Italians Push Forward In Drive Against Ethiopians

SAY ITALIAN PLANE SHOT DOWN TODAY

Italians Reported to Have Occupied Ethiopian Town; Foreigners Urged to Leave Country. Fear More Bombings

Italy hurled 100,000 soldiers at Addis Ababa in northernmost Ethiopia today and claimed the fall of that city of Ethiopia's proudest victory of 1896, imminent. Harried Ras Seyoum defending Addis Ababa was giving stubborn resistance but reports say he advised Emperor Haile Selassie at Addis Ababa that he could not hold out much longer. Another chieftain, Ras Ayele, headed 12,000 men and moved to the defense of Addis Ababa. One report said Ras Ayele had even penetrated across the border into Eritrea, base of Mussolini's northern army operations, and taken a few outposts.

Italian airplanes were reported from Addis Ababa to have made a second bombardment of Addis Ababa where their bombs caused an undetermined number of casualties yesterday. Some unconfirmed reports said there were 1,700 including women, children and nurses.

The Italian plans to conquer the independent state of Ethiopia whose boast through the centuries has been that it never has been conquered, was concentrating on these fronts today. Heading down from Eritrea with Addis Ababa as its immediate objective six divisions with auxiliary troops, 100,000 men, planes, tanks and artillery made this a modern efficient weapon of death.

(By Associated Press)

Premier Mussolini's war machine geared to the rigors of Africa moved forward today in its conquest of Ethiopia. Italian troops smashed into Ethiopian areas apparently in three columns—two from Eritrea and one from Italian Somaliland.

The Italians occupied the town of Maribara, midway between Addis Ababa and Addis Ababa. They forced the taking of precautions in Derdawa, the vital point on the railroad-line between Addis Ababa and Djibouti. Foreigners were ordered to evacuate Derdawa in the fear that it might be the next target of air bombers. The area all the way from Addis Ababa was reported to have been bombed.

London dispatches said an Addis Ababa correspondent of Reuters reported today that an Italian plane had been shot down near Addis Ababa apparently during a second aerial bombardment.

It was announced officially in Rome that advances were made "all along the front." While the fascists went ahead with precision, statesmen opposed to the conquest of Ethiopia moved much slower in Europe. Premier Laval, of France, having agreed with Anthony Eden, British diplomat, that an attempt would be made to invoke League of Nations sanctions, went before his cabinet to obtain his ministry's approval of the program.

In Geneva neutral observers said they were impressed by the fact that the speed of Italian movements was greater than League deliberations.

The Italian government admitted the aerial bombing yesterday of Addis Ababa but declared the bombing was in retaliation for heavy firing from the town by Ethiopian troops. Official announcement indicated that the Italian plan of campaign consisted of sending bombing planes ahead to clear out strategic positions much in the manner of an artillery barrage laid down before an infantry attack. After the bombing planes came the cavalry and infantry taking over points made untenable by the explosives from the air.

The extent of the casualties could not be immediately determined. Italian advisers were that the Ethiopians, following the air attack, met advancing ground forces of Italians with flags of truce. One Italian communiqué said the Italian forces found these Ethiopians in great want and immediately took steps to provide for them out of the Italian commissary stocks. Despite these official reports that the Italian objectives were obtained without difficulties, advisers within the interior of Ethiopia said tribesmen in Tigre province just west of Eritrea were putting up stubborn resistance.

The inhabitants of Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, were worried fearing Italian airplanes might bomb that city any time.

BOMB ATTACK STARTS IL DUCE'S CONQUEST

Heralding the actual beginning of war, Italian planes were reported to have bombed Ethiopian villages as Emperor Haile Selassie rallied his tribesmen who engaged the invaders in battle near the border. At the top Ethiopian troops, armed to the teeth, are shown pushing up to the front. The map locates the town of Addis Ababa, where the Italian bombs were said to have killed women and children. Also designated is the Mount Mussa All territory, where Ethiopian and Italian troops were concentrating. In the opinion of some observers, the line of arrows indicates the route the Italians will take in launching an attack from the southeast at the same time another army invades from the north. Hundreds were reported killed in the battles in villages. Italy continued its mobilization, 25,000 black-shirted Fascist troops were said to be well into Ethiopia. Ethiopia has protested to the League of Nations. (Associated Press Photos)

WET COUNTIES NOW WELCOME FEDERAL AID

Counties Seek Aid of Federal Agents in Breaking Up Bootlegging

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Oct. 4.—For the first time in 27 years, county law enforcement officers are now actually welcoming the assistance of Federal revenue agents. Not only are the county law enforcement officers in most of the 17 counties which now have liquor stores and county liquor control working in full cooperation with the Federal "T Men" in making raids on illicit stills and bootleggers, but in some cases the county officers are actually asking the Federal agents to come into their counties and assist them, according to officials of the Alcohol Tax Unit.

It was indicated that no invitations had been received by the "T Men" from officers in so-called "dry" law, the Turlington Act. All of the requests for cooperation and assistance have come from the law enforcement officers in the "wet" counties where liquor is now being sold legally in county liquor stores.

Some of the "wet" counties have even employed special enforcement officers and investigators who have been devoting their entire time to working up evidence against violators of the county laws against manufacture and sale of bootleg liquor. It was pointed out, Halifax county recently appointed a special enforcement agent and gave him the services of two detectives. This agent in turn secured the cooperation of the Federal revenue agents and in one day recently arrested eight persons and issued warrants against 15 others. Several of the other "wet" counties also have special enforcement officers who spend their entire time tracking down the county liquor law violators. Reports indicate that a cooperative enforcement unit to be maintained cooperatively by six "wet" counties in the east—probably Halifax, Warren, Vance, Nash, Wilson and Edgecombe counties, is being considered.

But in most of the so-called "dry" counties, both bootleg and taxpayer liquor is reported as being easier to obtain than ever.

Cotton Forms Are Available For Growers

College Station, Raleigh, Oct. 4.—Forms on which cotton growers are to record the sale of their 1935 crop have been prepared by the AAA and will soon be distributed to the county agents.

These forms will carry all the data needed in making application for price adjustment payments, said J. F. Criswell, of State College, director of the cotton program in North Carolina.

The growers are expected to fill out the sale certificate form at the time of sale. Those who have already sold cotton are expected to transfer to these certificates the data which they have previously been requested to keep.

Since the amount of adjustment payment each grower is to receive will be calculated according to the date of the sale and the amount of cotton sold, the sales certificates should be kept accurately, Criswell added.

Before long, he continued, the county agents will also be furnished other forms on which the growers are to make their applications for adjustment payments.

When the forms have been received, the county agents will notify the growers locally, Criswell stated.

The adjustment payment will equal the amount by which the average price of 7-8 inch middling cotton on the 10 spot markets may fall short of 12 cents on the day the grower sells his lint. The payment, however, cannot exceed two cents a pound.

WILSON LIQUOR BOARD PICKS SPECIAL DEPUTY

Wilson, Oct. 4.—Wilson County's ABC Board went to war in earnest on the bootleggers and illegal distillers in Wilson County when they appointed Russell M. Page, deputy sheriff, as special deputy.

Tuesday afternoon Page in company with Deputy Sheriff A. C. Hinton and Frank Carter, captured a 50-gallon still near Saratoga on the farm of Gordon Whitley. Together with two cases of bootleg liquor, two cases of brandy and six barrels of mash. Shortly afterwards on the same afternoon the officers raided the place of Ernest Phillips near town and found 42 pints of liquor and 120 miniature bottles of whiskey.

TOP PRICES FOR TOBACCO YESTERDAY

Day's Sales Averaged $22.64, Season's Sales Average Is $19.28

Top prices for the season so far were attained on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday when some grades sold above the 50 cents mark and the day's total sales averaged $22.64 per hundred pounds. Better prices during this week have brought the season's average price up to $19.28 per hundred pounds. Today's offerings were around a million pounds and early sales indicated prices about like yesterday.

