WALLACE ASKS ECONOMISTS TO HELP PROGRAM

Calls on Economists of Nation to Help Graft Glands

SOCIAL CONTROL IS PRESCRIBED

Secretary Says Neither Federal Government Nor Farmers Bound to Parity

New York, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace called on the nation's economists today to help graft some new glands on "old man" capitalism and thus save him from "senility".

The glands he prescribed are "social control"—or planning. Pointing to the "rise of dictatorship" in other lands, he said some social controls are inevitable but that this "does not necessarily mean that they must take the form of dictatorship in America."

He suggested that economists "stimulate Agriculture, labor, and industry to work together to bring about increased balanced production of goods at proper prices." Wallace raised the question whether parity, the standard used in AAA crop adjustment programs, will serve satisfactorily as a permanent thing. Parity in general means a price for farm production which represented the same purchasing power for the farmers in 1909 through 1914.

"I am sure," he said at another point "that neither the federal government nor the farmer will want to stand very long for a parity price program for a commodity if it would mean the production of a sub-normal quantity of goods for the public and reduced net income for farmers."

Betty Gow States She Will Decline Lindbergh Offer

Nurse of Kidnaped and Slain Son of Famous Flyers Says She Offered Job As Nurse

Glasgow, Scotland, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Betty Gow told the Associated Press today that Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh have asked her to work for them again "but I don't think I'll go."

The little Scottish nurse in charge of the first Lindbergh baby when he was kidnapped and slain interviewed on the top deck of a Glasgow street car while she was going to work in a dress shop this morning.

She disclosed the invitation from her former employers as the Lindberghs' with their second son, were nearing Liverpool aboard a cargo steamer seeking a rainy and secure life in England.

Miss Gow, a star witness at the New Jersey trial of the baby's condemned slayer, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, indicated she would continue to work at the dress shop. She said she had heard from the Lindberghs and that they had asked her to reenter their employ.

"But I don't think I'll go," she said. "All I want to do now is to be allowed to live a normal life."

Hero of World War Dies In Hospital at San Francisco, Cal.

Lieutenant General Hunter Liggett, 78, Had Been in Hospital Since January of This Year

San Francisco, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Lieutenant General Hunter Liggett, 78, one-time Indian fighter, hero of the Marne and commander of the army of occupation in Germany died today in Letterman hospital at the Presidio here.

General Liggett had been in the hospital since January, 1935.

One of the two men given ranks of Lieutenant-General in active overseas service during the world war, the General was in command of 1,000,000 of the A. E. F. and the French armies.

He commanded the first American army corps to take its place in the fighting lines in France and his brilliant record led to his being placed by General John J. Pershing at the head of the first American army on October 16, 1918, just before the November "big push" and the war's close. Later he was assigned to command the American army of occupation at Coblenz, Germany.

Carolinas Dig Out From Another Heavy Snowfall

Traffic Virtually at Standstill Throughout Two States as Heaviest Fall Since 1930 Blankets Many Sections

(By The Associated Press)

The larger part of the two Carolinas today sought to dig out from under five to 13 inches of snow—the heaviest fall for many places since 1930.

Bus and motor traffic was virtually at a standstill, school vacations were prolonged in some cities and trolley cars ceased to run at Charlotte and elsewhere.

Highway crews of the two states worked feverishly to clear the main roads. In some cities unemployed were put to work clearing streets and sidewalks.

The ermine blanket lay over all western and Piedmont North Carolina and the upper and central part of South Carolina. Only the southern most part of South Carolina escaped.

In North Carolina the reopening of school was postponed in Wake, Durham, Guilford, and Wilson counties.

The heaviest fall of snow in the two states was at Mount Mitchell in western North Carolina where it was 20 inches deep.

Except for Elizabeth City none of the east cities reported snow. Wilmington, however, had rain blasts and heavy sleet.

Trains generally were behind schedules as all crews had been warned to proceed with caution.

Travel throughout the states was at a minimum and accidents were few. An icy pavement accounted for one highway fatality near St. Paul, S. C.

Relief From Cold Expected As Warm Sun Starts Duty

Snowfall Saturday Night Four Inches In Depth

RIVER IS FROZEN OVER NEAR CITY

Lowest Temperature Last Night of 17 Rises to 24 by Eight O'clock in Morning

Partial relief from the extreme cold weather that has gripped Greenville for the past week or two was looked for this week, following a four inch snow Saturday night, the second in a week.

