STRIKE HEADS PREPARING TO EXTEND SCOPE

Hotel Workers Already Called From Jobs by Leaders

MAY EXTEND TO CENTRAL ZONE

General Strike Threat Voiced Earlier In Week Given Support by Union Chief

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Hotel workers were called away from their jobs today in support of the building employees strike, which strike leaders prepared to extend to Manhattan's important grand central zone before nightfall.

The action came shortly after Chris Houlihan, president of the hotel workers union, left his office with the announcement that he would "pull" the hotels.

The "general strike" threat voiced earlier in the week by James J. Bambrick, head of the Building Service Employees Union, received a measure of support from Paul N. Coughlin, secretary-treasurer of the hotel and restaurant employees union.

Coughlin announced that 5,000 kitchen and dining room workers in 100 hotels would join the picket lines of the strike workers.

With the strike spreading, police department continued extraordinary precautions to protect property and citizens in event of violence.

Aldermen Vote To Pave Portion Of West Third Street

Also Favors Going Ahead With Plans To Provide Sidewalk on Both Third and Fourth Streets

The Board of Aldermen at its regular monthly meeting last night voted to go ahead with plans to pave a portion of West Third street and construct sidewalks on this and also on Fourth street by the high school.

Representatives of residents of Third street have sought to have the city proceed with the paving project for some time, and last night a petition was presented saying that a number of the landowners on the street would put up their portion of the funds in cash.

It was pointed out that the pavement was needed particularly because of the school located on the street. Plans to include the sidewalk were added after it was pointed out that traffic would be heavier on the road after the pavement was laid and the school children would need some place to walk other than in the street.

The walkway on Fourth street was included when a member of the board recalled that no walk is provided by the schools on that street.

No indication as to exactly when the projects would be started was given, but the Aldermen voted to go ahead with plans to do the work immediately, provided the funds could be secured for the work.

Former Pitt Resident Is Claimed By Death

T. Hassell James died at his home in Liberty, N. C., February 27. Mr. James had been in ill health for the past year or two but he was taken with pneumonia about a week before he died. He was well known in Pitt county. He was born here in 1900 and spent his early boyhood days here. On December 22, 1920, he was married to Miss Mamie Ruth Vainright. He leaves, besides his wife, four children, Ina Claire, William Donald, Mary Lois and Little Sue. He is also survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. James of Liberty; two brothers, V. L. James of Troy, and J. L. James of Raleigh.

Several relatives and friends attended the funeral from Pitt county. They were: Mrs. Godfrey Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Jackson, Linda Stokes, Miss Inez Forbes, Miss Mamie Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Vainright, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Vainright, Mrs. S. T. Ross, of Burlington; Mrs. Stanley, of Greensboro; Mrs. Manley Jackson and Mrs. Bessie Jackson of Greensboro, also attended the funeral rites.

The average tax on gasoline has risen 260 per cent in the last ten years, says the California State Automobile association.

U. S. MINISTER ESCAPES SHOT

Barely Missed by Bullet Intended For Premier

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 6.—(AP)—An assassin firing wildly at Premier Milan Stoyadinovich narrowly missed shooting Charles B. Wilson, United States minister to Yugoslavia, today.

Wilson was sitting in the diplomatic gathering of the chamber of deputies when a deputy of the opposition party suddenly jerked a pistol from his pocket and started firing at the Premier.

Another deputy seized him and the first shot plugged into the wall just over the head of the diplomat. The remaining three shots went into the floor.

Several deputies whipped out pistols, but none of them fired. The assassin was taken into custody by gendarmes who led him off the floor.

WILL DISCUSS RELIEF PLANS

Another Conference to be Held to Find Amount Needed

Washington, March 6.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today there would be at least one more conference on next year relief problems before any decision of the amount of money he would ask congress to appropriate.

He made this reply to press conference questions as the Democrats urged a $1,000,000,000 limit on the new appropriations and a Republican demanded an inquiry into charges of political "exploitation" of human misery.

As for last night's relief conference, the President said it was just a discussion and that there would be still another in the next few days.

The President told newspapermen he was still studying federal expenditures but could not announce any absolute figures on savings. He said he and his fiscal aides were getting close to the bottom of the barrel in scraping for funds to complete this year's relief program.

Reappoint Ragsdale Tax Lister For City

H. S. Ragsdale was appointed tax lister for the city of Greenville for this year by the board of aldermen last night.

Mr. Ragsdale held the position last year and his services were complimented in awarding him the work for another year.

Mrs. Loraine Tyson was selected as registrar for the city elections.

Governor Ehringhaus Says Weed Legislation Possible

Chief Executive Says Congressional Delegation Advises Compact May Be Enacted; Governor Criticized by Hancock

Raleigh, March 6.—(AP)—Governor Ehringhaus said this afternoon members of the North Carolina congressional delegation had advised him they thought Congress might pass tobacco compact legislation but the agriculture department had not given its approval to any such legislation as yet.

Governor Ehringhaus reiterated that compact legislation passed by individual states to control tobacco production would violate the federal constitution without congressional action.

Senator Bailey and congressmen from this state advised him, the governor said, that there were bills pending in the agriculture committee of the Senate and House to permit states to enter compacts but none has committee approval.

Winston-Salem, March 6.—(AP)—Representative Hancock today said Governor Ehringhaus was using "bad judgment" in not calling an extra legislative session for tobacco control legislation, in replying to a rebuke of the Governor to Congressmen for not sponsoring such a bill.

Hancock said Ehringhaus is an "able lawyer and as such knows that North Carolina can enact crop control, legislation, as Virginia has done, which would be effective upon ratification by congress. The wisdom and advisability of such legislation can not be debated officially until the general assembly is in session.

"Even if there were a doubt about favorable congressional action, North Carolina's action as the leading state in the production of fine-cured tobacco would, in my opinion, be a clinched and unquestionably be a powerful factor toward influencing all other interested states in following such action."

Hopes Are Revived Here For Erecting New Armory

PARTY CHIEFS IN CONVENTION

Democratic Moguls Gather to Arrange for Convention

Raleigh, March 6.—(AP)—The moguls of the Democratic party in North Carolina gathered here today to fix the time and place of the 1936 State Convention.

Tonight the Democratic Executive Committee meeting on call of chairman Wallace Winborne, will set precinct, county and state convention dates, and Raleigh was expected to get the state meeting.

There was still discussion as to when the party would be held. The last two conventions were held after the first primary and it was indicated that order would prevail again.

Many party leaders were already on hand this morning and others were arriving.

After Mr. Waldrop had explained the matter in detail to the Council, Mayor Blount appointed a committee consisting of H. H. Duncan, A. E. Hobgood and L. B. Fleming. This committee was instructed to investigate the erection of an armory building in detail and to consider the location of the building.

This committee is to look over several sites and if they think that a more suitable location can be obtained than the present site, which is next to the Third Street school, they are to report their findings to the City Council.

The Chamber of Commerce will ask the various civic organizations to assist them, by endorsing the proposition, in order that Greenville can secure a new Armory building.

