DISORDERS IN FRANCE CAUSE MUCH CONCERN

One of Royal Brigades Provoke Paris Disorders

PREMIER TAKES OVER COMMAND

Reluctant, However, To Make Arrests for Fear of Rekindling Rioting Flames

Paris, Feb. 14.—(AP)—One of France's Royal brigades "The King's Henchmen" provoked short-lived disorders and aroused apprehension today over possible consequences of the band, virtually defied by the most militant Royalists.

Premier Albert Sarraut, whose decree dissolved all Royalist organizations in France, was signed by President Albert LeBrun and promulgated today, took command of the situation on his capacity as minister of the interior.

Police searched the headquarters of the "Action Francaise"—the Royalist party's "marching wings" which is known as "The King's Henchmen"—but Sarraut indicated he was reluctant to arrest any of the leaders for fear of rekindling the flames of rioting which flared two years ago.

The premier considered at the same time Socialist demands for sterner action against Royalist leaders, caused by an attack yesterday on Leon Blum, Socialist leader, the immediate cause of the Royalists' dissolution decree.

The Socialists were powerful enough to overthrow the government if they failed to attain satisfaction.

The Royalists, on the other hand, offered virtually defiance to the decree which meant any public demonstration would be broken up and participants prosecuted as an effective measure.

Blum, dragged from his automobile yesterday while he waited for the funeral procession of Jacques Bainville, distinguished historian and a founder of "Action Francaise," was beaten and rolled in the streets, and was in a serious condition.

GRANGE CHIEF IN THIS STATE

Discusses Recent Ruling of Supreme Court on AAA

Greensboro, Feb. 14.—"The United States Supreme Court in making the third most important decision in its history did not kill farmers' rights to equality," declared L. J. Taber, of Columbus, Ohio, Master of the National Grange, today when asked for his opinion relative to the recent AAA ruling.

"The court only turned thumbs down on the method then employed," said the Grange leader. "The challenge is to immediately find a program that will give to American agriculture equality and justice." "I have no doubt that this can be found if the farmers will organize and cooperate as they should."

National Master Taber arrived in Greensboro this morning from Washington, where yesterday he was in conference with President Roosevelt and Congressional leaders.

Sawyer Reinstated to Highway Office

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 14.—(AP)—Circuit Judge J. Duncan Bellinger today reinstated Chief Highway Commissioner Ben Sawyer and permanently enjoined Governor Olin Johnson from further removal proceedings against the official he had made the central target of his highway fight.

Judge Bellinger handed down a 40-page order granting all the requests made in a petition by Sawyer last month. The order declared Johnson's opinion of Sawyer void and cancelled an execution rule for him to show cause why he should not be permanently removed from office and enjoined the governor from further action.

The circuit judge held that the state highway commission which had elected Sawyer to serve until 1938 had exclusive right under the state law to dismiss him.

WRITER WARNS OF JAP ACTION ASK STUDENTS QUIT COLLEGE

Soviet Author Advises of Trying Russian Nerves

Moscow, Feb. 14.—(AP)—Coincident with publication of reports of a Japanese-Manchoukuan invasion of Soviet-occupied Outer Mongolia, the authoritative Soviet writer, Karl Radek, declared in his Izvestia today that Japanese militarists "have lost their minds" and warned them not to try Soviet's nerves.

"They will learn our nerves are in complete order and if necessary our hands, too," Radek asserted.

Numerous clashes have occurred recently along the Manchoukuan-Outer Mongolia border, the most serious a clash between Japanese-Manchoukuan troops and Outer Mongolian forces Wednesday in which, Soviet dispatches said, ten Japanese were killed after invading Outer Mongolia.

"The whole world," Radek asserted, "will place the blame for recent events on the shoulders of the Japanese army and its institutions in Japan and Manchoukuan."

The Japanese used two airplanes in the attack as well as three field guns, Soviet advice said, but were never driven out of Mongolian territory.

There has been no demand as yet from Manchoukuan as to Outer Mongolia's demands for cessation of allied raids.

Pitt County Man Dies Of Injuries Inflicted Himself

Coroner Finds Calvin Joyner Shot Self While Others of Family Eating Breakfast

Calvin Joyner, about 60 years old, died instantly this morning from shot gun wounds, Coroner A. A. Ellwanger said.

