PAN-AMERICAN PARLEY BEGINS AT LIMA, PERU

Twenty-One Nations Open Session Work For Peace

STRIVE PREVENT ALIEN AGGRESSION

Momentous Developments in Europe and Asia Past 5 Years Intensify Confab

Lima, Peru, Dec. 9.—(AP)—Twenty-one nations of the Western Hemisphere opened the eighth Pan-American conference today to work for peace at home and against foreign aggression, but without isolation from the rest of the world.

The momentous development in Europe and Asia in the past five years which has seen the rise of Nazism, the intensification of Fascism and the Japanese invasion of China, made the conference one of the most important in Pan-American history.

The delegates, gathering in the Peruvian House of Representatives for the inauguration of the conference, had in mind economic and perhaps political steps against the authoritarian states.

But from the United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who headed his delegation, came the assurance the Americans did not seek to cut off themselves from the rest of the world.

In a pre-conference radio address last night he declared that the Americas "do not seek regional solutions for economic problems," but that they "recognize the interdependence of all nations" and are eager to see their principles "adopted by all nations of the world."

Members of his delegation said the secretary meant not to turn a back on Europe and Asia, but to turn and face it with eyes aware.

His assurances were seen as directed to Argentina, wishing to retain old world ties, and against some agitation that the United States direct all its foreign trade toward Latin-America.

Hull said the Americas were determined "peace shall be maintained on the American continent," that any menace against peace was a "matter of concern to all" and that the conference would seek to increase the effectiveness of "measures adopted already to that end."

White Man Gassed At State's Prison

Cabarrus County's First Man to Be Executed Confesses Crime; Admits He Was Not "Hexed"

Raleigh, Dec. 9.—(AP)—Baxter Parnell, 32-year-old Cabarrus county farmer, died by gas at State's prison today for the ice pick murder of his sister-in-law, Janie Fink Parnell, Chaplain E. C. Cooper said, confessed that he killed the girl in a fit of anger and completely absolved a Negro woman he had contended had given him roots which had "hexed" him.

The man was the first to be executed here from Cabarrus county since the death chamber was installed in 1910. Cabarrus officers said, He was the ninth white man executed by gas, the 40th gas victim and the 212th person executed here.

Mass Executions

Reidsville, Ga., Dec. 9.—(AP)—Six Negro murderers were put to death in the electric chair in the state prison today in the largest mass execution in Georgia's history.

The electrocutions required an hour and 20 minutes. The first of the prisoners went to the chair at 11:09 a. m. (CST) and the executions were completed at 12:30 p. m. (CST). A seventh prisoner, a white man, Tom Dickerson, convicted of strangling the infant child of a daughter, was granted a last minute reprieve.

Unaware that she lives in the shadow of death, 8-year-old Dorothy Lewis of New York here plans for Christmas at her home. 29 TO RECEIVE CERTIFICATES

Ten-Day Instructors' Course in First Aid Completed

The 10-day course in instruction in first aid was completed here last night by Dr. Otis Marshall, representative of the American Red Cross and 29 persons from various towns in Eastern North Carolina, who completed the course will receive certificates.

The graduates will be presented with the certificates as soon as they arrive from Washington headquarters of the National Red Cross. The instructors will return to their respective communities and conduct courses in first aid. C. W. Willard, chairman of the Pitt county chapter's first aid committee, had charge of the course conducted here for instructors.

Persons taking the course were from Ayden, Stokes, Manteo, New Holland, Washington, Wilson, Winterville, Greenville, and represented a number of professions, including teaching, Boy Scout work, WPA, CCC, Red Cross, fire departments, water and light commissions and telephone companies.

A similar course was conducted in Wilson some time ago and Mr. Willard and three other local men enrolled and since their graduation have conducted courses here in first aid.

Test Legality Of 'Weed' Auctions

Washington, Dec. 9.—(AP)—The Justice Department has assigned two of its investigators to bid an attentive ear to the sing-song chanting of tobacco auctioneers. "It may be legal to sell a farmer's entire tobacco crop in only eight or ten seconds, but we are not sure," one anti-trust division official said. "We intend to find out." The department's current investigation chiefly of tobacco marketing practices involves methods, by which Maryland tobacco is sold in Balti-

United States, Britain Informed by Japanese Official

Tokyo, Dec. 9.—(AP)—A source close to the government said today that Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita had informed the United States and Great Britain that the principles of "open door" in China had vanished.

The minister was said to have spoken fully and frankly yesterday to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie, leaving no doubt as to Japan's position.

The informant said his conversation contained such phraseology as "henceforth you will be permitted x x x" and "you will not be permitted x x x" referring to conditions under which foreign commerce may continue in China.

Concrete questions were not touched, it was said, but Arita laid down two general principles showing Japan's line of policy. Specific questions will be determined according to the following principles: 1. The Chinese-Japanese conflict has changed the political situation in China, and has virtually dismantled the nine-power pact.

2. Japan, Manchukuo and New China have become a new economic bloc, but they do not intend to exclude foreign trade.

Italy's Chances of Attacking by Libya or Sea "Zero"

MOBILE GUARDS PATROL TUNISIA

One Person Wounded Gravely, Three More Slightly Hurt in Tunis Demonstration

Paris, Dec. 9.—(AP)—Sources close to Premier Daladier said today that France would fight if necessary to defend Tunisia.

The same source said that Italy's military chances of attacking and seizing Tunisia from Libya or from the sea were "zero."