B. T. Clark, in charge of the local weather bureau, reported that the snow which began falling late Saturday night amounted to four inches, or an inch and three-quarters less than the fall of yesterday a week ago when five and three-fourths inches fell. The snow of Sunday, a week ago, had not melted before the last fall.

The walks and streets were covered with frozen snow, sleet and rain this morning causing the most hazardous threat to traffic this winter. The sun came out on scheduled time, however, and the freeze began melting somewhat.

Although the official low reading of the thermometer for the 24 hours ending at eight o'clock this morning was 17 degrees, several degrees above the low of 13 established last week, Mr. Clark reported that the Tar river at the railroad bridge froze over.

At eight o'clock this morning the mercury stood at 24 degrees and continued a gradual decline throughout the day as the warm sun began melting the ice and snow.

LINDY FAMILY NEARING PORT

Steamer With Lindberghs Expected to Dock Tomorrow

London, Dec. 30.—(AP)—The press association reported today the American Importer carrying the Lindberghs to England had arrived off Liverpool and was expected to dock between 7 p. m. and 10:00 p. m. tonight (between 2 p. m. and 5 p. m. Eastern Standard Time.)

London, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Reports to port officials indicated today the cargo Steamer, American Importer bearing Colonel and Mrs. Charles L. Lindbergh and their year-old son, Jon, to the quiet of the English countryside would dock at Liverpool early tomorrow without calling at any other port.

A stiff gale over Atlantic shipping lanes and the British sea tossed up rough seas in the route of the American Importer. The disturbed area extended 500 to 600 miles west of Ireland.

Despite the winter seas authorities indicated the vessel would reach Liverpool between 6:30 a. m. (1:30 a. m. EST.) and 8 and (3 a. m. EST.) Tuesday.

A possibility that the Colonel, his wife and Jon, who sailed from New York a week ago Sunday ostensibly to seek seclusion and to escape kidnap threats against the child, might disembark before the Importer reached Liverpool still was not ruled out by authorities.

German Farm Boys Study Crops

Berlin (AP)—Veterinary science and agriculture are the most popular subjects, and theology the least elected study, among sons of hereditary farmers in German universities. Only 3.32 per cent of the student bodies come from the farm, but from this percentage come 52 per cent of the members of the student fraternities.

JOINT EFFORTS UNDERWAY TO ALIGN EUROPE

European Collective Security System is Sought

FRANCE, BRITAIN LAYING PLANS

Two Countries Seeking to Bring Germany in Line Political Debates Indicate

Paris, Dec. 30.—(AP)—A joint effort by France and Britain to bring Germany into a European collective security system was forecast today in semi-official reactions to the recent Paris and London foreign policy debates.

Premier Pierre Laval definition in the Chamber of Deputies of France's attitude toward Germany was based entirely on a collective security system and Prime Minister Baldwin's similar references in the House of Commons were interpreted as the end of independent negotiation with the Reich.

(The Garmen Press greeted Premier Laval's declaration urging Franco-German understanding with lengthy comment but most newspapers seemed skeptical that it "would stand testing.")

(The Reich press pointed out that Laval wanted to make friends with Germany and Russia simultaneously and held this to be contradictory, asserting Franco-Russian friendship would be against Germany.)

References were made in the semi-official Temps to recent visits by Britain's ambassador Sir Eric Phipps to Adolf Hitler and other Berlin officials as attempts to confirm British apprehension over growing German dominance.

The newspaper said the British ambassador told the Nazi government no further agreements would be made with Germany except on terms of collective security.

AID SOUGHT OF SOVIET HEADS

Mongolian Republic Minister Visits Moscow Leaders

Moscow, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Prime Minister Gen-Dun of the Outer Mongolian people's republic visiting Moscow with the Mongolian minister to confer with Soviet leaders expressed hope today that Russia would aid the republic against any Japanese invasion.

With border incidents and alleged threats of Japanese invasion bringing the situation in Outer Mongolia to an acute stage, the Prime Minister charged that Japan were preparing to make Outer Mongolia a "second Manchoukuo."

