MANUEL AZANA RESIGNS FROM SPANISH POST

Resignation of Republican President Revealed

FRANCO SPEECH LITTLE COMFORT

General Acknowledges Recognition By France and Britain, Remembers Friends

Collognes - Sous - Saleve, France, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Manuel Azana, in a letter made public today, resigned as President of the Spanish Republican Government.

The letter was addressed to Diego M. Barrio, president of the Republican corps of parliament and Azana's constitutional successor. Azana, who came here yesterday from Paris, where he had lived since General Franco's troops cleaned up Catalonia, had withheld publication of the resignation until after French-British recognition of Franco's regime as the legitimate government of Spain.

The letter was sent to Paris by special letter yesterday, the day on which France and Britain ceased to regard the Republican regime as Spain's real government.

Diego M. Barrio under the Spanish constitution is required to receive a presidential resignation and the constitution designates him as successor to the President. He was in Paris.

London, Feb. 28.—(AP)—British and French government leaders got little comfort today from the speech in which General Franco acknowledged recognition by the democracies of the Nationalist Spanish government.

The recognition cleared away the red tape of formally so Britain and France could carry on an intensive drive to weaken German influence in Spain and, in sequence, maintain an equitable balance of power in the Mediterranean.

Franco, speaking yesterday to cheering crowds at Burgos, which his capital declared precisely that "it would be unfair in these moments of triumph when even those who fought against us recognize us that we should not remember those who believed in us from the first day."

Committee Seeking More Money From Oil Industry

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, Feb. 25.—The joint Finance committee spent the second anniversary of enactment of the 37 Revenue bill wrestling with the problem of getting still more blood from a turnip which already contributes not less than one-half the revenue of North Carolina from all sources. The petroleum industry. A public hearing, and following discussion by committee members in executive session tended to confirm "off the record" statements that the group is in "open and complete rebellion" and still far from any real agreement on a Revenue bill. Presence in the hearing of Speaker Libby Ward and the two Appropriations chairmen—Senator W. B. Rodman, Jr. and John Caffey—showed the impatience with which the leaders are waiting Finance committee action.

GROUP OPPOS'D TO LABOR ACTS FOR N.C. HEARD

Declared Bills Would Wreck the Grocery Industry

PROponents TO HAVE THEIR SAY

Senate Committee Chairman Separk, However, Hopes To Finish by March 10

Raleigh, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Representatives of the North Carolina Retail Food Dealers Association told a joint legislative committee today that pending wage-hour bills would "wreck the grocery industry."

Quickly, also, the North Carolina Cotton Seed Crushers Association and State Merchants Association added their opposition. Last week hotel and restaurant operators, retail furniture dealers, business men of eastern Carolina, building operators and others spoke against the bills.

Senator Separk of Gaston, chairman of the Senate committee, said he expected to complete all hearings at least by March 10. Labor organizations have been given time to speak for the proposals next week. B. E. Reebuck, of Wilmington, a food dealer, told the committee that enactment of a wage-hour bill "means the total wreck of the grocery industry, particularly as regard delivery service and unskilled helpers."

F. N. Bridgers of Wilson, speaking for cotton-seed crushers, said wage and hour laws as proposed would "work quite a hardship on oil mills if they have to subscribe to the hours of labor, because it would raise the cost of manufacture. That would mean less to the farmer who raises the cottonseed or paying a higher price for the product."

Two wage-hour bills have been introduced. One closely follows the federal law, but the other is less inclusive, and would fix a flat 48-hour week for mercantile and service employees with the work week to 46 hours in other industries.

Legless Peddler Held For Slaying

A legless peddler, listed as Charles Wilson, 38, formerly of Alabama, is shown squatted on his "scooter" in a New Orleans police station as officers questioned him concerning charges he fatally stabbed Miss Clara Berry, 42, with a pocketknife. Detectives said he explained he killed the woman, who came from Picayune, Miss., because she "left me."

Aid Sent To Ship Aground Off N. C.

Norfolk, Feb. 28.—(AP)—The coast guard cutter Modoc attempted to float today the British freighter Cumberland, which went aground on Prying Pan shoals off the North Carolina coast in the early morning hours.

The freighter, owned by the Federal Steam and Navigation company Ltd left Hampton Roads Sunday for Havana with a cargo of coal. The crew was said to number 26.

The sea was calm and the Cumberland's engines undamaged. Coast guardsmen here understood that the Cumberland would put back into Hampton Roads for a survey of damages.

EXPECT HEAVY CHICAGO VOTE

Comparatively Listless Campaign Is Completed

Chicago, Feb. 28.—A youthful prosecutor challenged the entrenched Democratic organization in the mayoral primary election today, while Republican candidates engaged in a contest bearing possible portents for 1940.

The principal Democratic candidates were Mayor Edward Kelly and State's Attorney Thomas C. Curtis, at 44 a veteran in city and state politics.

In the Republican ranks, the chief aspirants were Dwight Green, a former federal attorney making his first bid for elective office, and William H. (Big Bill) Thompson, 69-year-old contended who thrice occupied the office of mayor.

Despite a comparatively listless campaign and predictions of unfavorable weather, a heavy vote was forecast on the basis of a record registration of 1,827,362. The Board of Election Commissioners estimated 1,200,000 votes would be cast between 6 a. m. and 5 p. m., a total never before reached in any Chicago election.

Defendant Pal of Late N. C. Public Enemy

Kinston, S. C., Feb. 28.—(AP)—Worth Davis, ex-convict and self-assessed life-long friend of the late Bill Payne, who was put to death in North Carolina last year for the slaying of a State Highway patrolman, went on trial in General Sessions Court here today on charges of grand larceny in connection with the Planters Bank of Hemingway, March 2, 1928.

The state charged Davis, Payne, Wash Turner, alias Jack Borden also executed for the death of the North Carolina highway officer, and an unidentified companion robbed the bank of more than $6,900 after forcing D. L. Taylor, cashier, to open the bank's vault.

PROPOSE GIVE PEOPLE RIGHT TO START WAR

Bill Offered in Senate Provides National Referendum

NOT TO APPLY IN CASE ATTACK

One of Introdurers Says Measure Would Check Attempts To Involve U. S. in War

Washington, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Twelve Senators proposed today a constitutional amendment to give the people the sole right to declare an overseas war.

