GREAT BRITAIN FACES RECORD BUDGET FIGURE

To Soar Above Billion Pound Mark For First Time

DEFENSE COSTS CAUSE OF BOOST

Annual Army Estimate Raised Quarter Billion Dollars to Peace-time High

London, March 1.—(AP)—Unprecedented peace-time defense costs promised today to send Britain's 1939 budget soaring for the first time beyond the 1,000,000,000 pound mark ($5,000,000,000) as a new high in post-war army strength put the nation's armed manpower at 563,800.

Increases in the regular army and in the territorial army which corresponds to the United States national guard, boosted by 79,857 men last year's combined total, including the army reserve. The annual army estimate was raised by a quarter billion dollars to a new peace-time high.

Announcement of the army estimates following by a day naval estimates for the 1939-40 fiscal year starting April 1, totaling about 153,600,000 pounds, a figure unprecedented since the World War.

The army's 1939-40 share in the estimated $90,000,000-pound defense expenditures will be 161,133,000 pounds, as against 176,500 pounds in the current fiscal year.

War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha, in a memorandum issued with the estimates, said the strength of the regular home army, which includes troops in India and Burma, would be increased by 15,700 to 185,700 during the next fiscal year.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Chamberlain, having overcome bitter parliamentary opposition to British recognition of the Spanish nationalists, awaited the end of the Spanish Civil war as another step in his long-range plan for general European settlement.

After that, the next pressing matters appeared to be German demands for world trade, possibly her colonial grievances and the Italian clamor for French Colonial territory.

Requires Parents Support Children

Domestic troubles consumed much of the time yesterday afternoon's session of Pitt County court. Two cases of non support having been tried.

Robert Haddock, one of the two faced with such a charge, was convicted, but the prosecuting witness, his wife, waived any support for herself. The defendant was ordered to pay two dollars weekly for the support of his child one to be paid each Saturday and the other to be paid when his crop is sold.

Daniel W. Adams also brought into court on a non-support charge was ordered to pay $3 monthly for the support of his child and in addition the defendant agreed to provide food supplies at the first of each month.

Tom Smith was convicted of driving drunk and was fined $50 taxed with the costs had his driving license revoked for 12 months and given a four months road sentence which was suspended upon condition other terms of the judgment were met.

Judge Dink James ordered Clerk E. F. Tucker to make out bills of cost against prosecuting witnesses in three worthless check cases against Lloyd Mills. The case had been called several times and the prosecuting witnesses in each case failed to appear.

HINES SLATED TO RETAIN POWER

May Continue to Hold Office Even If Sent To Jail

New York, March 1.—(AP)—Associates of James J. Hines predicted today he may retain his Tammany Hall district leadership and the power he wields in the New York City Democratic party organization, even though he is sent to prison.

An attorney who has sat in inner councils of Tammany pointed out that while Hines' office is elective, it is unofficial. He expressed the opinion that Hines could not be forced to retire because of his recent conviction on charges of providing political protection for the late Dutch Schultz's lucrative policy racket.

Rumors have been current that Hines quit Tammany's executive committee and his post as leader of the eleven assembly district.

But less than two weeks after his first trial ended in a mistrial last September, when the bulk of evidence on which he was later convicted had been produced, Hines showed his strength in his own district by winning election as delegate to the Democratic state convention by more than double the usual vote.

A highly placed member of the anti-runes Tammany Hall faction admitted he appears strong enough in his own bailiwick to be re-elected as district leader next September, even if he were in a penitentiary.

Real Estate License Tax Held Unconstitutional

Raleigh, March 1.—(AP)—The State Supreme Court ruled today that the 1937 real estate license act was unconstitutional.

Associate Justice Clarkson wrote the opinion in the case of W. J. Dixon, charged by the state with violating the 1937 law in Mecklenburg county. A similar case against O. G. Thomas from Mecklenburg, was decided by the same opinion, which was on a four to three court vote.

Associate Justices Devin, Seawell and Schenck dissented. Justice Barnhill wrote a concurring opinion. Twenty-one cases were decided, all dealing with civil matters except the real estate tax case.

Dixon was convicted in Charlotte Recorder's court of violating the real estate act and upon appeal was convicted in Superior court. He contended that the act was unconstitutional and Judge Burgwyn ruled with him, granting an "arrest of judgment" from which the state appealed.

