SELASSIE SAYS
WAR NOT ENDED

Inhabitants of Italy
Called to Assemblages in All Towns to Celebrate Victory

(By Associated Press)
With the fall of the Ethiopian capital expected momentarily all Italy prepared today for an "adunata" or mobilization to celebrate victory over Ethiopia.

Emperor Haile Selassie declared, however, that the fall of Addis Ababa would not mean the end of his nation's fight against the Italians.

The adunatas is the second mobilization of the fascist nation summoning almost half of Italy's 44,000,000 inhabitants to assemblages in all towns of the nation.

The previous adunata was called one day before the fascist armies crossed into Ethiopia to begin their campaign of conquest on October 3, 1935.

The latest reports from the Italian forces in Ethiopia said the northern columns under Marshal Pietro Badoglio were on the high plateau leading direct to Addis Ababa, while the southern army, under General Rodolfo Graziani, drove toward its goal of Harar, second city of Ethiopia, after the capture of Sasa Baneh, 175 miles southeast of Harar, and of Dagahur, 25 miles north of Harar. Sasa Baneh, Marshal Badoglio reported that the battle around Sasa Baneh was one of the bloodiest of the war. He said the Ethiopians lost 5,000 men, while the Italians suffered 1,830 casualties.

Emperor Haile Selassie told the Associated Press, after a conference with high government officials in Addis Ababa, that his army was not destroyed and would continue to wage war against the Italians, even after his capital was captured.

Free Examinations
For Tuberculosis
Week Of May 11th

Doubtful Citizens Urged to Attend
Clinic to Be Conducted by Pitt
Health Department

Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, Pitt health officer, today called attention to the free tuberculosis clinic to be held in the county during the week beginning May 11 and urged the citizens of the county to take advantage of the examinations.

The schedule for the clinic, as announced today by Dr. Ennett, follows:

Greenville, Health Department, Monday, May 11.

Farmville, City Hall, Tuesday, May 12.

Ayden, City Hall, Wednesday, May 13.

Greenville, Health Department, Thursday, May 14, and Friday, May 15.

Under regulations of the clinic it is necessary that patients be recommended by their own family physician. Dr. Ennett suggested anyone interested in taking the examination see his physician at once, asking him for a note of reference.

It was explained that unless a person makes an appointment early there is a possibility he may not get in the clinic at all.

Children will be taken without an appointment, and Dr. Ennett said the health department was anxious to have all children who have been exposed to tuberculosis in the home tuberculosis tested.

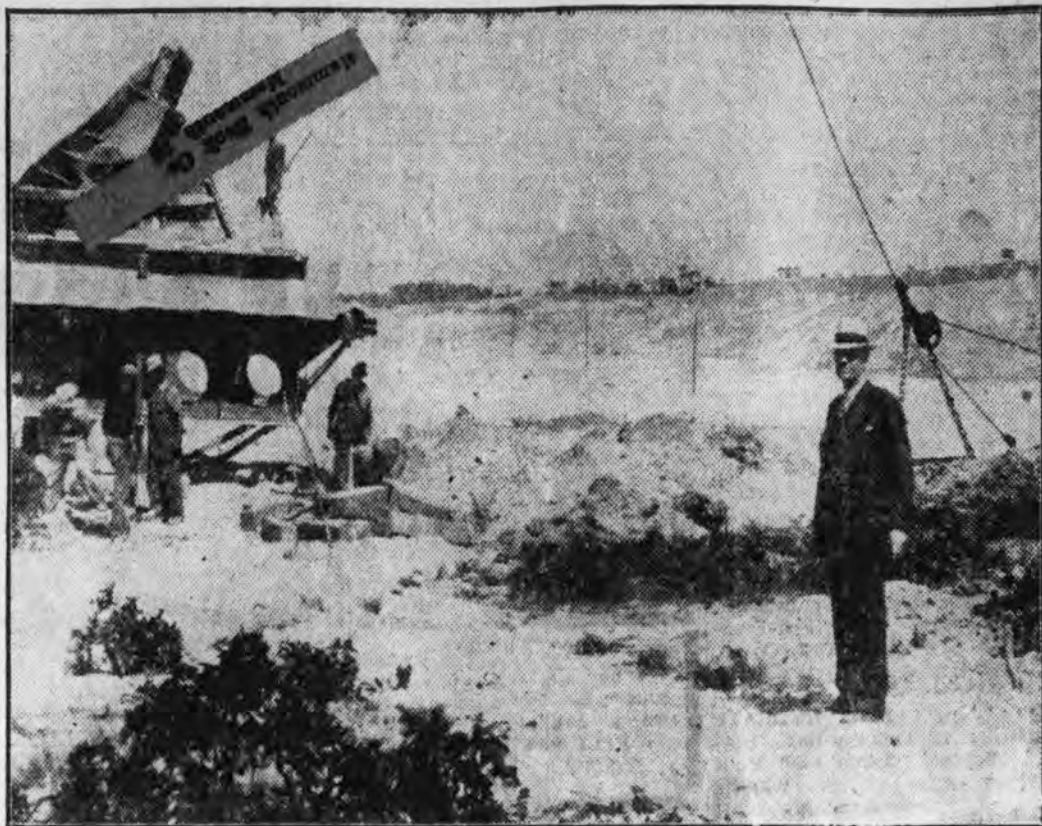

The health officer declared that "the time to come to the clinic is when you are doubtful." He added: "If you wait until you are sure you should come, then you have lost valuable time."

The examination is free. In case, however, an x-ray is necessary the patient, if able, is supposed to pay a small fee.

Dr. Ennett urged interested persons not to wait for their physician to suggest an examination, but advised the patient to make the first move and go see the doctor.

Erik Rhodes and Pinky Tomlin, film actors, were University of Oklahoma students at the same time. But they never met until they came to Hollywood.

Cotton Manufacturers
President Cites
Statistics

Pinehurst, N. C., May 1.—(AP)—Thomas H. Webb of Concord, N. C., told cotton manufacturers here today that mill production, cotton consumption and cotton exports have fallen off since the federal farm program was inaugurated.

"Cotton manufacturers," he said, "will move on to some other country or countries if not treated sanely. It is not destined to remain in any area of the world."

Webb is president of the American cotton manufacturers association, in convention here. He read in his presidential address these statistics which he called "ominous."

"Consumption of American cotton in the United States from 1937-38 to 1934-35 dropped 1,417,000 bales.

"Production of American cotton during the same period dropped 4,020,000 bales. Exports last year dropped approximately 4,000,000 bales.

"And yet world consumption dropped only 350,000 bales."

Webb asserted that the farm program as it affects cotton was "eventually harming the farmers."

"Agriculture and industry are not in separate compartments operating independently of each other," he said. "They are inseparable as the Siamese twins and must live or die together."

Detroit Bank Robbed
By Five Armed Men

Detroit, Mich., May 1.—(AP)—Five robbers, armed with revolvers and an automatic rifle held up a branch of the Detroit Bank shortly before 11 o'clock today and escaped with a quantity of cash officials estimated at $50,000.

Four of the men conducted the holdup while a fifth sat at the wheel of a large sedan in front of the bank.

One shot was fired by the man carrying the rifle, bank employees told police. The shot shattered a marble counter and the fragments injured two people.

Appearing suddenly in the crowded lobby the men brandished their weapons and ordered customers to stand back. Two of the men climbed over a high ledge and escaped through the money into a sack.

Running from the bank, they entered the car and sped away.

Body of Negro Found
Afloat in Tar River

Fully dressed, even to his overcoat, and with half a brick in each of his pockets, the body of William Forbes, 60-year-old negro, was found in the Tar River, near the city, yesterday afternoon.

Coroner A. A. Ellwanger, who was called to the scene where the body was discovered afloat, said it was a clear case of suicide and held no inquest was necessary.