Official figures on the market, made public this morning are as follows:

Sales yesterday 717,224 pounds for $162,351.93, average $22.64.

Sales for week ending yesterday $113,554 pounds for $1,097,646.79 averaging $21.47.

Sales for the season 28,588,334 pounds for $5,512,731.10, averaging $19.28 per hundred pounds.

With October considered as usually the best selling month of the entire season, warehousemen are urging the growers to grade their good and fancy tobacco and market them now. Continued strengthening of prices is looked for during next week.

THREE YOUTHS ARE EXECUTED

Mountain Youths Die in Electric Chair for Robbery and Murder

Raleigh, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Three illiterate mountain youths of Madison county, were electrocuted at a prison here today for the robbery and murder of a kinsman of two of them. Robert Thomas, 23, Oris Gunter, 20, and Arthur Gosnell, 21, went to the chair in that order to pay society for their confessed crime of robbery and killing "so we could see the world." The youths got $77 for their trouble.

Last February they lay in wait two days for William Thomas, 75-year-old store keeper and great uncle of Thomas and Gunter, and on the third day they hit the old man over the head with a monkey wrench, robbed him, left his body in a mudhole and fled. The store keeper died that day. Within 12 hours the three youths had been apprehended in Shelby. That trip of something over 100 miles from home was the farthest away two of the three had ever been. Gunter, however, once had lived in Kentucky. It took the jury only seven minutes to convict the three of murder and the Supreme Court turned down their appeal. Governor Ehringhaus declined clemency.

Thomas and Gunter were apparently frightened as they entered the death chamber but Gosnell, grimacing, seemed perfectly composed as he went to his death.

It was 10:22 a few minutes earlier than usual when Thomas entered the room housing the electric chair. Forty-one minutes later the third of the group was pronounced dead.

News Behind The News

Washington

By RAY TUCKER

COMING: The Roosevelt administration has not deposited all its reform eggs in one basket. It learned that farmyard strategy when the Supreme Court scrambled a few which stood in plain sight. The concealed eggs may be hatched before long.

A mysterious Cabinet Policy Committee has sponsored a secret investigation of several major industries for some months. Its accountants have compiled reports on their purchasing, production, marketing systems, equipment, wages, prices and working conditions. They are supposed to show that the costs for finished products are excessively high due to obsolete equipment and old-fashioned practices within these industries. It was ancient machinery that was blamed by the Roper Committee for the woes of New England textiles.

SAY POTATO CONTROL ACT BE ENFORCED

AAA Officials Announce Law Will Be Enforced Despite Misgivings

Washington, Oct. 4.—(AP)—In AAA circles it was indicated today that the compulsory potato control, an issue fraught with political controversy would be enforced despite misgivings. The farm administration, however, either through accident or forethought, go into a position where it could argue, as sentiment compelled it, to reluctantly undertake administration of the law.

Potato farmers who gathered yesterday presented an almost unified front in the turbulent hearing called to consider alternative plans to control potato production. They refused to talk about substitutes and insisted that the administration enforce the law enacted by congress.

Confronted by charges of "nullification" from rebellious farmers and their spokesmen Secretary Wallace unexpectedly appeared before them and said his criticism of the law had nothing to do with whether it was enforced and announced there had been no final determination of availability of funds to enforce it. Spokesmen of the farmers including, Republican Congressman Brewster, of Maine, had pointed to several sources from which the funds might be obtained. Feeling in official circles was that some money could be found. Even without new funds some officials pointed out, production quotas could be made under regular AAA appropriations and if necessary enforcement of the tax provision left until congress meets in January.

The demand of the farmers yesterday had changed the atmosphere around AAA headquarters where only Wednesday Secretary Wallace had said in a press conference he did not like the law and would do all he could to "avoid enforcing it." Even the Republican National Committee, which had attacked the law as another step in "regimentation" of the farmers, had insisted that Wallace was bound to enforce it. The Republicans left no doubt that they wanted it enforced as a basis for an issue next year.

Under the law each farmer will be given quotas based on former production.

ROUND OVER TO COURT ON TRIO OF CHARGES

Wilmington, Oct. 4.—James Knox alleged to have held up motorists on the Wrightsville highway and to have attempted to assault the night watchman at the ball park and Patrolman Hare, waived hearing in recorder's court Wednesday morning and was bound over to Superior court on three charges.

For attempting to shoot Patrolman Hare, he was held in bond of $1,000.

For assault and highway robbery, he was remanded in the sum of $500.

For attacking Watchman Meier with a blackjack, he was held under $1,000 bond.

Knox failed to give the required bonds and was returned to jail.

PROTEST USE PATROL FOR STRIKE DUTY

Say The Patrolmen's Place Is On Highways Instead of Guarding Mills

Raleigh, Oct. 4.—Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus has not helped himself any, if he has any further political ambition, by using the highway patrol to preserve order in towns where strikes have been in progress, according to wide-spread protest comment and opinion in political circles here. There is no criticism of the Governor's desire to maintain order and prevent violence. But the prevailing opinion is that the highway patrolmen are needed much more on the highways to track down reckless drivers and to prevent accidents than to act as policemen for textile mill owners.

"If the state had 200 or 250 highway patrolmen, then it might be possible to spare 35 or 30 or these men to keep order in strike zones," one commentator said here. "But when there are only 120 patrolmen in the entire state to patrol some 10,000 miles of state highways, many more lives are likely to be lost in automobile accidents resulting from the withdrawal of these patrolmen from regular duty on the highways than are likely to be lost in strike disorders."

The cause of this discussion about using the highway patrol for strike duty was the strike in Mooreville last week when a number of patrolmen, variously reported as numbering from 15 to 45, were on duty there "to keep traffic open." But most observers agree that the patrolmen were there really to make a psychological impression upon the minds of the strikers and to be ready for action if any rioting should break out, even though they confined their riding back and forth to the main highway running in front of the mills where the strike was in progress. For it is generally agreed that a squad of patrolmen, mounted on motorcycles and with sirens screaming, can impress a crowd of people, strikers, loafers, or what not more than a military company. It is also agreed that one patrolman, certainly not more than two, could have kept the traffic open in front of the mill.

As long as the Governor confined his power to order highway patrolmen on special duty to real emergencies, such as the prevention of lynchings and the escorting of prisoners to the Central Prison here in order to prevent possible violence, there was no criticism, since such duties are admitted as in line with their regular duties. Or if the Governor had sent a group of patrolmen to Mooreville to stay only until a National Guard Company could arrive there, very little criticism would have been heard. It is generally agreed, but a large number of newspaper editors and of individuals do not think the Governor should make a state police force out of the highway patrol, or use it for strike-breaking duty.

It is also recalled by those who followed the proceedings of the 1935 general assembly that there was much opposition in both houses to that section of the highway patrol law which permitted to the Governor to order the patrol on other than highway duty, even in emergencies. Only the most vigorous efforts on the behalf of the Governor's friends and leaders in both houses resulted in its final inclusion in the law. The feeling on the part of many

MAROON MONSTER IN SOUTH PACIFIC

Sydney (AP)—The latest reports of sea monsters, this time a red one, come from a fisherman of Buena Vista, Solomon Islands, who claims the following experience:

"I was alone and watching my bait when I heard deep breathing behind me. I looked round and saw a dark red monster."

"It had a head like an alligator, except that the nose was square. The body was more than 30 feet long and as round as a coconut tree."

"It came in great leaps out of the water, with a bounding motion."