They viewed the Italian campaign for the French protectorate as simply a "propaganda advance guard" for other and more temperate demands concerning the rights of Italians living in Tunisia.

In Tunisia armed mobile guards rushed from Algeria patrolled the streets while French troops throughout Tunisia were held in their barracks, awaiting developments in the French-Italian crisis.

Reports from interior cities indicated various Arab and native organizations had joined with the French colonists in demonstrations against Italian demands for control of Tunisia.

One person was wounded gravely and three slightly in disorders which accompanied mass demonstrations by Italians, French and Arabs in Tunis yesterday. Order was restored shortly before midnight.

The disorders brought the arrest of 10 Italians for "seditious cries" and caused France to rush three platoons of mobile guards totaling 100 men from Algeria to reinforce police who already were patrolling all key streets.

FELT DEMANDS MAY BE MADE

Demonstrations Continue In Rome Against France

Rome, Dec. 9.—(AP)—Demonstrations against France continued today and diplomatic circles predicted they might lead to a formal Italian demand for "concessions in French Tunisia."

Twelve hundred Rome students marched through the streets, cried for Premier Mussolini to appear on the Piazza Venezia balcony and when he did not appear marched away in two columns shouting "forward Italy" and demands for French territory.

Several of the students were arrested for encounters with police who barred the streets to the French embassy. They were later released.

Four thousand students of every age, from the elementary schools to the university, went toward the French consulate at Naples, but the streets there likewise were blocked by police.

Courtesy among motorists might be unusual, but here is a case where a motorist did all in his power to make amends for having bumped his car into another vehicle.

Godfrey Oakley, local insurance man, found that someone had backed into his parked car and broken one of the headlight lenses. He went to an automobile accessories supply house and purchased a new one.

On the way home Oakley noticed a package wrapped up and lying on the street. Later he unwrapped it and found a new headlight. The man who bumped into his car evidently had been unable to find the owner and did the next best thing, went and purchased a headlight and put it where the owner could find it.

Not A Single Trial In Municipal Court

Not a single case was tried at this morning's session of Municipal court, all seven on the docket having been continued to Monday or next Friday. SAFETY GROUP IN MEET HERE

Larry Brown Named Vice Chairman Of East Carolina

Fred Shumate of Wilson was named chairman of the Eastern Carolina Safety Council, in session here last night, and Larry Brown, office manager of the Greenville Water and Light commission, was elected vice chairman.

Under usual procedure Mr. Brown will be the next chairman of the group, Dall Holderness of Tarboro was chosen secretary and R. A. Broome of Rocky Mount treasurer.

In making the address of welcome, Mayor M. K. Blount took occasion to point out the importance of safety to municipal governments. He pointed out that insurance rates were based on the number of accidents and said that precaution against accidents was worth many times its cost, even from a financial standpoint.

Lt. Lester Jones, commanding officer of Troop "A" of the State Highway patrol, with headquarters here, made one of the principal addresses of the evening. He related the various duties of the patrol force and said it was ever alert to promote safety, not only on the highways, but in all other phases of commerce and industry.

J. Dewey Dorsett, member of the North Carolina Industrial commission, was the other principal speaker of the evening. He discussed the duties of both employer and employee relative to safety measures. He said the first duty fell on the employer to encourage safety. He declared, for instance, that if the employer encouraged his employees to attend such safety meetings the employee, himself, would take an interest in the sessions and soon would be attending of his accord.

Trio Gets $700 From Western Carolina Bank

Citizens Give Chase and Promptly Nab Two Robbers

Shelby, Dec. 9.—(AP)—Three bandits held up a bank at Falls-ton, 12 miles away early today and got about $700, but officers and aroused citizens soon captured two of the alleged robbers and recovered almost all the money.

Sheriff Raymond Cline said two men who confessed are being held in the city jail and a third was hunted near the scene of the capture.

The two were booked, Cline said, as Lewis Childers, 24 and Frank J. Haskins, 17 both of Morganton. Cashier Herman Beam of Shelby's Union Trust company's branch at Falls-ton reported to the sheriff's office here that two unmasked white men, brandishing guns, walked into the bank only a few minutes after it opened for business at 9 a. m. and demanded the money. A third man waited in an automobile at the curb.

Beam handed over the currency he said, whereupon the bandits drove away.

Citizens piled into automobiles and gave chase, reports at the sheriff's office here said.

The fleeing bandits, crowded closely by their pursuers, jumped from their automobile and fled across the fields.

Sheriff Raymond Cline said the Falls-ton residents overtook one of the trio and held him until officers arrived.

Cline said the man was brought to the city jail and booked as Lewis Childers, 24, of Morganton. The sheriff said the prisoner admitted his part in the hold-up.

PITT FARMERS URGED TO VOTE

Cotton Loans To Be Denied If Referendum Fails

R. R. Bennett, Pitt county farm agent, declared today that he had been advised by the AAA in Washington that if national cotton marketing quota is voted out tomorrow the act prohibits the making of loans on any cotton, including that produced this year, during the period beginning on the date of the secretary of Agriculture's proclamation of the results of the referendum through July 31, 1940.

Approximately 8,000 Pitt county farmers are eligible to vote in tomorrow's tobacco referendum, and about 4,000 in the cotton referendum Mr. Bennett estimated.

The county agent stated that producers will not be required cards in order to vote, adding that some misunderstanding prevailed in regard to this because cards sent out stated that producers should take the cards to the polling places. The only object of bringing the card is to enable the registrar to find the producer's name on the register more easily. The polls will be open from 7 a. m. until 5:30 p. m.

