MEMBERS MAY REVEAL ACTION OF COMMITTEE

Senate Military Group Not To Be Bound By Secrecy

NOT TO APPLY TO DEFENSE PLANS

North Carolinians Figure Prominently in Day's Developments at Capitol

Washington, Feb. 10.—(AP)—The Senate Military committee agreed today to permit members to make public all information they obtain in future closed sessions, except military secrets.

It voted down, however, a motion to hold open hearings on the administration's current defense program and defeated by an eight to eight tie a motion by Senator Austin (R-Vt.) to hold open hearings on future bills.

It postponed until Monday action on a motion by Senator Clark (D-Mo.) to make public the record of its investigation of the proposed sale of the latest type of military planes to France.

Senator Austin said he interpreted the action to mean that committee members would be free to discuss with newspapermen all that has taken place in committee rooms in closed session except matters involving military secrets.

The vote on Austin's motion for open hearings in the future included an ave of Senator Reynolds (D-N.C.).

Both Senate and House recess today, but committees were busy.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company assured the Federal Monopolies committee through counsel that in future elections of directors company agents would not use the names of policy holders to ballots.

Other developments: Harry McMullan, attorney general of North Carolina, told a Senate committee a federal law on state and municipal bonds would force North Carolina to raise at least $2,000,000 additional revenue annually.

In a statement prepared for delivery before the Senate Finance committee studying the proposal, McMullan said by conservative estimates federal tax would increase the state and local government interest costs on a $515,900,000 public indebtedness in North Carolina.

Solicitor D. M. Clark said today he was opposed to a bill offered by Rep. S. O. Worthington of Pitt county and which already has passed the house, which would change two Spring terms of court from general to civil.

The bill would set both terms for trying of civil cases only. Solicitor Clark said he opposed the change on the grounds that by leaving the courts as they are now scheduled one or both of the terms, or part of each, could be devoted to criminal cases.

Mr. Clark previously had stated he desired at least one of the terms of the general April term to be devoted to criminal cases as there were a number of cases on the docket which will take at least two days or more to complete.

Washington, Feb. 10.—(AP)—President Roosevelt was ordered, to remain in bed today for treatment of what was described as a "light touch of gripe."

BATH CLAIMS HOLY FATHER

POPE PIUS, XI

Peace-Loving Pope Pius Dies of Cardiac Asthma

Approaching his 82nd birthday anniversary on May 31, he had been ill since Tuesday of cardiac asthma which caused death, although he had weakened gradually in general health since a severe illness in December, 1936, and another attack November 25, last year.

Dr. A. Milan, called from a sickbed, nodded that the end had come at 5:31 a. m. for the "Pope of peace" on the fifth day of the 18th year since his election as head of the Catholic church.

During the administration of the last rites witnesses said they saw the Pope's lips move.

Some close to him thought they heard his say:

"Our last rites, like those of all mortals, Saint Therese of the Infant Jesus are here to us. God is merciful. May His will be done."

Saint Therese, whom Pius canonized, was the Saint to whom he had entrusted his health.

Death came while the Holy Father was preparing to embark upon a new task—an extraordinary address tomorrow to all Italian bishops on the tenth anniversary of the Lat-ran accord with Italy—by which he became the first Pope in 59 years to emerge from the Vatican walls.

Although there had been speculation on the possibility of a foreign cardinal being elected Pope, Vatican prelates forecast that Pius' successor would be an Italian in accordance with the centuries of tradition.

Ten Per Cent Not Voting.

Hutchinson, Kas.—(AP)—Teen age boys of the Hutchinson high school recently expressed their preference on blondes and brunettes. They voted 52 per cent for the dark girls; 29 per cent for light ones. Ten per cent said they got along very well without any girls.

College Takes Up Fight For Levy On Fertilizer

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—In the "memoranda of disagreements" filed by representatives of State College and the State Department of Agriculture, with the joint legislative committee, State College makes request for either five cents or ten cents a ton additional "inspection tax" on fertilizer and feeds, the proceeds of such tax to be turned over to the central experiment station for research work.

The imposition of an additional ten cents a ton tax for development of an adequate market system was asked early in the session by Commissioner of Agriculture Kerr Scott. This week Mr. Scott withdrew his support from this request, on the ground that there had developed so much argument over duplication of efforts that he did not believe an adequate marketing system could be attained. He did not say so, but the impression was that he did not propose to be left in position of asking an extra tax, having to collect it, and then find it turned over to some other agency to expend for purposes which he did not entirely approve.