Following an inquest, Coroner Ellwanger said Joyner shot himself at the home of a son at Joyner's crossroads, about a mile from Farmville.

Coroner Ellwanger said the man had threatened on several occasions to take his life. While other members of the family were at the breakfast table this morning he went to the front room and shot himself with a shot gun. Death was instantaneous.

No reason was given as the cause of the act, but Mr. Ellwanger said ill health was the only reason advanced in his investigation.

Funeral arrangements were not available here this afternoon. Neither were the names of survivors.

MUCH DISPUTE OVER POWERS SUPREME BAR

Argument Heard As Senate Debates New Farm Bill

VOTE EXPECTED BY TOMORROW

Sen. Robinson Contends Supreme Court Impeached the Value of AAA Decision

Washington, Feb. 14.—(AP)—Amid sharp disputes over the question of limiting Supreme Court powers, the new $500,000,000 farm bill moved toward a final Senate vote either late today or tomorrow.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, contended the court has "impeached" the value of its AAA decision by holding agriculture was a local problem.

From the opposite side of the chamber Senator Dickinson (R-Iowa) declared the basic question is "whether we are going to do away with the old system of government by majority."

"It would be," Dickinson said, "if a law were passed barring the court from declaring acts unconstitutional by a five to four decision."

Senator Norris (R-Neb.) stepped into the argument to say so many such discussions in the court "create some doubt." He urged anew that unanimous decisions should be required to invalidate acts of Congress.

PITT SCHOOLS OPEN MONDAY

To Resume Operations After Being Closed Some Time

D. H. Conley, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, announced today that tentative plans call for the re-opening of all units in the system Monday morning following a closing down due to bad weather and roads.

A few of the schools have operated part of this week, despite the roads, but most of the units have been closed for the past week or so.

The schools will resume operation approximately two weeks behind regular schedule. Schools in the county system were originally scheduled to close the term on May 8. If no more closings are necessary and the lost time is not made up on Saturdays, they will close about May 22.

School officials are considering operating on Saturdays so students will be able to get out at the scheduled time and start work on farms. Mr. Conley said this would be left up to local school officials. He said, however, no schools would operate tomorrow.

The city schools lost but little time on account of the bad weather. For a time they operated on a bad weather schedule but this has been abandoned with the coming of better weather.

Imports for January totaled 14,547 bales compared with 12,738 for December last and 7,682 for January last year.

Exports for January totaled 525,636 bales of lint and 17,732 of linters compared with 877,480 and 40,480 for December last and 465,711 and 12,573 for January last year.

He characterized his work with a church as an "all-the-way-through" revival and expresses his interest in his present work with the churches which call him, as follows:

"My longing to help our vast army of striving and sometimes struggling pastors in bringing to pass a real 'all-the-way-through' revival."

The objectives are (1) to revive the spiritual life of the membership of the churches. (2) To bring the spiritually revived into personal cooperation for the strengthening of the local church and the on-going of the Kingdom. (3) To make more vital every department of church work, and to have all departments contribute to the building up of the preaching services of the church.

The lack of co-ordination in behalf of these services, I have found to be the most serious defect in the church of today. (4) With all this in mind it is only natural that much attention is given to reaching the unsaved and bringing them at once into membership, with the warmest possible spiritual atmosphere to welcome them."

'BUCK' TAYLOR CONFESSES TO JONES' DEATH

Admits Driving Car Which Killed Local Man

HELD PENDING FINAL INQUEST

Body of Man Found on Highway Near Greenwood Cemetery Sunday A. M.

J. C. "Buck" Taylor, employee of White Chevrolet Company of this city, today confessed that Saturday night his car struck and killed Jesse Jones, and police held him in custody pending a coroner's inquest to be held later today. Jones' body was found about 18 feet from the Washington highway just east of this city Sunday morning. A hole in the back of his head was the only wound and officers at first expressed the opinion that Jones had been murdered and then his body thrown from a car along the highway.