The fisherman, who retreated to shore in his canoe, is supported by two native boys who say they saw the same thing.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

When Anna Sage decided to live up the Indiana gunnison she was not alone. Her husband, Detective Martin Zarkovich, an old friend. But he was an Indiana cop, and he could not make an arrest in the state of Illinois. From previous dealings he knew it best to obtain the aid of federal agents. So he tipped off Alvin Purvis, Chicago G-man, and Purvis did what he was paid to do. The rest was simple shooting. There is another important phase which most people miss. If Purvis had not prevented deportation of his informant in return for her tip without knowing whether he could make good—he was, of course, eager to get Dillinger—he made a serious mistake. All police—local and federal—would be lost without the pigeons, and the federal often depend on local "stooges." But once the informant finds he can't trust a cop's word he sues up like that phinx. Local cops don't like that kind of stuff; they know they have to play straight even with crooks.

PROBE: The report on the whiskey industry built up since repeal contains explosive material according to those who have seen it. It may explain official reluctance to get it out of the right hands. It is supposed to blame federal and state taxes for the high cost of liquor and the persistence of bootlegging. It also says that the distillers paid excessive fees for political favors during the first mad scramble for permits to enter the business. It supports charges that the overnight recreation of the whiskey industry was accompanied by an array of expenditures which have never leaked out but which figure in the cost to the ultimate drinker. These conditions still exist in some instances. Several members of Congress got wind of this state of affairs just before adjournment in August, but their demands for an investigation were drowned out in the legislative pell-mell of the last few weeks. But a bi-partisan, wet-and-dry inquiry into the practices of the so-called "whiskey trust" seems assured at the next session.

PRACTICAL: If anybody still believes that President Roosevelt is depending solely on his record and speeches to insure re-nomination and reelection, it means they're the kind of people who believe in fairy tales. The undercover drive for instructed delegations is going ahead in a big way.

Jim Farley has no worries over Mr. Roosevelt's re-nomination. What he fears is that certain traditional Democratic states will withhold their delegations from the President. The number would be few—perhaps not more than ten—but even a small rebellion on the convention floor would hurt. I would furnish the GOP with a talking point, especially if the states holding out rank high among Jeffersonian commonwealths.

So Mr. Roosevelt sent for the Senator of a certain state—he has done the same with others—and asked quite frankly if the delegation would be instructed for his re-nomination. The Senator, who is also state boss, replied that it would be if the White House made no move to defeat his elder colleague, a renowned and outspoken foe of the New Deal. The President agreed and they shook hands on it. Several incidents like this explain why the move for an insurgent Democratic party will get nowhere. It's being fixed.

NEW YORK

By JAMES M. MULLIN

MONEY: New York sharpshiners that negotiations for international monetary stabilization are about to begin. They understand and have definitely through private channels joined France in urging such action and that Britain is at last ready to talk turkey. The war scare has intensified the demand for action from all quarters and several new factors have entered the situation.

France is said to be prepared now to devalue the franc by 20 per cent as a necessary preliminary. Both the United States and Britain have insisted on this—as otherwise the franc would have been too far out of line. The French have been very nervous about yielding the point for fear of political repercussions at home—but finally figured it's wiser to give in than to take a chance on chaos. The English still hanker to cheapen the pound some more against the dollar before reaching a final understanding—they claim the dollar is undervalued—but they aren't as adamant about it as they were. An agreement with France for a common policy towards Italy—which would be part of the deal—is more urgent.

Insiders say that our role in the undercover negotiations isn't exactly passive. Word is that we are ready to renege further monetary manipulation for keeps if Britain will accept the present dollar-pound ratio. The corollary is that if Britain insists on deprecating her currency we're set to match her step for step—and we are better heeled for that kind of a scrap than she is. The administration is also said to have expressed a willingness to let the war debt mess once and for all—which England is anxious to do. Of course on that point it's well to remember that the President may propose—but the Senate will dispose.

RAILS: New York experts figure that railroad earnings for the rest of this year should benefit from more than seasonal expansion. August and September will show coal loading above normal. Moreover, October was a poor month in 1934—so loadings and earnings for October and possibly November of this year will look unusually good by comparison. A majority of important roads should be able to increase net operating earnings for the full year.

Great Northern and Southern Pacific are expected to show great improvement over 1934. Better earnings are also anticipated for Pennsylvania, New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio and Atchafalaya, Nickel Plate, Baltimore & Ohio, Erie and Union Pacific should at least hold their own and possibly come through with slight gains.

Lackawanna and New York Ontario & Western—both anthracite carriers—probably will not do quite as well as last year. This also applies to Illinois Central, Long Island and Missouri-Kansas-Texas.

UNFRIENDLY: Bankers in close contact with London learn that Germany has made tentative overtures to Britain for a credit of ten million pounds. What's more, British banking circles are said to be quite receptive. The feeling among them is that Hjalmar Schacht has done a remarkable job of reorganizing German finances. The interest rate suggested makes their mouths water—and they do not consider the risk excessive.

But that doesn't mean the loan will go through. The British foreign office will have something to say about that. France would be sure to construe such aid to the "enemy" as an unfriendly gesture—and it would never do to irritate France at this juncture.

RETRENCHING: New York understands that Budget Director Dan Bell will have enormous piles of figures constituting the "estimates" for the next fiscal year ready when the President returns to the capital. In this table must be inserted the item for continued work-relief—or its equivalent.

Perhaps this item will be determined at Cocco Island. By scaling down experimental and emergency items FDR could go far toward making up a sizable work-relief appropriation without staggering Congress. No one knows where the axe will fall—or whether it will fall. Hence the uneasy feeling throughout emergency agencies. Some of the enterprising lads are "looking around" for something really good. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is palpably hauling in. The industrial loan and mortgage corporation ends of RFC are doing very little business and are letting out rather than taking on new men. Financial circles are keeping a close eye on all signs of retrenchment as a test of FDR's good faith on the subject of tax reduction.

TRADE: Whether a war develops in Europe or not, insiders predict a revamping of American trade channels. Even talk of a possible embargo has turned the thoughts of exporters towards new outlets for their goods. Plans are now being worked out for more intensive exploitation of Latin American markets. They will take some time to develop—but it's a safe bet that within five years a much larger percentage of our exports will go to our southern neighbors and a much smaller proportion across the Atlantic.

La Argentina at College
The great Spanish dancer, La Argentina, has selected her most beautiful dances for the program she will give at East Carolina Teachers College on the evening of October 21.

These are the dances that have created sensations in New York, Paris, London and the other great cities of the world, the ones that the Prince of Wales was so enthusiastic about.

The artist wears picturesque costumes, each dance having its appropriate costume. She uses castanets a great deal. They all are small-shaped percussion instruments that she clicks and rattles in rhythm with the tap of her heels. While she is a Spaniard, she was born in the country from which she takes her stage name. Her father, a premier dancer in the Madrid Opera, at the time of her birth was living with him while he was filling a series of engagements in South America.

This great artist will be the first of the series of great attractions offered by the College for the coming season.

The Round Table

Mrs. Milton White entertained the members of the Round Table in her home on Latham street Tuesday afternoon.

The decorations were chiefly enormous dahlias of most exquisite beauty.

Mrs. H. E. Austin, president, presided.

Mrs. W. C. Vincent gave the report for the club library commission and added to this a report of what the Ayden Library was accomplishing. She said these faithful women were fitting up a new library home and expected to hold a book shower in the near future. Our president urged the members of the club to look up all the books we could spare at this time and donate them to these deserving workers.

The Round Table has recently won out of town notice for its distinction of having an educational doll department in the library. Mrs. E. B. Higgs gave a most interesting paper on North Carolina Shrines in the Piedmont and West. She declared the fact that we have not preserved the historical places of this section.

She chose as the most interesting markers the ones honoring "Old Joe," the negro slave at Mars Hill, "The Old Calvary Church," in Fletcher, called the "Westminster Abbey" of the South, the "Old Clock" in the court house tower in Hillsboro and the "Moravian Church" in Winston-Salem.