The resolution would provide for a national referendum on whether such a war should be declared. The referendum would be held when Congress deemed "a national crisis to exist."

A referendum would not be necessary for a declaration of war, however, in case of attack or immediately threatened attack, upon the United States or its possessions. Neither would a referendum be held in any non-American nation attacked or threatened to attack any country in the Western Hemisphere.

Senator La Follette (Prog.-Wis.) one of the signers of the referendum proposal, said in a statement that it would be "a final check against secret diplomacy that may decoy us into a foreign war against our will."

Meanwhile Senator Borah (R-Idaho) said the administration air corps and army expansion bill was "just a lot of bluff and bluster."

Borah, ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, told reporters that the

EDWIN M. GILL CLUB SPEAKER

Paroles Commissioner Heard at Rotary Club Meet

By WYATT BROWN. "Prisons are not a place to go to but a place to pass through back to our communities," declared North Carolina Parole Commissioner Edwin M. Gill last night in his address to the Greenville Rotary Club at their regular weekly dinner meeting.

Commissioner Gill was engaged in explaining the significance of the practice of parole in present day society which he did so capably that he held the continuous undivided attention of his audience. Mr. Gill showed that the parole system was injecting a note of constructive assistance from law enforcement agencies, the prison authorities, social agencies, and the community into rehabilitation of former prisoners.

In opening his remarks, Mr. Gill indicated Mr. K. T. Putrell, Pitt county welfare officer, and declared Mr. Putrell was the official representative of the Parole Commissioner in Pitt. It seems the prisoner is delivered by the state with a sealed order from the Governor to Mr. Putrell, which Mr. Putrell signs and which is returned to Raleigh as a receipt for the prisoner. Local law enforcement officers are advised of the work of rehabilitation is a balanced law enforcement—of social agency officers, officials and public spirited citizens efforts.

Mr. Gill was complimentary of the way Pitt county has upheld its parole program by cooperating with Mr. Putrell. And then in no uncertain terms the commissioner paid (Continued on page six)

Author Of Travel Books To Write Of This State

Raleigh, Feb. 28.—A nationally known writer of travel books, O. E. Hoppe will hop into North Carolina soon in order to gather material for a forthcoming book featuring the Old North State and its attractions.

Coming of Mr. Hoppe is the result of activities of the News Bureau of the State Department of Conservation and Development.

Mr. Hoppe has written books dealing with his travels in Europe, Asia and Africa.

Some weeks ago he wrote the News Bureau asking its assistance in mapping a tour of the state which would take him to the more interesting places and sections of North Carolina. A suggested itinerary was sent him, and a number of feature stories already sent out by the bureau were likewise forwarded.

This week the bureau heard from Mr. Hoppe that he was "delighted" at the wealth of material awaiting him in North Carolina and that he is looking forward to his coming tour. He also indicated that he will take his own pictures for the book as well as write its text.

He said he intends to cover the entire state, making visits to the coastal section, the piedmont and the mountains.

He is only one of at least a score of writers and authors who have come to North Carolina or who are planning to come here as a result of the interest aroused in the state by the advertising program authorized by the 1937 General Assembly at the request of Governor Clyde R. Hoey and administered by the Department of Conservation and Development. It is pointed out by Director R. Bruce Etheridge.

HOUSE PASSES REFORMS FOR ELECTION LAW

Measure Abolishes Absentee Voting in Primaries

ELECTION RULES ALSO TIGHTENED

Bill Sent to Senate, Where Meeting Of Election Committee Called for This P.M.

Raleigh, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Representatives today passed and sent to the Senate a bill to abolish absentee voting in primaries and tighten regulations for general elections.

The House members refused to exempt Chowan and Rowan counties after a plea by Rep. Cherry of Gaston, State Democratic chairman. It was suggested that legislation could be introduced later to exempt areas.

A meeting of the Senate committee on election laws was called for this afternoon.

Representatives waded into other election reform proposals.

Senators passed and sent to the House, the House-amended bill to give juries discretion in first degree convictions in burglary and arson by imposing life prison terms or death sentences. Governor Hoey had recommended discretion for all crimes now punishable by death, but on motion of Senator Folger of Surry, the Senate last night struck murder and rape from the bill.

The joint Finance committee met this afternoon to try to finally wind up work of providing a balanced budget.

The Senate also passed and ordered ratified into law a House bill to provide specialized and graduate courses for Negroes at the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham and the Agricultural and Technical College at Greensboro. An appropriation was provided and courses would be set up only when demand warranted. The bill was an answer to the U. S. Supreme Court decision holding that Missouri must provide such courses for Negroes.

The House passed and sent to the Senate the Volger bill to increase pay of election officials, and a measure to permit "split ticket" voting.

Senators got a new bill to repeal the $1,000 license tax imposed on dealers in scrap tobacco.

Rain Or Snow In Most Of Country

(By The Associated Press)

Snow or rain soaked most of the nation from the Rockies to the Atlantic coast today.

Iowa apparently was hit the hardest, with snowfall ranging up to 17 inches. It continued to fall. The weather bureau calculated it was the heaviest February snow in Iowa's history. Winona, Minn., reported 15 inches at mid-morning and it was still snowing.

Forecasters H. A. Downs of Chicago, said the storm area moved northeastward from the Texas Panhandle, where it centered yesterday. It brought heavy snow to Eastern Colorado, Northwestern New Mexico, Northwestern Missouri and Iowa; light snow in Nebraska and moderate snowfall in Wisconsin.

Downs said North Central and Eastern Wisconsin probably would get heavy snow later today.

Illinois and Indiana were just east of the snow zone, Downs said, although Chicago and Northern Illinois might get light snow tonight.

Downs said it was raining from the Middle West to the Atlantic coast and in the Southeastern states and there was also precipitation from the North Pacific coast eastward to the Northern Rockies.

Sunday first became legally a day of rest under the Roman emperor Constantine, the Jewish sabbath having been observed on Saturday.

The entire glee club, around forty members, gave the first group of songs, all light in nature—"Winter Song," "Mosquitoes," and the very amusing "Bill of Fare," in which they sang lusting of pork and beans, tippoo pudding, piccalilli, and ice cream.