If the Japs succeeded in taking Mongolia, he asserted in an interview, "It would be easy to prepare an attack on the Soviet union and further attacks on China."

Gen-Dun insisted the Mongolians have tried for six months to reach an agreement to prevent border conflicts along the frontier between the Soviet influenced people's republic and the Japanese advised state of Manchoukuo.

Instead of reconciliation, he said, "We have been informed that more raids are being prepared."

SCENARIO: FDR has been more cagey, more wary than ever before in the pre-congressional period. He parries questions or flatly refuses to answer. He is less nonchalant, less friendly, in his relations with the press. Some suspect that he is repressing increasing editorial criticism—a note struck by his friend, d. Merchant Filene of Boston, in a recent speech.

LEADERS SEE LONG SESSION

Byrns and Bankhead Discourage Hopes Brief Congress

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Amid the wishful predictions of many politicians for a short session of congress and an early adjournment to the campaign fields, the two highest ranking house officers have dropped utterances approaching cold discouragement.

It is customary, even traditional, for the leaders to say pleasantly that they expect everybody to be able to go home early, even if they cannot say it with real hope. But this time precedent takes a setback from Speaker Byrns himself and from his right-hand man, the Democratic leader, Bankhead of Alabama.

What these two men say on the question of adjournment is most authoritative, as they will go a long way toward outlining the House's entire program. Thus, it must have given a chill to the optimistic when Bankhead frankly held off from forecasting a short session, made it known that his prediction was far something just about the opposite, and Speaker Byrns disclaimed any intention of applying the "gag" rule to House deliberations.

Aside from the prospect of long debate that would accompany an entirely free house there is a problem lying comparatively quietly below a mass of domestic legislation that may prove a real and heavy obstacle to a quick session. That is the question of neutrality. Its potentialities for long controversy have been overlooked in some quarters; but some observers believe a major storm may be gathering over it.

It was only at considerable alarm that the leadership was able last congress, in an atmosphere of weariness and among the members to stave off a much more rigid "hands-off" policy than was finally adopted in the temporary measure then enacted and expiring in February.

Lautares Store Damaged In Early Morning Blaze

Loss Estimated at Between $3,000 and $4,000.

FIRE CONFINED SECOND STORY

Origin Thought to Be Either Cook Stove or Carbonator on Top Floor

Fire which broke out shortly after eleven o'clock last night did damage to Lautares Candy Palace estimated at between $3,000 and $4,000 before it was brought under control.

Neither the management nor firemen were able to definitely determine the exact cause, but it was thought the fire started either from a cooking stove or the carbonator on the second floor.

The blaze was confined to the second story of the building and the stock and equipment on the first floor was hardly damaged at all. Management of the store announced the place would be reopened either Wednesday or Thursday. The carbonator, which will have to be replaced, was said to be about the biggest single damage. Other equipment on the second floor was ruined, however.

Firemen reached the fire shortly after it broke out and despite the cold weather, were able to bring it under control in about two hours. Chief George Gardner of the fire department, said none of his men was hurt in fighting the fire.

The fire chief said water in the hose was kept from freezing by running it continuously. Although the fire was extinguished in about two hours after it broke out, two firemen were kept on duty all night to guard against any stray sparks possibly rekindling the blaze.

Some water leaked to the ground floor but did little actual damage. The damage was covered by insurance, the management said.

Chief Gardner said that everything "went off nicely." It was the only major fire during the present bad weather.

Football Stars To Be Guests of Rotary Club

About 30 football stars and coaches representing various Eastern North Carolina high schools will be guests at the regular meeting of the Rotary club at its meeting tonight.

The football players are training here for the inaugural Tobacco Bowl football game between players from Eastern and Western North Carolina. The game will be played at Winston-Salem on New Year's Day.

ITALIANS LOS SUNDAY FIGHT TO ETHIOPIANS

Emperor Selassie Orders Determined Operations

ANOTHER MAJOR FIGHT EXPECTED

Premier Mussolini Lays Fresh Plan For Pursuit of East African Campaign

(By The Associated Press)

Premier Mussolini's black troops lost 52 Italian and native soldiers in a Sunday battle at Ulu, said a government announcement at Rome today as Ethiopia apparently flung itself into the conflict determined to thwart the enemy advance with large scale military operations.

