JAP SOLDIERS SCORE GAIN IN RAILWAY AREA

Reported to Have Occupied Village Near Lunghai Line

CHINESE HOLDING IN PIHSIEN AREA

Reinforced Japanese Troops Attempting to Capture Suchow, Strategic R. R. City

Shanghai, April 30. — (AP)—The left wing of the Japanese army fighting southward along the Shantung battle front was reported today to have occupied the village of Nanlakow, only five miles from the Lunghai railway.

Neutral observers said Japanese blasted Chinese offensive with artillery fire and airplane bombardment to make the advance possible.

Nanlakow is nine miles southwest of Tancheng in southeastern Shantung province.

The same sources said Japanese forces were pushing rapidly to the south along the Tientsin-Pukow railway with the Chinese retreating in orderly fashion.

North of Pihsiens, however, the Chinese were said still to be blocking the Japanese drive, despite heavy casualties.

The Japanese reinforced by thousands of troops in recent weeks are trying to capture Suchow, strategic railway junction.

Neutral observers said the Chinese lost nine planes and five pilots in the spectacular air battle over Han-kow yesterday. They said the Japanese lost nine large planes and 13 small ships.

About 36 Japanese planes tried to raid the temporary Chinese capital, but were met by squadrons of Chinese planes and a dog fight, one of the biggest of the war, resulted.

Places Blame For Grundy Explosion

Washington, April 30.—(AP)—The Bureau of Mines said today that the use of "unapproved methods" in the firing of a blast was responsible for the Grundy, Va., mine disaster in which 45 lives were lost.

The explosion in the Keen Mountain mine of the Red Jacket Coal Company occurred April 22.

In a preliminary report the Bureau said the explosion was caused by the firing of what is termed a "bulldozing shot" for the purpose of breaking up an accumulation of roof rock.

The rock, it added, had fallen before the day shift left the mine and the "shot" was fired shortly after the night shift had come into the shaft.

Ignited coal dust in the immediate area, resulting in an explosion which killed every person in that part of the mine, the Bureau declared, adding the death toll probably would have mounted to more than 100 persons if underground workings of the mine all had been connected.

The Bureau said it found there had been "rock dusting" which is designed to prevent dust explosions.

C. W. Phillips, director of Public Relations of the Woman's College, University of North Carolina, delivered the commencement address at the Farmville high school last night.

The graduating class is composed of 20 boys and 14 girls. Heretofore the number of girl graduates has exceeded the number of boys.

Frances Bivens Smith was valedictorian of the graduating class and Frances Newton was salutatorian. Diplomas were presented to the seniors by J. W. Holmes, chairman of the school board.

May Reopen Case In Labor Dispute

Philadelphia, April 30.—(AP)—Charles Fahy, general counsel for the National Labor Relations board said in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today the board was considering reopening the cases of the Republic Steel corporation and "several other firms."

Fahy made the statement at a hearing on Republic's appeal of the board ruling ordering it to reinstate 5,000 employees who had struck and signed a contract with the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee.

The NLRB had ruled the corporation, the nation's third largest producer of steel, violated the Wagner labor relations act.

More Than Three Hundred Seek Legislative Seats

Raleigh, April 30.—More than 300 North Carolinians probably nearer 400—seek to have a part in making the 1939 laws by becoming members of the House of Representatives in the next General Assembly. Only eight can settle peacefully back in their arm chairs, stretch out and count themselves already "in" without opposition of any sort. Which leaves 112 of the 120 Representatives still in more or less doubt.

These figures are based on complete legislative slates from 84 of the state's 100 counties. In eight others there will be no primary elections to choose House candidates and from the remaining eight this bureau has sought in vain to get authentic information. Incidentally Raymond C. Maxwell, Secretary of the State Board of elections, is having the same trouble, even more in fact.

REBEL PLANES LEAVE 30 DEAD IN BARCELONA

Temporary Spanish Capital Subjected to Bombardment

WEATHER STOPS EASTERN BATTLE

Dispatches from Opposing Armies Disagree on Point of Insurgent Advance

Barcelona, April 30. — (AP)—Two insurgent air raids today subjected this temporary capital of Spain to the worst bombing of the past six weeks.

Officials estimated 30 persons were killed and 50 injured when insurgent planes twice attacked the city in three hours.

General Franco's fliers took advantage of the first sunny weather after many days of rain to stage the raids.

