." He said he was at a loss to explain why his son-in-law, Dr. Carl A. Weiss, Jr., had sent a bullet into Senator Long's abdomen, but declared it was just possible that Weiss was disturbed by bills Long was pushing through the assembly as a threat to Judge Pazy's place on the bench.

CHARLOTTE NEWSPAPER MAN IS DEAD

Wade H. Harris, Vet- eran Editor of Char- lotte Observer, Died This Morning

Charlotte, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Col. Wade H. Harris, editor of the Charlotte Observer, died at his home here today after an extended illness. He was 77 years old.

Mr. Harris' connection with the Observer covered more than half a century and he had been editor of the paper since 1912. He continued his editorial duties until last Christmas. His newspaper career extended over 60 years.

He became editor of the Concord Sun, a weekly in his hometown. Sun, a weekly in his hometown. Mr. Harris served as city editor of the Wilmington Star from 1879 until 1880. He joined the Observer staff in 1882. Six years later he started out for himself founding the Charlotte News, an afternoon newspaper. In 1884 he returned to work with the Observer company as editor of the Evening Chronicle, an afternoon newspaper published at that time by the Observer.

Mr. Harris is survived by his wife the former Miss Cora Spruins, whom he married in 1884, a daughter, Miss Cora Harris, a son, Richard P. Harris, six sisters and three grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements early today were incomplete.

MORE NATIONS VOICE THEIR PROTESTS TO ITALIAN CAMPAIGN

LIKELY TO ASK CONGRESS FOR MORE MONEY

Believe Roosevelt Will Seek Addition- al Funds for Public Works

Washington, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Possibility that President Roosevelt will ask the next congress to appropriate more millions for permanent works was discussed in informal circles today. Neither confirmation nor denial that he had been assured the president would follow such a course could not be obtained from Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator.

But other officials striving to read between the lines of the president's order setting aside the bulk of the remaining work relief funds for temporary work under Harry L. Hopkins jurisdiction, thought it highly probable that congress would be asked for more money to salvage some of the public works projects.

It was pointed out that since the four billion dollar work program was announced last winter, many communities encouraged to develop PWA projects now have little chance to qualify for any of the four billion dollars. One type of the public works mentioned as likely to participate in the fund was any new approved public housing. The original work relief allotment for this purpose was cut $100,000,000 by the president yesterday, this amount being made available instead, for other PWA projects which can be started by December 15.

George Howard Ferguson, Canadian representative at Geneva, told the League assembly that "Canada cannot agree that any member of the League is warranted in resorting to war to enforce its claims in violation of its solemn pledge to seek and find peaceful settlement of every dispute."

LEAF SALES WERE LARGER YESTERDAY

Day's Sales Were 1, 365,944 Pounds For Average of $17.82 Per Hundred

Sales on the Greenville tobacco market were larger yesterday, the day's offerings running over 1,300,000 pounds. Prices were slightly weaker than on the previous day's sale with the average falling below the 18 cents mark. While few tags were turned there was an apparent growing dissatisfaction on the part of growers at the price situation.

Official figures for yesterday's sales were 1,365,944 pounds for $243,426.12, an average price of $17.82 per hundred pounds.

Yesterday's sales brought the season's sales to 14,412,344 pounds for $2,628,860.00, an average price of $18.24 per hundred pounds.

The bad weather of the past two weeks has held sales down from a poundage standpoint and observers express the opinion that the weather has likewise had a tendency to hold down prices. With better weather in prospect for next week larger sales are looked for and warehousemen express the belief that there will be a strengthening of prices.

TO BE BURIED TODAY
Greensboro, Sept. 14.—The funeral of William H. Rickman, killed yesterday morning in the wrecking of a lumber truck near Sedgewick School, will be held at Trinity Methodist Church today. Burial will be in Forest Lawn cemetery.

ITALY PLANS TO GO AHEAD

Mussolini's Cabinet Refuses to Consider Any Compromise Settlement in Italo- Ethiopian Situation;

Bonito Mussolini's cabinet flatly refused today to take any compromise settlement in the tense Italo-Ethiopian situation.

Meeting under Il Duce, who holds most of the cabinet portfolios himself, the ministers went so far as to examine in what cases Italy's continued membership in the League of Nations would be rendered impossible.

At Geneva Soviet Russia, the Little Entente, the Balkan Entente and other states joined France and Great Britain in pledging allegiance to the League covenant.