The Italian communiqué added "heavy Ethiopian losses" occurred. While Emperor Haile Selassie consolidated his forces in the north for what was declared in dispatches from Addis Ababa as the major counter offensive by Ethiopian plans in the three months-old war, Premier Mussolini laid fresh plans for the pursuit of his campaign east Africa in a cabinet meeting.

He told his ministers the Franco-British peace terms, now defined were "very far unsatisfactory" minimum requirements of Italy, specially regarding the security frontiers and of Italian citizens.

The French parliamentary debate over foreign policy resulted in the resignation of former Premier Andre Tardieu from the Republic center party which he once led.

Addis Ababa, capital city of Ethiopia, reported from Dessalegn that at last the King of Kings ordered his warriors to battle invaders on something more than a skirmish basis.

For more than a fortnight Ethiopians have become increasingly bold in coming to close grips with the Italian warriors and word from Addis Ababa said vast enemy movement apparently threatening the fascist forces under Marshal Pietro Badoglio.

Ethiopian government officers estimated they had 400,000 men in the northern front under five commanders for this, the critical stage of the war. Some of the bitter fighting of the three-month campaign was predicted for coming week.

HIGHWAY WORK EMPLOYS MANY

Seven Thousand Relief Clients Work On Roads

Reflector Bureau
Sir Walter Hume
Raleigh, Dec. 30.—At least 7,000 men, formerly on relief or unemployed who register with the National Reemployment Service, are now employed by the State Highway Public Works Commission, by highway contractors building roads, the highway commission, or by Works Progress Administration farm-to-market roads being built under the supervision of the highway department. Chief Highway Engineer W. Vance Baise said today.

"All of these 7,000 or more are in addition to our regular time employees and maintenance forces," Baise said. "Their employment has been made possible by the special appropriation of $1,500,000 a year by the last general assembly, to be used only employing former relief clients unemployed who need jobs, by Federal emergency highway construction program and grade of nation work, and by the WPA."

Some of these workers have either obtained direct from the relief or through the Reemployment Service.

The best workers are those who were unemployed but who had been on relief, while the poorest workers are those which were on the relief rolls. Baise said.

GROUP ASKING LOWER RATES

Merchants Seeking Reduction in Electric Current

Reflector Office, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Dec. 30.—The merchants of North Carolina, at least in the area served by the Duke Power Company, are being forced to pay excessive and discriminatory rates for the electric current they use.

It is then transmitted to the senate by message where it is referred by the Vice President to the proper committee. The senate committee reports it out, the senators debate it and return it to the house either with or without amendments.

The house again considers the bill with the senate amendments, if any and sends it to conference for a settlement of differences between the two houses.

If the conferees agree and the two houses concur in their agreement the bill is enrolled on parchment, examined by the committee on enrolled bills, and signed by the Speaker and Vice President.

It is sent then to the White House for either the President's approval or veto. If vetoed, a two-thirds vote of each house is necessary for ultimate passage.

When approved by the President the bill is deposited with the secretary of state. When the two houses have passed a bill notwithstanding the President's objections, the presiding officer of the house which acts on it last transmits it to the secretary of state.

(Tomorrow—The 'Third House')

The petitioners are advised, believe so or allege that the present commercial lighting rate schedule of the Duke Power Company is excessive and discriminatory against merchants using electric current in this rate is considerably higher than the rate charged residential consumers, the petition states.

"Your petition is further advised and believes that the commercial rate, instead of being higher than that charged for residential purposes, should be considerably lower."

The petition filed by the merchants association further contends that the present commercial rate of the Duke Power Company "unfairly, illegally and unjustly gives a few large commercial consumers a rate for their electric current which is considerably lower than that given to the majority of commercial users" in that out of 14,000 commercial consumers only 397 use more than 1,000 kwh monthly. The petition further alleges that the present residential rate of the Duke Power Company is too high.

First Hint
The first hint of this state of affairs came in Mr. Roosevelt's recent disclosure that the $500,000,000 public works bill to go before the new congress is to be vastly different in important respects from predecessors. In the past such funds have been provided in huge lump sums by congress for expenditure substantially as the administration—meaning the President in last analysis—might see fit. Now, Mr. Roosevelt has made plain he wants congress itself to appropriate for specific projects.

