Officials Of Two Nations Initiate Moves To Quell Any Internal Dissension

Troops Sent From Addis Ababa to Gojjam Province

ITALY REFUSES
NOTE DISSENTION

Fascist Army Claims
5,700 Volunteers for
"Greatest Aerial Enlistment in History"

(By The Associated Press)
Officials of two nations at war with each other moved today, in informed sources reported, to strangle any internal dissension in the countries. In Italy fascist party leaders called to their followers Premier Mussolini's strong declaration ten years ago that opposition to his regime would be removed by force.

Five thousand troops were sent from Addis Ababa to Gojjam, province, near Lake Tana, to quell disorders allegedly incited by Italy. Thousands of copies of an appeal for loyalty to Emperor Haile Selassie also were dispatched to the Province to combat attempts to stir a revolt against imperial taxes. Domestic dissension in Italy—if any—has not been officially recognized. Premier Mussolini was represented in informed quarters, however, as maintaining the same position he did a decade ago when he said "when two elements conflict and are irreconcilable the solution is force."

Italy claimed 5,700 volunteers for the "greatest aerial enlistment in history" as the supervised Italian press demanded further retributions for alleged decapitation of an Italian aviator by his Ethiopian captors. Fifteen thousand volunteer pilots were included in the air ministry summons together with 4,200 air base experts. More than 100 were reported expert machine gunners.

A. and N. C. Board Hearing Protests on Scale of Wages

Nothing Accomplished at Morning
Session; Railroad Brotherhood
Heard in Afternoon

Kinston, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Directors of the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad met here this morning and canvassed complaints filed by labor representatives against the Railroad's scale.

Members of the board said nothing was accomplished at the morning session except to acquaint all directors thoroughly with the situation. Representatives of the Railroad brotherhood were to appear before the directors this afternoon to discuss the protest.

When the A. and N. C. began operations as an independent road last fall after cancellation of its lease to the Norfolk and Southern a wage scale was set which was below that employees had received from the Norfolk-Southern.

Plans Save Forests Are Discussed By Group At Meeting

Farmers, County Agents, Bankers
And Others Interested Hold
Session At Rocky Mount

Rocky Mount, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Ways and means of presenting the problem of reforestation and forest fire prevention were discussed here today by farmers, county agents, bankers and other interested persons from 13 eastern counties.

Heard on the program which concluded in a decision that each representative "feel it his own responsibility to see that the program of conservation be brought before the folks of his section through public relations campaigns." Dean I. O. Schaub of the extension division of North Carolina State College, R. W. Graeber, extension forester, J. S. Holmes, state forester, and J. L. Horne, publisher, who sponsored the meeting.

Information of "tree clubs," newspaper publicity and public gatherings were recommended as methods of publicizing the program.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS BE INSTALLED IN GREENVILLE

Board of Aldermen Makes Arrangement at Meet

NINE SIGNALS ARE EXPECTED SOON

Three to Be Located on Greene, Three on Evans, Two on Cotanche, One on Ave.

Nine traffic lights will be installed in Greenville within the next 30 or so days, the Board of Aldermen having completed arrangements for the installation of the signals at its regular monthly meeting last night. The lights have been ordered and are expected at an early date. They will be installed by the City Water and Light Department.

Negotiations toward securing a traffic lighting system for the city have been underway for some time, and at the regular December meeting of the board a representative of the General Electric company explained the various systems and estimated the cost for this city.

The original price was estimated by factory representatives at $3,200, including installation. This figure was pared, however, and the estimated cost now is $2,932.92.

The lights will be located at the following intersections: On Greene street at Third, Fourth and Fifth; at the same intersections on Evans street; on Cotanche street at Fourth and Fifth; and on Dickinson avenue at the Atlantic Coast Railroad crossing.

Contract for the purchase of the signals was given to the General Electric company, through the Graybar Electric company of Richmond, Va., distributors for General Electric. The order already has been placed and the City Water and Light Department will begin installing the signals as soon as they arrive. The department has estimated the signals will be completely installed in about 30 days.

The Board of Aldermen decided to give motorists until January 10 to secure their city automobile tags, but announced that after that date a citizen of the city operating an automobile without the permit would be served with a warrant. The aldermen also warned that anyone subject to a privilege tax and license and not having secured the permit will be served with a warrant unless the tax is paid immediately.

Preliminary plans were laid for a general cleaning up of the city and the board called upon the citizens of the city to aid them in this move by cleaning up all trash and leaves around their premises. The plans call for putting the town in a generally cleaner condition.

Informal expenditures for light bulbs for the city amounted to $169 for the month of December, board members said efforts were being made to reduce this unnecessary expense. They called upon the citizens to aid them in keeping down this cost by reporting to officials anyone seen breaking the lamps in order that the guilty persons might be prosecuted.

Mayor M. K. Blount praised the work the local Boy Scout had done in the past in helping reduce the number of broken bulbs and said that he would appeal to them to resume their good work. It was explained that the entire amount of $169 for new bulbs was not entirely responsible to broken ones, but that many had burned out.

The meeting being the first of the year and the beginning of the second half of the fiscal year, the financial report for the half year was made. This revealed that the city "appeared to be in splendid financial shape," in the words of Mayor Blount.

All bonds and interest payments have been met and a "good balance" remains in the treasury of the city.

Floods Predicted For East Carolina by Weather Bureau

Melting Snow, Ice and Sleet, Accompanied by Heavy Rains Promise Rising Rivers in State

Raleigh, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Melting snows, sleet and ice and heavy rains of last night in eastern North Carolina caused the Weather Bureau here to issue preliminary warnings that rivers in that section may go into flood tomorrow. Lee A. Denson, in charge of the weather office here, said he could not forecast how heavy the floods would be, but overflows were anticipated in the Neuse in Wake County. In the Cape Fear at Moncure and the Roanoke at Weldon by tomorrow morning.

BUSY 'SHORT' SESSION FACES CONGRESS

Although Democratic chiefs have expressed themselves as favoring a short session when Congress convenes, the mass of important legislation grows daily, with neutrality, of course, in the forefront because of unsettled conditions in Europe. Here is Speaker Byrns in the House where the fall of his gavel will signal the start of the term. (Associated Press Photo)

TALK JACKSON DAY PROGRAM

Plans Being Discussed for Holding Affair in City

With only a short time in which to make arrangements, plans were being talked here today for a Jackson Day dinner to be staged by the Pitt county young democrats.

As yet no definite arrangements have been made for the affair, but Senator A. B. Corey said today he had received a letter from E. C. Brooks, Jr., of Raleigh, official of the state Young Democrats organization, expressing a desire that the local democrats arrange for such an affair.

Senator Corey said he was feeling out the sentiment of local young democrats as to holding a dinner, next Wednesday. He declared he was in favor of staging the dinner and was trying to arouse interest in holding the affair.

Although there is only a short time remaining to make arrangements, the state senator said he was sure plans could be made and he would like for others interested get in touch with him so that some arrangements could be planned.

Solicitor Gwyn To Seek Seat In House Held By Hancock

Reidsville, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Allen H. Gwyn of Reidsville, district solicitor, today announced his candidacy for congress subject to the June Democratic primary.