Great Britain made official representation to Italy concerning alleged anti-British propaganda broadcast by a radio station at Bari.

Paris dispatches attributed to a Cairo correspondent of Havas News Agency, said a British transport had landed tanks and 2,000 troops at Alexandria, Egypt.

Mussolini told his cabinet the Italian forces at Libya were being strengthened and Italy was now able to meet any menace from any direction. He also declared Italy's colonial conflict would not breach its friendship with France.

Today's action of the nations at the League assembly swelled into an imposing protest against Italian invasion of Ethiopia. Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Sweden and Argentina, already have announced their intention of supporting the covenant. Such support implies possibility of imposing sanctions on Italy should the League decide Italy was guilty of an act of aggression against Ethiopia.

Semi-official Italian quarters, however, interpreted the French statement of policy differently. To the speech of Premier Laval was taken as a tacit victory for Italy because it did not involve against Italy's plans in East Africa.

A guard of 20 national police were placed at strategic points around the French embassy in Rome to prevent any possible demonstrations but none appeared likely.

WHITE BOX CARS PEDDLE ART WORK IN FRANCE

Paris.—(AP)—France's "moving" art gallery, installed in six newly painted white box-cars, is on its second annual tour of the provinces.

Three hundred happy artists waved goodbye to their "train children" as the traveling art salon pulled out of the Saint-Lazare station.

Created last year by Monsieur Leveille, vice-president of the Confederation of Intellectual Workers, to help sell the canvases of indigent artists, the traveling show had much success in small towns.

Many times at village railroad stations it was greeted by the whole town and a brass band. Often the mayor would make a speech.

Stimulated by the success of the 1934 "white train," thousands of artists clamored for representation this year, but only 300 of the most needy and most talented were chosen.

In spite of a deluge of protests from the other nations it seems that Mussolini is determined to go ahead with his campaign against Ethiopia. Before he goes too far it would be well for Mussolini to consider how powerful the Kaiser considered himself in 1914 and what the result of that conflict was for his people. If Il Duce plunges his nation into war at this time it will be equivalent to national suicide.

There are all kinds of alibis, including the weather, for the present price of tobacco, but when all is said and done all of us realize that tobacco is too cheap for the grower to make a living at it and what we want is not explanations but something done that will bring about fair prices. Already the growers are signing a new four years contract and word has already come from Washington that next year's crop reduction will be 25 per cent or more. The prospect of a shorter crop for next year should have its effect on this year's prices unless the buying companies have adopted a policy of taking this crop at the lowest possible figure in order to save enough to pay higher prices for next year's short crop without feeling it in a financial way. If this prospect of a shorter crop next year does not raise prices on this year's crop immediately, then the proper step to take would be to destroy enough of this year's crop and put it back on the land as fertilizer so as to make a shortage in the crop now. Just as long as there is an ample supply of tobacco with some to spare we do not believe that the growers are going to get high prices for it, so the only way out for the growers is to see to it that somebody needs every pound offered for sale and needs it bad enough to pay well for it.

MORNING STAR

SYNOPSIS: Emily has returned to Edwin, from whom she has been away on their wedding night. She has made him a charming home, and plans a charming garden. She has taken the prize, opinionated Edwin in hand, and has made some progress toward re-creating him. Although she has not forgotten David Coughlin, or her friendship and work with Charlotte in Chataanooga, Emily is determined to believe there is hope for married life with Edwin.

Chapter 27 NEW CRISIS

Emily was struggling with the servant problem. She surveyed the unkempt negro girl who sat before her on the edge of a kitchen chair.

"You say, Aunt Mandy sent you?"

"Yes'm. She said yo' girl had done some to do-troit an' fo' me to come talk to you."

Emily had infinite confidence in Aunt Mandy. "Can she recommend you?"

"There was a slight hesitation. 'Yes'm.'"

Aunt Mandy's recommendation carried some reservation. Emily felt sure, "All but what?" she prompted with a smile.

"She say fo' me to tell you I wuz a good cook, an' I wuz faithful, but I wuzn't very clean. It ain't my fault, Miss Emily, the protest burst from a full heart. 'I jus' ain't got no clo'es much. It takes all I kin make to pay fo' my victrola an' feed me an' Rosebud. She's my baby,' she explained.

"But doesn't your husband help take care of you and Rosebud?"

