Tokyo, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Japanese sources indicated today that the proposed autonomous state of North China will operate under Japanese control following its "declaration of independence," expected before the end of the week.

The Nanking correspondent of the Rengo (Japanese) news agency, reported that General Chiang Kai Shek, leader of the Chinese National government had decided to approve the projected autonomous federation of the five provinces of north China. This alleged decision, the correspondent said, resulted from a compromise speeches designed to "save his face."

These Japanese news dispatches from China indicated that the Japanese army professed readiness to fight anyone interfering with the autonomous office of north China was sufficient to make generalissimo Chiang and the Nanking government realize that such interference would be suicide.

The proposed new regime in north China is to be called the governing body of the north China anti-communist of the Chinese republic, thereby acknowledging the severing of the Chinese republic although there will be allegiance to the Nanking government. The new regime will continue to fly China's national flag of red, white and blue.

These gestures of non-allegiance are the "face saving" devices but the practical arrangements are regarded as insuring the five provinces will be divorced from the rest of China and will be drawn into Manchukuo, under the protection of the Japanese army.

The north China governing commission allegedly anti-communist arrangements will remain "in close cooperation with Japanese military authorities."

Teacher Takes Stand To Deny
Murdering Her Father

Wise, Va., Nov. 19.—(AP)—The defense rested today after Edith Maxwell, 21-year-old school teacher had testified in her own defense that she struck her father several blows with a shoe when he tried to whip her while in a "drunken frenzy."

She said she hit at him in the dark and did not know whether the blow landed on his head, much less inflicted the fatal injury which the state charges.

Answering the charge of murder, the girl said she tried frantically to ward off her father, Trigg Maxwell, after returning to the mountain cottage from a night trip to Wise with a friend.

"Papa don't stab me" she said she cried as Maxwell picked up a knife from the table after argument over her late hours. "He dropped the knife and grabbed me by the hair," she said.

She said she struggled with her father, fell over a chair and struck at her father several times with the heel of a slipper she picked up from the chair. She said she freed herself once in the struggle, but that her father grabbed her again by the shoulder.

She denied there had been any ill feeling between her and her father.

She testified the scratches and blue marks on her shoulder when she was arrested after her father's death.

Atlanta, Nov. 19.—(AP)—A movement by President Roosevelt, friends is underway to hold a Presidential Preferential primary in Georgia next year should the Fair Deal dominated state democratic committee fail to order one.

Roosevelt's Thanksgiving holiday "homecoming" visit to Georgia will give his supporter a rallying point.

The commission has power either to provide a primary or name delegates to the national convention. For a number of Presidential election years it has made provision for a primary.

Governor Eugene Talmadge, bitter critic of the new deal, is the Democratic National Committee man Georgia and both friends and opponents expect him to try to control the state delegation to the next party assembly.

New Morris of Marietta, a member of the committee, said today there are indications "the governor may endeavor to have the state committee elect delegates to the national convention without a primary."

"I have called together the friends of Mr. Roosevelt on the committee to discuss the situation," he said, "and to try to agree on plans to act in unison when the state committee is called into session and assure a primary if possible at that time."

Acting Mayor H. H. Duncan today issued an invitation to the citizens of Greenville to attend the meeting of the board of aldermen, to be held at 7:30 o'clock.

The board at a recent meeting asked the people of Greenville to express to the individual members their preference for mayor and a large number accepted the invitation and made known their desire for the position.

A number of prominent Greenville people have been mentioned as a possible successor to the late mayor and much speculation has been heard as to whom the board will name.

Washington, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Secretary put into effect today the increased 25 per cent differentials in favor of domestic materials on PWA projects and simultaneously drafted a memorandum to President Roosevelt award of contracts to German concerns on PWA projects.

The new 25 per cent differentials the PWA administrator said coincided with the treasury preference for domestic materials compared with the earlier 15 per cent differentials on steel purchases over $10,000.

"We had to get our facts first," reported Ickes, who last week said he would ask the Federal Trade Commission to determine whether there had been collusion in the high American bids for small amounts of steel on an ocean terminal at Morehead City, N. C., and the Triborough bridge in New York City.

He did not know the circumstances on the Triborough purchase, he said, but considered there was "prima facie evidence of collusion" in the identical bids on the Morehead City project.

