NAZI FLAG ADOPTED BY GERMANY

The Nazis went another step higher in their domination of Germany when their Swastika banner was adopted as the Reich national flag. The flag is shown displayed before the Nazi convention at which Adolf Hitler and his Nazis relegated the Jews in Germany to a position of non-citizenship similar to that of the Middle Ages. Adoption of the Swastika as the national flag was accomplished during an outburst of intense nationalism arising from the tearing of the Swastika from the German liner Bremen in New York recently and Magistrate Louis Brodsky's dismissal of five defendants arrested for the incident. Scouts Staging Fire Prevention Contest In City

A fire prevention contest is being held by the Greenville District of the Boy Scouts preparatory to National Fire Prevention Week, October 6th to 13th. The winner of the contest will be recognized as the Junior Fire Chief of the Greenville Fire Department during the week of October 6th to 13th, at which time there will be observation of Fire Prevention week all over the United States.

The contest will end September 28th at which time each contestant will submit a list of possible fire hazards that are found around the home or premises, of the most economical way to eliminate the hazard. Such as: Putting a penny behind a fuse is a fire hazard and may be eliminated by replacing it with a new fuse. Running an electric wire under a rug is a possible hazard. The insulation may be worn off the wire and cause a short that would start a fire. This can be eliminated by running the wire around the baseboard. The boy that lists the most possible hazards and with ways of eliminating them will have the distinction of being the winner of the Junior Fire Chief contest.

A composite of these lists will be printed and will be made available to the citizens of the county, so they may check their own property and eliminate any possible and apparent fire hazard.

Fire Chief Gardener says: "It is ten times easier to prevent a fire than it is to fight one."

Late News Flashes

Under Advisement.

"Raleigh, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The question of the constitutionality of two liquor laws passed by the 1935 legislature under which 17 of the state's 100 counties have county-controlled liquor stores in operation, was taken under advisement by the Supreme Court today.

"If the legislature had the power to prohibit is there also the power to regulate?" E. H. Malone, of Lenoir, asked the court in regard to the cases as he argued the laws are constitutional.

"That's your case," Chief Justice W. P. Stacey commented. "If the legislature has the power to prohibit has it not the power to regulate?"

Malone and Justices George Connor and Herriot Clarkson had been discussing the state policies toward liquor prior to 1920 just a moment earlier.

Malone closed his arguments for the laws after Julius Hanze, of Warrenton also spoke favoring constitutionality of the laws and W. H. (Continued on Page Four)

Survey River Project To Be Made At Once

At a dinner recently given by the local Tar River committee of the Eastern North Carolina Association, the United States District Engineer explained that he would soon begin a survey of Tar River from Washington to Greenville to determine the actual cost of the proposed improvement. The cost will be determined covering more than one plan of improvement. No such survey has ever been made before. All previous action has been taken on preliminary reports. In other words hereafter all action and reports will be based on actual facts and figures.

The Eastern North Carolina Association's Secretary, S. F. Dickenson has assurance that this survey will be made and the report submitted within the next sixty or ninety days. In the meantime there is considerable work to be done by the Association, in fact, it is believed by many of the committee that now is the time to keep behind the proposition. Press reports would indicate the same. Other section of the county seem to get money for such improvements through other the so-called regular channels. The Traffic World of September 14th carried the following news item:

"President Roosevelt's division of applications and information handling works funds has announced that the President has approved allotments of federal funds totaling $3,500,000 to the corps of engineers. War Department, for construction projects in Illinois and Mississippi. These projects were recommended to the President by the advisory committee on allotments and cover improvements to rivers and channels.

Whether the Tar River is ever improved will depend greatly upon the persistence of those that will benefit.

Growers Ask Governor To Declare Another Tobacco Holiday Now

Mass Meetings Of Middle Belt Growers Protest Tobacco Prices; Ask For A Statewide Protest Meeting

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Agitation for another tobacco holiday movement was under way in North Carolina today among growers who expressed dissatisfaction at prices received for their product on the auction markets. A mass meeting of farmers at Oxford, in the middle belt market which opened for the season yesterday, adopted a resolution urging Governor Ehringhaus, who initiated the tobacco holiday two years ago, to close the warehouses until prices were adjusted.

Another group of growers at Henderson took similar action and called a mass meeting today to register their formal protest. The Oxford planters called on other growers to join in a statewide meeting at Raleigh to which Secretary Wallace and J. B. Hutson, tobacco expert of the AAA, were to be invited.

The Henderson and Oxford protests coming no the opening day of the middle belt followed a protest meeting of Wendell farmers here last week. The Wendell growers decided to withhold further action until after the opening of the middle belt markets.

While the official average of the middle belt sales yesterday were not available it was estimated by warehousemen to be around 18 cents or about a third lower than last year's opening trend of prices. Prices the opening of the season are usually low because quantities of inferior grades are dumped on the market. The estimated average of the middle belt opening was a little under current prices on the new bright belt and border belt that opened earlier.

Unusually heavy offerings were reported by the middle belt markets yesterday and at the larger markets the sales were blocked.

Governor Ehringhaus speaking at Winston yesterday expressed dissatisfaction at prevailing prices and said reduction of at least 25 per cent should be made in the 1936 acreage.

Representative John Kerr, co-author of the Kerr-Smith tobacco control act, also spoke at Winston and concurred with Governor Ehringhaus in the belief that the AAA should not have increased the acreage this year.

Storm Warning Along The Coast

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 8.—(AP)—Small craft warnings were ordered up along the coast between Savannah, Ga., and New Bern, N. C., today as the weather bureau placed the center of a slight disturbance about 100 miles east of Jacksonville and moving in a northeasterly direction.

"It is not a tropical disturbance and cannot be classified as a storm," said Walter J. Bennett, weather bureau official. The disturbance apparently crossed over Florida yesterday, bringing rain and fresh winds. It has not passed out into the Atlantic ocean and is apparently moving up the coast. Florida will not be affected further. Highest winds here during the passing of the disturbance were about 20 miles per hour, he said.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News

Washington

By RAY TUCKER

RIGHT: New Deal liberals—the Tugwells, Wallaces, Cohens, Corcorans—are too loyal to President Roosevelt to express their qualms publicly, but they are mildly disturbed over recent trends toward the right. Having almost no political savvy it's hard for them to understand that an administration must be right as well as left now and then.

What they think they detect is an accumulation of evidence that their leader's flair for pioneering and experimentation is slowly disappearing under the pressure of economic and political realities. They have in mind such things as the proclamation of a "breathing spell" to business, the emphasis on economy, Hopkins' curtailment of advances for construction of public power plants, the emergence of advisers known to be ultra-conservative in their views and viewpoints.

Whenever Mr. Roosevelt veered to the right in the first time fevered days his enthusiastic liberals assured friends not to take it too seriously. His legislative demands at the last session seemed to prove they knew what they were talking about. But now they're not so sure.

SYMPTOMS: What worried them most is Dan Rogers' closeness to the throne these days. They have good reason to know that the Secretary of Commerce feels little sympathy for the more revolutionary aspects of the New Deal. They noted that he dropped into the background while they trod the stage but that now he occupies a prima donna role.