Solicitor Gwyn is a former state senator. Representative Frank Hancock of Oxford, now represents this district in Congress. Allison James of Winston-Salem and Washington, who was in the state House of Representatives when Gwyn was in the Senate, is also an announced candidate for the seat.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News

EXIT ETHIOPIA

By W. Stephen Bush
The whirlwind changes in the international situation concentrated in the temple of peace at Geneva are not due to any about-face of Mussolini. He is as impetuous as ever. He has scorned to play the part of the prodigal. The change proceeds entirely from the new and strange spirit that has been breathed into the British Cabinet and particularly upon its minister of foreign affairs. Almost overnight Mussolini has been metamorphosed from a bad, bold aggressor on the verge of outlawry into a respectable litigant, practically a friend of the court. The Negus on the other hand seems to have lost some of his standing as the aggrieved party, appearing at best nothing more than a co-defendant in a partition suit.

What has really happened? Who has performed these lightning shifts on an open stage and in full sight of the audience? In Paris, London, Rome and Geneva word is given out that the magician was M. Pierre Laval, the premier of France, yesterday an obscure provincial county chairman, who had been graduated into the upper regions of politics through his experience in horse-trading. It was he, the public is told, who bedeviled a cold-blooded British conservative minister of foreign affairs into signing a lot of wrong papers, provoking a temporary outburst of emotions in every capital of the civilized world. Now it is perfectly true that Laval (Continued on Page Four)

Political Hatred In Air As Congress Convenes In Second Session Of Term

LINDBERGH LEAVE HOTEL

Slip Out of Rear Entrance and Depart
In Car

Liverpool, Jan. 3.—(AP)—The Charles A. Lindberghs left Liverpool today for Cardiff, Wales, where it is said they reported they will seek "quiet and rest."

The manager of the Adelphi hotel where they had been staying, stated the famous couple and their son, Jon, were en route to South Wales with Aubrey Morgan, Mrs. Lindbergh's brother-in-law.

Liverpool, Jan. 3.—(AP)—The Charles A. Lindbergh checked out of the Adelphi hotel and departed for an unannounced destination today.

The famous couple and their little son, Jon, left quietly by automobile after three days of strict seclusion in their hotel suites.

Colonel Lindbergh, accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh and Jon, slipped out a back entrance of the hotel and entered a motor car with a second man.

The second man was not immediately identified but earlier the Lindberghs had been reported visited by Aubrey Morgan, Mrs. Lindbergh's brother-in-law.

Morgan's former home, "Tyne-wood," nine miles west of Cardiff, Wales, yesterday was being arranged as if in preparation for occupancy.

Four laborers working outside the Adelphi saw the party drive part way around the building and head down a side street from the city in the direction of the Speke Air-drome, where it was thought they might board an airplane.

But a survey at the air-drome failed to show that a plane had taken off, leading to the belief the Lindberghs might be proceeding to South Wales by automobile and train.

LESS WRECKS ON BAD ROADS

Fatal Accidents Drop
When Motorists
Are Careful

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, Jan. 3.—The snow, sleet, slick roads and streets in the state during the past week have actually reduced the number of accidents instead of increasing them, especially fatal automobile accidents, Captain Charles D. Farmer of the State Highway Patrol pointed out today, proving that motorists can drive carefully and at reduced speeds.

"And when the motorists do reduce their speed and drive carefully, the number of fatal accidents immediately slumps," Captain Farmer said. "The next assumption, then, is that carelessness and excessive speed are to blame for the majority of fatal and serious automobile accidents in the state—and the statistics show that most of the fatal accidents occur on sunny days, when the roads are dry, with little traffic and the road straight and smooth. That is when the drivers think it is perfectly safe for them to 'step on the gas' and open the old boat up full speed ahead."

"But with all the snow and sleet we have had for the past week, there has been very few serious accidents and on New Year's Day there was not a single fatal accident—at least none we have heard about yet. The reason for this is that every driver knew that driving conditions were dangerous, that he had to be careful and drive slow if he wanted to get where he was going alive, or without having his car battered up. So drivers have been content to drive slowly and cautiously, so as to keep their cars under control. As a result, nothing more serious than an epidemic of bent and dented fenders has resulted from the bad weather and road conditions."

Statistics compiled recently from North Carolina automobile accidents records by the Institute of Government show that 72.4 per cent when the road surfaces are dry, 55.3 per cent on perfectly straight stretches of roadway and 75 per cent of all accidents are due to some form of reckless driving with excessive speed as a big factor.

Neutrality Policy and Bonus Are Main Issues

CHARGES HURLED
BY BOTH SIDES

Democrats and Republicans Claim Opposition Party Use
Session for Politics

Washington, Jan. 3.—(AP)—The political warfare of a presidential election year began raging from the convening of Congress at noon today, coincident with introduction of dispute of the bonus pay bills.

Although both Senate and House agreed unanimously to recess until this evening for preparing the unusual report on "the state of the Union," Representative Snell, the Republican leader, rebuked the plan.

"Will not his message stand the light of the usual midday sun," he demanded, while a theretofore jolly House listened seriously.

He condensed the choice of a night delivery which will make possible a wider radio audience as a "cheap attempt" to use the message politically. He did not need to mention the word "presidential campaign," for his audience knew what he meant.

Snell said he knew he had a right to object to the administration leaders' request for unanimous agreement to recess and:

"I also well know that the present majority under the last of the executive is prepared to break all precedence as it has many times in the past to carry out orders from the White House."

"In my judgment, if you give in to this order you are not properly performing the duties of the majority in maintaining the dignity of the House of Representatives." The agreement was reached nevertheless.

Washington, Jan. 3.—(AP)—In atmosphere electric with political hatred, the 74th congress gathered today to open its second session with brief formalities at noon, to hear President Roosevelt make a precedent smashing address at nine p. m. and then to plunge almost at once into these two giant issues:

1—The complex problem of keeping America out of war.

2—The long vexing question of paying the bonus immediately to soldiers who served in the last war.

A coming event—the great campaign struggle leading up to National presidential election—cast its shadow over the whole proceedings.

Both New Dealers and their forces accused each other of efforts to seize upon congress as a sounding board to win the election.

As the congress met, democrats were demanding speed on major legislation and an early adjournment, while the republican leadership called on the Houses to cease being "Rubber stamps."

Attacking what he called the "spend thrift policies of the administration" Republican Snell of New York, house minority leader, asserted appropriations will need "more than ordinary consideration."

He said the Republicans would advocate "reduced expenditures, a balanced budget, sound financial policies, withdrawal of Government's competition with private enterprise, a return to representative and constitutional government and freedom from foreign entanglements."

Speaker Byrns said that "every-one wants to see all necessary legislation given the fullest possible consideration."

But, he added, that "unless there are those who wish to prolong the session for political reasons it seems to me that it should not require much longer than three months to enact all essential measures."

Flowers Brothers Drop Appeal Plan On Assault Charge

Plans for an appeal to the circuit court, of appeals, the Flowers brothers of Johnston county—Perry, Jimmy and Dick—surrendered to federal authorities today to start serving terms of three years each in prison for assault on an alcoholic tax inspector.

The men had been free under bond until January 1 after their conviction of attacking A. E. Bennett, while the federal agent arrested automobiles of officers engaged in liquor raids of Johnston county. It was planned to take the three to Atlanta Sunday night.

