Mrs. Page Entertains.
Mrs. Stuart Page entertained at open house at her home on Eighth street on Saturday night from 9:30 until 10:30, in honor of her sister, Miss Sibyl Clarke, whose marriage to Mr. Jasper Martin Basart was solemnized on Sunday morning.

The hostess served punch and hors-d'oeuvres. About sixty guests called.

Bethel Round Table Club Meets.
Bethel, Jan. 9.—The January meeting of the Round Table Club was held at the home of Mrs. C. G. Garrenton. Mrs. A. M. McWhorter presided. During the business session new officers for the year were installed. They were: Mrs. A. M. McWhorter, president; Mrs. J. B. Bunting, vice-president; Mrs. F. B. Bount, second vice-president; Mrs. F. L. Andrews, secretary; Mrs. John Hooker, corresponding secretary; Miss Olive Jones, treasurer; and Mrs. W. J. Smith, custodian.

With "Religious Training" as the designated subject for the day, a very interesting and instructive talk was given by Mrs. N. Y. Self. At the conclusion of the program a delightful salad course was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. W. C. Taylor.

The King's Daughters Meet.
The Patient Circle of The King's Daughters held the first meeting of the new year with Mrs. Hortense Moyer on Tuesday, January 3, with a remarkable attendance.

The meeting opened with reciting the 23rd Psalm and a hymn, "Take My Life and Let It Be," followed by the prayer of the order. After the minutes and the treasurer's report, other committees reported. First, the turkey dinner held at the Parish House Dec. 8, and the sale of aprons and other fancy articles. A very fair sum was realized from that sale.

Then the Christmas work was reported by Mrs. Virginia Perkins. Fourteen families were given toys, gifts of wearing apparel, fruit and confections. The Pitt county girls at Samaritan Manor were remembered with scarfs, handkerchiefs and other requested articles.

The president, Mrs. W. R. Jones, then asked for reports from all present having plates to fill out. All reported plates filled up to New Year's day. The dates on these plates began at Labor Day and should end July 4. These plates are the circle's easy way to raise their state pledges in helping to build a chapel at Stonewall Jackson Training School at Concord, N. C. The president asked each member present to contact other members and see that they speed up in filling their plates. The circle was glad to have Mrs. Williams back to her office as treasurer. Mrs. Moyer graciously served in her place one year.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Perkins, served delicious refreshments.—Reported.

College Vesper Services.
Miss Ann Downey, Baptist student secretary, spoke to the college Y. W. C. A. vesper group last evening on her enriching experiences while attending a Baptist conference in Zurich, Switzerland, in 1937.

"It is a wonderful thrill to meet with people who are hungry and thirsty for Christ. Thousands gathered here to find more about him," she said. "It was such a wonderful thing to hear the roll call of the nations." As a nation was called, its representative walked on the stage and recited a scripture verse in his native tongue.

At the Methodist Sunday school Sunday every officer and teacher was present, and the total attendance so said the secretary, was the largest in the history of the church. This is a good showing with which to begin the new year and Supt. Harding to be congratulated.

Miss Downey visited Rome, where she attended religious services in a small church. Though unable to understand the Italian language, Miss Downey found, she said, that the Italians wished the Americans to pray for them in this time of dread and fear for their lives. "You should get down on your knees tonight and thank God for the privilege of worshipping him tonight," she continued.

She had visited the Catacombs, a cavern used as a hiding place by the Christians, and she described its many passages with walls carved with symbols and "fish-heads," the early signs of Christianity. She saw the Scala-Santa, the steps believed by the Roman Catholics to have been used when Jesus descended from his appearance before Pontius Pilate.

Miss Downey concluded by urging the students to take Christ as their life partner and to think of the life ahead of them.

Celebrate Golden Wedding.
The names of a bride and bridegroom of the long ago recently occupied a conspicuous place on the social calendar, when Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Elks celebrated their golden wedding on Sunday, January 8th, at their home in Grimesland. The old fashioned "open house," a custom of the past generation, was observed between the hours of two and five o'clock. About 200 guests called.

The children of this beloved couple assisted in receiving the guests. Mr. Arthur Elks welcomed the guests at the front door. Mrs. Arthur Elks introduced them to the receiving line which was composed of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Elks, Messrs. Eddie, Charlie and F. A. Elks. Mrs. Eddie Elks presided at the register. Mrs. Charlie Elks received in the gift room. In the dining room, at a beautifully appointed table, Mrs. Lela Bell Hoell poured tea and was assisted in serving a beautiful assortment of cakes and cookies by Mrs. F. A. Elks. Mrs. Raymond Elks, Miss Martha Hoell and Miss Margie Elks. The callers enjoyed a musical program of some of the best loved selections of the earlier days, sung by Miss Beatrice Godley, accompanied by Harrel Elks.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Elks was artistically decorated throughout with golden bells, marigolds and white lilies. In the dining room, the table was centered with a beautiful cake surrounded by white flowers and southern smilax. Burning white tapers in silver holders completed the appointments. Good-byes were said by Miss Reba Lee Elks. The host and hostess were recipients of many beautiful and elaborate gifts.

At the morning service at the Methodist church in Grimesland, Mr. Crow, the pastor, dedicated his service to Mr. and Mrs. Elks.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Elks served a buffet luncheon to the following: Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Elks, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Elks, Mrs. Lela Belle Hoell and Miss Martha Hoell of Grimesland; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Basari-Clarke.
Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Clarke announce the marriage of their daughter Sybil Lancaster to Mr. Jasper Martin Basart Sunday, January eighth, nineteen hundred and thirty-nine, Greenville, North Carolina.

