Week's Devastation
Expected, However,
From New Rainfall

(By the Associated Press)
New floods threatened western Pennsylvania, northwestern West Virginia and Ohio today as rains swelled smaller streams, tributary to the Ohio river. Muddy waters again invaded Pittsburgh.

The nation's flood and storm death toll reached 197 after additional drownings and recoveries of bodies last night, and reckoned the total in Pennsylvania, where the deluge struck hardest.

Nothing like last week's devastation was expected from the new rainfall today, which sent an influx of water into the Monongahela and Ohio rivers, starting them rising again at points just returning to normal.

The Ohio river crest, after sweeping the upper valley and beyond moved toward Louisville, Kentucky, Evansville, Indiana, and other lower valley cities, forcing lowland families from their homes along the way.

The first indication of flood conditions on the Mississippi river, into which the Ohio flows, came from Hickman, Ky., where 100 families prepared to leave their homes in advance of rising waters.

A campaign was launched at Huntington, W. Va., to obtain immediate congressional approval of a $11,000,000 flood control plan, which sponsors said would remove Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky from flood danger for all time. The program called for construction of 39 reservoirs in four states.

March Graduates

College Announced

There were ten A. B. graduates at the end of the winter term of East Carolina Teachers College, and five graduates from the two-year course, the largest number of March graduates in the history of the College.

The one young man completing the four-year course is Robert Edward Dowd, of Mt. Vernon Springs, who majored in the Social Sciences.

The nine young women earning degrees, and the State certificates they will receive, are as follows:

Misses: Elizabeth Barrow, of La Grange, Primary Grade; Edith Griggs, Bowman, of Wadesboro, Primary Grade; Louise Hussey, of Warsaw, Primary Grade; Elsie Lane Bryan, of Garner, Grammar Grade; Ila Gry Eason, of Stanantonsburg, Grammar Grade; Elizabeth Boykin Paison, of Turkey, Grammar Grade; Rowena Dickinson, of Wilson, History-Science; Mrs. Sybil Silverthorne Whitaker, of Oriental, Math-Science; and Annie Morris Whitely, of Wilson, Math-Science.

Three of the five completing the two-year normal school course will receive Primary Grade certificates: Misses Billie Newell, of Zebulon, Lucille Raines, of Princeton, and Annie Mae Strickland, of Bailey. The other two will receive Grammar Grade certificates: Misses Mary Hoover Boyd, of Greenville, and Elsie Buie Thomas, of Jacksonville.

Mr. Dowd is continuing his college work through this term so as to add credits in grammar grade work sufficient to make this a major subject also.

Farmers Ready For Locusts
Wooster, O., (AP)—Farmers in 35 of Ohio's 88 counties are preparing for an invasion of the 17-year locust. J. S. Houser, chief of the department of entomology of the Ohio experiment station, says the locusts will appear in late May or June in large numbers and that the chief damage would be to fruit trees.

The full statement follows:
"To the Business Men of Greenville:

"To the people of Greenville, as well as to citizens of all parts of our country, there has come the call to aid in relieving the unnumbered thousands rendered homeless and destitute because of the floods in various sections of the middle west and east. The cost of rehabilitation will run into the hundreds of millions of dollars. What is needed at once, however, are funds for food, clothing, fuel and shelter of the thousands who are facing dire privation along the New England, Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio Rivers. Added to the lack of the absolute necessities of life, there follows in the wake of the floods sickness, disease and death. Not only food, clothing and shelter must be provided, but medicine, nursing and hospitalization must be made possible. It is imperative that relief funds be raised and forwarded immediately. Delay means added suffering and death.

C. Lloyd Fisher To Make Desperate
Appeal for Bruno

Trenton, N. J., March 25.—(AP)—With death in the electric chair facing Bruno Richard Hauptmann in six days, his counsel, C. Lloyd Fisher, was expected to make a desperate appeal for mercy to the State court of pardons.

At State prison preparations went forward for the dual electrocution next Tuesday night of Hauptmann, convicted Lindbergh baby killer, and Charles Zied, Philadelphia gangster, who slew a Camden detective in a holdup.

Governor Harold Hoffman said he would do nothing about answering the invitation of Dr. John F. Condon, Lindbergh ransom negotiator, to meet him in his Bronx home until he could confer tomorrow with Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

The governor probably will decide then whether he will go to the Bronx to ask Dr. Condon the questions he said should be answered to clear up certain points in his mind and the Lindbergh crime.

He said last night he would not submit his questions as requested by "Jafise."

Friends of Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, wife of the condemned man, expressed fear today that she might take her life in the event her husband was executed. Governor Hoffman had no comment to make on reports that she had written him threatening to kill herself and her son if her husband dies.

House Ways and Means Subcommittee Reverses Itself and Removes All Excise Taxes

Washington, March 25.—(AP)—A House Ways and Means subcommittee reversed itself suddenly today and agreed to keep processing and all other excise taxes out of a report on which the full committee will open hearings Monday on the new revenue program.

Chairman Samuel B. Hill (D. Wash.) told reporters:

"We have eliminated the project of processing taxes and all excise taxes from the report as a basis for hearings because we weren't very keen for it at any time and felt we would get pretty close to the amount of money we needed from other sources."

The subcommittee agreed too, he said, to reduce from 33 1-3 to 22 1-3 per cent the tax rate on dividends to non-residential alien owners of stock in American corporations. He said it was felt the rate was too high and the lower rate might even produce more money.

Hill said it was expected that $591,000,000 of additional revenue would be produced from a new corporation tax based on amounts of (Continued on Page Six)

resentatives in Raleigh Tomorrow

Washington, March 25.—(AP)—The tobacco states compact bill struck a snag today when Chairman Jones (D-Tex.) said it was generally agreed the House agricultural committee would eliminate provision prohibiting shipment of leaf from non-compact to compact states.

The committee had been expected to take action today on the measure introduced by Representative Kerr (D-NC), but Jones said a vote was deferred until tomorrow.

Elimination of the federal prohibition against interstate shipments, the chairman said, also would mean removal from the bill of federal penalties which would have provided a fine as high as $1,000 for violations.

Jones intimated there was considerable speculation among the committees as to whether federal compact legislation should be enacted before tobacco growing states approved statutes to regulate leaf production.

STEERING COMMITTEE CALLS
MEETING RALEIGH THURSDAY

Raleigh, March 25.—(AP)—The North Carolina tobacco central steering committee today invited the interstate tobacco advisory committee of Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina, to meet here tomorrow to consider the weed control situation.

The Tar Heel group decided to canvass the matter "carefully" and go into all phases such as voluntary signups the soil conservation program and proposed compact legislation.

Governor Ehringhaus said the group, as was expected, again discussed a special legislative session but no definite action was taken.

The Governor previously had said he did not think a special session of the North Carolina legislature should be called to consider compact legislation until Congress consented to such laws.

Chairman Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee in Washington, said there was question now as to whether Congress should act before the states.

VOLUNTARY WEED CONTROL
IS ABANDONED IN VIRGINIA

Richmond, Va., March 25.—(AP)—Gov. Peery said today he had notified Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus of North Carolina, that the voluntary compact for controlling tobacco production had been abandoned in Virginia.