"Old Joe" was a negro slave given in payment for a college in Marshall. Calvary Church, served as barracks for the Confederate troops. It has been developed to preserve the historical condition of the South. Mrs. Higgs stated that this spot had been neglected until a New Yorker was chosen rector of Calvary Church and has been promoting interest in the historic old edifice and developing it as an historical shrine.

"The Clock" in the court house tower in Hillsboro was made in Birmingham, England, in 1760 and was given to Hillsboro by King George III. It has been a clock and carried away several times and each time brought back to its rightful place in the tower. The court house in which it was kept was sold to the colored Methodist of Hillsboro and now serves them as a house of worship. The clock was then moved to the tower of the Presbyterian church where it remained until the present court house was built.

Mrs. Higgs also discussed the Moravian graveyard known as God's Acre in Winston-Salem and made her remarks with feeling for the antiquity and sacredness of the church and its place in the community.

The current event was given by Mrs. Wiley Brown.

Mrs. White introduced her out-of-town guests Mesdames John Stator, Leyton Blount and Pollard Whitehurst, of Bethel, who were called on for a few remarks, to which Mrs. Stator replied that the Round Table was her mother club because members from our club went to Bethel to organize theirs.

Then the following Greenville guests were introduced: Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Lamb, Miss Lill Wilson and Mrs. Carrie Laughinghouse.

Mrs. White served a delicious course of refreshments.

No Money For Sick Leaves For Teachers

Reflector Bureau.

Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Oct. 4.—The reason the State School Commission decided it could not grant any sick leave with pay to teachers this year was because there is no money available for that purpose, Lloyd E. Griffin, executive secretary of the commission said today. He pointed out that while the 1935 general assembly provided that all the 23,000 teachers must come under the Workmen's Compensation Act and also might have sick leave, that these provisions were adopted after the school appropriation had been passed and in which no provision had been made for either of these items.

"I see where a number of newspapers are already taking the School Commission to task for deciding that it could not grant sick leave with pay this year," Griffin said. "But the reason for this action was not that the commission did not want to grant sick leave but because the general assembly failed to provide any funds for either sick leave or Workmen's Compensation. If we had granted sick leave, we would have had to take it out of the salaries of all the teachers for the benefit of a few. So we decided that the fairest thing to do under the circumstances was not to grant any sick leave this year."

Griffin pointed out that already indications were that the expenditures of the School Commission for maintaining the schools this year would exceed the amount appropriated at least $250,000 and possibly more than that, due to the action taken by the commission and the State Board of Education in increasing the salaries of all the teachers 20 per cent over what each received last year, still maintaining the regular increase for certification and experience, while the general assembly provided for a blanket increase of only 20 per cent over the total amount expended last year for salaries. If the salary increase had been made as the general assembly undoubtedly intended, instead of on an individual basis, there would probably have been enough funds available to take care

HOW A WOMAN'S NERVOUSNESS WAS HELPED BY CARDUI

"Shortly before the birth of my youngest child I was very nervous and run-down in every way," writes Mrs. Farnell Tisdale, of South Bloomington, Ohio.
"I had lost my appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep. I heard of Cardui and decided to give it a trial. After I had taken one bottle, I was so much better every way that I got six bottles and too, then saw young make such a change in so short a time. I have built back my weight and today I am strong and healthy mother."

SOMETHING SHOULD BE DONE ABOUT OUR TRAFFIC PROBLEM

If it can be avoided no one wants to see traffic lights installed in Greenville, but if motorists persist in paying no attention to present stop signs and other traffic signs in this city, then the only way out is to install traffic lights and then arrest every motorist who fails to heed the signals.

For years Five Points has been a stop corner and there should be no motorist in Pitt County who does not know it and yet every day somebody will deliberately run through the intersection at Five Points without stopping endangering the lives of others who expect the vehicle to stop. There are others who will deliberately make U turns at the intersections in the business sections although they are plainly marked "No U Turn." Just how many hundred persons violate the "Stop" signs at other street intersections in this city is not known but it is safe to say that about as many people pay no attention to the stop corners as obey the law.

While personally we have always felt that our city was better off without traffic lights and that our traffic moved better without them, the situation now is coming to the point that our people are taking advantage of the situation and our streets are becoming dangerous. Other cities the size of Greenville have installed modern systems of traffic lights and are finding them to be working most satisfactorily and cutting down accidents within the cities. In view of our present conditions as compared with the other cities we believe it is time for Greenville to give careful study to this problem of traffic and traffic lights as a safety measure.

LIBRARY RECEIVES AID FOR HISTORICAL COLLECTION

Chapel Hill, Oct. 3.—The University of North Carolina Library has received a grant of $5,000 from the Works Progress Administration which will be used toward the development of the Southern Historical Collection.

The grant will permit the employment of 12 assistants for a period of one year to catalog and classify the collections in order that they may be of use to the students.

A million and a quarter manuscripts representing every Southern state have already been collected. These documents contain a wealth of information concerning the social and economic conditions of the South that will be of immense interest to historians.

MORNING STAR

— BY MARIAN SIMS —

Chapter 45.
CARROLLTON

SATURDAY night came. Emily went slowly, almost reluctantly, down the stairs, the blue skirt swirling about her. David saw her from the living room and came quickly to meet her. He was smiling, but his hand upon the newel post betrayed him: it was gripping the post so tightly that the knuckles stood out white.

"Portrait of a lady descending a staircase!"

She smiled faintly. "It doesn't mean to be a bare-headed, elegant one, I mean."

"That depends," he said, "on the subject of the portrait." He moved across the living room and to the living room.

People were arriving in the orchestra took up its place in the hall and began to play. The guests had gathered in the parlor and were waiting for the orchestra to begin.

The first and last dance were mine."

The orchestra began to play a thrilling, minor rhythmic melody. All eyes turned to the center of the hall where the orchestra was playing.

"It's in a terrible state of repair," he explained, "but I think you'll find it has wonderful possibilities. It's really one of the finest pieces in the state." He had caught David's name, but found in it nothing but coincidence.

David merely looked at him. "You're telling me?" he said, and got into the car.

Emily laughed as the car moved away. "David has the best intentions in the world!"

His mouth opened and he uttered a soundless cry.

"That was what I wanted to say," he said, "but I didn't have time to say it."

The car moved away and Emily stood looking after it. She felt a strange sense of loss.

HIGH COURAGE

Chapter One
BEFORE THE STORM

The fishing fleet was coming in from the drift; scurrying in before the storm gathering over the Pacific, like a flock of frightened birds. Anne Farnsworth gripped the brass hand-rail which ran around the top of the cabin cruiser Akhi, and watched it with delight.

The travelers, slim bodied, rode the waves like seabirds; the gunnetters like squat gulls, and behind them, coming forward like a gigantic mother bird, came a freighter, black smoke curling forward in an unruly queue.

To starboard loomed the high fir covered bulk of Cape Disappointment, to port the only green of the Columbia River's mouth, and smothering all of it in blue, was the haze which told of approaching rain.

"Like it, daughter?" Luke Farnsworth worked his way around the edge of the boat to stand beside the trim white-clad figure of Anne.

"Love it, Dad," she caroled above the wind, and as the Akhi dipped into a trough, then rode to the crest of a wave, "it's like flying."

"You'd better get back to the cockpit before we cross the bar, or it will be like swimming. One wave and your white slacks."

"Mr. Farnsworth," Old Captain Jim, who ran the Akhi, thrust a grin. "I head for a forward port."

"Do you dislike Uncle Lee that much?"

"Not Uncle Lee, he and Aunt Mabel are just good-natured editions of Dad, sans his courage and brains, but the Akhi's I really believe Anne Charlotte hates me, and whenever Tom Farley looks at me I begin searching back in my memory for some secret sin I must have committed. And then there's 'Sharlée'."