The wedding of Miss Sibyl Lancaster Clarke and Jasper Martin Basart was solemnized on Sunday morning at nine o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, with only members of the immediate families and a few close friends in attendance. Rev. W. A. Ryan of the Eighth Street Church of Christ, officiated.

The lower floor, a suite, was attractively decorated with white gladioli, snapdragons and ferns. Prior to the ceremony, Vernon Keutemeyer of Chicago, Ill., rendered a delightful program of nuptial music. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was used as a processional.

The bride descended the stairway with her sister, and only attendant, Mrs. Stuart Page, and was met by the bridegroom, attended by Charles Bissette of Wilson, as best man. Together they proceeded to the living room and took their places before an improvised altar banked with palms, ferns, and southern smilax interspersed with white snapdragons and narcissi and flanked on each side by tall standards of glowing candlelight tapers.

The bride wore a Violnet model of powder blue crepe with navy accessories and a shoulderette of sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Page wore a becoming frock of Suez crepe with black accessories and a shoulderette of Tansman roses.

Mrs. Basart is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward LaFayette Clarke of this city. She is a graduate of Greenville high school and East Carolina Teachers College. At present she holds a prominent position with Sally Frocks.

Mr. Basart is the son of Mrs. Bertha Basart and the late Clarence Basart of Marshalltown, Iowa. He received his A.B. degree from A. C. College, Wilson, N. C., and B.S. degree from Des Moines College of Pharmacy in Des Moines, Iowa, and now is connected with Bissette's Drug Co. as druggist.

Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Basart left for Florida.

SOCIAL and LOCAL

Mrs. Bullard Entertains.
On Friday night, at her home in Chatham Circle, Mrs. B. F. Bullard entertained seven table of bridge in honor of Miss Sibyl Clarke, bride.

The rooms, where the tables were placed, were lovely with beautiful arrangements of white snapdragons and fern. As the guests were greeted by the hostess each was given a dainty nosegay.

At the conclusion of the game, Miss Clarke was presented a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Mrs. J. A. Watson was awarded cut flowers for making high score, and Mrs. John Warren an old fashioned candy jar for low.

Mrs. John Warren and Mrs. William Brooks, brides of the late fall and winter, were remembered with prints.

A delicious ice course was served. During the refreshment hour, burning blue tapers afforded soft illumination in the rooms.

Just before the guests departed they were invited into the dining room where the honoree was surprised with a miscellaneous shower.

Joining the guests for refreshments were Mrs. Edward L. Clarke, Mrs. G. A. Farrest, Miss Frances Gross and Mrs. Lynn Davis.

Rival Cagers Will Play At ECTC Tonight At 8:00

Two rival basketball contingents will be matched in the gymnasium at East Carolina Teachers College tonight at 8 o'clock.

Coach Gordon Gilbert's cagers and the basketeers of Atlantic Christian College of Wilson will furnish the entertainment for the big game.

Preceding the major clash, spectators will witness a fast preliminary game. Katy James' Independent girls will encounter a sextet from Washington. The local girls made their present-season debut here some time ago and won the approval of the fans.

Rivalry existed between the Wilson and Greenville colleges for some time, and whenever they meet in an athletic engagement, there's something doing. Each team relishes the idea of defeating the other and will make an effort to realize their anticipations here Monday night.

Despite the fact that the locals have not been seeing actual playing tactics for the past three days, their practice paces have not been retarded. Coach Gilbert has been training them regularly. His objective has been to keep his boys in shape.

Music will be provided by the ECTC-AOC affair. Wilson's bandmaster, Ellis W. Williamson, is training them regularly. His objective is to produce a spirit that will derive as much benefit as their opponents.

The preliminary game starts promptly at 7 o'clock and the feature attraction will get under way at 8 o'clock.

How's Your Health?

Editor for the New York Academy of Medicine

Personality and Brain Waves

There is much prospecting going on in the field of brain wave studies, or as it is technically called, electro-encephalography. Prospecting is the right expression for it is too early to tell whether there is much gold in "them thar hills."

The enthusiastic research workers speak cautiously of their finds, but one can easily detect their unrelenting convictions that they have hit upon a rich vein. Outsiders, while admiring the ingenuity of these workers, are waiting to be shown.

It has been shown that each individual has his own pattern of electrical activity which, like his handwriting, can be distinguished from that of other individuals and which under standard conditions maintains its individuality from day to day.

Normal persons, who are reeled have records, i. e., brain waves, which bear a resemblance to one another, and that the records of normal identical twins are closely similar.

Certain disease conditions, notably various types of epilepsy, give rise to brain waves with abnormal characteristics. So, too, does the condition of schizophrenia.

"The beat of the brain," writes P. A. Gibbs, "like that of the heart, varies with age, activity, temperature and metabolic rate, as well as with disease of the organ itself. When there is no rhythm of brain or heart or respiration, the person is dead." The brain waves are thus affected by a multitude of factors and agents, and can be deliberately influenced by a variety of chemical substances.

The temptation to draw from these observations certain far-reaching conclusions is great, and quite a few succumb. Because certain other far-reaching conclusions are associated with overactivity of the brain it is tempting to assume that the overactivity of the brain is the cause of abnormality.