Following a conference with leaders in close touch with the tobacco situation, Governor Peery said it had been decided to press the soil conservation program "in an effort to curb production, rather than the voluntary."

Return to Duty

Elizabeth City, March 25.—(AP)—Employees, only 27 of them offices, of the Elizabeth City hosiery mill, older plant of the Elizabeth City Hosiery company, returned to work this morning when the mill resumed operations after having been closed since Friday "to avoid a strike and possibly loss of life in the community."

The Avalon plant, closed for repairs in the hope of averting a strike on March 16, continues idle.

The returning workers went to their jobs this morning in the face of the cry of "scab" from pickets from the Avalon mill group about the mill entrance. Six policemen and County Sheriff Charles Carmine were on hand to preserve order but there was no indication of violence.

As the employees filed into the mill this morning they were told that in appreciation of their "loyalty," a 45-hour-week, in effect until last week when it was increased to 50 hours, was being restored.

At the same time it was announced an offer to operators of the Avalon plant to return to their old jobs on a 45-hour-week basis, conditioned upon their forgetting about joining the American Federation of Hosiery workers, had been withdrawn.

Washington, March 25.—(AP)—The new naval treaty, signed today by the United States, Great Britain and France, was hailed by Norman H. Davis, American delegation head as the "foundation of a new structure" for world fleet limitation.

His address, at the signing ceremony in London, made public here by the State Department, contained a warning that the treaty was not to be a special session to do any good, and that the only hope for reducing the 1936 crop is through voluntary contracts and agreements among the farmers.

Special Legislature Is Doubtful Regarding CongressReflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, March 25.—A special session of the North Carolina general assembly is still regarded as extremely remote in informed circles here, even if Congress should enact the Kerr state compact bill now being considered in Washington.

For while press reports from Washington indicate that the chances for the enactment of this state compact bill are good before this session of Congress adjourns, confidential reports said to have been received by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus and others, are reported as indicating that the chances for the passage of this bill are not very bright.

It is a well known fact here that Governor Ehringhaus is still very much opposed to a special session for any purpose whatever, and that he is still convinced that a special session, if it were meeting here now, could not pass any tobacco control law that would be effective until Congress has first passed an act validating the enactment of state compact laws. Governor Ehringhaus has already pointed out that the Virginia compact law—the only one already enacted—provides that it shall not be put into effect until Congress passes the necessary permissive legislation, until North Carolina and South Carolina pass similar acts, and until Georgia voluntarily agrees to undertake a definite degree of tobacco crop control. He further points out that South Carolina has not yet enacted its laws, that Congress has not yet enacted the required permissive act needed to validate these laws, and that by the time all these laws can be enacted it will be too late to do anything about the 1936 crop.

Governor Ehringhaus has said if these other laws are passed by Congress and South Carolina in a form that will permit North Carolina to join in the pact, he will call a special session. But it is believed he is already convinced that these laws will not be passed in time for a special session to do any good, and that the only hope for reducing the 1936 crop is through voluntary contracts and agreements among the farmers.

(Copyright by Associated Press)
London, March 25.—(AP)—The United States, Great Britain and France signed a new international naval treaty today.

The pact removes restrictions on the size of navies, but the United States and Great Britain, possessors of the two mightiest fleets, agreed separately to maintain their navies at the same level.

(Copyright by Associated Press)
London, March 25.—(AP)—The United States and Great Britain guaranteed a continuance of their parity in naval armaments today just before these two nations and France signed the new London naval treaty, dropping restrictions on the size of the world's greatest navies.

The chief American delegate, Norman H. Davis, and British Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden, exchanged letters each declaring the principle of parity contained in existing treaties with regard to their two fleets would continue to hold good after the old treaties expire as the new ones go into effect.

The new pact replacing the Washington accord and the London treaty of 1930 limited neither the number nor the tonnage of the fleets of the three participating powers, but introduced a new scheme for advanced notification of naval building program.

Delegates to the international conference which shaped the new treaty expressed hope that the program for exchanges of information would curb any sea armaments race for at least six years.

The new treaty also limited the size of the individual types of warships and inaugurated a building holiday for the larger type of cruisers in place of the battleship building holiday which endured for 14 years under the expiring Washington treaty.

The treaty was left open for the signatures later of Italy, which participated in the conference to the end, but declined to sign the pact while sanctions were in effect, and Japan which withdrew in the controversy over its equality demands.

For Local Softball League

At a meeting last week in the church study of the First Presbyterian Church organizational plans were laid for the "Greenville Sunday School Softball League." The representatives from the churches and Sunday Schools present elected C. K. Beatty as director of the league.

This meeting, acting also as a temporary Rules Committee, decided upon other things on these two very important terms of eligibility: subject to revision: that no one over high school age would be allowed to play and that to be eligible to play one must have been in Sunday School two consecutive Sundays before entering the League as a player. The validity of any excuse to be determined by the Superintendent of the Sunday School involved.

It was also held that a play must have been in Sunday School the Sunday preceding a schedule game in which he was to play. decision was reached to give a silver loving cup to the Sunday School winning the series, the cup to rotate each year. The expectation was also given that each Sunday School would field its own team at the end of the season. April 20 was the date set for the opening of play.

Committees on Disputes and Umpires and a Schedule Committee were elected. The latter is composed of Rev. Worth Wicker of the Episcopal Church and C. K. Beatty, Supt. of Presbyterian Sunday School. Thurman Kitchen from the Episcopal church was appointed chairman of the Committee on Disputes, the other representation being taken from the other Sunday Schools of the city. The Committee on Umpires is headed by H. H. Duncan of Immanuel Baptist Church, with the other Sunday Schools likewise being represented. (Continued on page six)

London, March 25.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler's rejection of the Locarno power proposals tightening the European crisis over German occupation of the Rhine was delivered by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's cabinet today at its regular weekly meeting.

Hitler's refusal to withdraw his forces from the Rhineland or to accept a judgment by the World Court in Germany's argument against the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact threw the Rhineland negotiations back to the Locarno powers.

The Councilors of the League of Nations, after days of waiting for the word from Der Fuehrer left London putting up to Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, and the other Locarno diplomats the task of finding a way out of the greater impasse.

With the departure of the league council, informed sources said, the first phase of the international crisis—reassertion of the sanctity of treaties, coupled with condemnation of Germany for its Rhineland occupation in violation of the Locarno pact—was passed.

Informed sources said: Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Hitler's special ambassador at large, might return to Berlin Friday to receive fresh instructions from Hitler, who promised to make new proposals of his own next Tuesday after Sunday's Reichstag election, called to approve his foreign policy.