In the memoranda filed yesterday State College asked for the tax, which still would have to be collected by Commissioner Scott's department, but they ask that it be turned over to the college to spend on agriculture were meeting in joint session to receive reports of the "technical experts" representing the college and the department, which the joint committee had requested the week before. Three reports were filed. One covered the points on which both departments are in accord. This was based closely upon the memorandum of agreement signed by the commissioner and the dean of agriculture a year ago. It was admitted that in general the college should do the research.

SPEEDY PEACE FORECAST FOR WAR IN SPAIN

Premier Negrin, However, Goes To Central Zone

BRITAIN HOPES TO END STRIFE

Surrender of Madrid, Valencia Area Within Few Days Predicted by Franco Rebels

Madrid, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Premier Negrin arrived today in the central zone of Spain, all that is left in Government possession, for the avowed purpose of carrying on resistance to insurgent General Franco.

Negrin was accompanied by his foreign Minister, Julio Del Vayo, and several other members of his cabinet.

His whereabouts were not immediately disclosed.

London, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Great Britain dispatched proposals to insurgent Spain today in the hope of bringing a speedy end to the Civil war, with the best possible terms for the remaining Government defenders—and to the London-Paris "axis."

Sir Robert Hodgson, British agent at Burgos, the insurgent capital, left to return to his post, where he is due Sunday. In London he received instructions on Britain's attitude and her proposals to General Franco and is expected to push efforts for a peace favorable to Britain.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the house of Commons he would give members a statement Monday on the visit of the British Cruiser Devonshire to Minorca, February 7-9.

Perpignan, France, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Peace in Spain within a few days was foreseen today by supporters of insurgent General Franco.

After the insurgent's double victory yesterday in reaching Franco's eastern Pyrenean frontier and taking the Mediterranean island of Minorca, the surrender of the Madrid-Valencia zone, the last territory left to the Spanish Government was confidently predicted.

Franco's Minister of the Interior Ramon Sener, said in Barcelona: "I hope we shall not be long in announcing new and definite successes which will cause joy for all."

Despite denials from the Government side and spirited protests of determination to carry on the war, insurgent sources said General Miaja, dictator of the Madrid-Valencia zone, already was negotiating with Franco for a peace agreement.

The date of February 18 has been suggested for the surrender of the central zone.

To Organize Club For Local Women

Mrs. Hugh Ragsdale was named temporary chairman at a meeting in Sheppard Memorial library last night called for the purpose of organizing a Business and Professional Women's club in Greenville.

Because of the bad weather the attendance was smaller than had been anticipated, but the interest of those present indicated that organization plans would proceed and that a permanent club would be established here in the near future.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. David Proctor, chairman, Mrs. Hilda Rowlette and Mrs. Margie D. Warren, was named to submit nominations at a meeting to be held next Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock.

The meeting last night was presided over by Mrs. Proctor. Among those who explained the purpose and aims of the club were Mrs. Dess M. Gurganus of Raleigh, president of the North Carolina Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs; Miss Velma Beam of Greensboro, chairman of the state membership committee; and Miss Elizabeth Clark of Wilson, director from the sixth district.

All business and professional women in the city are urged to attend next Thursday night's meeting, when officers will be elected and the club established on a permanent basis. Membership is open both to single and married women.

WAIFS OF WAR FIND HAVEN IN FRANCE

These pathetic waifs of the Spanish civil war, children of Loyalist cause supporters, had found a haven in France by the time victorious Insurgent troops completed their conquest of Catalonia by planting their flag on the Spanish side of the French-Spanish border at Le Perthus. They are shown at Perpignan, France.

Jap Action Evokes Fears Of International Friction

COL. FLANAGAN RENEWS FIGHT

Hurries to Raleigh to Uphold Slot Machine Act

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—Former State Senator Ed Flanagan of Pitt county is here in Raleigh, determined to prevent, if humanly possible, any indirect or flank attack on the anti-slot machine act which bears his name, and which he steered through the 1937 Assembly in the face of the most tremendous lobby pressure.

He has been thoroughly aroused by action of the Finance committee in declining to adopt an amendment offered to the new slot machine tax, and he makes no bones about the fact that he is here for the one and express purpose of working for adoption of this amendment, offered by former Speaker Gregg Cherry in committee.

The Cherry amendment provides in plain, simple, unmistakable language that nothing in the new Revenue Act shall be construed to repeal any part of the Flanagan act.