SPORT SLANTS

(By PAP)

The record breakers had a prosperous season in 1935. The Amateur Athletic Union was called on to consider 292 new marks, quite an increase over the 158 submitted last year. The men athletes far outclassed the fair sex in the total number of record performances. They amassed a total of 208 as against the 83 by feminine athletes. As in the past, the swimmers topped all other branches of amateur sports.

Ralph Flanagan of Miami, Fla., one of the country's outstanding free style swimmers, led all others in record breaking for the year with a remarkable total of 20 marks to his credit. Adolph Kiefer of the Lake Shore A. C., Chicago, America's best back-stroke swimmer, and Jack Medina of the Washington A. C. of Seattle, who led the parade a year ago with 24 records to his credit, are next in line with 15 and 13, respectively.

Predicts Olympic Victory
Flanagan, one of the American swimmers who competed in Japan last summer holds the opinion that U. S. swimmers will beat the Japanese in the 1936 Olympic Games. "Japan again will be the team to beat," the 18-year-old Miami high school junior says, "but when 14 American swimmers and divers, including myself, were in Japan last summer we tied the Japanese in all the Olympic style events, 3 to 3, although we lost the meet to them. 27 to 36, I believe we have a fine chance of beating the team which dominated the swimming events at the 1932 Olympics when we 'met again'."

Flanagan, who holds the world half-mile record of 10:07.6, and the national mile mark of 21:00.6, both set at the nationals at Detroit last summer, is certain to be a mainstay of the U. S. Olympic team.

A Brother Act
There could be three Flanagans on the Olympic team, for Ralph has two brothers, Everett, 19, and Melvin, 20, both excellent swimmers. Among them, the brothers have collected more than 200 medals and cups from national championship battles on down the line. Ralph, the ace of the trio, attends a Miami high school this winter and will enter mid-winter A. A. U. meets in Florida. Holding him rigidly to a training program already mapped out, Coach Steve Forsyth hopes to have Flanagan in top shape when the Olympic trials roll around.

Ralph cracked 10 A. A. U. marks in the Miami-Baltimore aquatic meet last winter. He has won five national championships, the 500-yard indoor and the mile outdoor in 1933, in New York; the 300-meter medley the same year, in Chicago; and the mile and half-mile titles last summer in Detroit.

The professional ranks hold no attraction for Flanagan. "I'll never be a professional swimmer," he says. "There is no money in it. I can't think of more than one swimmer who ever made any money as a pro, and when I graduate from high school I intend to go to college and eventually become an osteopath."

Parties Ponder Prediction Of Six-Ticket Race

Senator James Hamilton Lewis Predicts That Six Presidential Tickets to Be Offered

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

However skeptical may be their remarks for publication, practical politicians have found much food for thought in the prediction of Senator James Hamilton Lewis that six presidential tickets may play significant parts in the campaign of 1936.

Senator Lewis is an old-timer at the game of politics. He has had many and varied experiences at watching the fall of the cards, and the break of the play. His suggestions sometimes are tinged with that exotic originality which is so much a part of his individuality, yet they never fail to be interesting.

The Senator says he would not be surprised if there were two Democratic tickets and two Republican tickets in the field and he expects considerable prominence to attach also to the Socialist and the Prohibition tickets.

Such a situation might appear at first glance the dream of someone who had eaten too much Christmas candy. Yet, by one method of reasoning it is possible to conclude that, if anything, Senator Lewis may have understated the case.

In no recent campaign have there been so many diverse and seemingly irreconcilable political elements struggling for a place in the sun. If each realized its aspirations of establishing itself as a national party, there would be more party labels in America than in England or France.

At least seven of these groups are reputed by their leaders, and by some others, to number their adherents in millions.

The Democrats who are content to follow Mr. Roosevelt.

The northern Democrats who are in revolt against Mr. Roosevelt, and many of whom refused in 1928 to support Mr. Smith, now in process of organization under the lead of Governor Talmadge of Georgia.

The Republicans who favor a direct, right-wing opposition to Mr. Roosevelt, as represented by the predictions of Herbert Hoover.

The Republicans who repudiate both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hoover, and are gathering together to support Senator Borah.

The Democrats and Republicans who believe that the only salvation of the country is adoption of the old-age pension plan of Dr. Townsend.

The Democrats and Republicans who can see no salvation except in the political precepts of Father Coughlin.

The seven groups thus enumerated do not include the Socialists, who polled nearly a million votes in 1932; the Prohibitionists, now reorganizing with a new zeal for the repeal of repeal; the Farmer-Labor party which controls Minnesota; the Progressive party which controls Wisconsin; nor the Communist, Social-Labor, Liberty, and National parties, all of which entered tickets in the election of 1932.

Josephus Daniels Urged Be Candidate For Senate

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, Jan. 3.—Josephus Daniels, the present U. S. Ambassador to Mexico, publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer and former Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson administration, is being urged to become a candidate for the United States Senate by a good many of steady stream of callers he has had since he arrived here to spend the Christmas holidays, according to reports filtering out from behind the glass partitions of his editorial offices. So far no one can be found to whom Ambassador Daniels has given any indication of whether he is giving any serious consideration to the suggestions and urging of friends, since it is agreed that the Ambassador is becoming more and more skilled in listening to others and in saying nothing in return.

However, it is said by those who have talked with him recently that he does not seem to be at all displeased when his callers suggest he resign as Ambassador to Mexico and become a candidate against Senator Josiah W. Bailey for the Democratic nomination for Senator in the June primary now only five months off. It is more or less conceded by those close to the ambassador that he does not by any means approve of all the things Senator Bailey has done since he went to Washington as Senator in 1931. The report is also current that one of the reasons former Lt. Gov. Richard T. Fountain of Rocky Mount called upon Ambassador Daniels last week was to tell him that if he should decide to seek the nomination for the Senate he (Fountain) would withdraw as a candidate and support him. This report has not been verified, however, and is being taken with a grain of salt in a good many political circles here. It is agreed, however, that if Ambassador Daniels should become a candidate, he would probably get his greatest support from the element which supported Fountain for Governor in 1932—many of them wanted Daniels to run for Governor then—and that he would leave very few votes for the Rocky Mount candidate.

So far the prevailing opinion in most circles here is that Ambassador Daniels is not likely to resign a position reported to have a salary of $17,000 a year attached to it, together with a beautiful embassy residence in a delightful and salubrious climate with a large staff of budding diplomats to relieve him of all detail work, for a seat in the Senate paying him only $10,000 a year and carrying with it a great deal of grief for whoever gets it. At present it is conceded that as long as Ambassador Daniels does nothing and makes no speeches which might offend the Catholics, that he can continue to live in Mexico City as long as Roosevelt remains President. It is also pointed out that Ambassador Daniels is almost 74 years old, and that the rigors of a political campaign combined with the heavy and exacting duties of a senator, both actual and political, might prove too severe a strain for him advanced years.

However, the prevailing opinion in most circles here is that Mr. Daniels is going to hesitate a long time before resigning his present sure thing as Ambassador to risk a race for the Senate against Bailey.