That means the power—and the responsibility—for selection of projects will return in large measure to Capitol Hill.

The second straw in the wind is seen in a carefully prepared analysis by AAA economists asserting that the farmer's income had been boosted to the relative point it occupied in 1929—the year before the great debate. Examining this statement further, observers found AAA really was saying, also, that the administration had done about as much as it could do, standing alone, to improve the farmers' position. Further improvement, it was held, must come through greater demand for farmers products through increased industrial payrolls.

After a bill has been introduced in the house of representatives—it begins a journey beset by some twenty or more possible hurdles any one of which may prevent it becoming law.

First the bill is referred by the Speaker to a standing or select committee where it is given a number and ordered to be printed. Then the committee may report the bill out for a place on the house calendar.

The house as a "committee of the whole" debates the bill, has it read a second time, then engrosses it, reads it a third time and votes on its passage.

It then is transmitted to the senate by message where it is referred by the Vice President to the proper committee. The senate committee reports it out, the senators debate it and return it to the house either with or without amendments.

The house again considers the bill with the senate amendments, if any and sends it to conference for a settlement of differences between the two houses.

First the bill is referred by the Speaker to a standing or select committee where it is given a number and ordered to be printed. Then the committee may report the bill out for a place on the house calendar.

The house as a "committee of the whole" debates the bill, has it read a second time, then engrosses it, reads it a third time and votes on its passage.

It then is transmitted to the senate by message where it is referred by the Vice President to the proper committee. The senate committee reports it out, the senators debate it and return it to the house either with or without amendments.

The house again considers the bill with the senate amendments, if any and sends it to conference for a settlement of differences between the two houses.

If the conferees agree and the two houses concur in their agreement the bill is enrolled on parchment, examined by the committee on enrolled bills, and signed by the Speaker and Vice President.

It is sent then to the White House for either the President's approval or veto. If vetoed, a two-thirds vote of each house is necessary for ultimate passage.

When approved by the President the bill is deposited with the secretary of state. When the two houses have passed a bill notwithstanding the President's objections, the presiding officer of the house which acts on it last transmits it to the secretary of state.

The petitioners are advised, believe so or allege that the present commercial lighting rate schedule of the Duke Power Company is excessive and discriminatory against merchants using electric current in this rate is considerably higher than the rate charged residential consumers, the petition states.

"Your petition is further advised and believes that the commercial rate, instead of being higher than that charged for residential purposes, should be considerably lower."

The petition filed by the merchants association further contends that the present commercial rate of the Duke Power Company "unfairly, illegally and unjustly gives a few large commercial consumers a rate for their electric current which is considerably lower than that given to the majority of commercial users" in that out of 14,000 commercial consumers only 397 use more than 1,000 kwh monthly. The petition further alleges that the present residential rate of the Duke Power Company is too high.

First Hint
The first hint of this state of affairs came in Mr. Roosevelt's recent disclosure that the $500,000,000 public works bill to go before the new congress is to be vastly different in important respects from predecessors. In the past such funds have been provided in huge lump sums by congress for expenditure substantially as the administration—meaning the President in last analysis—might see fit. Now, Mr. Roosevelt has made plain he wants congress itself to appropriate for specific projects.

That means the power—and the responsibility—for selection of projects will return in large measure to Capitol Hill.

The second straw in the wind is seen in a carefully prepared analysis by AAA economists asserting that the farmer's income had been boosted to the relative point it occupied in 1929—the year before the great debate. Examining this statement further, observers found AAA really was saying, also, that the administration had done about as much as it could do, standing alone, to improve the farmers' position. Further improvement, it was held, must come through greater demand for farmers products through increased industrial payrolls.

After a bill has been introduced in the house of representatives—it begins a journey beset by some twenty or more possible hurdles any one of which may prevent it becoming law.

First the bill is referred by the Speaker to a standing or select committee where it is given a number and ordered to be printed. Then the committee may report the bill out for a place on the house calendar.

The house as a "committee of the whole" debates the bill, has it read a second time, then engrosses it, reads it a third time and votes on its passage.