The one-time legislator from Pitt said today that there is absolutely no reason why the Cherry amendment should be objectionable to anyone unless there is in fact an underground and underhanded effort being made to undermine the Flanagan act.

He recalled vividly that in 1935 the legislature passed an anti-slot act, then sat back complacently and passed a revenue act which muddled the legal waters to such an extent that one-armed bandits continued to operate throughout the state.

He frankly distrusts anything and everything which even remotely smacks of slot support, and is double on his guard by reason of the fact that Attorney General Harry McMullan hasn't given any written opinion on the matter. He has learned that the section as submitted in the committee, with the alleged approval of the A. G., is not, in fact, written in the same language as the section as submitted to Mr. McMullan for an opinion.

In short, Mr. Flanagan feels that nothing and nobody connected with slot machines even in a remote way is to be trusted. He's on guard and plans to remain so.

Auto Owners Warned Get Tags By Feb. 15

Assistant Chief of Police J. L. Whichard, in the absence of Chief George Clark who is ill, warned Greenville automobile owners today that unless they had their city license tags on their automobiles by February 15 they would be subject to arrest and prosecution.

Police headquarters warned some time ago that the deadline would be set in the near future. A person arrested for not having a city tag faces the costs of court, in addition to the cost of the plate and the possibility of a fine.

SCHOOL FUNDS CUT $241,413 BY COMMITTEE

Rep. Worthington Of Pitt Proposed Reduction

PLANS DEFEATED FOR 12TH GRADE

Question of An Additional Increment For Teachers Left Up to State School Group

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—(AP)—The joint Appropriations committee this afternoon reduced by $241,413 the Budget Commission's recommendations for public schools for 1939-41.

The allotment left it with the State School Commission as to whether another increment is added for teachers.

The figures tentatively adopted were: $25,850,000 for 1939-40 and $26,600,000 for 1940-41. The budget recommended $25,941,313 and $26,750,000.

There were only two votes cast for an allotment to provide a 12th grade and a ninth and tenth increment for teachers. Governor Hoey recommended the additions and Representative Wallace of Johnston made a ringing speech, including quotations from the Hoey messages, asking for the allotments. Only Butler of Burke voted with him.

There were 10 votes on the committee for the proposal by Wilson of Forsyth that the ninth and tenth increments be specifically provided.

Chairman Rodman of Beaufort told the committee that the allotments adopted, proposed by Worthington of Pitt, allowed $1,650,000 to be used by the School Commission in paying new teachers and making salary adjustments.

After a brief business meeting, presided over by the chairman, Mrs. K. T. Futrell, the meeting was turned over to the program leader, Miss Stella Grogan.

Miss Grogan in her charming manner, ably reviewed "Wild Geese" by Martha Ostenso. The book is one of the most colorful of its kind. The story takes place in Minnesota, where golden grains make up most of its industry. In such a golden setting all the world should be golden. This, however, is not the case. The battle of wits and hatred make sharp contrast which adds interest to the book. The author has given every character in "Wild Geese" a depth that is impressive. The great trumpet call of the honking geese, a remote trailing shadow through solitude, the sound of rushing wind over spreading wings help make the book a gripping story. Miss Grogan vividly portrayed the story, revealed the thoughts and motives of the characters in a manner that carried her listeners away on the thread of the story.

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Galloway, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Galloway, Jr., Mrs. J. W. Williams and Miss Eva Keeter, served delicious refreshments with a suggestion of the Valentine season.

The program will begin at eight o'clock.

Senior Play At College.
The senior play at East Carolina Teachers College, "Children of the Moon," by Marvin Flavin, scheduled for tomorrow night, Feb. 11, and Monday night, Feb. 13, will be one of the most ambitious productions ever carried out by the student-director, Clifton Britton, in three years he has been on the E. C. T. C. campus.

It is a tragedy showing the power of suggestion when a neurotic mother determined to break up the engagement of her one daughter and center that daughter's affections on herself at any cost, implants in the girl's mind the fear of hereditary madness.

Miss Nancy Page of Trenton, takes the exacting role of the daughter, with Bruce Harrison of Chicago, as the lover, and Miss Helen McGinnis takes the part of the mother who makes the tragedy inevitable.

Sidney Mason of Bath, is the grandfather who is a living example of the "moon madness" of the Athertons. Playing opposite him as the grandmother is Miss Sarah Bristol of Statesville.