Black-Draught Good Laxative

Black-Draught has been kept on hand for all the family in the home of Mr. W. A. Lemons, of Independence, Va., since twenty years ago. Mr. Lemons writes that he takes it as a laxative in cases of "headache, dull, tired feeling, biliousness." "And I take it if I feel uncomfortable after a heavy meal," he adds. "I especially use it for sick headache. It certainly is good." When a man says "Black-Draught is good," it is probably because he remembers the prompt, refreshing relief it brought in constipation troubles. Its benefits are felt because it is a simple, herb laxative, so natural in composition and action that thousands and thousands of men and women prefer it when a laxative is needed.

Rules and Regulations As Established By The Pitt County Alcoholic Beverages Control Board

The Pitt County Alcoholic Beverages Control Board, By Virtue of the Authority Vested In It, By Chapter Number 493 of the Public Laws of the 1935 Session of the North Carolina General Assembly, Do Hereby Adopt and Promulgate the Following Regulations:

SECTION 1. It is unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, or association by whatever name called, except those certain stores set up, operated and controlled by the Pitt County Alcoholic Beverages Control Board, to engage in the business of selling, exchanging, bartering, giving away for the purpose of direct or indirect gain, or otherwise handling spirituous liquors (or any vinous and-or malt liquors with greater than five per cent alcohol content, as defined in Chapter Number 493 of the Public Laws of the 1935 session of the North Carolina General Assembly).

SECTION 2. It is unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, or association, by whatever name called, except those certain stores, set up, operated and controlled by the Pitt County Alcoholic Beverages Control Board, to have or keep in possession at any place, for the purpose of sale any spirituous liquors, (or any vinous or malt liquors with an alcohol content greater than five per cent as defined by Chapter Number 493 Public Laws of the 1935 session of the North Carolina General Assembly), and any one of the following facts shall constitute prima facie evidence of the violation of this regulatory measure:

(a) The possession of a license from the United States government, to sell or manufacture intoxicating liquors; or

(b) The possession of more than one quart of spirituous liquors upon which all internal revenue and all taxes have been paid, and bearing an authorized Alcoholic Beverages Control Board store stamp or label, at any one time at any place other than the bona fide domicile or residence of the possessor and-or owner, provided this shall not apply to possession of spirituous liquors while being transported by the actual purchaser or his agent or servant from an Alcoholic Beverages Control store to the bona fide residence of such purchaser; or

(c) The possession of any quantity of illicit spirituous liquors, that is liquors upon which all internal revenue and all other taxes have not been paid, and which do not bear an authorized Alcoholic Beverages Control stamp or label.

Providing nothing herein contained shall bar or prevent any person from keeping in his possession wines or ciders in any quantity where such wines and ciders have been manufactured from grapes and fruit grown on the premises of the person in whose possession such wines and ciders may be.

Whitchard-Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thomas Martin announce the marriage of their daughter, Bessie Ruth to Mr. James Linwood Whitchard on Sunday, December the twenty-ninth, nineteen hundred and thirty-five in Bethel, N. C.

The wedding of Miss Bessie Ruth Martin and Mr. James Linwood Whitchard of Greenville was quietly solemnized Sunday, December the 29th in Bethel at the home of the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Andrews.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thomas Martin of Bethel, North Carolina. She is a graduate of Bethel High School and of Thorson's School of Beauty Culture of Greenville. She was attractively attired in a brown costume trimmed with egg shell and her accessories were brown. She wore a shoulderette of tulle and roses.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Whitchard of this city and is connected with the Railway Express Agency here.

Memorial Baptist Deacons.

The Board of Deacons of Memorial Baptist church will meet this evening at 7:30 in the church.

Amelia Earhart Here January 15th.

Amelia Earhart will appear at East Carolina Teachers College on January 15, less than two weeks from now. Throughout the fall her coming was advertised as the high spot in the program of entertainments for this season and is considered the attraction that would be of greatest interest to the public.

"Aviation Adventures" is the subject upon which she will talk. While her books, "The Fun of It" and "Twenty Hours and Forty Minutes in the Air," give many of her thrilling adventures, reading them is not at all like hearing the adventurer talk about them herself. Those who have heard her say that she seems to share her experiences with those in her audiences so that they feel as if they also have been adventuring. The glamor of her romantic adventures and the list of her great achievements in aviation are sufficient to make people want to see the great aviatrix, but the delightful, wholesome personality of the woman herself make them enjoy her doubly.

FRIDAY

6:30 p. m.—The Kiwanis Club will meet in the Woman's Club building.

Burnette-Strickland

Nashville, N. C., Jan. 3.—On Saturday evening Miss Helen Mae Strickland, daughter of N. L. Strickland and the late Cleora Batchelor Strickland, became the bride of Robert Troy Burnette, son of Mrs. Robert Troy Burnette and the late Mr. Burnette, of Greenville. The ceremony was performed in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at 8:00 o'clock, with the Rev. L. D. Hayman officiating.

A background of tall palms and ferns were banked within the chancel interspersed with candelabras holding burning cathedral candles. Two tall floor vases of white snapdragons and calla lilies on either side of the altar were flanked by candelabras holding the burning white tapers.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. M. W. Linck played a program of nuptial music. Her selections included "Oh, Thou Sublime Sweet Evening Star," by Wagner, and "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice," by Saint Saens. Miss Lorraine Sills, soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Linck, sang "At Dawning," and "Because." The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was used as the processional for the bride and groom.

Wedding March as the recessional. During the ceremony the organist played softly "Lohengrin" by Liszt.

Ushers were Carl W. Blackwood, brother-in-law of the bride, of Campobello, S. C., and A. W. Burnette, Jr., cousin of the bridegroom, of Rocky Mount.

Groomsmen were Dal Alford of Rocky Mount, and Horace Neims and Chifton Benson of Nashville.

Miss Pat Sills and Miss Rachel Griffin of Nashville, and Miss Helen Burnette of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, attended the bride as bridesmaids. They wore identical gowns of tangerine velvet, made along empire lines, with bustles in the back which extended into a train. Their gloves were of the same material as the gowns and formed a point over the hand; their slippers and coronets were of silver. They carried arm bouquets of tall-moss roses and snapdragons tied with bronze ribbons.

The matron of honor, Mrs. R. T. Burnette, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in purple velvet made along straight lines ending in a train. She carried an arm bouquet of Johanna Hill roses, and yellow snapdragons and lavender sweet peas.

Miss Leona Strickland, who attended her sister as maid of honor, wore a gown of slate blue velvet, fashioned similarly to those of the bridesmaids. Her accessories were like those of the bridesmaids and she carried a lovely arm bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and yellow snapdragons.

Master Bobby Smith, nephew of the bridegroom, acted as ringbearer. He was attired, as were the groomsmen, in full dress suit, and bore the ring on a pillow of white satin and lace.

The bride entered the church with her brother-in-law, Clarence Hugh Noah of Raleigh, who gave her in marriage. She was lovely in her wedding gown of white satin made along fitted lines, with which she wore long white kid gloves and satin shoes. Her tulle veil of illusion was worn cap fashion and extended the length of the long train. A chin strap held the cap in place and orange blossoms were used across the back. She carried an exquisite shiver bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridegroom, attended by his brother-in-law, Guilford Smith, of New Bern, awaited the bride at the chancel.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Neville Lee Strickland and the late Cleora Batchelor Strickland, and a granddaughter of the late Van Buren Batchelor who figured prominently in the history of Nashville and Nash county. She is well known throughout Eastern North Carolina where she is extremely popular. She received her education at East Carolina Teachers College, Greenville.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Robert Troy Burnette and the late Mr. Burnette of Greenville, a prominent family of Eastern Carolina. He attended Duke University where he was very popular. He is a member of Sigma Chi social fraternity. He now holds a responsible position with the Carolina Sales Corporation in Greenville.