The first attack came at 8:45 and the second at 11:30, when first aid workers, still were digging in the ruins of the only building struck in the opening raid.

Hendaye, France, April 30.—(AP)—Bad weather prolonged the stalemate on the eastern Spanish battle front today, limiting operations to sporadic encounters.

For several days the front, running from the Teruel sector eastward to the Mediterranean, has touched seven points.

Dispatches from the opposing armies disagreed as to the point where the line reaches the Mediterranean. The insurgents said their advance post was established two miles south of Alcala de Chivert. The government reported its flank position north of Alcala de Chivert.

Meekins Heard At Bethel Exercises

Judge Isaac M. Meekins, of the United States District court, delivered the address at commencement exercises at Bethel last night on the topic of "Good Citizenship."

He told the 16 graduates and others that "it is better to be a good citizen than strive to be a great citizen." He pointed out the necessity of being frank with your fellow-man, honest and upright in all your dealings. His address was encouraging to the graduates now preparing to leave high school and go to college or take their place in life.

Judge Meekins was introduced by Mayor M. K. Blount of Greenville. Medals were awarded by W. J. Smith, member of the County Board of Education, and certificates to seventh grade graduates by O. H. Boettcher, principal of the school.

W.C. Vincent Reveals Intention To Retire

W. C. Vincent, who for many years has been connected with the mercantile business in Greenville and who probably knows as many customers as any other person in the business, announced today he was planning to retire.

For 12 years Mr. Vincent was with the J. R. and J. G. Moyer firm and when this was sold to Blount-Harvey he continued under the new management and is given credit by that firm as being responsible to a large part in its growth.

Mr. Vincent will devote his time to other personal interests following his retirement.

FORD GIVES ONE-SENTENCE SPEECH

With an assembled multitude awaiting a lengthy pronouncement following his two-hour talk with President Roosevelt, Henry Ford took the floor at an American Newspaper Publishers' dinner in New York to deliver a one-sentence speech. Despite the enigmatic nature of his 25-word address, the applause was thunderous when the distinguished industrialist finished. This picture shows Ford being welcomed to the convention by smiling Mrs. Ogden Reid, publisher of the New York Herald-Tribune.

Inflation World-Wide Influence Babson Sees Cheaper Currencies and Bear Market for Cash

By ROGER W. BABSON
Babson Park, Mass., April 30.—Not one major nation in the world today is paying its bills out of current earnings! The governments of the six big powers are spending far more money than they are taking in from taxes. The resultant deficits are being met by public borrowing. This condition has been going on now for years and there is no end in sight. Moreover, the deficits for 1938 promise to be the biggest on record since the World War. Because of these astronomical shortages, I am convinced that currency inflation is a world-wide, not just a nation, phenomenon.

The fact that public finances abroad are in such bad shape is over looked by most people when considering inflation. If the pound, franc, mark, yen and lira weaken to the crumbling point they will carry down with them the value of the dollar. Following the short period of improvement after the devaluations of 1932 to 1934, the international currency situation has already again become acute. Despite the slight-of-hand tricks being played with national figures, some day, must pay the Piper. When the pay-off comes, there can be only one way out—Inflation!

Spending Back Prosperity
The seriousness of our own situation is well known. The President's new program of gigantic outlays to "lick the recession" simply accents it. Few doubt that the accepted method of fighting hard times from now on will be to spend billions. But remember that it is far easier to turn the faucet on than it is to turn it off. Since this country committed itself to a spending program, the cost of all branches of federal government has driven ahead full steam. The figures for 1938-39 will be the largest in peace-time records. Our federal debt is today $39,000,000,000—almost double the level of eight years ago and rising faster than ever. PRESIDENT OFF ON ONE WEEK FISHING CRUISE

Departs from Charleston Amid Roar and Smoke of Salute

FDR ANNOUNCES NO DESTINATION

Heads for "Somewhere" in South Atlantic Aboard New Cruiser Philadelphia

Charleston, S. C., April 30. (AP)—Amid the roar and smoke of saluting three-pounders, the new cruiser Philadelphia, carrying President Roosevelt on a week's fishing cruise, eased away from the Charleston navy yard at 9:45 a. m., today.

Headed for "somewhere" in the South Atlantic, the 10,000-ton vessel latest addition to the navy's rapidly increasing fleet, pulled away from the dock, with American and Presidential flags fluttering in the bright morning sun and the Chief executive sitting at the star-board rail on the main deck.