"We have there four steel companies at different points, having to pay different rates, and their bids were identical by a strange coincidence," he remarked.

Senator Bailey Urges Use
Of Federal Housing FundReflector Bureau,
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Nov. 18.—North Carolinians have been very slow to avail themselves of the opportunity offered by the Federal Housing Administration to assist them in building new homes or in repairing their present homes, with the result that to date only about $1,500,000 has been loaned by this organization to persons in the state. Senator Joseph W. Bailey pointed out here today.

The Senator said he believes that this figure should be increased to at least $25,000,000 and will be as soon as the people of the state come to realize how simple it is to obtain loans from the banks 80 per cent of the funds requested, with the Government putting up the remaining 20 per cent. In event of default, the banks are to be paid first, the Government last. The Government is therefore in the nature of a second mortgage to the extent of 20 per cent of the loan.

1. To help the people of the country have better homes,
2. To help present home owners provide needed repairs and improvements.
3. To help the banks, by providing a greater outlet for safe loans.
4. To provide more work for the building trades—carpenters, plasterers, plumbers, brick masons, electricians, and so forth.

"The plan is quite simple," Senator Bailey points out. "The FHA merely seeks the aid of the banks in the community where the loan is requested in financing the operations of would-be home owners or of home owners and undertakes to obtain from the banks 80 per cent of the funds requested, with the Government putting up the remaining 20 per cent. In event of default, the banks are to be paid first, the Government last. The Government is therefore in the nature of a second mortgage to the extent of 20 per cent of the loan."

Cotton Program

For Coming YearAAA Officials Declare 1936 Contracts
Should Be in the Field
Within Two or Three Weeks

Washington, Nov. 19.—(AP)—With details of the 1936 cotton adjustment program practically complete, AAA officials today said the new contracts should be in the field within two or three weeks.

Contract signers who received the subsidy of more than two cents a pound on cotton produced this year under the Bankhead act, must sign an agreement to participate in the 1936 program.

The first subsidy payment probably will be made by the middle of December.

Officials asserted they expected the 1936 contracts to be in the field before any farmers are required to pledge cooperation in the program for next year.

It is not the intention of the AAA an official said, to require the farmer to sign a pledge "in the dark" without knowing details of the program. However, it was emphasized that once a pledge has been signed the producer will be obligated and no withdrawal will be permitted.

of His Army in
The Battle Field

(By Associated Press)

Application of sanctions against Italy by 51 nations of the world in accordance with League of Nations action was a signal for an Italian aerial attack on the Ethiopian forces on the northern front, which the fliers said resulted in 2,000 deaths among the native warriors.

A squadron of 20 airplanes led by Il Duce son-in-law, Count Ciano engaged in a pitched battle with the army of Emperor Haile Selassie just south of Makale.

The Ethiopians turned their entire anti-aircraft fire on the machine guns and bombing attack, from overhead and succeeded in bringing down the plane of Ciano who, however, escaped unhurt.

Before landing his disabled plane Ciano directed a double attack which Italians said led to the dispersal of 15,000 Ethiopian forces and gave the fascist troops one of the most important victories of the conflict.

Haile Selassie preparing to join his subjects at the front expressed doubt as to the efficacy of the sanctions. The ruler of the African empire said that while grateful for the imposition of the restrictions by the 51 nations he felt that hostilities never would have begun if such measures were of a force to prevent war.

The Emperor was more optimistic about the position of the Ethiopian army in the field, insisting Ethiopia has not yet met defeat and that had not pitted their full strength.

Official announcement of the war's progress made in Rome reported an advance of an Eritrean corps in Tembien region. It continued a considerable advance of Sunday and occupied several towns.

Press reports to Rome said the fascist scout and bombing operations had spread well into the strategic Harar and Jijjira regions, some of the planes passing over Dire Dawa. On the Addis Ababa Djibouti railway.

New Bern, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Edward Stanley, about 80, well-to-do, Jones county farmer, is dead and his son Herbert Stanley, 55, and his step-mother, Mrs. Edward Stanley, are in jail at Trenton, charged with the aged man's death.