NOW CONTROL FOREST LANDS

Approximately 20,000,000 Acres Get Protection

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

RALEIGH, Dec. 30.—Of the approximately 20,000,000 acres of forest land in North Carolina needing fire control activities, some 15,000,000 acres are now receiving protection, W. C. McCormick, assistant State forester in charge of fire prevention for the Department of Conservation and Development, announced today.

This is the largest area ever to receive forest fire protection at the same time in the history of the state, according to Mr. McCormick. The protected area is included in 55 counties which have provided for the program, the largest number to cooperate since the work was started.

In addition to having the largest area under organized protection, Mr. McCormick asserted that control is more effective because the counties providing for the work are contiguous. This prevents fires originating in unorganized counties from gaining headway and sweeping into organized counties before control efforts are started.

"The fire control work is backed up solidly," said Mr. McCormick, "from the South Carolina line from Union to Brunswick county and across the state to the Virginia line from Warren to Hertford county in the coastal plains and from the Virginia line to the South Carolina line the mountains with a few counties excepted where either fire control is not necessary or where the Federal government is giving these counties necessary protection."

Describing the destructiveness of fire to the forests, Mr. McCormick said: "It is a well recognized fact that the greatest enemy of the forests is fire. It lowers the value of completely kills standing timber; destroys reproduction; effects the fertility and moisture content of the soil; causes floods and erosion; drives away and destroys wildlife, its food and cover. As 99 per cent of our fires are man-caused they can be prevented."

PLAN NEARING COMPLETION AID CRIPPLES

Annual Disbursement of $2,850,000 Is Expected

SECURITY ACT TO AID CHILDREN

Staff Is Already at Work Despite Fact No Funds for Project Available Yet

By SIGRID ARNE
Washington, Dec. 30. (AP)—Children's bureau officials are completing final plans for the annual disbursement of $2,850,000 aid to crippled children made possible through passage of the social security act.

Under the crippled children's section of the act, all states will be eligible for an initial $20,000 a year and will draw further funds commensurate with their needs. In each division the states will be asked to match federal funds.

Money for the work is not yet available. Appropriations for the security act were carried in the last minute deficiency bill which failed passage the last night of congress in the filibuster by the late Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana.

But a skeleton staff has gone to work at the children's bureau. They have faced the usual confusion attendant on creating a federal system, and their work so far has been largely definition of the limits under which the money will be used, and aid to the states revamping their laws to meet conditions of the federal law.

Up to the present 11 states have no provisions whatever for care of crippled children. In 33 states funds have been voted, but in many instances appropriations are so small that only a small per cent of cripples can be aided.

The better state laws include registration of all crippled children and a record of their treatment; provision of diagnostic clinics; approval of hospitals which can accept crippled children; and follow-up rehabilitation work to the end that the patient may grow into an independent and self supporting adult.

Through state and private funds about $5,000,000 is spent annually in the nation for crippled children, but surveys show the sum insufficient, particularly in the rural sections. Much of the work has been done after crippling illnesses have progressed to an advanced stage, and little of it was devoted to preventive programs.

The exact number of crippled children in the country is not even known although it was estimated while the act was being written that there are between 300,000 and 500,000.

Winston-Salem Set For Tobacco Bowl Game Wednesday

Winston-Salem, Dec. 30.—Winston-Salem football fans are set for a gala day here Wednesday at the first annual New Year's Day Tobacco Bowl game. A full day of activities has been planned, starting with the Tobacco Bowl gridiron classic in the afternoon and ending with the Tobacco Ball in the wee hours of the morning.

Sandwiched in between the football game and the dance will be an elaborate banquet at which the all-star players, officials, and honored guests will be feted. A program appropriate to the occasion has been planned and two of North Carolina's candidates for the next governorship, Dr. Ralph McDonald and A. H. "Sandy" Graham, have accepted invitations to speak at the dinner.

The Tobacco Bowl game is expected to be one of the most colorful sports events ever held in North Carolina and officials are leaving nothing undone in an effort to make the day an epoch in the state's sport history.

The president's box at the game will be nothing short of a Hall of Fame of the present heroes and coaches of the state. Practically every college and prep school in the state will be represented by members of their coaching staffs and the head coaches of three of the Big Five schools have indicated that they will be present. Out of the eleven all-State Big Five team invited, nine have accepted invitations to serve as honor guests at the festival.

