

Some republicans were expected to oppose the passage of the permanent state cooperative features of the measure without prior public hearing and to insist on restricting the use of land taken out of production.

With the continuation of bad weather there is still a need for food and clothing among many families in this community. If you look about you, you can probably find some family in need that you can help. Upon those who have been more fortunate rests the burden of caring for their less fortunate neighbors.

Committeemen from 25 eastern North Carolina counties yesterday voted to organize the farmers into a branch of the American Farm Bureau Federation.
Now that a definite move is under way to organize the farmers it is to be hoped that all the farmers will join, not only those in the 25 counties represented in yesterday's meeting but all over the state and the south as a whole. When the farmers really join together and make up their minds that they are going to work together for the common good they will find little difficulty in the way of getting fair prices for their products with the resulting benefits for each individual farmer.

Now that the Supreme Court has settled the question as to the government's right to sell electric power generated at Muscle Shoals, it is to be hoped that steps will move rapidly toward really finding out just what is a fair price for electricity to the consumer. Using the power from Muscle Shoals and other government generating points as a "yardstick" the government is in position to arrive at what electric current should sell for and then rates can be regulated accordingly.

In short, the figures won't add up unless Hitler and Stalin—two dictators—join the new international game of "battleship, battleship, who's got the battleships."

It is known on the inside that Russia will publicize the tonnage of her ships, the size of her guns and future building plans if Germany will. But Paris won't agree to Hitler's inclusion in the compact for fear it will be accepted as tacit approval of the Berlin-London agreement permitting Germany to build a navy. The rainbow hope of settling this problem is the reason for prolonging sessions at London beyond the time appointed for adjournment—or recess.

PRESSURE: Privately President Roosevelt is getting a thrill—and also learning a thing or two about politics—from Congressional protests against curtailment of C.C.C. activities and a reduction in the number of camps.

It happens that these work-and-health resorts for boys are the apple of the President's eye. He is inordinately proud of this experiment and would like to expand it.
But budgetary considerations forced him to order that enrollees be reduced from 600,000 to 300,000, which meant the elimination of

THE BOOMERANG CLUB BY AGATHA CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS: Frankie Derwent and Bobby Jones have set themselves to find the murderer of Alan Carstairs. They thought they make found him too, in the person of Roger Huntington-Frank. But now Moira Nicholson, wife of a doctor who runs a drug store near the Boeingtown-Frank place, has given information which points toward her husband as the guilty man.
Frankie is on her way to investigate the only really damaging evidence they have against Roger—the fact that a photograph of Mrs.
Nicholson disappeared from the victim's pocket, presumably while Roger was watching the body.

Chapter 20

THE PICTURE

FORTUNE favored her, for she fell in with Roger not far from the house.

"Hello," he said. "You're back early from London."

"I wasn't in the mood for London," said Frankie.

"Have you been to the house yet?" he asked. His face grew grave.
"Nicholson, I find, has been telling Sylvia the truth about poor old Henry. Poor girl, she's taken it hard. It seems she had absolutely no suspicion."

"I know," said Frankie. "They were both together in the library when I came in. She was—very much upset."

"Look here, Frankie," said Roger.
"Henry has absolutely got to be cured. It isn't as though this drug habit had a real hold on him. He hasn't been taking it so very long—"

Frankie interrupted.
"Look here," she said. "There's something I want to ask you. Just a question. I hope you won't think I'm simply frightfully impertinent."

"What is it?" asked Roger, his attention arrested.

"Do you mind telling me whether you took a photograph out of that man's pocket—the one who fell over the cliff at Marchholt?"

She was studying him closely, watching every detail of his expression. She was satisfied with what he saw.

"Now how on earth did you come to guess that?" he said. "Or did Moira tell you?—But then, she doesn't know—"

"You did then?"

"I suppose I'll have to admit it."

"Why?"