The escort destroyer Fanning followed the Philadelphia away from the dock and trailed her down the channel six miles to the sea as the Cruiser and a navy yard battery fired simultaneous 21-gun salutes.

Although no destination was announced, it was believed the President would go as far as the Virgin Islands to do some trolling for game fish that abound in the South Atlantic and Caribbean. He probably will disembark at Charleston a week from today.

The President arrived at the North Charleston Depot by special train from Washington at 8 a. m., at 8:45 he went aboard the Philadelphia.

Students Prove Ability In Largest Bus System

Raleigh, April 30.—At a bit after three o'clock every school day in North Carolina 4,179 buses pull away from 1,226 rural consolidated schools.

They go over main highways and secondary roads, along the edges of canals and around mountain curves. They are freighted with almost 300,000 children—the biggest peak-hour of bus transportation of any American bus system.

The surprising fact is that 3,600 of these buses are driven by high school children, carefully selected, exhaustively examined and trained. And these youngsters have improved, not lowered, the safety record in North Carolina, a state which has a proverbially bad highway accident record.

In the current school year, according to records available to C. C. Brown, transportation engineer for the school system in charge of bus operation, there has been no fatality or serious accident in the school bus system. Last year there

SEEKS PART OF RELIEF FUNDS FOR AIR BASES

Rep. May to Ask For $124,000,000 For Five Projects

ADJO'RNMENT BY MAY 15 IS SEEN

Early Closing Date Hoped for by Barkley; Others Fix Date Nearer June 1

Washington, April 30.—(AP)—Chairman May (D-Ky.), of the House Military Committee, said today he had asked a House Appropriations sub-committee to set aside $124,000,000 of President Roosevelt's proposed new public works funds for construction of five major army air bases and improvement of existing army posts.

One of the new air bases would be located in Alaska, May said, and the others would be established at strategic points in the United States proper.

Other developments: Adjournment sentiment gained in both House and Senate in the wake of another thrumping defeat for the administration on the revised wage-hour bill, despite President Roosevelt's latest demand for such legislation.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley held to his prediction Congress would pack up and go home by May 15. House leaders fixed the quitting date closer to June 1.

As for the anti-monopoly mess-age, received from the President yesterday, the consensus was that it would not prolong the session.

Senate and House were in recess. Decentralization of the business structure became a broad new administration objective.

This goal was set by the President in a militant anti-monopoly message to Congress asking a $500,000 appropriation for studies of virtually all fundamental aspects of the nation's business life preliminary to congressional action to break up a "concentration of private power without equal in history."

Revenue Receipts Increase In State

Raleigh, April 30.—(AP)—North Carolina's revenue collections this month totaled $4,478,069.09, an increase of 3.31 per cent over April, 1937. Revenue Commissioner A. J. Maxwell said today.

Receipts for this fiscal year reached $61,305,354.57, an increase of 2.83 per cent over the total through April last year the commissioner said.

Income tax collections for the fiscal year aggregated $10,787,613, nearly last year's all-time record high of more than $11,000,000. In the revenue division April receipts totaled $2,056,227.06, an increase of 7.85 per cent over 1937.

Motor vehicle bureau income, however, was $2,241,842.93, a decrease of .03 per cent from a year ago.

Oppose Merger Of Methodist Church

Birmingham, Ala., April 30.—(AP)—Union of eight million American Methodists will meet its final church barrier late today at a hearing before the judicial council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Opponents of the merger, warning of "secession," will present arguments that procedure followed in ratifying unification did not conform with church law. If the council upholds the unification an appeal to civil courts is expected.

The general conference of Southern Methodists voted 434 to 26 yesterday to close the breach between North and South, brought by Negro slavery in 1844.

There was no indication of the length of the hearing before the nine-member judicial council, the Supreme Court of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Singer At College.

The beautiful voice of Jessica Dragonette, which will be heard at E. C. T. C. next Thursday night, was not developed without work. For at least ten years the young singer has been hard at work. According to her own statement, she gives three hours to voice practice and breathing exercises every day, other hours to rehearsal, and still others to studying new songs for future use.

She has an amazing range of repertoire, and is able to interpret old Palestrina airs as well as modern lyrics, arias from the operas as well as folk songs, and selections from great religious compositions as well as light little popular numbers.

In preparing her songs, Miss Dragonette does not just memorize words set to a tune, but learns the history and background of the song and makes it so much a part of herself that critics are praising her for her individuality of interpretation.