Stanley, senior, was shot to death by his son while he slept in bed early Monday morning, Jones county officers said the younger man confessed. Mrs. Edward Stanley confessed to officers complicity in the crime. Both are held without privilege of bail.

Herbert Stanley first claimed self defense but later testified at a coroner's inquest that he killed his father to prevent the elder man shooting him later. Mrs. Stanley testified she knew of the planned shooting but that she remained on a back porch while the crime was committed. Domestic trouble was given as the cause.

No Consideration
For United States
From Italian Govt.

Rome, Nov. 19.—(AP)—An official government spokesman said today that the United States can expect no special consideration from Italy if the former adopts further restrictive measures in her neutrality policy.

The Italian spokesman said he could not state what specific measures Italy would take should the Washington government place an embargo on oil or other commodities which have not as yet been restricted from shipment to Italy.

He said, however, the Italian government would decide what measures to adopt when the occasion arises.

He made it plain there could be no exception to Italy's "eye for an eye" program.

"DEATH AFTER DARK"

"Of 36,000 motor fatalities last year, 20,000 occurred at night," writes Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, in an article in Liberty entitled "Death After Dark."

"The total economic waste of night-time automobile accidents is estimated at nearly one and a half billion dollars."

"Sixty-nine per cent of those killed are pedestrians."

"As a nation, we have failed to grasp the fact that as the sun goes down, so must our speed. We are simply too fast for our eyes."

Night driving, Governor Hoffman points out, involves three definite factors, each of which contributes to the hazard: 1, Overdriving our headlights; 2, Slow perception due to poor illumination; 3, The night pedestrian hazard. The first factor is probably the most important, inasmuch as it affects the other two. Governor Hoffman says that the average man is fortunate if he can see 100 feet clearly with his headlights. That is less than the distance required to stop from a speed of 35 miles per hour, on good pavement with first-class tires and brakes. If the night driver is traveling 60 not an uncommon speed on our highways today, that 100 feet of visibility will have been passed by the time he is able to even substantially lower his speed.

Thousands of us are driving 50 and 60 miles an hour in cars equipped with 30-mile headlights. One solution to that is better illumination for streets and highways — irrefutable figures, based on extensive tests, show that the saving in economic waste, to say nothing of the human waste, pays the cost of good lighting many times over. But it will be a long time before the average highway is lighted at all — and in the meantime, the only solution is to drive moderately if you wish to avoid "death after dark."

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman

SYNOPSIS: Although she is being tried for the murder of her husband, Anne Farnsworth is almost happy. For Teda Sorli, her old nurse, just has testified that Anne's name really is "Anne Farnsworth," that she was the legally adopted daughter of Luke and Luella Farnsworth. But she is by no means secure, for Tom Farley, her most bitter enemy, is assisting the district attorney, and she realizes that her lawyer's case is pitifully weak.

Chapter 39

WELCOME RETURN

"YOUR honor!"

Bedlam had arisen among the legal lions. All were before the bar, all clamoring for recognition.

Judge Benson looked down, rapped smartly for order. "The case will proceed," he said. "As long as the defendant waives the technicality and admits to both names, it will not be necessary to put the state to additional expense. Mr. Lenholm, call your witness."

Again Anne crossed to the witness chair, but this time the floor was as firm as her confidence. Instead of being nameless, she had two names; instead of parentless, there had been two who might have loved her had they lived. And most important of all, Luke Farnsworth hadn't neglected to make her his own, nor to protect her against the cupid of his own brother-in-law.

Anne told her story that afternoon, told it clearly and concisely. Unknowingly, the interruption of the morning had disrupted the State's plans. They had hoped to cross-examine her when she was tired from a day in court. As it was she completed her version of Lee Farnsworth's murder at five o'clock. But her cheeks were pale from the ordeal, and her lips trembled as Sharlee cried hysterically when she pictured the bullet passing her own head to lodge in the heart of her foster uncle.

Back in her cell, she sat with eyes bright. Everything seemed to fit like parts in a picture puzzle. Surely something would happen to prove her innocence. And she was Anne Farnsworth, Annikki Nielsen Farnsworth, part Finnish like John.

At the thought of John her face clouded. Quiser he had never come near the courthouse. But she believed in him. She had to believe in him, just as she had in Luke. Lenholm had warned her that on the morrow would come the hardest day of her trial. It was then the State and the special prosecutor, Tom Farley, would seek to cut the mesh of her neatly woven story with sharp questions. They would try to destroy every vestige of truth.