Low Fire Damage Recorded In City So Far This Year

Only $85 Damages From Fires During February and $105 in January to Make Total of $190

The monthly report of the City Fire department, issued today by Chief George Gardner showed that only three fires occurred in the city during February, and that only one of these did any damage.

Property damage estimated at $85 was caused by a fire at the home of Haywood Dell, on Third and Washington streets during the month. A grass fire and a trash fire were the only other two during the period.

During January damages estimated at $105 was caused by fires, making a total of only $190 so far this year.

Chief Gardner called attention to the low fire damage so far during 1936 and urged the citizenship to continue exerting care in order to keep down the loss and thereby secure a better insurance rate.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News

Washington By RAY TUCKER ASSIST: Politically-minded economists at Washington see a silver lining in the heavy clouds of current unemployment. Although the January-February sag in production and employment upset their economic calculations, it fits in with private political expectations.

The February production figure touched around 95, whereas the prophets had predicted it would reach 100. Employment rolls fell off sharply. But they look for a combination of happy factors to start a strong April upswing that should carry through till fall with only a slight summer recession. They pin their hopes on increased auto manufacture, residential construction, railroad improvement and acceleration of the PWA building schedule. They expect brisk buying to result from distribution of bonus money, new farm payments and relief outlays.

The administration, they figure, can better stand an economic setback in the winter than a few months before the polls open in November. (Continued on page four)

WARREN SAYS COMPACT BILL STILL POSSIBLE

Farm Bureau Asks Congressman What Efforts Made

REPLY RECEIVED IN SHORT ORDER

Pitt Farm Bureau, in Session Here Today, Seeks to Increase Its Membership

In reply to a telegraphed request as to "what effort you are making toward getting a bill through congress authorizing compact of tobacco states," Congressman Lindsay Warren today wired "every effort has been and is being made by me and others for compact legislation at this session of Congress."

The telegram was sent to Congressman Warren requiring information as to what Congress is doing toward securing tobacco legislation by G. E. Travata, president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau.

About 50 members of the Bureau met at the offices of County Agent E. F. Arnold this afternoon to discuss the tobacco situation and plan a membership drive for the organization, now boasting a paid-up membership of 600. Officials say that enough other farmers have pledged to join the organization to push the number to 1,000.

The telegram was sent to Congressman Warren just before the meeting convened and he was asked to reply before the meeting adjourned so the answer could be read to the members of the Bureau.

The answer was received only a short while after the request for information was sent.

The telegraph to the congressman follows: "What effort are you making toward getting bill through Congress authorizing compact of tobacco states? Has Congress made any move? Individuals from Pitt County who have conferred with you recently are putting out propaganda that nothing will be done by Congress in time to save '36 tobacco crop. One thousand grower members of Pitt County Farm Bureau are demanding that something be done now. Will be in session until four p. m. today. May we have your answer collect before we adjourn?"

Congressman Warren's reply to the message follows:

"Am just in receipt of your wire of March 6th. Every effort has been made and is being made by me and others for compact legislation at this session of Congress. March 4th I sent the following wire to Governor Ehringhaus which fully explains legislative situation: On February fourth Senator Smith of South Carolina introduced a bill providing for State compacts. On February twenty-seventh Secretary of Agriculture made preliminary report saying it was being closely studied and full report would be sent in as early as possible. On January thirty-first Congressman Kerr introduced similar measure in (Continued on page six)

WALLACE SAYS NEW ACT GOOD

Adds He Does Not Want Program Imperiled

Memphis, Tenn., March 6.—(AP)—Renewing his warning to the nation's farmers that production control as such can not be effected under the soil conservation program, Secretary Wallace today said "we don't want this new act imperiled by the supreme court."

Wallace, admitting that he was speaking "very broadly," told more than 5,000 delegates to a regional farm conference, the AAA probably would seek to divert 11,000,000 acres from cotton to soil conserving growths this year.

"Since I arrived here last night," Wallace said, "I have found a feeling that some of you want us in Washington to tell you what to go home and do."

"We do not purpose to do that. From a long range view, I am inclined to think the new act is better than the old AAA. From a short range view I am not so sure. We can't proceed as definitely to raise cotton prices as we did under the old act."

"We may not be able to do everything we would like to do to have the price of cotton as high as we would like to have it," Wallace said. "We are working under a soil conserving program."

During the coming week the members of St. Peter's congregation and their friends will have an opportunity to hear the Rev. Father Maurice, C. P. speak. Prior to his coming here, Father Maurice was stationed in Boston, Scranton and Springfield, Mass., where he was identified with the work of giving lay retreats and missions.

His reputation as a speaker has been confirmed by the several appearances before Greenville audiences. The course of sermons that he will give will deal with the fundamental problems of religion adopted to modern life. The first sermon will be given on Sunday morning at 8:30 and then every evening at 7:30 during the entire week. An invitation is extended to all the friends of the congregations.

British Subject Is Killed When Italian Bombs Hit Retiring Red Cross Unit

HOPES FADING FORM CABINET

Army Refuses to Supply General for War Ministry

(Copyright by The Associated Press) Tokyo, March 6. (AP)—Koki Hirota's hope of introducing a new national cabinet to Emperor Hirohito immediately disappeared today when the army arose to demonstrate that it was still politically strong enough to wreck any effort to form a ministry despite its loss of prestige and popularity after last week's militarists uprising.

Because high militarists dislike some of the Hirota's liberal nationalities they influenced Count Junichi Terauchi, proposed as war minister, to withdraw from the cabinet place and indicated no other general would be permitted to join the ministry unless their terms were met.

The army's refusal to supply a general to fill the war ministry in the crisis could defeat the efforts of any premier designated to create a cabinet.

Tonight after a day of feverish negotiations the situation was deadlocked.

The governor of the stock exchange, which had been closed since the military insurgents broke out February 26, announced today that the exchange would reopen tomorrow but with political clouds gathered again he withdrew the announcement.

Admiral Osami Nagano, selected as navy minister returned to Tokyo from the London naval conference and accepted formally the navy portfolio indicating the navy did not join in the army opposition.

London, March 6.—(AP)—An authoritative source said today that Great Britain would deliver a stiff protest to Italy against the bombing of a British Red Cross ambulance unit by an Italian airplane in Ethiopia.

The protest, it was stated, will be sent to Rome immediately.

Official quarters were plainly indignant at the bombing in which a Red Cross identification flag spread out on the ground actually was hit by a bomb, said official British sources.

Additional Time Is Given Landlord on Sewer Ordinance

Board of Aldermen Extends Time In Which to Equip Houses With Systems After Hearing Pleas

The Greenville Board of Aldermen last night granted property owners another year in which to equip their houses with sanitary sewerage systems after a petition bearing approximately 30 names had been presented and a number of persons had appealed personally for the extension.

The board passed a resolution a year ago requiring each homeowner to put in the sanitary system by April 1, this year. It was estimated that there were nearly 500 dwellings in the city without the systems at this time. City Sanitary Inspector Lynch reported that only about 140 of these had been equipped during the past year.