The set used for the play was designed and built almost entirely by students, two miniature sets having been worked out in a class in stagecraft before actual construction of the large one was attempted. Sound effects and lighting have been carefully thought out in the expectation that they will contribute their part to make the play a finished production.

'No Trading' Measure Passes State Senate

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—Senator Gordon Gray of Forsyth made perhaps his longest speech of the session yesterday in explaining the changes made in the bill prohibiting state institutions from engaging in mercantile business in competition with taxpayers.

'Mr. X' Identified

This well educated, elderly man, a victim of amnesia, who was listed only as "Mr. X" on the records of the Mississippi State hospital near Jackson for nearly eight years, has been identified by relatives as William H. Lawrence, former insurance salesman of Birmingham, Ala. He was found in a daze on the streets of Jackson in 1931.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

by GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

The Characters Peter Mallonee: Adventurous young journalist. Petronella: His loyal sister.

Yesterday, Petrel receives a letter from the Russian government asking ransom for their relatives.

Chapter 21 Good Excuse

PETER'S boss told Petrel, "If Peter still wants to go to Russia, this looks like a good excuse for going. It will give him the personal touch with the real Russia, which we need. He can take the ransom money along with him."

"Russia! She was both glad, and afraid.

"Now I'm going to talk to you like a father, Petrel. Peter is shaping well. Between you and me, very well. But now don't get angry, I'm not denying he is a bright boy—but it is lucky for him he has such a good secretary! Don't argue," she silenced her protest. "I have to say this. It is my excuse for sending him on this errand, when I know you'll go with him, that I am somehow a rattling good combination. I've liked the stories he has sent me, from the minute you two joined up, in Vienna. I don't know how he does it, but he always seems to discover something fresh, which other correspondents don't. And, heaven knows how, you help him to convey it in a manner that will pass the censor. He finds you pretty useful, my dear. Don't think I don't know the difference between your typing and his. And I know who wires corrections, when he has grossly exaggerated, or made mistakes. I know the only reason he wasn't shown the Yugoslavian back door after that 'March' incident." Petronella flushed. She could not deny that she worked hard. It was true. But she had not expected this acknowledgment.

"Peter would never believe how strict the censorship was," she admitted. Martin Rowdon was helpful, a good friend. She did not feel that his criticism of Peter would affect his future assistance in Peter's career.

"Other people warned me," she told him. "We received verbal warning, that his correspondence was not to the liking of the authorities. Our telephone was tapped, continuously. I cut one wire. The next day there was another under the carpet. We were followed by a little man with a red nose. I had to let Peter out at my hairdresser's back entrance, to shake him off. But Peter does everything that matters." Rowdon nodded.

"Masters of the Echo tells me you have learned to ride a motor cycle. He said that one of Peter's dispatches got across the frontier, when he was drinking in the hotel bar, and couldn't stir because he was being shadowed. A lot of successful men have exceptional secretaries!" he grinned. He sat, studying Petrel Mallonee curiously. From the girl he had first known, had grown this slender, wise, nearly beautiful young woman. She did and saw a great deal, but tried to remain in the background of her brother's career. He liked that, immensely. But was it right? Was it not possible that she herself would make a unique correspondent? She had seen ugly things. But she made no fuss. She had imagination, but controlled it. When Peter, her beloved brother was on a job, she would not hinder him. She did not ask for it, but he felt bound to give her the opportunity of a personal career, personal triumphs.

Very Blind Spots "PETER smells news all right. His stuff is good. He is a born journalist. But we both know that, along with brilliance, Peter has some very blind spots."

She did not answer. He went on. "That is why, though I know, I ought to be dissuading you, I'm glad you'll be with him in Soviet Russia. Up till now it has been experience for you; grimmer than I like the idea of a girl of your age encountering, but nevertheless, something of an education. This may be different. But since you're so game for adventure—"

Petronella smiled. "Yes?" If only he knew, she thought secretly amused. He visualized her as adventurous. Actually she was such a coward! She would have given almost anything not to go to Russia. Anything, except the opportunity, for Peter. She was horribly afraid. She wanted to stay in Ballfield. To idle the days away, at peace. To try, once more, to fall in love with James, who had not found any other girl while she had been away. But Peter would be thrilled by the chance of going. She remembered, suddenly, that Tony might still be in Russia. She might meet him again? Anyway, it would be useless to imagine she would have any peace, if Peter went alone. But life was forcing this choice upon her. It was not her own.