A quartet sang the always popular "Little David," and two less familiar selections.

A violin solo, Kreisler's "Tambourine Chinois" by the director, and the tenor solos by a member of the group showed their ability in other types of music.

A group of songs by the club closed the program. Among them the favorites of the audience seemed to be "Old Man River" and "Listen to the Lambs."

Art Exhibit At Library.
The classes in art, which are among the newest at the Greenville high school, are furnishing the exhibit this week for the Know-Your-High-School series at the Sheppard Memorial Library.

A number of mediums have been used—pencil, pen, water colors, pastels, plaster of Paris, and beads. Among the subjects, which show just as significant a variety, are costumes, fruit, ships, Little Henry, Ferdinand, Peace of Earth, Abraham Lincoln, Venetian scenes and persons, and American landscapes and characters.

The work is under the direction of Mrs. A. Dittmer.

The Greenville high school and the local chapter of the American Association of University Women are expecting many citizens to examine this exhibit of the work of a new department in which many students are taking an active part. The display will be up throughout the week.

with a tour through California.

The interest in Abraham Lincoln attributable of course to Raymond Massey's Broadway hit—can come under the flag-waving department also. Rarryl Zanuck has Henry Fonda reading himself for a study of the youthful Abe.

The dictators, however, are getting theirs generously in the "expose" features such as "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," which was projected even before Will Hays said the movies could say what they pleased about world affairs and be an active force. Result of that pronouncement or otherwise, another script—"They Made Her a Spy"—had gone into the re-write process. Instead of vaguely hinting at a spy ring operating at Washington, D. C., the new version rather strongly indicates the nationality of the spies, although it still does not name names.

The name-naming apparently is left to "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," a picture which has gone into work at last under conditions of secrecy that might do justice to a first-class espionage department.

No scripts were passed around, as is usual with new pictures. The director, Anatole Litvak, would say nothing. The word is that the film, definitely in the higher-budget bracket, will take material from Leon G. Turro's book, "Nazi Spies in America," but will go farther and stronger. The cast includes so far Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer (remember his frantic sponsorship of "World Peace?") and Lya Lys.

And instead of the usual foreword assuring the fictional nature of the film, this one will insist that events depicted, and the characters are at work in the United States today. (That's all I know now—my operative GX's undercovers

They Are Beginning To Sprout

Last day of February. The fish dealer will get his deal now.

The year is one-sixth gone, and we can hardly realize it. We hear that Weldon and Halifax both have cases of smallpox.

Smallpox is getting nearer on the direct line towards Greenville and some quarantining might be a good thing.

Edward Matthews returned this morning from Kingston.

Mrs. J. R. Moye returned home Monday evening from Greensboro.

Mrs. D. J. Whichard returned Monday evening from a visit to relatives at Whitehall.

The railroad is having the yard about the depot covered with gravel. That will do away with the mud.

Nothing I'll let you know.

"The American Way"—the Fredric March-Florence Eldridge Broadway hit—is a sure film subject according to the reports and "Let Freedom Ring," the Nelson Eddy show, has a patriotic flavor.

COMMON COURTESY

Let your escort give your order to the waiter when you dine in a restaurant.

By JOAN DURHAM (Associated Press Feature Writer)

If your escort in a restaurant is a Lord Chesterfield, he'll show you the menu, ask for your preferences and then give the order to the waiter.

Other restaurant-dining hints: Two types of menus are in common use today: table d'hote and a la carte. When you order from an a la carte menu you add up the prices of all the dishes you order. When you order from a table d'hote menu you pay a set price for the entire meal.

It's a woman's privilege to sit where she wants to. The waiter will hold out her chair for her when she sits down. If he stands behind a seat she does not want, she may indicate her preference—and he'll move over to the chair she requests.

In parties of four, the women usually sit opposite each other—with their dinner partners to their right.

New Pope To Rule Empire Rich In Possessions; People

Ballot for a new pope will begin March 2 in Vatican City. The story described the empire over which he will rule.

By The AP Feature Service.
The man upon whom falls the white mantle of the papacy becomes, in some respects, the most powerful person in the world.

His worldly empire embraces only the 108 acres and the 1,000 citizens of the Vatican. But his spiritual empire knows no bounds. Nearly one in every five persons accepts his spiritual leadership. That's half of Christendom.

Many more are interested in what he says and does—are influenced to some extent by what he teaches. Thousands of publications—and the radio—carry his messages to the ends of the world.

Many nations are called Catholic—those of Latin America, for instance, and Italy, Spain, Portugal and Belgium. Three are said to be 100 per cent Catholic—the tiny states of Andorra and San Marino, and, of course, the Vatican state.

Catholic sources estimate the world's Catholic population as upwards of 375,000,000. Some 22,000,000 live in the United States; 138,000,000 in the Americas as a whole; 210,000,000 in Europe; 19,000,000 in Asia; 8,000,000 in Africa.

In one sense, missionaries are the ambassadors of that empire—in all the remote places of the world they carry on the church's work.

But the pope has ambassadors in the worldly sense, too—60 diplomatic representatives to as many nations. Some, like those of the United States and Great Britain, are called Apostolic Delegates. They have no official standing in the countries to which they are sent, but they are usually accorded diplomatic courtesies. Thirty-seven nations send ambassadors or ministers to the Vatican.

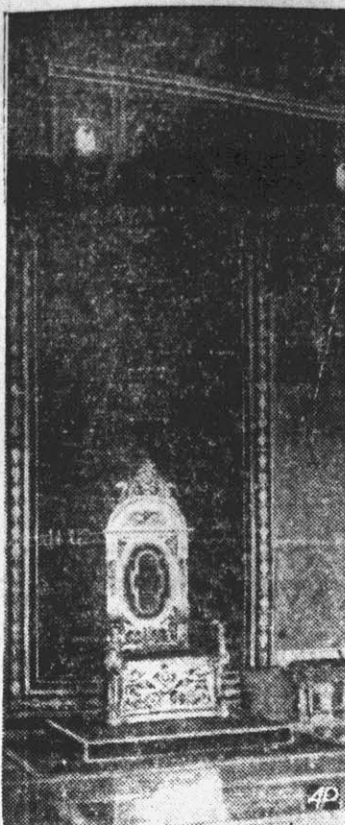

Recognizing the pope as a sovereign, Great Britain in 1933 instructed the fleet that he is entitled to a sovereign's salute of 21 guns.