Relatives of the negro said he had been missing since last Friday. Coroner Ellwanger said his investigation tended to show he must have jumped in the water that day, as the body appeared to have been in water several days.

Relatives of the man said he had been out of work about a year, but had picked up a few odd jobs during the time. He was not married but roomed and boarded in New-town. Funeral services were held this afternoon.

Hitler Tells German

"Mamma's Boys"

(By Associated Press)
The tramping of tens of thousands of soldiers on Moscow's Red Square, a plea for peace by Adolf Hitler and a long communist-socialist parade in New York were highlights today of the observance of May Day, labor's international holiday.

Workers paraded in many countries, and in several European states soldiers marched.

In a demonstration of Soviet Russia military power tanks and armored cars rolled past Lenin's tomb. A fleet of 750 war planes dived over columns of troops.

Police estimated 300,000 persons would march in the New York parade, where, for the first time, communists and Left wing socialists joined forces.

Germany's May Day was a "joy day" of thanks to Hitler, who told a youth rally "we can not use a generation of mamma's boys."

Later speaking in Berlin to thousands of May Day marchers, Hitler stressed his love of peace.

"In hatred-ridden Europe we want to preserve peace," he said. "To the little politicians abroad who do not understand us, I would say, 'let us alone to work out our own problems and you get on with your own.'"

Great festivals of workers took place in the industrial cities of France, Hyde Park, London, was a rallying point for huge assemblies.

Thousands of red banners waved in Madrid's May Day parade. A holiday spirit prevailed as 60,000 celebrants marched.

Austria heard an announcement by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg that 15,000 youths of the class of 1915 would be called for compulsory federal service—partly of civil and partly of military character—in October.

PRESIDENT HAS MANY MEASURES

Search Is Made by Members Senate Finance Committee to Find More Revenue

Washington, May 1.—(AP)—More tasks for congress were discussed by President Roosevelt today as May 1, the adjournment date originally set by leaders arrived with the major issues of relief and taxes still unsettled.

In press conference he expressed hope that a new pure food and drink law and a ship subsidy bill would be enacted.

He said it also was possible the new treaty between the United States, Great Britain and France, limiting the size of certain types of warships would be sent to the senate this session.

A search for amendments to the house tax bill to make it provide all the revenue the President wants was carried on by some members of the senate finance committee.

As the committee continued public hearings on the program Senator Bailey (D. N. C.) challenged a treasury spokesman's contention that under it corporations would have the same opportunity as they do now to accumulate reserves in prosperous years. Opposition to the legislation as "unsound" was expressed by a representative of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce.

As scheduled preliminary to congressional consideration of the $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation proposed by the President was postponed.

New Park Written In Recreational Life of North Carolina With Formal Opening of State Park

Morehead City, May 1.—A new page in the recreational life of North Carolina was written today and important events in the history of the state were commemorated with the formal opening of Fort Macon State Park, the first of the new system of recreational and historical areas whose development has been completed.

In the main address in the exercises held in the old fort building, Gov. J. C. B. Ehrhreich stressed the importance of the event, particularly with reference to the future in that the occasion represents the culmination of the first steps in giving North Carolina a system of state parks that meet the highest standards in the nation.

Other units of the state park are now under development, Governor Ehrhreich pointed out, will within the next year or so provide a chain of attractions throughout North Carolina that will provide tremendous educational and recreational value for the people. He commended R. Bruce Etheridge, director, and other officials of the Department of Conservation and Development for their constructive work and broad vision in acquiring and providing for the development of these areas.

Among other things, he continued, the parks should add tremendously to the attractions offered by North Carolina to tourists.

Governor Ehrhreich was preceded by Director Etheridge. Others appearing on the program included Rep. Graham A. Barden, Brig. Gen. Manus McCloskey, commanding general at Fort Bragg; Mrs. J. N. Parker, Farmville; representing Mrs. R. E. Ridenhour, Concord, state regent of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; H. E. Weatherwax, representing the National Park Service; and D. L. Ward, New Bern, member of the Board of Conservation and Development.

Following a musical program given by St. Paul's school band from Beaufort, the Governor, his party, and visitors were conducted on a tour through the 100-year-old fort, whose site has been occupied by protective fortifications for the Beaufort-Morehead City region for more than 200 years. It was announced that following the exercises today, an admission fee of 10 cents will be charged to the fort. This fund and proceeds from rental of the cottage will go toward maintenance of the park and fort.

Cliff Reid, producer of "The Informer" and other films, in 1912 employed a photograph behind a screen.

Gypsy Weather

By MARGARET BELL HOUSTON

SYNOPSIS: Dirk Joris hears Elmer Fleming break her engagement to his older brother Rupert because of his drinking. Later that night he comes to the rescue of a lovely bareback rider to a New Jersey tent show. Still later, after taking Elmer's cousin Isabel home, Dirk returns to the Joris place to find that Rupert has married a girl he thinks must be the bareback rider. And he is, very naturally, puzzled about it all.

Chapter Nine DIRK PROMISES

SOMETHING moved in the drawing-room. A swift flame-like stir beside the piano. Dirk went and stood before the girl. Her eyes met his, dark, unwavering, the eyes of a guilty child, defying censure, defying punishment.

She was the same, yet different. Stripped of the rouge and mascara, of the tight red trousers, she stood in her black dress with the bright familiar shawl slipping from her arms—here. The girl from the tents in Jersey. So it was she he had seen entering the gates two hours ago.

"Will you explain?" he said to her. She answered in a low voice.

"Explain to whom?"

"To me," he said. "I didn't know you knew my brother."

"Must you be explained to?" she said. "Why don't you ask him?"

"Why don't I?" Dirk asked gravely. "But he could hardly explain what he probably doesn't know has happened."

She nodded, entirely agreeing with him. Looking at her, he had a dim sense that all this had happened before—some time, somewhere. Perhaps in this very room, she marrying Rupert, standing like a flame beside a dark bowl of dahlias, defying his questions. At first—there in the hall—he had felt that what he saw was a dream. He knew now that it was real, something he must cope with as long as he lived.

She turned abruptly, and went out into the hall, as if seeking Rupert. Timothy was taking Rupert up the stairs. Slowly, at the top Rupert looked back, looked down at Dirk and the girl standing in the hall. He moved a hand with a heavy gesture of waving, plodded on with Timothy, disappeared.

The girl sat down on the lowest step, leaning her head against the carved oak balustrade. Now that Rupert was gone, she seemed to grow suddenly limp, suddenly tired. Dirk thought of food, and mentioned breakfast. She thanked him, but she was not hungry. He sat down beside her, and she said:

"Are you going to tell him?"

"Tell him what?" asked Dirk.

"About the circus. About—where I came from."

"Doesn't he know?" asked Dirk.

"No—and I don't want him to. I never saw him until tonight."

"Then how—"

"It was a whim, a drunken whim. I shouldn't have let him."

She was not answering the question he had been about to ask. She went on quickly.

"It was you I came here to see. I knew you were a lawyer. I needed to see a lawyer. You won't tell him about the circus? If you do he'll throw me out."

"But how did you know I was a lawyer?" Dirk asked.

"Chow," she said. "Ma d'ame Chowdhury. I heard her tell Torrobin. Torrobin is the man you hit. His nose was wrecked when he came to. He said he was going after you. Chow encouraged him. I think she was sore at you for some reason, and she told him who you were. She told him a lot about you."

"But how did she—"

"You were with others. Some of them had their fortunes told. She gets things out of people when they're all talkative. She probably thought she was going to tell your fortune, too. And you wouldn't let her. She doesn't like that. Torrobin may come here," she added.

"Are you afraid?" Dirk asked.