EDITORIAL

Company H. Did Not Volunteer
For the past week the Pitt County Rifles, Company H, have received much credit throughout the state to which they are not entitled. It got in some of the papers, notably Raleigh and Charlotte, that the company was the only one in Eastern North Carolina that had volunteered to go to Cuba, while the fact is only three members of the company expressed such willingness. The only volunteering the company did was "to go anywhere in the United States," but said all along that it would not go to Cuba.

The company goes to Raleigh in obedience to the orders of the Adjutant General but not with the slightest idea of going to Cuba.

Perhaps when the boys get to Raleigh they will catch the inspiration to go to Cuba, where they are needed.

Thrift Shop Aids Maternity Clinic

Through Mrs. Wyatt Brown, supervisor of the Thrift Shop, voluntary workers have been secured for the Greenville City Maternal and Infant and Well Baby Clinics. Some of these volunteer workers have done clerical work such as taking histories and others have made up a motor core for the purpose of transporting the patients to and from the clinics.

Among the clerical workers have been Mrs. J. Herbert Waldrop and Mrs. Roy Harris, among the motor corps have been Mrs. P. W. Pickel-simer, Mrs. Iverson Skinner, Mrs. E. O. Wilkerson, Mrs. Carol Waldrop, Mrs. D. E. Baughman, and Mrs. Tyson Bilbro.

It is understood from the Health Officer that this voluntary help has been of great service in the successful operation of these clinics. He expressed his appreciation for the fine co-operation given by this splendid group of civic spirited women. H. stated that he was hopeful that this was just the beginning of an aroused public interest in the various types of clinic service offered poor people by the Health Department. He further stated that with the limited personnel of the Health Department it was almost essential that the Department have voluntary helpers.

Washington Daybook
By Preston Greer

Washington—Many members of Congress, educated far from the halls of Harvard and Yale, often have expressed pain and annoyance (privately) that lawyers from the big schools appear to have the inside track on the nice jobs in the government. Finally, quiet Senator Sheppard of Texas is to take the first step to do something about it, publicly.

He has introduced a bill—and is pressing it—to prevent discrimination against Washington's "sundown" law schools and other inner schools which wither in the scorching cast by the towering reputations of the big ones.

So far as we—or Senator Sheppard—can learn, there is no accurate nose count on which college has put the most lawyers in the government jobs. But there is a prevailing belief that Harvard has done very well, acting through Felix Frankfurter, who early was credited with putting handfuls of his "hot dogs" in the top brackets of the federal payroll.

They Work Their Way
Senator Sheppard firmly believes that there is rank discrimination against the little schools but concedes he is hard put to prove his case fully. He has written letters to heads of many departments asking them whether they restrict their selections to a limited few schools and, if so, how they go about it. As yet he has had few replies.

His primary complaint is that numbers of departments and bureaus refuse to hire any lawyers except those graduated by schools approved by the American Bar Association or the Association of American Law Schools.

His staff has calculated that this restriction eliminates all except three of the 10 or more law schools in Texas. Equally to the point, it knocks out four of the several law schools in Washington which, he says, provide the principal opportunity for young patronage lads to get an education in law at the same time they earn a living. Youngsters come by scores from out in the states to hold minor government jobs while they go to school.

The local schools get their title of "sundown" colleges because these lads work as Capitol police or run elevators from 9 to 4:30, then show off at sundown to law classes running from 5 to 7 p. m. They can start in with a high school education and in three years complete a law course.

Remember Prohibition?
For years the American Bar Association and the association of law colleges has pressed for higher and higher scholastic requirements and some of the top-flight schools now require law students first to finish a four-year college course before going into law.

Senator Sheppard insists that law schools which teach a man the law, without all this supplemental fancy work, should not be written off the books just because the big ones can offer more. His bill goes right to the heart of the dispute between the big schools and the "sundown" institutions operating in old dwellings or second-string office buildings in Washington.

First, it provides that no department may reject an applicant for a job because he "has not been graduated from a particular law school."

Second, it would prevent rejection of a student who "has not been graduated from a law school which is of a particular class, or which has been approved or accredited by any association, organization or group; or has not had college training in addition to law-school training."

The bill provides that any government executive trying to get around those provisions would lose his pay.

The Senator is prepared for a long, slow fight. He has had training at that. He has spent most of his life trying to conquer the United States to prohibition.

There now are 243,700 collective farms in Russia, with 18,500,000 households, or 93 per cent of all peasants in the country.