The pope's great responsibilities are shared by a sort of cabinet—the twelve Sacred Congregations, which are standing committees. He is head of the church's judicial system. His little nation has its own coinage and postage stamps.

Even so, his administrative responsibilities are tremendous. In the United States alone, for instance, there are about 33,000 clergymen as agents in the propagation of the faith, as spiritual guides, educators and administrators of widespread properties.

The official Catholic Directory lists more than 18,000 churches, ranging from cathedrals to missions and the church has considerable other real estate.

Educational facilities in the United States include 206 seminaries,

Whoever occupies this throne—in the throne room in the papal quarters, Vatican City—has powers equalled by no other person.

193 colleges for men, 675 academies and colleges for girls, 1,306 high schools, 8,023 parochial schools. The total enrollment probably is around 3,000,000.

There are also 326 Catholic orphan asylums, 163 homes for the aged, and 634 hospitals.

The thousands of fraternal, professional, social and recreational Catholic groups in this country have their counterpart in other nations. In some countries there is also a political expression in Catholic parties.

Groups in the United States give attention to books, magazines, newspapers, movies and the radio, not only as agencies for spiritual advancement, but also to see that these do not carry material considered harmful.

The Legion of Decency, which headed a clean-up drive against the movies several years ago, publishes a weekly movie list for Catholics.

And the hub of all this worldwide whirl of activity is one man—His Holiness, the Bishop of Rome, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church.

Chamberlain's Wife Gave Him That Bumbershoot Years Ago

By THE AP FEATURE SERVICE

London—Mrs. Chamberlain has given the Chamberlain's League the low-down on that big black bumbershoot that's become the cane-handled symbol of her husband's foreign policy.

As a recent luncheon guest of the charitable group, the prime minister's wife revealed the umbrella was a gift from her "12 or 15 years ago."

It came from an old London shop where Queen Mary and Lord Baldwin also buy umbrellas. It cost about $10. It goes back to the shop periodically for recovering with finest black silk. (The repair man declares it has never been unfurled.)

At any rate, it has become Chamberlain's weapon of "appeasement" in the Briton's eye. The old-fashioned rainshad has tapped along the streets of Munich, Godesburg and Rome; has hung in the foyer at Berchtesgaden while a breathless world waited for Chamberlain and Hitler to talk out instead of fight out a European crisis. It's the cartoonist's delight.

Now it has miniature counterparts here in ladies' novelties. Mrs. Chamberlain herself, as shown, wore two to the league luncheon. The little umbrella she holds was one of

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

WASHINGTON—It would take high odds to get a bet that any one of the evolutionary pension plans would get through this session but no busier band of operators can be found on Capitol Hill than the pension advocates in Congress.

Take Senator Sheridan Downey of California, as an instance. He was busier than a brush salesman the other day about the floor of the Senate. One minute he was on one side of the chamber talking to Senator Bankhead. Almost any one knows that Bankhead couldn't be sold on Downey's old-age pension scheme, but the Californian never gives up. Bankhead ultimately relented, with a good natured laugh, to the cloak room.

Within five minutes Downey was chatting with youngish Senator Clark of Idaho. Clark survived a Townsend attack in Idaho last year to unseat Senator Pope, a New Dealer, who moved from his $10,000 Senate place to a $12,000 post on the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Downey is a "close-up" talker. He edges his chair over a sort of half whippers, even when there is no special need for it. It isn't that he is a secretive sort. He is just a mild-mannered man in outward conduct, on the order of Senator Sheppard of Texas who fought for 20 years to put across prohibition and has been fighting in his quiet way ever since repeal to have prohibition restored.

Changes Plan A Little
Downey's arguments now are very much the same he used out in California to whip Senator McAdoo. (There's another who lost a $10,000 a year job, only to get something better as head of the reorganized Dollar steamship lines).

Downey's original theme song was "30 Every Thursday." He has modified it somewhat now to $100 a month for people over 60 years, just half what the Townsendites offer. But he has attachments to his plan. He would pay, say, $30 a month to people over 50 years.

His whole idea is to discourage so much saving, when he calls the hane of the country. He says the population saves something near 15 per cent of its earnings year in and year out. Such savings can't be spent for productive enterprises in times of surplus and cause a low demand for goods. His idea is that old people assured of a retirement fund wouldn't save for old age, thus eliminating some savings, anyway.

Further, he says paying $30 to 50-year-olds would discourage them from saving so much for old age, so some more savings would be disposed of.

Knows His Economics
Since coming to Washington Downey has become filled with more economic lore than you could throw a stick at. He hears them all, at the Brookings Institution, in the Government departments and wherever an economist may be found. In Washington that is on almost every street corner.

"They are all coming to agree with me," he says, in his confident sort of manner, "at least when I have presented my case they don't have anything more to say."

He figures that 26,000,000 people are out of work. That includes the 10 or 12 million without any jobs at all, and an equal or greater number who are not occupied full time, such as dentists and lawyers who don't have enough patients or clients.

He once talked of forming a huge organization of old folks and their relatives who would like to see the old folks get a pension. It would be a formidable political organization. More recently he has been sort of passing over that part of it. California reporters insist it is part of his strategy and that he doesn't want to get his neck out too far this early. They think he harbors presidential ambitions.

Farm extension experts calculated North Carolina hog raisers saved $163,000 in 1938 as a result of "conservation" work in better marketing.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL and LYNN NISBET

Raleigh, Feb. 28—News of the Senate's trip to Wilmington may seem a bit belated, but there are two items of unpublished incidents which may merit just a note in passing.

For instance, the pointed way in which Cutlar Moore, chairman of the State ABC board was completely and blandly ignored when it came to "recognizing" the "distinguished" state officials.

At the Mire-Mar luncheon Chairman Emmett Bellamy got around even to the press boys, much to their consternation; but he never so much as batted an eye in the direction of Mr. Moore, who was among those present.

A two-minute conversation with that outspoken Irishman and Wilmington dry cleaning establishment proprietor Pat O'Crowley convinced this correspondent that all the merit is not upon the side of those seeking to abolish the state dry cleaning commission.