Mr. Rogers, however, is the President's contact man with Big Business. He has nursed along the conservative boys with promises as generous as his Cabinet critics have success, too. On his recent trip to Hyde Park he reported to the President that his financial friends were disposed to accept the offer of an armistice in good faith. It was the best news Mr. Roosevelt had heard in a long while.

LEGION POST INSTALLS ITS NEW OFFICERS

J. Hicks Corey Heads Veterans' Organization For The Coming Year

At the regular September meeting of the American Legion, held last night at the Field House of the Third Street School, the Post heard reports of its activities of the last year, retired the past year's officers, installed a new set of officers for the coming year, and attended to a mass of routine business.

Report of the past year's activities was given by the retiring commander J. H. Rose. After two and a half years' leadership of the Post, Commander Rose surrendered the gavel to J. Hicks Corey, the new commander. The report showed that the local post had been active in the support of the Boy Scout program throughout Pitt County. In Ayden and Stokes, legionnaires served as Scout Masters, and in Greenville legionnaires served on the council and are also backing one troop in this city; the report shows that the Legion had erected a flag pole on the City Playground at the cost of fifty dollars; conducted campaigns in Flag Education; cooperated in putting over the C. M. T. C. program; helped to observe American Education Week; cooperated in laws, civic drives, and civic movements; backed up and helped to support the E. R. E. programs in Nursery Schools and Adult Education; conducted programs on Memorial Day and Armistice Day; assisted in a military funeral for a deceased veteran; carried out a very successful Junior Baseball program for the boys of the County; won two cups at the State Convention; one for the best membership record, another for the best child welfare activity; had one of its members elected as Vice-Commander of the Legion for the State of North Carolina.

A membership drive was staged with the result that the retiring commander was able to present the incoming commander with thirty new members, as a starter on the 1935-36 membership campaign.

Commander Rose then installed the following officers for the coming year:

Commander, J. Hicks Corey.

First Vice-Commander, P. E. Price.

Second Vice-Commander, Dr. Grady Dixon.

Third Vice-Commander, Coy Forbes.

Adjutant and Finance Officer, S. M. Wolfolk.

Chaplain, Lee Moore.

Sergeant at Arms, Carl Langley.

The new commander made a short speech, urging all members of the Post to continue to work, so that the activities of the Post might be even greater than in the past.

A resolution was passed, requesting the proper officers of the City and County to see to it that Pitt County get the National Guard Armory to which it is entitled. A resolution was also passed to be forwarded to the National Convention in St. Louis next week, requesting the National Convention to see to it that the responsibility for the deaths of the veterans in the Florida Keys be definitely fixed. A resolution was also adopted, thanking Commander Rose for his fine services during the past two and a half years as commander of the Post, also felicitating him for being elected Vice-Commander for the State of North Carolina. Dr. J. M. Barrett was elected Service Officer.

Plans are shaping up very satisfactorily for the program of the Greater Greenville Fair, according to a statement made by Secretary N. G. Bartlett for this paper. Every effort is being made to secure a large list of exhibits in all of the departments. Offices have been opened on the second floor of the Greenville Daily Reflector building.

Miss Mary Lou White is the assistant secretary in charge. Mrs. Tyson has been selected to secure exhibits for the various departments. The fair program includes horse races, Thursday and Friday; automobile races, sanctioned by the AAA, on Saturday. Greenville has never had AAA sanctioned automobile races before and some of the fastest drivers in the United States will be in the races. Fifteen professional drivers will take part in the races.

Those interested in securing space for exhibits or commercial booths, may communicate with Miss Mary Lou White, assistant secretary in charge.

GETS TERM IN PRISON
ON MANN ACT CHARGE

Payetteville, Sept. 18.—Percy Simmons, Cedar Creek farmer who was convicted Monday of violating the Mann Act, yesterday was sentenced to serve a year and a day in the Federal prison at Atlanta by Judge I. M. McKee in district court.

Simmons, a married man with 6 children, was charged with eloping to Baltimore with Lucille Bullard, 19-year-old girl of Cedar Creek. In passing judgment, Judge McKee said he would have given Simmons three years had not the girl displayed "a brazen attitude" while on the witness stand.

Attorney Declares Koencke Was Bent On Suicide in Grand Fashion

Toronto, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The attorney for the two Detroit armmen seeking freedom from a manslaughter charge after a death struggle in midair with Len Koencke of the Brooklyn Dodgers, expressed belief today that the big league baseball player had attempted suicide.

"Koencke deliberately attempted suicide and was trying to do it in one grand and glorious finish," said attorney E. J. Murphy.

He announced he would subpoena Casey Spengel, manager of the Dodgers to testify at the coroner's inquest tonight as to Koencke's mental condition and would call anyone else that is necessary to prove "my clients fought in self defense."

Italian Cabinet To Study Situation At Geneva; More British Warships Move To Scene; Ethiopians Called To Arms

London, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The Geneva correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Agency reported today that Premier Mussolini had called Pompeo Aloisi, head of the Italian delegation at the League of Nations, back home. The correspondent said the Italian delegate was taking a full report of the present situation in the League of Nations to Il Duce. (It was said in Rome that the Italian Cabinet will meet Saturday to consider the report of the situation at Geneva.)

The Italian Cabinet passed sweeping provisions for raising funds "for the defense of the East African colonies" and the British admiralty indefinitely postponed the regular autumn maneuvers of the British fleet. These were developments today shortly after the Italo-Ethiopian commission of the League of Nations evolved a plan for the "assistance of Ethiopia."

However, hope that Italy might agree to it thereby averting a war in East Africa were discounted by the immediate Italian reaction in Geneva.

"Absolutely an unacceptable basis of negotiations," was the comment from the Rome delegation which Tuesday had suggested to Italy that the plan it might be willing to negotiate along its lines.

Naval developments, meanwhile went forward with increased momentum.

In London it was estimated between 125 and 150 British warships were on duty in the Mediterranean where the Italian naval and military movement is gaining in velocity. The second and sixth destroyer flotillas of the British navy, leaving two destroyers behind, sailed from Gibraltar unexpectedly today for an unannounced destination.

Among Italian movements was that of 7,000 troops to Libya, northernmost Italian colony in Africa and the one under the governorship of the former air marshal Italo Balbo, known in the United States as the man who led the Italian air armada to the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago in 1933.

In Ethiopia, according to Reuters dispatch to London, the governor of Hara province has called all men to arms under penalty of death to slavers. Emperor Haile Selassie continued to hope for peace but his soldiers were prepared for war.

Meanwhile France went quietly about building up her fleet. Another new cruiser will be launched September 28. French authorities said the government intended "to do nothing which might bring about a conflict with Italy."

Neuro Shoots
At Another,
But Misses

A shooting scrape here this morning resulted in no greater injury than some scared nerves who fled the scene before the officers arrived.

The shooting took place on Atlantic avenue near the Imperial Tobacco Company plant, when the course of an argument Arthur Parker, said to come from the nearby rural section, whipped out his gun and opened fire on Young Jenkins. The bullets all missed their mark and struck the side of the tobacco company building causing much commotion among the spectators both on the street and inside the factory.