Those asking the board to grant additional time or withdraw the ordinance included a number of tenant house owners as well as a few negroes who said they were trying to buy their houses and were unable to bear the additional expense at this time. One owner of a number of tenant houses said that unless some provision was made and the act amended in force, he would nail up his property.

Others contended that the indoor systems were not as sanitary in the way they would be used, as the type of concrete closet the state required.

Those opposing the extension, contended the board would have the same trouble at the end of the extended time, and that it might not be exactly fair to property owners who had "borrowed, leased or stolen" money with which to carry out the ordinance.

Chapter One

DARK YOUNG MAN

HE dark young man in the rough handsome overcoat moved in his seat. He did not like the girl sitting across from him. She reminded him too much of a girl he never again wanted to have anything to do with. The same slim hairline eyebrows, the same curved mascara-lengthened lashes, the same perfect grooming of her thin egg-shaped face and head and body, as if some gigantic nursemaid had just dressed her, doll-fashion, and dropped her in the parlor-car seat. She even had the same bright maroon nails.

Then he gave an impatient shrug. If he was going to be annoyed every time a girl like that made a gesture of interest in him, he would have an irritating life. She was pattern, that was all; insolent high-voiced overgrown pattern; dozens of her on every stage, every train, every place you put your foot into. After all, what she had said was simple enough as he picked up her sliding magazine:

"Going through to New York, aren't you? Saw your ticket. So am I."

He had never seen her before; he never saw her again. But her reminding voice, her reminding quick vermilion mouth, her down-dipping tiny black hat with a prowling up one side were enough.

"No. I have a stop-over at Broad Street Station," he said shortly. "Of course—we have to change there," said the painted mouth, laughing provocatively at him. "Here, take my things."

on the stone step was dressed in a brown thing, shorter and straighter than the fashion. An allure of angry, flaming charm radiated from her. She might have been, he thought, fifteen. No pattern here, this child in a temper with life!

"Can you tell me the way to Grandin Lane?" he asked her.

Her face flashed into unexpected bright courtesy.

"I'm going that way, I'll show you." She rose all in one lithe movement, and came down to him.

What she saw as he took over her burden and walked on beside her was a man of perhaps twenty-eight, with a strong harsh-cut face, heavy black hair, a tall loose rangy body. He was dressed more carelessly yet better than the town boys she knew. She liked his voice, the beautiful depth and sure intonations as he spoke.

THEY went on in silence for ten minutes, perhaps. Finally, as they passed from an old street of straggling big old houses to a long narrow tree-set lane, he spoke curiously.

"What are the boughs for?" She spoke curtly. "My aunt wants them."

"Devoted niece!" Iris answered him with the confessional indiscretion one gives a stranger in certain desperate moods. "Sometimes I feel as if poor little Aunt Ella belongs in an Ibsen play. She revolved round my father and be quiet and get your nerves rested up. You wouldn't mind if there wasn't so much to see—"

She gazed at the window's vista of small-town activity with pride. "I tell you what, Miss Ella Lanning was saying she'd like a boarder. I guess she'd be glad of the money—they had a death in the family and you know what funeral expenses are."

HE wanted a walk. They arranged it; he would leave his suit cases at the hotel; if he liked the Lanning place he would telephone and have them sent over later. She was all enthusiasm and bustle. He wished he hadn't started any

They walked on in silence

"The hell I will," was what he said within himself. Aloud, only, "Sorry . . . changing at West Philadelphia."

And strode out of the car just in time; stepping onto another train that went he did not know where. Or cars.

This had no expensively patterned girls on board. A half-deserted day coach. He glanced out the window, a little elated. Then it struck him that all his life he had wanted to get on a train that went he didn't know where, and get out at the end of the line. . . . There were budding leaves, small woodlands. He was going through a pretty enough spring landscape.

"There's just one human being in the world now that I believe in any more," he thought bitterly. And that isn't a girl."

Then he knew this sounded silly. He hadn't had enough trouble, perhaps, to know how to take it with a sense of proportion. But he had believed in the girl like the one on the Pullman. He had believed in everything, in fact, in honor, in unselfish affection, in a lot of things. Pretty old to have just stopped believing in Santa Claus.

He got out, for it was growing to the edge of dark; he jerked his two suit cases down. Through with that sort of thing, too—porters kneeling all round you, being waited on hand and foot. Here was a small town. Everybody in the books you read said that small towns were mean . . . No pretense, at least.

It took him out of his angry reverie to find that the town's one hotel was on the main street, a Main Street whose cobbles and motor cars and trolleys managed a noise as unbearable as any New York noises.

"I think I know what you want," said the hotelkeeper's wife, placidly friendly. "A place where you can of this, it was a nuisance. Better to have gone on to New York in spite of the girl in the pattern. There were ten thousand girls in the pattern.

"Grandin Lane, then turn," said the landlady, smiling under her neat, too wavy bob.

Iris Lanning dropped down, suddenly tired, in the spring twilight, on the courthouse steps. The laboring boughs her aunt had sent her for were heavier than she had thought they would be. She had gathered them in a burst of delight at their dripping "golden rain" and walked perhaps a half mile toward home. Aunt Ella, with her everlasting adoration of Daddy's memory . . .

Her own thoughts shamed her. She'd adored Daddy, too; but she and Uncle Will were alive. They had their rights. An afternoon's work, just so that flowering boughs could be set round the studio walls, as they had been when he was alive. Uncle Will still came from the accident that had killed Daddy, all alone while Aunt Ella did the housework, and she carrying boughs home!

It wasn't only the afternoon outdoors that she was brooding over. Everything from heavy shabby shoes to the place-cards at home unprinted for the Friday bridge.

The angry girl looked down at the passing sullen man; their eyes caught with interest. Each was new to the other.

What Morgan Black saw was a girl more like a page from a medieval picture book than a modern girl, a sharply cut intense face of flushed ivory, with lips that needed no scarlet; framed strangely in an old-fashioned way with thick brown hair cut across her forehead and across her neck, flaring out in a straight bush.

The slim tall body thrown down adored him; if he wanted anything on earth, the world stopped till he had it. Now he's dead all she thinks about is his memory. He used to like flowering boughs around his studio walls."

Her voice softened as she ended. "He was wonderful!" she said. "But I feel sometimes as if I lived in a memorial chapel."

He looked at her more closely. The note of innocent honesty in her clear slow voice—softer and slower than voices he knew—was convincing. But he'd mixed up frankness and honesty once too often: off-handedness and sincerity. There isn't any Santa Claus, you idiot! . . . But he went on, half in idleness, questioning her. After all, she hadn't had to show him the road.

"Do you dress in that picturesque way as part of the memorial?"

He drew life, though he had spoken half in admiration. "Yes, I do. I hate it. If it's bad enough so that a passing stranger is intrusive enough to comment on it, it's pretty bad; but that doesn't excuse you. It's rude to comment on what people can't help."