Grey clouds blanketed the window when she awakened. Tomorrow, she would know her fate. She arose, dressed carefully in a warm suit of golden brown, then brushed her hair until it shone. She added a touch of rouge and lipstick to protect her from revealing her emotions to curious eyes.

Court convened, and Anne went immediately to the witness chair to face the district attorney.

He plunged into his cross-examination. "Miss Farnsworth, you say you have never before seen the gun filed here as exhibit A, and yet it has been established that your foster father had it in his possession for several years. I suppose you have some explanation for that?"

"I had no occasion to see it," Anne answered readily.

"WELL let that drop for the present, Miss Farnsworth, you say that while you were in the boat at the scene of the murder, someone called your name. Will you repeat what happened at that moment?"

"I was about to jump up on the wharf, when someone called 'Anne.'"

"That's all, Miss Farnsworth, you are positive the name used was Anne?"

"Yes."

holm," the district attorney is asking the defendant to give an answer calling for a deduction upon her part. I believe she should have the right to qualify her answer, and give her reason for arriving at that deductive answer."

"You may answer in full, Miss Farnsworth."

Anne remembered her days at school, the confusion of angles and triangles, and remembering these, she faced the court with astonishment.

"If," she began hesitatingly, "if that bullet had been fired from a point below me and behind me, aimed at me, and missed me, it would have continued at an upward angle and struck Lee Farnsworth—" she paused, horrified at the thought.

"Do you mean you have some enemy among the Finnish people who have stood by you so loyally? That one of these, perhaps one of the Sorli brothers, broke into your house and stole your gun—"

"No," Anne interrupted with scant regard for court courtesy. "That gun has never been in my home nor in my possession."

She saw Lenholm lean back with a sigh of relief, and realized she had been baited, but by sheer honesty had evaded the trap.

"The shot, you yourself admit, must have been fired from within a few feet of the boat on which you stood. Miss Farnsworth, answer this question. Did you fire that shot?"

"She did not!"

A huge voice boomed out from the door. Anne looked up. She saw Judge Ansel Kellogg thrust his bulk into the crowd gathered there, saw the sheriff follow, and behind them came other officers, in uniform.

THEY spread along the railing, covered every exit, and remained motionless while the big man proceeded through the room to face Judge Benson.

"If the court please, and with the permission of the district attorney and Mr. Lenholm, I wish to present fresh evidence in this case, which I feel will prove the innocence of the defendant, Anne Farnsworth, my client."

The judge on the bench eyed his colleague a moment, looked at Tom Farley, who had arisen and seemed about to launch a harangue against the intrusion, then looked at Anne Farnsworth.

"Would you like a recess in which to consult with the defendant or Mr. Lenholm?" he asked, and it seemed to Anne he was pleased with the turn of events, which had left her wide eyed with hope and amazement.

Anne watched Judge Kellogg as he shook his head. "I need no conference with either, I desire that the trial go on without pause."

"Very well, proceed Mr. District Attorney."

The district attorney looked at Judge Kellogg, then at Judge Benson. "Mr. Kellogg has spoken of fresh evidence. I believe it would be advisable to hear that at this time. I yield to Mr. Kellogg."

"That will be all, Anne," The judge nodded to her, and as she passed on her way to her chair he patted her shoulder and smiled.

Immediately Ansel Kellogg asked for one Leighton Jones to be called as witness, and a moment later a tall, grim-visaged man appeared at the door. Anne started. "Buttons," she whispered. The man looked down and smiled, then went on to the witness chair.

"Your name?" asked the clerk.

"Jones, sir, Leighton Jones, but known to the family as Buttons."

"What family, Mr. Jones?" asked Kellogg.

"The family of the late Luke Farnsworth, sir. I worked for him for fifteen years."

"Then you know the defendant in this case?"

"I do sir, and a finer little lady—" "I understand and agree," interrupted Kellogg laughing. "Buttons, when did you leave the Farnsworth home?"

"As soon as those people made it so uncomfortable Miss Anne had to leave. None of us would stay on, sir."

"How soon after she left did you leave?"