County Agent E. F. Arnold Calls Meeting For Purpose of Passing
on Information on Program

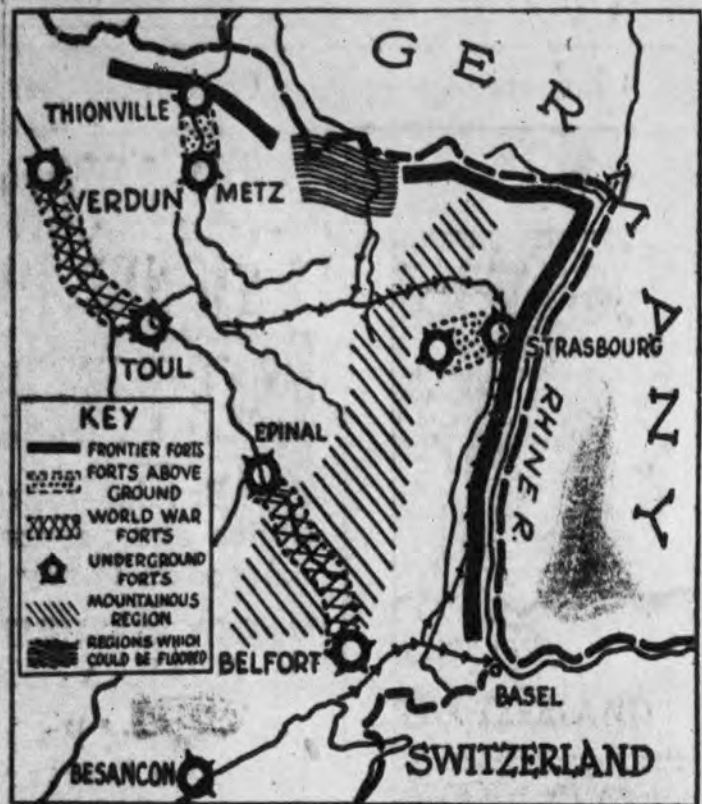

County Agent, E. F. Arnold, announced on his return today from the Conference of County Agents at Raleigh, that a meeting of all tobacco growers would be held at 2:00 p. m. Saturday, March 28, at the Court House in Greenville, for the purpose of giving general information on the soil conservation program.

Final rules and regulations have not yet been approved for this program. However, there has been certain definite commitments made by the Federal Government that can be passed on to the growers at this time. Mr. Arnold expressed hope that every tobacco grower in the County will reduce his tobacco acreage base down to 70 per cent, for which he will receive around $40 per acre for the acres retired, the amount depending on the base poundage in his adjusted contract for 1936.

The County Agents spent all day Tuesday studying the 1936 soil conservation program, in order that they might be able to instruct leaders in the various counties as to what would be required of the farmers in order to participate in the Federal Government's Soil Conservation and Soil Building program.

Work sheets are now being prepared, upon which farmers will establish the basis on which they will cooperate with the Federal Gov- (Continued on page six)

Mole-Like French Troops Ready To Rise From Ground Along Rhine

France's $350,000,000 frontier defense, as shown on the map, extends from the Swiss border, along the Rhine and thence northwest to the point where Belgium faces Germany. Below is a diagram showing the ground plan of a typical underground or 'mole' fort.

Strasbourg, March 25.—(AP)—If war begins on the Franco-German border, France's armies literally will rise out of the ground from the Belgian Ardennes to the Swiss Alps.

The Maginot line—called by military experts the "greatest system of fortifications of all times"—is composed of a chain of elaborate subterranean fortifications backed by a highly organized communications system.

Fortifications alone cost France some five billion francs, or about $350,000,000.

Fort Crown Fortresses

Peasants of Alsace and Lorraine till the soil over underground forts where thousands of crack troops live like moles, waiting for the day when French diplomacy fails and the French war machine moves into action.

A swift advance of motorized regiments on the frontier, French experts say, could paralyze the great steel belt of southern Germany, Essen, Dusseldorf, Koblenz, Stuttgart, Frankfurt, Cologne and other important industrial centers are close to the frontier.

In 1930 the late Andre Maginot, then France's minister of war, pushed through the first credits for the 125-mile chain of fortifications which were to bear his name. Today the Maginot line is complete—a material manifestation of French preparedness against a rearming Reich.

At Kehl, German side of the international bridge here, Nazis look across the Rhine at egg-shaped casemates facing the Reich, but what they cannot see is the underground "cities" beneath such casemates.

Burrows Self-Contained

Although Alsatian peasants see only flat meadows and wheat fields, they know that in six years France has built shell-proof forts some of which are 300 feet below the surface.

Some of these units include electric railroads connecting underground barracks, mess halls, emergency hospitals, storerooms and work shops where the frontier troops live in the light generated by their own underground power plants.

Endless bells carry shells from deep munition dumps to the carefully camouflaged big guns. Anti-aircraft batteries are so situated that French experts believe a curtain of lead would force attacking planes to cross the frontier only at tremendous heights.

Elaborate ventilating systems make the underground barracks habitable and stores of oxygen wait against the day when steel doors crash shut against gas attacks.

Underground storerooms contain enough food and drink for the troops to remain below indefinitely.

Soldiers Dig Like Mole

Behind the Maginot line French engineers have constructed a transport system designed to rush reserves and supplies to the front within a few hours. A network of highways, for heavy military trucks complement a huge rail system.

French troops have no love for life in the underground forts and officers often take less important posts rather than a Maginot line command, but the war ministry has seen to it that France's crack regiments man the fortifications.

From Switzerland north to Strasbourg only the Rhine separates the advance posts of the frontier from Germany, but from Strasbourg to Belgium the Maginot line twists snake-like through Alsace, sometimes miles from the German frontier, sometimes, as army officials admitted, "within machine gun distance."

The only complete low-priced car

Chevrolet's high-compression valve-in-head engine gives economy without equal!

Every test proves it's more economical . . . Every Chevrolet owner knows it's more economical . . . And every person will readily understand these simple A-B-C reasons why it is more economical

The Chevrolet engine is the most economical automobile engine produced today, because (1) it is a six-cylinder engine, and (2) it is a valve-in-head six-cylinder engine.

Its six cylinders use less gas and oil—in fact, use the least gas and oil—because six cylinders are the most economical combination used in modern automobiles.

Its valve-in-head design cuts gasoline consumption still lower because there is less loss of heat through the walls of the combustion chamber in valve-in-head engines, and the Chevrolet engine gives maximum heat (or power) saving.

LESS HEAT LOSS—VALVE IN HEAD TYPE ENGINE
GREATER HEAT LOSS—OTHER TYPES OF ENGINES

Most important of all, Chevrolet's more efficient cooling system, pressure stream oiling and the greater accessibility of all working parts result in more dependable operation, over a longer period of time, with the lowest maintenance costs. Thus, Chevrolet's valve-in-head engine—only one of its kind in Chevrolet's price range—gives economy without equal.

Hostess to Bridge Club
Miss Hennie Whichard was hostess to her bridge club yesterday afternoon at her home on Evans street.

Playing with the club members were Mrs. Annie Rawl of Columbia, S. C., and Mrs. S. L. Bridges.

Tables were placed in the living room in a setting of Japanese guinea. At the conclusion of the game Mrs. L. H. Bowling was awarded a prize for high score and Mrs. Rawl was remembered with a small gift.

A salad course with iced tea was served.

A. A. U. W. Meets
The March meeting of the Greenville branch of the A. A. U. W. held on Monday evening in the "Y" Hut, was given over to business and a panel discussion of neutrality in the United States.

One of the most important items of business was the selection of a president and a secretary to take up the work that Miss Mamie E. Jenkins and Mrs. Jack Edwards have been doing most efficiently for two years. Mrs. Ficklen Arthur was made president and Miss Jessie Mack secretary—both by unanimous vote.