Entire College Present to Name Spiritual Leader

TO HOLD FIRST VOTE TOMORROW

Last Pieces of Luggage and Supplies Rushed in Before Doors Are Locked

Vatican City, March 1.—(AP)—The 61 Cardinals met in solemn, secret conclave today to begin the elaborate process of electing a new Pope, the spiritual head of 331,500,000 Catholics.

Most of the princes of the church already were in the conclave quarters when William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, the last to arrive, reached Rome a little more than an hour before the opening of the conclave. He and two South American Cardinals joined them, completing the gathering.

It was the first time in many years that the entire college was present in conclave.

The sun breaking through a sudden shower, enfolded the Vatican with a rainbow as the Cardinals went into conclave.

Before the doors were locked, attendants rushed the last pieces of baggage and supplies for their Lenten meal into the conclave quarters.

Only ceremonies preliminary to the voting were performed. The Cardinals and their conclavists swore the oath of secrecy and were locked up in a wing of the Vatican, after saying prayers for guidance.

The actual voting begins tomorrow. The Cardinals began to gather at the Vatican early in the afternoon.

Accompanied by their conclavists, a priest and servant to assist each Cardinal, the Princes of the church walked to the Pauline chapel. Each was flanked by Swiss guards.

Union Negotiators To Gather in Less Than A Week

Washington, March 1.—(AP)—Secretary Perkins said today she would call a meeting of the A. F. of L.—C. I. O. peace negotiating committee "in less than a week."

Upwards of seven million workers are involved in the dispute between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The conferences, in response to a presidential request to closed the breach between organized workers will be the first between the two groups since October, 1937.

C. I. O. President John Lewis acted yesterday to make possible the renewed negotiations by appointing three C. I. O. negotiators to meet a similar committee named Saturday by A. F. of L. President William Green.

In a four-line letter to Mr. Roosevelt L. was accepted the President's invitation and picked as the C. I. O. negotiators himself and his two vice presidents, Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray.

Congress Speeds Along on National Defense Program

ORDER HEARINGS ON GUAM BASE

Federal Housing Administration Investigating Its N. C. Office in Greensboro

Washington, March 1.—(AP)—Congress, speeding along a big national defense program, received today a half billion army supply bill providing the first money for President Roosevelt's $300,000,000 air corps expansion program.

The House Appropriations committee gave the measure its approval and placed it on the House schedule for early consideration, while the Senate moved toward a show-down vote on the most controversial item in the $338,000,000 army expansion, the maximum strength of the army air corps.

The Senate's Naval committee meanwhile brought to the forefront again the controversial issue of whether Guam island in the Pacific should be fortified, by ordering hearings on a Senate bill which includes a $5,000,000 authorization for a naval base on the island.

On the Senate floor, Senator Chavez (D-N. M.) urged that the administration "take immediate steps" to recognize General Franco's Nationalist government in Spain.

Meanwhile the House reversed itself and approved appropriations totaling $17,206,000 to continue work on the TVA's controversial Gilbertsville dam and for preliminary work on two others.

The Federal Housing Administration was disclosed to be investigating its North Carolina office in Greensboro with a view of possible (Continued on page six)

Select Manufacturers to Provide Munitions

JUDGE WOOTEN TO OFFER PLAN

To Make Suggestions At Aldermen Meet Tomorrow

F. M. Wooten, former mayor of Greenville, served notice today that he would appear before the Board of Aldermen tomorrow night and make several suggestions involving changes in the city government.

He outlined his proposals and said he would welcome a discussion pro and con, both by members of the board and others.

He said he would recommend that the mayor be made chairman ex-officio of the Board of Aldermen, the Water and Light Commission and of the Board of Trustees of the schools and be invested with authority to vote on each case of a tie.

That an amendment be drafted—if one is necessary, empowering the Board of Aldermen and the mayor to employ a city manager, whose duties shall be to execute ordinances, resolutions and orders of the board and mayor in the general duties of supervising employees and that the board and mayor, who are elected by the people, be held responsible for the efficiency and good judgment of the manager. The recommendation would require the city manager to attend all meetings of the Board of Aldermen, the Water and Light Commission and the School board in an advisory capacity, but without power to vote on any.

He also will propose that at or near the beginning of the next fiscal year the board, with the advice of the mayor, appoint a committee of 12 representative citizens of Greenville to study the present laws governing the city and its present and future needs and make a preliminary report on their studies and investigations pertaining to the year 1940, and that this preliminary report be considered by the committee, Board of Aldermen and mayor and then be referred back to the committee for a final report to be made to the board not later than November 1, 1940.