Following the finding of the body Coroner A. A. Ellwanger started an investigation and held the inquest open awaiting further findings. As the investigation by officers continued they abandoned the theory of murder and after establishing the approximate time of the death the finger of circumstance pointed to Taylor's being on the highway about that time. Chief of Police George Clark visited Taylor's garage yesterday and found that the car bore a broken glass in the left hand front door, indicating that it had struck something. This morning he sent for Taylor's car and called him to police headquarters.

Examination of the car showed that on the upper hinge of the door was blood, and human hair, and when confronted with this fact, Taylor came through with his story of the accident. He stated that he had been in Washington in his car in company with Sam Godley and two young women. He said that during the trip several drinks were taken. Enroute to Greenville Godley left the car at a filling station near Grimsland telling them he was going to spend the night. Taylor said he drove on toward Greenville and that about the location of the Log Cabin, about two miles east of the city, he came upon another car traveling in the same direction and attempted to pass. He stated that the driver of the other car prevented his passing despite repeated efforts until about the time the car reached the curve near the cemetery. He stated that he stepped down on the gas to pass and as he was abreast of the other car he saw a man stagger from the left shoulder of the road into the path of his car. There was no room to turn out because of the other car, he said, and the leaning figure was struck by the side of his car as it passed. He continued on to Greenville to put out the two young women, he said, intending to return to the scene of the accident. On his way back to the scene, however, he said he lost his nerve and stopped at a nearby filling station for a few minutes and then drove home.

Taylor has taken his car from the garage only one time since placing it there Saturday but no effort had been made to remove the hair or stain from the door hinge. Officers examining the car declared that apparently Jones had staggered toward the car just at the right moment for the door to knock his hat off and the hinge to strike his head without leaving other marks. The officers stated that an investigation of Jones' whereabouts prior to the accident revealed that he was in a drunken condition and had stopped at the home of Roy Harris near the scene of the accident, to make an inquiry shortly before the accident occurred.

Coroner A. A. Ellwanger was out of this city this morning on another investigation and Taylor was held by officers pending the resumption of the coroner's inquest later today.

Of 27 automobile drivers' licenses reported revoked already this week, 26 were for the charge of drunken driving. The best advice we know in this connection is: "If you drink, don't drive. If you drive, don't drink."

HOW DO YOU DRIVE?

Two of every three of the more than 500,000 automobile accidents in this country last year were caused by mistakes by drivers. Others were the result of carelessness on the part of pedestrians, while others were the result of downright "cussedness."

While the nation's death toll last year was around 300 more than the previous year, figures reveal that mistakes on the part of drivers figured in nearly 1,500 more deaths which is evidence that it is necessary that drivers who will not change their present conduct on the highways must be banned from the operation of automobiles.

Not all the speedy and reckless drivers figured in accidents last year, for there were thousands who took just as great chances but were lucky enough to escape an accident. Here's how the driving accidents stacked up last year:

Number of Accidents
Exceeding speed limit	121,460
On wrong side of road	85,770
Did not have right-of-way	133,850
Cutting in	17,680
Passing standing street car	2,130
Passing on curve or hill	8,520
Passing on wrong side	2,130
Failed to signal and
Improper signalling	27,700
Car ran away—no driver	3,200
Drove off roadway	55,940
Reckless driving	51,670
Miscellaneous	20,780
Total	532,720

You probably did not figure in an accident, but the chances are that you were guilty of some of these offenses.

REPEAL THE LIQUOR LAW

TO THE EDITOR:
In the account of the meeting of the A. B. C. Board in Tuesday's Reflector, we read of plans to control the legalized sale of liquor; among them one to purchase and distribute a booklet teaching the harmful effects of alcohol on the human system. Why not bring out Steele's Physiology and Hygiene, the study of which was largely instrumental in bringing about prohibition. Who knows why this study was abolished? Could the National Brewers' Association, or some kindred body, have exerted an influence?

THE BOOMERANG CLUE

SYNOPSIS: Bobby Jones and Frankie Descent are trying to discover whether the man Bobby found murdered was Alan Carstairs, and whether the murderer was Dr. Nicholson, or Roger Bassington-French. Bobby has explored Dr. Nicholson's drug store, and found suspicious circumstances, not the least of which is the woman in distress who now is calling on Bobby—she knows as Frankie's chauffeur, Frankie just has returned to the Bassington-French house from a trip to London.