Voting places for the various townships in the county are as follows: Bethel, E. L. Mayo's office; Pacolous, high school; Chocod, Black Jack; Swift Creek, Hugh Stokes store; Ayden, town hall; Winterville, town hall; Farmville, town hall; Fountain, town hall; Falkland, Moore's service station; Beaver Dam, Mack Smith's store; Belvoir, high school; Greenville, court house; Carolina, Junior Order hall.

Manufacturers In Last Day Of Meet

New York, Dec. 9.—(AP)—Plunging into a discussion of labor relations, the nation's manufacturers in convention today prepared to adopt a set of basic principles for solution of employer-management problems under its new "cooperate-with-government" plan. Instead of offering detailed specifications for amendment of the Wagner-Labor Relations act, a move which was defeated after a committee battled yesterday, the employer relations committee of the National Association of Manufacturers drafted for submission to the meeting a general program for use in working out jointly with government and labor future changes in labor legislation. Entering the last day of the convention, the men who run the nation's machine age industry looked forward to the speaking highlight of the program, the scheduled address tonight of Anthony Eden, the former British foreign secretary, who is making his first appearance in the United States today. The manufacturers were reassured by the latest report indicating that Eden, speeding on the Atlantic for New York, would arrive in time to make the address.

MONEY NEEDED TO WAGE FIGHT AGAINST SPIES

Roosevelt Announces Aim Ask For Additional Fund

PLANS REVEALED AT PRESS TALKS

FDR Also Announces He Will Again Recommend Reorganization Legislation

Washington, Dec. 9.—(AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that he planned to send to Congress another message recommending legislation empowering him to reorganize government agencies.

Washington, Dec. 9.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today that United States intelligence forces spying on foreign spies had been coordinated, but still needed more money.

Announcing plans to ask an additional appropriation for counter-espionage, the chief executive said spying had not been ended by the recent conviction of four German agents in New York.

He emphasized in his press conference discussion of the subject that no Ogpu, Soviet secret police, was needed to watch the American people, but there is a need for American people to watch the secret police of other nations.

Declining to disclose details of how coordination of intelligence units had been worked out, Mr. Roosevelt said if stories were published on the various steps it would destroy 90 per cent of the effectiveness of the set-up. He added, however, that a great many agencies were involved.

The President's discussion of the spy problem developed from a question concerning a conference he had yesterday with Lamar Hardy, federal district attorney for Manhattan, who obtained conviction of three individuals in New York on spy charges.

Mr. Roosevelt said they had discussed the whole spy situation, with emphasis on what already had been done.

The chief executive said Hardy had reported what he had been saying for a year—that for personal reasons he wish to resign as district attorney. The President added that Hardy would retire some time in January.

Mrs. Folger Makes Seal Sale Appeal

Public Urged to Keep the Christmas Seal Candle Lighted by Buying Additional Stickers

"Keep the Christmas Seal candle lighted." This is the plea made to the public by the Christmas Seal committee of Greenville (community) this week in an effort to obtain additional purchases of double-barred cross Christmas Seals.

Folger, Jr., committee chairman. "Before the Christmas Seal made possible education of the public, tuberculosis ranked first as a cause of death. To be told one had it was practically a death warrant. There were scarcely any facilities for the care of those sick with the disease.

"Today tuberculosis is known to be prevented and curable. It has dropped from first to seventh place as a cause of death and the death rate has been cut two-thirds. Sanatoria have been developed for modern treatment of the disease. By means of tuberculin tests and X-rays the disease may be detected early.

SCHOOL MONEY ROW PROCEEDS

Control of Spending of Funds Put Back in Public Eye

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Dec. 8.—The Governor's commission to examine and report on the state's educational setup put the perennial row over control of spending school money right back in the public eye and on the agenda of the 1939 General Assembly.

It did so by its section No. 9, which recommended that the Assembly provide that the present administration of the public schools be placed under the State Board of Education, with the present school commission as an "advisory commission." This is urged, the report said "feeling that it is for the best interest of the public school system to have immediate relief from scattered administration."

That tossed the fat right into the fire of controversy—the same controversy that has raged in every legislature since the school commission was set up in 1933 to control the financing of the public schools.

Ever since then the Department of Public Instruction, backed by the so-called "school people" has fought desperately to get control of spending the more than $25,000,000 annually appropriated for the support of the public schools. In the 1935 and 1937 Assemblies the attack was completely repulsed as the legislators decided they wanted to see a strict rein kept on the school spending by a group of business men apportioned by the Governor, rather than the educational system along lines which may be very desirable but which cannot be attained without vastly increased expenditures.

In short, the law makers have adopted the attitude that they want a financial agency to control spending while at the same time school experts work along their own lines and recommend expansion.

Advocates of the present setup contend that there isn't in fact any "scattered administration" of the public school system. They point out that the school commission does not have the slightest authority to interfere with the department of public instruction in the sphere of educational matters, such as the courses of study to be pursued, other properly and strictly educational affairs.

The school commission, they contend, is nothing more or less than the financial and accounting agency empowered by the legislature to see to it that the huge sums appropriated for operation of schools are uniformly and properly expended—with every county getting its share in the sum. They maintain that it is clearly a proper agency under any reasonable system of checks and balances.