"The next day, sir, March eleventh it was, sir."

Judge Kellogg turned to Lenholm, then to the clerk of the court and asked for exhibit A. With the revolver in his hand he showed it to the witness. "Have you ever seen this weapon before?"

"Yes sir," declared the man emphatically. "Many times, sir. Mr. Luke always kept that in his room, in the bottom drawer of his chest-drawer where he kept his pajamas."

vel's eager young satellites—and some elderly ones—are saying harsh things about Attorney General Cummings' selections for the federal bench. They charge privately that he is sentencing the New Deal to a judicial death.

Dyed-in-the-wool believers realize that Rooseveltian reforms face a constant threat in the courts. They scan the newspapers a breakfast for reports that a Republican judge has resigned. If they had their pick, they would fill vacancies with Frankfurter "hot dogs" in their thirties. Then they would be confident that they had friends at court for the next generation.

Mr. Cummings doesn't hold with the idea of "catching them young." He is recommending Democrats as old-fashioned as himself. Some have been notoriously out of sympathy with White House schemes. He has also passed over "liberals" endorsed by Progressives like Hiram Johnson. The President's idolaters can't understand why he honors these recommendations so unquestioningly. But it isn't political crick for youngsters to criticize a Cabinet member, though some threaten to.

BOYCOTT: the nation's big ship-builders gave no public explanation of their refusal to enter bids for construction of a second Leviathan. But those in the know say it coming.

The industries involved—stately especially—have special reasons for not agreeing to live up to NRA wage, hours and working standards, as they would have to do under the proposed contract. Their researchers have discovered that more than 3,000 different articles go into the making of a vessel. Every subcontractor and firm from which the builder bought materials would have to subscribe to NRA. That would extend federal regulation over countless industries and upset their plant arrangements.

What Washington wonders is whether the ship-makers will apply the same boycott to naval vessels—and what a navy-minded administration can do about it. If they should, President Roosevelt will have a grand sailing talk against this particular sort of emulism.

NEW YORK
By James M. Mullin

AMENABLE: While no one believes the United States government has made any definite commitments to foreign nations, New York shapers are indicating that certain monetary policies are being worked out consistently that Britain and France can be reasonably assured they will continue.

One is a decision not to devalue the dollar further in terms of gold unless international conditions create some emergency; not now frozen. Another is that the Treasury will keep on buying enough silver to maintain the world price of the metal at or near its present level—at least until Congress authorizes a change in policy. Both of these are helpful in maintaining a de facto stability among the world's principal currencies.

Well-posted sources understand further that the chances for an official stabilization agreement have not ably improved in recent weeks. Washington and Paris have privately been ready to talk turkey for some time. Word is that London will be much more amenable with the conservative safely returned to power.

UNITE: Financial leaders also expect another alteration in British policy now that the election attitude toward other nations on more realistic lines.

This will probably involve a strengthening of the entente with France. Dage done by the disagreement about sanctions must be repaired. British authorities say privately that it would be extremely dangerous to cultivate isolation and that a tie-up must be made with either France or Germany before Germany is ready to cut loose. France is rated vastly preferable—both for military and economic reasons. Moreover, it's doubtful whether English public sentiment would stand for a brother act with the Nazis at present.

Chances are that France will be responsive to friendly overtures. She also must unite with either Britain or Germany for her own safety. Despite her resentment at "British dictation" in the Italian crisis, John Bull still looks much the more promising as an ally.

INFLATION: Not all economic analysts agree with the general prognosis that further inflation is inevitable. Some New York sources whose backgrounds command respect for their views go so far as to say that real inflation is impossible unless the government decides—which is most unlikely—to give the printing presses a work-out.

This contention is based on the premise that—no matter how enormous the credit base—there can be no credit inflation without an incredible increase in business turnover. It is pointed out that business would have to be three times as active as it is at present to restore the velocity of business transactions to its normal relation to the nation's stock of monetary metals.

BLAME: New York learns that the administration is planning to abolish processing taxes without waiting for a Supreme Court ruling on their validity. Farm benefits would of course continue but would be paid out of the Treasury's general fund. Then, if food prices continue to mount, the blame will not be so specifically pinned on taxes for which the New Deal must accept full responsibility.