Chapter 26 LADY IN DISTRESS

"YOU said—you said—you'd help me," the woman declared. "Perhaps I shouldn't have come—"

Here Bobby broke in, finding words and assurance at the same time. "Shouldn't have come? Nonsense! You did quite right to come. Of course you should have come. And I'll do anything—anything in the world to help you. Don't be frightened. You're quite safe now."

The color rose a little in the girl's face. She said abruptly: "Who are you? You're—you're not a chauffeur. I mean you may be a chauffeur, but you're not one really."

Bobby understood her meaning in spite of her confused words.

"One does all sort of jobs nowadays," he said. "I used to be in the Navy. As a matter of fact I'm not exactly a chauffeur—but that doesn't matter now. Anyway, I assure you you can trust me and—tell me all about it."

Her flush had deepened. "You must think me mad," she murmured. "You must think me quite mad."

"No, no."

"Yes—coming here like this. But I was so frightened—so terribly frightened—Her voice died away. Her eyes widened as though they saw some vision of terror.

Bobby seized her hand firmly. "Look here," he said. "It's quite all right. Everything's going to be all right. You're safe now—with a friend. Nothing shall happen to you."

He felt the answering pressure of her fingers.

"When you stepped out into the moonlight the other night," she said in a low hurried voice. "It was—it was like a dream—a dream of deliverance. I didn't know who you were or where you came from. But it gave me hope and I determined to come and find you—and—tell you."

"That's right," said Bobby encouragingly. "Tell me. Tell me everything."

She drew her hand away suddenly. "If I do, you'll think I'm mad—that I've gone wrong in my head from being in that place with those others."

"No, I shan't. I shan't really."

"You will. It sounds mad."

"I shall know it isn't. Tell me. Please tell me."

She drew a little farther away from him, sitting very upright, her eyes staring straight in front of her.

"It's just this," she said. "I'm afraid I'm going to be murdered."

"Murdered?"

"Yes, that sounds mad, doesn't it? Like—what do they call it?—persecution mania."

"No," said Bobby. "You don't sound mad at all—just frightened. Tell me who wants to murder you and why?"

SHE was silent a minute or two, twisting and untwisting her hands. Then she said in a low voice, "My husband."

"Your husband?" Bobby thought whirled round in Bobby's head. "Who are you?" he said abruptly.

It was her turn to look surprised. "Don't you know?"

"I haven't the least idea."

She said: "I'm Moira Nicholson. My husband is Dr. Nicholson."

"Then you're not a patient there?"

"A patient? Oh, no." Her face darkened suddenly. "I suppose you think I speak like one."

"No, no, I didn't mean that at all."

"It sounds mad, I know. But it isn't—it isn't! I see it in his eyes when he looks at me. And queer things have happened—accidents."

"Accidents?" said Bobby sharply.

"Yes. Oh, I know it sounds hysterical and as though I were making it all up—"

"Not a bit," said Bobby. "It sounds perfectly reasonable. Go on. About these accidents."

"They were just accidents. He backed the car, not seeing I was there. I just jumped aside in time. And some stuff that was in the wrong bottle—oh, stupid things." She swallowed convulsively.

"Why does your husband want to do away with you?" asked Bobby.

Perhaps he hardly expected a definite answer—but the answer came promptly.

"Because he wants to marry Sylvia Bassington-French."

"What? But she's married already."

"I know. But he's arranging for that."

"How do you mean?"

"I don't know exactly. But I know that he's trying to get Mr. Bassington-French brought to the Grange as a patient."

"And then?"

"I don't know, but I think something would happen." She shuddered.

"He's got some noid over Mr. Bassington-French. I don't know what it is."

"Bassington-French takes morphine," said Bobby.

"It that it? Jasper gives it to him, I suppose."

"It comes by post."

"Perhaps Jasper doesn't do it directly—he's very cunning. Mr. Bassington-French may not know it comes from Jasper—but I'm sure it does."

As she spoke Bobby was aware of a glimpse into a strange evil atmosphere.

He said abruptly, "You say your husband wants to marry Mrs. Bassington-French?"

Moira nodded. "He's crazy about her."

"And she?"