Due to the recent death of the bride's uncle, Judge S. F. Austin, there was no reception as previously planned. Following the ceremony the bride and bridegroom left for a wedding trip to northern cities.

Miss Louise Carson, formerly of the Vanitie Box, has accepted a position with the Rosebud Beauty Shop. Miss Carson extends a cordial invitation to her friends and customers to continue their patronage. (Adv.)

Funeral of Mrs. Pitt Saturday.

News was received here today announcing the death of Mrs. Pitt, mother of Mrs. R. B. Darden of Rocky Mount, formerly of Greenville.

Funeral services will be conducted at one o'clock Saturday afternoon in Conetoe.

'Singer of Psalms' Here Sunday.

Sunday night at 7:30 at the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church in a service in which all the churches of the city will unite, Jesse Phillips Robertson, Singer of Psalms, will present the program. The aim of the Singer of Psalms is to present the Psalms in such a way that they will be better understood and their beauty more appreciated. While his program is Biblical, it will be presented from a wholly non-sectarian viewpoint. Before it is sung, each Psalm is explained either by its historical setting or by word pictures that clarify its meaning.

The long-necked lute on which Mr. Robertson accompanies himself is an adaptation of the ancient stringed instrument, used in David's time. He also has a choice assortment of shepherd's flutes, which he plays acceptably. He has made an intensive study of the Psalms and stands alone in the musical world as the singer and interpreter of these ancient songs of Zion.

The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

M'Donald Charged Keeping Lumpkin Out Of Campaign

Gubernatorial Candidate Credited With Smooth Move in Keeping Lumpkin Out of Race

By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh Jan. 3.—A clever political "trade" said to have been engineered by the erudite Dr. Ralph W. McDonald of Winston-Salem, one of the four leading candidates for Governor, is responsible for the decision by Willie Lee Lumpkin of Lenoir county, not to become a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, according to reports current in political circles here.

According to those who profess to know the inside "dope" about this purported "trade" McDonald and his friends have succeeded in persuading the young Lenoir lawyer not to run for Lt. Governor in this campaign by asking him to again become a candidate for the House of 1937 and 1939 general assemblies and to be the administration leader in the House in these sessions, further assuring him of their support for Governor in 1940 to succeed McDonald—provided he is nominated and elected Governor in 1936.

No one closely connected with the McDonald forces will admit that any such "trade" has been made with Lumpkin, of course. But it is no secret that McDonald and his followers did not want Lumpkin to get into the race as a candidate for Lt. Governor, also. That Lumpkin was far from happy when McDonald announced as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor because the public would be inclined to regard them as both running together and on the same platform. This belief was based on the fact that during the 1935 general assembly McDonald and Lumpkin were regarded as being political Siamese twins, although in reality this was not a fact. For on many questions Lumpkin was not willing to go quite as far with McDonald as the former college professor wanted him to go.

There was a time when McDonald would have been willing to have Lumpkin run for Lt. Governor if he would have run on the same platform with him and made a joint campaign stressing identical issues, it is believed in a good many political circles. But it was evident from the first that if Lumpkin did run he would run on his own platform and entirely independent of McDonald—and probably on a much more conservative platform. For indications were that Lumpkin was going to point his campaign in such a way as to draw support from the moderate, middle-of-the-road liberals as well as from the extreme liberals. The McDonald strategists are regarded as feeling that if Lumpkin should run on such a platform it would serve to confuse McDonald's campaign, which is conceded to be directed to appeal to the more extreme liberals, if not the out-and-out radical element in the Democratic party, with the immediate task before them to keep Lumpkin from getting into the campaign.

It is readily agreed that if McDonald should be nominated and elected he would have need of a strong leader in the House in both 1937 and 1939 sessions of the general assembly and that Lumpkin would be in a better position to assume this leadership both because of his long service in the House—continuously since the 1929 session—and because of his close association with McDonald in the 1935 House.

It is also agreed that if McDonald is elected Governor and if he can get a working majority in both houses of the 1937 and 1939 assemblies, also if Lumpkin becomes the administration leader in the House in these two sessions and if the administration proves popular over the state, Lumpkin would undoubtedly be in a strong position to seek the gubernatorial nomination in 1940, when the governorship again comes forward. But political observers agree that there are a lot of "ifs" to be taken into consideration.

6. The Dividing Aisle

Democratic members sit on the right of the presiding officer and Republicans on the left in both Senate and House. A dividing aisle separates them.

Seniority governs the choice of seats in the senate. Members of the house sit wherever they can. However, two long red tables in the center on each side are reserved for the majority and minority leaders, the chairman and ranking members of the committee in charge of the particular bill under consideration at the moment and aides to the leaders.

The house speaker and the president of the senate (who is Vice President of the United States) each occupies an elevated dais. Many of the Senate desks are relics of the old senate chamber.

Senator Harrison of Mississippi uses the desk of the former president of the Confederacy, Jefferson Davis. Senator Glass of Virginia uses that of Calhoun and Senator Hale of Maine sits at the desk once occupied by Daniel Webster.

These famous old desks are located on both the Democratic and Republican sides of the chamber. They still are equipped with the sandblasters the old equivalent of blotting paper.

Boxes for snuff, once generally used, still are in the senate chamber, near the Vice President's dais, but are there for exhibition purposes only.

WRITERS TELL OF CONDITIONS IN CYRANAICA

Conquered Natives Enslaved By Dictator Mussolini

DISCIPLINARY MEASURES STERN

Necessary to Kill Off Their Livestock To Subdue Natives, Students Told

By OLIVER LINDFORS and RICHARD PURCELL

That after he "frees" them Mussolini enslaves conquered natives, that he forces them into labor gangs at bayonet point, disciplines them by public lashings, inflicts the death penalty for possession of a horse, ass, camel or gun, and that on occasion he chastises tribes by taking their chiefs aloft for a new kind of "ride" dumping them from airplanes into the sea at public examples, were the last things we expected to discover that morning when we left Naples.

All we looked for in the maps spread on the cafe table was a way to reach Egypt without tracking in the footprints of generations of agency-conducted tourists. The map showed that we could go by steamer to Benghazi, port and capital of the eastern third of Libya, called Cyrenaica. From Benghazi, we knew, a royal road opened by King Victor Emmanuel three years ago led eastward to the straight north-and-south line separating Cyrenaica from Egypt. It would be 300 miles with "Rucksacks," and maybe a hitch or two on the way; but the country would not be travel-torn, and we might have a little adventure.

Theoretically an ordinary passport visa to Italy is good for travel in any of Italy's possessions. But we found Cyrenaica to be an exception, the reason being, we learned as we struggled through yards of red tape barring us like barbed-wire entanglements from a special visa, that though Italy has had Cyrenaica for 28 years—ever since she took it from Turkey in 1912—she has barely finished its "pacification."

Under the impression that our visas gave us free range of the colony we expected to take the road at once. But local authorities informed us that our passports were valid for use only in that city.