On the basis of this assumption the further deduction is drawn that a drug which reduces the brain activity is suitable for the treatment of the malady under consideration. It is as if we have an hypnotic to a man who had a debt to pay but no money—and hence was excited and sleepless—and then argued that because he fell asleep, his debt was paid.

TRADE BETWEEN ARGENT AMERICA AND JAPAN WAS PARTLY A SHELL GAME

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

AP Science Editor

LAJOLLA, Calif. (AP)—California's top relative to the "shell game"—the world's biggest one—a key to present misfortune of man.

The abalone is a mollusk, which lives on tide-swept rocks. Its meat is one of California's table delicacies, its multiple-lord, one-lord, pearl shell the brightest part of "curio windows."

Over a trace in a blue mason jar, above the table, a pearl, pearl. When that happens, the gem is the rarest, most beautiful and most valuable of pearls. It may be bright blue, green, blue-black, tawny yellow and it may be shot through with flashes of red and crimson.

In Place, Pasewick, one of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography here, says in a report to the American Museum of Natural History, published in the journal, "Genetics," says that some of the most beautiful pearls found in statues of Buddha, made in Japan, in the year 600 A. D.

And size indicates he further reports, that these pearls probably came from California waters. Nothing else has been known to account for them.

Third Contest of Season to be Played at Roanoke Rapids

By SMUT BURKS

In their third contest of the year the undefeated basketball five of G. H. S. will travel to Roanoke Rapids Tuesday night to clash with the Yellow Jackets of Roanoke Rapids high school.

The Green Phantoms appear to be on a victory march which should not be halted by the Yellow Jackets. After showing considerable progress and improvement since Christmas the G-men have finally hit their stride and seem headed for a very successful campaign.

The Phantom basketeers pulled an upset when they completely baffled a highly-touted Y. M. C. A. team from Kankinapolis and won by a score of 26-10.

John Lautares, stellar guard of the Phantom quint, has been playing a superior brand of basketball since the season opened and is expected to lead the G-men to victory over the Jackets. Tracy Jordan, center mainstay, and George Sakas, tricky forward, are also showing up well in competition and should star in the game.

The game will be a Northeastern conference contest.

Japanese fishermen then, as today, roamed across the Pacific. But he thinks the pearls were shipped back to the Orient, in trade, by early peoples who migrated there from Asia. Their route, via the Behring strait, has been mapped by archeologists with evidence that it is thousands of years old.

Starts March of Dimes

Keith Morgan, Chairman of the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday, pins the first March of Dimes button on Arthur Carpenter, Director of Organization for the states of Tennessee, Kentucky and North and South Carolina. Mr. Carpenter received the first button during a call at national headquarters in New York City. All the states under his direction are solidly united in the March of Dimes campaign and in celebrations which will be held January 30 in honor of President Roosevelt's 57th birthday. Left to right, Arthur Carpenter and Keith Morgan.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—One truly fundamental change in the relief situation as it comes up once more can look at the problem with a greater degree of objectivity, without the need of damning or defending Harry Hopkins.

The change may bring calmer thinking in the search for solutions, even though the actual facts of relief are as difficult to dissolve as ever.

However just or unjust a great many Congressmen have suspected at least a trace of social work-racket in the setup, and Harry Hopkins, himself a social worker and chief of the WPA until recently has come to symbolize whatever was faulty in it. The report of the Senate Elections Committee scolded the WPA for what went on in Tennessee and Kentucky during the primaries.

These are only two states. Senators and representatives from other states have complaints, most of which they were eager to lay to Hopkins as he was the one public figure connected with WPA whose name meant something in the public prints.

Confidence in The Army

Now Hopkins is out of relief and in the cabinet. Replacing him is Colonel Francis C. Harrington, an Army engineer. So far as this correspondent's recollection goes, there is no branch of the government in which Congress places such trust as in the Army engineers. Probably President Roosevelt knew that too Congress has voted scores of millions for flood control and most members have been content simply to know that the Army engineers had placed an okay on the expenditures.

As for relief, the problems of 1933 still remain. Actual figures vary but the present 10,000,000 or more of unemployed is probably within two or three million of the 1933 peak. Costs of extending relief have advanced steadily, in part due to the greater exhaustion of the poor man's resources, and in part to the insistence of the administration that workers on relief were entitled to better than a subsistence wage.

As Col. Harrington took over, WPA rolls were near an all time peak at above 3,000,000. While WPA workers were moving into private industry at the rate of 200,000 a month, others were displaced and coming on the rolls at the rate of 300,000 a month as Congress met.

Now that Congressmen advocate outright termination of relief, but part and parcel of the relief theory has been that the expenditures pumped the pump of industry, creating more private jobs. This has been one of the arguments in support of maintaining the relief work relief in contrast with the half-as-ready direct relief. One reason of administration and congressional action still argues for continued pump priming but others, noting the persisting high unemployment levels, now doubt that it works so well.

Seek Big Income Jump

More than ever a search is being made to incite an increase in the national income from the present $5,000,000,000 level to something between $80,000,000,000 and $100,000,000,000 where it is considered necessary to the demand for help would be so great that only the utterly unemployed would remain on relief.

That is why, as the relief problem comes up for its ninth year Congress is locking to other ways of meeting the situation.