BOUND OVER TO COURT ON CAPITAL CHARGE

Hickory, Sept. 18.—Bud Winkler, charged with first degree burglary, has been bound over to Catawba Superior Court by Judge Theodore Cummings in Hickory recorder's court yesterday, probable cause having been found that the accused feloniously entered the home of Gus Fry at night. Winkler was ordered held for trial without bail.

The offense with which Winkler was accused was committed June, but due to the fact that he said to have escaped to California, his arrest was not accomplished until Saturday, following his return to Hickory Friday night.

Hunk Anderson Worried Over His Back Field

College Station, Raleigh, Sept. 18.—Coach Hunk Anderson had expected his 1935 State College backfield to give him little to worry about, but now he finds things differently.

However, the type of worrying Anderson is having to do is the kind coaches prefer if there is any worrying to be done.

Anderson can't decide, first, who is to do the quarterbacking, and second, who is to do the running and blocking at right halfback. Joe Schwerdt, Charlie Gadd, sophomore, and Willie Dwyer, sophomore, want to call signals, and Eddie Berinski, sophomore, and Howard Barde, sophomore, want to be No. 1 at right half.

Dusty is playing the best ball of his career, but it looks as if Gadd and Schwerdt have a slight edge. They are larger and each can punt pass. Gadd, a Charlotte boy, got the No. 1 call Monday and Tuesday of this week, but last week it was Schwerdt.

It was thought for a while that Berinski, brilliant back of the 1934 freshman team, had the right halfback post to himself. But Barde showed up this fall weighing 175 pounds and has demonstrated that there isn't much to choose between himself and Berinski. Barde has shown greater improvement than any other member of the "Pack."

Barde and Berinski are fast, can pick their holes, and are capable blockers. Barde is better at blocking than Berinski, but in the open it is doubtful if there is a player in the State any more dangerous than Berinski. He is great as a broken field runner.

Duke And Deacs Set For Great Clash Saturday

Durham, N. C., Sept. 18.—Anything may happen when Duke's Blue Devils and Wake Forest's Deacons clash in their city opener under the lights in Greensboro Saturday night.

Things have been pushed in the two rival camps, situated a little more than 20 miles apart, and both teams should be at just about mid-season form when the whistle sounds.

Both teams will be armed to the teeth with passing attacks. Duke has been indicated by the reports coming from scrimmage, Walton Kitchin has been throwing them with his same old skill in the Deacon camp while Ace Parker, Duke's own twirler, has been finding the mark with his share of bombs.

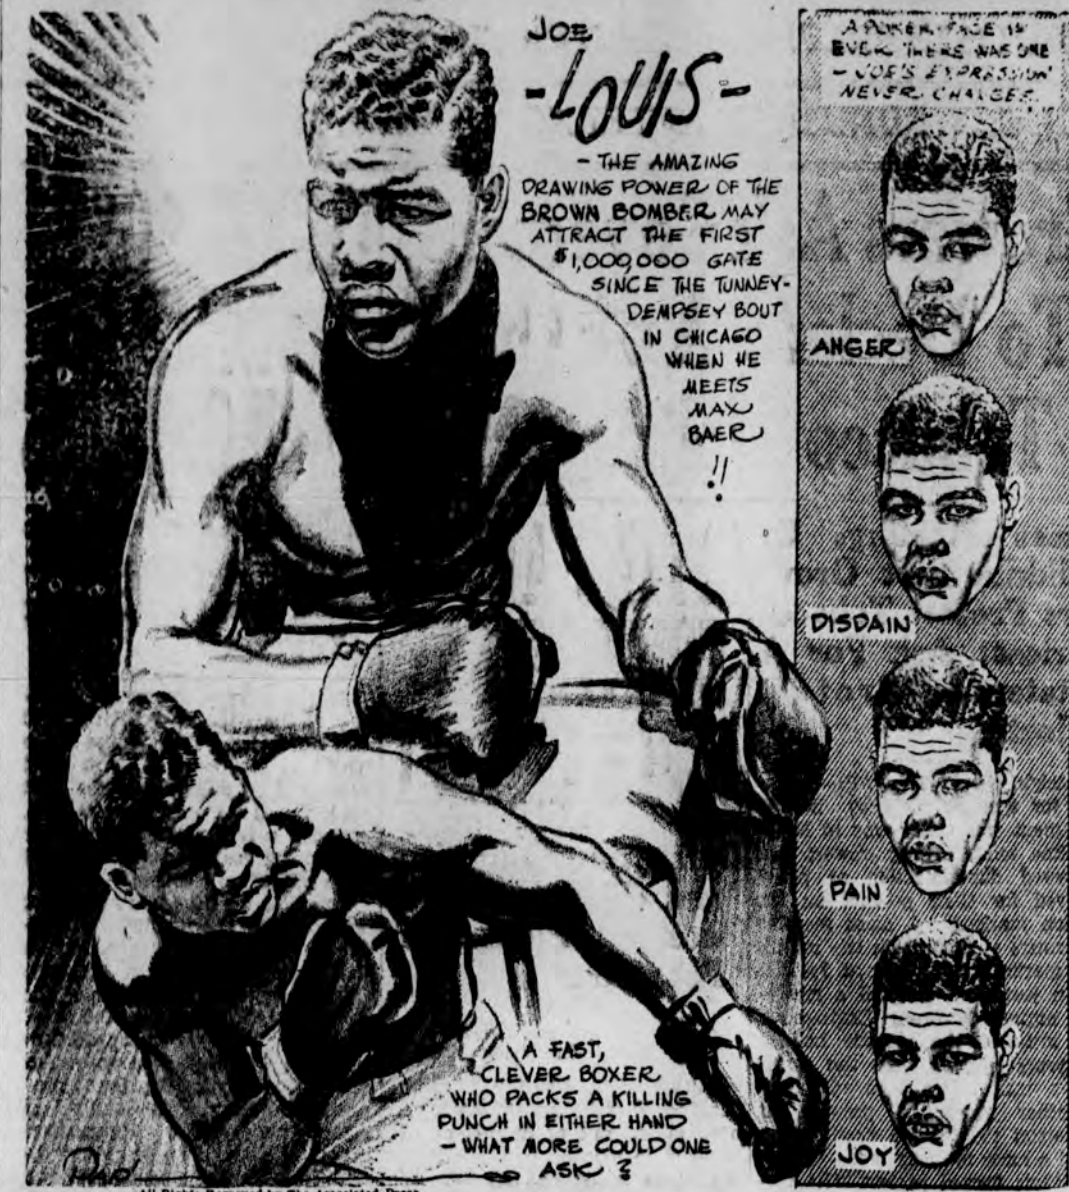

Line play is expected to be exceptionally good. The Duke forwards have come along rapidly under the tutoring of Coach Wallace Wade and his assistant with the line. Dumpy Hagler, and they should have absorbed plenty of it by now.

Herman Hickman, himself one of the south's greatest alltime guards, has told the Deacons the style of play that made him famous. Hickman played against Duke in 1931 for Tennessee and was outstanding just as he was in every game that year to win All-American honors.

The Deacons will have a big line, with four of the seven berths filled by regulars from last year. Duke has but two regulars from 1934 in its forward wall but it looks as a whole as if it will be some bigger, for the first game at least.