"Only for you. He carries a gun. Still, I don't think he'd pull it on you, seeing who you are, and this big place, and all." She looked about the great hall, its tapestry-hung walls, its stone floor and Persian rugs, its dimly lit chandeliers swung from the vaulted ceiling—all old, all a little worn or faded, but formidable.

"It's like a fortress," she said.

"That was what I thought when I first came. A refuge, a fortress. . . . And a gun in New York is different."

"You are not afraid for yourself?" Dirk asked.

"Not now. Not since I married your brother. And in this house, you see, I belong here now. . . . There's no need to tell him about the circus. I really didn't belong to it. I was a substitute for Señorita Leonor. She was the Firefly till she left a few days ago.

"I've been in New York, giving music-lessons. I only had one pupil, and the bank where I had put my money closed its doors. I heard about Leonor's leaving the circus, so I went over to Jersey, and got her job. I had to have money, and my family—my father, especially—are not very friendly with me just now. I've always been able to ride. But I didn't make anything out of the circus. I left before I was paid. I couldn't stand Torrobin any longer."

"But you liked the clown," Dirk said, with no motive but to make her talk on, for she had fallen silent.

She looked away.

"Yes," she answered. "I liked the clown."

"Was he badly hurt?" Dirk asked.

"I think not. You see I came away. I couldn't stand Torrobin any longer. And the Jameson Hotel—the place where I had been stopping—I owed them money. They were holding my trunk."

She looked at him, added quickly.

"That's what I wanted to see a lawyer about. About my trunk, and the money the circus owes me."

Scarcely adequate reasons, Dirk thought, for a midnight call on a lawyer, let alone marriage to that lawyer. Yet no doubt they seemed sufficient to the girl. He had no desire to doubt her account.

She came back to her question.

"Are you going to tell him?"

Dirk said no, that he had no intention of telling Rupert, but if Torrobin came and found her here it might all come to light.

"If it does," she answered, "I'll explain. But I don't want your brother to know if I can help it. There was only one thing he asked me, and you know when a man's been drinking, he betrays what's uppermost in his mind. He asked if I was a decent girl. I didn't feel decent, marrying him like that just to save myself—I mean, just to find a refuge from debt and—and Torrobin. But that wasn't what your brother meant."

"People in the circus are decent—just as he meant the word. Why, even my talking to you those few minutes was a breach of the code. But he mightn't know these things, mightn't believe them."

Dirk was silent. Now he understood. A decent girl, Elmer's aunt. Elmer's words swimming to the surface of that sea and fog in which he had meant to drown them. Elmer's word, goading him. . . .

Dirk said, "Don't worry. I'll take care of Torrobin if he comes."

"Not you!" she said quickly. "Can't Timothy talk to him, tell him what's happened, and that he can't see any one?"

"Certainly," Dirk answered. "And if he makes any trouble, call the police."

"Not that either," breathlessly. "Timothy seems . . . He seems very quiet and . . . discreet. Torrobin may not even know that I am here. He may come just to see you. If he does come after me—if I was followed to-night, and he knows—he will go away when he learns I have married your brother. Unless—unless he should ask for your brother."

"My brother's name is Rupert," said Dirk. "What's yours?"

"Hope," she said, and added, "I don't want Rupert to see Torrobin. He will learn about the circus if he does, and not only that, Torrobin will tell him lies."

"I'll instruct Timothy," Dirk told her. And now, whatever tomorrow held—and Dirk's anxieties in that respect were concerned chiefly with Rupert and his reactions—this child must go to bed. She couldn't sit on the stairs the rest of the night, though that was apparently her intention.

At a sound above them they turned to see old Mary standing on the stairs.

"Your room is ready, Ma'am," she said.

Dirk asked where they were putting her.

"Mrs. Joris is to sleep in the tower-room," said Mary.

The tower-room had been his grandfather's. There were more cheerful apartments in the house, but it was comfortable enough.

"Have you everything she needs?" Dirk asked.

"I think so, sir."

Dirk rises, tomorrow, to face a frightening situation.

MAKING PLANS TO PAY BONUS

Treasury to Do Away with Red Tape for Payments

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, April 29.—The federal government in making cash payment of the bonus this summer, intends to proceed on the theory that all war veterans are honest men.

These in charge of the machinery now being set up in the post-office department virtually have decided to omit final formalities such as taking a veteran's finger prints.

As explained by one high government official, every effort will be made to simplify the procedure. When it is considered that treasury officials estimate if the bonus bonds to be issued were laid end to end they would reach from New York to London and then still go on almost to Moscow, the tremendous amount of routine involved in their handling is easily understood.

There's an element of psychology in the decision of the government to remove as much red tape as possible in the issuance of bonus bonds which may be traded for cash.

Everything possible is being done to persuade the veterans to retain their bonds as long as possible. If treasury officials could figure out even approximately what would be done with this bonus money a lot of their troubles would be removed. Fiscal experts, however, are up against something entirely new in trying to make such estimates. Reliefs needs, consumer demand and a host of other influences enter into the question.

It's a vastly different proposition from that presented in government offerings to banks and business men. A fraction of an advance in the interest rate on government securities will cause almost a stampede among those with money to lend. March offerings, for example, were greatly oversubscribed although the interest yield is less than 2 1-2 per cent.

The bonus bonds always will be worth their face value, and if held, will be worth more after the first year because they bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent annually until June 15, 1945. The treasury is concerned over the amount of bonus money to be spent immediately after payment because plans must be made in the next few months for further financing.

In addition to providing funds for paying the bonus, demands for continuance of work relief shortly will begin to drain the treasury. Some bond men estimate the government must borrow $500,000,000 in the next few months, although others are of the opinion that because many of the veterans, in the words of Secretary Morgenthau, will tuck their bonds in the strongbox for the "sake of their wives and children," such heavy borrowing will not be necessary.

The Beer That Made Milwaukee Famous

ANNOUNCE NEW PROCESS IN BEER MANUFACTURE

Milwaukee, Wis., May 1.—The Jos. Schlitz Brewing Company, Milwaukee, has announced the perfection of Sunshine Vitamin D Beer. The old-time Schlitz flavor and bouquet are said to be unchanged in any way, but every bottle and can of Schlitz will now supply the added health value of Vitamin D, the Sunshine Vitamin which is essential for robust health yet is deficient in most foods.

In explaining the achievement of Vitamin D Beer, Dr. James W. Lawrie, director of scientific research for the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Company, said:

"Many attempts to produce Vitamin D beer have been made without success. It was only after lengthy study and experiment that the secret was found in the Schlitz scientific laboratories. It was known that brewer's yeast, used in making all beer, contains a natural pro-vitamin which, when activated, will supply Sunshine Vitamin D. We discovered a way to bring about this activation through concentrating the direct rays of the sunshine itself. This is done by means of specially designed portable equipment in the Arizona desert where strong sunshine is available all the year around."

During the business session, programs for next year, 1936-37, were distributed by the program committee. Mrs. S. J. Eeverett, Mrs. Herbert ReBarker and Mrs. Paul Fitzgerald. The topic for the year's study is "Science in Every Day Life."

The paper for the afternoon, a study of two national shrines, Mt. Vernon and Arlington, was given by Mrs. Julius Eldridge. This was an excellent paper.

The hostess assisted by Mrs. Guy Smith and little Dorothy Neil Henderson, served an ice course.

"The Challenge of Our Times"

"The Challenge of Our Times" was the subject of the first talk made by Rev. Duncan D. MacBryde, quarterly speaker for the College Y. W. C. A., on last night.

There is a spiritual and a physical world to be conquered today, he said, and in them a great challenge is found; no one can be happy with an empty heart. Demons, he stated, can not be cast from the hearts of men, without being replaced by something else; other things must come in to fill the empty vacuum.

When a child's thoughts are cast out and he is left with a free mind, he pointed out, the child takes in other things to prevent loneliness; this sometimes results in the acceptance of the wrong habits, a thing which parents should guard against.