St. Peter's Parish of Washington extends to Greenville people a most cordial invitation to go down and hear Mrs. Proctor sing.

Achievement Day.

An unusually large number of Home Demonstration Club women met at the Greenville Woman's Club building last Friday for "Achievement Program." The meeting was presided over, in a very interesting manner, by our president, Mrs. B. L. Tyson. After song and vocation, Mrs. J. R. Lewis read the minutes of the last meeting. During the business session many important subjects were discussed, one of special interest was the pledge to give to Jane S. McKimmon's Loan Fund $10.00, and as much more as we can possibly collect. This fund is used as an educational loan to aid rural girls in pursuing their studies in home economics at college, therefore we deem it a great privilege to be able to help in this worthy cause.

Greetings and a report from North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs were brought to us by Mrs. J. Brooks Tucker, state federation president. We feel proud of Mrs. Tucker, she being a Pitt county woman, and always enjoy the messages she brings to us. She stressed very strongly the Jane S. McKimmon Loan Fund. From her report we learned that the club work is continually going forward.

Next in order were club reports and roll call. The response from each club was very fine indeed. Red Banks Club received the prize for having 100 per cent reports handed in. Red Oak Club had the largest number of members present. Farmville had the largest per cent of her members present, out of an enrollment of 19 members, 18 were present. Pierce followed closely by having 18 present out of 20 members.

R. C. Deal, of East Carolina Teachers College, gave us a splendid talk on "Progress," showing the advancements that have been made by the enlightened nations. He proved to us that it is a desire to have something better than we already have that makes civilization. These words were very encouraging to club women, for "progress in the most economical way" is our goal.

At noon hour a picnic dinner was served. Many of the club women's husbands joined us at that time. Mrs. B. L. Tyson conducted several contests which were entertaining, and afforded much fun and laughter.

In the afternoon a song contest was held. Red Banks Club won first place, while Stokes Club came second. We also had a home-made soap exhibit, in which Mrs. W. F. Carroll won first place and Mrs. Oscar Hardee second. Awards of merit were given to Mrs. Hassell Mayo, Mrs. Pittman and Mrs. Tyler.

Miss Nice used a very impressive candle-lighting service in the recognition of the old officers and installation of the new. The new officers are as follows: Mrs. B. L. Tyson, president; Mrs. Coy Forbes, vice-president; Mrs. Herman Baker, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Godfrey Evans, reporter.

This ends the work of Pitt County Home Demonstration Club work for the year 1935. Through cooperation we hope for more and better work in the coming year than in the past, thereby attaining our main purpose.—Reported.

The Child and the Book

By CHRISTOPHER MORLEY
Last night, a warm clear summer evening, I took a stroll up a queer little street here in Philadelphia, in an odd tangle of forlorn brick alleys that lie off one of the oldest squares in the city. In the hush of the after-supper hour, with the blue dusk filtering up the channels of streets, and a burning fever of color still in the sky far overhead, I came upon a quiet, clean narrow byway of two-story houses. They were very neat, with woodwork painted white and tiny white marble steps on a little causeway of brick pavement. It was quite literally an alley—a place for walking, no thoroughfare for vehicles, as the space between the houses was not over ten feet wide. There was something about that tiny street that caught at my heart. Its humility and its pathetic cleanliness, its honest simplicity, the mullin curtains at the small windows, still showing the folds of the ironing; the box of geraniums at one doorway; the little green pump in the middle of the alley where some urchins were playing in the overflow of water.

On the doorstep of one of these houses I found a little girl reading. She was, I guess, about nine years old. All round her, children were playing noisy games, but she was bent over her book, absorbed and carried away.

shall I say I love—I can never see anyone reading a book without a passion to find out, by means foul or fair, what it is. So I stopped and said, "Well, Sister, what are you reading?"

"Story," she said, looking up with a clear, radiant smile, not in the least frightened or abashed.

"What story?" I said.

She showed me the book. It was "Fifty Old Stories Retold." I didn't see the name of the reteller, but the title of the story in which her small mind was swimming was "The Three Other Wise Men of Gotham." I knew there had been three Wise Men of Gotham but these Other Three were new to me.