GREAT AMERICAN STATESMAN, YET NEVER A CITIZEN

JUDAH P. BENJAMIN, FAMOUS LOUISIANA LAWYER, BECAME A U.S. SENATOR AND LATER SERVED THE CONFEDERACY AS ATTORNEY GENERAL, SECRETARY OF WAR AND SECRETARY OF STATE, YET HE NEVER WAS A CITIZEN OF THE CONFEDERACY NOR THE UNITED STATES

SPIDER TWO FEET WIDE, MIGHTY SEA SPIDERS FOUND IN OCEAN DEPTHS REACH GIANTIC PROPORTIONS

Although JUDAH PHILIP BENJAMIN became a national figure in American politics and was known as "the brains of the Confederacy" during the War Between the States, he never technically became a citizen of either the Confederacy or the United States of America. His parents made an attempt to emigrate to New Orleans in 1811, but learning that the mouth of the Mississippi was being blockaded, they decided to remain in the British West Indies where Judah was born. It was not until 1815 that they removed to the United States and later settled at Wilmington, N. C. After leaving Yale University, young Benjamin went to New Orleans where he passed the bar and started on his brilliant career.

The elder Benjamin, an English Jew, neglected to become naturalized, a fact that his distinguished son apparently overlooked. After the fall of the Confederacy, Benjamin escaped from Florida and eventually landed in England where he became one of the leading barristers in the British Empire. Thus, it was that this great American statesman died, as he was born, a British subject.

SHORT SHOTS
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, April 30—There are no straws showing which way the Administration (state) "wind" is blowing in the Reynolds-Hancock Setatorial campaign, but there are more than a few indications that a large percentage of Sandy Graham's 1938 gubernatorial wheel Foiger is doing a bit of quiet work in the field and Wake has nine, but there are three seats to be filled in each of these units. Last time Wake had 21.

Just one example is to be found in Pasquotank, where virtually the same county organization which carried the Graham standard to victory there two years ago is now bearing the torch for Hancock.

In addition it can safely be put down in the books that A. D. (Lon) Foiger is doing a bit of quiet work for Frank, though his own candidacy for Congress naturally prevents him from being openly active.

This correspondent does not intend to convey the impression that the Grahamites, as an organized body, are tearing their shirts for Hancock, but the outward manifestations all point to the fact that as individuals they are favorably inclined to Frank's case.

And he is said, support of these Grahamites is by no means a handicap to Frank. Sandy's friends couldn't put him over in the 1936 race, but they are quite influential in all quarters of the state.

Incidentally the stirring days of 1936 were recalled by this correspondent when he saw a picture of Sandy in the McDowell News of this week. Graham, however, had done nothing more exciting than to make a short talk at Marion when the Safety Motorcade stopped there.

Those who remember the 1925 Legislature relish the possibility that some of its most exciting incidents may be re-enacted in 1939—depending upon the success of U. S. Page, the "Bladen Bombshell" in his campaign to representing his home county in the House and a victory for S. Bunn Frink, Senatorial aspirant from Brunswick.

Three years ago this pair wrote some of the most amusing, as well as belligerent, pages of the legislative journal. Frink represented Bladen, as well as Brunswick, in the Senate and he was forever at odds with Page, who was chosen by an element fundamentally at odds with Frink philosophy of politics.

They called each other everything under the sun except gentlemen and cedar trees.

Each has his work cut out for him this year, however, as Page must unseat a popular incumbent, Lloyd Elkins, while Frank's vis-a-vis is no pushover.

Victor S. Bryant of Durham is the only one of the three avowed speakership candidates who has opposition in the primary; and even in his case it is likely that those who have announced in Durham are more after the vacancy caused by Oscar Barker's Congressional aspirations than they are after Victor's scalp.

Libby Ward and Bill Fenner are two of the eight House candidates who have no opposition either in primary or general election.

In 84 counties from which this bureau has authentic legislative lists, there are no less than 251 Democratic and 74 Republican House candidates, an average of some 1.6 for each seat.

Pamlico sets the pace, with no less than seven candidates, one of them a woman, after the one place. Forsyth has ten Democrats in the field and Wake has nine, but there are three seats to be filled in each of these units. Last time Wake had 21.