Existence of the commission, which Pat vows really functions with a vengeance, seems protection to the workers in the establishments against dangerous conditions and long hours, protection to patrons against unscrupulous and deceptive advertising and protection to the operators against chiseling, underhanded rivals.

It was not incoherent that in a page of advertising of "Welcome" to the Senators, practically every reputable cleaning establishment in Wilmington joined in a plan to the Senators not to abolish the commission, which has been under heavy legislative fire ever since the session opened.

If there was anyone on the Wilmington trip who did not have a fine time he has not yet been discovered.

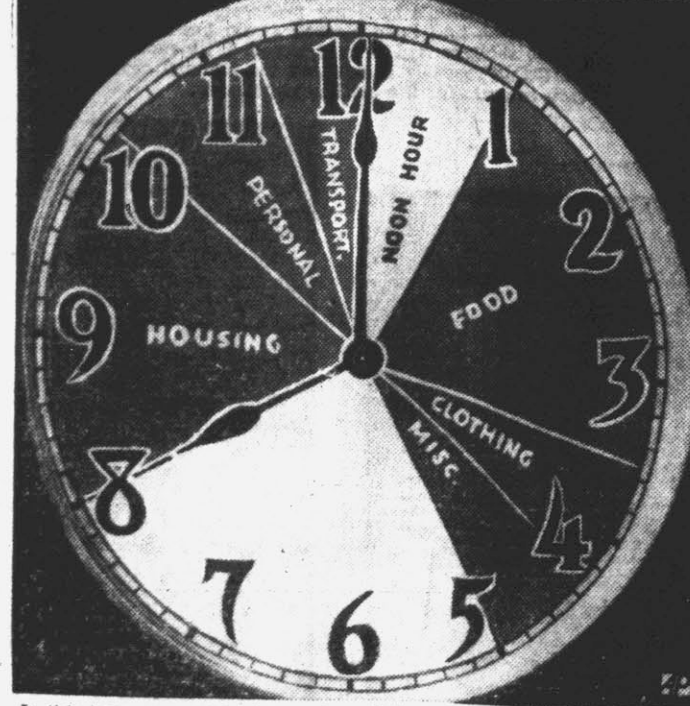

There was noticeable lack of open politics talked and practiced on the Wilmington junket, but there isn't the slightest doubt that the State advertising program was benefited of the stoutest sort of support, unless all signs are misleading the trip concentrated opposition to the proposed slash of the advertising fund from $125,000 to $90,000 per year for the coming biennium.

An unusual milk war has broken out in the legislature. Last night Representative Thas Bryson in the House, and Senator Doggie Hatch in the Senate broke out with bills aimed at keeping Buncombe milk out of their counties unless and until there is shown an increasing and improved inclination toward co-operation.

The bills levy almost prohibitive license fees ($200 in the Hatcher case, $500 in the Bryson) against dealers in milk from other counties.

Speaking of this Senator Hatch-little after 10 to pay housing. The commission reports also that the worker puts in 37 minutes a day to run his car, 24 minutes for life insurance, 23 minutes for medical care, 19 minutes for household expenses, 18 for recreation and books, 17 for furniture, 14 for gifts or luxuries, 10 minutes for tobacco and four minutes for education. The commission estimates that the average wage-earner works 57 minutes in each day to pay for taxes levied on commodities and passed on to him a part of the purchase price.

er, he is the one Senator almost always to be found in the Senate Chamber on Monday mornings. He says it about the only chance he has to catch up with his correspondence.

"When will the Legislature adjourn?" your correspondent asked Secretary of State Thad Eure, who is by way of being something of an authority on affairs of the Assembly.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

by GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

The Characters
Peter Mallone: Adventurous journalist.
Petronella: His loyal sister.
James: Peter's fiancé.

Yesterday James and Tamara discover they are in love. Meanwhile Petrel is worried about a report of journalists shot down in Spain.

Chapter 36

An Old Acquaintance
"THEY don't know who the journalists are," Petronella told James and Tamara. Martin hasn't heard from Peter for three days. He thinks Tony Lance somehow persuaded a pilot, a non-commissioned officer of the Government forces, who wanted to desert, to fly them across the front, so that they could join the advance of the rebels towards Madrid."

James spoke sharply. "You never told me Lance was in Madrid." He could not understand the look in Petrel's eyes as she answered. "He is," she stated. "They may have got through. They may have been shot down. Communications are all cut. Tony was waiting for information for Franco. He may have received it, and Peter, who was long to get out of Madrid, would certainly have tried to persuade him to take him along with him. It wouldn't have occurred to Tony to refuse." Her smile was bitter.

"Poor Petrel, they are devils to make you suffer like this," Tamara wailed pitifully. "Waiting, waiting for news—"

Petrel put an arm round Tamara's shoulders for a moment, then withdrew it again. She looked at James. "That is what came to tell you both. I'm sorry, but I can't stand it here any longer. I feel I must get away. Suspense—and inaction—they're terrible companions, James. You see, Martin may hear news any time, or one of the other papers may receive a message. I've got to be in town, telephoning often, till I know. Between while, I can do a great deal—meet friends—keep busy. You understand? You don't mind?"

James and Tamara looked at one another. Tamara smiled. She could not have stayed, Petronella told herself as she packed her case. Ballfield was too quiet. This was the excuse she kept giving herself, for her flight to town. But it was not the whole reason. She was not really afraid to wait, and pray, for Tony and Peter. She knew this. She could have borne to stand by, and watch Tamara and James. Even though it hurt her pride, to know herself unloved. But she was obeying a stronger impulse, a sense of urgency, and danger. That urge, perhaps, which Aunt Maisie had called "guidance," and which she called instinct, or hunch, or intuition, that unless she caught the next fast train to Victoria, something vitally important in her life would have been neglected.

It was impossible to expect James to understand such superstition. It was unreasonable. He believed that she was behaving like this on account of Tony, and her brother. But he was not entirely right. Suppose something had happened to Tony? Before this possibility every other consideration went down. Blame mattered as little as merit.

James drove her to the station. There was pity in his eyes. She was glad she felt no resentment. But she was grateful to him for his silence. It was an opportunity for him to tell her about Tamara, but he did not take it. Today was Saturday.