No good is received from cleaning one's soul and heart, he stated, unless the vacuum is filled by something worthwhile.

Christianity, he brought out, is a life that stresses the good in a person and throws out the bad; it is a life of high aspirations taken from the life of Christ as he said, "I am come that you might have life, and have it more abundantly."

Mrs. Spilman Severs College Connection

Leaves Institution After Service Since 1921; Joins H. A. White Company

Yesterday Mrs. J. B. Spilman, who has been assistant treasurer of East Carolina Teachers College since 1927 and a member of the staff since 1921, giving half her time to assisting in the treasurer's office for several years, has severed her connection with the College and become associated with H. A. White and Sons in charge of the Life Insurance department.

Mrs. Spilman has had a unique position in her two-fold connection with the College, as a member of the staff herself and as the wife of an officer. She has taken a leading part in social and campus activities, and has been a connecting link between the College and the town. For fifteen years she has taught a class of college girls at the Memorial Baptist Church, which at present numbers 125, which is said to be the largest Sunday School class in her denomination east of Raleigh and it is one of the largest of any denomination in this section. She has been very active in all phases of church work, in club work, and patriotic and civic organizations, as well as in political circles. For six years she served as a member of the State Baptist Board. She has served as president of the End of the Century Club, as chairman of the Scholarship Committee in the U. D. C., and has worked with the D. A. R.

She is a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee and was for eight years vice-chairman of the County Democratic Convention. She ran for the State Senate two years ago and was defeated by only a narrow margin.

As Miss Johnnie Webb, she came to Greenville in the fall of 1916 as a teacher of history in the Greenville High School. She was born and reared in Chowan county, near Edenton, and was educated at a seminary in Franklin, Virginia, and at Strayer Business College, in Baltimore. She had taught several years before coming to Greenville, and some of her teaching experience was in her business college.

She was married to J. B. Spilman, treasurer of the College, on December 22, 1917. There are three children, J. B. Jr., who is a Freshman at Mays Hill College; Frances, a senior in the Greenville High School; and Bernard, in the High School also. After her marriage she conducted for several years a school of business at night and then entered Mr. Spilman's office as his assistant.

CARDUI

Cardui is a purely vegetable medicine for the relief for functional periodic pain, nervousness and weakness due to poor nourishment. It is successful use by thousands of women.

"I have used Cardui and had good results from its use," writes Mrs. W. E. Barnett, of Taylors, S. C. "I suffered with cramping and headaches and would have a chilly feeling. Sometimes I would feel miserable and have pain more than a day, and I would be nervous. I read of Cardui and decided to use it. After taking six bottles of Cardui, I had less pain and was regulated. I feel much better."

When such suffering can be avoided by taking Cardui, isn't that the common-sense thing to do? Of course, if it does not seem to reach the cause of your trouble, consult a physician.—(Adv.)

DON'T OVERLOOK THE IMPORTANT OFFICES

The race for governor in this state has reached the stage that probably more people are now talking politics than ever before and it is a healthy sign for our state that our people as individuals are becoming more politically minded and taking an interest in the candidates for office and the things for which they stand. In the present campaign, however, it is to be hoped that the race for governor will not be permitted to so overshadow the other races as to cause them to be overlooked by the voters.

It must be remembered while the governor of North Carolina can use his influence in behalf of legislation, the legislation itself is passed by those men and women who constitute the Senate and House of Representatives, and just as much care should be taken in the selection of the persons to fill these places as in the selection of a governor. Another important office is that of lieutenant-governor, for the appointment of the Senate committees is wholly in his control and the greater part of the work in enacting laws is done within the committees. Viewed from the standpoint of each individual county the Board of County Commissioners is indeed important, for the men composing the various boards are responsible for the administration of the affairs of their respective counties.

We bring these things to the attention of our voters now in order that the importance of these other posts might not be overlooked by them in their zeal and enthusiasm toward nominating their choice for governor. We urge you to give careful study to the records and platforms of those who seek the post of lieutenant-governor. Likewise we urge you to find out what the candidates for seats in the General Assembly stand for and what their action on important questions will be if they are elected to the office. Study the caliber of the men who are to compose your Board of Commissioners and see to it that you vote for the men you consider most capable of administering your county's affairs.

It is just as important that we have the right kind of men in the legislature and the right kind of men to administer the county's affairs as it is that we place the best possible person at the head of the state administration.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

bell among adult and youthful jobless. The headquarters conclusion is that the President means to direct his re-election appeal to the people rather than to the politicians.

OPTIMISM: What some of the President's closest friends don't know is that he fared forth to Baltimore and New York with Jim Farley's promises of a "Democratic sweep" ringing in his ears. Mr. Roosevelt's confidence in his reelection accounts for what enemies label as his personal and political arrogance.

It may be significant that the President discussed his reelection chances with an old friend on the very day of his Baltimore speech. Mr. Roosevelt, talking confidentially, estimated his minimum electoral vote at 325—much lower than his 1932 total but still 59 more than he needs for four more years of free rent at the White House.

Chairman Farley's predictions are much rosier. At the present time he concedes only Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Delaware to the Republicans—with Kansas or Michigan thrown in provided either Gov. Landon or Senator Vandenberg is nominated. Jim also predicts an increase rather than a decrease in Democratic strength on Capitol Hill—a fantastic forecast in the light of past performances. Right or wrong, it's these soothsayers which explain FDR's determination to give no quarter to his enemies.

DUELS: The latest New Deal feud involves the topnotch business administrators—Stewart, MacDonald of FEA and John Fahy of HOLC. It accounts for the breakdown of grandiose plans for a low-cost building program.

The two men staged a near fist fight at a recent White House conference on housing. Mr. MacDonald suspects that Mr. Fahy is conspiring with building and loan interests to sabotage FEA. Mr. Fahy doesn't place too much faith in his associate's friendliness to HOLC. Their rivalry has become so sharp that New Deal hosts no longer invite them to the same cocktail party. They acted like balmy suitors at Controller "Jett" O'Connor's recent reception to Harold Lloyd, the movie star.

No administration in years has sheltered so many pairs of duellists. Although the Fahy-MacDonald combat occupies the stage at the moment, fiercer snarls between Secretary Morgenthau and RFC Chairman Jones, Rosetier Tugwell and Secretary Wallace, Secretary Ickes and WPA or Hopkins, Secretaries Hull and Roper, Mr. Roper and Secretary Perkins, and the comic part of it is that FDR lets them fight it out so long as they don't get him into trouble.

FREE: American Legion headquarters has recently handed down a ruling which escaped notice but which may mark a turning point in the history of the all-powerful veterans' organization.

Some time ago the Press Club Post of the Legion adopted and publicized a resolution denouncing Commander Rex Murphy as a leader who permitted "politics" to shape his major policies. The executive committee of the District of Columbia promptly recommended the Press Club Post, which consists of Washington newspaper men, and ruled that no resolutions should be given to the press without prior approval by the top sergeants. It amounted to a mild form of censorship.

The writers appealed to the national legion advocate general. Although his decision has not been made public, he held that any post can sound off on any subject without first asking permission from more professional patriots. Under that ruling the Legion cannot be transformed into a secret society such as World War veterans have formed in some foreign countries.

New York
By JAMES McMULLIN
WEIGHT: The four Republican horsemen who have actual charge of their party's convention arrangements are Charles D. Hilles of New York, Henry T. Roraback of Connecticut, Ralph E. Williams of Oregon and Walter S. Hallahan of West Virginia. It was they who doped out the Steiwer-Snell setup. All are veterans in G. O. P. politics and distinctly old guard in their sympathies. For obvious reasons, they prefer to function as anonymously as possible.