"Sharlée is trying," Mrs. Farnsworth conceded. "But I believe she's 'labour of you'."

"She shouldn't be, she's prettier than I could ever hope to be, with her black hair and sky-blue eyes."

"I don't know, Anne, your brown eyes and tawny hair will hold their own with her type of beauty. But it's something else, something you have, Sharlée would give anything to own."

"Meaning Rob Crocker?" The girl's eyes twinkled with mischief.

"Not being engaged to Rob, I can think of a number of things quite as desirable. However, she does seem interested in him, doesn't she?"

Anne sighed. "She'd be interested in anything I possessed from a hat to a husband. Which reminds me, why, with my approaching marriage to Dad's business manager, should he want me to study the cannery business?"

"Suppose you ask him," her mother suggested and nodded towards the cabin from which he was emerging.

Anne waited until her father sat down, then transferred to the arm of his chair and after a moment's study of his face, still lined with worry, repeated her questions.

"I want you to appreciate your responsibilities, daughter," he answered, "you're our only heir, and should anything happen to us—"

Anne's slim fingers pressed his lips. "Perish the thought, Dad," and to hide the feeling his words had awakened, "by the time you two are ready to leave this vale of tears, we'll be getting our fish by radio."

"Imagine Dad, having a kitchen cabinet where you could tune in—"

"Anne, Anne," chided her father, laughing, "how can I trust you to learn the business. Here, take my binoculars for your first river view of the new canneries."

THE glasses in her hand, Anne walked to the edge of the boat, braced herself against the cowl and focused the glasses. She saw a swirl of foam-tipped water, mountain blue with the mist of the approaching storm, and to the south, a roof-splashed hillside with wharves, piers, and canneries—fringing the river's edge.

Quietly she stood and looked at the lowering sky, the brooding hills and stormy water, couplings of an awakening within her, a recognition of this land as her own. Tense nerves relaxed, nerves keyed to the pitch of the debutante who is whirled into a first season's marriage.

"How does the Columbia compare with the rivers you saw abroad last year?" Luke called.

Anne, turned towards him— "Queer, Dad, but I don't know. I'm only just now coming home."

She saw a quick glance flash between her father and mother and hastened to reassure them. "Not that I don't love our Portland home, but you remember I spent my first six years here, and now that I'm back it's as though I'd found home. I mean here on the water, watching the fleet come in—"

"See the canneries? Look! In Farnsworth gulch."

Anne swung the glass back to focus, as the Akhi nosed in towards Astoria. She soon caught sight of the huge silver grey letters on the side of long emerald green sheds Farnsworth Fisheries. Figures in high boots were moving about the narrow wharf, making plans, putting in with their afternoon's catch.

While she watched, a boat swept in from the west, turned to land the cannery boat, and as it moved the heaving platform of a crane swung across the water.

"Yohoo, to the wharf!" Instantly a figure in a blue uniform of the crew and on a rope at the water's edge, Anne caught the water's edge, Anne caught the water's edge, Anne caught the water's edge.

The man was tall. A faded sweater, wet with spray, seemed molded to his figure to blend with the bronze of throat, face, and hair.

Braced to the away of the gale, he, he called a rope over his head, threw it to a piling head, pulled it taut, then eased his craft to the edge of the float, riding at the wharf's gang-way.

A moment later the Akhi pulled in, Anne, still vibrantly aware of her harmony with the surroundings, her imagination excited by the picture the young fisherman had made, jumped lightly to the cowl.

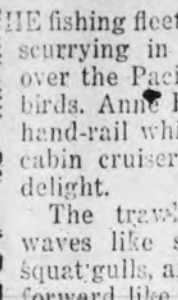

Luke Farnsworth looked up. "Anne!" he shouted "wait 'til we're fast, daughter!"

Anne heard her father shout, but caught the note of alarm too late. The thin strip of water which she had sought to clear widened. She felt the Akhi swing back from the push of her feet, saw the float rear away on a wave, and for one terrifying moment was poised above a frothy cap of oily green river.

Thoughts flashed like sparks. She could swim, it wouldn't be so bad after the first chill. And then she was frozen with fear, for the Akhi would swing back to meet the float and she would come up beneath the float or the other.

A strong arm closed about her. (Copyright, 1935, Jeanne Bowman.) Anne made no sound.

Ethiopia Looks To Belgian Colonel As Chief Strategist Against Italy

By EDUARD TRAUSS
BRUSSELS (AP) — The former manager of a fascist periodical in Belgium may help lead the army of the Ethiopian emperor against Italian invasion in the event that war becomes an actuality.

To Colonel Leopold Reul, leader of the new detachment of Belgian officers who have arrived in Addis Ababa, may involve much of the military strategy by which Haile Selassie would seek to repulse an Italian advance.

Col. Reul, until recently, has been one of the most active members of the fascist movement in Belgium, with the position of general manager of the fascist periodical "L'Action Nationale."

Signs Two-Year Contract.
One of the directors of this publication was recently named a commander in the Order of the Italian Crown, at the instigation of Il Duce himself.

Colonel Reul, who is only 53, with a reputation as a brilliant military strategist, has reportedly signed a two-year contract as chief-of-staff of the Ethiopian forces.

He and other former Belgian officers under his command, it is stated in military circles here, probably will replace the original Belgian military mission to Addis Ababa in the event of war.

The action of the Belgian officers, in contracting their services to the African empire started an official investigation by the Belgian ministry for national defense, with a possibility that some of the officers may be recalled.

Wounded in World War.
The Belgian colonel is regarded here as well equipped in training and experience for whatever duties may be given him. He is thoroughly familiar with colonial conditions, having spent three years in active service in the Belgian Congo.

He was among the first to be wounded in the world war, a bullet piercing his throat and depriving him of speech for a year. Subsequently he was attached to the Belgian general staff, in charge of organization of canal transportation. Still later he was sent to the Congo with a similar mission of organization transportation by water, returning to Brussels at the conclusion of the war to interest himself in real estate business and politics.

Farley May Fight 'Two-Thirds Rule' At '36 Convention

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington—There has been talk in well-informed quarters of the Democratic party that "Big Jim" Farley, chairman of the National Committee, is preparing quietly to administer a knock-out blow to the time-honored two-thirds rule at the 1936 convention.

He attempted to have the 104-year old rule governing the nomination of presidential candidates abolished in 1932, incidentally with almost disastrous results to the candidacy of President Roosevelt.

The 1936 convention will be an ideal time to abolish the rule, in the opinion of Farley. He is convinced that Mr. Roosevelt will be renominated unanimously, hence there will be no danger of treachery on anyone's toes. In 1932, FDR entered the national convention shy of the necessary two-thirds votes to nominate and all attempts to chuck the rule which has caused so many deadlocks and some disasters for the party proved unavailing.

If Farley is successful, the Democrats will have displaced a convention mechanism as old as the party conventions themselves. It was in 1832 that Andrew Jackson forced the adoption of the two-thirds rule at the party's first national convention.

Jackson didn't need the rule for himself since he was certain of an overwhelming renomination, but he wanted to show how much strength he could muster for his running mate Van Buren. The Senate had refused to confirm Van Buren previously for the post of minister to England and "Old Hickory" was determined to prove that he was the real boss of the Democratic party.

While it helped Van Buren in 1832, it later led to his downfall. He duly succeeded Jackson to the presidency in 1836, but four years later he literally was howled out of the White House in the famous "log cabin and hard cider" campaign of 1840.

In 1844 he had an excellent chance to stage a comeback. With a substantial majority of the convention back of him, his managers did everything within their power to have the two-thirds rule set aside. They failed and Van Buren lost the nomination to James K. Polk because he was unable to muster 32 votes required under the rule.