The idea that there was anything that a man mightn't comment on to a girl, stranger or no, was new to Morgan. What a queer child, with her old-fashioned words and ideals! But he tried to make amends.

"Sorry. Why can't you help it?" "No money," Iris said sharply. "Money, money's the worst thing in the world!"

She laughed suddenly, with a child's unexpected gaiety. "Give me the chance to try it! It's the lack of it that's the root of all my evils!"

"No, it isn't!" He spoke as she had, freely, secure in the knowledge that they would not meet again.

Tomorrow, Iris is late getting home.

Highway Patrol Is Supposed to Be on Duty on Highways

R. H. B. Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, March 5.—Highway pa-

troopers are not supposed to sit around in offices and to be subject to call, but are supposed to be out on the highways on patrol duty to enforce the motor vehicle laws and prevent accidents. Captain Charles D. Farmer, commander of the patrol, said today in reply to the criticism that patrolmen can never be found in the patrol offices when they are wanted by city police departments or individuals. "Those who criticize the highway patrol, because they cannot always find them in the patrol offices, must remember that the patrol is not a police force, subject to call by the public, but that it is primarily a highway police organization whose first duty is to patrol the highways to prevent accidents and enforce the motor vehicle laws," Captain Farmer said. "Accordingly, the only time we know where the patrolmen are is when they start their daily patrols each morning and when they come off duty at night. With every patrolman required to cover approximately 200 miles each day, it is impossible to know where each patrolman is each hour in the day, or to keep a patrolman in the central office here or in the division offices just for emergency calls."

If the highway patrol had the state-wide radio control equipment which the 1935 general assembly provided but which has not yet even been purchased, it would be possible for the central office here to keep in constant touch with all of the 120 patrolmen in every section of the state, and thus transmit emergency calls to them whenever they might be needed, Captain Farmer said. But until this radio control over the patrol is provided, the only thing that can be done is to transmit orders to the patrolmen each morning before they go on duty or at night when they come in off their runs, Captain Farmer said. "Whenever we get emergency calls, we of course try to locate a patrolman as soon as possible," Captain Farmer said. "But it should be self-evident that we cannot keep patrolmen in our offices day and night merely to answer emergency calls."

POTASH

a better-balanced FERTILIZER

HIGH-POTASH FERTILIZER

LOW-POTASH FERTILIZER

The biggest and best news you will find in the new fertilizer price lists is the very small difference in cost between a low-potash fertilizer and a fertilizer well-balanced with plenty of NV POTASH. For example, compare 3-8-3 fertilizer with 3-8-8 fertilizer. The 3-8-8 contains 35% more actual plant food, yet it costs you very little more than the 3-8-3. Figured in terms of an acre the extra cost is so small it will surprise you.

3-8-3 TOBACCO FERTILIZER has proven its value throughout the entire bright tobacco belt. Many leading farmers in this section use 3-8-3 or increase the potash in their regular fertilizer to 8% or even more by using extra applications of potash.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the North Carolina State College of Agriculture recommend a fertilizer containing 6 to 10% potash for bright tobacco.

Chemical analysis of high-quality tobacco plants proves that a 1,000-pound crop contains more than three times as much potash as 800 pounds of 3% potash fertilizer contains.

Fertilizer containing too much nitrogen produces rough, bony tobacco. Avoid this by selecting a fertilizer mixture in which the nitrogen has been well-balanced with plenty of potash.

3-8-8 TOBACCO FERTILIZER gives best results with closer rows, closer spacing, ridge cultivation and late topping. Set more plants per acre and top after about half the crop is gathered.

3-8-8 TOBACCO FERTILIZER holds the tobacco on the hill after it matures, without burning, producing a thin, gray leaf with "high-dollar" quality.

Remember that 800 pounds of 3-8-8 usually costs less than 1,000 pounds of 3-8-3, yet 800 pounds of 3-8-8 contains more actual plant food and is a much better balanced fertilizer.

Plan now to produce a thin leaf on the bright side. Use the best cultural methods, correct spacing, high-topping and the proper amounts of 3-8-8 TOBACCO FERTILIZER. The extra potash in this fertilizer adds the extra quality that brings more on the floor.

THESE two sticks of tobacco were grown side by side in the same field. The upper stick is a sample from tobacco which received fertilizer containing 10% potash and produced 1,511 pounds per acre. The lower stick is a sample from tobacco which received fertilizer containing only 5% potash and produced only 1,028 pounds per acre. The 10%-potash tobacco sold for 6 cents MORE per pound than the 5%-potash tobacco.

3-8-8

Field tests throughout the bright tobacco territory have shown that farmers can profitably apply two to three times as much potash as the average crop receives. The table below shows the results obtained by adding 5% potash to the average fertilizer in tests by 138 farmers on 1,242 acres. Fertilizer containing 3% potash was compared with fertilizer containing 8% potash; or fertilizer containing 5% potash was compared with fertilizer containing 10% potash, etc.

GAIN IN DOLLARS PER ACRE FROM ADDING 5% POTASH TO THE FARMERS' REGULAR FERTILIZER AT VERY LOW COST PER ACRE
Year	North Carolina—Virginia	South Carolina	Georgia—Florida
1928	$45.27	no tests	$25.12
1929	36.99	$20.62	30.75
1930	39.60	24.85	18.75
1931	28.46	32.84	21.91

Have you checked up to find out how little extra it will cost you to use a high-potash fertilizer? Extra NV POTASH in your fertilizer will probably represent the best investment you have ever made. ## Social and Personal

Rev. H. M. Wilson of Farmville, was here today.

Mrs. R. H. Wright, Mrs. Durward Parker and little daughter, Mary Wright, of Elm City, and William H. Wright of Goldsboro, are guests of Mrs. S. T. White.

C. S. Forbes spent today in Durham.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Owens have returned from Danville, Ky., where Mr. Owens has been on the tobacco market.

J. B. Ragsdale has returned to Fairmont after spending several weeks at home.

Miss Mary Rachael Teel is at home from school in Raleigh for the spring holidays.

Senator Arthur B. Corey spent yesterday in Raleigh.

Mrs. Warren Club Hostess.

Yesterday afternoon at her home on East Fifth street, Mrs. B. S. Warren was a charming hostess to members of her bridge club.

At the conclusion of the game, Mrs. E. J. Garrett was awarded a box of powder for high score.

A delicious salad course was served.

Birth Announcement.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hudson announce the birth of a son on March 3, 1936, at Pitt General Hospital.

Mrs. Hudson was formerly Miss Madeline Allen.

Memorial Baptist Sunbeams.

The Sunbeams of Memorial Baptist Church will meet Sunday morning at eleven o'clock in the primary department.

All members are requested to bring their offering for Home Missions.

Mr. Jolly Ill.

Friends of Frank Jolly will be sorry to learn that he is ill at his home on East Tenth street.

Mecca Pilgrimage Shrinks.

Alexandria, Egypt — (AP)— Because of the strained political and international situations, it is anticipated that 3,000 Egyptians will make the pilgrimage this year to the holy cities of Mecca and Medina. Last year about 4,000 made the journey.