Benghazi, as our terminus, would have made our adventure a miserable failure. A modern city with wide, palm-lined avenues, it is a credit to the Italians who built it; and from the sea with its domes and minarets it looks like an imaginative movie setting. But that was not what we had come for. Moreover, since all provisions come from Italy, living costs were about five times as high as they had been in Naples.

"To subdue the natives we had to kill off their livestock and lay waste their fields. That is why there is no food except what is sent from home," an Italian explained naively.

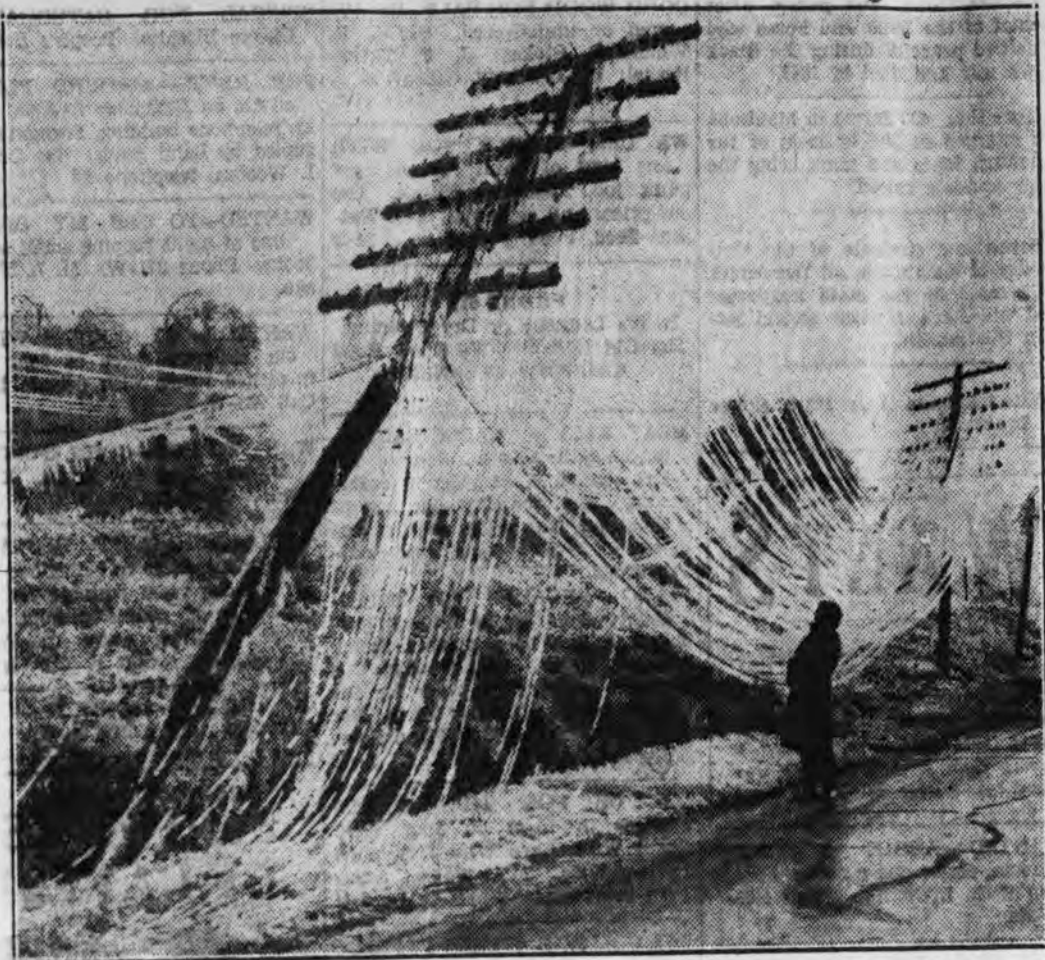

Determined not to be turned back we talked magnificently of hiring fleets of cars and a caravan of retainers, playing up the legend of rich but slightly crazy Americans so impressively that the authorities finally decided we must be somebody too important to offend. They added a few necessary words to our visa; and before they had time to learn that we were only a pair of vacationing students we had sneaked out of the city on the road to Derna, 150 miles away on the royal highway.

The road we tramped was well paved and wide enough for two trucks to pass. Every rock in sight of the road on both sides bore the inscription "Viva il Re" (Long Live the King) painted there to cheer King Victor Emmanuel as he drove over the road during its dedication. From casual conversation we learned however that the inscriptions by no means expressed the sentiments of the wretched native population. They had built the road entirely by hand, it is true, but not out of gratitude for Italian rule. Bayonets had driven them to their toll; and bayonets, we were to learn when we came to the end of the road, were still driving them to the hardest kind of labor, with a bullet in the back as the final argument if a native tried to go more than a kilometer (5-8 of a mile) from the scene without permission.

A colonist we met told us something of the war against the native Arabs. For 20 years with smuggled rifles they had held the interior of the country, fighting a guerrilla warfare at which the Italians were not skilled. Finally, by mowing down their herds of camels, sheep and goats with machine guns from tanks and airplanes Italy starved the nomads into surrender.

Twenty years of sporadic fighting 100,000 lives and a million dollars this country cost the Italians. Two college students touring the country on their own metatarsal arches could not be expected to rise to visions of empire; and our feeling was that any race perverse enough to want to live in such a barren land should have been allowed to keep it.

WHY YOUR TELEPHONE CALL WASN'T ANSWERED

Take a good look at this picture made near Jonesboro, Ga., and you'll understand why you weren't able to ring mother and dad or the best girl back home and wish them Happy New Year. Miles of telephone lines in the vicinity of Atlanta looked just like this after the worst winter storm in 30 years blanketed the countryside with ice. (Associated Press Photo) more infrequent patches of coarse grass. We were told that before the arrival of Italy's civilizing armies the nomads grazed large herds on the high plateau traversed by the royal road and that in good years they raised thin crops of grain by scratching the soil by hand. In dry years when there was no grain they lived on the milk and flesh of their herds.

Occasionally we passed large stone walled rectangles set back from the road and some of them surrounded by barbed wire entanglements. These were the Italian forts whence came the machine guns which had shot off the herds and made the plateau a desert. Grim redoubts, their ten and twelve foot walls were topped by borken glass cemented in to discourage scalars. The only breaks in the walls were massive iron gates. During the early days of our journey the forts were lightly garrisoned; but as we neared the Egyptian border the garrisons were larger; and we were told that further inland, where the "pacification" was still precarious, the forts were packed.

Now and then, far off the road, we saw small groups of low ragged tents, which were "home" to groups of wretched Bodawi or bedouins. Few of these camp in sight of the road however; and living creatures of any kind were very rare.

One morning before we had really caught the stride of our day's march, an old Model T Ford, its rattle audible long before we saw it, chugged up to us and stopped. An Italian colonist, apparently delighted to speak with strangers, chatted awhile and asked us to get in. He left the road and took us bouncing and lunging over the rocky plain to his farm, telling us, between bumps, that he was a graduate of an Italian agricultural school, and how the government had given him the farm and had provided, besides the land, a house, livestock, implements and seed for sowing and the Model T. Arab labor was available and would work for its food. Our colonist had the enthusiasm of the pioneer before his first crop failure.