"I don't know," said Moira slowly. "I can't make up my mind. On the surface she seems fond of her husband and little boy, and content and peaceful. I've wondered sometimes whether she is an entirely different woman from what we all think she is—whether perhaps she isn't playing a part and playing it very well."

"What about the brother Roger?"

"I don't know much about him. He's nice, I think, but he's the sort of person who would be very easily deceived. He's quite taken in by Jasper, I know. Jasper is working on him to persuade Mr. Bassington-French to come to the Grange. I believe he thinks it's all his own idea."

She leaned forward suddenly and caught Bobby's sleeve. "Don't let him come to the Grange," she implored.

BOBBY was silent a minute or two, turning over the amazing story in his mind.

"Haven't you ever thought of leaving Nicholson?" he asked at last.

"How could I? I've nowhere to go. I've no money. If anyone took me in, what sort of story could I tell?"

"Look here," Bobby said bluntly. "I'm going to ask you a question straight out. Did you know a man called Alan Carstairs?"

He saw the color come up in her cheeks. "Why do you ask me that?"

"Because it's rather important that I should know. My idea is that you did know Alan Carstairs, that perhaps at some time or other you gave him your photograph."

She was silent a moment, her eyes downcast. Then she lifted her head and looked him in the face. "That's quite true," she said.

"You knew him before you were married?"

"Yes."

"Has he been down here to see you since you were married?"

She hesitated, then said, "Yes, once."

"About a month ago, would that be?"

"Yes. I suppose it would be about a month."

"He knew you were living down here?"

"I don't know how he knew—I hadn't told him. I had never even written to him since my marriage."

"But he found out and came here to see you. Did your husband know that?"

"No."

"You think not. But he might have known all the same?"

"I suppose he might, but he never said anything."

"Did you discuss your husband at all with Carstairs? Did you tell him of your fears as to your safety?"

She shook her head. "I hadn't begun to suspect them."

"But you were unhappy?"

"Yes."

"And you told him so?"

"No. I tried not to show in any way that my marriage hadn't been a success."

"But he might have guessed it all the same," said Bobby gently.

"I suppose he might," she admitted in a low voice.

"Do you think—I don't know how to put it—but do you think that he knew anything about your husband—that he suspected, for instance, that this nursing home place mightn't be quite what it seemed to be?"

ging of a well-known automobile stock. It sent its hawks into downtown Manhattan but they returned empty-handed of damaging evidence. So there were smiles when the company's recent earnings statement bulwarked the rise in the stock.

The results of this X-ray furnish a tip on New Deal insiders' bitter resentment against certain Wall Street figures—the du Ponts, Johnnie Raskob, Hutton.

By limiting the supply of securities and expanding purchasing power, the Rooseveltians maintain they have built up the market. Privately they're passing out word that du Pont Nemours stock leaped from $33.50 on March 1, 1935 to about $140 on the night of Al Smith's remarks about "communism and socialism." But all the thanks they get is the American Liberty League.

LARCENY: It was after squinting at his economists' confidential studies of processing-lax payments that Henry Wallace characterized the Supreme Court's $200,000,000 refund to packers and millers as "legalized larceny." The statistics indicate that the processors shifted the levy to producers and consumers.

On the face of the evidence government lawyers may make out a moral case for recovery of the money. The scheme is to get it back by touching up the new farm tax measure with a retroactive twist. But the man who answers all taxation conundrums for Congress insists it can't be done. He is L. H. Parker, chief-of-staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Mr. Parker says it's a well-known rule of law that only changes in existing statutes can be made retroactive. Another rule holds that once a law has been held unconstitutional, it never existed legally. Any substitute farm tax measure therefore becomes new legislation and

After a number of games, Miss Helen Burnette was found to hold high score and was presented an attractive Valentine box of candy. The winners of table prizes, Mrs. Iverson Skinner, Jr., Mrs. L. E. The Pimply Skin.
Despite the wide prevalence of what is known as acne vulgaris (commonly described as pimply skin), and despite the vast amount of research thereon, physicians still do not know why certain individuals develop acne and others are free of it. Nor is there any treatment for this condition which is applicable alike to all cases and which will yield a positive cure.