Mathematics Club Meets.

A study of graphs furnished the topic of discussion at the meeting of the Mathematics Club held last Tuesday evening, March 3. The room in which the meeting was held was appropriately decorated with a large number of excellent graphs representing the various types, with the most important types being discussed by members of the club.

Miss Belle Kearney of Oxford, who is vice-president of the club, was in charge of the program with Misses Beatrice Reaves of Warsaw, and Mildred Satterthwaite of Stall, assisting her. This club, which is one of the most active on the campus, has for its president Miss Annie Morris Whitley of Wilson, and for its secretary-treasurer Miss Mary Lyon Shotwell of Stall. Sponsors of the club are Misses Maria Graham and Louise Williams of the Mathematics Department.

Real estate has always been the backbone of the Nation's wealth and is on the upward trend now. Invest today in real estate. H. A. White & Sons.—(Adv.) 6-21

Hostess To Sans Souci Club.

Mrs. W. E. Hooker was gracious hostess to the Sans Souci Club on Tuesday last. Fragrant flowers one expected to find, and did find throughout, making lovely this hospitable home.

After the regular business session, marked by a spirited discussion of projects in which the club was interested, the books were passed, and plans made for the next meeting.

Mrs. W. I. Wooten had the paper of the afternoon and turned what might have been a heavy and sombre subject "The Past as Mirrored by Excavation," into a fascinating study of the remains of past civilization. She described how the arduous work of excavating was done, where our globe excavations had been made and told some facts established by the excavating.

Egypt and the ancient city of Troy, the island of Samothrace, Olympia in Greece, Athens, Thessaly and Macedonia—all have given their secrets to the digging archaeologist. The United States was the last nation to enter the field of excavation, but found a rich source of material in buried Indian homes in the West and South. Since American civilization had its deepest roots in the soil of the old world, the speaker held the closest attention of the club in her splendid discussion of the buried cities.

A lively discussion of current events followed the paper, after which the hostess served a most tempting salad plate.—Reported.

Memorial Baptist Deacons.

The Board of Deacons of Memorial Baptist Church will meet tonight for their monthly business session, postponed from Tuesday evening, at 7:30, at the church. All members are expected to be present.

Attends Democratic Meeting.

Mrs. J. B. Spilman went to Raleigh this afternoon to attend the meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee tonight.

Mrs. Spilman and W. J. Boyd of Ayden, are members of the board from Pitt county.

Judge Dink James Ill.

Friends of Judge Dink James will be sorry to learn that he is ill at his home on East Ninth street.

MAGICIAN'S DISAPPEARING WAND DISAPPEARS

Whitstone, the magician, who is showing at the State Theatre, has reported that the magic wand that he uses to make things disappear has itself disappeared.

If anyone should find the wand, Whitstone says to be careful and not pick it up by the end but by the center as something very surprising may happen. Also not to pass it over any object in a swinging motion.

If the wand is not returned by tonight Whitstone is going to find who has it by looking in his crystal ball.

If the person having the wand will return it by 8:30 p. m. tonight a suitable reward will be given.

Mrs. Cannon Hostess

Ayden, March 6.—The Thursday Afternoon Contract Club held their regular meeting with Mrs. Leon Cannon Thursday.

After several progressions, Miss Irene Barwick, club member, was given a jardiniere for high score. Mrs. Emerson Worthington received a picture for guest prize, and Miss Dorothy Bill, of South Carolina, handkerchiefs, for out-of-town guest prize.

The hostess served a salad, sweet course and coffee to the following: Mesdames Hal Edwards, John L. Jenkins, J. B. Beland, Emerson Worthington, Moses Phillips, Lyman Balise; Misses Rene Barwick and Dorothy Bill.

Ayden Woman's Club

Ayden, March 6.—At the regular meeting of the Woman's Club held in the Community Building Tuesday afternoon, the following officers were unanimously elected for the coming year:

President: Mrs. M. T. Frizzelle; vice president: Mrs. Katie Jackson; secretary: Mrs. J. J. McClees; treasurer: Mrs. A. F. Rowe; corresponding secretary: Mrs. W. M. Edwards; assistant secretary and reporter: Mrs. J. B. Eure. Chairmen of the various departments are: American Home: Mrs. W. C. Cannon; Welfare: Mrs. J. C. Andrews; Music: Mrs. John Coward; Garden and Civics: Mrs. John Burgess; Educational: Mrs. J. L. Tingle.

The business session which was presided over by the president, Mrs. M. T. Frizzelle, was composed of reports of committees, and a discussion as to buying a new piano for the Community House. In the final decision they voted to give $150 as first payment on the instrument, with Mrs. John Denton, sponsor for the Junior Woman's Club, making an additional pledge from her organization. A committee from the music department was appointed to purchase same.

The entertainment feature of the meeting was sponsored by the Garden and Civics department, of which Mrs. William Quinerly is chairman. She presented as special speaker, Mrs. Frank Aycock, a member of the Ayden High School faculty, who kept her audience in rapt attention for 45 minutes when she talked on "Japanese Gardens."

Mrs. Aycock, as a girl, spent eight years in Yokohama, Japan, and she seems to have had the beauty of the gardens indelibly impressed upon her mind, and has the gift of transferring her thoughts to her audience so well, that they too, can appreciate and enjoy their beauty.

Two points especially stressed in her talk were: first, that the Japanese always strive to have their gardens appear natural, as if they just grew, and were not planned by

Mother Advised Ailing Daughter To Take CARDUI

Many, many women have taken Cardui on the advice of their mothers who had been helped by it.

"I would have severe cramping spells," writes Mrs. F. C. Allen, of Smithdale, Miss. "I would get nauseated, and feel faint and would have to go to bed. I would be very nervous for two or three days. I was afraid to go away from home, for fear I would faint and fall. My mother, having used Cardui with good results, advised me to try it. I am so glad I took Cardui and got relief, for it has done wonders for me."

If you suffer this way, send to the drug store for a bottle of Cardui and begin taking it today. Of course, if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

man, and this applied to the arrangements of flowers in the home also. "Second, the art of dwarfing plants or trees, something that other nations have never seemed to do successfully. She spoke of having seen a plum tree fifteen inches high which had been in the one family for more than 300 years, and of a stunted fine tree, about two feet high, that was a thousand years old.

Another interesting point was when she called attention to the fact that the thatched roofs, which are about two feet thick, often are covered with lilies, which are not planted there but whose seeds were probably blown there by the wind. To stand on the top of a hill overlooking the town or village, was more beautiful a sight than one could imagine.

Mrs. Herbert Waldrop of Greenville, was also presented by Mrs. Quinerly, and in her sweet lyric soprano voice, gave several vocal numbers, among which were "Will O' The Wisp" and a selection "One Fine Day" from Madame Butterfly. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Smith, of Greenville.

The club was delighted to have as another out-of-town guest, Mrs. John Staton of Bethel.

The hostess department served delicious pine-apple whip and Angel Food cake.