It would be just as logical, they point out to claim that administration of the Department of Conservation and Development is "scattered" because its financial activities are subject to the inspection, control and approval of the Budget Bureau. The School Commission, they maintain, goes only a bit further than the Budget Bureau with reference to other departments in that it undertakes an auditing function to see to it that the funds are not only properly allocated, but that they are properly and legally spent for the specific purpose for which allocated.

As these people see it, to allow the administration of the huge state school fund to be placed in the hands of the Department of Public Instruction (which is what a transfer to the State Board of Education would mean) would be to invite politics into the spending of the school money of the state. Those who favor the present setup point out that it has worked quite satisfactorily ever since it was adopted. From other states have come frequent and repeated requests for information regarding administration of the school money. The accomplishments of North Carolina in transporting its children at far less per capita than any other state of the Union has been the subject of repeated favorable comment in all quarters.

Those who oppose giving the fiscal control to the Board of Education believe that the tax payers of North Carolina are much better satisfied with the present method, which they feel assures them of administration as businesslike and economical as possible. In this way, it is argued, the legislature is willing to appropriate more money than it would care to turn over to some agency not so meticulous in observing all the requirements of good business judgment in spending it.

The consensus of experienced observers is that the legislature will not make the change recommended unless it should be urged vigorously by Governor Clyde R. Hoey, and there appears to be absolutely no chance of that. In view of the Governor's repeated praise of the progress of North Carolina's school system, before he was nominated in 1936 he was thought to lean somewhat to the Board of Education plan, but before his inauguration he changed over, and is not regarded as a vigorous advocate of the present school commission as the financial control agency for the school funds.

Chinese babies deserted by parents have little or no chance of survival these days, even when picked up and given proper attention. Undermourned mothers are given as the cause.

THE ARMY POST MURDERS

By Virginia Hanson

The Characters
Katherine Cornish, myself, visiting Elizabeth on a mid-western Army post.
Elizabeth, Colonel Wright's daughter.
Adam Drew, acting commanding officer.

Yesterday, Barney's notes indicate that he was on the trail of a hidden relative.

Chapter 31

Under The Microscope

CONTINUED reading to Adam.
"Carew—typical self-made man. Not brainy, but solid. Inevitable humility of a man up from the ranks.

"Mrs. C.—enigma. Have seen her three times and then only for a few minutes—ran like a frightened rabbit. Can't find out nature of her illness. Anne avoids subject, but E. insists nothing wrong with her at all. Deep-rooted inferiority?"
"Anne drinks too much—see above. Could this be inherited tendency? Anne very childish about discussions of hereditary traits—very ill informed and inclined to scoff at accepted laws. Must see to it she is better informed.

"Elizabeth. Good mind—slow, but intelligent listener. Behavior remarkably normal, except for small habit patterns. Very like her father, who is an intelligent, superior type. Have had very inspiring talks with her. Simple but sane views."

I paused. "The next seems to have been added later, with an indelible pencil."

"E. has prudish tendencies. Perhaps puritan upbringing."
"Not very profound, is he?" Adam queried. "Rather a heavy, plodding mind—misses the subtleties. But he seems to have waded through a lot of stuff—emerged with some of the jargon. . . . Go on."

I turned a page, read aloud. "Adam Drew," before I could stop myself. Then my eyes leaped down the lines and my tongue faltered.

"Go on," said Adam's quiet voice.
"The man's a fool," I said shortly. "What right has he to put anyone under the microscope? We're all a little queer."

But Adam was not to be distracted. He said calmly, "Are you going to read that?"
He was not alighting. His expression was rather set, his eyes blank. I don't know why, but I thought he was braced for a blow.

My eyes traveled down the lines once more in the lengthening silence.
"Adam Drew—fascinating subject for analysis. Almost total reticence concerning self. Have never heard him speak of his parents, brothers, sisters. Seclusiveness in midst of group—in the crowd but not of it. Treats all women with impersonal gallantry."

"N. B. Women sense a lack. Is he in flight from some past injury? Seems to have erected defense against all contact."
"What is his family skeleton?"
"No, I'm not going to read it," I said at last. "It's drivel."

I threw down the notebook, crossed the room.
"It's nearly morning. I'm going to change. I'll be back presently."

Adam was snatching up the brown notebook as I opened the study door.

Chink In The Armor
THE upstairs hall was quiet, but there was a thread of light under a guest-room door. I passed it, turned on the light in my room and stood blinking in terrified unbelief.

My suitcase was by the bed, where I had left it, locked on Charlie's gun. It was not locked now. The lid was up and the contents churned.

I dropped to my knees, plunged both hands into the disorder, then rose and stared about me.
The gun was gone, and the otherwise orderly room gave no clue to the intruder.

Everything was, as I had left it—no, not everything.
Little Women was gone from the bedside table, and on the blue-and-white candlewick bedspread my evening bag was lying in the midst of its spilled contents.

Adam came leaping up the steps at my low-voiced call, and when he had heard my story and seen for himself that the gun was gone my wrongs overcame me and all my frightened, resentful, humiliated tears overflowed onto the stiff white bosom of Adam's mess jacket.

He said me very gently while I sobbed that I couldn't stand any more, until presently I could look at him without tears drowning my vision and perceived that he was suffering.

My tears dried instantly in a flash of indecent triumph. So he was not insusceptible; I had found the chink in the armor, the crack in the glass house.

"And then I remembered. "Oh, your ribs!" I muttered unsympathetically and, turning my back on him, snatched from the top of the tumbled suitcase the first thing that came to hand to mop my drenched countenance. It happened to be a pair of silk scarves, but I was not immediately aware of that fact.