"See here, Petrel, you may find you get hard up, paying this ransom, and traveling so often. Why don't you try writing me some little things? Articles or life in the countries you have seen: on their customs, and cookery, and dress, and the status of their women? You could, quite easily."

Another sentence stood out in James' memory. "Both Peter and I are rather run down."

"Not if I can possibly help it!" she laughed. She had no ambition. She felt no desire to write. But it might be necessary. "If the OGPU puts all my relations in jail—"

Martin Rowdon was staring at her again. Was he comparing her, her appearance, this conversation, with that first time they met, just under three years ago? When she had waited, trembling for his verdict on Peter's articles? A great deal had happened to make her feel at ease with him. They had plenty to discuss. They were friends. She felt changed, yet, with regard to one thing, inexorably the same. Though she had not known it, she had loved Tony, even then.

His next words startled her. "Do you remember Tony Lance? He told me he met you in Rangoon. You may run into him in Moscow. That is, if he hasn't been sent to Persia."

She asked levelly, "What is his job, exactly, now?" "I can't tell you. Officially, I don't know myself."

"You mean—intelligence service—like René Howard?" "Except that René usually procures information and Tony translates it intelligently, and advises action. I shall write, or write him, that you and Peter are coming to Russia. He may be able to help you."

Winter—Spring

PETRONELLA rode westwards on the top of a bus. She held the unsteady lines which she wanted. Christmas presents she must buy. But she forgot to study it. At first, she thought of Russia, with apprehension, Tony, with trepidation. Tony did not want to have her forced upon him. If only the present represented the future. She was being in England. James wanted her. She was enjoying arranging the cottage. Days, like today, when she went shopping, like other women, and met a young lover, were precious. But she and Peter would seldom live in their cottage, and she must leave James behind. Home, for her, must be a place where one left old clothes, photographs, and trophies.

"It seems all wrong," she thought, helplessly. She crossed out "two pairs of sheets," and wrote the figure three. Marigold was coming down to stay for Christmas. She did not know for certain, but could easily guess, what Jeremy Charrod would have to say about it, when he heard. Marigold was supposed to be marrying him, at last, in June. Petrel felt troubled by the significance of that third pair of sheets. She remembered that once she had thought Marigold's life looked like being very simple, and straightforward. She had been mistaken.

Peter was fond of her. Perhaps he was in love with her. When she was near him, he became obsessed by her warmth and beauty. But he would go again. The moment he heard definitely from Martin Rowdon that he could go to Russia, she would be forgotten. All his scattered belongings would be thrown into a suitcase. Along with that trunk he never unpacked, he would be catching the next train. If Marigold loved him, she would have to cut down her multitudinous, attractive possessions. Become as mobile as she had done. Learn to travel at short notice, and travel light. Petronella thought of her present wardrobe. A tweed suit, her fur coat, two evening dresses which rolled, and came out looking respectable. Silver sandals. One silk dress, which she could tie in a knot, if she liked, and wear at the end of a journey. One woolen dress. It was impossible to imagine Marigold doing that. There were two more intriguing bottles on her dressing table.

James walked the down platform of Ballfield station gloomily. He wished Petrel were in England. But she was not here. She might still be in Russia. Or Peter might have received the orders he was expecting to go to Germany. In her letter, which was in his wallet, she said they were afraid whether he would be admitted into Germany. Everything was tightening up there, under National Socialism. His last visit might be considered a bad record.

No. Instead, he was here to meet these pathetic relatives, Stephen and Tamara Morovitch, whose freedom from the Soviet regime had cost the Mallones several thousands of rubles.

"Please look after her a little and help her to be happy till father arrives home (about April 7, I think)," Petrel had written, of her girl cousin. She was afraid Ballfield might think her a little strange when she walked through the village to do her shopping in her rough Soviet regulation clothes and heavy boots. Would he hand her over to Marigold with the enclosed check, for a day's shopping? Tamara and her father were to live in the empty cottage, until Colonel Mallonee came home. Petrel hoped to be in England herself soon. Then they would see what was best for everyone. Uncle Stephan was artistic. He took beautiful photographs. He would be happy again, if he could earn money, as he used to do in his "Art shop," before all his property was confiscated.

Another sentence stood out in James' memory. "Both Peter and I are rather run down."

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL and LYNN NISBET

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, Feb. 10.—All House members found on their desks yesterday neat cards showing on one side statistics on illiteracy in North Carolina and on the other figures on illiteracy in the county from which each comes.