"We shall make Cyrenaica what it was of old," he said, "the granary of the Roman empire." That the temperature along the "coast" rose to 135 in the shade during the summer, that rain came but seldom, and that no one was sure that even deep wells would provide adequate water, worried him not at all. He foresaw a great future for the colony, the whole coastal plateau of which, he said, the government intended to people with families from Europe. Only trained men would be sent at first; and the real emigration would not begin until the pioneering was done and livestock and grain had become abundant. His enthusiasm was refreshing; but we were skeptical. We know of livestock dying off and the population thinning out on better land than this in America.

As we plodded up to the gate of Derna, half-way point of our hike, a guard officer waiting there showed immense concern for us. We had been expected for days it seemed—they had been forewarned by telegraph and had been watching for us. It was some time before we realized that the telegram must have been based on our Benghazi bluff about a fleet of cars and a supply train. That we arrived on foot amazed everybody.

"Did your cars break down?" they asked us. "Have you had trouble? If you had not arrived today we would have sent airplanes to search for you."

Between Derna and Tobruk we came to the end of the new royal road, the rest of the way being a mere wheel-track in the sand and gravel of the plateau. It was here at the road-end that we saw our most important demonstration of Italian colonization and a fair sample of what, we imagined, might happen to the Ethiopians if Mussolini is successful in "freeing" them.

Activity was intense. Gangs of ragged native Arabs were working from morning till night under guard of Somali and Eritrean troops, the Italians adopting the British system of patrolling one colony with natives from another, in the theory that almost anybody is willing to shoot people he does not know.

There were a few units of Italian Carabinieri, or national police, to control and shoot up, if necessary, the colonial troops. We stayed at the Carabinieri camps for several days and learned a lot of the long war of pacification and of present troubles with the natives.

It was during the Maslem fast of Ramadan when the natives ate and drank nothing between sunrise and sunset. The Carabinieri declared this only a trick to get out of work and assured us that they did not permit the Arabs to get away with it.

"We make them work from dawn until dusk without stopping," one of them said. "If they are not going to eat they can't lie around during meal hours. They've got to work."

When we questioned them they told us frankly that for all minor disobediences the punishment was public lashing by the colonial troops, and that though the lashings frequently resulted in serious injury and sometimes in death they were useful as an example and were the only means of getting real road work out of the Arabs.

We were surprised to note that most of the Arabs were lighter in color than their conquerors. Later we learned that they take great pride in the purity of their race, and that though they are stoically unemotional during the public lashings they often wept from wounded pride months afterward in telling of them. They were slender fine featured men, all their inherited traditions making stone-breaking under guard keenly humiliating and degrading to them.

The Italians made no bones about their iron-handed rule. As if they were perfectly natural they told us that the Arabs were shot if they attempted to escape, and that death was also the penalty for anyone caught in possession of a camel, a horse, a donkey or a gun. All the natives were finger printed, we were told, and if any failed to appear for work patrols were sent after them.

An Italian army engineer who entertained us in one of the forts shortly before we reached Tobruk was still more enlightening. He was a grand host, we must admit. He produced a marvelous dinner, served us the best Italian wine and topped it off with glowing brandy. He gave us a meal such as we had not had since we landed in Africa, and talked entertainingly of the United States, where he had spent several years. But when we got him on the subject of Cyrenaica and the native population he was no longer the genial and charming host—he was the ruthless Roman conqueror.

"The Arabs? Laziest labor in the world," he said. "Second to none in stupidity — Impossible to treat them as human — Beasts and must be dealt with as such."

As his confidence expanded he told us more—that the Arabs are deliberately underfed on a thin barely ration which, though it keeps them alive, weakens them and prevents them from multiplying. They were never an exceptionally fertile people, he told us. Under present conditions a child, if born, has small chance of surviving.

"We can't shoot them all down," said the engineer. "There are still too many. We need labor now anyway; and we can't even afford to let the Arabs escape into the hinterland. But there is no place for them in our future plans. We intend to settle this whole country with our own people. By the time we are ready the policy of underfeeding will have reduced the Arab population to a negligible quantity."

Then the engineer told us a story that amazed us even more. "A few weeks ago," he said, "three sheiks complained at Benghazi that Italy was not treating their people fairly. We fixed those fellows. One of our fliers invited them for a ride in his plane. He took them up over the harbor and stunted. When all the natives were watching from the shore the sheiks were thrown out. It's the only way to deal with them. Nobody will complain again for some time."

Our side of the conversation lagged after that. From drinking tea over desert campfires along the road with hospitable though pitifully poor Arabs, we had come to like them. We could neither do nor say to our host what he had served us. But our goodbye was restrained; and neither of us ended it with the traditional "till we meet again."

So this was the "civilizing mission" of Europe in Africa, the probably civilizing mission of Italy in Ethiopia.

We heard the story of the sheiks, and the airplanes many times after we got to Egypt, and were told that it had echoed through the whole Moslem world from Baghdad to the Niger River, doing Italy more harm throughout Islam than all her colonial fighting put together.

We left Tobruk for Bardia, last settlement in Cyrenaica. In plain sight across the boundary is the Egyptian town of Sollum. With characteristic astuteness the British, who supposedly drew this boundary line, get the only recent harbor in 500 miles, on their side of the line. Italy seized it once but had to give it up. They still look across with covetous eyes at its fine anchorage.

The desert road comes up to a barbed wire barrier between the two towns and a garrison in a group of small adobe houses guards the only gap in a fence that runs for two hundred miles inland, to the oasis of Joghubb.

The Italian officer who inspected our papers was astounded when we told him how we got there for European civilians never come to this isolated post. He was lonely and tried to prolong the conversation, but we wanted only to get through that barrier as soon as possible. It was fifteen feet wide and was, he told us, closely patrolled throughout its length. When we asked him if it was electrified he smiled but did not answer.

A sentinel pushed open a gate so heavy it had wheels to bear its weight and we passed through a narrow lane in the twisted wire. The land looked no different on the Egyptian side of the steel barrier but we felt more at ease and in a few hours had rounded the bay to Sallum.

VACATION IDEAS FROM FLORIDA

A fashion show sponsored by the Florida Exposition in New York displayed this new bathing suit, modeled by Kitty Barrett, to suggest what vacationists may expect to see on the beaches this winter. Truck For Hire!

POWERS GIVEN TO PATROLMEN

Highway Force to Be Allowed Suspend Licenses

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh, Jan. 3.—Highway patrolmen are soon to be given authority to suspend and take up the drivers' license of persons arrested for violations for which the revocation of their licenses is mandatory upon conviction, pending the trial of these persons. It was learned here today from an authoritative source. It was also intimated that this authority to suspend and take up the driving permits of all drivers arrested from major violations of the motor vehicle laws pending trial of these drivers, may also be extended to all peace officers. But it is regarded now as certain that the drivers' license law does definitely give highway patrolmen authority to suspend and take possession of the licenses of drivers arrested for major offenses until they are either convicted or acquitted in court.