When I faced Adam again he was no longer so white and grim, but he was looking strangely at my left hand.

"What have you done with your ring?" he asked sternly.
"I th-threw it at Charlie," I told him. For a minute I wasn't sure whether I was crying or laughing.

Adam suddenly looked very tired.
"I'd better get some sleep," he said gently and turned toward the door. "Never mind about the notes—I'll puzzle them out. There's no hurry anyway. It was just an absurd idea of mine to get things—more orderly before Colonel Wright gets back."

"I'm not going to sleep," I said childishly. "As soon as I've washed and changed I'm coming down again. I don't want to be alone."

He said, "If you really feel that way . . ." let a brief smile warm his face, and vanished.

A Martinet

WHILE I washed and got into a linen dress that was not too crumpled I thought about his wish to get things more orderly before Colonel Wright's arrival and decided that what he really wanted was a confession, signed, sealed and delivered. He wanted to avoid the light of day for much that would have to be told.

I had met and liked Colonel Wright on my previous visit, but I had not been blind to his tendencies as a martinet. Like Elizabeth, he would not understand about Charlie, nor about Barney's notebook. And he would certainly not approve of the episode of Anne and young Wheeler. Those things, and others similar to them, would assume in his eyes an unjustified importance.

What action, if any, would follow his disapproval I was in no position to predict. I did know that there was a dreaded annual document known as an efficiency report made out by every commandant on each officer in his contingent, whereby the junior officer could be either openly black-listed or damned with faint praise. And even a woman, I had heard, could be sent off an army post for cause.

And while I did not believe Colonel Wright was a vindictive man, nevertheless there was about him the same rigid, unflinching devotion to principle that marked his daughter.

Forgetting my own problems in a sudden desire to help Adam attain his almost impossible wish, I turned out my light and tiptoed down to the library.

I don't know how long we pored over my amorphous notes, checking, listing, discarding, theorizing. Finally Adam sat back and summed up.

"It amounts to this then: we have three murders—or their equivalent, for while Anne and the sentry may live, they were intended to die. Taking them in order, the first could have been committed by any one of the group except Barney and you and me—and probably Mrs. Flower and Doc Moore, with whom she was dancing."

"Number two—Ethel Curtis—could have been committed by anyone but Mrs. Flower and me. Charlie and probably the Shaws, Barney and Elizabeth, whose alibis are interdependent."

"Number three, the sentry, could have been committed by anyone but you and me and probably Charlie and Barney."

"That leaves us with no alibi of any kind for Lou Orrington, Captain Flower, Annie—"

"And poor ones for Charlie, the Shaws, Doc Moore and Elizabeth."

Adam groaned. "And that seems to eliminate practically no one."
"How about motive?"
"The motive has something to do with Ethel Curtis, of that I'm certain. Though how that links up with Anne—"

"You believe the same person was responsible for both?"
"Yes, I don't know why I think so, but I do."

SOCIAL and LOCAL

Winterville Chapter Meets.

Mrs. Arthur Savage and Mrs. McCoy Tripp were joint hostesses to the Winterville chapter of E. C. T. C. Alumnae Association Wednesday evening. The vice-president, Mrs. Linwood Worthington, presided.

At the conclusion of the business a delightful social hour was enjoyed. Bingo was played, prizes being awarded the winners. The guests were served hot tea, sandwiches, cookies, and minis. The Christmas motif was carried out in the refreshments.

Entertains Bridge Club.
Mrs. R. C. Stokes, Jr., entertained the members of her bridge club on Thursday afternoon at her home on Elizabeth street.

Three tables were arranged in the living room which was lavishly with its decorations of pink snowflakes. At the conclusion of the games, Mrs. B. S. Warren was given a pot-plum plant for making high score.

Mrs. Stokes served a delicious salad course with coffee.

Mrs. Spilman Entertained.
Fountain, Dec. 9.—Mrs. J. B. Spilman was entertained Sunday by Miss Nelle Divens and H. F. Owens at a three-course turkey dinner.

Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Burns, Miss Frances Spilman, Miss Nina Estelle Yelverton and Jack Beamon of Raleigh, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bass of Farmville, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Yelverton and Mrs. C. L. Owens.

The dining table was covered with an Irish lace cloth and had as a centerpiece ten blue candles surrounded by crystal snow and blue and silver bells, leading from the centerpiece to each place were blue and silver ribbons, and favors of miniature blue horns and silver bells marked the places.

During the evening, Mrs. Spilman was also entertained at a buffet supper given by Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Yelverton. The dining table had for its centerpiece a miniature lighted Christmas tree flanked on either side by tall burning tapers.

Mrs. C. L. Owens seated at one end of the table served baked ham with red and green stuffed apples; at the opposite end of the table, Miss Nelle Owens poured coffee. Sandwiches, deviled eggs, pickles, and cookies were served by Miss Lucile, Nina Estelle, Carol and Doris Yelverton, daughters of the host and hostess. There were twenty guests present.

SANTA AND THE LOST PRINCESS

THE STORY SO FAR: Princess Hulda goes into Santa's workshop, but she can't tell Santa who she is because she has forgotten. Then a big crow comes down the chimney and caws, "Trouble, trouble."

Chapter Four THE WITCH AGAIN
"My gracious, my gracious," Santa kept crying as he rushed around the Toyshop shutting windows and latching the door. And all the while he did it, that old crow on the Christmas tree kept croaking, "Trouble, trouble."