Roger seemed embarrassed again.
"Well, look at it as I did. Here I am mounting guard over a strange dead body. Something is sticking out of his pocket. I look at it. By an amazing coincidence it's the photograph of a woman I know—a married woman—and a woman who I guess is not too happily married. What's going to happen? An inquiry. Publicly. Possibly the wretched girl's name in all the papers. I acted on impulse. Took the photograph and tore it up. I dare say I acted wrongly, but Moira Nicholson is a nice little soul and I didn't want her to get landed in a mess."

Frankie drew a deep breath. "So that was it," she said. "If you only knew—"

"Knew what?" said Roger, puzzled.

"I don't know that I can tell you just now," said Frankie. "I may later. It's all rather complicated. I can quite see why you took the photograph, but was there any objection to your saying you recognized the man? Oughtn't you to have told the police who he was?"

"Recognized him?" said Roger.
He looked bewildered. "How could I recognize him? I didn't know him."

"Alan Carstairs—you did know Alan Carstairs?"

"Oh, yes. Man who came down with the Rivingtons. But the dead man wasn't Alan Carstairs."

"But he was?"

THAT stared at each other. Then Frankie said, with a renewal of suspicion. "Surely you must have recognized him?"

"I never saw his face," said Roger.
"What?"

"No. There was a handkerchief spread over it."

Frankie stared at him. Suddenly she remembered that in Bobby's first account of the tragedy he had mentioned putting a handkerchief over the face of the dead man.

"You never thought of looking?"
went on Frankie.

"No. Why should I?"

"Of course," thought Frankie, "if I'd found a photograph of somebody I knew in a dead person's pocket, I should simply have had to look at the person's face. How beautifully lucrative men are!" She paused for a moment. "Poor little thing," she went on. "I'm so terribly sorry for her."

"Whom do you mean? Moira Nicholson? Why are you so sorry for her?"

"Because she's frightened," said Frankie slowly.

"She always looks half scared to me."

many camps. Many of the recruits have returned to private industry and demand for enlistment steady-ly decreasing. In short, CCC camps have fulfilled their emergency purpose and should be trimmed to fit 1936 needs.

But the other day, Rep. Adolph Sabath of Chicago informed Mr.
Roosevelt that Congress would not stand for any economy in this woodchopping field. He demanded that every camp be retained, adding that the vote on this proposition in death. But what is she frightened of?"

"She's sure her husband's trying to murder her," said Frankie abruptly.

"Oh, my dear!" he protested.
"Sit down," said Frankie. "I'm going to tell you a lot of things."

She gave him a clear and careful narrative of all that had occurred since the day Bobby and Dr. Thomas had found the body. She kept back only the fact that her accident had not been genuine, but she let it appear that she had lingered at Merroway Court through her intense desire to get to the bottom of the mystery.

"Is this really true?" he demanded.
"All this about the fellow Jones being poisoned and all that?"

"Absolute gospel truth," "Sorry for my incredulity—but the facts do take a bit of swallowing, don't they?"

He was silent for a minute, frowning.

"Look here," he said at last. "Fantastic though the whole thing sounds, I think you must be right in your first deduction. This man, Alex Pritchard, or Alan Carstairs, must have been murdered. If he wasn't, there seems no point in the attack upon Jones. So far that seems sense-—but I don't see by what process of reasoning you fix on Nicholson as the criminal."

"He's such a sinister man, and he's got a dark-blue Talbot, and he was away from here on the day that Bobby was poisoned."

"That's all pretty thin as evidence."

"There are all the things Mrs.
Nicholson told Bobby."

She recited them—and once again they sounded melodramatic and un-substantial repeated aloud against the background of the peaceful English landscape.

Rogers shrugged his shoulders.
"She thinks he supplies Henry with the drug—but that's pure conjecture. She's not a particle of evidence that he does so. She thinks he wants to get Henry to the Grange as a patient—well, that's a very natural wish for a doctor to have. A doctor wants as many patients as he can get. She thinks he's in love with Sylvia. Well, as to that, of course, I can't say."

"There's her belief that he wants to murder her," urged Frankie.

ROGER looked at her quizzically.
"You take that seriously?"

"She believes it, anyhow."