For many weeks there has been some doubt in the minds of officials of the Department of Revenue and the Highway Patrol as to whether or not the drivers' license law gave patrolmen the authority to suspend licenses before the conviction of drivers and so far no effort has been made to suspend licenses before conviction, although something like 550 drivers' license have already been revoked for one year following the conviction of these drivers for drunken driving and other violations for which revocation is mandatory. But the legal division of the Department of Revenue has at last become convinced that highway patrolmen are agents of the Department of Revenue and that they hence have the right to suspend licenses, pending trial of those accused, under Section 11, Subsection (a), which reads as follows:

"The Department shall have authority to suspend the license of any operator or chauffeur WITHOUT PRELIMINARY HEARING upon a showing by its records OR OTHER SATISFACTORY EVIDENCE that the licensee has:

"1. Has committed an offense for which mandatory revocation of license is required upon conviction.
"2. Has been involved as a driver in any accident resulting in the death or personal injury of another or in serious property damage, which accident is obviously the result of negligence of such driver.
"3. Is an habitual negligent or reckless driver of a motor vehicle.
"4. Is incompetent to drive a motor vehicle."

"5. Is an habitual violator of the motor vehicle laws.
"6. Has permitted an unlawful or fraudulent use of such license.
"7. Has committed an offense in another state which if committed in this state would be grounds for suspension or revocation.
"8. Has been convicted of illegal transportation of intoxicating liquors."

This section, the legal division of the Department of Revenue is now agreed, gives the patrolmen the authority to suspend licenses for any of these causes, since the patrolmen are agreed to be, under the law, the duly authorized officers and agents of the Department of Revenue. By designating all peace officers as its authorized agents, the department may confer the same power on them, it is maintained.

Accordingly, a formal opinion from the legal division of the department is expected in the very near future to the effect that highway patrolmen, as officers and agents of the Department of Revenue, have the authority to suspend and take up the driving permits of all drivers arrested for offenses for which the revocation of licenses is mandatory, as well as for the other causes specified in Section 11 of the law. Accordingly, when patrolmen make arrests for drunken driving or make a second arrest of a driver for reckless driving, they will take up the driving permits of the drivers arrested, attach these to the warrants to be held until the trial and then immediately notify the Division of Highway Safety of the Department of Revenue, which in turn will inform the drivers, in writing, that their licenses have been suspended pending trial of the charges against them.

This procedure, it is pointed out, will prevent drivers facing conviction of drunken driving or reckless driving charges from seeking to evade punishment by seeking postponements or by taking appeals to higher courts, since their licenses will thus remain suspended until they are either acquitted or convicted.

Carolina Vs. Clemson Tonight in Season's First Court Battle

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 3.—Carolina formally opens its 1935 basketball season tonight at 8 o'clock when the White Phantoms, defending Southern Conference and State champions, meet the powerful Clemson Tigers here in the "Tin Can."

Coach Walter Skidmore gave the Carolina courtiers a try-out against Cone Memorial "Y" of Proximity this week. Although the Tar Heels won by 43-16, Coach Skidmore appeared none too pleased. The Clemson game will force the Tar Heels to throw all their power into the melee. The Tigers have shown plenty of strength this season in trouncing Auburn twice. Four veterans from last season's track outfit form the nucleus of the 1936 team. Sophomores provide valuable assistance.

SISTER ATTACKED WITH AXE IN CHURCH QUARREL

Because Margaret Cummins (left) refused to accompany her sister to church at Mt. Vernon, Ill., she is near death from axe wounds and the sister, Mrs. Ruth Laird (right), was jailed charged with assault with intent to murder. The 17-year-old high school girl told State's Attorney George W. Howard, Jr., the 34-year-old widow beat her. Shown with Mrs. Laird are Policemen Homer Cates and G. O. Isaacs. (Associated Press Photos)

Clemson's team which will more than likely take the floor at the start will be composed of Bill Bryce at center, Clyde Pennington and Bob Cheeves at forwards, and Tom Brown and Pete Spearman at guards. Every man is a six-footer. One of North Carolina's seniors will be starting his campaign to take All-Southern honors for the third consecutive season. As a sophomore, Jim McCachren landed an All-Southern guard post. Last year repeated. And now as captain, he is out to make the coveted berth again. Few athletes have the distinction of winning the honor three times.

Duke And Yale Cage Teams Clash Tonight In First Major Game

Durham, N. C., Jan. 3.—Annually among the basketball leaders in their respective sections, cage teams of Duke and Yale will clash in Duke gym tonight at eight o'clock in the first, and one of the major inter-sectional games which will be offered in North Carolina this season.

Yale brings to Durham one of the tallest teams seen in the state in several years. Four of the five starters are six feet two inches tall or better with the center, Roger Morton, standing six feet five inches.

Several members of the team which last year handed N. Y. U. its lone defeat of the season are back for the quint this winter but they have been having trouble holding their old places over the bids of outstanding sophomores.

It should be a great game—the best early tilt offered in the state for many years. Duke scored a victory over one of the east's best teams on their pre-season trip recently when they defeated Catholic university's cracks, 39-36. They also have a victory over Baltimore university to their credit.

One of the largest crowds of the entire season to come is expected for tonight's engagement. Extra bleachers have been placed in Duke gym to care for the fans. A full turn out of students, who resumed classes today after the holidays, is expected. It will be their first chance to see the 1936 edition of Blue Devil basketball.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, Jan. 2.—With Borah-for-President supporters making threat after threat to invade various states in an effort to line up liberal delegates for him, it begins to appear that one of the liveliest pre-convention scraps in many years is in the offing.

The Republican old guard has ideas of its own about the Idaho senator's nomination. If for no other reason than his threat to wrest control of the party machinery from them and put it in the hands of liberals, the conservatives are ready to do everything within their power to stop him.

Alone, old guard leaders might have a hard time heading him off. What they hope is that the quantity of hats tossed into the ring will check the Borah boom.

The weakness in this strategy, however, is that while Borah may fail to get the nomination himself, a candidate entirely acceptable to him may get it.

There's Vandenberg
There's Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, for example. More and more he is being talked of as a possible compromise candidate in the event of a convention deadlock. Vandenberg and Borah have a high regard for each other politically and personally. The Michigan senator is not identified with the old guard. As a matter of fact he is one of the leaders in that senate group of so-called "young Turks" who more than once have shown a disposition of independence. In the case of a deadlock in the convention it is not at all improbable that Borah would throw his support to Vandenberg. While the latter has declined flatly to be drawn into the pre-convention scramble for delegates—even to the point of requesting that his home state send an uncommitted delegation to the convention—there is little doubt that he would campaign vigorously for Borah should the latter be nominated.

Travel For London

The London boom is regarded by politicians as the principal threat to Borah's nomination at present. Old guard leaders in the east are building him up as much as they can. They are picturing him as another Calvin Coolidge—a true apostle of economy in government.

There are hints that the Kansas governor will visit New York before long at the invitation of the Young Republicans to make a speech but principally for the purpose of letting the east get a look at him.

London is little more than a name in the east. He has made one speech to date—in Ohio before the Cleveland chamber of Commerce. His supporters in the east think it imperative for him to make himself better known.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady three lower to one higher with a moderate evening up trade.

There was some buying of old positions and in October. There were no sales of January on the opening call, but later there was a sale of 11.77 or two net lower.

Trading continued quiet, prices eased slightly under some scattered liquidation with January selling out to 11.33 or six points net lower while other months were unchanged to three net lower at midday, with March around 11.43 and October at 10.64.