Dolls covered their faces with their tiny hands. Fairies fluttered about peering out windows. Gnomes picked up hammers and looked for something to hit, but they couldn't see anything to tackle. The tin soldiers whipped out swords and tried to look very brave, but their knees rattled together. Hulda's big blue eyes were large as quarters.

She sat still and held tight to Mrs. Santa's big plump hand. "What is it?" she asked.

"Oh, dear," said Mr. Santa, "that old crow always warns us when there's a witch in the neighborhood."

Santa held out his hand for the crow, and the old bird flopped down into Santa's palm. "What is it?" asked Santa. "Trouble, trouble," croaked the crow.

"Oh, dear," said Mr. Santa, "those are the only two words he knows. We ask him for more every time, but he just croaks 'Trouble trouble.'"

The whole evening passed that way. Hardly anyone ate his supper of little apple pancakes and honey. The pancakes just stuck in everybody's throats. Finally it was nine o'clock and the smallest dolls were nodding sleepily so everybody went off to bed, even Hulda, whose pretty new bed was placed in the inglenook next to the fireplace. The new twins were put to bed in the doll nursery in two little cradles that exactly matched.

Ugly Little Woman
For an hour or so Hulda lay looking at the pink shadows of the dying fire in the fireplace. The North Star wandered by on his nightly round and stopped to peek into the windows. He winked at Hulda when he saw her awake and then went on.

A little later Hulda saw something that made her duck her head under the sheet. Out of the fireplace flew the ugliest little woman you can imagine riding a broomstick. Her dress was a dirty brown and over head was wrapped a red kerchief. Her hands, clinging to the broomstick, looked like claws.

It was the mean Queen's witch, but Hulda didn't recognize her because the fairies had made her forget her home so she wouldn't feel too lonesome.

Santa Is Worried
She slipped along the edge of the floor looking here and there, going so softly that no one but Hulda heard her. She tweaked the toes of a sleeping black monkey so hard he jumped in his sleep. She took a sword from the side of a sleeping tin soldier and bent it in two. She threw a holy wreath into the fire.

Hulda peeked from under the sheets, and held her breath as the witch crept by her bed. Then the witch did something terrible. She reached into a doll crib, picked up a little baby doll wrapped in pink sleepers, climbed to the top of a chair and dropped it so hard that it broke in a dozen pieces.

At that Hulda cried out. The witch slipped up the chimney like a black shadow and Santa and Mrs. Santa came popping out of their bedroom in billowing, flannel nightgowns.

"What happened?" shouted Santa.
"O-o-o, such a terrible old woman, and look at the baby doll!" shivered Hulda pointing to the floor. "Good gracious!" said Mrs. Santa as she picked up the pieces of the doll ever so gently.

"What did the witch look like?" asked Santa.
Hulda described her, and when she said she wore a red kerchief over her head Santa said, "Oh, that kind of a witch. She's somebody's evil spirit. If she were one of the Witch Queen's people she would wear a peaked hat."

"She went up the chimney," said Hulda.
"Well, she won't come down again this night," said the captain of the tin soldiers, and he stationed his whole company on the hearth.

"Santa, please fix this little doll," see he was worried. He kept looking out of the windows.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—Members of Congress who like to get their teeth into a resounding phrase like "downtrodden farmer" or "equality of opportunity" are taking an awful bat-ing in the early days of the monopoly investigation.

They brought it upon themselves, for they invited economists to put the bedrock under the inquiry and the economists set about doing it in a way that only economists can do. For four solid hours, Isador Lubin, commissioner of statistics in the Labor Department, pined congressional and departmental members of the committee to their seats with a presentation of statistics the sum total of which ran far beyond billions.

Lubin is no fan dancer when it comes to holding an audience and in 20 minutes he had emptied a fourth of the seats in the once crowded Senate caucus room. Two-thirds of the spectators had enough by lunch time.

But the members of Congress could not walk out on their hearing, especially since they had ballyhooded it to the skies. They had to sit while Lubin told them, among other things, that based on 1929 national income, the country had lost $133,000,000,000 during the depression, or, if figured another way, the loss was $225,000,000,000.

Lubin Let's 'Em Have It
All in all it was a field day for figures and Lubin was in there pitching. He was born with a statistic in his mouth and probably as a boy was one of those forever asking you to take a number, add four, multiply it by six and extract the square root and the answer is 11.

Without pausing to draw breath he recited that salaries and wages lost in the depression amounted to $119,334,000,000, man-years of labor lost ran to 43,435,000, while couponclippers lost $19,800,000,000 in dividends. Gross farm losses added up to $38,000,000,000.

Strangely enough the production of shoes didn't slip much, even in the tough years, which indicates the days of the barefoot boy are about gone. In 1936 and 1937 more than 400,000,000 pairs were produced each year, far greater even than 1929.

By this time several committee members were more than bored while others tried to cover up by asking questions. A member of Congress can't yawn in public with any safety whatever because sure as shootin' a photographer will snap him with his mouth stretched to bill-swallowing proportions.

Too Much To Handle
It is increasingly evident that pelter members of the committee nor the general public had fully understood the magnitude of the investigation until the foundation, if finished as outlined it will take ten months to two years of more or less continuous hearings.

Already it is widely speculated that ultimately the thing will narrow down to a battle of economists, each seeking to impose his pet theory of economic reformation upon the committee when it comes to writing legislation. In that event, the economist who wins the inside track with the committee will design the legislation, regardless of stocks to stables, charts and horseback opinions.