Roger nodded and lit a cigarette.
"The question is how much attention to pay that belief of hers," he said. "It's a creepy sort of place, the Grange, full of queer customers.
Living there would tend to upset a woman's balance, especially if she were of the timid, nervous type."

"Then you don't think it's true?"

"I don't say that. She probably believes quite honestly that he is trying to kill her. But is there any foundation in fact for that belief?"

Frankie remembered with curious clearness Moira's saying, "It's just nerves." And somehow the more fact that she had said that seemed to Frankie to point to the fact that it was not nerves; but she did not know how to explain her point of view to Roger.

Meanwhile the young man was going on:

"Mind you, if you could show that Nicholson had been in Marchholt on the day of the cliff tragedy, that would be very different—or if we could find any definite motive linking him with Carstairs. But it seems to me you're ignoring the real suspects."

"What real suspects?"

"The—what did you call them—Haymans?"

"Caymans."

"That's it. Now, they are undoubtedly in it up to the hilt. First, there's the false identification of the body.
Then there's their insistence on the point of whether the poor fellow said anything before he died. And I think it's logical to assume, as you did, that the Buenos Aires offer came from them or was arranged for by them."

"Oh!" cried Frankie. "I've just thought of something. Up to now, you see, I've been assuming that the photograph of Mrs. Cayman was substituted for the one of Moira Nicholson."

"I can assure you," said Roger,
"that I have never treasured the likeness of a Mrs. Cayman."

"Well, she was handsome in a way," admitted Frankie. "A sort of bold, coarse, vainglorious way. But the point is this: Carstairs must have had her photograph on him as well as Mrs. Nicholson's."

Roger nodded. "And you think—" he suggested.

referred to reports that GOP master-minds had already selected a 1936 ticket of Landon and Wadsworth. But Jim replied: "If that's so, I'll order in the dozen of the same kind." And the Congressman from New York meant it. Neither the presidency nor second place appeals to him. He intends to remain in the House so that his son, now a member of the New York Legislature, may follow in the family footsteps.

But political fates may upset the famous New Yorker's plans. GOP chieftains belatedly realize that all their first-flight nominees—Landon, Dickinson, Borah and Vandenberg —were once labeled as dry. The only candidate without a prohibition tag is Col. Frank Knox, and he is regarded as out of the running. So they may need a dripping wet like Wad with under they are to be haunted by prohibition ghosts.

newspapers to obtain pictures of troution. No photographs will be on that occasion of any Republican candidate for Governor in New York history. He knows all the letters in the political alphabet.

INFLATION: Financial insiders are delighted with reports from trusted scouts that the paper money crowd in Congress is licked and knows it. They have discovered that White House (and organized labor) opposition is a stone wall they cannot hope to get through of around. They continue to make loud sounds—but only for the record. Father Coughlin hasn't yet conceded defeat of the Frazier-Lenke bill, but the informed say his prestige will get a terrible shaking if he tries to force the issue.
Keen New Yorkers have a hunch that the President doesn't mind the inflationary agitation on Capitol Hill in the least. If it continues he will have a grand chance to play the savior of sound money by putting his foot down hard at an opportunistic moment—and they expect him to do just that.

If farm pressure gets too hot he could still use his power to devalue the dollar by nine cents more and take the curse off it by explaining that this was necessary to protect us from a far worse inflationary fate. It's not expected.

EDUCATION: There has been a subtle change in the tactics of the National Association of Manufacturers under the leadership of its new president—Colby M. Chester of General Foods. You may have noticed that it no longer features a steady stream of anti-New Deal blasts.

Mr. Chester—who has been making a speaking tour around the country—has been sparing in his criticisms of the administration. He has dwelt rather on suggestions as to how industry can best cooperatwith government in solving unemployment and other pressing problems. He urges a comprehensive survey of unemployment—there are no really authoritative statistics on that subject yet—so that business and government alike can have a factual foundation on which to base future efforts at solution.

The keynote of Mr. Chester's policy is that big industry should remedy abuses which make it vulnerable to political attack instead of blandly denying their existence.
Then he favors a broad-scale campaign of institutional advertising to educate the public on the constructive contributions of business to the national welfare.