Obeying impulse
"WILL you lunch with me on Monday, usual place?" He was arranging to talk it over, thought Petronella. She wondered what he would say. Had he discussed the situation with Tamara? Or would he break the path by protesting that they had been strangers lately; that he resented her preoccupation, and her anxiety for Tony? But Petrel felt sure this possibility was only self-delusion. He would tell her that he and Tamara loved one another. She agreed to meet him. James stood outside her carriage till the train started moving. They did not speak, till she said:

"Thank you for driving me. Goodbye."

"Goodbye, Petrel."

She sat watching the country fly past the window. She wondered what James would have said if he had known that her past port was in her bag. Yet she had no intention of going abroad. Again, she had obeyed impulse. Was she a little mad? It was there, just in case she suddenly decided to lose the battle of mind to heart. But she was more than ever determined not to lose it. If Peter were killed, it would be Tony's fault for allowing him to do such a crazy thing, as change sides in the middle of a revolution. In like ways, he would always lead his companions into danger. It might be impossible to subdue her love, but she was determined to control her actions.

When she reached Victoria, Petronella went to the telephone boxes, and stood, waiting to call first the News office, then the hotel, where she must book a room. What long conversations these people were having. The young man in the end box was obviously telephoning his girl. He would be ages. This caller? Surely there was something familiar about that broad back, and that eager, concise voice? She moved a step to one side. She saw the intelligent face of a woman whose brows were heavy, and whose eyes were bright. Her mind leaped back years. To a marble topped table on a grilling summer afternoon, to a black dispatch case, an inspiring story. She thought:

"Clare Horton! I wonder if she'll remember me."

A moment later the woman started out of her box. She smiled an impersonal apology at Petronella, for having kept her waiting. She recognized her an instant later.

"Don't tell me! I know! Petronella Mallone—we met years ago. Do you remember?"

"Yes, and I've always wanted to meet you again, Miss Horton. But you were always in China. Or else I was abroad, myself."

"Well, now we're both in Victoria Station!" she cried, laughing. "Thank you for the money you sent. I meant to write personally, again."

"Your interview was a success, wasn't it?" asked Petrel.

"I'd Love to Talk to You"

"Eventually," Clare nodded. "And your brother? Where is Peter Mallone just now?"

"In Spain, and missing. I'm terribly anxious. That is why I'm going to telephone for news. It is the first time anything like this has happened since I stopped traveling with him. I'm staying in town, till I know."

"I'm sorry, Petronella," her voice had become gentle. With Clare Horton looking at her face, Petrel knew it was useless to pretend she was anything but miserable. "If you could wait a moment, I'd love to talk to you," she suggested. Clare agreed. "We'll have some tea together."

"Oh, yes. I feel if I don't talk to someone—" she did not end her sentence.

"Then we didn't meet by chance, after all?"

Even while she telephoned Martin Rowdon, and heard that there was no more news, Petronella felt Clare's calm, strong influence. Perhaps, if she could talk to Clare, life would not seem so dead wrong. There might be some solution. If she could wait the chance, she determined to tell her about Tony. Clare would understand, and reassure her. She would agree that she had done the only thing she could, in leaving Cairo. She would tell her to do all she could to forget Tony, if not with James, with some one else, or with work. Because he could never give her security or happiness.

Martin Rowdon told not to worry so much. The communications were so bad, Peter might be as safe as she was.

hat on my dad's birthday, April 4," he replied, "the legislature will still be in session when I get it this year and the hat will be at least slightly soiled by the time it quits for good."

"So you can figure out the date if you want to."

A senator who lives and makes his living on the farm—one of the few of that kind in the legislature—was talking the other day about "overlapping" activities in some state agencies. "There has to be some overlapping in order to do a complete job," he said. "Why, a day or two ago I was down on my farm and had a Negro running a manure spreader. If he didn't overlap a little bit, I called him back and made him go over the same ground again. And that was worse in the first instance. I am more interested in having the job done thoroughly than I am in a little bit of duplication. And that applies to other state work as well as to the present differences between State and college and the state department of agriculture."

"Dr. Long's proposal to add 50 cents to the cost of automobile tags to pay hospitals for treatment of folks hurt in accidents has some merit," said a Raleigh business man yesterday, who prefers not to be quoted by name. "The whole trend of legislation seems to be toward socialism. That is just another step in the same direction. But he ought to go further and require every motorist to carry liability insurance so that damage to the property of others could be collected. There is a lot more money lost by automobile owners who suffer property damage than by hospitals which cannot collect bills for medical treatment."

CAGE TOURNEY TO OPEN HERE

High Schools of Pitt To Compete At College

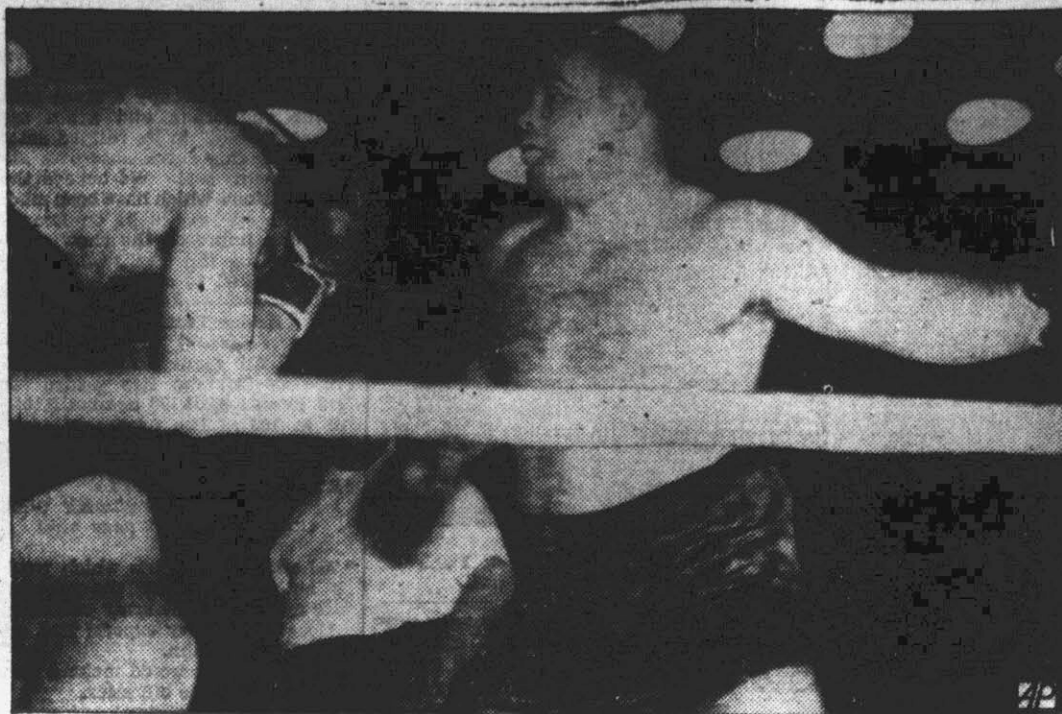

When Pitt County's high school basketball teams began their annual tournament in the Greenville high school gym Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, there's going to be plenty of action.