Hilles has had close and friendly contact with the highest New York financial and business circles for years. Roraback is G. O. P. boss of Connecticut—and a pretty effective one. He is also Connecticut Light and Power, Williams has long been an important factor behind the Oregon scene and works closely with Senator Charles McNary—titular Republican leader of the Senate. Hallahan teams up well with the others.

The four will swing plenty of weight at Cleveland, Roraback is said to favor Knox first, Dickinson second, Williams would naturally like to see his protégé Steiwer land the prize, Hilles and Hallahan are non-committal but lean towards a dark horse rather than a front-runner. None of them is what you could call an ardent Landon booster.

HAPPIER: Governor Louis Brann of Maine—soon to be Democratic candidate for Senator—attended FDR's Jefferson Day party in New York last week. Insiders say he took occasion to pour earnest words in the President's ear about the necessity of continuing work on Panamaquoddy—Congress and so on.

The dope is that Brann got some encouragement from Mr. Roosevelt, but it was couched in too vague terms to be satisfying. So the governor buttonholed Jim Farley and said to have told him in no uncertain terms that the Democrats have no hope whatever of carrying Maine if Quoddy is abandoned before election.

It is further reported that Genial Jim conveyed assurances which left the governor in a much happier frame of mind.

LIBERAL: President Roosevelt's Jefferson Day speech was a much milder affair than most New Yorkers expected. It was interpreted to mean that FDR will rest his case for reelection chiefly on the extent of recovery since 1933, with only vague hints of future reform measures. Leading anti-New Dealers admit that this is smart strategy. They frankly doubt that they can find an effective argument to convince the average voter that Roosevelt isn't responsible for recovery.

You will see a lot of new publication—"The Roosevelt Record"—A New Deal in Facts—before this summer is over. Subscription to this official Democratic magazine will be a dollar for duration of the campaign. Its policy ties in with the President's address—recovery is the theme song, with an undertone of raspberries for the du Ponts and such.

Early contributors to the "Roosevelt Record" include author Hendrik Van Loon and educator Charles A. Beard. Beard's support of FDR is noteworthy because he is an outstanding leader of the liberal wing in education. This wing has hitherto been critical of the President for his sponsorship of the National Youth Administration, which they privately characterize as "a gesture of political hypocrisy."

REALITY: Astute financial sources are developing a lively interest in real estate. One of the largest investment banking firms has placed millions in property investments in the past few months. This applies to real-estate equities only—not mortgages.

They figure it this way. Credit inflation is bound to develop further—which should enhance the values of all equities. The prolonged gain in the stock market is in part a reflection of this sentiment. But stocks have run into a temporary impasse and it might turn out that they have discounted business improvement too optimistically. In any case, chances for added appreciation in stock prices are not what they were a few months back.

Real estate—which always lags behind more liquid equities in a generally rising market—is rated as just beginning the bullish cycle's stocks have enjoyed for the past year. Of course shrewdness and experience are big factors in successful real estate speculation. It isn't safe to assume that any old property is due for a rise.

INNOVATION: The New York bank defendants in the government's suit to recover from them money it claims they should have paid to Harriman Bank depositors in conformity with a Clearing House plan are nervous about the plaintiffs' tactics. The government appears to be basing its case more on ethics than on law.

One cynical financier puts it: "Ethics in a law court? What horrid innovation will those New Dealers think of next?"

GREENIES TOP WILSON HIGHS

Locals Overcome Rivals in Easy Battle by 18-8 Score

The Charles L. Coon high school class "A" conference baseball team, weakened in the hands of the Greenies at Wilson yesterday afternoon and saw the boys from this city obtain their eighth consecutive win of the season after defeating them in a nine inning slugfest whose outcome produced a 18-8 score in behalf of the locals.

Howard Hodges, who has pulled the Greenies through for a win more times than one did the hurling for them in yesterday's tilt. The skillful local hurler allowed only eight scattered hits, which is a splendid record for a high school pitcher in a class "A" conference clash.

In starting the game the Greenies came through with flying colors and scored ten earned runs during the first inning. This was caused by the Wilson boys who went virtually wild and made eleven errors throughout the game. Carelessness on the part of the Wilson high schoolers caused a considerable number of the high triumphs, however, most of them were made on the fine brand of baseball played.

Carl Pierce, second baseman for the locals brought forth many cheers in yesterday's tilt by swatting a homer in the ninth inning. Others running up the score of the Greenies were John Wells, who made a triple and a single; George Lautares, who batted a triple and two singles; Joe Hatten who topped off two doubles and a single; Reynolds May, coach of the local high said today that every man on his team averaged one hit each.

The Greenville high school has the third position in the class "A" conference standing practically sewed up. A game with Fayetteville next week will determine this. The Greenies defeated the Fayetteville boys in their last clash together by a score of 19-1. Raleigh is leading with first place with Durham trailing along in second.

The Greenies are meeting the New Bern Bears here this afternoon at the Third street stadium. Greenville 10-40 200 011-18 11 5 Wilson 210 200 030-8 8 11 R H E

Rogers Hornsby certainly did a neat job of changing Rollie Hemsley from a rollicking playboy who had outlived his usefulness in the National league in to one of the leading catchers in the American league.

Hemsley had been with the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Chicago Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds, and had earned the unenviable reputation of being hard to handle. He was a fine catcher mechanically, but refused to be bound by conventional training rules. He loved to step out and have a good time and more often than not wound up in trouble. A year was about all he could last with any club.

Finally, the Cincinnati Reds turned him over to the St. Louis Browns for the waiver price after other National league clubs had passed him up. That was in 1933. Hornsby announced at the time that Hemsley was just the type of ball player he was looking for—a fighting ball player. That was for public consumption.

Got Him Told More than likely, in the privacy of his locker room, Rogers counseled Hemsley in this fashion: "Now, you listen to me, you young so-and-so—you'll do as I tell you or you're through in the big leagues. The National league wants no more of your nonsense and the American league managers will want no part of you if you can't behave yourself."

"You have the makings of a real catcher, but you won't get any place until you learn the importance of discipline and abide by the rules of training. I'm going to see that you do both with the Browns. If you don't I'll kick you out—and that means that you won't find another job in the big show."

Rollie resolved to heed Hornsby's advice, and for quite a spell gave a good imitation of a man walking the straight and narrow path. Hornsby ironed out some of his batting faults and before long had Hemsley one of the most discussed players in the league. Managers who had failed to figure a way of handling him rubbed their eyes, in amazement. The Browns turned down several tempting offers for him and in 1934 were rewarded with some fine work behind the plate on the part of the reborn Rollie. He caught 123 games that season and batted 369.

All went well until the middle of last season. Rollie weakened and went hawire in Philadelphia. The evening's fun, which included a mixup with the Philadelphia police, nettled him a fine and a suspension. Hornsby relented and took him back for another trial, but the fine stood.

After that Hemsley stuck to his knitting and worked behind the plate in 144 games for the Browns.

about the pitchers in the senior circuit but when he signed up with the St. Louis Browns it meant starting all over again. He finds himself among strangers, even in St. Louis where he spent 11 years with the Cardinals.

One swing around the circuit, to get wised up, and Bottomley feels that he will be ready to be of some real help to his old teammate, Rogers Hornsby.

Local Baseball Team Beats Falkland Nine

Thursday afternoon at the Third Street Stadium the boys of Mr. Conley's Sunday school class won a ball game 16 to 4. The locals had a merry-go-round in the third when they score seven runs.

Gaylord and Clark led the locals at bat. Gaylord made three hits, one a homer and two singles. Clark made four hits, two were triples and two singles. Gaylord and Clark featured a fine game for the locals. McGowan pitched a fine game for the locals. He also made two hits. He gave Falkland seven hits. Buck pitched for Falkland and gave the locals 16 hits. M. Jordan made two hits to lead Falkland. This was the second straight win for the locals. Both games were played with Falkland.