ANONYMOUS: John Lewis' projected radio campaign on behalf of his industrial union plan flutters the industrial doves.
Heretofore union organizers have done their recruiting almost entirely by personal contact. Corporations fighting the closed shop have found it relatively simple to keep track of union agents and to neutralize their activities. The motor industry has been especially efficient at this.

It would be much harder to stop Lewis if he takes to active proselytizing on the air. Surveillance of workers' radios is impractical. Many workers who would be afraid to talk to union recruiters for fear of losing their jobs might be willing to sign up secretly with Lewis—protected by complete anonymity until he had built up an organization strong enough to stand on its feet in public. If this threat becomes serious, it's a safe bet that broadcasting companies will be emphatically urged to deny facilities to the Mine Workers' chief.

PREVENT: The high margin requirements imposed by the Securities Exchange Commission has cut down the volume of speculative stock buying—but most brokers are now willing to agree that the development is healthy for their business. It will be a tremendous factor for stability in times of stress.

Going to town with Luckies
A LIGHT SMOKE
of rich, ripe-bodied tobacco

Over a period of years, certain basic advances have been made in the selection and treatment of cigarette tobaccos for Lucky Strike Cigarettes.
They include preliminary analyses of the tobacco selected; use of center leaves; the higher heat treatment of tobacco ("Toasting"); consideration of acid-alkaline balance, with consequent definite improvement in flavor; and controlled uniformity in the finished product.
All these combine to produce a superior cigarette—a modern cigarette, a cigarette made of rich, ripe-bodied tobaccos—A Light Smoke.

Russian Singers Friday
The beautiful voices of Russian religious music, the innermost voice of the nation's very soul, the music of the Christ—a spirit of Russia, is in the liturgical, or cathedral songs of Russia, some of the very greatest of which will be sung by the Siberian Singers when they appear in the Campus Building of East Carolina Teachers College on Friday night of this week.

Four songs in their advance program are in the religious group. The first of these, "Divine Praise," shows the marvelous creative power the Russians have for expressing their deep feelings in music. "The Lord's Prayer" is given in the musical form of an old church melody. "Halleluiahs," an eleventh century chant, goes back to the early days of Christianity in Russia when the old monks in the monasteries who had attained great musical knowledge, set to new music the earliest Byzantine chants brought to Russia when Christianity was introduced into the Slavic countries.

The impression of the descriptive song "In a Cathedral," by Tchaikovsky, has been given as follows: "Within a cathedral dimly lit the image lamps illuminate the pictures of the Saints. The invisible choir softly chanting, the bell in the tower chiming the call to prayer. All sorrows are forgotten and life seems beautiful."

"Lord Have Mercy," by Lvofsky, is the God Friday music, when at vespers, the phrase is repeated forty times. "The diminishing of the voices suggests the lowering of the Cross; a gradual crescendo elevation."

The group of fable and gypsy songs show the life of the Russian people in colorful, spectacular persons and scenes, as clearly as the liturgical songs show their religious feeling.

WYATT BROWN CLUB SPEAKER

Points to Need of Contact of Adults With Youth

Singing predominated the meeting of the Rotary Club last night at their weekly dinner meeting.

Judson Blunt led in some rousing songs for the whole group. Following the group singing the Greenville Social Quartet, composed of colored men, rendered several spirituals to the enjoyment of their audience.

Following the singing, Wyatt Brown mentioned in a few brief remarks the need of more contact of adults in Greenville with the youth. He stressed the great need of the delinquent youth of the community for what the leaders in Greenville can afford them without its requiring money or any great amount of time of the busy man.

A. B. Stalworth and little Miss Jean Fleischmann were guests of the club. J. H. Waldrop won the attendance prize given by Jasper Winslow. Bill Lee, president of the club, presided.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER
New York—Herewith are presented certain episodes of trivia collected during an evening of roaming about nocturnal rendezvous of New York.