Already formal or informal attention has been given to such approaches as:

- Tax reduction rewards to companies with employ profit sharing plans.
- Similar awards to companies scrapping old machines for new with consequent stimulation of the heavy goods industries.
- Complete elimination of the corporate surplus profits tax.
- Reduction of upper bracket income tax rates.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL and LYNN NISBET

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, Jan. 9. The extent to which Senators W. B. Rodman, Jr. of Washington, and H. P. Taylor of Wadesboro dominate the Senate is indicated by the committee assignments of these two powerful figures.

The Beaufort county lawmaker heads Appropriations and is a member of no less than 19 other committees, including practically every single one of importance.

The Alston Senator is Finance chairman and a member of 14 other committees. Rodman ranks first, evidently, as he is a member of some from which Taylor was left out. The Rodman committees are, in addition to his chairmanship: Constitutional Amendments, Education, Election Laws, Manufacturing, Commerce and Labor, Commercial Fisheries, Unemployment Compensation, Trustees of the University of North Carolina, Water Commerce, Senatorial Districts, Insurance, Public Utilities, Public Welfare, Judiciary No. 1, Railroads, Rules, Military Affairs, Congressional Districts, Courts and Judicial Districts, and Consolidated Statutes.

Senator Taylor is omitted from Commercial Fisheries, Water Commerce, Senatorial Districts, Congressional Districts and Consolidated Statutes.

Wilmington's Emmett Bellamy makes no secret of his satisfaction at heading the Committee on Conservation and Development. He feels that his part of Southeastern North Carolina has been rather overlooked in expenditures along these lines.

Assignment of Mecklenburg's Joe Blythe to chairmanship of the public utilities committee was regarded as rather a fine one for a freshman member of the Senate.

Attendance of legislators at the Jackson Day dinner Saturday night was rather skimpy. The $25 per plate scared off the boys who have to live on what they get for making laws while at Raleigh. Attendance at the reception tendered by Governor and Mrs. Hoey Thursday night however, was large. That was free.

Although they have not yet attracted much attention in the House, two of the most colorful members—if past experience can be credited as prophetic—are Marvin Rich of Charlotte and U. S. Page of Bladen. The fact that these two representatives are among the few staying at the Grand Hotel, while most of the others live at the Sir Walter and Carolina, may be another instance of birds of a feather flocking together. Most likely the main reason that neither has started on his customary rampage is the presence with them of their wives.

It was learned today that the Department of Agriculture requested appointment on the Senate committee on agriculture of Senator W. A. Graham of Lincoln, whose defeat for commission of agriculture two years ago was thought by some to have influenced him to run for the Senate so he might retaliate against his successor. Thirteen years as head of the state department should provide Mr. Graham with valuable knowledge, and if he had not been a freshman senator he probably would have been given consideration as chairman of the committee.

There were not enough legislators left in Raleigh Saturday morning to provide a courteous audience for an address by Governor Chandler of Kentucky, and since the governor addressed both houses separately Friday, the legislators providing for a joint session to hear him Saturday was just logical.

Elimination of tax-exempt securities to block this "escape" for lazy or nervous capital. But when Congress ends there will be a WPA — with money to spend.

Experts Place Chief Hope For U. S. Defense On Battleships

But Nazi Strength Seen As Warrant For More Planes

By ALEXANDER B. GEORGE (AP Feature Service Writer)

Washington — Although huge military air fleets capture the headlines these days, the two great oceans plus a powerful navy remain the backbone of United States defense.

In other words, military experts agree that the battleship is still monarch of the seas. But they point out that a superior air fleet could turn the tide in a battle of other-wise quite evenly matched naval forces.

Advocates of a gigantic air force for the Army say it is needed because of European powers increased plane strength and the definite inclusion of South America's vast coastline in our own defense zone.

Germany, the No. 1 air power, is credited with at least 10,000 modern planes with Italy second at 6,000. Army officers say the current U. S. air program of 2,300 planes for the army and 3,000 for the Navy might be adequate for defense needs today but at the rate Germany is turning out planes—an average of $500 a month during 1938—it may be very inadequate within a year or two.

These officers insist that the best insurance against war is both an air force and a Navy second to none. It might be too late, they say, to produce such an air fleet after an emergency developed.

The oceans remain, however, a powerful natural defense.

On a smaller sea—like the Mediterranean—land-based bombing ships may challenge the war might of the battleship, but over the vast expanses of the Atlantic or Pacific airplanes are not capable of effective operation independent of war vessels.

Planes need convenient bases, floating or fixed, for repairs, refueling and reloading with ammunition. And it takes to dreadnoughts and their sister surface ships to maintain and protect those bases.

A large invading air fleet alone, even assuming it could hop a wide ocean span, could not hope to hold island or coast bases against our naval air and land forces. On the other hand, a powerful American air armada by itself, could not keep a strong invading naval land and air expedition from establishing bases for raids on American shipping and for bombing excursions against vital centers.

Can Plane Sink Ship?
Our No. 1 objective in a war with an overseas power would be control of vital shipping lanes to insure the supply of necessary raw materials.