Miss Rose, leader of the discussion, declared that the group felt rather presumptuous in attempting a panel, which has been defined as "a brilliant, witty, and interesting conversation." This trial of a panel discussion was animated and provocative, and touched on such phases of neutrality as objectives, history, rights and duties, embargoes, and the probabilities of success. Those participating, besides Miss Rose, were Misses Adams, Griggsby, Hart, McKee, Turner and Williams. At the close of the conversation, Miss Rose invited the other members to ask questions and make comments.

The hostesses, Misses Newell and Mack, served delicious refreshments.—Reported.

American Legion Auxiliary
The monthly meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary was held on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. K. B. Pace, with Mrs. H. C. Suggs, Mrs. D. M. Clark and Mrs. C. A. Bowen assisting hostesses.

Mrs. C. F. Bland, president, opened the meeting with flag salute and prayer to the Constitution, given in concert. This was followed by singing "America" and prayer led by Mrs. Wiley Brown.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. There was a report from the treasurer and a very interesting report was given by our welfare chairman, Mrs. R. C. Stokes.

Plans for Poppy Day were discussed. It was also decided to send something to the boys at Oteen for Easter.

The Auxiliary voted to give $5.00 to the Red Cross for flood relief. We are indebted to Mayor Marvin Blount for the interesting and inspiring talk he made on "Community Service."

The next meeting will be on Monday, April 27.—Reported.

Memorial Baptist Prayer Service
The midweek service of Prayer, Praise and Bible Study will be held tonight at 7:30 p. m. in Memorial Baptist church. All members are invited to be present. This devotional hour will bring you increased spiritual power. Officers and teachers of the Sunday School are expected to be present for their preparation of the next week's work. Come.

A. A. Farland at College
Banjo playing, by A. A. Farland, who has picked the banjo all over the United States, in Canada, and in England, entertained the College students at their Assembly hour yesterday morning with an excellent banjo program.

Mr. Farland, who was introduced by R. C. Deal, has played for over two thousand schools and is at present winding up a tour that included two hundred schools. He doubtless considers New Jersey as his headquarters as his automobile had a license from that state.

Those who only experience with a banjo is the old-fashioned banjo-picking of folk tunes were delighted to find other things can be beautifully played on a banjo.

The program was as follows:
A medley overture of standard American folk songs, among which were "Old Black Joe," "Dixie," and "When You and I were Young, Maggie."

Beethoven's "Minuet in G." A standard brass band march, "Salute to the Colors."

"The Old Refrain," one of Chrysler's best-liked violin solos.

A taste of grand opera in "The Grand March" from Aida.

An English composer's idea of American negro music, a sketch called "Down South."

"Barcarole," from "Tales of Hoffman."

"The Carnival of Venice."

Literature Department
The Literature Department of the Woman's Club held a most delightful meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Grady Bell, with Mrs. Bell and Mrs. K. T. Futrell as hostesses.

Early spring flowers were used to decorate the home. After the roll call and business being dispensed with, Mrs. W. H. Woolard presented Mr. Vester Mulholland of the High School faculty, who had been asked to talk on the subject, "Magazines of Today," a unit of the club's program for the year, "Recent Trends in Human Progress."

Mr. Mulholland told how magazines represent their age and "if one finds no joy in the expression of it." He told how the writer of the magazine article must place his sensitized finger on the pulse of the great reading public and deliberately attune himself to the rhythms he perceives there, giving the reader what the reader wants because his demands must be satisfied. The production of anything else is pure waste of time. The writer courts failure when he loses sight of his reader.

In an increasingly charming and interesting manner, Mr. Mulholland covered in detail the various aspects of the magazine article and of the writer's attitude toward his work, bringing out many illuminating facts and ideas. He listed magazine after magazine, giving its type, contrasting it with others and noting its special contribution to the welfare and progress of mankind.

After this splendid talk, which had been not only vastly entertaining but had made us more widely and warmly acquainted with magazines, both in general and in particular, the hostesses, assisted by little Miss Pauline Bell, served tea, wafers and other dainties.

The only guest for the afternoon was Mrs. N. C. Brooks.—Reported.

Rev. Helfer to Speak Three More Services
Three services remain of the ten-day preaching mission being conducted by the Rev. Fred W. Helfer in the Eighth Street Christian Church.

Mr. Helfer's messages have attracted increasing crowds and it is anticipated that these remaining nights will witness even larger groups of people anxious to hear the helpful and hopeful messages to be delivered by this young man who has captivated the people, not only of the sponsoring church, but of the entire community.

Tonight Mr. Helfer speaks on "We Need the Church." In the face of current criticism and question of the value of the Church it will be interesting to hear what the speaker has to say about the individual's need for the organization that has continued through nineteen centuries. Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Council is sponsoring tonight's service. All members of this group, and others who may wish to attend, are asked to meet in the College classroom at 7:30 for the ten-minute Altar Service.

POU REPORTED LEADING RACE

Candidate Said To Be Making Good Progress

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, March 24.—George Ross POU is kicking up plenty of dust over the state in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for State Auditor, despite the fact that he is the most recent candidate to announce for the office which has now been held for almost 16 years by Baxter Durham, the present incumbent.

Nor has POU ever run for state office before, although he did seek the nomination as Representative in Congress some two years ago in the Fourth Congressional district, following the death of his father, the late Edward W. POU, who was a member of Congress from the Fourth district for more than 30 years. For some 13 years prior to this time, however, POU was superintendent of the state prison, having been appointed to the post three times by three successive governors—Morrison, Gardner and Ehringhaus.

Despite the fact that this is POU's first venture as a candidate for the Democratic nomination to a state office, it is agreed that he is no newcomer to state politics and that he is as canny a politician as the state has ever produced. During the 13 years he was head of the state prison, he was thrown in close contact with the sheriffs and other county officials in every county and is admitted to have a large and loyal following in almost every section of the state.

Although State Auditor Baxter Durham has not yet formally announced for renomination, he is expected to do so any day now, while Willard L. Dowell, executive secretary of the North Carolina Merchants Association, is also a candidate for the nomination. Durham, due to the fact that he has held the office for 16 years and is conceded to have the benefit of the backing which the man who holds a state office always has, is expected to be a difficult man to defeat. He is already showing much more strength than many believed he would several weeks ago. His supporters believe he is in no great danger.

Dowell has not been very active the past two weeks or so, but his backers are confident that his extensive state-wide acquaintance and many contacts, he is going to become an increasingly dangerous candidate and one likely to give both Durham and POU a hard battle before the campaign is over.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK
By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, March 25.—The success of Secretary Morgenthau in handling alone one of the largest treasury financings in years, to supplement cash reserves for relief, farm and bonus payments, has convinced financial quarters that he is a financier in his own right.

Heretofore it has been the job of the undersecretary of the treasury to lay the groundwork for such offerings. Usually the undersecretary would travel the well-worn path in the financial district of New York, sounding out leaders as to prospects.

Since the resignation of Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, however, the post of undersecretary has not been filled. Reports have it that the administration is encountering difficulty in getting the right man for the place.

He must be in sympathy with New Deal fiscal policies, a person known to the financial leaders of the country and capable of persuading them to come to the assistance of the government when it needs money—a large-sized order in view of known animosities to certain administration undertakings.

Close To White House
Since Morgenthau has been secretary he has been so closely identified with President Roosevelt in all government financial activities that his personal views and abilities never have been distinguished from those at the White House.