Final vote to report House Bill 13 unfavorably and a committee substitute containing all the changes made by the committee favorably was adopted with no more than a few scattered but determined "Noes" and came after Commissioner of Revenue Maxwell, who has sat through all the sessions, expressed the opinion that the budget is balanced, temporarily at least.

Representative Victor Bryant asked Mr. Maxwell "After consideration of the bill as we are ready to report it and comparing it with the proposed Appropriations bill, do you think the budget is substantially balanced?"

To which the Commissioner of Revenue replied "Yes, I think the budget is substantially balanced."

Whereas former Speaker Gregg Cherry remarked loud enough for those near him to hear "Just wait until it gets to the floor, we'll unbalance it." The comment was more general as facetious, but it may be even more pointed.

Final balancing gestures consisted in marching down the income tax bill up which the committee gaily marched Monday, then taking away 15 per cent of the intangible taxes the counties and cities were conceded several weeks ago by the committee.

Money Bills Now Facing Final Battles On Floor

Raleigh, March 1.—(AP)—Entire membership of the General Assembly, particularly the House personnel, is now ready to embark on the business of determining what North Carolina shall spend and how it shall collect that sum in taxes during the next two years.

The Finance committee yesterday afternoon put the budget into precarious balance and passed the measure along to the floor of the House, where fights of various degrees of intensity are sure to break out.

Final vote to report House Bill 13 unfavorably and a committee substitute containing all the changes made by the committee favorably was adopted with no more than a few scattered but determined "Noes" and came after Commissioner of Revenue Maxwell, who has sat through all the sessions, expressed the opinion that the budget is balanced, temporarily at least.

ELECTION LAW BILL RETURNED TO COMMITTEE

Uprising Develops In House Over Vote Markers

AMEND BILL TO PROVIDE BADGES

Committee's Compromise on Division of Intangibles Tax Encounters Opposition

Raleigh, March 1.—(AP)—An uprising in the House of Representatives against a bill to curtail the activity of markers in primary elections, resulted today in the measures being re-referred to the Election committee for revisions.

The so-called "election reform" bloc, however, was successful in defeating a motion to kill the bill. The motion, made by Representative Darden of Washington, lost on a roll call vote, 64 to 45.

Before the measure was sent back to committee it was amended to provide that markers in general elections must wear badges bearing the name of the party with which they are affiliated.

Meanwhile strong opposition to the legislative Finance committee's compromise on the division of receipts from the intangibles tax was expressed by J. L. Skinner of Littleton, secretary of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners.

Skinner charged in a statement that the committee had violated an agreement with counties and cities whereby the subdivisions would receive 75 per cent of intangibles receipts.

Also, the House committee, on courts and judicial districts amended and voted a favorable report for a bill to revise the selection of justices of the peace.

As amended, the bill provides for the election of justices every two years starting in 1940. One justice would be allowed in each township, regardless of the size; and an additional justice would be allowed for townships of 5,000 to 15,000 population; and still an additional justice would be allowed for each 20,000 population.

Decrease Seen In Monthly Arrests

H. B. Drum, clerk of municipal recorder's court, revealed today that only 49 persons were indicted in the city during the month of February, compared with 56 in January and 93 in December last year.

Fines and costs assessed in the tribunal during the 28day month totalled $259.20, compared with $421.35 during January.

The collections last month were divided as follows: $179.20 to city general fund; $40 to the school fund; $20 to the police pension fund and $20 to the State Department of Justice.

Thirty-six defendants were convicted in February, ten were acquitted, one appealed and three asked for a trial by jury and their cases were transferred to Superior court.

HER PEACH SAPLING PROVED VERY ROBUST

Ontario, Calif. (AP)—In 1932 Mrs. C. C. Barnes bought and planted what she thought was an ordinary peach sapling. She was amazed when in an off-season, it budded well ahead of schedule and bore a fine crop of fruit.

Realizing she "had something," Mrs. Barnes has taken and cultivated saplings from the original tree with conspicuous success in getting early and heavy crops. Many acres in various ranches are now planted with offspring of the freak specimen.