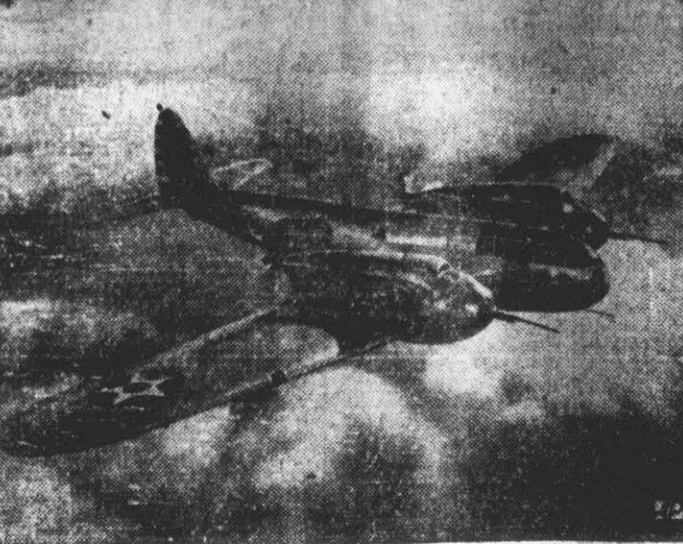

To do this requires primarily an all-round superior battle fleet. Aircraft alone hammered by various factors couldn't do it.

There is still a question about the ability of an airplane bomb to sink a modern battleship.

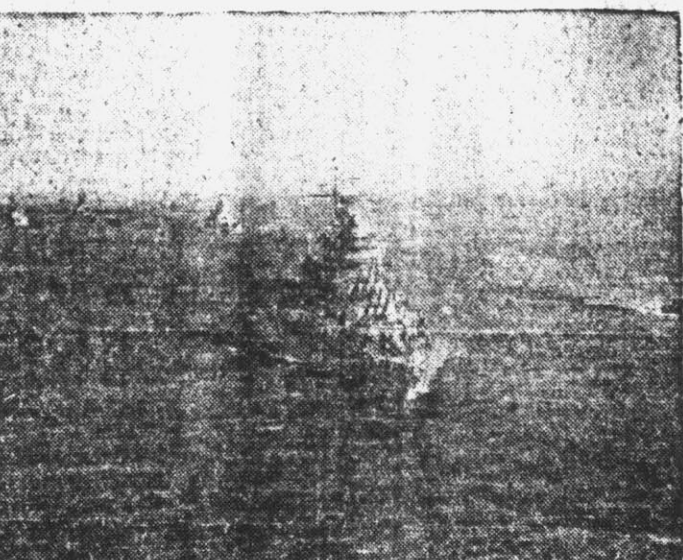

Read Admiral A. B. Cook, the Navy's high ranking air officer, says "It must be conceded that an armored ship can be destroyed if struck a sufficient number of times in the right places by large enough bombs."

But Admirals Cook points out that "destruction of warships is not so simple as that."

First, he says, the cloud ceiling

Expansion of the flying force probably would mean the addition of many air fortresses like the new six-gun combat ship. Despite the vast improvement in air armament, however, experts say planes alone cannot protect the coast or keep the sea lanes open.

Because the big battleships of Uncle Sam's fleet can hold a post at any threatened point—carrying enough ammunition to do effective battle when the enemy comes—experts say the navy is the most important U. S. defense bulwark.

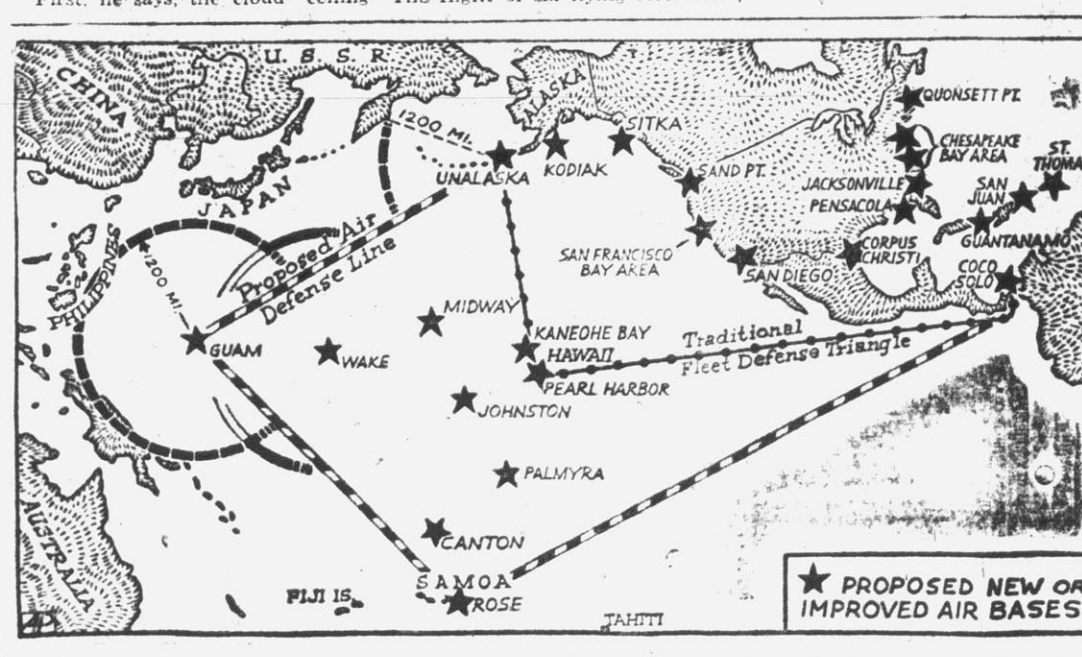

from this country to Buenos Aires a year ago showed that U. S. planes could arrive in South America in force within a few days to resist a threatened attack.