There was another hesitation, longer this time. "Aunt Mandy say to tell you I ain't ma'ied," Narcissus confessed. "Me an' him wuz almin' to git ma'ied, but his wife came back from Chataanooga an' commenced raisin' Cain an' he had to go live with hah to keep hah quiet. An' hah, Miss Emily, this hah's the only outside baby I evah had in my life."

Emily bent her head suddenly. When she looked up her face was grave. "I can overlook that. And I have uniforms I'd want you to wear, anyhow, but you must keep them very clean. We'll try for a week and see how we get along."

When Narcissus had departed Emily thought how much she would have enjoyed, in spite of her resolution, telling Charlotte about this servant. She told Edwin instead, that evening after dinner.

Edwin looked startled. "And you've hired her?"

"That was what he had gotten out of the story. She realized regretfully that he didn't consider it either funny or tragic."

"Why not? I think I can make an excellent servant of her."

He put down his newspaper. It was quite an occasion when Edwin put down his newspaper; reading it was becoming his evening ritual.

"I'd rather you wouldn't have a servant of that sort, dear."

She smiled at him. Already she was learning shamelessly how to "handle" Edwin, and smiling that way was one of the most successful methods. He hadn't yet gotten used to it.

"But they're nearly all that sort. And I'd much rather help her to make a living than have her acquire a second Rosebud in the process of keeping up the first one."

He looked at her very hard. He said gravely:

"You say astonishing things, sometimes."

SHE waited until bedtime, and then returned to the topic. "Edwin, why do you shy away from the subject of babies?"

He was meticulously hanging up his business suit. "I don't, except when you joke about it. It's just that the whole subject is rather—sacred to me."

What an amazing lot of sanctity there was in the world, then, she thought, and wisely refrained from saying so.

Edwin hung up the suit and came back to sit beside her on the bed. He was glad Emily had brought up the subject, since it gave him the opportunity for which he had been waiting. He had been restrained by this same reticence from forcing the topic upon Emily, but now he felt that he could speak frankly.

"To tell you the truth, sweetheart," he had taken one of her hands and was looking at it thoughtfully, as if he'd never seen it before, "I'd like a child more than anything in the world, wouldn't you? I think it would be a good thing for us both."

For herself, she knew he meant; to curb the spirit of levity and blind her irrevocably to her home and

him. And for himself, to supply the confidence in his own masculinity that he had always lacked; to make him also a member of the Lodge. She said slowly,

"Let me think about it awhile."

She shelved the problem the next morning for the more immediate one of entertaining her bridge club; of seeing that the creamed sauce creamed properly, and that the rolls rose to feather lightness.

Being hostess left Emily free to wander about during the game, which was really preferable to playing. She enjoyed bridge, but not with the passion that led some of her friends to place it next to their children and before their husbands in importance. Bridge, she felt, should be a game and not a religion.

Bits of disembodied conversation floated about.

"He's getting his stomach teeth now, and it's making him dreadfully fretful. Dr. Gaines had changed his diet three times and nothing seems to agree with him. But it's one of those things you have to endure, I suppose."

The voice was complacent, and Emily wondered idly if she herself would ever unconsciously adopt it. She must remind Charlotte not to let her!

Dorothy Shane broke in casually. "I wish to goodness they'd standardize contract rules before I put any more heavy study on them. Bill says they're just like health and accident policies: about the time you think you know what they mean you find a clause that nullifies everything that's gone before."

Someone else laughed. "Joe says he plays by ear and gets along just as well. He does win a lot of money, but the strain on his partner is terrific."

ANOTHER snatch, that carried in a brief lull. "I'd never been to a funeral like that before, and it was the weirdest thing you ever saw. In addition to pall-bearers and honorary pall-bearers and escorts of honor, there were thirty good-looking women, all dressed in white and carrying wreaths of flowers!"

Dorothy paused in the middle of a deal. "What were they—his concubines?"

"Oh, no," Evelyn's sense of humor was non-existent. "They were flower-bearers."

"No!" Dorothy widened her eyes. "Where did I stop dealing?"

Still another voice, nearer at hand. "George asked me what I wanted for my birthday, and I told him if he wanted to make me really happy he could give me a load of well-wetted manure."

Emily laughed aloud, a burst of rippling, spontaneous mirth. They looked at her in surprise, and someone asked: "What on earth—"

"Nothing," she said. "It's just that the conversation sounds from here like 'cross questions and crooked answers.'"