The press of the state is also expected to be well represented and special accommodations are being provided for them.

LEADERS SEE LONG SESSION

ruary. The almost universal desire of members to get home last summer undoubtedly figured to some extent in behalf of the administration view. But now a leader in the defeated faction has served notice that the fight will be renewed with more vigor this season.

Curiously, it is approached by this congress just a short time after the anniversary—December 28—of the birth of Woodrow Wilson, whose face was etched deeply with grief and worry over that same problem of neutrality 20 years ago.

LIFE IN 1935

Out of the science laboratories of 1935 came greater speed in transportation, discoveries and inventions that mean better health, longer life, less pain and greater comfort for John Smith while he pursues the business of living.

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

NEW YORK (AP)—Science in 1935 promised John Smith less pain, better health, longer life, more thrills in speed, more personal comforts. It started things that surely will make John Smith a little more of a kind as days pass—and, whether he likes it or not, much more of a neighbor to all the world.

John Smith lost some of his "space-time." That's a word coined in higher science to tell the strange things that happen where speeds are immense and space boundless.

But when the clippers flew the Pacific in five days on regular commercial schedule, space-time in nearly the scientific sense became reality for John Smith. Much of his isolation from the Orient dropped.

Atlantic Clippers Promised
Likewise earlier in the year Europe came nearer with the Normandie's new Atlantic record of 4 days, 3 hours, 13 minutes and 38 seconds.

Atlantic clippers also were promised. "One hundred octane fuel" was developed by the U. S. Army aviation service. This fuel was a dream in 1934. But 1935 ended with several big companies about to make it.

"One hundred octane"—gasoline of high anti-knock value—increased the speed of the P-26A Army pursuit planes 35 miles an hour. Streamlined trains spanned the continent under 40 hours, promising competition to air and auto. Sir Malcolm Campbell drove his "Bluebird" across the salt flats of Utah for a new world's speed record of more than 301 miles an hour.

For John Smith, John Smith saw the first "credit" needed automobile, heard of the first winter's test at the University of Minnesota of east iron highway pavement, less slippery in sleet and rain, "diamond studded," to be night-visible under all conditions.

Silk From Pine Trees.
He saw pictures of the first artificial silken threads made from southern pine trees, a source big enough to clothe the world in pure sheen. Science picked for him 40 kinds of trees and shrubs that will grow well in now treeless areas.

While John Smith kept out of war his country produced at the Du Pont works the first foolproof explosive, useful for farming and road building, apparently not adaptable for fighting. Princeton and General Electric scientists made half man-size vacuum tubes to transmit electric power farther.

Medicine offered him improved operations for relief of pain, for high blood pressure, angina pectoris, a kidney extract that promises to help incurable Bright's disease, twilight sleep for men to restore minds shaken by worry.

Two vaccines for infantile paralysis appeared. One declared possibly dangerous but probably also protective. A scarless smallpox vaccine was offered to public health officials after three years' experiment at the Rockefeller Institute.

Charles A. Lindbergh's mechanical heart and lung apparatus opened new possibilities of studying the progress of disease. Dr. L. Ruzicka of Zurich made a few male hormone synthetically, with the promise of arresting senile decay.

Atomic Energy
Several laboratories carried forward the diet experiments under which for three years past numerous forecasts have been made of increasing the human life span by 10 years.

Vitamin E, the reproduction chemical, was isolated and made for the first time. The University of Illinois made artificially the 22nd

HIGHWAY WORKS EMPLOY MANY

At the present time, priority in the recruiting of workers must be given to former relief clients rather than to the unemployed who have never been on relief, Balse said. Both the highway commission, road contractors and WPA foremen would like to see the regulations changed so that they can employ those who are unemployed and want to work either ahead of or on a fifty-fifty basis with the former relief clients, since they are so much more efficient and a ruling to permit this is now being sought from Washington.

New York, Dec. 30.—(AP)—A quiet but steady demand for stock brought generally rising prices in today's market. Gains of fractions to two or more points were shown by prominent rails, stocks, motor vehicles, rubber and specialties. There was no section, but few issued backed away from this phase of the proceedings. The late tone was firm transactions, 1,500,000 shares.