WANT ADS PAY

The authorities agree that a powerful air armada can be a great help to the best fleet—particularly if they have strategic bases from which to operate. This map shows how the special naval committee demonstrated that belief in its recent report. Eight new bases were recommended for "earliest completion" in the mid-Pacific and Alaska. They would establish a new defense line. Bombers based at each could make a 2400-mile round trip.

They Threw Him In With the Mortgage!

By CHIC YOUNG

'NEW YEAR'S LOVE'

by Angela Lorden

The Characters
 Noel Marchand, a beautiful young actress.
 Allan Collings, the man she loves.
 David Norris, her fiancé.

Yesterday, Allan is injured seriously in an automobile accident.

Chapter 22 'I'm Jealous'

ON the doctor's assurance there would be no change in Allan's condition for hours, Noel suggested to Mrs. Marchand they return to New York.

"You can rest for a few hours and come back later today," Noel urged Allan's mother. The older woman was loath to leave the hospital even for a moment.

"Would they permit me to stay here? Could I get a room in the building? He might waken while I'm not here." The tired voice was pleading pitifully. Noel made inquiries at the office. The hospital officials suggested an inn down the road.

David's car, driven by Jackson, was waiting at the hospital exit. They stopped at the inn, reserved a room for Mrs. Marchand and Noel arranged to have the driver bring back things the older woman would be needing.

"I'll call you later," Noel kissed her friend goodby. "You've been so brave; now you must rest—you'll need strength for Allan. He'd want you to take care of yourself."

Noel realized how exhausted she was when she sank back, alone in the comfortable seat, as they drove into New York. Her eyes burned in their sockets, her head was wracked with pain. Her body felt as though she'd been beaten severely. Even then she was thinking of Allan—hoping for his recovery—seeing him again, lying helpless in the hospital bed.

Back in her suite, Noel ordered hot milk and took a warm bath. She had a performance tonight. No matter how tragic her thoughts, she must be there, ready! Eventually she fell into a deep troubled slumber and when the telephone awakened her, it was late afternoon.

"I wondered if you were there," David's voice was saying. There was admonition, and a little self-pity in his tone.

"Yes, I left there early this morning. Mrs. Marchand's staying down. Allan's condition is still serious."

"At least there is hope," David said with conventional solicitude—nothing more. Noel knew he resented her attitude last night. But there was nothing reassuring she could tell him—she was still absorbed in her worry about Allan.

And now that she was awake, she was anxious to conclude the conversation so she could call the hospital in Westbury.

"I'll talk with you later, after I've dressed," Noel promised David and abruptly hung up. Without hesitating she asked the operator to get her Dr. Gaston's hospital.

"Has Mr. Collings' condition changed?" she asked nervously. The cool impersonal voice at the other end replied, "We're not giving out any information."

"But I must find out—please connect me with the third floor desk!" She was so insistent, the attendant at the other end finally put her through.

"This is Noel Marchand," she explained to the woman who answered. "How is Mr. Collings?" Another delay as Noel was told, "Just a moment, I'll call his nurse."

Again Noel gave her name and repeated her anxious question. "He's been sleeping this afternoon," came the cryptic report. "There's no change since this morning."

Elaine's Father
 SHE called David back later. He was out. And he didn't come to the theater that evening. Noel knew he was angry. Well, she couldn't blame him. But that didn't change her emotions.

Nor did she let David know she was returning to Westbury next morning. She ordered a taxi and was on her way by nine o'clock. She didn't dare telephone first—she was afraid the news might be discouraging.

"Good morning, Noel!" Mrs. Marchand, talking to a tall white-haired man greeted Noel in the corridor outside Allan's door. Her voice and the bright look in her eyes gave Noel assurance.

"Allan's doing better than they expected." The haggard look was gone from the lovely face that had seemed so aged yesterday. Then she introduced the man to Noel.

"This is Elaine's father, Miss Marchand."

Noel felt the appraising glance of the keen eyes fixed on her. "How do you do?" he offered. Noel knew he was trying to place her, wondering what relation she might be. Mrs. Marchand realized, too, for she explained, "Noel is a dear friend of ours, Mr. Corey."

He evidently took for granted she was a friend of his daughter's also. "Poor Elaine!" he exclaimed. "She's collapsed completely. We took her home last night. She's so worried about Allan."

Noel couldn't answer him. She didn't feel like being polite about Elaine. After all, Elaine had suffered only slight injuries—she'd been driving the car! And Allan was the one who had suffered.

"He's not allowed any visitors," Mrs. Marchand repeated the orders as Noel asked if she might see Allan. "They say he needs all his strength now, and he might be excited."

"I understand," Noel tried to hide her disappointment. She realized the wisdom of the edict.

"If there's anything I can do—Mr. Corey held out his hand. "I'll go along now."

"Thank you," was all Mrs. Marchand replied. To Noel she suggested, "Would you like to come back to the inn with me for a few moments?"

She placed her arm in Noel's. Out in the brisk morning air they walked slowly down the quiet road. "You've been wonderful, Noel," Allan's mother tried to express her gratitude. "I don't know what I'd have done without you—and Mr. Norris."

They had a light breakfast in Mrs. Marchand's room. Noel had to coax her friend to drink the orange juice and finish her toast. "I don't like to think of you here alone," she objected.

"I've sent for Annie—she's coming down here today. I don't need the others now—they're kind, but the Coreys wanted me to stay with them. I'd rather be here. It's nearer."