DIET OF NAILS FINALLY FLOORS BULL

diet preferred by John Hamner's Guernsey bull finally "got"
the animal. It died.
At the reading plant it was discovered that a nail in the animal's stomach had pierced its heart.
Other nails, staples and pieces of wire also were found.

Wasn't That Cold Butte, Mont.—(AP)—It was cold but not that cold, said Jack Duggan, assistant police chief, as he saw two men wearing five overcoats down the street. After he had detained them at city jail, coils came in from people who had lost their overcoats.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Dec. 9.—The State of North Carolina will be unable to put up any money for preparation of a "Rose Bowl Book," advertising the state's many attractions pictorially and by printed word.
Such a book, very ornate and completely filled with interesting pictures and reading material, was prepared when the University of Alabama went out to play California last New Year's Day. It was compiled under auspices of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce the state taking no official part in it.

North Carolina is likely to have one something along the same lines for distribution in California and way states as Duke's Blue Devils journey out there and back, but it will have to be privately financed.
The state was approached, but had to decline.

Why not write Governor Clyde R. Hoey urging him to attend the Rose Bowl game? This corner is convinced that Representative Clarence Stone is right in declaring that a characteristically eloquent and polished Hoey address between halves would be the greatest advertising the state has received in many, many moons.

Maybe if enough Tar Heels wrote him and expressed this opinion, the Governor might change his mind.

Well, well, well. A use has at last been found for collards. At Wilmington there will be a benefit performance at one of the movie emporiums. Admission will be a head of collards. It seems they'll then sell the collards and donate the proceeds to the Wilmington papers' "Empty Stocking Fund." Carl Reider, director of the Wilmington-New Hanover garden program has issued an eloquent appeal: "If you have more collards than you need, give a head to some one else." Personally, if we had one it would be one too many.

A survey of loans made during the first year's operation of the Bandhead-Jones Tenant Act showed that 1,885 farm tenants, share-croppers and laborers obtained funds to buy farms of their own, averaging 130 acres each, the Farm Security Administration has announced.

The North Carolina State Employment Service News reports that more and more merchants of North Carolina are beginning to cooperate with the service.

"There are many evidences that Merchants Associations are glad of an opportunity to work with the Employment Service on projects that further community welfare.
The benefits derived from such endeavor are mutual," says the News.

As an example the News cites the Winston-Salem office which is planning a business and industrial survey of Forsyth county. The Merchants Association is offering full co-operation and suggests a correlation of the information gathered by the Service and data already in possession of the Association.

The Raleigh office and the local Merchants Association will soon sponsor a sales training course similar to the ones offered already in Salisbury and Gastonia.

The Service placed, through its offices, 496 "Juniors" last month, 404 boys and 92 girls. Durham, with 328 ranked first in placements made most of which were temporary; Greensboro was second with 59 placements. Charlotte with 163 had the highest number of registrations.
Durham recorded 101 registrants.

North Carolina Farmers March To Polls Saturday

Raleigh, Dec. 8.—North Carolina farmers, some 300,000 strong, will march to the polls Saturday to decide whether marketing quotas will be in effect for cotton and flue-cured tobacco produced in 1939. Farmers from other states where these two crops are grown will be voting at the same time on the same questions. If two-thirds of those voting approve quotas, they will be in effect again next year.

In referendum last March 12 marketing quotas for cotton were approved by 82.1 per cent, while flue-cured tobacco quotas were favored by 86.2 per cent. Although North Carolina, the heaviest producer of tobacco and one of the leading cotton states, will play an important part in the election, the national totals will decide the issue.

Farmers will vote by secret ballot in the communities in which they reside. Local AAA committees will conduct the election and separate ballot boxes will be provided for cotton and tobacco votes where community.

Both crops are grown in the same All farmers, including tenants and sharecroppers, who produced cotton in 1938 with a staple length of less than 1 1/2 inches, and all who engaged in the production of flue-cured tobacco in 1938, are eligible to vote. No farmer, whether an individual, partnership, corporation or association, can vote more than one time. No votes by mail or

ALEXANDER ADDRESSES THE WASHINGTON ROTARY CLUB

J. D. Alexander, director of athletics and Professor of Physical Education at East Carolina Teachers College, recently addressed Washington Rotary Club, at Hotel Louise, in that city, on the subject: "Possibilities in High School Athletics."

Board Proposes Drastic Reform In Election Law

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Dec. 7.—North Carolina's state Board of Elections will recommend to the 1939 General Assembly a thorough-going revision of existing election laws which will include at least three salient points:

1. Repeal of the existing absentee statute and substitution thereof of a new absentee law so full of teeth that it will bite on suspicion.
2. A new statewide registration of voters.
3. A limitation on the number of voters at any precinct in the state.

Nobody on the board is publicly announcing that these points will be stressed in the report and recommendations required by law to be submitted to the General Assembly but Chairman Will A. Lucas and other members have so frequently given voice to their convictions that they are certainties and not long shots.

Recommendations of the board will not, however, be unanimous, as George McNeill, Democratic from Fayetteville, and the two Republican members, Adrian Mitchell of Windsor and L. V. Hall, of Charlotte, will not go along with the chairman in recommending any provision for absentee voting to replace the present law. They are on record in favor of complete abolition of the absentee ballot.