Smith, Mrs. Wyatt Brown and Mrs. Robert Green. Other guests included Mrs. J. E. Nobles, Mrs. J. H. Rose, Mrs. Eldridge, Mrs. G. B. W. Hadley, Mrs. A. H. Taft, Mrs. Patsy Randolph, Mrs. L. H. Whitehurst and Mrs. T. G. Basnight, Sr., of Stokes.

In the living room were many antiques in the keeping of the manner of living of many years ago. Magazines of fashions, pictures and clothes over a hundred years old were displayed. These provoked much interest and amusement among the members and guests.

Mrs. Munford, suitably attired in a dress with hooped skirt, bonnet and shawl worn by her grandmother, gave the paper entitled "Fashions—New and Old." She told of the changes in manner of dress, costumes and hair dress from the peoples 2500 B. C. up through the centuries to the present time. Very old and rare pictures were shown depicting the manner of dress of the years described.

A hobby gives us freedom from routine, escape from ourselves and it also provides a medium of contact with interesting people oftentimes.

Following this interesting talk, the hostess, assisted by her daughter and Mrs. Hinton Best, served a most delicious salad with cake and coffee.—Reported.

Inter Se Club.

"The term American Literature is both inexact and misleading, for our literature is far older than our national life. It means simply, the American branch of English literature set by colonization in fresh earth." Thus did Mrs. Jack Edwards preface her paper on "American Fiction Before 1900" which she presented to the Inter Se Club on Tuesday afternoon.

American literature stands in a different position from that occupied by many of the great literatures of the world. Our ancestors brought with them a mature civilization and hence our literature cannot be expected to express all the natural stages of a people's growth. Our literature falls into three divisions, each of which represents a stage in our historical progress: 1. The Colonial Period, 1607-1765; 2. The Establishment of Nationality, 1765-1815; 3. The Literature of the Republic, 1809—

It is little wonder that in the wilds of America men could not give up their lives to literature. Consequently, the earliest books were stories of what they had seen and done, stories of adventures and customs in the new land. In each colonial group literature had an independent beginning and a separate development due to the barriers of forest and wilderness and to the underlying difference in spirit and origin.

Between 1765 and 1815, when the colonies drew together, literature began to express a new national spirit. Nearly all of our most lasting and important literary contributions have been produced since 1809. Our triumph over England followed by the realization that we had actually taken our place among the nations of the world, put a new and patriotic life into our literature.

In discussing individual authors, Mrs. Edwards gave a sketch of the life of Charles Bracken Brown (1771-1810), the first American who devoted himself to literature as a profession; Washington Irving (1783-1859) who is the first of our greater men of letters; James Fenimore Cooper (1789-1851) who represents the stirring spirit of a young people; Edgar Allan Poe (1809-1849) who was a master in depicting the horrible and the grotesque; Thomas Bailey Aldrich (1836-1907); Trvin Russell (1853-1879); and Samuel Langhorne Clemens—our Mark Twain, who became the best known and probably the best loved man of letters in America. Through him we speak to the world.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Edwards' paper there was a short business meeting. Following this, a salad course was served by Mrs. Burke Stanell and Mrs. William Taft. The hostess, Mrs. M. K. Blount, was forced to be absent, due to the illness of Mr. M. O. Blount.—Reported.

She will talk in an open meeting in the Sheppard Memorial Library auditorium tonight at 8 o'clock. Interested citizens are invited to hear her.

Miss Cassatt as case workers and later director of family welfare organizations has had experience and training which make her an able director in the state program of public welfare. She gives tersely the philosophy of social work; discusses both sides of the social problems. Her keen sense of humor makes her a delightful speaker. The open meeting tonight will afford a treat to those who are able to attend.

Orchestra Gives Program.

The East Carolina Teachers College orchestra of 27 pieces gave its first public program yesterday at the college assembly, playing under the direction of Mr. A. Dittmer, member of the music department.

Among the 27 were seven from Greenville or Pitt county: Misses Margaret H. Moore, Elinor Rives, Betty and Barbara Keuzenkamp, and H. A. MacDougall, Carl Allegood and Frank E. Briley.

The first group played included two numbers by Richard Wagner, "March Tannhauser," and "Pillgrim's Chorus."

The second group, of a more romantic type, was composed of Liszt's "Dream of Love" and Tschalkowsky's "Sleeping Beauty."

The last group was "Who Is Sylvia?" a Schubert composition, and a Gilbert and Sullivan number "Entrance and March of the Peers."

The 27 members of the group are divided among strings, brasses and wood winds.