Noel understood why Elaine Schuyler would want that. She realized the girl must be blaming herself for Allan's accident. "The papers said last night they were to be married soon," Noel said quietly, giving no indication of how reading the words had affected her before she went to bed. She knew she was inconsistent, but that made it no easier.

"Allan didn't tell me, but I've been expecting it," Mrs. Marchand admitted reluctantly. "I can't say I'm pleased, but I want him to be happy." Tears came to her eyes. "First of all I want him to get better soon, my poor darling."

So Meaningless
 POOR darling, not mine—Noel's heart answered. "And he will" the words from her lips were calm and convincing.

She left soon after that. There was nothing more she could do. She hated returning to New York—and David's recriminations. She expected them.

David called her after luncheon. "How do you feel, dear?" he asked as though nothing had happened. "I've got you home with me."

"I promised the Swanstroms," she apologized. "Anita is leaving for Hollywood tomorrow and she wanted to see me."

"Then I'll see you after the play," David compromised. "I'll call for you."

"Life must go on. Noel thought, if it all seemed so meaningless. "The parts you've played in the past are poor companions when you're lonely," a famous actress had once said to her.

"You look like the devil," Anita said to her brusquely when she went to the Swanstroms' apartment. Douglas was dressing, to join them. "What's the matter? Have you quarreled with David?"

Anita wanted to know. "Of course not!" Noel was emphatic. "But I haven't been sleeping well." She wondered how much Anita knew, or guessed.

The dinner wasn't completely successful. Swanstrom was sulking because his wife was going away. Anita was in a high mood, anticipating a triumphant return to the scenes of her struggles. Noel's thoughts were on Allan. The latest reports from the hospital were merely, "He's getting along nicely." That might mean anything.

"You look tired," David said when he met her at the stage door. "What's the matter?" Noel asked. "You're not a lot later."

Noel rebuked him. "You can't expect me to be on the crest of a wave after that taxing performance."

"It's more than that," David was in a rare angry mood. "If it were only your work—"

"I'm not girded for battle, if that's what you want," Noel pulled her arm away from his clasp. Then she said as quickly, "I'm sorry, David."

He didn't suggest going anywhere. He directed Jackson to Noel's hotel. In the lobby he was humbly asking, "May I come up for a few moments?"

Noel wanted to send him away. "All right," she agreed after hesitation. But in her living-room, she moved away from his attempted embrace, impatiently.

"I was right," David flung at her. "You're so busy worrying about Allan Collings, you haven't a thought for me!"

Noel stared at him in amazement. His face was flushed, his eyes were blazing. "Why not?" she asked calmly.

"All right—I'm jealous! You dash out to him in the middle of the night, you go to pieces when you hear he's been injured. Yet you resent it, when I object." His tone was bitter. "After all, you're only going to marry me."

Noel faced him. Her own eyes held fire. She was a figure of fury. "You asked for it, David," she flung at him. "I love Allan Collings!"

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker
 New York—This is a portrait of a man becomes lost in the woods a lady. All of you know who she is. Many of you have seen her. It may be that some of you are in love with her, or have been.

I will admit that I have felt that way too, at times. I have walked by her side under the stars. I have held hands with her in the rain. I have gone to sleep with my head in her lap.

But maybe I shouldn't be saying all this. It isn't very nice to kiss and tell, is it? No, it isn't. But sometimes there are extenuating circumstances, and when this is true one is apt to say silly things. And do silly things. I mean, when I have gazed into this jade's eyes and searched for many things I have not always found them. But they are beautiful, her eyes. Come to think of it, I can't tell you what color they are. Nor can I remember the color of her hair, though I have touched it with my hand. I have felt it brush true one is apt to say silly things. And do silly things. I mean, when tries to her and picked up the rose that fell from her hair. I must tell you that girl is inconsistent. She is as changeable as the wind, and therefore interesting. Of course she vexes you. There are moments when you could strangle her. But she is too fascinating to be angry with for long. I think the key to this fascination may be her voice. A woman's voice is so important. It is the show window of her personality. This voice is so lovely that even when you know she is lying you are fascinated by it. Just the sound of it makes everything all right. No matter how many half-truths she utters you think you are the only guy in the world. It is not until the next day or the next week when you are walking along some quiet street or gazing into the bathroom mirror, shaving, that you suddenly rear back on your dignity and mutter, "Damn her, she's she's kidding me!" And if you are shaving you wipe the blood off your chin, for you always cut yourself at this point, and then you rant about for a while, but you get over it.

BUDGET MESSAGE FEATURE OF ASSEMBLY'S SECOND WEEK

prations will be based on estimated receipts which include at least $4,000,000 of funds from the gasoline tax - a sum which will be called "diversion" by some and "application of the sales tax to gasoline sales" by others, including the Governor.

Appropriations recommended for school purposes will go upward by some $3,000,000 for the biennium, this is under the regular appropriations for the regular teachers salary increments, the proposed half increments for nine and ten-year teachers, and the establishment of the twelfth grade. Recommendations for highway appropriations will include funds to pay fifty additional patrolmen and for an educational highway safety campaign, this last getting probably $50,000 possibly less, but certainly no more.

There will be no radical changes in the ordinary operating budgets of the various state departments, with some of them taking slight cuts in total appropriations largely because of the fact that they have been moved into state buildings and will not have rent to pay. The Department of Agriculture sought considerably higher appropriations for a marketing program and will likely get at least part of what it asked. This was indicated by the Governor's statement that marketing is the outstanding problem of North Carolina agriculture.