Since then the two-thirds rule has remained securely fastened to the party's neck. Hopeful convention minorities have frustrated every effort to abolish it.

The rule has had a far-reaching effect on the history of the country. It has dashed the ambitions and hopes of many individual candidates as well as splitting the party on occasions.

In 1860 when neither the northern nor southern wings of the party could command two-thirds of the votes in the convention at Charleston, the split was so wide that Lincoln was swept into the White House and the civil war ensued. Had it not been for the two-thirds rule, Champ Clark of Missouri and not Woodrow Wilson would have been the Democratic nominee in 1912.

European-trained officers have had much to do with the attempts to modernize Haile Selassie's army, a group of ex-officers from Belgium being the latest additions to the technical staff. ETHIOPIA TO WIN LONG WAR, PICK OF FRENCH VETERANS WHO FOUGHT IN MOROCCO

By ROBERT B. PARKER
Paris (AP) — French military opinion gives Ethiopia a good chance to defeat Mussolini's armies if their expected war lasts long enough.

Officers, experienced in France's long, tough colonial warfare, rate the Ethiopian fighter above the Moroccan who gave France long years of trouble before submitting to her rule. Geographical conditions in Ethiopia, they point out, are much more favorable to defending armies than in Morocco.

They feel the hundreds of tanks and airplanes Mussolini has concentrated in his African colonies will be of little use. The terrain is impossible for vehicles, they say, and there is nothing for the airplanes to bomb. Add to this, the difficulties of obtaining water and food, the disease infested lowland climate and the deadly heat.

General Paul Baratier, noted French military writer, believes that lack of munitions, rifles and modern field guns is all that prevents Ethiopia from being sure of repeating her victory of Aduwa over the Italians.

Nature Reinforces Ethiopia
"Even then, this material inferiority is largely compensated for by the geographical features of the country, especially favorable to the defense," he says.

"The real obstacles that face the Italians will not only be the unfavorable, unhealthy climate but also the difficulties of getting water and supplies and the superiority in the numbers and bravery of the Ethiopians."

"It would be terribly false not to recognize the real value of the Ethiopian fighter."

General Baratier discounting the value of the Italian tanks, planes and other "European weapons," believes the Italians will eventually have to fight the Ethiopians in their own guerrilla warfare fashion, if they hope to win.

Long Struggle Predicted
"To provide a living for the numerous troops that will penetrate into the interior, roads and bridges will have to be built every inch of the way," says General Baratier.

"This fact alone will make the Italian operations slow and painful."

French opinion, agreeing with General Baratier, holds ten years, rather than the three or four Mussolini has envisioned, will be necessary for any kind of workable military control of the country.

It is believed that the Italian airplanes will be used over the battle lines, in direct support of the infantry, to bomb and machine gun the Ethiopians into submission. Even this operation will become difficult, they say, if the Ethiopian fights according to custom in open formation without forming the European style battle lines.

General Baratier feels the Italians, despite their familiarity with European mountain warfare, will find fighting in Ethiopian mountains quite a different thing, for there are no trails and many of the ranges have never even been mapped.

Counsel Early Retreats

French military observers believe the Italian army will make quick progress in the first enthusiastic drive. For six months they believe the Europeans will drive steadily ahead, for near their colonies armored cars are practical, especially from Somaliland to Harrar.

French officers believe, however, that if the Ethiopians conserve their forces and let the Italians advance to where the geographical barriers start, they have a good chance to win the war. The morale of Haile Selassie's troops is at white heat, they say and they will battle to the death for their homeland.

French observers have pointed out that if the great powers lift their arms embargoes on Ethiopia and send her quantities of arms and ammunition, the African empire will be almost unbeatable.

BLUE DEVILS OFF FOR RICHMOND PLAY 'GENERALS'

Durham, N. C., Oct. 4.—Duke's Blue Devils left here today, for Richmond, Va., where tomorrow they will meet Washington and Lee's Generals in the major early season engagement of the 1935 Southern conference campaign. The game will be played in Richmond stadium and will start at three o'clock. Duke's 70-piece band will follow the team tomorrow.

The game has all the earmarks of a "natural." Both the teams have sailed through their early opposition without trouble and both have been boomed as possible Southern conference champions. Tomorrow's game will tell the story.

The General won the conference crown last year, taking it off the collective head of the Blue Devils who had taken it when that great 1933 team bowled over all opposition until the final game.

Tomorrow's clash should be a ding-dong battle from start to finish with plenty of passes filling the air. Washington and Lee's long guns are its passing attack while Duke will probably be stopped by the General's strong and giant linemen and be forced to toss bombs.

Thirty-six Blue Devils were in the party leaving here for their headquarters at the John Marshall. They were: Jack Alexander, Elmore Hackney, Clarence Badgett, Jim Bolling, Lynwood Baldwin, Henry Bowers, Jim Boyd, Tom Finn, Joe Brunansky, Joe Cardwell, Ed Cannon, Bob Carpenter, McCauley Clark, John Johnson, Gus Durner, Captain Jim Johnston, Ike Eakins, Willard Eargney, Charles Fischer, Woodrow Lipscomb, Sam Gardner, Sam McCaskill, Romeo Germino, Porter Greenwood, Welborn Gregson, Dick McAninch, Carl Hartness, Frank Liana, Jack Hennemer, Tom Power, Herbert Hudgins, Harwood Smith, Dick Taliaferro, Ed West, Jule Ward, Clarence Parker. They were accompanied by Coaches Wallace Wade, Eddie Cameron and Arlington Kelly; Trainer Bob Chambers; A. C. Lee, Jr., and George Patterson, student managers; and Dayton Dean, business manager.

Middies To Display Historic Flag On Annapolis' Ninetieth Birthday

Upper left is a portion of Master-Commandant Perry's historic flag, bearing the legend of Captain Lawrence's dying words which have become the navy's motto. The flag will be displayed to visitors on October 10 when the naval academy celebrates its 90th anniversary. Below is the navy academy's color guard marching in review.

By RICHARD H. ELLIOTT
Annapolis, Md. (AP)—Protected in a glass cage, mounted high on the wall of Memorial Hall at the Naval Academy, is a tattered blue flag, with sprawling uneven white letters, spelling out this order: "DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP."

Every summer young men, fresh from home and civilian life, assemble in the hall, and with their eyes fixed on the flag, swear allegiance to the United States, and become midshipmen in the Navy.

This blue flag, potent in its influence, with a history dating back to 1813, has been arranged for inspection of visitors attending the ninety-ninth anniversary celebration of the Academy October 10.

The words on the flag, now a slogan of the Navy, were repeated again and again by the dying Captain James Lawrence fatally wounded when his ship the Chesapeake was defeated by the British frigate Shannon on June 1, 1813, off Boston harbor.

The flag itself is the one that flew from the masthead of the brig, Lawrence, when Master-Commandant Oliver Hazard Perry, won the battle of Lake Erie on September 10, 1813, sweeping the British from the lakes and winning control of the Detroit and Michigan territory back to the United States.

Perry had the flag with Lawrence's dying words made and flew it throughout the battle. It was after this battle that Perry sent his famous dispatch to General Harrison: "We have met the enemy and they are ours—two ships, two brigs one schooner, and one sloop." It was written on the back of an old letter.

The following described lands, to-wit:

tronic should be used for patrolling the highways only and not be converted into a general-state police force. As the law now stands, the highway patrol really is a state police force under the command of the Governor which patrols the highways when he has nothing else for it to do.

If the people of the state really want a state police force, the general assembly should have created a separate force, entirely apart and distinct from the highway patrol, under the command of the Governor, to be assigned by him to special duty wherever needed, most observers maintain. This is the plan followed in New York state and several other states, where the state police and the highway patrol are two entirely different organizations.