Advice he has volunteered on treasury matters has gone directly to the President during weekly luncheon conferences and frequent meetings on budgetary and other problems. It has long been an open secret in Washington that Mr. Roosevelt is his own secretary of the treasury.

Total subscriptions received by the government for its March cash offering of $1,250,000,000 in securities were $8,450,000,000—one of the most successful yet.

Such a heavy over-subscription not only indicates that the credit of the government is improving but also that Morgenthau knows his way around as a financier.

Steady Rise
Morgenthau's rise as one of the closest advisers to the President has not been particularly sensational, but it has been steady.

NOTICE OF RESALE

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE of an order made by His Honor, J. Paul Frizzelle, Resident Judge Fifth Judicial District, on the 18th day of March, 1936, in that certain action entitled "Mary L. Ward et al. vs. C. A. Manning, Individually, C. A. Manning, Executor, G. A. Manning, Administrator, et al.," the undersigned commissioners therein appointed will offer for resale to the highest bidder for cash at the courthouse door in Greenville, N. C., on Saturday, 4th Day of April, 1936, At Twelve o'Clock Noon, the following described real estate, to-wit:

M. C. Manning lands: A certain piece or parcel of land being in Bethel Township, Pitt county, adjoining the land of G. C. Whitehurst, B. F. Bowers, D. Manning et al., known as the Crisp and Whitehurst land, the same being the land that J. A. Manning Sr. bought from R. J. Grimes and Thos. Grimes, it being the same land conveyed to M. C. Manning by J. A. Manning, Sr., of record in Book ... page 342 Pitt County Registry.

Also another tract of land being on the south side of Grindle Creek adjoining the land of E. D. Manning, W. R. Ford, W. T. Carson et al., being the same tract of land where M. C. Manning resided and which was conveyed to W. J. Smith, which Deed is duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds in Pitt County, Book 8-5 page 421-422, containing by estimation 66 acres more or less.

The above two tracts of land being bounded on the north by Chas. Whitehurst; east by Ed Manning and Durwood Carson, and Tom Williams; South by Jasper Manning; West by Julius Brown and Roy Bowers, and containing 144 acres. This 19th day of March, 1936. Julius Brown and M. K. Blount, Commissioners.

Common Sense about HEADACHE

Usually a headache is due to high nerve tension. At such times all you need is a little Capudine. This remedy is very effective because it quickly soothes tense nerves and eases pain.

Of course headache may come from more serious sources. Sometimes it may be an abscessed tooth, or some underlying cause which only your family physician can discover. Meanwhile, avoid suffering as much as you can by using Capudine.

Capudine contains no narcotics. It acts quickly and gently. Ask for either Capudine Liquid or Capudine Brand Tablets.

for the nomination, insisting that he would not lift a finger nor spend a nickel to achieve it. But if the convention deadlocked between Landon and Borah—both anathema to him—he would be glad to olive-branch himself into the presidential picture. He feels confident that FDR can be beaten
if the G. O. P. avoids a disastrous internal row.

KNIFING: When Publisher William Randolph Hearst publicly
sponsored the Landon candidacy,
long-headed politicians ventured
the humorous comment that Hearst had given the Governor "the kiss
of death." It's a phrase which Al
Smith coined when he and Mr.
Hoover's fellow-Californian were battling for supremacy in New York
politics.

Mr. Hoover ironically repeated
the expression while explaining how the Hearst-Merriman-Landon clique
had complicated both California and national politics. The ex-President and Republican regulars
have been nursing a scheme under which the coast state would name
and unrestrict or "favorite son" delegation. Mr. Hoover expected that this he could exert maximum influence on nominee and platform at Cleveland. Then came the announcement that Mr. Landon would contest for California's delegation.

A Hoover spokesman immediately
telephoned Governor Landon. After explaining the former President's attitude, he demanded that Mr.
Landon choose between Hearst or Hoover in the California controversy. The Kansan chose Hearst—and antagonized the man who will swing a bigger stick at Cleveland
than most people realize. The fight is on and Mr. Hoover's one-two-three favorites—Vandenberg, Knox
and Dickinson—are laughing up their sleeves. With both Borah
and Hoover knifing the present
pacer, each thinks he may benefit by this political "squeeze play."

HOUSES: A dozen powwows on a large-scale government housing program have produced only indigestion on the part of the conferees.
The experts ate and talked but agreed upon no definite building setup that would relieve unemployment and furnish inexpensive
homes.

RFC Chief Jesse Jones was contentious of any scheme which he couldn't dominate. Peter Grimm, Secretary Morgenthau's representative, argued that Uncle Sam ought to ease himself out of the lending and construction field. Federal Reserve Board President Marriner Ec-
cles, admitting technical ignorance,
favored any plan which would place
money in circulation. John Fahey
and Stewart McDonald, HOLC and FHA tops, agreed to undertake any program handed to them. Outside real estate interests brought pressure to stymie any agreement.

"Bob" Wagner begged, browbeat,

ADMIRALS: Epauletted gentlemen in our Navy Department are secretly happy at John Bull's European dilemma. They suspect that England's continental commitments
may break off any unwritten naval entente which London and Washington have discussed between cocktails at 10 Downing street.
On this point the diplomats and the admirals always clash. The State Department has usually been imbued with a missionary spirit—
with a feeling that Uncle Sam and John Bull between them can make the rest of the world behave. This spirit has not been embodied in signed treaties but on several occasions—under the kindly Messrs.
Stimson and Hull—it has brought

Golden Rain

by Margaret Wildemer

SYNOPSIS: Iris Leaning has been snatched out of the aristocratic but poverty-stricken home
of her Aunt Ella and Uncle Will in Persia, Pa., by the brother Owen.
She didn't know Uncle, and the sunt Phina who turned out to be the most famous courtesier in America. She realizes the change to Phina's Park Avenue apartment
will be considerable—so do Aunt Ella and Uncle Will and Morgan
Black, through whom Iris found her other relatives. But even the railway station seems marvelous to Iris.

Chapter 17 LUXURY

"WHO were those people who spoke to you?" Phina asked.
"I don't know," amiss Iris. "I was in the observation car. The red-headed one had something to drink
and was trying to get me to go over
and join his crowd. The tall man,
the older one, stopped him from being a nuisance."

"You didn't think of going?"

"Why, no!"

"It might have been better. If people are objectionable you can always drop them," said this astoring aunt. "They look like the right kind."

"She's not what you thought a chaperon was, is she, little country-
mouse?" said Owen lightly.

"Nothing as outworn as that, I hope," Phina smiled, sipping an affectionate arm through Iris's.
"We're going to be companions, not old people and young people. aren't
we, my dear?"

"I hope so," Iris said shyly. It seemed topsy-turvy. She supposed Phina would have approved of her staying away from the shouting strangers. Well, she was a country mouse. She laughed.

"You'll have to let me work up to being a sophisticated by degrees," she said. "I've been living in the sixties or nineties or something like that, you know."

"Good line," approved Owen. Then
they were at the apartment house.
A slender silver-gray terraced tower
toward the upper end of Park Avenue. Iris stood around the foyer,
as they stood waiting for the elevator.

It was all sharp-lined metal and silvery velvet. A single strange twisted picture, all red-and-silver lines and planes, dominated a mantel and fireplace which gave the
place a look of a deserted room,
not a hall.