In addition to the quality of the playing the teams are capable of producing, there is the competitive characteristic to be considered, probably no other county schools in the State have such friendly rivalry existing among their cage teams.

Most of the jealousy in the boys' division is centered around Stokes, defending champions, who nosed out the other boys' teams in last year's tournament doings. With one exception, Stokes has the same team of last year.

A heavy as well as entertaining program is on tap for each of the five days the tournament is in progress.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

New York—Here's the daguerrotype of a hero with clothes pins on his ears, culled from the letter of a correspondent. It isn't often that we betray confidences by printing personal notes, but this is a little different, as I think you will agree: "My most personal contact with a star of any recognition came on a trip about 1925 when I grew tired of a hotel and wanted to live in a private home. I went to Pasadena and got off at a street called Portia street, and upon inquiring at a cute little house where I could get a nice room for a few weeks I was informed by the motherly looking person at the door that she would like to have me, say she was alone with the exception of an actor staying there and he was gone most of the time.

"It was arranged, and that evening at dinner I met the actor. It was none other than Clark Gable and he had never made a movie at the time, but he was acting in a play called 'Madam Frederick' with Pauline Frederick at the El Capitan theater in Hollywood. He was just like any other nice fellow, very pleasant, and he gave us tickets to come and see the play.

"We had many good times together. He was just a big, friendly fellow, not at all like an actor, stuck his fingers in the icing of cakes, ate huge chunks of gingerbread, and kept me in hysterics at the dinner table over the funny faces he made while eating.

"He never went out much at night and always came home after the theater, usually with make-up on his face. He didn't have money on those days, and had to rent the flaxedo he wore in the play; we even helped him dye a brown pair of overalls black to wear with the tuxedo. He also drove an old French car, a Roamer, I think, and we used to drive to the corner to get cream for the coffee.

"When he was at the theater I used to fill his pillow-slip with cold cream jars, and put the shower hose in the foot of his bed so he'd think it was a snake, and ten wad up in my room with a brown pair of overalls black to wear with the tuxedo. He never would say a word. But one night I heard him draw his foot out with a jerk and he hit his knee on the wall and let out a 'DAM' and by that time I was entering the sheets to keep from laughing.

"Even when Mrs. Walker (the lady's name) had to ask for his room when she expected a guest from Canada and told him he could use the davenport in the front room, she didn't complain. But I did have the time of my life then teasing him. If he took a nap I generally hung clothespins on his ears, the snapping kind, so maybe that is the reason they are so big. He was very modest and worried continually for fear the small screen Mimsie stood up around the davenport for him at night would tip over. Generally when I came home at night from a dance or a theater I made as much noise as ever. It was fun, but had I known he would one day become famous I know I'd never have had the courage to tease him as much as I did."

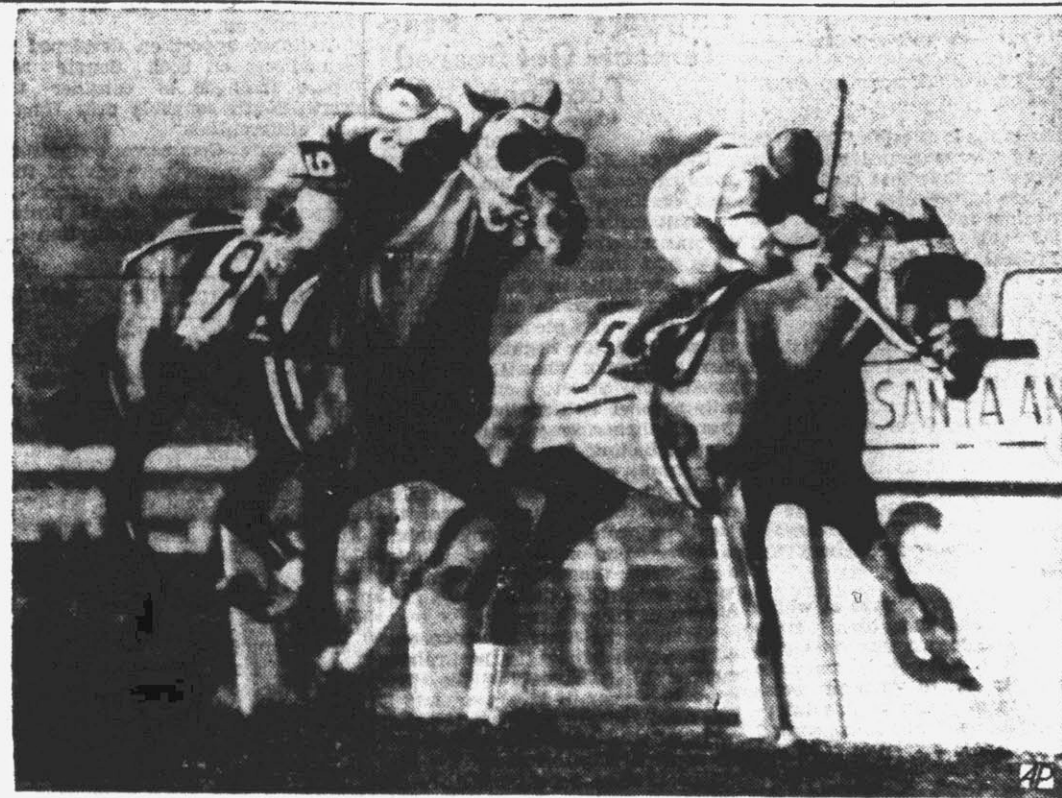

So there it is, a glimpse of the cable that not many people knew. And if the correspondent who included this in her letter is taken aback, she has only herself to blame. After all she shouldn't write such interesting letters.