Dorothy's mascaraed eyes narrowed in quick comprehension. "It is killing, isn't it? Especially when you sit off and listen."

That, Emily realized, was what she had been doing throughout her married life: sitting off and listening. Was Charlotte right, after all? And then she realized that she couldn't change now, whether Charlotte was right or wrong.

Edwin waited for the guests to depart before he came home, and then to make doubly sure came in by the back way. He had the timid man's horror of women en masse.

He glanced at the card tables and his mouth grew suddenly stubborn. Emily sighed.

"Did they smoke here?" he demanded abruptly.

It was obvious that they had. "Certainly. Why not?"

"You know how I feel about smoking."

"Yes, I know. But if they smoke anyhow, I don't see why they shouldn't smoke here."

His mouth was still stubborn. "Well, I wouldn't think of having a lot of men here, for instance, and doing something you disapproved of."

Emily looked demure.

"I'm sure you wouldn't."

He realized angrily that she was laughing at him. "I suppose I'm old-fashioned and all that, but I can't help it. His tone was an even blend of apology and complacency."

"And wouldn't want to help it if you could, would you?"

Suddenly she was ashamed of her laughter.

"Dearest, I'm incorrigible. Please forgive me." She kissed him, and his arms closed hungrily about her.

ready serving time at Atlanta. Government detectives have heard that certain individuals would like to turn state's evidence. They didn't dare while Huey was alive but now they may divulge secrets about political finances.

Elmer Irey's sleuths have uncovered the records of income and outgo for the last ten years. Thirty investigators have lived in New Orleans for more than two years. They will naturally exert pressure on lieutenants suspected of being ready to crack. There may be some startling tales coming out of New Orleans soon.

HOMELESS: New Dealers insist that Parker Coughlin's recent visit to Hyde Park was one of those accidents which may happen to any President. They don't want the impression that they're courting the country's arch-infinitesimal.

But insiders will tell you that the clerical advocate of a third party drove into Mr. Roosevelt's front yard in a car owned by Security Exchange Commission Chairman Joe Kennedy and accompanied by a man who strangely resembled the Boston boy and ex-Wall Streeter. Now Mr. Kennedy is a close friend of the President, but not even members of the White House entourage presume to arrange conferences without first ascertaining whether the head of the family is willing.

Keen observers noted that the meeting did not take place until after Huey Long died. In official circles there seems to be a feeling that the padre sought the interview. Now that the Kingfish is dead—though they never got together formally or informally—Parker Coughlin lacks a national spokesman or a place to go. So why not Hyde Park?

New York By JAMES McMULLIN

SPASH: "The Republican party lost one of its best friends when Huey Long died." This statement was made to the writer by a man who is recognized as one of the GOP's most important and ablest backstage strategists in New York. His comment is given in detail because it represents the significant private viewpoint of the anti-New Deal G. H. Q.

"We had what amounted to a working agreement with Long for next year. Naturally there was nothing done in black-and-white—but he understood us and we understood him. We wanted to lick Roosevelt for obvious reasons. He wanted to lick him and let us win—because he figured our victory would enable him to build a much bigger following for 1940. He hoped it that millions of the have-nots who are still backing Roosevelt would be bound to come over to him once FDR was beaten."

"He was all set to raise plenty of hell—and we were ready to see to it that he had enough money to make a big splash—indirectly of course."

DIFFICULT: "Now the dream of a left-wing third party in 1936 is as dead as Long himself. There's absolutely no one in sight to lead it and no time to develop a leader. O. K. Allen is a joke. Coughlin? Don't make me laugh. La Follette? Too smart—he'll wait until there's a real chance of winning. Ditto for Wheeler, Norris? Too old—and besides he likes Roosevelt. Lynn Frazier? A small timer who hasn't the personality to build a national following. Borah? Not a chance. We were really counting on Long more than we realized until now."

"We will have to revamp our battle plan and try to push FDR farther to the left. It's our only chance. Maybe it will work if business makes him mad enough by refusing to cooperate or to take his word for anything. But he's an awfully hard man to push unless he wants to be pushed. Moreover—if recovery continues—it won't be easy to keep industry unitedly enthused about giving him the works."

"Our job will be all the more difficult because—with the left wing third party eliminated—the President can afford to coddle business more than he has. He can follow the advice of Garner and Moley without fear of thunder from the left. And no matter how we try to discredit him he's bound to win some business converts if he persists in a friendly policy."