The smiling uniformed operator
swept them upward, a royal proce-sion, a door opened at the rear of the elevator and let them directly into Phina's apartment. A maid in violet taffeta and lace apron took their outdoor things, another swept away the baggage.

The hall where they stood was paneled in silvery wood like the one downstairs; over a console-table
hung one dry-point of Phina, signed by a famous etcher; a Lalique vase
holding out-of-season flowers of the valley stood below it on a scrap of exquisite Chinese brocade; jade toys lay about.

"Don't dream dear—come up to your room!" Phina was laughing.

"But it's so lovely."

She could not help contrasting Phina with shabby, dense Aunt Ella and her immutable social lines. A woman who had made herself a pos-sion and could have a place like this
as still beyond the pale to Ella.
Phina, to Aunt Ella, was a dressmaker. No matter how successful.

Poor Aunt Ella, such queer things happened to her. Of course, Philadelphia had always worried over such things and little Persia, a province of Philadelphia, a backwater, held to the old lines more than Philadelphia itself. And Aunt Ella was an old lady. Iris's people had all been middle-aged when she was born and probably old-fashioned for that, as provincial gentle-folk who have been "paved" and are apt to be.

"I'm jumping fifty years," Iris told herself as she stepped across from the elevator to the gray-velvet rug
of the foyer. The excitement of it rushed over her again.

AND then, somewhere in her mind
came the thought of what Morgan
would have said. "Be sure you don't alight on the wrong square
when you come down, like Alice in Wonderland."

He said clever, disturbing things like that. Oh, dear, was Morgan to haunt her through everything she said and did in this amazing new world?

The elder violet-taffeta maid and Owen followed Iris up a pair of dolls' stairs and a loud voice took her mind from Morgan for the moment.

Somebody in the drawing room
below was waiting suddenly. "Oh, Phina, I'm in such a mess about money!" and Phina, her tailor-
made, calm as a doctor or a nurse,
was saying in her cool carrying voice, "Now, Mrs. Russell, just what seems to be the matter?"

Iris peered back over the carved gray banister and said, "Owen who is she?"

Owen followed Iris into the rosy,
lacy bedroom to which the maid led
her. He sat down on the edge of the graceful ivory dressing-table, rather endangering its silver brushes and buffers, and grinned as he lit a cigarette.

"Just one of Phina's pets in need of financial reassurance. Nothing unusual."

Iris sat down on the nearest thing, a scroll-shaped Empire loveseat.

"Phina must be awfully kind-
and isn't it expensive?"

"Oh, well, most women like Phina (and I may say there aren't many of them) are sort of unofficial Little Helpers to the Rich one way or another. Phina's been kept up by a lot of smart people. She's more or less the fashion."

"She helps people like this Russell woman out with their bills, or maybe puts an extra polish on some debutante's clothes"—Owen
frowned as if this thought had annoying connotations—"and she lunches with them, or runs down to keep them company when they're alone in the great big country house
with dear stupid George away."

"But—" began Iris. Phina's steps clicked up the dolls' stairs before she could continue. She came in and spoke rather sharply to Owen.

"Sigrid's downstairs. I told you she had to come over. To work with the fall plans, but I certainly didn't mean you to ask her to dine."

"I can ask her out to dinner," said
Owen, more quietly, but as sharply.
"Nonsense. Now she's here she may stay. I only thought you might like to have your sister to yourself
the first evening."

"I wanted her to see Sigrid," said
Owen, flushing, and went downstairs.

"The wrong girl, at this age!" said Phina, throwing out her red-nailed capable hands in a despairing gesture. "Perhaps you can help me, little niece. With his looks and charm Owen could marry anywhere. And —well, you'll see."

She put her arm around Iris, and finished, "I'll count on you. And now you'll better get your bath and dress. Honora's drawn it, I see."

"Hadm't I better let you have yours first?"

Phina laughed outright. "Every bedroom has its own, you cunning thing! Wear the rose-quartz with the frock on the bed. You're the most adorable ingenu. But, dearest, go light on it, or people won't think it's real."

IRIS was lying luxuriously in clear
green water, in a bathtub tinted rose like the rest of the room before
the meaning of Phina's parting remark struck her. Phina seemed to think that the way people acted was a garment to put on and off as they pleased.

For a moment the excited enchantment slipped a little; all the delight of this fairylike apartment,
her beautiful clothes. Aunt Phina
with her power and her air of owning the world, Owen—no, not Owen!
That was real, so matter what else
was.

Well, anyway, middle-aged people were queer. And a frock she'd never worn was in the next room, and undreamed-of delights were downstairs and out in New York City and on Long Island. She was homesick, that was what it was—she missed Uncle Will; she missed
driving Aunt Ella; she missed Morgan, with his crossness on top
and his eager kindness and honesty
beneath, and the disturbing love beneath that.

She turned on a sharp cold shower that made her all alive and thrilled again; she ran back and
was in the adorable rose chiffon
with its beads and slippers, her hair
coaxed into the smooth close waves
she loved, and down the toy stairs,
ready for anything in this most al-
luring of worlds.

The other two were before her,
Owen in his dinner jacket, Phina in a marvelous gold tissue frock down
to her fingertips and out to the waist behind. The tiny beautifully-made blonde girl in black velvet lounging with exaggerated nonchalance on the piano bench, must be Sigrid. She spoke, lifting thick blackened
lashes: "This long-lost sister?"

Except for her stature she was as Scandinavian as her name. Iris liked a certain honesty she felt in her. She had gray eyes set wide apart, a milky skin, piquantly high cheekbones in a pointed face, lips
made just the right red, and wheels
of very fair hair framing the heart
shaped outline.

tions have or can get money to repair the damages they have sustained.

But what of the thousands of individuals who have suffered serious losses? Where will they get the necessary funds to replace lost
homes and stores and furniture?
Hundreds of small merchants in Pennsylvania and New England and West Virginia have been wiped out beyond hope of recovery.

LESSON: Here's how keen analysts appraise the effects of the flood
on various leading industries:

Railroads in the affected area are
in for huge repair bills with no chance for any compensating increase in revenues later. The same applies to telephone and telegraph
companies and to electric utilities dramatically damaged. The packing companies have lost large supplies of warehoused meat. The New England dairy industry is badly hit by loss of livestock. It looks like higher prices for meat and milk.

The automobile industry and luxury trades will lose business because many people who would otherwise have bought their products cannot do so now. Steel is perhaps the hardest hit of all—just as it was getting up momentum. Heavy outlays will be needed to restore flooded plants. But steel should recouped handsomely later in the enforced demand to replace machinery, bridges, etc. Clear gainers from the ill wind will include the machine tool, electrical equipment,
copper, cement and building material industries.

Financial leaders hope the disaster will at least impress the timely object lesson on Congress that it's dangerous to eviscerate corporate reserves.

FRUSTRATED: New York credits FDR with neat handling of the dispute between rail managements
and rail unions. He hasn't settled anything, of course, but he has at least postponed a hopeless deadlock
and opened up new possibilities for a compromise agreement.

His prettiest maneuver was his gesture to the unions. Their ruffed feelings were smoothed by his advice to Congress to go right ahead

and consider the Wheeler-Crosser
bill. This is the measure prompted by labor to compel maintenance of railway employment at existing levels.