Chancing into a nightclub where the most ebullient of Broadway revues is displaced, I observed a Russian upon whose table was perched a small but exotically decorated Christmas tree. Every few seconds he helped himself to a drink from a bottle, making each jigger the occasion of a salute to the tree.

After a bout five minutes of this, I couldn't stand it any longer. "Christmas has been over for weeks," I pointed out to my waiter. "Is that fellow looney?"

"I don't think so, sir," he replied. "He's just learned that trees are legal in Russia and he says he wants to make-believe he's back home in Omsk!"

This whipped me and so I fled into the outer lobby where Monty Proser was relating the fable of a ham stock company.

One of the dramas, a real thriller, called for the flaxen-tressed heroine to leap from a trestle into the river to keep a locomotive from grinding her beneath its wheels. To give the impression of splashing water she always threw up a handful of sand.

Unhappily (for the actress) the prop man forgot to leave a mattress for her to land on one night and she hit the plank floor with a jarring thump.

"Hump!" flipped a smarty in the front row, "river froze over!"

Beatrice Lillie (Lady Peel) is one English actress who delights in exposing fake British accents, which practically assures her of a holiday every time she steps on the Bialto.

Recently a Harlem chanteuse who has made good on the local musical comedy stage returned from abroad with a mighty noticeable Pleadilly twist. She was viddy viddy British, even in Harlem.

"Miss Lillie," she gushed on a chance encounter, "I saw you at the Wintah Gauden and you were too, too divine!"

"Aw, honey-chile!" exclaimed the comedienne in quick Harlemese, "that old is mighty sweet of you."

After that jolt, everybody got back to speaking English, Broadway style.

RETAINS RULE ON SALES LEVY

Maxwell Says no new Ruling on Interstate Sales

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel
Raleigh, Feb. 18.—The ruling of the Department of Revenue to the effect that sales made at retail in North Carolina and delivered by a common carrier or otherwise in another state are not subject to the state 3 per cent sales tax, has not been changed, Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell said today.

Accordingly, merchants in North Carolina, who have been selling bills of goods to customers in border states, such as Virginia, Tennessee and South Carolina, to be delivered to them in those states, will not be required to collect the sales tax on these sales, since they are transactions involving interstate commerce. If the customers buy the goods in person and transport them themselves, they must pay the sales tax, however, since the transaction is completed within the state, it was pointed out.

Last week the board of directors of the North Carolina Merchants' Association, in session here, protested a recent ruling received from the Department of Revenue based upon a recent opinion from the office of the Attorney General, to the effect that sales of this nature, even if the merchant made delivery in another state, were taxable and that the sales tax would have to be collected. The merchants contended that since the delivery of the goods purchased by customers from neighboring states had to be delivered to them outside of North Carolina, that such sales were not subject to the sales tax.

When questioned today concerning this order, Commissioner Maxwell said:

"The department of Revenue has not changed its original ruling on sales of this nature, involving the delivery of goods in other states, in which it has held that these transactions are in interstate commerce and hence not subject to the sales tax."

When asked how it happened that the board of directors of the merchants association obtained a copy of the new ruling, likewise a copy of the opinion, Maxwell had no comment to make.

Growers Eligible for Lint Payment on 1935 Contract

Formers to Get Adjustment Altho Unable to Carry Out Promise to Cooperate in 1935

Raleigh, Feb. 18.—Every cotton grower is eligible for government price adjustment payment on the 1935 cotton crop, Dean I. O. Schaub of State College, announced today.

The payment was first promised growers who cooperate in the 1935 cotton adjustment program and pledged themselves to cooperate in the 1936 program, he said.

But the Supreme Court decision invalidating the AAA necessitated the new Frigidaire with the Meter-Miser will point the way to certainty in buying a refrigerator. No more guesswork. You buy according to rule. For the new Frigidaire with the Meter-Miser meets all Five Standards for Refrigerator Buying. Be sure to see it at Smith Electric Co.—(Adv.)

a revision of the requirements regarding a grower's eligibility, the dean explained. The payment is now offered to all growers.

However, he said, the rate of payment will remain the same as originally scheduled.