The third Democrat, J. O. Bell of Hendersonville, has consistently made it clear he favors the absentee in principle, but has equally consistently stood for such reforms as will prevent the wholesale frauds such as marked and marred many 1938 primary elections.

The Lucas view, in which Bell will probably concur fully, is that the absentee ballot can be so protected as to make its fraudulent use almost impossible, or at least so dangerous that nobody will attempt it. He will recommend that complete authority be centralized in the County Election Board chairman for the issue of absentee ballots, would make it certain that full and complete information regarding absentees is given the state board in advance of every election and would provide punitive sentences for violations of the law. Absentees, under his plan, would be issued only on application in person, no agents allowed, or by mail. The voter would be required to swear that he marked the ticket himself in secret, and the officer taking the oath would be required to certify that he (the officer) did not solicit the voter to cast his ballot for any person and that, to his knowledge, no one else did.

Under this plan there could be only one person responsible for absentee frauds—the county chairman—and on him would fall the full penalties in proven cases.

As for the new registration, the state board will unanimously favor that recommendation as the board's probes last fall showed conclusively that a tremendously high percentage of registration books are in such woeful condition that only a clean start can ever correct them and make them up to date.

There is not likely to be any difference of opinion on the question of limiting the number of voters per precinct to some specified maximum, probably 500. At least half the state have such limitations, with 500 as the normal maximum. There will, of course be other points touched upon in the board's recommendations, but the three points mentioned will be put up at the top in importance.

NEW BUILDING SHOWN IN N. C.

Reaches $35,000,000 in First 11 Months of 1938

Raleigh, Dec. 8.—Construction contracts of all sorts awarded in North Carolina totalled $35,015,000 for the first eleven months of 1938, according to figures released in the early December number of "Construction" business publication with headquarters in Baltimore.

During November contracts were awarded for 4,557,000 in the state and at the close of the month proposed construction for which contracts were yet to be awarded reached $13,964,000, a total composed principally of industrial and highway projects.

In the 17 states listed as "Southern" by the magazine, total construction contracts awarded for the first eleven months amounted to $715,304,000, with North Carolina ranking squarely in the middle of the list, with eight states above and eight below it in the column. Units exceeding the Tar Heel total were District of Columbia, Florida, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, Virginia, South Carolina, and Texas. Lower in the scale were Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Tennessee and West Virginia.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Dec. 9.—(AP)—Attempts to rally the stock market today drew only faint response from buyers and, with the exception of a few rails, steels and selected industrials, many leaders either stood still or drifted moderately lower.

Dealings were slow throughout. Near the fourth hour the ticker tape frequently was idle. Hopes for business continued fairly strong in Wall Street, but optimism was offset marketwise by further tax selling and

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—A preview week without an epic, or four uncolossal evenings.

"Out West with the Hardys" takes that lovable, typical Metro family into the current "western cycle" in pictures.

The Arizona ranch of Judge Hardy's old friends, Dora and Bill Northcote, turns out to have plenty of open spaces but comparatively little wildness. In fact to Judge Hardy's problem disappointment, it has practically all the conveniences of home along with horses to ride and steers to rope. The one convenience lacking, or endangered, is a steady water supply—and the judge and family go west to see what can be done about saving this.

Incidentally, Andy Hardy learns a few tricks from "Jake," the 7-year-old motherless daughter of the ranch foreman; Marian Hardy develops a romantic crush on Jake's daddy; the judge learns that his wife knew all along about that picnic "scandal" in which he'd been involved with Dora Northcote long years before; and there's a great to-do about old Indian blankets, which in the end serve to save the Northcote ranch and the Hardy fortune.

Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford (Mickey's girl-friend Polly) all are here.

Newest in the series, this one holds up as chuckly, close-to-home, above average movie.

The Romans are supposed to have introduced the art of brewing beer into Britain.

THIS DOG HAS 'HEARING EAR'

Canine Helps Master-Engineer Run Water Station

Raleigh, Dec. 9.—Much has been written about "Seeing Eye" dogs. They have been praised to the skies. But this is the story of a "Hearing Ear" dog, and there probably isn't but one such animal—and he's to be found right here in North Carolina.

This prodigy—let's not call him freak—is "Rags," a dog of entirely uncertain ancestry, but Fred Lewis, his master who lives over about Aberdeen will bet his bread and butter that there isn't a smarter one anywhere.

And no wonder. Lewis is chief engineer at the Aberdeen city water station. He uses Rags as his helper and the nondescript canine is just as essential as any part of the equipment or any member of the city's personnel.

Born deaf and dumb, Lewis became an expert mechanic. He took over the job at the pump works several years ago, but he was hampered because he couldn't hear the machinery. For a long time now Rags has taken the place of his ears.

When Lewis starts the pump engine, Rags will grab the end of his tail in his teeth and chase it around a few times. If all goes well, he will then lie still, but if the machinery stops or suddenly makes some unusual or untoward noise, the dog rises and goes through his tail-chasing to warn the engineer.

Rags solved Lewis' greatest problem—how to know when to start extra pumps working in case of fire. Now, when the fire bell rings, Rags leaps to his feet and begins to chase that tail. Strangely enough when the same bell rings its regular 12 o'clock signal, he pays it no attention.

"You can't fool Rags," Lewis wrote on a slip of paper with a flourish. "He can tell me in a minute when anything goes haywire with a pump. You can't mix him up on that 12 o'clock bell, either—he just ignores it. But let it ring any other time and he's on his feet, telling me to start the pump."