Washington—One pre-convention statement by Colonel Frank Knox, who seeks the Republican presidential nomination, is receiving a good deal of attention from politicians and political analysts.

Mr. Knox has asserted that among convention delegates thus far selected, he will command greater third or fourth ballot strength than Governor Landon.

"Don't ask me where my delegates are, for I won't tell you," the candidate said.

Knox is confident he will have at least 130 votes after the convention really gets down to the serious business of choosing a nominee. If that is true his opponents for the nomination would give a lot to know in just what part or parts of the country this support lies.

There have been suggestions in some quarters that a large part of it lies south of the Mason-Dixon line. Those who remember the part the south played in helping former President Hoover obtain the nomination at Kansas City in 1928 realize fully what an asset similar support of any candidate in 1936 can be.

Canny Silence While southern support means very little to a Republican candidate for the presidency in a general election, it does mean much to those who go into a convention in quest of the nomination.

The impetus given Hoover's bid for the nomination in 1928 largely was due to the fact that his supporters were doing missionary work for him in the south months before the balloting actually got under way at the Kansas City convention.

Knox' refusal to reveal where his strength lies—the strength which he claims is stronger than that of Landon—is matched by his caniness in withholding any information as to what plans he has between now and June 9 for consolidating and possibly increasing the number of delegates who will go along with him.

Other than to say that he will enter no future primaries, the colonel and his advisers are keeping their own counsel as to future operations. Questions are met with a smile and the observation that "Now, wouldn't it be rather foolish for me to tell."

Knox More Hopeful

One only has to talk with Knox, as did some 25 or more Washington political writers at a special press conference in one of the downtown office buildings in the capital following the Illinois primary, to realize how that election buoyed his hopes.

He talks in glowing terms of the freedom of the Illinois primary. He thinks that such a vote, in view of the fact that his organization spent less than $25,000 and that the Borah forces spent only $7,500, is a tribute to both him and Borah.

While he is careful to point out that the results of that primary are advisory and not mandatory, there's no doubt in his mind but what all of the Illinois delegates will be Knox men in the balloting at Cleveland.

PREPARES FOR WAGE DEMAND

Labor to Make Drive for Pay Increases in Industry

By HERBERT PLUMMER Washington—Leaders of organized labor are quietly making plans to launch a drive for wage increases in industry after the tax bill now before congress is enacted into law.

Convinced that under the new law imposing a levy on corporation surplus, the tendency will be to pay out surpluses in dividends instead of letting them accumulate, labor spokesmen raise the question of why these funds should not be used to increase wages.

"A large proportion of all dividend payments," one leader declares, "goes into reinvestment, for those who receive the largest dividend payments are persons who already have incomes far beyond their needs. Wages, on the other hand, go directly into the purchase of goods, for those who receive them are in too great need to save."

The position of labor is that little has been done since 1933 to increase wage rates despite the fact a large part of industry again is on a profitable basis.

Labor spokesmen point to the following statistics:

The 7 1-2 cent wage increase in the six months from June to December, 1933, was followed by an increase of 4 1-2 cents during the remaining year and a half under NRA. The average hourly wage rates, therefore, at the end of NRA in June, 1935, were at 57 cents compared to 52 1-2 cents in December, 1933.

After NRA, wage rates declined to 56 cents in December, 1935. They rose to 56 3-4 cents in January, 1936.

To industry's argument that the way to increase the workers' buying power is by reemployment, labor agrees that it has been so increased in the last three years.

However, labor leaders say reemployment never will lift workers' buying power in proportion to the steady rise in their producing power, and that without this balance prosperity cannot live, nor can poverty be permanently lessened.

"From 1934 to 1935," they say, "workers' producing power per hour of work increased 5 per cent, but the 'real' wage per hour of work decreased 2 per cent."

Plans for the wage increase drive have progressed to the point where the field of industry has been scanned and a list compiled of those considered in the most favorable earnings position and therefore in the best position to raise wages.

Nineteen basic industries are included on this list. They are aircraft, automobiles, auto parts, building, chemicals, containers, electrical equipment, finance, foods, household products, machinery, metals, office equipment, oil producing and refining, railroads, railroad equipment, refractories, retail trade and utilities.

COLOR REPLACES WHITE IN BATHROOM FIXTURES

Chicago—(AP)—The bathroom, blossoming out in gay colors and streamlined fixtures, is making a serious bid to become the most beautiful room in the house.

White fixtures, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau, have given way to green, ivory, yellow, blue and pink enamel.

Available for the spring modernizing project, says the bureau, are complete color ensembles harmonizing perfectly in design. These are matched sets of fixtures made to "go together." They reflect the modern trend toward unity in home decoration.

Also available are many new and strikingly beautiful wall and floor materials which serve as a background for the modern fixtures. These new and inexpensive materials are washable and can be kept as clean as the fixtures themselves.

UTILITIES PAY MUCH IN TAXES

Companies Pay Almost as Much in Levies as Net Earnings

Reflector Bureau.
 Raleigh, April 27.—Four of North Carolina's leading public utilities paid in state taxes during 1935 within $300,000 of the net profits earned, according to figures compiled today by Edgar Womble, statistician for the State Utilities Commission.

Womble's statement shows that last year the Carolina Power and Light Company, the Tidewater Power Company, the Durham Public Service Company and the Virginia Electric and Power Company paid the sum of $1,239,584 in taxes into the state treasury, while the net profits of all four amounted to only $1,587,230. Womble said that the figures for the Duke Power Company, another of the state's large utilities concerns, were not now available.

"The Carolina Power and Light Company led the list in tax payments with $842,107," Womble said, "while the Tidewater Power Company was second with a tax contribution to the state of $192,565. The Virginia Electric and Power Company, operating in the north-eastern section of North Carolina, paid $106,134 in taxes, and the Durham corporation was not far behind with a payment of $99,778."

The gross revenues of the four companies, Womble said, amounted to the sum of $12,878,937, indicating that almost a tenth of that amount was paid in state taxes alone. Operating expenditures and other necessary financial drains contrived to bring the net profits down to the low level, the report showed.

In addition to the state taxes, three of the corporations—The Carolina Power and Light, the Tidewater and the Durham Public Service—paid $231,336 in federal taxes. The amount expended for that purpose by the Virginia Electric and Power was not made known in the report.

The idea of a constitutional amendment to broaden federal powers appears to have been shuffled to the bottom of the political pack; but that is no proof that the original concepts of the "new deal" are to be abandoned to their fate during the coming campaign.

In fact recent events point in the opposite direction. The new soil erosion act is a frank attempt to attain the major purpose of AAA, which was the control of agricultural surpluses. Similarly, the President himself has forecast a further effort by the federal government to accomplish the wage and hour objectives of NRA and more.

Furthermore, the general trend of these enterprises is becoming fairly clear. Both NRA and AAA were held unconstitutional on the ground that they infringed on local authority. The tendency of recent administration action has been toward joint action with the local authorities.

In other words, it now is proposed by some of the administration stalwarts to accomplish by cooperation what the supreme court has said cannot be done by compulsion.

Cooperation The Key
 The social security act, which was passed after some of the earlier "new deal" statutes began to get into trouble in the courts, is an illustration of the cooperative idea. Under this legislation the federal government makes certain grants to the state governments, provided the state governments themselves enact social security laws satisfactory to Washington. So eager has been the desire of the states to participate in these grants that 26 already have qualified to receive payments from the federal treasury.

Although the state governments as such are not involved, a similar general method has been followed in the soil erosion program. The farmer signs no contract, as he did under AAA, agreeing to regulations made in Washington. He simply cooperates, if he chooses, by refraining from capacity production. Again, the inducement is the knowledge he will receive a bounty check in return for his effort.