WONDER: "Of course we can—and will—redouble our efforts to encourage a right-wing third party—Hearst's Jeffersonian Democrats. But frankly I doubt that it will accomplish anything—even in the South. Don't forget that the machine in power controls patronage. Local leaders are the backbone of any successful political movement. Put those two factors together and try to visualize how many Democratic lieutenants and sergeants and corporals hate Roosevelt enough to throw away their places at the feed-bowl deliberately in order to elect a Republican. That's what it boils down to."

"There will be plenty of generals and colonels—Hearst himself and Bainbridge Colby and Judge Patterson and Senator Tydings and Henry Breckinridge—and maybe Al Smith, John W. Davis, Alben Barkley, Newton Baker and the like. But do you think the public is going to swarm cheering to their banners? Don't be silly."

"A good live radical movement promoted by such a colorful mountebank as the Kingfish might have subordinated 10,000,000 votes and a dozen states from the Roosevelt column and given us a walk in. If the Jefferson Democrats poll a million they'll be lucky—and it would be the eighth wonder of the world if they are strong enough to represent the balance of power in a single state."

POKER: The final results of the Treasury's operations in converting the fast billion and a quarter of Liberty Fourth 4-14s into 1-2 per cent notes and 2-3-4 per cent bonds will be what dramatic critics call adequate—and no more. There has been no enthusiastic rush to convert—despite a strong market in government securities which insiders are convinced traces to sub-rosa Treasury support for both its short and long term issues.

As predicted here, the notes are proving more popular than the bonds. The final figures will show that about 60 per cent of the holders of the called Liberties took the notes in exchange, about 20 per cent took the bonds and the remaining 20 per cent will insist on redemption in cash.

When the new issues were announced the Treasury made the point that it reserved the right to raise the price on September 19. This was a bit of poker designed to hasten subscriptions. It worked once before—but not this time—indicating definitely that bondholders are no longer so keen to grab whatever Secretary Morgenthau throws at them. Not a peep was heard from the Treasury on the fateful 10th.

In the sixteenth century, Surat was an important seaport and the chief commercial city of India.

STATE CHANCE NOW GOOD FOR WPA PROJECTS

Believe State "Got Right" with Administrator Hopkins in The Nick of Time

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh, Sept. 14.—North Carolina "got right" with WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins in the nick of time, is the belief here today. For if Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Senator J. W. Bailey and Congressman R. L. Doughton had not gone to Washington when they did this week to confer with Hopkins and call for a definite commitment as to what his policy would be with regard to approving projects for North Carolina, the state might have been badly off for luck. For at the time this delegation went to see Hopkins, the show-down between him and Ickes was still in progress and had not reached a final settlement at the hands of President Roosevelt. As a result, Hopkins was inclined to be conciliatory and assured Messrs. Ehringhaus, Bailey and Doughton that North Carolina would get its fair share of both Public Works and Works Progress Administration projects, estimated at $40,000,000.

Within the last 24 hours, Hopkins has been given the "go ahead" signal by President Roosevelt, and Ickes has been given until December 15 to get as many of his PWA projects under way as possible. Indications are that after that date most of the remaining PWA projects will be cancelled and the unexpended portion of PWA funds left turned over to the WPA. The President also laid down some additional rules with regard to PWA projects as follows:

1. Contracts must be let before December 15.
2. The project must be completed within one year.

3. They must be located in sections where there is sufficient relief labor to do the work required.
4. They must conform to the average of $850 per man-year for each person employed on the job.

This means that a majority of the PWA projects are going to have to be greatly revised and that a large number will not be able to conform to these new requirements, according to those here familiar with the situation.

This also means that the greater portion of the $40,000,000 which Hopkins assured the North Carolina delegation which called on him Tuesday would still be spent in North Carolina, will be spent by the Works Progress Administration rather than by the Public Works Administration. It is now generally agreed, which likewise means that the bulk of this money will become available much sooner than would have been the case if the PWA had handled it and that numerous WPA projects will be started in all sections of the state in the very near future. For it is conceded that the WPA is a much faster working organization than the PWA and that Hopkins and State WPA Administrator George W. Coan, Jr., will be putting people to work and get the money rolling into the state in a very short time.

But if Governor Ehringhaus, Senator Bailey and Congressman Doughton had not gone to Washington when they did or had delayed their trip until now, they might not have found Hopkins in such an amiable mood and might not have obtained quite so friendly a reception and commitment. For at the present time there is no denying that Hopkins is the new "Kingfish" in Washington, as far as the spending of Federal money is concerned and that he will continue to check all projects approved by the PWA to see that they conform to the President's new regulations.