Game and Fish Protectors in State Making Determined Efforts to Stop Commercialization

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, March 6.—Game and fish protectors of North Carolina are making a determined effort to put an end to illegal commercialization of game fish, one of the greatest handicaps to the development of the state.

ment and maintenance of good angling, John D. Chalk, state game commissioner, said today.

Mr. Chalk pointed out that it is illegal to sell game fish in North Carolina. The species on which a ban has been placed include black bass, trout, bream, crappie, rosin, blue gill, goggle-eye, and flounder.

In addition to the state law on the subject, Mr. Chalk said it is also a federal offense to sell black bass where this is prohibited by state law.

The commissioner said that there is a growing and insistent public demand in North Carolina for the protection of game fish and that the department is receiving strong encouragement in its program to protect this type of wildlife.

Protectors in various parts of the state, he continued, have conducted prosecutions recently on charges of sale of game fish and their efforts will be continued.

"The general public realizes more fully than ever before that regulations to prevent wholesale taking, transportation, and sale of game fish are designed to safeguard its interest in one of the most valuable of our natural resources," Mr. Chalk said. "These regulations are intended only to prevent a few from depriving the many of their natural rights to partake reasonably of the gifts of nature. A few should not be permitted to use the advantages that belong to all the people."

member. They don't advertise it but they count on a rush of fall manufacturing and merchandising to insure a Democratic triumph.

REGULATION "U": There's more behind SEC Chairman Landis' Princeton speech deploring human nature's speculative gullibility than most people realize. It was delivered for the ears of the new Federal Reserve Board—not the gambling public.

The Board members have been too slow and timid in restraining the market to suit Mr. Landis. They have postponed for months the promulgation of famous Regulation "U" which will restrict the amount of money banks may pour into the market. They point out that bank loans on securities have actually declined during the present market. They see no reason for curtailing this source of cash until it moves into Wall Street in threatening volume.

Mr. Landis insists that the Board apply a preventive instead of waiting until the gambling mania has reached 1929's feverish stage. From 1928-1929 experience he knows the pressure which will be brought to block any deflationary move. Recently he reinforced his Princeton warning by sending a stock market expert to beg the Board to act now. The Reserve members asked a lot of pertinent questions and received some hot answers. Regulation "U" will be along soon because it is whispered that the President sides with the head of his favorite reform agency.

CONVERTS: Reports seeping back to Washington reveal that Alf Landon is making an excellent impression on industrialists who have made quick pilgrimages to Topeka to look him over. They are passing around the word that he is solid, homey, comfortable and sensible.

But the Kansas Governor is wally sidestepping any alliance with Big Business which the Democrats could capitalize. He wants their support but on his own terms. When a wealthy anti-New Dealer (a former member of Secretary Roper's Business Advisory Committee) expressed a willingness to double his foral contribution to the GOP, Mr. Landon disagreed. He explained that business and industry could serve in a more practical and less politically dangerous way.

"Here's how I look at it," replied the Governor. "Every manufacturer and business man has scores of acquaintances who trust his judgment. What they should do is explain to their friends what the New Deal means in higher taxes, larger deficits and hindrances to real recovery. What we need is not more money but more missionaries!"

MANDATE: At a recent Cabinet meeting Harold Ickes submitted evidence designed to refute certain polls showing that the voters severely condemned spending by the federal government. The Secretary of the Interior described his nose-counting as the "greatest straw vote in history."

He gave the results of 2100 elections in which the people voted for or against bond issues to help finance PWA projects with a 55 per cent contribution by the local government. This meant, Mr. Ickes explained, that the voters passed on the question of imposing higher taxes on themselves to pay off local issues. More than 11,000,000 ballots were cast, he reported to the President, and only 1,870,000—or 17 per cent—opposed the proposition.

The vote disclosed curious but understandable trends. Newly settled regions were more favorable to the projects than well established sections like New England. The people preferred old familiar improvements to new ones—school houses rather than protection against river pollution. Municipal ventures had an easier time than county or state proposals. In Mr. Ickes' opinion, the New Deal has received a mandate for more spending.

THE BOOMERANG CLUE

Chapter 44
FROM ROGER

It was some weeks later.

Frankie had just received a letter. It bore the stamp of one of the less-known South American republics.

After reading it through, she passed it to Bobby.

It ran as follows:

Dear Frankie:

Really, I congratulate you! You and your Naval friend have shattered the plans of a lifetime. I had everything so nicely arranged.

Would you really like to hear all about it? My lady friend has given me away so thoroughly (spite, I'm afraid—women are invariably spiteful!) that my most damaging admissions won't do me any further harm. Besides, I am starting life again. Roger Bassington-French is dead.

I fancy I've always been what they call a "wrong 'un." Even at Oxford I had a little lapse.

I fell in with Moira and her lot fairly soon. She was the real thing. She was an accomplished criminal by the time she was fifteen. When I met her things were getting a bit too hot for her.

She and I liked each other. We decided to make a match of it, but we'd a few plans to carry through first.

To begin with, she married Nicholson. By doing so she removed herself to another world, and the police lost sight of her. Nicholson was just coming over to England to start a place for nerve patients.

She was still working in with her gang in the dope business. Without knowing it, Nicholson was very useful to her.

I had always had two ambitions. I wanted to be the owner of Merroway, and I wanted to command an immense amount of money. I had to have money.

Moira made several trips across to Canada to "see her people." Nicholson adored her and believed anything she told him. Most men did. Owing to the complications of the drug business, she travelled under various names. She was travelling as Miss Templeton when she met Savage. She knew about Savage and his enormous wealth, and she went all out for him. He was attracted, but he wasn't attracted enough to lose his common sense.

However, we concocted a plan. You know pretty well the story of that. The man you know as Cayman acted the part of the unfeeling husband. Savage was induced to come down and stay at Tudor Cottage more than once. The third time he came our plans were laid. I needn't go into all that—you know it. The whole thing went with a bang. Moira cleared the money and went off—ostensibly abroad—in reality back to Slaverley and the Grange. In the meantime I was perfecting my own plans. Henry and young Tommy had to be got out of the way. I had had luck over Tommy. A couple of perfectly good accidents went wrong. I wasn't going to fool about with accidents in Henry's case. I introduced him to morphine. He soon became an addict. Our plan was that he should go to the Grange for treatment and should there either "commit suicide" or get hold of an overdose of morphine.

AND then that fool Carstairs began to be active. It seems that Savage had written him a line on board ship mentioning Mrs. Templeton and even enclosing a snapshot of her. Carstairs went on a shooting trip soon afterwards. When he came back from the wilds and heard the news of Savage's death and will, he was frankly incredulous. He was certain that Savage wasn't worried about his health and didn't believe he had any special fear of cancer. Savage was a hard-headed business man, and Carstairs didn't believe a word he said. He was certain that Savage would leave a vast sum of money to her and the rest to charity.

Carstairs came over here determined to look into the business. He began to poke about.