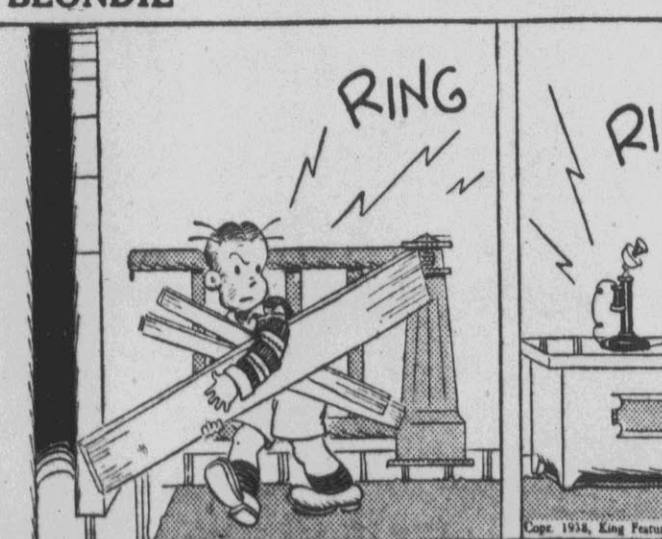

INFLATION WORLD-WIDE INFLUENCE
Furthermore, practically every major city, county, and state treasury is following the same course. Relieving the unemployed and priming the pump is a good policy provided it results in people going off relief and government expenses being slashed. In practice this does not happen, however. Small pressure groups succeed in keeping costs at a high pitch while people soon learn that the government will support them if they do not work. Public expenses today equal at least one-third of our national income. In 1912 they represented only one-tenth!

Hitler Financial Magician
The trend is the same in every major nation. The fascist countries are the worst off. Hitler and Mussolini can be looked by financiers long before they are by guns. It has been years since Germany's budget was truly balanced. Her credit is so poor that she can hardly buy foreign exchange. If it were not for De Fuhrer's bag of economic tricks, the German mark would be worth much less today. The Nazis are keeping the lid on prices. Once they ever break loose Germany could have a repetition of her 1923 fiasco.

Mussolini is in the same boat. His secret "extraordinary" expenses are bigger than his ordinary public budget. Such non-recurring receipts as jewelry and wedding rings, contributed by Italian women, are classed as ordinary income. His ordinary expenses alone equal his receipts, leaving him nothing to pay his extra expenses. Armaments, Abyssinia, Spain and the like are taking a fearful toll. How long Il Duce can continue to keep going by juggling his budget figures and printing paper money is anybody's guess.

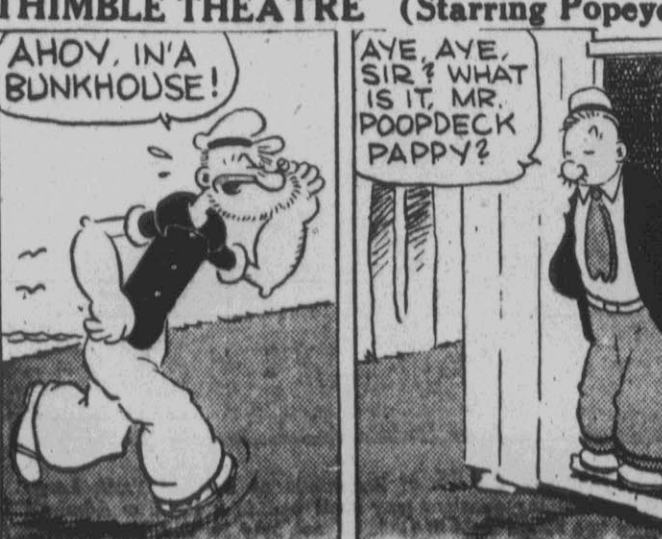

Japan May Crack First
Japan's national debt has more than doubled in seven years. It is now equal to her annual national income. This debt, increased by vast armament outlays and the China War, is being loaded on her banks. Currently, only one-third of Japan's annual budget is being met by taxes. Because she is so dependent on outside countries for many raw materials, Japan may be the first nation to hit the skids.

Her situation—and all the others for that matter—is like the man in your own community who is spending more than he is earning. How long can he buy on credit, no one can predict. But everyone knows that, unless he soon reforms, he will end up in the bankruptcy court.

France and Great Britain are also in a pickle. France ranks as the weakest of the democracies from a financial standpoint. Her budget is hopelessly unbalanced and has been for years. There may be further devaluation of the franc, however, before the final blow comes. Great Britain is the only major nation to have balanced her budget in the last eight years—but she did it only three times. Her enormous rearmament load will this year carry expenses far above tax receipts, and taxes are already sky-high.