The wage-hour bill was before the House. Gregg Cherry had explained it. Victor Bryant wanted to offer an amendment. "Won't you make that as a separate bill?" asked Major Cherry. "Rather than listen to Mr. Cherry explain the bill again. I will accede to his wishes," retorted Mr. Bryant.

Ears perked up in agriculture committee yesterday when Charlie Cates, member of the state board of agriculture, was talking about lack of co-operation on part of State College. "I am reliably informed," said Mr. Cates, "that Frank Jeter, director of publicity at the college, asked both the News and Observer and the Charlotte Observer not to allow any articles or contributions from the state department to be used on the regular Monday morning farm page." He further stated that the Charlotte paper yielded to that request, and that none of the department's publicity is now allowed on the farm page in the Observer. Mr. Cate's doesn't think that is very co-operative.

Wilmington's Mayor Thomas E. Cooper, in Raleigh to fight to get sales taxes off mules, was extended House courtesies yesterday. One of the wettest of the wets, Tom conferred very genially with Iredell's Zeb Vance Turlington in the House lobby.

One highway diversion question got through the senate without a ripple. That was a special act providing for taking care of surplus water diverted from highways. In spite of the action a few days ago of the highway commission endorsing diversion of funds, there is a sizeable bloc in the senate who still contend that diversion of funds is by no means as sure as the administration thinks it is.

First conference committee report of the session was on the bill to amend the charter of the town of King's Mountain. Senator Gardner and Representative Mull soon got together. The senator, being a youngster, and the representative a veteran of legislative bouts, the report was that "the senate recede from its amendment."

The senate was liberal-minded yesterday with respect to the terms of Democratic offers in the counties which meant a Republican. Local bills were adopted under suspension of the rules, extending the terms of county commissioners in Lincoln and Graham counties from two years to four years. And both bills provided that commissioners elected in 1938 should hold office until those elected in 1942 should qualify.

The joint committee on agriculture has asked the general assembly to invite Oscar Johnston, to address a joint session next Friday, February 17. Mr. Johnston is the man who organized the cotton pool and who is now devoting most of his time and energy to finding new uses for cotton, so as to increase demand. Manager of the largest cotton farm in the world, he knows the industry all through. Senator Clark of Edgemore, one of the largest cotton growers in the state and the largest in the legislature, offered the motion to invite Mr. Johnston.

FULL ELECTION COMMITTEE MAY NOT BACK SUB-GROUP

The ordinarily keen-sighted Onslow legislator was not little surprised at the sub-committee's action. He had expected a resolution endorsing the views of Wayne's Frank T. who introduced the State

Beard's suggestions in the form of a bill. Guilford's Joe Carruthers, chairman of the sub-committee, cast the deciding vote for the Mull plan, and in doing so surprised the man who appointed him to the post. Not that Phillips had any plea, express or implied from Carruthers. On the contrary, there had been no conference between the two and absolutely no committal by Carruthers or request for committal from Phillips. The chairman of the whole committee merely thought that Carruthers would vote for the Taylor ideas. In this he proved wrong.

And so now there has developed the anomalous situation in which the whole committee's chairman is anxious to see reversal of an action taken by a group he himself named. It's really a bit ironic, not to mention being unusual. Few chairmen are brave, or maybe it should be naive, enough to appoint sub-committees without knowing in advance just what's going to happen.

All in all, the whole business is still as intricate and many-angled as in the beginning, and there still promises to be all kinds of a fight before anything concrete is accomplished.

COLLEGE TAKES UP FIGHT FOR LEVY ON FERTILIZER

search, educational and experimental work; the department should do the regulatory, the inspectional and the service work—with some revision of the original agreement on markets.

When it came to test farms, soil testing and marketing the two groups differed widely and submitted separate recommendations, which are scheduled to be studied carefully by a sub-committee of the sub-committee over the week-end. The full legislative group will meet again next Thursday to get the results of the cogitations.

On soil testing the Department contends that this is a service rather than an experiment, and that the department's fertilizer division can well handle the work during their slack period. With the addition of perhaps one agronomist and one or two clerks, the set-up is sufficient. The college group holds that this is research work and that the equipment and the personnel to conduct it should be administered by the college.

The test farms now conducted by the department in connection with the college and the central experiment station are in the bones of contention. They have been all along. The department report sets out that the farms are now owned by the department, that experiments are conducted by the central experiment station, and that the cooperative basis is best for all parties. The college demands complete separation of the state department of agriculture from any connection with the test farms, other than to collect the inspection tax to finance them.