In reality this gesture didn't mean a thing. Administration leaders in Congress already had their cue in his earlier statement that negotiation is preferable to legislation. So no matter how much heat the unions turn on for the bill it hasn't a chance. But the President has technically withdrawn his opposition—so they can't pin their frustration on him.

CORRECTION: We recently reported that Senator Barbour of New Jersey would not be a candidate for reelection this fall. Source close to the Senator advise us
that this is incorrect.

They report that Barbour intends to run if it takes his last nickel and his election has practically been guaranteed. He is said to be waiting for the primaries in May before announcing. That makes it possible for him to spend whatever he chooses without having to account for it. Following his announcement the expenditures will probably be very mild.

SQUEALS: New Yorkers returned from Washington report that a reading of the record indicates that Lobbyist Robert E. Smith pulled what is known as a "fast one" before the Black Committee.

When the Senate inquirers tried to develop that he really represented utilities rather than railroads
and reclamation interests, he voluntarily blabbed about his friendship with Representatives. According to Senators Black and Schwelmbach,
he drew a Congressional herring
across the utility trail.

Mr. Smith had made Congress
sour on lobbyists by resort to this year of strategy. It's the second time in a year that a special pleader
has run for refuge behind big names. Only a few months ago

Hopson's Associated Gas and Electric entertainer—Mr. Robinson—spilled the fact that Presidential Secretary McIntyre had consumed
a highball in his room. Congress is beginning to see the moral—don't traffic with a lobbyist who will sneak to save his hide!

Strangely Varied Acts Comprise The Lindberg Drama

Trenton, March 25.—(AP)—The Lindbergh kidnaping drama, now in its fifth and perhaps final year, falls into four acts, each charged with its own poignancy.

No mystery writer could pick a more fitting scene for the opening of the drama than real life gave—a happy home in the desolate New Jersey Scurlands. And only a maker of fearful melodramas would have picked such principals—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, world-famous aviator; his wife, Anne Morrow, daughter of a Morgan partner and a former United States ambassador, and their first-born son. The night of March 1, 1932, lent itself to the drama—black, windy, menacing. Into the nursery of the house steals a kidnaper, a terrible figure. The child is taken. The civilized world is shocked, grieved, angry.

The greatest manhunt of modern times is started. Money is of no consequence. The baby must be found alive, his kidnaper brought to justice. The world's police swing into action.

Out of retirement comes a Bronx school teacher, Dr. John P. Condon, the intangible Jafie. He is accepted as intermediary, hands $50,000 over the wall of a lonely cemetery, only to find himself and the Lindberghs disillusioned, frantic.

Then enters a more tragic note—the finding of the baby's body, ten weeks after the kidnaping.

On the nineteenth of September, 1934, in the Bronx, New York, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, an obscure German carpenter, is seized, charged with the kidnaping, stripped of $14,600 of the ransom money. Hauptmann seems to slip neatly into the strange story. He is a burglar, stowaway, a taciturn, stoical fellow with a passion for stock market gambling.

The prisoner, father of a young son, makes emphatic denial of his guilt. The Flemington, N. J., courthouse becomes the news center of the nation as he goes on trial for the kidnap-murder.

The nation watches with bated breath while lawyers wrangle. Hauptmann denies he bought the lumber, constructed the ladder, said by the state to have been used by the kidnaper to enter the infant's bedroom.

A jury of eight men and four women, sitting beside a benign old judge, condemn the alien carpenter to death.

The fourth act portrays the battle of Hauptmann to free himself of the tightening bonds—his futile appeals to the highest court in New Jersey, to the highest court in the land, his vain appeal for mercy. Lawyers, armed with legal stratagems, move back and forth through an atmosphere of arid legalistic subtleties, sentimentalities, hopes, and fears.

The governor of the state—Harold G. Hoffman, young, ambitious, doubts the justice of the decision and airs his views to the press. There is a scene in the death house; the governor talks to the condemned man.

The action becomes confused, there are political asides, a departure from the clean line of the story. The Lindberghs leave the country. The fatal hour of execution draws near.

Insurgents Win Victory At Republican Sessions

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. BASKERVILL
Raleigh, March 25.—The Republicans of the state, in convention assembled, endorsed the platform of Dr. Ralph W. McDonald of Winston-Salem, one of the four candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, named William Grissom as the Republican candidate for Governor by a vote of 694 1-2 to 393 1-2 for Irvin B. Tucker, who had been regarded as certain to get this nomination, much to the dismay of the Tucker backers, rallied at President Roosevelt and the "New Deal," adopted a pussyfooting plank favoring the retention of state prohibition and assailing county liquor control, named the rest of its state ticket, adjourned and went home late Tuesday afternoon.

The nomination of Grissom over Tucker was regarded as a distinct victory for the Republican "insurgents" in the state who for some time have been revolting against the domination of the few who have controlled the party and dominated state conventions for years. Grissom, for many years U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue in North Carolina, has never stood in very high esteem with the Republican big wigs in the state, but has always been popular with the ranks and file of the Republican voters. He has known for many months that he was being opposed for the nomination by the so-called Republican "machine" but made his play to the masses—and won.

The nomination of Grissom is also regarded as a blow to the Republicans who have been sympathetic to the candidacy of Dr. McDonald, despite the fact that McDonald is a Democrat. Some of the reports current here yesterday were that the McDonald Republicans were supporting Tucker rather than Grissom, because they believed that if Tucker was nominated for Governor, more of the "insurgent" Republicans would vote for McDonald rather than Tucker, on the grounds that McDonald would have a better chance of winning the nomination. Now that Grissom has won the nomination, a good many observers believe that not only will Grissom get most of the "insurgent" Republican vote and thus tend to prevent them from voting for McDonald in the Democratic primary, but that if it appears McDonald will not be able to win the Democratic nomination, many of the disgruntled Democrats who are now supporting McDonald will vote for Grissom in the general election in November. Thus the nomination of Grissom is regarded as a distinct blow to those Republicans who would rather see McDonald nominated as the Democratic candidate, with the help of the Republicans, than support their own nominee. It is also regarded as a distinct blow to the McDonald hopes in the Republican counties, where it is reported he has been counting heavily on many Republicans voting for him in the Democratic primary.

The other Republican candidates named by the convention are as follows: For Lieutenant Governor, J. Sam White, of Mebane; for U. S. Senator, to oppose Senator Josiah W. Bailey, Democrat, the present incumbent, Frank E. Patton, of Morganton; for National Committeeman, Charles A. Jones of Lincolnton; for National Committeewoman, Mrs. John R. Jones of North Wilkesboro, succeeding Mrs. W. E. Kennan of Davie county; for Chairman of the State Republican Executive Committee, W. C. Meekins, of Hendersonville.

The reason for the contention in Democratic circles that the Republican State Convention endorsed the platform of McDonald, is because of the similarity of the GOP state platform and that of the Winston-Salem college professor. The Republican platform, boiled down, declares as follows:
Against the present and past Democratic state administrations.
Against the sales tax.
Against President Roosevelt and the "New Deal."