Players other than those from Greenville are: (Students) Misses Pauline Nelson, Helen Ward, Juanita Simpson, Ophelia Lanvaster, and Melba Phelps; Vincent Romano, Ingram Walters, Spencer Hatley, Vern Keutemeyer, Hicks Henderson, Thomas J. Meeks and Orval Morton. (Faculty), Miss Lois V. Gorrell, Miss Alma Browning, Miss Lucy Nulton, Miss Annie Newell, Miss Cleo Rainwater, Miss Velma Lowe and Dean C. Tabor.

Washington Daybook
By Preston Grover

Washington, Feb. 28—Speaker Libby is getting to the point where he can't appreciate a joke that takes up the House's time.

In fact it now stands before the Supreme Court both for and against the proposition. One of its more remote "left hands" away out in Utah didn't know what the "right hand" in Washington was doing.

Soon the court is to begin hearing the appeal of the New York State Tax Commission from a decision of state courts holding that the salary of James O'Keefe, an attorney in New York for the Home Owners Loan Corporation, could not be taxed by the state.

The New York commission may have been skating on thin ice when it moved on the case, as the states generally have been trying to escape a change in the Supreme Court rulings which held that the state and the federal government could not tax one another's employees.

But the state came in on a special proposition. It argued that O'Keefe was not truly an employee of the Government but an employee of a Government corporation, HOLC. O'Keefe, claiming exemption, won the battle in state courts. The tax commission appealed.

Immediately the federal government intervened, happy at a chance to ask the Supreme Court to overrule its 67-year-old decision.

Yes—And No

The fact that Congress has done nothing in those years to eliminate the exemption does not prove that it sanctions them, argued the Government speaking through Solicitor General Robert Jackson.

But out in Utah a somewhat similar case developed. W. Q. Van Cott, an attorney for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, claimed exemption from state income taxes. He won in the state courts. Utah appealed.

Van Cott argued that Congress, by ignoring the exemptions for 69 years, had indicated that it DOES sanction the exemption. That was directly opposite to Jackson's position in the O'Keefe case.

In any event the Supreme Court will hear the two arguments together early in March.

The New York law specifically exempts federal salaries from taxation but the state tax commission argues that O'Keefe is an employee of an agency that is "non-essential." HOLC is really a federal mortgage bank.

Would Mean A Lot

The federal government insists that HOLC, even though not strictly governmental, nevertheless is a real federal agency.

The Government argues that O'Keefe could be taxed if it were not for the state law.

Van Cott out in Utah, however, takes the position that because he is a federal office holder he can't be taxed.

If the Supreme Court should reverse itself thousands of state employees would at once be subject to federal income taxes. And likely enough states and Congress would lose no time opening up federal salaries to state taxation.

Already the House has passed a bill approving such taxation. Originally the court held such taxation of one by the other was a dangerous and unconstitutional violation of the sovereignty of state and nation.

SHORT SHOTS
By HENRY AVERILL and LYNN NISBET

Raleigh, March 1—Speaker Libby is getting to the point where he can't appreciate a joke that takes up the House's time.

Immediately after passage of the bill authorizing a $30,000 appropriation to combat the Japanese beetle, Jackson's Dan Tompkins sent forward a bill to appropriate $500,000 from the general fund "for extermination of the pest known as the jittersbug."

"The gentleman is out of order," snapped Libby.

North Carolina's old folks aren't likely to get anything added to their Social Security checks by this legislature, but if a bill offered by Wilson Alexander enacted, they will have some consolation.

The Mecklenburger would make hunting and fishing licenses free to all those over 65 years old.

Leroy Allen, representing the Wake county food dealers association, appeared before J-1 while it was considering Senate bill 75, the much-cursed "Fair or unfair as the case may be" Trade bill.

"We feel this bill is an unfair act," he boldly began.

Then he stopped short, realizing how that sounded.

"I mean it is aimed at unfair practices," he hastily corrected himself.

It was noticeable that nobody—not even a chain store at which the bill is professionally aimed—appeared in opposition. This may be explained on the ground that the ultimate consumer does not maintain any Raleigh lobby.

Up to now the senate has been very courteous to all its members, but sort of sat upon its own popular president pro tem at the Monday night session. The question up for consideration was higher education for Negroes. Senator Smith opined that it would cost money.