Both reports carried a lot of figures about the advisability of matching federal funds for certain types of agricultural work and both suggested without much hope of favorable reception that a larger part of the money for agricultural research work should come from the general fund. With all the frills and furbelows removed the difference of opinion between the department and the college is essentially this:

The department has the test farms, the facilities for soil analysis and other service work and thinks that the past record justifies carrying on the program. The college wants to take over the test farms and enough money to operate them, believing that the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad.

Harry McMullan, North Carolina attorney general, and D. L. Ward, speaker of the State House of Representatives, were to confer at four o'clock with Chairman Jesse Jones. They were to be accompanied by Representatives Warren and Barber.

The congressional spotlight soon may be focused upon a calm, soft-spoken, but firm Presbyterian elder from North Carolina.
Chairman Wheeler (D-Mont.) of the Senate Interstate Commerce committee, has just introduced a bill to reorganize the Federal Communications Commission and Frank McNinch of Charlotte, N. C., probably will loom large in this consideration.

HEALTH BILLS FAR-REACHING

Measure Is Regarded Too Sweeping By Some Observers

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—Without questioning sincerity of the author or benefits the humanity which would follow enactment, many observers and members of the legislature are wondering if the "health" measures introduced by Senator Dr. T. W. M. Long of Halifax are not made very dubious of passage by reason of their very sweeping and drastic provisions.

For instance, nobody disputes that it would be a fine thing if every child in North Carolina were immunized against diphtheria, but many are wondering if the Assembly will pass any law requiring every child between the age of 6 and 12 months to be immunized "by prophylactic agent meeting U. S. Public Health Standards," and making failure of parents to have this immunization accomplished a misdemeanor punishable by "$50 or thirty days or both."

They are also wondering if the legislators really dare pass a bill requiring every prospective mother in North Carolina to have a blood test examination under pain of being guilty of a misdemeanor.

This latter law requires (1) Every woman who becomes pregnant to have blood samples submitted to laboratory, approved by the State Board of Health, for performance of Wasserman or other test approved for syphilis. (2) Physician, upon request of woman, to submit such sample to laboratory, and midwives to refer woman to physician. (3) Those unable to pay laboratory fees to go to local Health Officer. (4) Physician to state in every certificate of birth or still birth whether or blood test has been made, and if so give date, also stating whether blood test has been made.

BILL AIMED AT CUTLAR MOORE

Would Slash Salary; Also Per Diem of Members

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—The legislature will next week get a bill proposing drastic reduction in the salary of Cutlar Moore, chairman of the State Board of Alcoholic Beverage Control, and heavy cuts in the per diem and mileage allowances of the associate members of the board—now Webb Williams of Pasquotank and W. C. Peimster of Hickory. Probable sponsor of the measure in the House is Pasquotank's W. C. Morse, although this is not certain, nor has it yet been decided just what the bill will be ready for actual introduction.

The measure will in all probability slash reduction of the Moore salary from $6,000 annually to $4,000, though there is some division of opinion among members of the group seeking to cut the Moore stipend right in half, but they fear that it would not be possible to pass such a bill.

As for per diem, it is planned to cut the present allowance of $25 per day to a sum somewhere in line with the amount allowed members of similar boards, certainly to not more than $10 a day.

It is pointed out that Mr. Williams last year drew more than $3,800 in per diem and allowances—a sum which added to the Moore salary nearly equals the entire budget expenses of the State Rural Electrification Authority.

The A.B.C. budget was subject of much controversy when it was reached in the Appropriations committee, and a drastic cut was then made, the estimates being slashed from the sixty-two thousand recommended by the Budget Commission to about forty thousand. "Economy" advocates then wanted to cut the Moore salary and the Williams per diem, but were stopped dead in their tracks by the fact that these items are fixed by statute. Hence the bill to be introduced next week.

Convention delegates are estimated to have spent $13,000,000 in Los Angeles in 1938.

New Regulations Apply To Fishing

The Board of Conservation and Development at a recent meeting adopted a resolution relative to the manner of taking fish in inland waters which affects fishing in this county.

The ordinance makes it unlawful for any person to set or attempt to set or place fish traps, fish slides, or fish baskets, or take or kill or attempt to take or kill fish in any of the waters of North Carolina, except with hook and line, rod and reel, or by casting.