Against the present county liquor control and liquor stores plan.
For the continuation of state prohibition.
For higher pay for school teachers and more money for schools.
For $4 automobile license tags.
For old age pensions.
For the rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively.
For a reduction in the salaries of state officials.
The McDonald platform, boiled down, is about as follows:
Against the present and past Democratic administrations.
Against the sales tax.
For President Roosevelt and the "New Deal."

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

The issue of federal relief at last is assuming that special prominence which far-seeing politicians long have forecast for it.

The current struggle in congress is deep-seated and severe; but it is only a circumstance to what many on both sides expect once the campaign swings into full stride. Mr. Roosevelt's message, asking for another $1,500,000,000 for the works progress administration, scarcely could have been better timed to produced controversy. It found the critics of WPA already going into action on many fronts, and WPA itself vehemently denying charges of gross inefficiency, impractical methods and political manipulation.

One definite distinction should be drawn. Few of those who object to the President's policies think further relief expenditures can be avoided, or regard the sum requested as necessarily excessive. The opposition does object vigorously to the way the money is being handled.

Thus the finger of controversy is pointed rather directly at Harry L. Hopkins, into whose hands this vast spending operation was put by Mr. Roosevelt. Aside from the principal candidates themselves, Mr. Hopkins promises to be exhibit No. 1 of the campaign.

A Natural Issue
This has come about by a process of natural evolution. Sooner or later, in the judgment of political seers, relief was bound to come to the front because, in a field of complicated issues, this was one issue everyone knew about.
The constitution, the monetary policy, even the farm problem, seems remote to many voters. The new tax program is designed to touch only a small percentage. But everybody in every community knows about relief. He either has direct contact with it, or he has seen its operation, or heard it discussed objectively in even the smallest gathering of his friends.
Its emergence as an overshadowing issue, which might logically have been expected much earlier in 1936, was delayed by force or circumstances. The President's decision to postpone his relief recommendation was followed by a season of engrossment in such issues as the bonus, farm aid, taxation. The delay has only accentuated the final impact.
Similarly, in previous phases of the Roosevelt administration, various predecessors to Mr. Hopkins have played temporarily the role of exhibit No. 1. First it was Professor Moley around whom the controversy centered. Then it was

"You don't have to be rich to enjoy rich whiskey!"

Not a barrel of money my friend—but a barrel of quality!

Yes, friends, when you think of quality, think of mellow Old Quaker straight whiskey—rich and round and smooth—in every bottle! But it doesn't take a barrel of money to buy it—for Old Quaker is The Friendly Whiskey—mindful of your pocketbook, as well as your taste and throat. And so today, why not change to friendly Old Quaker—and keep the change!

DURHAM SEEKS OLD POSITION

Announces Candidacy For Renomination as Auditor

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, March 25.—Baxter Durham today announced that he is a candidate for renomination as the Democratic candidate for State Auditor, which post he has held continuously for the past 15 years. In the two sentence announcement he issued today, Durham said:

"I am asking the Democracy of North Carolina to renominate me as State Auditor in the primary to be held June 6. I am sincerely grateful for the expression of confidence and faith the people of the state have given me in years past. I have tried to live and serve in such a way as to merit the continuation of this confidence."

State Auditor Durham is 58 years old, having been born in Durham August 20, 1878, and is the son of Columbus and Lila Waters Durham. He was educated in the public schools of Durham and Raleigh, the Raleigh Male Academy and Wake Forest College.

After being employed for several years as a traveling auditor in the office of State Auditor, Durham was nominated and elected State Auditor in 1920 and has been renominated and elected each time since. A complete system of accounts has been installed in all the state departments and institutions under his direction since he became State Auditor.

Regarded for years as the state's best known bachelor, Mr. Durham decided to forego bachelorhood almost two years ago, when on July 14, 1934, he married Miss Lois Dasher of Southport.

Two other candidates are seeking the nomination for State Auditor, in addition to Durham. They are George Ross Fox of Smithfield and Raleigh, former superintendent of state prison, and Willard L. Dowell, executive secretary of the North Carolina Merchants Association. Both Dowell and Fox are regarded by many as strong candidates and likely to give Durham a stiff race. But Durham's supporters maintain that having won the votes and the confidence of the Democrats of the state in four previous elections, Durham should be able to win again.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR PLAYING SOFTBALL ARE DECIDED UPON

It was only after long and thorough discussion that the decision was reached to sponsor a soft-ball league instead of a baseball league. Inasmuch as a soft-ball league would broaden the eligibility list, together with the fact that soft-ball leagues are taking the country by storm in amateur circles, such as was experienced in Raleigh last year, the decision reached found unanimous favor among all present. It is hoped, though no plans have been formulated as yet—that the Sunday Schools can also sponsor a similar league for the girls.

NAVAL PACT HAILED BY NORMAN DAVIS IN SIGNING PACT

ed an open invitation to Japan and Voicing the American government's disappointment that the new instrument does not provide for limitation of actual fleet strength, but restricts only the size of certain ship types and guns, Davis warned of the possibility of a costly naval building race if good will is not displayed by the powers in observing its spirit.

"The instrument we are about to sign," he said, "falls short of our best hopes in that it makes no provision for quantitative reduction and limitation." This the American government and delegates deeply regret.

He found some justification for this, however, in present disturbed international conditions.

net income held back for reserves; $83,000,000 from temporary continuation of existing capital stock and excess profit levies; $100,000,000 from a "windfall" tax on unpaid or refunded AAA processing taxes and around $25,000,000 from the levy on foreigners obtaining dividends on American stocks.

PLANS SURVEY SEAFOOD USES

Raleigh, March 24.—Housewives and business concerns of Durham will serve as a model for basing estimates of the consumption of seafood and opportunities for expanding the use of this type of food in North Carolina under the direction of Prof. A. J. Nichol, of the Department of Economics, Duke University.

Approximately 100 students of Duke University are engaged in a fishery market study as a supplemental activity in cooperation with a broader survey sponsored by the Department of Conservation and Development and a special committee appointed by Gov. Ehringhaus.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, March 25.—(AP)—Strength of selected industrials, a number of which pushed up to new five-year high, was the cheering feature of today's stock market.

Traders seemed to feel better regarding foreign news and domestic happenings although for the majority of shares there was a noticeable lack of hurry in urgency. Dealings moved by fits and starts with dull periods predominating.

The late tone was mixed. Trading approximated 1,800,000 shares.

FUND BOOSTED BY DONATIONS

This must be done, and done at once. All business men are asked to receive from employees such contributions as they may be able to make, add to these the contributions of their firms, and be ready to turn these contributions over to canvassers who will call tomorrow. There is not sufficient time to organize a campaign, plan a method of procedure and conduct an educational campaign. While we are planning men, women and children are dying. Please cooperate by following the above suggestions. Let your contributions be representative of both your ability to give and your compassion for suffering humanity.

aroma... it's as much a part of Chesterfield as the taste

Did you ever notice the difference in the aroma of Chesterfield tobacco?

Every person who knows about tobacco will understand this... for to get a pleasing aroma is just like getting a pleasing taste from fruit.

Mild ripe tobaccos, home-grown, and welded with the right kind of tobacco from far-off Greece and Turkey (Samsoun, Smyrna, Xanthi and Cavalla)...

... that's why Chesterfield has a more pleasing aroma.

... with that pleasing aroma