ESKIMO CCC BOYS BUILD REFRIGERATORS

Juneau, Alaska.—(AP)—The salesman who bragged he could sell ice to the Eskimos would be out of luck these days, for the natives are making their own refrigerators.

Harry Sperling, forest service official, says that near Noatak and Kotzebue natives in the CCC program are digging tunnels and chambers in hillsides where the Arctic frost is always within a few inches of the surface. There they keep reindeer meat and other perishables.

Other Eskimo CCC projects include building airplane landing fields, reindeer corrals and shelter cabins, and controlling predatory animals.

COUNTY AGENT MAKES REPORT

Shows Activities Carried on During Past Week

Following is a narrative report of the Pitt Farm Agent's office showing activities for the week ending February 25, as prepared by County Agent R. R. Bennett:

A demonstration in bloodless castration of beef cattle and sheep and docking sheep and dehorning cattle was given on Mr. J. V. Taylor's farm near Bethel. Six lambs were castrated and docked. Fourteen Hereford bulls were castrated for feeder steers. About 25 head of cattle were dehorned.

A demonstration in bloodless castration and a demonstration in dehorning beef cattle was given on Mr. F. C. Martin's farm near Bethel. Six grade bulls were castrated and eight cattle were dehorned.

A demonstration meeting on grading, marketing, selecting seed, treating seed, and bedding sweet potatoes was conducted by Lewis P. Watson, extension horticulturist, at Mr. Marvin Taylor's potato storage house at Grifton. The following producers were present: R. R. Nelson, F. L. Albritton, Barney Sumrell, J. T. Hill, S. C. Barwick, R. P. Hart, Thos. Hart, Shade E. Harrington, E. P. Hart, Hubert Hart, I. L. Hart, M. E. Hart, James J. Edwards, Marvin Taylor and Otis Stokes.

A similar meeting was held at Mr. J. P. Harris' potato house in Bethel. The following producers attended the Bethel meeting: R. J. Whitehurst, E. A. Tripp, W. J. Mayo, J. V. Taylor, F. C. Martin, Fred Mayo, J. A. Taylor, John Keel and Mr. Purvis.

Both meetings were very interesting and instructive. Demonstrations in the pruning of peach trees were conducted on Mr. G. W. Peed's farm near Greenville and Mr. F. C. Martin's farm near Bethel. Advice was also given on spraying trees.

Four hundred and fifty feet of ditch for tile drainage was staked and a gauge stick cut for Mr. G. W. Peed of near Greenville.

Twelve Pitt county farmers shipped 209 hogs weighing 43,570 pounds. Top hogs sold for $7.50 per hundred pounds f.o.b. Greenville.

Mr. Watson visited R. J. Whitehurst to advise with him in regard to planting peach trees. Meetings have been held in the following communities to discuss the 1933 farm program. Bethel, Fountain, Belvoir, Chirod, Carolina, and Pictou; 350 farmers attended these meetings.

Armed only with a house slipper, J. C. Dempsey, an English householder, recently chased two escaped circus elephants from his garden.

COMMITTEE SEEKING MORE MONEY FROM OIL INDUSTRY

(Continued from Page One) This money representing a number of wholesalers said this will be done unless the bill is very adroitly drawn.

L. N. Thompson, Goldsboro independent distributor, said there is no question that it will be done. Bruce B. Cameron of Wilmington, another independent, was so certain of it that he based his whole talk on the theory that the committee knew it and appeared genuinely surprised when Senate Finance Chairman H. P. Taylor said that the idea is to levy a tax on distributors which will not be passed on to the consumer.

In that case, gentlemen," he grinned. "I really do think this proposal should be very seriously considered before being enacted." Even J. L. Emanuel, Raleigh attorney who appeared for the biggest company of them all, the Standard Oil, said flatly that the tax will be passed along.

In the face of such unanimity of opinion in such a divergent circle of interests the committee members were offered little chance to escape the conclusion that they are preparing to levy an additional tax on the consumer of gasoline who already pays, in open unabashed taxes, seven and a quarter cents on every gallon of gasoline he buys.

It may seem a bit late in this piece to get around to telling what they were specifically talking about, but as a matter of fact that specific proposition really is unimportant by comparison with the general principle involved, which is, as already said an increase in revenues to the state to come from taxes piled on top of the already laid taxes now levied on petroleum products.

Representative Bryant has proposed a levy of $50 on the first 100,000 gallons handled by any wholesale distributor and an additional tax of $25 on each additional 50,000 gallons above 100,000.

After all, differing views of the committee on the gas tax matter were only typical of its differences of opinion on other controverted revenue sections; clashes which have led Speaker Ward to the conclusion that the measure just as well be brought out onto the House floor where things can definitely be settled by a good, old-time knock 'em down and drag 'em out battle in which the whole membership can enjoy itself.

"We ought to get the bill reported in the next day or so," he told your correspondent. "If the committee can't get together and bring in something all its members will fight for, it might just as well be fought out on the floor in committee of the whole."

As for the committee's mood, a Senator who is not by any means an Anti-Administrator said that it is "absolutely out of hand and has no idea of listening to its chairmen."

This Senator said he thought the outbreak in which House Chairman Bill Fenner indulged himself last Friday has quite definitely helped the chances of an increase in income taxes.

"Before then, the committee wasn't with Willie Lee Lumpkin, but he made friends by the calmness with which he answered Fenner's tirade, and it's quite likely to follow him now."

Speaker Ward predicted that the Assembly can still adjourn by April 1, but few can be found who agree with him in view of the fact that the legislature of two years ago had at the corresponding stage of its session enacted both Appropriations and Revenue Bills into the law of North Carolina.

As a matter of fact it was just two years ago yesterday that the Revenue bill passed its third reading in the House after all Senate amendments had been concurred in or settled in conference. The 1931 bill will report out of joint committee on February 10.

This story, readers will no doubt agree, is rather jumbled and confused, but it probably is neither worse jumbled nor more confused than this 1933 General Assembly—particularly the Finance Committee.