While the two teams are polishing their attacks, fans from all parts of the state are making their plans to move on to Greensboro for the clash—earliest start Big Five game in history. A special train will be run over the Southern from Durham as this city plans to turn out en masse for the contest.

Ready For The 'Baer'

By Pap

'Bama's Crimson Tide, Bowl Winner, Favored To Repeat As Best In Dixie

By KENNETH GREGORY (Associated Press Sports Writer)

Atlanta—(AP)—It's just an old southern custom to favor Alabama's Crimson Tide for football supremacy.

Year in and year out the Tuscaloosa Terrors strike a new high in football superlatives, and 1935 finds them again highly regarded for the Southeastern conference championship.

Alabama and Tulane, undefeated co-champions of the "Big Thirteen" last season, attracted the attention of the gridiron world to Dixie thru impressive victories in post-season battles.

The Crimson Tide rolled over 10 opponents on its regular schedule, and then annihilated Stanford in the Rose Bowl last January 1. The Green Wave won nine games and lost to Colgate by two touchdowns, but soundly whipped Temple in the inaugural Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans on New Year's day.

Losses from those great eleven were extensive. Alabama graduated many stars, including Dixie Howell, Joe Demyanovich, Captain Bill Lee, Don Hutson—the latter two all-America players—Charlie Marr and Bob Ed Morrow. Every athlete who started for Tulane against Temple played his final collegiate contest.

One could hardly expect a team as powerful and resourceful as Alabama of 1934 which scored 22 points in 15 minutes against Stanford, will come forward this fall. Nor is it likely that Tulane's last crew will be duplicated.

The general belief among the experts, however, is that all southeastern teams will be improved, yet Alabama again is the consensus choice to rule the conference.

From its backfield the Crimson Tide lost Howell and Demyanovich. From the line went two brawny guards, Marr and Morrow; Hutson, a sensational end; and Captain Lee a 220-pound roving tackle. Those losses ordinarily would wreck a team.

But their posts are expected to be filled by capable reserves—players like White and Peters, guards; Baswell, tackle; Walker, end; Fullback Rhordanz, and others, with perhaps some promising sophomores from an undefeated freshman team becoming regulars.

Many declare the Tide's greatest asset is Riley Smith, the outstanding quarterback in the south in 1934. Smith, a senior, weighs 190 pounds. He is an excellent field general, a terrific blocker and tackler. He can kick and throw passes and is adept at making extra points—he converted 23 last season.

Joe Riley, sophomore, who sprang into prominence last fall as a backfield substitute will add power and speed to the ball-carrying corps. Some say he's just as good at running and throwing passes as Howell. Joe Angelich, a fairly good runner and a fine blocking halfback, also returns.

Tar Heel Soph Back May Ouster Veterans

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 18.—The pep and fight shown in the fourth scrimmage game of the season yesterday in the Carolina camp revealing players and coaches turning their eyes toward the opening game with Wake Forest here September 28.

The Tar Heels indicated by their improved showing that they are getting ready in earnest for the Deacons, who play Duke this coming week-end.

Although Carolina's starting veteran backfield appears to be pretty well settled, a certain sophomore is giving the halfbacks plenty of competition. This first year man who has staged such a meteoric rise is Crowell Little, a namesake made famous in sports by Golf King Lawson and Columbia University's Lou "Crow" Little seems like the ghost of Johnny Branch, of '29 grid fame. He is fast, smart, shifty, and the hardest thing to tackle on the Carolina squad. He can also pass, punt, and call signals.

Two other sophomores have gained inside tracks to line berths. They are Andy Bershak and Johnnie Sniskak. Bershak has wrestled the right end post from Moore, Barwick and McCann, who has been out with illness. All these three are lettermen. Sniskak steps into Barclay's shoes at leading interference and backing up the line. A letterman and a reserve have been forced to make way for the brilliant play of this soph guard.

Yesterday the first team played intact for the first time this season. Both Tom Evans and Jim Hutchins have been out with minor injuries for over a week. They stepped into their old places yesterday to complete the lineup which is likely to open against the Deacons Saturday week.

Two more scrimmage games will

FUNDS FOR ARREST OF BANDITS INCREASE

Asheville, Sept. 18.—Contributions approximating $1,000 have been received for the reward fund initiated by the Citizen-Times daily papers and a committee of citizens as an inducement for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the bandit gang that held up Mars Hill Bank Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 10.

Additional contributions are coming in daily and the fund is expected to amount to a much larger sum during the week.

Mrs. Dorothy Sanderlin, of New Bern, 17-year-old student at Mars Hill College, who was severely wounded when the bandits, leaving the bank, sprayed the streets with machine gun bullets, has improved somewhat and hopes are held out for her recovery at the local hospital where she is receiving treatment.

CHARGE OF MURDER FACING YOUNG MAN

Southport, Sept. 18.—Dillon Jennette, 21-year-old white youth, yesterday was ordered held for the murder of L. W. Ganus, 58, whose bullet-pierced body was found in a shallow stream near his home ten days ago.

The order followed completion of testimony before a jury gathered by Coroner M. A. Northrop.

At the time of his arrest, Jennette confessed to the shooting but said it was accidental. Physicians who performed an autopsy testified, however, that Ganus had been struck in the head with a heavy weapon prior to being shot.

Robbery is said to have been the motive behind the murder.

SEVEN-YEAR-OLD BOY IN SWIMMING, DROWNED.

Winsor, Sept. 18.—Pete Davidson, seven-year-old son of Mrs. Josephine Davidson, was drowned in the Cashie river at the County Farm on Sunday afternoon around four o'clock.

He and some other boys about his age went in swimming although they had been forbidden to do so. Pete put a burlap bag around his body saying that it was his bathing suit, and jumped into deep water, and was immediately drowned. Alarm was given by the other little boys and the river was dragged until night without success. Search is still in progress.

He is survived by his mother, one brother, Cohen Davidson, and one sister, Frances Davidson.

The Supreme Court said the evidence did not support such a charge, and that at most, it was a case of detention in an attempt to force Mrs. Phelps to reveal the hiding place of her money.

RED OAK NEWS

Next Sunday, Sept. 22, will be Home Coming Day at Red Oak. We will have Sunday school at ten o'clock followed by church services at eleven. Dinner will be spread on the grounds at the noon hour. There will be a miscellaneous program in the afternoon consisting of singing, short talks, special music, etc. Numbers of people have been invited to take part on the program and we are expecting a day filled with joy and fellowship with our neighbors and friends. A special invitation is extended to all members of Red Oak and especially those who can not attend very often. Also to all our friends from neighboring churches. Come and help us enjoy this occasion.

Revival services will commence Wednesday night, Sept. 18th. Rev. Lonnie Scarborough will do the preaching and he needs no introduction to the community. For three years he was pastor of our church and we've never had a pastor that served the church and community any better.

Last second Sunday the children of Mrs. Martha Ann Moye gathered at the old home to celebrate her seventy-fourth birthday. A bountiful dinner was served on the lawn. Mrs. Moye can be justly proud of her family, which consists of fourteen children, eight sons-in-law, four daughters-in-law, forty-seven grandchildren, twenty-six great-grandchildren, which including herself, numbers one hundred, exactly. We hope Mrs. Moye will have many more happy birthdays.