The rate of payment to each grower will be the amount by which the price of 7-8 inch middling cotton on the 10 spot markets of the nation is less than 12 cent a pound on the day he sells his cotton.

But it is limited to two cents a pound, the dean added, and will be paid only on a grower's actual production last year up to the amount of his Bankhead allotment.

The reminder of the AAA payments to all growers cooperating in the various 1935 crop adjustment programs will also be paid in the relatively near future, Dean Schaub stated.

Money for the payments has been appropriated by Congress, and machinery is being set up for distributing it as soon as possible.

Before any checks can be sent out, he added, the growers' contracts must be given final approval and the work of checking compliance with contracts must be completed.

LOCALS TO TRY STOP RALEIGH

Greenville is to Meet Strong Opposition Here Tonight

The whole student body of the Greenville High School is expected to turn out for the big basketball game tonight between the quints of the locals and Raleigh High, slated to begin at 7:30 o'clock.

In addition to high student expected to attend, a large majority of local basketball fans other than students who have been watching the progress of the Greensies with wistful eyes, are sure to boost them to victory in tonight's clash.

Some of the strongest quints in the state have tackled that of the Raleigh high, but without success, so the Greensies are going to see what they can do with this outfit. The boys are going through their regular routine of practice today, to better equip themselves for the big meet.

Music will be furnished by the high school band, and plenty of seating capacity will be available, so come on down to the local gym tonight at 7:30 o'clock and see two of the best teams in the state fight it out.

DIGESTION is often overtaxed by our tensehurried existence!

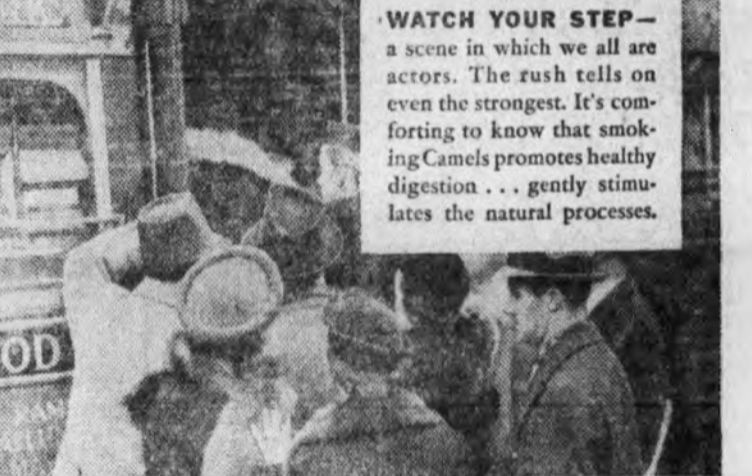

HERE DELICIOUS FOODS TEMPT APPETITE—the famous Gold Coast Dining Room (above) at the Drake Hotel in Chicago. And here the fragrant, delicate smoke of Camels rises while Erik, famous maître d'hôtel, watches alertly over all to see that no wish goes unsatisfied. "So many of our guests smoke Camels," Erik says, "for they have found that choice tobaccos add to the pleasure of the meal. Camels are tremendously popular—a leading favorite here."

Smoking Camel Cigarettes Aids in Assuring Natural Digestive Action

"Hurry—hurry—hurry" seems to be the order of the day. People get caught in the lockstep of modern life. Tension finds the weak spot, so often—digestion. It has been shown that smoking Camels improves digestion... wards off the consequences of hurried, nervous living. Camels stimulate digestive action. They promote the feeling of well-being and good cheer so necessary to the proper assimilation of food. Camels set you right! And, in smoking Camels for Digestion's sake, you may enter a whole new world of smoking pleasure. So turn to Camels. Expect an enticing mildness. Enjoy the appealing flavor of costlier tobaccos! They never tire your taste!

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

F. B. FOWLER on Star Route 1392, Maine, says: "It's eat-and-run with me, but I always top off with Camels. They are good for digestion."

HARD HITTER. Jane Sharp, tennis champion, says: "Smoking Camels helps me to digest my meal. Camels taste grand!"