The ordinance further provides that shad and herring may be taken with skim or gill nets of not less size bar than one and one-half inches, Fridays and Saturdays of each week, from January 1 to April 15, inclusive.

The regulation apply to Pitt and a number of other counties, chiefly in Eastern North Carolina.

Phantoms Face 'Quakes in Crucial Game

TILT TO START HERE AT 8:15

Local Girls To Meet Goldsboro in Preliminary Game

By "SMUT" BURK
 Tonight's the big night for Greenville high school of 1939 in sports affairs. The cagers of Greenville high will take the court against the strong Earthquake five of Goldsboro high school tonight at 8:15, following a preliminary contest in which the girls' teams of the two schools will meet it out at 7 o'clock sharp.

The game tonight is the crucial test of the season for the Phantoms with the conference title hanging on the outcome. Greenville is on top of the standings now, but a loss to the Goldbugs would reverse the situation and clinch the championship for Goldsboro. Any way you put it, with so much at stake, the game is bound to be the most interesting and thrilling high school case game played on home territory this year.

Goldsboro is the team that handed the Greenies their only loss of the season by a 16-14 score in a thrilling overtime period. In the first game, the Greenie offense couldn't seem to click and the Quake team offered fine defensive play in holding the G-Men in check. A field goal by Nickens of Goldsboro five seconds before the final whistle pulled the Goldbugs into a 14-14 tie, and a two-pointer by Pogter after two minutes of the three-minute extra period spelled the only defeat of the season for the locals so far. In addition to fighting for the conference title, the Greenies will unleash their most savage attack in an effort to send their earlier conquerors back home with a decisive loss to their credit. The G-Men were not satisfied with the loosely played contest in Goldsboro and are out to prove their superiority over their rivals.

Alternate captain John Lautares will lead the Phantoms into tonight's fray and is counted on to pave the way to victory for the Farley-men. Ford McGowan will probably start at the other guard post with Tracey Jordan at center. High-scoring George Sakas and Larry James will start as forwards. This will be the next to the last home game for the Green Phantoms—who have yet to be defeated on the local court this year. Tonight's double-bill promises to be the most enjoyable basketball evening of the season and everyone is urged to turn out for the affair. The Greenville high school band will also be on hand to offer the musical part of the evening.

Greenville Wins First In Series With Washington Opponents

The Greenville bowlers defeated a Washington team in a three-game match here last night, 1,479 pins to 1,406. The locals won each of the three games.

Horton of the Greenville five paced the local bowlers with 303 pins for the three games. His score was 88-110-105. It remained for Harrington, however, to make the best score of the night, bowling 118 in the first game. His 93 and 83 for the second and third games, respectively, however, pulled ed his total score down to 294. Emery of Washington won honors for the evening, bowling 109-105-105 for a total score of 319. None of his mates, however, was able to get a total score better than 288. The match was at the local alleys on Dickinson avenue. A return match will be played later in Washington, it was announced. ## Dispute On Diversion Nothing New in State

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—All the current argument about highway fund diversion is but a new angle to an old question. There has been diversion before.

The agricultural fund, for instance, more than 20 years ago appropriated $50,000 for the construction of Patterson Hall at State College, and the present agriculture department building was erected almost entirely out of the agricultural fund, although about half the space in it is used for other departments and commissions.

Where'll You Be When the Spring Fun Starts?

RIGHT now we'd like to point out that with the first feel of spring in the air, there's going to be another scramble to get these beautiful new Buicks.

There's going to be a rush to get behind this great car's lively Dynaflex straight-eight power plant, to take in the budding countryside from behind its new wide-paned windows.

There'll be a sudden hurry to trade in cars that have begun to pass their prime, and step out in the cushioned smoothness of Buick-Coil Spring's full-float ride.

No question about that, not when you recall last fall, when we had to sell cars on a five and six week delivery basis.

On the other hand, you can get rid of a lot of grief by trading an old car now. Get rid of weak batteries, slick tires, slow-starting engines, brakes that may be needing a relining job soon.

You'll get a car in this well-made, well-mannered, well-groomed new Buick that'll take the rest of the winter right in stride, and just be warmed up when spring comes. You'll get it at prices lower than a year ago, lower than you'd expect, lower even than on some sixes. You'll get a better allowance on the car you're now driving—and like as not avoid some heavy servicing bills.

So why wait until sometime "in the spring"? Shop early for your Buick, the most satisfying car you ever drove—shop wisely and avoid the rush!