SEES CONSTITUTION SUBJECT TO CHANGE

Goldboro, Sept. 18.—Our constitution is not like the laws of the Medes and Persians but contains provisions wisely placed therein to make it forever capable of amendment to meet changing needs, said Senator Paul D. Grady, president pro tem of the 1935 Senate, who was guest speaker for the Goldboro Kiwanis club as it observed Constitution night last night.

"Changes should be slow and deliberate but changes there should be when that great document is used to oppress a free people," the Senator continued. "It is and should forever be responsive to the service of humanity as a whole and when selfish interests cry 'hands off the constitution'; let us refer them to the wisdom and forthrightness of the fathers who wisely provided the method by which it could be amended."

MANY SCHOOLS TO USE BOOK RENTAL PLAN

Supplemental Books, However, Will Cost Twice As Much As Those Rented Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—Children in schools having the new state textbook rental system will still have to pay about twice as much in buying supplementary books than the cost of the rental on the few books which they will be able to rent. It was admitted today at the offices of the State Textbook Rental and Purchase Commission here. It was also estimated that between 18 and 20 per cent of the city and county school systems are refusing to put the more or less makeshift state rental system into effect because the superintendents in these systems are convinced that it will cause more dissatisfaction among parents and children than the direct purchase system.

"Until the state can put in a rental textbook system that will provide for the rental of all the textbooks used, including supplementary books as well as supplies, we do not want it at all." "We also want more time to get ready for it than was available this year. The public generally has gotten the idea that all the textbooks needed by a school child, as well as all supplies would be rented, since the law expressly authorized the rental textbook commission to do this. But since school children will still have to pay out at least twice as much in purchasing books as they will pay in renting books as they will be better to go ahead under the direct purchase system for this year at least."

This same opinion is shared by at least 15 to 18 other city and county superintendents who have told the Textbook Rental Commission that they do not want to bother with the makeshift rental system which has been evolved. They prefer to wait until a rental system can be worked out which will include all textbooks and supplies, rather than only the "basal" or state-adopted texts. They feel that the present partial rental system will cause more dissatisfaction than anything else.

In the first grade, for instance, children will be able to rent six adopted books for 54 cents a year, but will have to purchase a minimum of three supplemental books at a cost of $1.50, as well as their supplies, such as pencils, tablets and so forth. In the second grade, children will be able to rent six books at a rental of 62 cents per year, but will have to purchase at least three supplemental books at $1.80. The following table shows how many books can be rented in each grade, the rental charge, the minimum number of supplemental books which will have to be purchased and the purchase cost:

Grade	No. Rental	Supple mental	Cost
First	6	3	$1.50
Second	6	3	1.80
Third	7	3	1.95
Fourth	7	3	1.95
Fifth	7	3	2.25
Sixth	7	3	2.35
Seventh	8	3	2.55

Only two of the six basal and innumerable supplemental books needed in the four high school grades will be rented at rentals ranging from 67 cents a year in the

In County Court yesterday and today Judge Dink James revoked the licenses of a number of drunken drivers, which means that under the new driver's license law the state will not issue them another license to drive under a year from the date of conviction. The way to make the highways safe is to keep careless, reckless and drunken drivers off of them and at the rate licenses are being revoked here we are going to be rid of a good number of them before long if they don't mend their ways.

Whether it is another tobacco holiday that is needed to bring about better tobacco prices we do not know, but we do know that something should be done now about the price situation. The prices are too low, and despite what might be said about the quality, the cigarette manufacturers are going to use this tobacco in the future manufacture of cigarettes and when the cigarettes are placed on the market the manufacturers will claim the quality to be up to standard and the price will remain at today's retail price regardless of whether or not the growers are paid a living price for this crop. After the major portion of this year's crop has been disposed of at the present low prices it will be too late to help the grower this season even if definite announcement is made that next year's crop will be cut 25 to 35 per cent.

LOSSES: Great Britain's audacity in defying Mussolini at Geneva was breath-taking to insiders who suspect that "the empire" suffers from a secret but little suspected diminution of man-power—a statesman, diplomats, military leaders and public servants. The same applies to Laval's France in less degree.
Each year England used to train an official class of 5,000 boys and men. They began in private and public schools, continued at Harrow and Eton (where Waterloo was won) and finished in public office. But for eight years—1914-1922—this reservoir of man-power was drained dry by war losses and post-war impoverishment. There are great gaps—perhaps 70,000 men—in the trained line which England once threw at the world—and the world. It explains why youngsters and oldsters—Eden in his thirties and Hoare in his seventies—now speak for England in the world's councils.

MORNING STAR
— BY MARIAN SIMS —
SYNOPSIS: The home life of Edwin and Emily Barnes was about to develop into a state of armed neutrality, when the prospect of an hour changed everything. Emily has something else to think of besides Edwin's staidness, and Edwin is so delighted anything goes—or at least anything is in fact. Emily finds everything else to her life considerably changed. For the first time she even can defy her managing mother successfully.
Chapter 20
EDWIN THE CENSOR
SURPRISINGLY it was Dorothy Shane who proved to be Emily's bulwark. Dorothy had married at twenty and had one child, a boy of seven, so that, as she put it, "the novelty had about worn off."
But she had in addition a catholic and irrepressible sense of humor, and a remarkably sane outlook on life. She looked like a French doll, with her short black hair, her brilliant dark eyes, and wide, heavily rouged mouth. Edwin disapproved of her on principle and Dorothy was quite aware of his disapproval and quite unimpressed by it.
"I wonder why it is that husbands and wives never like the same people?" she laughed to Emily. "After you're married you don't go with the people you each like; you go with the people you can both stand!"
She formed a habit of dropping in almost daily, and Emily came to enjoy her more than anyone in Elston. Dorothy, like Charlotte, usually understood what you meant.
"You'll have to help me keep my sense of proportion and my sense of humor," Emily said one day. "To herself she thought, 'What a frail reed I am; I don't seem to be able to do anything without support from some outside source.'"
Dorothy smiled affectionately. "I will, I will run you ragged."
Edwin came in just then, and greeted Dorothy with unending politeness. She crushed out her cigarette and rose.
"Heavens, is it time for husbands to be coming home? Mine is probably on the verge of apoplexy on a downtown corner, wondering why I haven't come for him."
Edwin saw her to her car, then came back and kissed his wife.
"I wish you wouldn't see so much of her," he said.
"Why not?"
"She's too—fast."
"How do you know?" Emily demanded sternly. "Has she been fast with you?"
He was so horrified that she almost laughed aloud. "Of course not! But I happen to know that she smokes incessantly and drinks too much and loses a lot at cards."
Emily's eyes were wistful. "How interesting that would be for a change!"
He stared at her in consternation. At times the strain upon his reverence for Motherhood was terrific. "Have you lost your mind?"
"Not yet, darling. Dorothy is one of the best safeguards against insanity that I know of."
"I don't care," he insisted. "I don't think she's a fit companion for—for you."
She had been good for a long time, and she couldn't resist releasing one dart.
"Are you afraid she'll corrupt your child?"
Edwin flushed hotly. "I believe you'd be sarcastic at the Bar of Heaven!" he cried.
Suddenly she was ashamed of her outburst, because teasing Edwin was such an unbecoming thing to do: like shooting a partridge on the ground. Edwin was quite as bewildered and defenseless as the partridge. She held out her hands to him.
"My dear, I'm ashamed of myself! This must be corroding my disposition. Why don't you look me up?"
Once more he was the forgiving, protecting male. "Of course I wouldn't. I was thinking of your own good; that's all."
AUGUST lay like a vast woollen blanket over Elston. Emily gave up her walks and her visits, and sat in the spray-cooled shade of her own garden, where Narcissus brought her glasses of cold milk or orange juice, and waited on her with dog-like devotion.
Narcissus, like the living-room, had vindicated her judgment. In fact, she confessed to Dorothy, Narcissus's company was far more stimulating than most of Elston's.
The victrola was paid for now, and Rosebud's wardrobe had grown from one anomalous garment to several every-day dresses and one Sunday one, besides various undergarments with which Rosebud had hitherto been unfamiliar.
As the trusted retailer of one of Elston's first families Narcissus had gained caste; had even, among her associates, begun to give herself good for young offshoots of distasteful Now. They must have felt, was the time for them to strike against a Britain and France impoverished in man-power. But it may not turn out that way.
BOGGING The National Youth Administration has proved a distinct disappointment to its sponsors and friends. As Whirligig reported, it was framed and promulgated with almost no pioneer plowing.
It was supposed to draw up a permanent, long-time program in SYNOPSIS: Emily Barnes has resigned herself to life with her husband Edwin, although temperamentally they are entirely different. Edwin's grim manner and narrow mind are a constant annoyance to Emily. Now there is to be an heir, and Edwin is in an almost equally annoying state of reverence and misplaced helpfulness. Emily has tried to help them both by suggesting that Edwin should alone for a vacation.