I was intensely eager to sit down beside her and read with her, but I was half afraid someone would come out of the house and think I was a kidnaper; and also my cursed shyness intervened. (I am always at a loss with children, unless I know them well.) So I went on my way, with the regretful feeling that I was missing a chance to look into the clear spring of a child's mind, and see reflected in that pure mirror the enchanting outlines of wonder and delight.

In the soiled little book she had shown me was the label of a Public Library, and I thought that nothing could ever repay the people who founded and conducted that library for the service they were rendering. Here, in this poor little street, lost in the heat and strident clamor of a great city, a child had escaped from the cage, into the free and windclean open spaces, into fairy land.

Is there anything on earth more touching than a child reading? The innocence and completeness with which the child's spirit is rendered up to the book, its utter absorption and forgetfulness, make this a sight that always moves me strangely. A child does not read to criticize or compare, but just in the unselfish joy of finding itself in a new world. To see a youngster reading in the slums is to me the most subtly heart-searching experience I know. And behind every such child is the heart and brain of some teacher or librarian that made the book possible and put it into his hand. That is one thing that librarians do, and it is the greatest thing I know.

LOWER RATES ARE EXPECTED

Further Reduction by Carolina Power Co. Shortly

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Nov. 19.—A further reduction in rates for electricity, especially to small consumers served by the Carolina Power and Light Co., will be ordered within the next few days by the State Commission, it was indicated today by Utilities Commissioner Stanley Winborne.

A few details still remain to be worked out, so that the new figures cannot yet be announced. But Commissioner Winborne indicated that the reduction will be considerable and that small consumers, especially domestic consumers, will benefit more than any other class.

"When we approved the so-called inducement rate a year or so ago, it was with the understanding that the company was merely trying out this plan," Commissioner Winborne said. "Now we are planning to order a new basic rate that will be down in the neighborhood of the inducement rate. We are also going to try to simplify the entire rates structure, especially for domestic users, so that everybody can use more electricity at a smaller cost than at present. We also hope to eliminate the several different schedules of charges for different types of service, so that the same rates will apply to every one."

The new rates, when put into effect, will apply to more than 100 cities and towns in the state served by the Carolina Power and Light Co., and bring a saving to hundreds of thousands of customers, since the company serves a large territory in the western part of the state, including Asheville, as well as numerous cities and towns in the Piedmont and eastern section.

The reduction in rates ordered by the Utilities Commission a year or so ago brought about a reduction of about $154,000 a year to patrons of the C. P. & L. Co., and this new reduction is expected to bring about an even larger saving, it was indicated.

The Nazi workers' organization, "Power Through Joy," made real trips possible this past summer for 133,000 Germans.

New York, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady, 1 to 4 lower with steeper Liverpool cables offset by hedge selling and liquidation.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Wall street viewed the stock market perched on the highest pinnacle in four years—with a trace of uneasiness today.

Prices continued to push up, and here and there some issues were up a point or two, many up fractions. But buying was unusually selective and many of the recent leaders, notably on steel and motors, were all but neglected. Brokers said sentiment was still bullish, but that the recent advance had been so steep as to inspire caution. Transactions approximated 2,600,000 shares. The late time was firm.

GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!

THE TOWERS OF MANHATTAN

from a new angle—New York's new Triborough Bridge, which is rapidly being completed. In the foreground: Howard Hougland, McClintic-Marshall engineer, wearing the picturesque engineers' "hard hat," a necessary protection on big jobs. "An engineer's life," he says, "calls for physical fitness and energy. When my pep is at low ebb, there's nothing like a Camel, for a Camel chases away all signs of tiredness. I always get a 'lift' with a Camel. I have preferred Camels for years because of their good taste and mildness. They never irritate my throat. That's one way you can tell Camels are made from more expensive tobaccos."

"I'VE WON A COUPLE of world championships in the rodeo game," says Dick Shelton, all-around cowboy. "After a tough event—or any time I'm tired—I get a 'lift' in energy with a Camel. And a mighty pleasing, cozy smoke it is, too!"

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

• Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

"I AM A STEEL WORKER
on the Triborough Bridge," says Ben Parsons, as he enjoys a Camel. "Like so many of the bridge men, I smoke Camels. If I feel tired, I get a 'lift' with a Camel. And Camels have all the full flavor anybody could want."