The forerunner of the pimple is the blackhead. Blackheads result from the mechanical blocking of the mouths of the oil-secreting glands of the skin. This blocking is due to an excessive growth of the horny layer of the skin. As a result of the blocking, the fatty substance secreted by the gland is retained and becomes admixed with the cells from the walls of the blind outlet.

One the blackhead is formed the pimple follows as promptly as the site becomes inflamed.

The over-development of the horny layer of the skin is a physiologic process normally witnessed during puberty. For this reason, apparently, many a childhood fair skin becomes blemished with pimples at puberty.

But puberty cannot entirely account for acne vulgaris, because many individuals go through puberty without developing pimples. Acne vulgaris is more common among males than females, the ratio being about three to one.

Treatment, when the condition is severe enough to require more than the extra care of the skin given to it by careful cleansing with soap and water, must be based upon careful study of the individual case. At times, corrective changes in the mode of living affecting diet, the elimination of constipation and of food of infection, suffice to clear the skin. Frequently, however, re-course must be had to X-ray treatment. This usually proves effective but it is a dangerous remedy which can be administered safely only by those expert in X-ray therapy.

Overdoing Honesty.
By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH
Honesty was a fetish in the Smith family. Mrs. Smith spoke of it frequently as a beautiful thing. Mr. Smith lauded it as if it were the most important virtue. A child who diverged from the truth by a hair's breadth was made to feel that he had committed an almost unforgivable sin.

The effect on the children varied and would have given food or thought to a student of human nature. One child, who was inclined to be introspective and over-conscientious, became so obsessed by the fear of lying that she was unable to make a plain statement of fact. If she tried to tell of going for a walk and seeing a dead cat on the road-side she might take 10 minutes for the story.

"I went out at two o'clock—well maybe it wasn't exactly two, but 10 minutes after—at any rate I think it was that time. And on Fulton street—no, it was John street—I saw a lovely gray Persian cat—well, I'm not sure—it may have been a coon cat. It was dead—at least it didn't move and looked dead. And was lying in the street—well, really in the gutter."

There will be a Turkey Supper given at the York Memorial Methodist Church, Albemarle Avenue, Tuesday evening, Feb. 18, from five o'clock—25c per plate. This is the supper that was postponed from Tuesday, Feb. 4th.—(Adv.)

LOCALS PLAY HERE TONIGHT

In addition to the game scheduled between the boys quints of the Greenville high school and the Wilson high, there will be an extra treat for local basketball lovers tonight in the local gym.

The added attraction will be a game between the girls sextet of the Washington high and the local high. This game will start at 7:30 o'clock, after which time the boys game will be played. During the half of the boys game, the Shirts and Skins, a team composed of youngsters will stage a game themselves. The game played by the little fellows brought forth many laughs the last time they gave a performance.

COLLEGE FIVE IN GAME HERE

With a percentage of 800, the East Carolina Teachers College boys basketball team will be seeking its ninth victory tonight at 7:30 against Louisville College. The Pirates thus far this season have scored a total of 291 points while their opponents were netting 291 points. The E. C. T. C. boys have averaged winning every game by a ten-point margin and they are expected to play hard tonight to uphold that enviable record.

The Louisville quint has not been so successful, but the rivalry between the two schools discounts any odds the Pirates may have at present. The Greenville team managed to win twice last year from Louisville, after hard-fought games.

Tonight, the boys from Louisville will try to get partial revenge at least.

N. Y. Stock Market

STOX New York, Feb. 14.—(AP)—A top heavy offering of stocks today jumbled the stock market into an irregular pattern with aircrafts and munitions standing out as the relatively firm spots.

American Telephone snapped up strongly and rails followed meagerly. Studebaker and General Motors edged forward and Chrysler was about unchanged.

Other gains of about a point or more included Atlantic Coast Line.

The late tone was irregular with the turnover about 2,800,000 shares.

MILITARY RECORDS AS JOB CRITERIONS IRK FRENCH YOUTH

Paris (AP)—Young Frenchmen, now required to serve two years in the army, navy or air force, have appealed to future employers not to judge them from their military records.

Protests arose in the nationalist and left press when it was learned that many youths, their military service ended, were unable to find work because they had been in military prisons for minor infractions of discipline.