Chapter 31
SAD EVENT
EDWIN looked hurt. "Have I been as trying as that?"
He had a positive genius for making boomerangs of her most kindly meant words. "Of course not; but I've been trying, I know. And besides, it's good for husbands and wives to get away from each other occasionally; there ought to be a law compelling it."
That was the sort of statement that upset Edwin. Husbands and wives were meant to be together, else why were they married?
"I don't want to leave you," he insisted gently.
"My dear," she said, "I'm glad you don't. But one of the reasons for getting away is so you'll keep on not wanting to leave me! I can't very well go with you, but then I'm not working nine hours a day. You are, and you need a change."
"And so do I!" she longed to add.

"I don't want to leave you," Edwin insisted.
"I'm all right," he insisted. "And I'd prefer not to leave you alone just now."
Business was not too good, even if he had wanted to go (which he certainly did not!). Even the Barnes Grocery Company was beginning to feel the pinch, but that was something that Emily mustn't suspect now.
"If it would make you feel better about me," she was insisting, "I'd go over home and stay while you were away."
He looked at her very hard. "It isn't very flattering to find that you're so determined to get rid of me when you know I don't want to go."
It was no use, of course. Some day, perhaps, she would learn that it was no use. She rang for the frozen salad.
August dragged its sluggish way into September, and instead of moving forward the days stood still, completely arrested by the heat.
October, and Elston was breathing again. In a few weeks the trees would be a symphony of color, from the pale yellow of the wood-winds to the deep reds and royal purples of the bass violets. And in a few weeks, Emily thought with a prayer of thankfulness, this breathless waiting would be over. The first thing she was going to do—afterwards—was to buy a brown velvet dress that fitted like a glove!
THERE were leaden weights on her eyelids, and there was a cloying odor of ether in her nostrils. For a breathless instant she was back at Lookout, and Dr. Warde was coming to sit beside her bed and arrange her life so that it would be beautifully simple.
There was a nurse in the room, she knew without trying to remove the leaden weights, and someone else; a doctor, perhaps? She whispered, scarcely moving her lips:
"Is—the baby—a boy or a girl?"
"A boy, Emily." That was Dr. Proctor's voice, huskier than she had remembered it. "Don't talk now, child; go back to sleep."
A boy! Jeffrey Felton Barnes. It was a nice name, and she hoped he this sort would put the private institutions in a bad hole.

READY: Well-posted New Yorkers dope the Anglo-Italian-Ethiopian situation as follows: No matter what else happens Mussolini is determined to avenge the Adowa defeat in blood. He will have his battle—and will win it. What happens afterwards will depend largely on the character of his victory.
For instance, this battle should show whether the Italian effort to buy off Ethiopian tribal chiefs has succeeded. If it has, Haile Selassie's defeat will probably turn into a complete rout. In that case the Duce might feel safe enough to go ahead and grab the whole country quick—regardless of secret agreements with Britain and France.
Britain is unlikely to take any aggressive action against Italy on the basis of a single battle. But if Mussolini gets a swelled head and plunges into repudiation of private pledges to Britain—look out for a first class war. The British feel their Empire would have to be defended with all vigor to forestall its replacement by a new Roman Empire. Insiders understand that Canada has been quietly advised to get ready for any contingency.
NERVES: The prolonged squabble in the New York Teachers' Union has a good deal more than local significance. Its outcome will go far to determine the future of the American Federation of Teachers and to some extent of all white-collar unions. It will also give an important clue as to how far the communists are likely to get within the ranks of organized labor and how successful the Federation of Labor's resistance will be.
The Teachers Union has been in existence about twenty years—much longer than the American Federation of Teachers of which it became a local. For the past ten years its officers have been plagued by a radical minority. The latter even now comprise only about 20 per cent of the total membership and there are few avowed communists among them. But they are communist-led—which means they are well-organized, highly articulate and devoted to the cause of raising as much hell as possible.
This finally wore on the nerves of president Henry Linville and legislative representative Abraham Lefkowitz to the point where they asked the Federation to dissolve the union—so they could form a new one from which the trouble-makers would be excluded.
CRACK: President Bill Green of the Federation of Labor cordially approved the move and gave it his strongest moral support. He realized what a notable victory it would be in his battle against radical infiltration of the whole A. F. of L. But the Teachers Federation said it differently and declined to revoke the charter—on the basis that the minority had a perfect right to express its opinions freely and should not be evicted therefor. This annoys Green intensely—but there's nothing he can do about it.

The next step was the resignation of officers and many members of the Teachers Union. This leaves the official union entirely in the hands of the radicals—exactly what Green doesn't want. It will also encourage the left-wing sympathies of the Federation of Teachers—which are becoming quite apparent—and will set a left-wing key for other white collar unions formed or to be formed.
Some astute observers predict this development will prove the first crack of a radical-conservative split which will bust the whole Federation of Labor wide open. That's what the communists are shooting for—and they and their friends have won the first round.