It has also been learned here today that prior to the trip of the North Carolina delegation to confer with Hopkins and to inquire if there had been or might be some discrimination against this state, there was a very definite prejudice among some WPA officials in Washington towards North Carolina. The result was that most of the projects from North Carolina, WPA as well as PWA, were being pigeon-holed and held up without even being studied, according to very reliable information received here today.

One reason for this, it is understood, were the charges made by Governor Ehringhaus at the Governors Conference some months ago to the effect that the WPA was being "politicized." Another factor was that Senator Bailey had been one of the Senators who had wanted to reduce the works relief fund from $4,800,000,000 to only $1,000,000,000. So a good many WPA officials felt that they didn't owe a darn thing to North Carolina.

It is now generally agreed, however, that Hopkins was not a party to any of this and that when he assured the Governor, Senator Bailey and Mr. Doughton that North Carolina will still get $40,000,000 more out of the new WPA and PWA program, it will get that much. But there is no doubt that the state had a close squeak.

For the first time in its 36 years of existence the Tennessee Order of the Eastern Star will hold its annual convention next March in a city other than Nashville. The convocation will be held in Chataanooga.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — The cry of economy in government, raised with such frequency and gusto by the Democrats in the 1932 presidential campaign, apparently is about to be dusted off for use again in '36. At least that is the interpretation some Republican politicians place on recent moves of President Roosevelt and other "new dealers." They point to several recent happenings as proof:

1. Independent agencies set up under the "new deal" have been ordered under the control of the bureau of the budget.
2. Secretary Wallace and AAA have announced that wheat farmers will be permitted to plant some five million more acres in wheat.
3. Announcement by AAA that there is to be a change in the corn-hog program, curtailing those crops, if the farmers desire it.
4. The statement of President Roosevelt at Hyde Park that the "peak of the depression" has passed.

Favorite G. O. P. Theme

The Republicans for some time have been criticizing the present administration for governmental expenditures and the increased public debt. It has been the favorite theme of Representative Snell of New York; G. O. P. house floor leader. Senator Dickinson of Iowa rarely misses the opportunity to harp on the "expenditures and waste" under the "new deal" and to warn about the prospects of additional taxation.

Other critics of the administration point to the fact that in 1932 the Democrats made great sport of the number of commissions created by President Hoover and add that Hoover was a piker compared to Roosevelt.

Higher taxes and the high cost of living always make good issues for the opposition in a political campaign. That the Republicans will hammer away at them in '36 can be taken for granted.

A Ticklish Job

The administration will be faced with a ticklish proposition if it seriously attempts to reduce the personnel of the many alphabetical agencies to bring about more economy.

Estimates of the number placed on the government payroll under the "new deal" run as high as 170,000 persons. This doesn't include those in CCC camps, part-time workers nor the large army on relief—persons on relief who have been given made-work jobs.

The giving of jobs always is popular. Taking them away, especially on the eve of a national campaign, is politically dangerous. Even if the President's insistence that the "administrations" and "authorities" be subjected to the pruning knife of that merciless governmental agency known as the bureau of the budget

Social and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Forbes of Bolling Green, Ky., are spending several days with his mother, Mrs. Patience Forbes.

Allice Ruth Bundy Entertains.
Little Miss Alice Ruth Bundy celebrated her ninth birthday Monday night with a Japanese Garden party at the home of her parents in Chatham Circle.

The lawn and home was beautifully decorated with lanterns and the guests were dressed in typical Japanese costumes. On arrival the guests were served punch by Mrs. Hinton Best and Mrs. Selma Carson Moore. Misses Jane Hadley and Carolyn Hamric entertained the children with Japanese stories and games.

Seated on the floor around the dining room table the children enjoyed refreshing ices, cakes and bonbons in varied colors. In the center of the table was a lovely birthday cake with nine glowing candles decorated in green and pink. Guests were given novelty airplanes for favors. Mrs. W. J. Bundy, mother of the hostess, was assisted in serving by Mesdames W. L. Best, J. H. Pen and N. O. VanNortwick.

Prizes for best costumes were given to little Miss Sarah Frances Williams, and prizes in the game contests were awarded to little Miss Margery Jackson and Jack Scott in the Japanese lantern contest.