He has been sitting in with the finance sub-committee trying to raise enough for the other demands of the state. He asked Senator Folger, whose committee reported out the bill if he would object to a motion to refer it to appropriations. Folger answered that he wouldn't object to Senator Smith making the motion, but would vote against it. Smith made the motion. It got one vote—his own. He grinned, waved his hand and settled back to enjoy the rest of the evening.

Senator Ralph Gardner blushes easily—and frequently—these days. Hardly a senate session passes without some reference to his speech a few days ago on the fundamentals of constitutional government. Ralph saw one of his pet bills in a jam and he broke a resolution he had made to have very little to say during the legislature. He really said something that day. References to his short speech are all complimentary and sincere on the part of other senators, but young Gardner wishes they would forget it. The opinion is frequently expressed by older heads in the senate and capitol observers that the speech may be forgotten, but that Ralph Gardner himself is going to be heard from a whole lot in North Carolina within the next ten or twelve years.

If Tom Bost, veteran Raleigh newspaper correspondent, ever wants to go into the publishing business on his own hook he has an invitation to go to Pittsboro. The cordial invitation was given in the senate Monday night by Senator Barber of the Chatham county seat. The alacrity with which Senator Gold of Guilford endorsed the idea, caused several bystanders to raise their brows. For a quarter of a century Tom Bost has written for the biggest daily newspaper in Senator Gold's county.

Marysville, Kans. (AP)—Marshall county is helping its farmers return to the hog business, from which they were forced by drought in recent years.

The county has purchased 12 brood sows and they are loaned to farmers for brood purposes. The borrower may feed all but one of the pigs farrowed.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

By GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

The Characters
Peter Mallone: Adventurous Journalist.
Petronella: His sister.
James: Petrel's fiancé.

Yesterday: Worried about Peter and Tony, Petrel comes up to London for more news. She meets Clare Horton, again.

Chapter 37
Decision

"TELL me more about it. I can't promise. There are reasons—I don't think I can go. But I might," Petrel stammered.

Clare put out a hand and touched hers. "My dear child, I'd quite forgotten. Of course, you have reason. I saw the announcement in the Times. I should have congratulated you. No, one couldn't expect a fiancé to let you go to Spain!"

"That is just over," Petronella told her. "That isn't the reason." Instead of questioning her, Clare explained.

"I want to make a camp somewhere in the mountains near Madrid. Soon, the city is going to fall to Franco," Clare assured her with conviction. "We shall keep the children safe while the air raids finish their job, then return them to their homes, when Madrid has surrendered."

Petronella's expression was agonized, as she met Clare's eyes. "There's nothing I'd rather do. It would be fine, to try to save something from the awful wreckage, and pain, men inflict on themselves, and their children. I've seen so much suffering. I've seen children as you've seen them, pale, starving, and babies with eyelids as mauve as crocuses. But if only you'd ask me to go somewhere else. Not to Madrid."

Quite bluntly, Clare suddenly asked her question. "Why?" She leaned towards her. "I've known since I first met you, that we ought to be talking about you," she stated quietly. "If it can possibly help? Of course, if it can't, shut me up. I'm so used to organizing people," she smiled.

"I wish you could organize me. You—you remember Tony Lance?" Petronella asked. Clare did not pretend denseness.

"So he is the trouble?" For a moment Petronella was silent, while Clare waited. Then, as though she were ten years younger, she blurted out the truth. "I've loved him for years, years. I know he's no good to me, but I'm a fool, and can't help it."

One of Clare's eyebrows lifted slightly. "So you're the girl he met in Rangoon? I wondered, when he told me."

"He put me second, then, to his work. He just went off without a word."

"He told me something of the sort."

"It has been the same ever since. Whenever we've met, he has acknowledged it, and thought it unimportant. He knew I'd wait, because I couldn't help it. But he wouldn't admit he was glad of it. He had met last year in Cairo. He hadn't seen me for a long time, I'd changed a great deal. It suddenly struck him that, after all, my life with Peter had turned me into a possible wife for him. So, at last, when it really suited him, he admitted that he loved me. But then—"

"Yes, tell me what happened in Cairo?"

Petronella's low, urgent, unhappy voice described the few days of happiness, and the way they had ended. Her eyes met Clare's.

"You see? Life with Tony would be like that—danger, trouble, horror. If I'd married him, I'd be in Madrid, now."

Clare Horton sat back. Her lips smiled, her eyes soft. She shook her head gently at Petronella.

"Then that is where you ought to be, my dear. You love him. You can't make your own terms with love."