And straightaway we had a piece of bad luck. Some friends brought him down to lunch, and he saw a picture of Moira on the piano—and recognized it as the woman of the snapshot that Savage had sent him. He went down to Chipping Somerton and started to poke about there. I went down to Chipping Somerton after him. He failed to trace the cook—Rose Chudleigh. She'd gone to the north, but he tracked down Evans, found out her married name and started off for Marchholt. Things were getting serious. If Evans identified Mrs. Templeton and Mrs. Nicholson as one and the same person, matters were going to become difficult.

I decided that Carstairs had got to be suppressed. He was making a serious nuisance of himself. Chance came to my aid. I was close behind him when the mist came up. I crept up nearer and a sudden push did the job.

I didn't know what incriminating matter he might have on him. However, your young Naval friend played into my hands very nicely. I was left alone with the body for a short time. He had a photograph of Moira—he'd got it from the photographers, presumably for identification. I removed that and any letters or identifying matter. Then I planted the photograph of one of the gang.

All seemed to have gone off satisfactorily. And then your friend Bobby upset things. It seemed that Carstairs had mentioned Evans—and Evans was actually in service at the Vicarage.

I admit we were getting rattled by now. Moira insisted that he must be put out of the way. We tried one plan, which failed. Then, Moira went down to Marchholt in the car. She seized a chance very neatly—slipped some morphine into Bobby's beer when he was asleep. But the young devil didn't succumb. That was pure bad luck.

And imagine the shock that Moira had when she was creeping out to meet me one evening and came face to face with Bobby. She recognized him at once—she'd had a good look when he was asleep that day. Then she realized that it wasn't she whom he suspected, and she rallied and played up.

THE position was serious. We'd got the money, but you and Bobby were a menace. You'd got your suspicions fixed on the Grange. It may interest you to know that Henry didn't commit suicide. I killed him! When I was talking to you in the garden, I saw there was no time to waste and I went straight in and saw to things.

The airplane that came over gave me my chance. I went into the study, sat down by Henry, who was writing, and said: "Look here, old man—'and shot him! The noise of the plane drowned the sound.

Then I wrote a nice affecting letter, wiped off my fingerprints from the revolver, pressed Henry's hand round it and let it drop to the floor. I put the key of the study in Henry's pocket and went out, locking the door from the outside with the dining-room key, which fits the lock. I won't go into details of the neat little squib arrangement in the chimney which was timed to go off four minutes later.

Everything went beautifully. You and I were in the garden together and heard the "shot." A perfect suicide. Where Moira really showed her mettle was at the Cottage. She realized from the noise upstairs that I'd been knocked out, and she quickly injected a large dose of morphine into herself, and lay down on the bed. After you all went down to telephone she slipped up to the attic and cut me free. Then the morphine took effect and by the time the Doctor arrived—she was genuinely off in a hypnotic sleep.

But all the same her nerve was going. She pretended to go up to a London nursing home. Instead she hurried down to Marchholt—and met you on the doorstep! Then her one idea was to get you both out of the way. Her methods were crude to the last degree, but I believe she'd have got away with it. Moira would have got away back to London and lain low in a nursing home. With you and Bobby out of the way the whole thing would have died down.

But you spotted her—and she lost her head. And then at the trial she dragged me into it! Perhaps I was getting a little tired of her. . . . But I had no idea that she knew it.

You see, she had got the money—my money! Once I had married her I might have got tired of her. I like variety.

So here I am starting life again. . . . And all owing to you and that extremely objectionable young man Bobby Jones. But I've no doubt I shall make good!

Your affectionate enemy, the bold, bad villain of the piece,

As the best way to attain a higher price level, while Borah has never come out for a specific formula. Neither of these issues is what you could call popular with most New York GOP leaders.

But insiders figure the main reason Borah is playing up to the publisher is to clinch the support of his newspapers—which exert a strong influence in upstate New York. Ten of the thirteen cities represented in the Gannett chain are located in this state. A dozen firmly planted New York delegates pledged to Borah would greatly strengthen his prestige at Cleveland—especially if they had won their places in hot primary fights.

SPARTAN: Amused observers wonder what Congressman Hamilton Fish thinks of his hero's latest move. They remark that his zeal to be the first Borah-for-president man in New York was obviously based on the expectation that he would be rewarded with the vice presidential plum if Borah was successful. Now it looks as if he is getting the run-around. Of course Borah is a long way from nominating Gannett is much farther. Fish shows no outward signs of being ruffled. He has even sunk his deep distaste for ex-state chairman Kingsland Macy and the latter's friend Bill Ziegler to promote the common cause. His critics crack that this is where his football discipline comes in handy—he's trained to conceal his wounds with Spartan fortitude and carry on for the team.

DILEMA: The Landon boom in New York is also running into complications. Several weeks ago ex-Attorney General Albert Ottinger started a committee to line up New York for the Kansan. He never made it clear whether he had his candidate's official blessing—nor has the implication—and after all he had made a pilgrimage to Topeka.

Now a rival group of Landon boosters has sprung up here. This one has Young Republican sponsorship and is headed by Alexander Hamilton—a nephew of J. P. Morgan and a young man of ability, although he hasn't yet become prominent in the state party picture. The two groups are not exactly working in concord and many GOP-ers are confused and irritated. Would-be bandwagon jumpers don't know which out fit to join. It would be terrible to climb aboard what looks like the lead wagon and have it turn out to be only a trailer.

Astute Republican observers comment that Landon should pray to be delivered from his friends. Promoters of his cause are embarrassing him in other states besides New York. He can't afford to alienate any group of supporters by giving official recognition to a rival group. Yet if he doesn't step in he is likely to suffer severely from civil war among his followers. It's a tri-horned dilemma.

INEPT: New York political sharps cite the House's defeat of the bill to prevent states from taxing RFC investments in the preferred stock of banks as a startling example of the weakness of administration leadership in that branch of Congress.

The administration wanted the bill. It would have saved the government $5,500,000 a year. It was pushed through the Senate despite the opposition of Couzens and others and was slated to have an easy time in the House. Chairman Seagall of the Banking and Currency Committee was unable to be present to handle it and turned it over to Goldsborough of Maryland—who has been known to get bills buried up before. He did so again. The membership wasn't told what it was all about or what they were supposed to do. McCormack of Massachusetts—in administration supporter—did as much as anybody to wreck it with an eloquent expression of doubt as to whether Congress had the right to restrict the taxing powers of states. The point is that he didn't even know the White House wished the measure passed.

Political Leaders Meet For Executive Sessions

Democratic Executive Committee Meets in Raleigh

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, March 6.—The air is full of politics here today and the hotel rooms and lobbies full of politicians and candidates, as a result of the meeting here tonight of the Democratic Executive Committee for the business of fixing the date for the State Democratic Convention.

Next to the meeting of the Democratic Convention itself, the meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee always brings more politicians, candidates, would-be candidates and political talk to Raleigh than anything else. So there are about as many local and state political leaders and candidates already here this afternoon as there are committee members, of which there are 132. All of these 132 committee members, of course, are politicians of no can ability, since membership on this committee is given almost entirely as a reward for marked service to the party and for ability to bring home the bacon on election day.