The hostess received a number of lovely and useful gifts.

A Correction.
In the advertisement for the Ramona Studio of Dancing carried in The Reflector on Wednesday, September 11th, we stated that the studio would open on October 17th. This was an error. The correct date is Tuesday, September 17th.

Miss Ramona Staples who recently arrived in Greenville to make her home, is instructor and has studied with prominent dancing teachers. The studio will be in the Woman's Club building throughout the fall and winter.

Card of Thanks.
I wish to thank each and every one for the kindness shown me during the long illness and death of my wife, Addie Baker. Also for the beautiful flowers.

—Her Husband, Jesse Baker.

When a Seventh Day Adventist was recently found for working on Sunday, P. P. Vaughn of Knoxville wrote the judge who imposed the fine and offered a duck as a prize to any person who could quote scripture which designates Sunday as the Sabbath day.

Pomona Grange.
The fall meeting of the Pomona Grange was held at the library on Friday night. The meeting was opened by Miss Lula Rasberry of Bell Arthur. Mrs. Albert Tyson of Bell Arthur, gave a splendid talk on "What the Grange Can Do for the School," and C. C. Hilton of Greenville, gave a talk on "The FCX and its Activities." A committee was named to draw up resolutions to be carried to the state meeting at North Wilkesboro. Mark Smith is planning to invite one member from Pierce and one from Stokes to accompany him. Delegates from these Granges should get in touch with Mr. Smith.

Reading Circle.
The library kits loaned to clubs from the Greenville library are being called in at this time. The books will be mended and a little later the circulating library may be loaned again. The readers' reports have been good all summer.

Garden Contests.
A garden contest lasting from October 1 to March 31 is being started throughout the state. Contestants must enroll before September 25th. Several in Pitt county have already enrolled. If you want a report from your local garden leader, Worth while cash prizes are offered the winners.

Several Sophomores Move To Posts On First String Team

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 14.—Two sophomores have worked themselves into posts on the Carolina first team by fine playing and aggressive spirit shown during the week, while two more have moved into the first string due to injuries of the so-called regulars.

Andy Bershak and Johnnie Sniskak have fought themselves into the inside track on the right end and right guard positions, respectively. They have performed well in practices and even reached momentary brilliancy during the scrimmages held this week.

Henry Bartos has taken the place of Tom Evans at right tackle, while the regular is recuperating from a bad case of poison oak. Art Ditt is substituting for Jim Hutchins, who is taking things easy after pulling a leg muscle last week.

The all-around playing of Bershak and Sniskak, together with the sparkling performance of Crowell Little in Thursday's scrimmage was the high spot of the second week of practice in the Carolina camp. Some of the men appeared in poor shape physically and did not seem to be progressing as expected. This lack of condition has caused Coach Snavely considerable worry and will necessitate overtime work next week.

The Tar Heels have two more weeks of work before the Wake Forest game here September 28, and then on the following week-end they meet one of the strongest foes of the schedule, Tennessee at Knoxville.

Fundamentals continue to be stressed while the members of the first string combination are recuperating. When the team returns in their old positions, the finishing touches will be put on the offensive attack as well as on the defense for the Wake Forest game.

RIFLE DISCHARGES INTO YOUTH'S LEG

Rocky Mount, Sept. 14.—Louis Perry, youthful resident of Oak Level township, was painfully injured at his home yesterday afternoon when a .22 rifle went off in his hands and injured his right leg at the thigh.

Brought to a hospital here, Perry said he borrowed some bullets for his rifle and was attempting to put one in it.

The physician said he thought the patient's condition was "satisfactory."

Friendly thoughts
by S. G. WILKERSON

A day's work well done is an achievement. Work is filled with the growth of living things; sloth is filled with the decay of thoughts and things. Work is the chief blessing of mankind.

The needs of the family in moderate circumstances receive the same considerate, experienced service as others.