State Spends $883,675 On Bridge System

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, Sept. 17.—The bridge division of the State Highway and Public Works Commission has built 1,853 new bridges, has repaired 1,382 bridges which were in bad repair and unsafe for traffic and has replaced 1,250 small bridges with pipe culverts at a cost of $883,675 in the four months period from April 1 to August 1. It was announced here today by Chief Engineer W. Vance Baise. Most of this work was made possible by the emergency appropriation of $3,000,000 made by the 1935 general assembly and made available immediately. Otherwise all of this work would have had to wait until after the regular appropriation became available July 1.
Of this $883,675 expended on the construction and repair of the bridges, most of which are on county and secondary roads, $836,617 came from the emergency appropriation and only $47,058 came from the old appropriation. That amount, incidentally, was all that was left in the old maintenance appropriations for bridges and is all that would have been available but for the emergency appropriation.
The number of new bridges, repaired bridges and culverts installed during this four months' period in some of the principal counties of the state are as follows:

advances by the government was made against collateral which private banks wouldn't touch with a fifty foot pole. Uncle Sam would be a prize optimist to rate them all as recoverable assets. Of course no accurate estimate of repayments is possible yet—but most bankers believe the Treasury will be fortunate if it gets back 60 per cent of the face value of the loans.
What worries financial men is that the government is evidently in the lending game to stay. In fact its activities in that direction are quietly expanding all the time. This isn't so bad while federal loans are made chiefly to borrowers in whom the banks themselves are not interested—but there's no guarantee against future government encroachment or more desirable credit fields. They have had surprisingly little publicity. Total loans by federal agencies amount to more than eight billion dollars—which does not include about two billion more that have been repaid. This is more than the total loans of all the Federal Reserve banks combined.

BELIEVE HOEY GOING PLACES IN CAMPAIGN

Observers Say He Is Gaining Strength Faster Than Other Candidates

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILLE.

Raleigh, Sept. 17.—"Watch out for Clyde R. Hoey—he is going to go places and do things before the campaign for Governor is over," is the conviction of many observers here who have been following the back-stage progress of the gubernatorial campaign so far. For while Lieutenant Governor A. H. (Sandy) Graham is generally conceded to be cut in front at the present time, with Dr. Ralph W. McDonald out in the field campaigning and making the chips fly, many veteran politicians here point out that Hoey has not even started any active campaigning yet. When the long-haired Shelby orator does start to campaign and give the state some of his "Shelby" oratory, it is more than likely that he is going to have a very difficult time spiking his guns, most observers here agree.

Until McDonald got into the campaign a few weeks ago, "Sandy" Graham was undoubtedly in the lead—and he is still in the lead in most of the eastern counties—according to most political circles here. One reason for this was that when the general assembly closed, he had a strong following in both houses of the general assembly and was conceded to have emerged from the session much stronger than when it opened. He immediately started to follow up this advantage with active campaigning in many different sections of the state and gained a strength steadily until the McDonald announcement was thrown into the ring.

For several weeks it was difficult to determine just what effect, if any, the McDonald entry was having on either Graham or Hoey. But now that the mists have lifted somewhat, the prevailing belief in most circles here is that the Winston-Salem college professor has not only annexed some of Graham's following to his own bandwagon, but has frightened a considerable element which became frightened at what they considered McDonald's too liberal program. The result is that at the time being, at least, Graham has lost the support of many ultra-liberals who had been going along with him because there was no one else to go along with until McDonald jumped in, while some former conservatives who had been wavering towards Sandy, have now flocked back to Hoey. The pendulum may swing back again between now and June and Graham may be able to get a good many of these back from both McDonald and Hoey. But the odds for a back-swing are regarded as very doubtful unless one or the other of his opponents should blow up. And that is not regarded as likely.

The fact that Hoey's strength has been steadily increasing, despite the fact that he has done virtually no active campaigning and has issued no statements on controversial issues, is regarded by many indicating he has more inherent strength than either Graham or McDonald and that before the campaign is over he is going to be the man which both of these other candidates must beat—if they can. For first of all, Hoey is conceded to have a majority of the old line, "organization" Democrats—the boys who have been organizing and carrying their counties Democratic for years—back of his candidacy. They don't talk much and don't make much noise, but they have had years of experience in getting out the vote and seeing that it voted "right." And while McDonald and his vocative followers are out whooping it up, and while Graham, with the assistance of the Young Democrats and the Legionnaires are out shaking the bushes, these older leaders and their followers, who are many, will be sitting tight and saying nothing, for they have already voted. But when the day of the primary arrives and they show their strength for Hoey, it is expected to be material.

In addition to these older and more experienced wheel-horses of the Democratic party in the state, Hoey is conceded to already have the bulk of the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and prohibition votes in his pocket. It is also conceded that he will have the support of the present state administration and of most of the elected and appointed state officials, most of whom are good politicians with large personal followings.

The biggest hurdle Hoey will have to get over, most observers believe, are the label of being an ultra-conservative, of being too closely connected with the present and past administrations, of belonging to the "Shelby Dynasty." But he will have a lot of help in getting over these hurdles.

When District Attorney John Fred Odom (above) of East Baton Rouge parish conducted an inquest into the death of Dr. C. A. Weiss, Jr., who assassinated Senator Huey P. Long, he was branded a "murder-plotters" by Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, organizer of Long's "share-the-wealth clubs." Smith accused Odom of sharing in the plot against Long and refused to answer the district attorney's questions. (Associated Press Photo)

POLITICS at random

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

The unanimous disposition in political circles is to regard the contest for next year's Republican presidential nomination as wholly unsettled, although some currents of party opinion recently have clarified the situation to a limited degree.

It is apparent, for instance, that the old feud between the right and left wings of Republicanism is reviving. That alone is important because it has a direct bearing on any calculation as to 1936 candidacies. The causes for the revival are several. One is the intensive activity to the conservative leaders, who are organizing on a wide front to insure an out-and-out party avoidance of any concession to radicalism. Naturally there is a reaction among the left-wingers.

In its present status, this cleavage affords as good a basis as any for analyzing what may happen as to candidates.

Hoover Vs. Borah?
Considering the two sections of the party separately, for the moment, it is quite apparent that so far as the conservatives are concerned, they are sure to try to capture the nomination.

Many of the conservative leaders feel strongly, however, that if the platform is to appeal especially to the east, the nominee must be someone residing in the west or mid-west. That is a simple principle of practical strategy to which former President Hoover, among others, is said authoritatively to subscribe.

Of the men who are, or have been in public office and who can meet that qualification, Mr. Hoover himself stands out most conspicuously. It no longer is doubted that a great deal of his strength will center about him.

As for the liberal wing, there remains much doubt whether it actually will enter a candidate or will resign itself to scattering convention votes for favorite sons, as it has done so often in the past. If it does have one outstanding candidate, every indication now is that it will be Senator Borah. Should he decide to run, it is conceded he will be a powerful factor to reckon with. Should he decline, the prospect that there will be any outstanding liberal candidate is extremely uncertain.

Vandenberg's Status
If either wing of the party dominates, and it develops that there must be a compromise—as many believe there will be—three alternatives must be considered.

The convention could pick a man who has been close to the problems of Washington, and has an intimate knowledge of them, but whose record never has tied him irrevocably with either wing. In this subdivision, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan is today the most widely mentioned.

Another approach would be to choose a man experienced in political leadership and public office, but involved only remotely with the issues which have been agitating Washington. Among the available in this class, increasing mention is heard of Governor Landon of Kansas.

Finally, it might be considered best to go entirely outside of official connections and involvements. Within this field, the most active and widespread effort now under way is on behalf of Frank Knox, the Chicago.