There is not likely to be any marked increase in the recommended expenditures for the state's share of the Social Security program (old age assistance and dependent children's benefits), although there is some chance that real efforts will be made in the Assembly to curtail the administration of these funds under the State, thereby making payments uniform in the 100 counties, where as they now run from below $5 per month to more than $15.

On the whole the Budget report is certain to follow the Governor's philosophy, expressed in his address to the Assembly, that economy in government is still a virtue. It will give substantial increases to certain vital agencies, but will surely not embark the state on an ambitious spending program likely to throw its balance into any unsettled state.

'LOTS OF LUCK -- I HOPE IT WON'T BE LONG'

Immediately after he was pardoned by California's Gov. Culbert L. Olson, Tom Mooney (right) rushes to Folsom prison to see Warren K. Billings (left) convicted with Preparedness. Day bombing. Mooney, who had promised to fight for him: "Lots of luck, and I hope it won't be long until we're out there together."

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Jan. 9. (AP)—Efforts to rally the stock market today met with a cool reception and leading issues backed down fractions to more than two points.

A selective recovery move after the opening was short-lived and offerings expanded sufficiently to speed up the ticker tape for a while. There was a subsequent slow-down, but few comebacks were in evidence near the fourth hour.

Trading floors on the whole appeared a bit skeptical of the administration's spending program getting through congress as outlined in the President's budget message and talk of "deflation" in the event "pump-priming" should be drastically curtailed was believed to have acted as a market deterrent.

Bonds and commodities were spotted throughout. The Paris Bourse closed weak but London was steady. Sterling and the French franc were off in terms of the dollar.

WHAT IT MEANS

But, if the tension drops off, and the dictator countries and Japan mark time, while consolidating gains, then the Republicans will have the edge, because more attention will be paid to domestic affairs.

The administration strategy seems to be based on the belief that world events and violence are etching a deeper impression on the public mind than is apparent to the unpracticed eye.

Advisers must have figured that more disorder in the world will create more interest here in American foreign policy and adequate national defense.

Good Old Days

On the other hand, the Republicans seem to find their inspiration in the results of the November election. They discern in their gains a desire by John Q. Citizen to return to a balanced budget, to cut relief and other spending, and to end experiments in government.

Speculate on Appointments

and professional courses for Negroes possible plans to increase tuition charges and similar legislation.

There was little legislative gossip except about probable house committee appointments and the budget message to be read in each house.

Martin Speaks

Now listen to the recent plea for the "good old days" from Joe Martin, the new minority leader in the House for the Republicans.

"One of the November election," said Martin, "there came, at least one clear mandate. The people want the 76th Congress to be a real legislative body - an independent Congress which will do its own thinking, and will put the welfare of the country ahead of the selfish aspirations of individuals or parties."

Palmer's Bill First Drive for Lower License Fees

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, Jan. 9.—Bill of Senator A. A. Palmer (Cabarrus) to levy a fixed rate of $5 for all passenger automobile tags was only the first shot in a campaign to lower motor vehicle tags.

Within a few days, at most, another measure will go into the legislative hopper proposing that the same uniform $5 rate be levied on tags for "farm to market" trucks, as well as on passenger vehicles.

Sponsor and chief lobbyist for his bill will be the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation which some weeks ago adopted lower tag fees as one of its prime legislative objectives.

E. P. Arnold, Federation executive secretary, admits that he does not know just how far the state is going in the matter of losing revenue from lower tag fees, but he contends that sale of tags primarily for revenue purposes is wrong in principle. Tags ought to be he feels, for identification purposes only, with highway revenues coming from those who use the roads. The gasoline tax, he says, is the fairest of all.

Mr. Arnold points out that under the present system the owner of a passenger car who drives only two or three thousand miles a year pays the same as the commercial traveler who travels perhaps a hundred thousand miles in a year. Also the small farmer with a light truck which he uses only to haul his own crops to market, pays the same tag fee as a commercial house which uses its truck every day in the year.

In view of the state's pressing problem of how to meet expected appropriations and in view of the crying need of the state's roads, both primary and secondary, for improvement, it is very doubtful that any measure for lower tag rates has much chance of passage, but the fight will be made just the same.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 9.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened six to 12 points decline. Lower Liverpool cables and selling from that source more than offset a little trade buying in near months.

Around 11 a. m., the list showed net declines of three to nine points. At midday the list was eight to 11 points net lower with July at 7.84 and March 8.33.

Richmond Livestock

(Courtesy J. N. and J. L. Williams)
Richmond, Jan. 9.—Hogs: receipts moderate; market 15 cents higher, quoting 160 to 225 lbs. good and choice gilts and barrows top $7.80, 140 to 160 pounds $7.50, 120 to 140 lbs. $6.80; 225 to 250 lbs. $7.55. Sows under 350 pounds $1.50 under top, or $6.30; over 350 pounds, $6.05.

Cattle: a light run all last week. Market steady, mostly cows and bulls but a few steers. Quoting sales - cows $3.25 to $6, the top for strictly best butcher cows. Bulls $4 to $6, a few at $6.25; common steers $5.50 to $6.50; medium steers $7 to $7.50; good heavies with considerable finish to $8.50. Extreme top best at $9. Dealers just steady at $10, the week's practical top.