MOVIE JUBILEE SEASON OF BIGGER MOVIES STARTS AT LOCAL THEATRES

SCREEN TO OFFER MANY FAMOUS FILMS DURING THE NEW SEASON

Stars of yesterday and today. The screen stars of silent motion pictures were the pioneers of an entertainment that today is one of the four largest industries of the world. The stars of yesterday entertained millions. Today's screen stars bring enjoyment to the entire world. Among the old stars shown are Charles Ray, Mae Murray, Theodore Roberts, Wallace Reid, Mabel Normand and Dolores Costello. The present day stars include Jeanette MacDonald who will be featured with Nelson Eddy in "Let Freedom Ring;" Norma Shearer to be starred in "Romeo and Juliet;" Joan Crawford, the star of "Glamour;" Clark Gable starring with Franchot Tone and Charles Laughton in "Mutiny on the Bounty;" Bing Crosby, co-starred with Joan Bennett in "Two for Tonight;" and featured in "The Big Broadcast of 1936" with Amos 'n' Andy, Eibel Merman and Jack Oakie, shown in the center at bottom is the late Will Rogers who had just completed two pictures before his tragic accident. "Steamboat Round the Bend," and "In Old Kentucky." These and many other productions will be shown at the Pitt and State Theatres during Movie Jubilee season.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Sept. 14.—(AP)—The stock market sagged today with only metals and a handful of specialties showing firm propensities. Profit taking was in evidence at the time although the majority of offers held minor proportions. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 600,000 shares.

The market seemed to find little to stimulate the movement of grain and the general run of commodities. U. S. government securities again slipped down and corporation loans were mixed.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady one to two lower on higher Liverpool cables offset by favorable weather and southern selling. The market eased off after the opening and prices at the end of the first half hour were five to seven net lower with October selling around 10.35 and May around 10.57. Futures closed barely steady 10 to 12 lower, spots quiet middling 10.65.

MILL WORKING HANDS FOR $15 PER DAY

Rae ford, Sept. 14.—The Rae ford Cotton Mill has resumed operations with a few hands doing preparatory work at a wage of 15 cents an hour for 11 or 12 hours per day. It is reported. A wage of $15 daily for a 55-hour work week has been agreed upon as a starter.

Repairs on the cotton warehouse and other buildings will be started shortly, it is stated.

MILLBROOK SCHOOL HAS OPENING EVENTS

Millbrook, Sept. 14.—The formal opening of the Millbrook high school has just been held. Rev. J. S. Farmer, pastor of the Millbrook Baptist Church, conducted the devotional exercise. Short talks were made by members of the school committee and Mrs. Chas. A. Beddingfield, president of the P. T. A.

OUR Want Ads Pay

SPORT SLANTS

Apparently Lou Gehrig is going to borrow a page from the St. Louis Cardinals book and depend on a last-minute surge to again win the slug and batting honors of the American league. Until the Yankees' final western swing Gehrig showed no signs of shaking off the slump that plagued him since the season opened. In trying to place the blame for the big first baseman's failure to set the league afire with his bat and to carry on where his pal, Babe Ruth, left off, some pointed to the barnstorming jaunt in the Far East; others suggested that he needed his bell cow, Babe Ruth, to show him the way, while many were satisfied that it was simply a case of "over-baseballing," due to Lou's effort to prolong his consecutive games streak beyond the reach of future generations of big leaguers.

Gehrig himself held with none of these explanations; he just stuck to his job of doing the very best he could and hoped he would emerge from his slump in short order just as he had done on other occasions. In the meantime a new contender to his slugging throne sprung up in the person of Hank Greenberg. Greenberg had a merry old time setting the pace in home runs, runs batted in, runs scored, doubles, and in staying right up with the leaders for the individual batting championship.

Larrupin' Lou Again
For the first time this season, on the final sweep around the loop, Gehrig resembled the Larrupin' Lou of past seasons. He hit 428 home runs in 28 runs, and brought his home-run to a total of 27 with eight round trips in the last eight days. That sudden spurge with the stick placed him right up within striking distance of the batting leaders.

The opposing pitchers treated Gehrig with the respect he commanded in the past, for he was passed no less than 26 times, five of the free tickets coming in a single game to equal the American league record.

They Fear Pepper
There is no chance of Gehrig overtaking the Tigers' star as far as runs batted in goes, but he now occupies the position of runner-up in that department. He has already stepped out in front in the runs scored column.

MOVIE JUBILEE

Motion Picture Progress on Parade

When 20 miles an hour meant speeding, when a 50-mile trip was a tour—that was when the crude silent motion picture was given the public as entertainment! Today speeding is 90 miles an hour; a tour is a 3,000-mile trip. The automobile industry has reached a new high in perfection—today the motion picture industry—with sound and glorious color—with the world's great authors, musicians and scientists at its disposal, has also reached a new high in perfection. The MOVIE JUBILEE season truly reflects the amazing progress which has been made in motion picture entertainment.