As long as the Governor confines his power to divert the patrol from highway patrolling to purely emergency duty, he will get along all right, most people here agree. But if he continues to use the patrol for strike duty over an extended period of several days or a week, loud repercussions and much criticism will result.

Danes Irked By Babs And Husband

Brief Stay in Count' Native Country Makes Press Talk

Copenhagen. (AP) — Denmark, having acquired a definite interest in the former Barbara Hutton, heiress to Woolworth "five and ten" stores, has abandoned whatever hopes might have been entertained at the Countess Haugwitz-Avelow would live in the kingdom. The brief stay of the new countess in her new husband's native land has convinced the Danes, the press indicates, that Denmark will merely a stopping-off place for

"Live Here? Oh No!" And there is the negative answer which the magazine "Kobenhavn" reports having received in interview with the "dollar princess" as the Danes have dubbed the new countess.

"Would you think of living in Denmark?" she was asked. And the answer was "No," so the story goes, looked out the window of the ferryboat on which she was being interviewed, and breathed a sigh of relief.

The Danish public was fully aware, on the other hand, of the preparations which were made to receive the Woolworth heiress, not to mention the small estate of a new husband, but at Hardsburg, the large family estate.

There were stories of interior decorators being called to Hardsburg, of servants being killed, of a line of roads to the castle, and the Danish press, having anticipated from such preparations that a lengthy stay was contemplated, evidenced a touch of chagrin that the countess should so quickly forsake Denmark.

Count Haugwitz-Reventlow is himself accustomed to jaunting about Europe, it is pointed out, so a quick departure is not debatable to the wishes of his bride. In fact the count has taken most of the journalistic brickbats as a result of difficulties encountered in interviewing and photographing the couple.

One writer in the magazine "Vere Damer" speaks of the "harmful reception of the press by the count," and adds that "to photograph kings and other royal persons quite privately can easily be done . . . but in this instance . . ."

President's Talks On Four Seen as Forecasts '36 Themes

By BYRON PRICE
Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington

It is too early to attempt a ready-made political index to Mr. Roosevelt's swing across the continent, but certain chapter-headings readily suggest themselves:

Agriculture: The President's opening remarks, the opposition is a comparison of present farm conditions with what they were before the war.

Power: He follows his farm speech with one extolling what the government is doing toward development of publicly-owned utilities.

Spending: He makes public a summary listing at a balanced budget in the near future, designed to quiet fears of increased taxation.

Recovery: He plays constantly on the theme of improved industrial conditions, giving the credit to the new deal.

Parties: He avoids references to party, and makes a frank bid for independent voting. (The two individuals he praised at Boulder dam—Senator Johnson and former Representative Swing—both are Republicans.)

Obviously, the list of topics still is incomplete. Yet, the selections made in this first approach to 1936 are worth careful note, because they are prophetic.

Show In 'Crucial Sector'

It may be argued that the President was speaking in and to the west when he put agriculture and power at the head of the procession of issues, but does anyone suppose the crucial sector was chosen by accident for the opening of the campaign?

That the west will decide the election is accepted as axiomatic today by most leaders of both parties. That the farm problem and the power problem are in the front rank of political consideration there is hardly open to question.

Nor is there any dispute that in his treatment of these subjects Mr. Roosevelt was bidding for exactly the same bi-partisan support which carried the west for him in 1932.

So distinguished a Republican as Senator Capper says his party cannot hope to carry the farm belt if it opposes AAA. At the forefront of the western crusade against "the power interests" is another Republican, Senator Norris.

Mr. Roosevelt has struck directly at the two points which, above all others, are agitating the western liberal wing of his opposition.

Questions Answered

There are certain other issues which cannot be considered sectional, certain questions which are being asked over and over again in west, east and south.

Is the new deal working—that is, are times really getting better in a national sense? Isn't it time to call a halt to excess spending? How will these recurring deficits be paid for in the future?

To these questions also Mr. Roosevelt has addressed himself. His words, presumably, forecast for the first time what the Democratic reply will be to 36. Prosperity is to be hailed as definitely on the way. A cut in expenditures is promised.

Count and Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow (she was Barbara Hutton—remember?) were photographed in beach attire at the Lido, swanky Italian shore resort near Venice, where they hurried after a short visit to the count's family in Denmark.

PELGRIM'S PROFITS IN REVALUED GOLD COMBAT DISTRESS

Brussels (AP) — Belgium will spend $100,000,000 within three years to combat unemployment through a program of public works, working camps and credit assistance to young married couples.

The funds represent the benefit derived by the National Bank of Belgium from revaluation of its gold stock in terms of the depreciated Belgian franc.

The money has been held for emergency use in supporting the market in Belgian francs and state debentures, but now is considered available for direct relief.

Working camps for unemployed youths will resemble those of America.

NEW BOOKS

By JOHN SELBY

The great mystery of T. E. Lawrence's "Seven Pillars of Wisdom" (Doubleday, Doran) is about to be solved in the mind of the general public. Or at least in the minds of the subscribers to the largest monthly book service, and such others as buy the book.

These will find the book a record of the enigmatic Englishman's famed Arabian campaign, a record unique for its sidelights and completeness and life. But all this is history and in the past and is not enough to give a book the vitality of "Seven Pillars."

This last comes from the fact that this long book is also the record of a curious, almost medieval, soul struggle. Its author worked always between two impossibilities. On one side was his own clear personal ideal; on the other the bitter exigencies of fact, in this case the fact that Lawrence could not often approve of the principles which he preached on the Arabs to accept.

He came to consider that he had betrayed a people. He saw his superior officers and those under him with a clarity one does not expect from anybody, writer or soldier or whatnot. There are thousands of sentences which are priceless as prose, and hundreds of characterizations which cannot be forgotten.

"Seven Pillars" is of course the whole from which "Revolt in the Desert" was drawn some years ago. Its publication was made possible by the death of its author, who protected the book by many strange means when he was alive. And for all that, it only partly explains Lawrence.

Thumbnail Reviews

"The Wind Blew West," by Edwin Lanham (Longmans); the story of a Texas town which tried to boom itself and failed; a "big" novel of a half century ago which reads like a story of today.

"The World From Below," by Jules Romains (Knopf); the fourth volume of M. Romains' gigantic picture of Paris in prose; highly important, if a trifle cumbersome.

"John Whopper the Newsboy" (Longmans); a juvenile of the 70's reprinted; John fell through a China and had some tall, not to say top-heavy, adventures.

"Early One Morning," by Walter de la Mare (Macmillan); a delightful book about children, gathered from their own writing and that of grownups, and held together by Mr. de la Mare's equally delightful prose.

Lord Russell
"In Praise of Idleness," by Bertrand Russell (Norton); essays with a sociological basis, written by a man who can see everybody's side of a given proposition, even when he dislikes what he sees.

"I Live in Virginia," by Julian R. Meade (Longmans); both sides of the Virginia Medal; Mr. Meade is a very bright young man with a gift for meeting interesting people and appreciating them.

"Thunder Over the Bronx," by Arthur Kober (Simon & Schuster); family life in the Bronx, in the thickest of Bronx dialect.

Plan Memorial To Indian's Wife Quannah, Tex. (AP)—Civic leaders here would like to erect a monument to Cynthia Ann Parker, white wife of Pete Nocona, last of the great Comanche chiefs, and to their son, Quannah, for whom the city was named. It has been proposed as a WPA project.

Cooperative College Club Wellington, Tex. (AP)—Sixteen students attending Texas A. & M. college this year have banded together in a cooperative club. They brought two truckloads of food along and will run a boarding house for themselves. Lloyd Kelley of Wellington is president of the club.

King George Falls For Bagpipes Glasgow (AP)—King George, sharing the Prince of Wales' new enthusiasm for the skill of the bagpipers, recently made Pipe Major John McDonald "honorary royal pipet."