Here are five possibilities: but the mention of them as symbolizing various trends should not be taken as excluding others. Nor should anyone reckon, as of today, what may happen months hence. The best that can be said is that the prospect still is wholly indecisive.

ITALY AND ETHIOPIA: Story Of A Long-Brewing Conflict

No. 3

The colorful coronation of Haile Selassie inaugurated an era of "modernization" in the ancient realm of Ethiopia. But in districts remote from Addis Ababa the tribes either did not comprehend or take kindly to the innovations and the centuries-old custom of raiding the cattle and slaves of "foreign" tribes continued. In September 1933, Italy began to extend and reinforce her frontier posts in Italian Somaliland and Eritrea, especially in districts where the boundary was ill-defined or disputed.

The smoldering situation flared into flame on December 5, 1934, at Ualual, a desert station in the disputed region between Italian Somaliland and Ethiopia. A surveying party, guarded by some of Selassie's trained troops, approached the place and found Italian forces in possession. Ethiopian machine guns and artillery barked, answered by Italian rifles and the machine guns of airplanes. The Ethiopians lost 110 killed and wounded. Italian casualties numbered 50. Both nations blamed the other for the clash.

Repercussions of the Ualual clash echoed through Africa and Europe and the League of Nations was appealed to by Haile Selassie. But Premier Mussolini declared that the safety of his country's position was threatened, asserted that Ethiopia was at best a "barbarian" country, unfit to hold membership in the League, and that Italy would no longer countenance invasion of her rights. So he started the steady stream of armed forces toward East Africa, the first troops sailing on March 2, 1935.

War clouds thickened over Haile Selassie's realm as Italian troop ships poured men and munitions across the Mediterranean, through the Suez Canal and down the Red Sea to Eritrea and Italian Somaliland. Great Britain and France viewed the development with alarm and Haile Selassie called on his people to rally. Addressing his parliament the Ethiopian ruler on July 18 told them he would personally lead his warriors to battle and he added: "It were better to die free than to live without liberty."

Finding efforts to check Italy by diplomatic means futile, Haile Selassie resigned himself to the inevitability of war. He knew his capital was vulnerable to air attacks so on August 25, 1935, he ordered civilians to evacuate the city. Within three days the sudden roads leading from Addis Ababa were filled with white-clad, barefooted women and children, bearing meagre possessions on their backs, just as French peasants streamed westward before the German hordes of 1914-1918.

REVIVE TALK OF GOVERNOR AS CANDIDATE

Say Ehringhaus' Interest in Leaf Situation Making Him Many Friends

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—The unusual interest which Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus is taking in the tobacco farmers and the tobacco price situation again, to the extent of spending the entire day yesterday in visiting various tobacco markets which opened Tuesday, is causing a good many here to wonder if this is not an indication that the senatorial bee is still buzzing in his bonnet and that he is still considering becoming a candidate for the senate seat now held by Senator Josiah W. Bailey.

For while few here believe there is anything the Governor can do about the tobacco price situation now, though they admit he did do something about it in 1933, it is generally agreed that he is undoubtedly making a good many friends among the tobacco farmers by showing an interest in their condition and grievances. Most of those familiar with the situation this year, however, maintain that the poor tobacco prices so far have resulted from excessive offerings of inferior grades, as well as much scrap tobacco, with the result that top prices were not being paid by the tobacco buyers. The general belief is that tobacco prices are going to strengthen and go upward as offerings become lighter and as the quality of the tobacco brought to the warehouses increases. It is also pointed out that the tobacco crop is larger this year and not of as good quality as last season.

So if Governor Ehringhaus can do anything to bring about better prices, most observers here agree that he will be nothing short of a miracle man. But they agree that if he has any ambition to succeed Senator Bailey in Washington, that he is taking advantage of a splendid opportunity to make himself more solid with the tobacco farmers again. For in spite of the unpopularity which Gov. Ehringhaus has acquired in many sections because of the sales tax, he has still remained popular with most of the tobacco farmers for whom he went to bat and knocked a home run in 1933 by securing Federal aid for them and boosting prices. But whether or not the Governor is planning to run for Senator or not, most observers agree he is playing good politics by playing up to the tobacco growers.

Ashe County Not So Pleased With Bowie's Work Now

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—Ashe county is not so enthusiastic over Tam C. Bowie and some of the laws he succeeded in getting through the general assembly in 1933 and 1935 as it was at first, according to word heard here today from West Jefferson, the county seat. Especially does it seem that the law which Bowie got through the 1933 general assembly designed to reduce both valuations and taxes, and putting the county into perpetual default, may result in causing a tremendous increase in taxes and probably in valuations, since the law is turning out to be a boomerang.

For recently several of the holders of Ashe county bonds went into Federal court to compel the county to pay them and won a directed verdict against the county, despite the fact that Bowie defended the county and lost the case. The result is that the Ashe county commissioners must now levy a tax rate sufficient to pay both the principal and interest on these bonds, as well as the costs of the litigation or pay heavy fines or go to Federal prison, or both, according to lawyers here familiar with the situation. And despite the fact that the Ashe county commissioners are conceded to be under the control of Bowie and his Ashe county organization, it is believed that when it comes to a choice of levying the required taxes or going to jail, that the commissioners will levy the taxes. This will hit Bowie hard, who is conceded to own at least 25 farms in Ashe county, totaling some 30,000 acres of the best land in the county. Many here were convinced at the time he got this particular bill through the 1933 general assembly that he would be the chief beneficiary from it because of his large property holdings in Ashe county.

It is understood from reliable sources that prior to and during the 1935 general assembly, a move was started to re-finance the Ashe county indebtedness and that the bondholders agreed to make heavy concessions and that Bowie agreed to help in this move, but later did nothing about it. Now, by going into Federal court and suing the county, indications are that the bondholders will be able to compel the county to pay the full face value of the bonds with accrued interest, with the result that it will cost the county thousands of dollars more than if it had refinanced them.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened very steady 13 to 17 advance in response to higher Liverpool cables and active foreign buying. Prices sold up to 10.60 for October and 10.80 for May with the general list showing net advances of 16 to 20 points at the end of the first hour.

After selling up 19 to 23 points from yesterday's closing quotations with December advancing to 10.68 or 38 points above the low levels of Monday morning, demand tapered off and prices reacted slightly. There was realizing and scattered southern selling causing a set back of five to six points. At midday the market was steady.

Futures closed steady 18 to 24 higher, spots steady, middling 11.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The stock market struggled to break out of its narrow trading range today as several industrial managers managed to punch their way through to new highs for the recovery. Rails once more joined the advance although they continued well under the year's best levels.

Motors, steels, and miscellaneous industrials were in particular demand. U. S. government bonds, decidedly weak yesterday, recovered substantially and cotton pressed forward. Wheat, however, encountered profit taking on yesterday's advance.

Sales were approximately 1,900,000 shares.

Air Force To Front.
London, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Authoritative sources indicated today an official announcement by the air ministry of recent concentration of British aviation reinforcements in the Mediterranean was expected soon. The exact nature of the air ministry's communique was not predicted but authorities in position to know said they expected it would confirm recent reports that the royal air force squadrons have been concentrated in Malta, Egypt, and elsewhere in the Mediterranean sector.