Thirty Billion Dollar Deficit
Altogether the combined government deficits of the above five powers, plus our own, will this year equal about seven billion dollars. Here is at a tabulation showing the approximate deficits of these major nations since 1930. Undoubtedly, the actual shortages are greater than even these published figures indicate:

United States	$20,000,000,000
Great Britain	2,500,000,000
Japan	2,000,000,000
France	2,000,000,000
Germany	1,500,000,000
Italy	1,000,000,000
Total	$29,000,000,000

Unless a renewed spirit of brotherhood and a rebirth of character sweeps the world, there can be only one result: The steady cheapening of the value of all currencies in terms of goods. The dollar, the franc and the other currencies will buy fewer and fewer pounds of beef, copper, cotton and rubber, fewer and fewer bushels of wheat and corn. This means inflation and soaring living costs. We are in a long term bear market for cash; and a long term bull market for goods, real estate, and common stocks. The entire world—from the Thames to the Yangtze—must choose between character and chaos!

WANT ADS PAY

The Boxwood Barrier

By BLANCHE SMITH FERGUSON

The Story So Far: Judith Goodloe marries self-made Reuben Oliver for his money, only to discover he is bankrupt. Twins are born. Then red-headed Cissy Rogers, who loves Reuben and is out to get him, finds a job for him in a lumber camp managed by Gary Brent—the man Judith loves. Gary insists that Judith get a divorce, telling her that Reuben is going to marry Cissy. Also, he discharges Reuben for disobeying orders. There is a show-down between husband and wife, and their old feud breaks out again.

Chapter 41

"Off Your Pedestal" "I DID NOT tell the pines because—" "You wanted to cheapen Gary before Galbreath."

"Because," in deadly level tones, "those trees were unsound. Blighted to the heart." "You expect me to believe that?" "You must believe either Brent or me. Suit yourself."

"Gary didn't know that." It was a statement, not a question. "He knew. He saw a chance to cover one of his blunders by a quick cash sale."

"I don't believe you." "I didn't expect you to."

"They glared at each other from masked eyes. Neither tried to penetrate the mask."

"Was the responsibility yours?" Judith asked coldly.

"Strictly speaking, no. But that timber, ready to crumble at the slightest weight, was to have been used for a dormitory—a place where little children go to sleep believing they're safe. Little unfortunates of no great value to society, perhaps, but—"

She made a gesture. She didn't want to hear.

Reuben continued, as though to himself, "My only home for 12 years was an orphan asylum. It would have been a poor return."

"You preferred to be driven off the only decent job you've held since I married you, like,"—it gave her pleasure to hurt him, he wanted to marry Cissy—"like a mad dog!"

He left the fireplace, came towards her slowly. "You allowed Brent to talk to you about me. You believed?"

"Why shouldn't I believe? Haven't you every action since I've known you?"

His laughter, sardonic, terrible, might have issued from Satan himself. "You're right! Since the first minute I saw you I've been something less than a man—caterer, cringing, fawning! But I'm standing up straight now—free! It was a hard chain to break."

He pondered this for a second, surprised that it was so. Then, triumphantly: "You're off your pedestal! You're standing shoulder to shoulder with me, on the same level."

"Do you mean to be flattering?" "I mean that from now on I'm my own man and yours. Clem warned me you'd make a poor imitation of nothing of me unless I made an Oliver of you."

Her laughter filled the whole universe with contempt. "Don't attempt, the impossible. Fit your pattern to your cloth!"

And instantly a hurricane arose to join the landslide. Before its fury they were swept, willy, nilly, two feathers headed for destruction.

Reuben said: "I'm through slaving to keep things soft for you. Leaving you with nothing to do but play around with Brent, listen to his slander, his questionable love-making."

"Take care!" she jerked out.

"Never Come Back!" HE WAS beyond taking care. "We're getting out of this cabin, now. Getting out of this camp as soon as I work out my debt. We're going back to Warder. I still own a mudhole there."

"Go wallow in it!" Judith flamed. "I'm going to Maryland."

"Following Brent?" he formed the words stiffly through ashen lips. "Oh, no you're not!"

"Oh, yes I am!" "If you go now," Reuben said, mad beyond all madness, "you need never try to come back."

"I'll never want to!" "Brent may disappoint you—again."

He closed the room, picked up his hat, opened the door. "I'm reminding you my children are Oliver's—not Goodloe's. They're not going to stifle and stagnate behind a boxwood hedge. I'll fight for them to the last ditch."