The idea is by no means new, and it is rather unusual that the new deal did not adopt it on a larger scale in the beginning. For many years the federal government has been offering money to states which put up a like amount for highway construction, and other purposes. That is a method of securing cooperation which has worked exceptionally well.

Time Will Tell
 The President has not expanded publicly on his Baltimore statement that "the government must give and will give consideration" to work hours and wage scales, or his further suggestion that a way be found to keep children in school until they are 18.

One of his principal supporters, however, Senator Pittman of Nevada, has given a possible clue to

Graduation Gowns Blossom In Pastel Hues As Styles Veer From Conventional White

For the girl graduate of '36, one American designer makes this simple frock of white Swiss organdy embroidered in eyelets. Its puffed sleeves and round collar give it youthfulness, while its long skirt makes it practical for party wear.

By ADELAIDE KERR
 New York, May 1.—(AP)—Pastel colored commencement gowns contrasting with the traditional white, are featured in the fashion world for girl graduates of '36.

Auditorium platforms packed with youthful candidates for diplomas may resemble flower beds in bloom this spring for sky blue, anemone pink and foamy sea green have joined white in the graduation scene.

Only the palest shades are used, but designers here say their vogue has caused some schools to chart the fashion layout of graduation platforms so that an even number of girls will be wearing pink, blue or pale yellow.

Despite the color trend, white remains a favorite. Numerous white frocks, however, are made over colored taffeta slips or accented by tinted taffeta sashes. Clusters of colorful taffeta flowers at the décolleté make other accents on white.

Organdy The Favorite
 The gowns are made of frothy organdies whose crisp freshness long has been a favorite of graduates. Some of the white organdies are marked with white bars, flowers or shadow prints; others embroidered in tiny pastel colored nosegays.

Following the trend for practicality many of the graduation gowns are designed so that they may be worn for summer dances later in the season. Most of them are toe length, designed like simple evening gowns and topped by short sleeved boleros which make them suitable for commencement wear.

There are any number of others, however, which are simply designed with puffed sleeves, round décolletés and skirts which fall softly from a slightly raised waistline.

School Policy Rules.
 With the skirt length question agitating both the younger graduates and their mothers, designers suggest toe length frocks for girls thirteen or older and shorter dresses for more youthful graduates. School policy dictates the final decree on color and skirt length, however, since some institutions have definite rulings.

For youngsters not ready for longer dresses, designers have turned out some of the smartest frocks seen in this varied market. They are fashioned of white or ivory dotted net with puffed sleeves, soft white taffeta girdles, and skirts whose hemlines fall anywhere from a few inches below the knee to the ankle. Soft little flower corsages give them a decidedly "party" air.

This sheer white organdy outfit is embroidered in tiny rose and green nosegays and finished with a little cluster of flowers at the neckline. It combines an evening frock with a bolero which may be worn to coming summer dances.

WASHINGTON DAY BOOK

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington.—(AP)—Behind the House's refusal to acquiesce in the demand of Senator Black and his lobby investigators for additional funds (and a vote of confidence) to pursue their work lies a story as old as the Congress itself.

In a word it is jealousy between the two ends of the capital—the House of Representatives and the Senate. It's the first time it has cropped up noticeably during the present session of Congress.

This particular difference between the two houses of Congress had its origin during the last session when the utility holding company bill with its famed "death sentence" clause was up for consideration. The bitter struggle engendered by that bill led to the biggest "lobby hunt" in legislative history.

Both the House and Senate joined in the hunt. The Senate went about it in a big way. A special committee headed by Senator Black was set up and given ample funds. The House chose the less spectacular route and turned the job over to its rules committee.

The conflict between the two committees—how they wrangled over which had priority with witnesses like Henson of the Associated Gas & Electric Co.—is now history.

The situation was further aggravated when the names of six members of the House were revealed in testimony before the Black committee.

tee as co-sharers of a house in Washington during the summer months of last year with a representative of utilities and railroad interests. This incident largely was responsible, members of the House will admit privately, for the 153-137 vote spelling defeat in the House for the Black committee's request for $10,000 to employ counsel.

In order to understand the House's viewpoint in a controversy like this, it is necessary to refer to that section of Jefferson's Manual—the body's parliamentary bible—which reads:

"...the opinion of each house (of congress) should be left to its own independence, not to be influenced by the proceedings of the other."

Speakers of the House enforce this section of Jefferson's Manual to the letter. A representative who mentions the name of the Senate disparagingly in debate promptly is admonished that he must use the term "another body" of congress. Presiding officers of the Senate are not so strict. Senators have voiced harsh indictments of the House and its methods of procedure.

England Hears Stanley Baldwin Ready To Retire; Chamberlain Looms For Job

Neville Chamberlain, present chancellor of the exchequer, is being mentioned as Britain's next prime minister as Stanley Baldwin, present head of the government, becomes the target for increasing political bombardment.

By CHARLES P. NUTTER

LONDON (AP)—Growing belief exists in England that the political days of Stanley Baldwin, the prime minister and No. 1 man in the British government, are numbered.

Responsible political circles are convinced that Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, is being groomed as his successor.

Any actual move to restore Baldwin to private life is, however, believed six months or a year away.

But when it comes, competent observers believe, the upheaval is certain to bring Sir Samuel Hoare, scapegoat of the Hoare-Laval episode, back to the cabinet with more prestige than ever.

Baldwin recently has been the target of developing political attacks which claim a wide backing in the House of Commons including factions which hitherto frequently have supported the prime minister.

Not only is it being charged that Baldwin failed to realize the need for national defense, taking refuge in procrastination, but also his appointment of Sir Thomas Inskip as minister for coordination of national defense, prompted an outburst of open criticism.

In a bitterly worded editorial the Independent Observer wrote that "there can be no safety in dependence upon him. To his habit of procrastination, especially in supposed matters of urgency, a thousand years are but a day."

Tory criticism of the Inskip appointment was especially marked. Most challenging was the attack by Sir Austin Chamberlain, ultra-conservative former foreign secretary and brother of Neville.

In the defense debate, Sir Austin rebuked Baldwin for his "errors of judgment" while the Inskip appointment brought further stinging remarks from the powerful conservative who thought Winston Churchill should have had the new ministerial job. Baldwin, they say, appears a victim of nerves in the rising clash and importance of international relations, of which he admittedly is no master. His forte is domestic relations, in keeping with his role as an English squire and farmer, a fact of which he repeatedly boasts.

Baldwin has been in politics 40 years, almost 30 of them as member of parliament for the Bewdley division of Worcestershire. He has held most of the high cabinet posts leading to the premiership, and has spared enough time from politics to accumulate a fortune in the steel industry.

It has been rumored that he plans to retire after coronation of King Edward next year, but the direct political opposition may cause him to retreat to private life before that time.

Belling The Cat Again. Kenton, Ohio.—(AP)—"Let's bell the cats," said Kenton sportsmen. So the Hardin County More Game Association sent the state legislature a resolution urging that every cat in Ohio be compelled to wear a bell. The tinkle, the resolution set forth, would reduce materially intrusions on all forms of young wild life.

PORT PROJECT PROVIDES JOBS

Large Number of Persons Get Work On Morehead Port

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, April 27.—Two of North Carolina's leading public works projects—the Blue Ridge Parkway in the western section of the state, and the port improvements at Morehead City, on the coast involving expenditures of $18,000,000—are providing work for a large number of persons formerly listed on the non-productive rolls of the State Employment Service, according to Mrs. May Thompson Evans, director of the service.

In a statement issued Saturday, Mrs. Evans said that approximately 700 workers, registered at the various district offices of the State Employment Service throughout North Carolina, had been given jobs on the parkway projects, and that several hundred additional had been assigned to work on the port improvements at Morehead.

"Most of the projects now are employing two shifts of workers a day," Mrs. Evans said in speaking of the parkway work, "which means that by July 1 there will be employed there 1,400 or more persons. This will be a distinct help to us in securing employment for those who need it most."