STATE FALLS FAR BEHIND IN WPA FUNDS

Some Believe State Being 'Spanked' for Failure to Co-Operate

Reflector Bureau.
By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, Oct. 4.—Is North Carolina being spanked by the powers-that-be in Washington because of the failure of some of its officials to cooperate with the "New Deal" or has it merely bungled in presenting its requests for "Roosevelt Pie" and failed to follow through on these requests?

Reports current here today and attributed to several who have recently been in Washington, are to the effect that the principal reason the state is being "spanked" is to North Carolina are much smaller than had been expected, and decidedly smaller than those which have already been handed out to other states, is either due to the lack of cooperation given by North Carolina Senators and Congressmen and even by the Governor, or to criticism of some aspects of the "New Deal" by all or some of these. Others who refuse to believe there has been any deliberate discrimination against North Carolina on the part of the various administrative agencies in Washington, are convinced, however, that this state has been very dilatory in submitting projects to which it was entitled and that it has also failed to do the kind of follow-up work necessary to get many of those submitted approved.

At any rate, it is agreed that North Carolina now ranks in twenty-seventh place in the amount of Federal money allotted to it, despite the fact that it ranks third among all the 48 states in the amount of Federal taxes paid. When the $4,800,000,000 public works-relief fund was first passed, it was announced that North Carolina's share of this would be at least $100,000,000. This figure was later reduced to $70,000,000. Several weeks ago Works Progress Administrator Hopkins announced that North Carolina had already received allotments aggregating about $40,000,000, including CCC camps, rural rehabilitation, relief and so forth, leaving only about $30,000,000 still due it from the WPA and WPA.

But here is what has happened to all the various projects which were promised:

Assured it would get $16,000,000 for the park-to-park highway, inter-departmental politics in Washington almost wrecked the parkway entirely, until Congressman Dougherty succeeded in salvaging $4,500,000 for the time being, but with not much hope for getting more.

Out of $46,000,000 worth of Public Works Administration projects approved by the state WPA office and submitted to Washington, indications now are that it will not get much more than $20,000,000 for WPA projects, if that much, while only about $6,000,000 has actually been made available for WPA work.

According to the latest reports going the rounds here, the reasons for the sharp scaling down on all these various projects are:

1. The fact that Senator J. W. Bailey wanted to cut the works relief appropriation from $4,800,000,000 down to only $100,000,000 and the generally conceded fact that relations between Senator Bailey and WPA Administrator Hopkins have not been very cordial for a long time.
2. The continued and bitter criticism of the President and the "New Deal" by C. LeRoy Shuping, National Committeeman from North Carolina and one of Senator Bailey's chief political lieutenants in the state.
3. The indifferent support given the administration by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, now attempting to show the country that it is possible to tour the United States in a motor trailer on $100.
4. The outspoken criticism of the Works Progress Administration as a "political set up" by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus when it was first announced, especially when it became evident that it would absorb an disproportionate share of the state Emergency Relief Administration, generally conceded to have been built up along political lines approved by the Governor.
5. The more recent criticism of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the AAA, especially the tobacco division, by Governor Ehringhaus in connection with his efforts to bring about better tobacco prices in the state.

No one knows the real facts, of course—but there may be some basis for this talk.

Tinder Box In Southeast Europe

By LOUIS A. MATZOLD

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP)—The political cooks of Europe, occupied in quenching the fire under the Hail-Ethiopian trouble pot, seemingly have forgotten another kettle in Southeastern Europe, which also may boil over.

Reports from the Bulgar-Turkish border have been especially disquieting to King Boris and his ministers.

Bulgaria has been obliged to stifle many aspirations since the world war. She lost territory in the Balkan wars ending in 1913, and what she ceded in 1919 brought the total up to nearly 20,000 square miles.

Wants Corridor to Sea.

The only hope of Bulgaria after the 1919 treaty of Neuilly was the promise of a port on the Aegean Sea. Sixteen years have passed, but Greece's offer to let Bulgaria use a small section of the harbor of Salonika has not been accepted here.

Bulgaria requested from Greece and from Turkey a neutral zone along the Greek-Turkish border—the so-called Maritza valley—with the port of Dedagatch (now Alexandropolis). To this Turks and Greeks strongly objected.

But this is only one angle. In the last districts of Macedonia and Thrace are many Bulgars who want to come back to their motherland. They say terrorism, anarchism and communism thrive there.

"Instead of getting the old Bulgars in dream fulfilled to regain all the west to the Albanian border, where 1,000 years ago the kings of Bulgaria had their capital at Ochrida, Serbia in 1913 drove the Bulgars back to the present borderline. Now efforts to establish a real friendship between Bulgaria and Yugoslavia fail because Bulgaria demands satisfaction on this border."

Turkey Holds Grievances.

Bulgaria also was hit hard by the loss of the Dobrutcha farm area to Rumania. "Never and nowhere will we acknowledge this robbery," still is a general expression of the Bulgars.

Another danger spot is the boundary between Bulgaria and Turkey. For three reasons: First, Turkey claims that Bulgaria was instigator of the first Balkan war whereby Turkey had to cede almost all its European territory and also Crete. Second, Turkey claims that among the 5,500,000 inhabitants of Bulgaria are 700,000 Moslem farmers who want to become Turkish subjects again. Turkey claims that these Moslems either are forced to join the Bulgarian orthodox church or leave Bulgaria, forfeiting their farms.

City Shrinks to Town.

The third trouble reason between the two nations is the historic city of Adrianople (now Edirne). It had a population of 120,000 before the world war, when it was one of the great trading centers of the Balkans. Today the population has dwindled to 18,000, mostly poor people.

The rich farming hinterland of the Bulgarian upper Maritza valley was cut off when Turkey, soon after the world war, marched into Adrianople again, and the farmers of Eastern Thrace have found a better market in Istanbul.

To get this strategic and economically important point back is therefore a desire of every Bulgarian.

A recent visit to Adrianople revealed the streets of the starving city filled with troops and war material. Along the railway lines, down to the port of Dedagatch, there were also Turkish soldiers, although the treaty of Neuilly provided for demilitarization of this region.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Financial market still was war conscious today but excited and securities generally added to recoveries of the previous session.

Overnight buying orders brought a fast opening in the stock division and gains of fractions to a point or more were scattered over a wide front. They also slowed later, however, although advances were well held.

Grains backed water moderately under further realizing while cotton pushed ahead. Rallying tendencies were evident in secondary bonds and Italian loans received support. Foreign exchange were rather steady.

Washington Daybook

Washington—Projects rather than patronage—

That in brief describes the change in routine which members of congress and politicians in general have undergone to a large extent since the advent of the "new deal" and billions in appropriations for public works.

There was when a senator or representative regarded patronage as his principal tool in mending political fences. It still is regarded as a most useful implement, one that is given the most careful attention, but projects probably have exceeded it from the standpoint of usefulness for the time being.

Approval by PWA of a dam across Potomac river or the creation of a municipal center at Squeed, is of tremendous importance politically. Those charged with the allocation of public works projects make every effort to discourage politics. Despite this fact, the folks back home continue to exert all the pressure they can on their representatives in congress.

They in turn, must at least make a show of doing something.

The 'Grind' Has Started

The mimeographs at headquarters of the two major parties in the capital have begun to turn at a speed which steadily will gain in acceleration during the months ahead, grinding out material for the '36 campaign.

The Democrats have just released in one blast a series of eight, different pamphlets ranging in size from one page to 32. They are intended for use this fall and winter of party supporters who have opportunity to make speeches.

These are only storm warnings indicative of the hurricane to follow.

Long's Senate Jobs Sought.

Huey P. Long hadn't been dead long before speculation arose on capitol hill as to who would get the late "kingfisher's" senate committee assignments.

Long's political friends to committees in the early part of his senate career but finally relented and accepted places on four. Two of them were important ones.