From her own quivering, seething rage Judith dragged these words, sweetly uttered, venom-tipped: "Cissy will feel right at home in Warder."

The door banged behind him. Judith stood staring. She said aloud: "I needn't have feared it so." Leaving her husband, ending her marriage was easy!

But she hadn't any time to stand and wonder at it. She must get away quickly before Reuben came back. While Lu Wing fed the children she would pack their clothes. Take all her silver—hollow ware and flat, to Pike—Borrow money on it for railroad fare—Telegraph to Gran—Drive down to Casper Street for the babies' woolies—it would be cold at home now—She was going home—going home—Everything else was swallowed up in the miracle of that—Going home—

It was early twilight when Judith at the wheel of Jeff Snow's old car, pulled out of Camp Site Number 2. She felt like a fugitive from justice. If Reuben followed—if he tried to stop her—

Every sound on the road, every trailing car set her pulses jumping. Let Reuben come! Let a million Reubens come! She was going home!

Breaking up the mean little home in Casper Street should have been a delight, but after she had put the twins to bed in the tiny slope-roofed back bedroom, Judith was shocked to feel a dull sort of pain coming alive within her.

Everything was just the same. The low smothering ceilings. Wall-paper ugly and depressing. The old bath tub was just as streaked, leaky, hopeless and yet the small, cluttered place was oddly home-like and filled with ghosts. Ghosts who were at once happy and sadly reproachful: "This was home—you deserted it!"

Old memories came straggling back. Their arrival here. The basket of food with the red cheeked apples on top—The way they had laughed, sworn, cried almost, trying to lay Cissy's rug—

Haunted By Ghosts DETERMINEDLY she sent her thoughts ahead. Going home—Not a word to Gran of the real state of affairs between her and Reuben—not until delay was no longer possible—Not a word about Gary—

Gary! His name started a tumult—not entirely pure bliss to-night—tinged by doubt and perplexity. Reuben, had lied about Gary. He was jealous, defeated and yet—Reuben did not lie easily.

"A lie or a mistake, a lie or a mistake!" The question swung like a pendulum against her brain. Through all the years she had seen Gary without a flaw. Why was her faith wavering now?

"It isn't wavering," she assured herself fiercely. "It isn't."

It couldn't be. She had believed in God. He was all she had left in a world gone suddenly awry. Yesterday, a few hours ago, she had security, home, husband, children—

Sensibly she reminded herself that she still had the children and as much security as she had yesterday.

Judith made hasty arrangements about the furniture with Mrs. Kraus. Then she tried to get some sleep. She closed her eyes but could not shut out a vision of Reuben—rumpled hair, robe tied haphazardly about him—frightened and awkward, trying to be helpful with a croupy baby. Reuben going down to the freezing kitchen to make a fire, heat milk, making her go to bed—

Adoring, Gentle Considerate. A far cry from the snarling, scowling man of this afternoon!

And then, quite without warning, the searchlight of retrospection and self analysis turned full upon Judith. She saw herself changed too—not the same courageous, fair-minded girl who had come into this room in the muck of a November night, bringing a clean, cold air, a clean, cold heart with her. Purposely she had kept that heart cold—kept another image enshrined there—crowding Reuben out. Reuben had adored that girl. To him she was a captured dream, through hard days and lean!

Impatiently she wondered if all women were haunted by ghosts or if she was more gothic than others, letting a blundering, gloomy past wreck a well planned, sunny future? She hated Reuben so that the mere memory of this afternoon made her feel physically sick. He had been in excruciatingly brutal. Luckily his insults rolled from her as easily as water from a duck's back. If she had loved him it would have been terrible—

And from somewhere a ghost more bold than the first whispered: "If you had loved him this couldn't have happened."

Judith was galvanized into action. She got out of bed, started to dress feverishly. If only it was time to go. She wouldn't breathe easily until she was on the train. If Reuben was at the Junction—

Reuben was not at the Junction. The little shed was dingy and deserted in the raw dawn. The train was late. It came at last, roaring, panting. Slowed down reluctantly. A conductor stepped down. He lifted the babies up, helped Judith aboard. Waved a signal. The train resumed its roar, moved on, faster, faster—She was going home.

Gary wouldn't be waiting for her after all. As usual she would be waiting for him.

She thought of Eve driven from Eden—never allowed to go back—Poor Eve!