Mrs. Evans said that J. B. Hash, manager of the North Wilkesboro district of the employment service, had done valiant work in placing hundreds of needy persons in employment on the parkway project. She also stated that Mrs. Floyd M. Chadwick, manager of the employment office at Morehead City, had been responsible for securing work for responsible persons on the port improvements there.

"We, of course, are not confining ourselves to securing work for worthy persons on these two projects alone," Mrs. Evans said, "but are doing everything within our power to place everybody who comes to us for assistance."

"However, it is a source of gratification to us that we could find jobs for so many folks on the parkway and port work."

St. Louis to Be Mecca Of American Baptists. St. Louis, April 18.—St. Louis will be the mecca of American Baptists from May 12-25, attracting multiplied thousands of that denomination from every nook and corner of the United States to this central meeting point.

The Woman's Missionary Union, Auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention, of which Mrs. F. W. Armstrong, Plattsburg, Mo., is president, will meet in the Municipal Auditorium May 12-13, bringing here some 3,500 Baptist women from the South. From May 14-18 the Southern Baptist Convention, that has a constituency of more than 4,000,000, will be in session in the main auditorium, seating 12,000, which is expected to be taxed to the limit throughout the session. Immediately following this Convention there will be held a joint fellowship meeting of the Northern and Southern Conventions May 18-19, and then the Northern Baptist Convention will hold its regular annual session here May 20-25.

Keeping active and alert demands whole some, nourishing food—that's why Shredded Wheat is my favorite breakfast.

Farming At 85. Port Stockton, Texas.—(AP)—Seddie Ligon, 85-year-old farmer, each year raises a crop on 50 acres watered by overflow of Comanche creek, near here. He never employs labor except for harvest.

Wyoming has 40 farmers who devote all their time to bee-keeping, and 320 others who find honey producing a profitable sideline.

There is an increasing demand for crafts, she added: good baskets, rugs, and brooms made of native materials. Buttons and buckles made of maple and applewood, and buttons made of black walnuts and other nuts, are lovely accessories for sweaters and knitted suits.

An ingenious girl in Rutherford County uses rye straw in weaving table mats, hot dish mats, and fans. Hooked rugs and braided rugs sell well if the colors are pleasing and the design is good.

Honeysuckle and oak splits make beautiful baskets. Melon-shaped baskets and egg baskets like grandmother used are good sellers.

The woman who likes to cook can begin now to make strawberry jam for sale. Later she can make blackberry and peach jam, tomato ketchup and chili sauce.

ON THE POLITICAL FRONT

Arthur H. Vandenberg

Scarcely had the "new deal" begun to jell before Washington wiseacres pointed to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan as the Republican white hope for 1936.

However, as the party's political arena became littered with hats of hopefuls eyeing the presidential nomination, Vandenberg remained noncommittal.

But even as he turned down requests to enter state primaries he appeared hither and yon to talk on campaign issues, criticize the "new deal," and outline a possible Republican policy.

He remains the favored dark horse for several reasons. He is a midwesterner, and the election is expected to be won, or lost in the west; he has steered a careful course between liberals and conservatives; he is comparatively young, 52, and his early years as a newspaper editor have bequeathed him a gift for phrase-making that livens his speeches.

Vandenberg will be in the front ranks, events indicate, both as builder and advocate of Republican policies, no matter who is nominated.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, May 1—(AP)—Strength of scattered specialties a number of which extended their recoveries of Thursday by one to three points helped to bolster today's market. It was far from a one-way movement, however, as American Telephone again turned heavy, dropping more than three points. Some of the steels, motors, utilities and rails were also inclined to back water. Trading verged on dullness after a rather active opening. The late tone was steady to firm. Transfers approximated 1,500,000 shares.

OLD VIKING BATTLE FLEET TO BE FLOATED IN FJORD

Bergens, Norway, (AP)—An entire Viking fleet, now resting on the bottom of the Sogne fjord at Flomreide, may be floated again if plans for salvage are carried through. History of the fleet dates back to June 15, 1184, when a battle was fought between King Sverre of Norway and King Magnus, who also claimed the throne. The battle reached its climax at 9 p. m. and ended at midnight when Magnus was killed and his 26 ships, manned by 3,200 warriors, were sunk.

G.O.P. LEADERS SEEM LIBERAL

Selection of Senator Steiwer as Keynote Indicator

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Big-time politics sees two reasons why Senator Steiwer's designation as Republican keynote at Cleveland must be classed as something more than routine political news.

One is the fact that the eastern conservative leaders who controlled the selection have extended this recognition to a far westerner who made his reputation as a liberal, and who has voted in the Senate for several of the principal policies of the New Deal.

The other is the circumstance that Senator Steiwer often is spoken of backstage as a possible presidential nominee, in case of a deadlock, and the keynote job puts him in the best possible spot to exhibit whatever abilities he has to the delegates.

Ordinarily there is no great interest in keynotes. It is customary to submit the keynote address to all party factions in advance and edit it until it gives offense to none. When Warren G. Harding was the speaker at Chicago in 1916, the original draft of his speech returned to him with so many blue-pencil marks that he hardly recognized it.

The Democratic selection of key-note for Philadelphia, has been largely a matter of form, since everybody knows what the speech will be about. It is different at Cleveland.

Whatever editing Senator Steiwer's remarks may undergo, their final form hardly can be expected to express that ultra-conservative condemnation of the entire Roosevelt regime which many easterners would like to hear.

to bid for the nomination. Yet it is hard to tell what a dead-locked convention might do.

And after 1936 comes 1940. Again there may be no true analogy of events, but most politicians are convinced that it was the favorable impression made by Mr. Harding as the 1916 keynote which nominated him in 1920 and put him in the White House.

Any way you look at it, the selection of Senator Steiwer is interesting.

The Michigan Republicans surprised many of the political prognosticators by their open endorsement of Senator Vandenberg for President.

It had been assumed widely that, however strong the sentiment for him might be in his home state, that the brakes would be kept on effectively until convention time.

Senator Vandenberg long has been viewed by his friends as the No. 1 dark horse possibility for the nomination in case of a deadlock.

Many of these friends have argued that absolute aloofness from the pre-convention scramble would strengthen him in that position.

If he had no delegates at all pledged to him, it was suggested, he could hardly be accused of having kept a single vote away from any other candidate, and he would come up to the starting post singularly free of those animosities which normally spring up among presidential aspirants.

It can only be conjectured whether or in what degree, the action of the Michigan state convention may have changed that situation.

Faithful To Role
The senator himself has been entirely faithful to the role marked out by tradition for presidential dark horses.

He has become somewhat more active in recent months in the senate where he has sworn official duties to perform but he has embarked on no extended speaking trips and if he has any organizational outside of Michigan no one has been able to discover it.

He rarely has referred in his speeches to the coming presidential contest, and he had made no public comment on the activities of the several candidates. He has conferred in private with adherents of the various rival camps, but seems to have done nothing and said nothing to offend any of them.

During all of this time talk of his availability as a compromise candidate has persisted. In some respects, the prevalence of this talk has gone against precedent, in view of his own continued failure to ask for delegates or even declare himself receptive.

The innermost thoughts of Senator Vandenberg's Michigan admirers are not available, but it would seem that only one or two explanations are possible.

Perhaps they felt this style of campaign really was getting nowhere, and that the nomination was about to be foreclosed for someone else; or perhaps they decided that regardless of the wisdom of the first approaches, the time had come for a bolder strategy.

the circumstances under which it was taken, remove Senator Vandenberg technically from the dark horse paddock weeks sooner than expected, and list him definitely among the candidates?

If so, does it mean that Senator Steiwer or someone else now moves up into the vacancy thus created? Only the future—perhaps only the convention itself—can answer these questions.