There is more than the usual amount of interest in the meeting of the committee here tonight due to the presence of Dr. Ralph W. McDonald of Winston-Salem in the race for Governor and the fact that many of the Democratic leaders are convinced he is running for the Democratic nomination for Governor or on a Republican platform and the admission by most observers that he is going to get a lot of Democratic votes in the primary, in spite of his alleged Republican proclivities. If the only ones in the campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor were Clyde R. Hoey of Shelby, Lieutenant Governor A. H. (Sandy) Graham of Hillsboro and John McKee of Charlotte, it would not make much difference as to whether the Democratic convention was held before or after the primary, it is maintained. For it is generally agreed that these three candidates, active for years in Democratic councils in the state, could be counted upon to stay hunched and stand squarely upon any Democratic platform which the convention might adopt.

Consequently, it makes a lot of difference this year as to whether the State Democratic convention is to be held before or after the Democratic primary on June 6, it is generally conceded today. There are likewise two schools of thought as to when the convention should be held. One group thinks the convention should be held before the primary, adopt a strong platform endorsing the record of the Democratic party in the state, including the administration of Governor E. R. Roper, and thus leave Dr. McDonald the choice of either getting on the platform or off of it entirely. In order to stand on such a platform he would have to repudiate most of what he has said so far in his campaign and his campaign methods, or he would have to repudiate the Democratic platform and run as independent that would be more Republican than Democrat it is maintained by this group. Those who want the convention held before the primary seem to be in the minority, however.

Grade Crossings Being Eliminated Throughout State

Extensive Grade Separation Program For 1936 Being Started By Highway Commission

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, March 6.—In addition to the elimination of 36 highway-railroad grade crossings eliminated by the State Highway Commission, a new grade elimination program for 1936 includes 45 grade separation projects, 26 of which will be eliminated by underpasses or overpasses and six by the re-location of existing roads, while in 17 cases, existing structures will be replaced with new, standard types of underpasses or overpasses, according to a summary released today by the State Highway and Public Works Commission.

There are still 696 grade crossings on the state highway system, many of these being on additional mileage taken over by the state when it took over all the county roads. It will be many years, of course, before all these crossings can be eliminated. But the highway department is trying to eliminate all the more dangerous of these, especially on roads where the traffic is heavy, as rapidly as possible.

Approximately $210,000 was expended in the construction of overhead bridges, underpasses and relocations of highways in 1935 resulting in the elimination of the 36 grade crossings. Based on the average traffic on the highways where these grade crossings existed, it is estimated that approximately 7,800,000 vehicle crossings per year have been eliminated, thus reducing the number of times North Carolina motorists have been crossing railroad tracks almost 8,000,000 times a year. During 1935, the number of grade crossing accidents decreased 29 per cent under the number of 1934, according to statistics from the Highway Safety Division of the Department of Revenue.

"We are going to continue our grade crossing elimination program just as rapidly as our funds will permit," Chairman Capus M. Waynick of the highway commission said. "It is a well known fact that every grade crossing is a potential danger point. But the elimination of almost 8,000,000 vehicle crossings last year together with the elimination of more than 10,000,000 such crossings this year should serve to materially reduce the number of grade crossing accidents. We feel that we are really making some real progress."

WHAT DO YOU WANT TO KNOW ASK WHITESTONE AT THE STATE THEATRE TODAY AND TOMORROW

Mr. Whitestone—Question: I was born on June 6 and would like to know whether or not I would be successful as a salesman. Mr. R. F.

Answer: By all means take up salesmanship, as you were born under the sign of Gemini. The sign dominating personality, energy and a will to do things. Once you start a thing don't change, stick to it and you will be very successful.

Mr. Whitestone: Question: Is my husband true to me and can trust him? Mrs. A. R. Answer: Your husband is absolutely true to you, there is no need for you to worry. You can trust him, and if you yourself were truer to your husband than you are now, you would get along better.

Mr. Whitestone: Question: When will I get married? H. S.

Answer: You are married.

Mr. Whitestone: Question: Did J. P. steal the $10.00 from me last December? A. C.

Answer: No, the money was not taken from you by J. P. but it was lost as you were purchasing an article from a local store, during Christmas week.

Mr. Whitestone: Question: Where is my boyhood sweetheart, is she still living? R. M.

Answer: She is in New York City, married and has two children. She has been there ever since she left Washington four years ago. She has not let you know where she is for her husband is very jealous of you.

Mr. Whitestone: Question: Should I purchase the car that I was planning to purchase last Saturday? B. B.

Answer: No, this car which is a second hand car has been roughly treated by its former owner, he having ruined the motor, and this car will cost you too much to operate due to this fact.

NEW BALKAN POSTAL UNION CUTS FIVE NATIONS' RATES

Belgrade, March 6.—(AP)—As the result of negotiations lasting nearly a year and agreements signed here in the capital of Yugoslavia, states of the Little Entente and the Balkan pact put in force on January 1 a postal federation similar to the Pan-American and the Spanish postal unions.

It affects Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Greece and Turkey.

A reduction of postal rates among the signers of the union has been effected. Standing committees in each capital will study postal, telegraph, telephone and radio problems.

In the future the states will participate as a unit in international postal discussions.

MEMORIAL TO GEORGE V CALLS FOR LONDON FUND

London, March 6.—(AP)—The question of London's public memorial to George V will soon be raised, it is assumed, with possibility that a statue will be erected in some conspicuous place.

It also is regarded likely that part of a memorial fund would be devoted to some philanthropic enterprise.

In commemoration of Edward

VII the public subscribed nearly $500,000, although no public appeal was made.

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Bright industrial news spurred stocks to another bullish performance in today's market.

With the exception of the utilities and rails which were inclined to rest after the recent climb, virtually all departments pushed ahead with gains of fractions to three or more points. There were a few wider advances. Many new five-year tops were recorded.

The trading pace slowed after a fast start, but leading issues continued to edge higher. The alcohol pointed the way. The late tone was firm. Transfers approximated 2,850,000 shares.

PERFECT LIQUOR FOUND!

ORANGE GIN

The world has been waiting for it. Old Mr. Boston produced it. It has the swell delicious flavor of sun-ripened oranges—a taste that you and millions like. Look at the label—full 80 proof. There's the grand aroma of real oranges to greet you when you open a bottle. It gleams a beautiful natural golden color. It's positively delicious just as it comes—undiluted. It lifts martinis, side-cars, Tom Collins', fizzes and highballs to "tops." There's a handy jigger cup, and an interesting recipe folder with each bottle. The price is low. Perfect liquor? You'll say it's super-perfect. Try it.

GENIAL OLD MR. BOSTON greets you from the label on ORANGE GIN. It's a name that stands for top quality and grand taste on ANY liquor—particularly ORANGE GIN.

ORANGE GROVE. When you try ORANGE GIN you'll know that its delicious flavor is of the finest, ripest oranges ever picked from the world's best orange groves.