"But he doesn't love me enough. He can't! He let me go!"

Clare stirred her tea. "When I met him in China, and he told me about you, he explained why he'd left you. He was afraid your nerve might go. Well, he was right. If he said you were the wrong type to stand suspense, and the sight of suffering. You were! Petronella gulped, but sat listening to this gentle reproof.

"Perhaps it was because your life with your brother never seemed permanent, or compulsory, that you stood it so long. But when you came to face marrying, and going on—"

Torn In Half

"YOU'RE right," Petrel interrupted her. "I did feel like that. Tony seemed suddenly strange, and not worth it. I longed for him to promise me security, and he didn't. It was only when I'd had time to calm down, away from him, that I knew I still loved him. But what would have been the use of it? He doesn't love me enough to give up anything for me. I should have been miserable. Clare bit her score, unimpressed. "Well, it is perfectly obvious that you're torn in half, trying to stay away from him."

"Then—you'd go? My fiancé fell in love with another girl. You'd tell him that, that had to set him free!" Petronella challenged.

"Certainly. That was also Tony's fault."

"You'd just go back and surrender on his terms?"

Clare smiled. "No, but I should go back. The terms won't arrange themselves so badly, if he loves you."

Petronella was thinking. At last she said, "Do you know, you're right! If the news comes that they're alive, I'll go."

"I'm glad. Go and telephone again."

Petronella did not think there could be any news yet, but there was a chance. She kept telling herself, as she dialed the News office number, and waited, that she was mad to feel this inner elation, and excitement. But the moment she heard the voice of her friend on the switchboard answering her, she knew it was justified.

"Is that Miss Mallone? Oh, we've been wanting to get you. I'll put you straight through to Mr. Rowdon."

"Petrel?" cried Martin Rowdon heartily. "We've just heard. Those fellows aren't even English. Peter and Tony Lance haven't left Madrid. They've only just heard the run-rumor themselves. But they're finding it harder, and harder, to get a line."

Petrel's answer was a whimper of delight. "Oh, Martin—I'm so happy!"

"Stand! I know how you feel."

"Martin—I'll be ringing you again later," she half sobbed. "To tell you some news. I—I'm going to Spain myself. I shall wait your help."

Her feet did not notice the station until she reached Clare again. She shouted, "They're all right! from the door."

"I felt they must be."

Petronella repeated what Martin Rowdon had told her. Her eyes were shining. I'm still going! You helped tremendously," she told her. "If I hadn't met you, I might be feeling even sadder and angrier, after that scare. Now, well, I'm just thanking God I met you, Clare. Whatever happened, I feel at one again; alive again. You see, Tony and Peter, they matter. They're my life. When I'm away from them, I'm dead. How does one get to Madrid?"

"By ship to Valencia, I think." She decided that she should leave as soon as possible. Martin Rowdon would wire Peter to meet her. Clare had become exceedingly practical, now that it was settled. She was determined to see about a line to Madrid for other people, even if she did not manage it for herself.

"Public sympathy is one difficult thing here. You see, we can't combine children of both government and insurgent parents in the scheme. But I shall get to work as soon as I hear from you, and shall be out there as soon as I can, to complete arrangements."

"I'm Glad I Failed"

JAMES sat opposite Petronella at lunch. It was Monday, and he looked so round her face. She was pale, shining eyed, and sitting nervously upright. The orchestra was playing a romantic selection from Lehár, and there was a pleasant aroma from the sizzling grill and the fowers between them of the table.

Her passport lay on the white cloth. She had shown him her special visa. He had heard her intention. It was incredible, thought James. She was leaving this, for Spain. She was going back to those two, and had promised to leave Clare and her difficult, probably thankless responsibilities as an excuse for going. James was horribly afraid for her life.

Because of the degree of love he must always feel, and the mixture of admiration and pity for her, he would apply the greatest pressure he could to stop her going. For he doubted that she thought it her duty, in a generous cause. She had not stressed that reason. No, she needed saving from herself, from her infatuation for Lance. And from her love for Peter.

She certainly did not know, yet about himself and Tamara. If he could prevent her committing this final folly, she need never know. He had told Tamara that, sternly. He was prepared to give up their new, quickening love for his former loyalty. She valued her engagement as a safe background even if she did not love him past that. They would be happy. He would probably be safer with her, than with Tamara.

"It's a crazy idea. You can't do any real good."

"The work is largely common sense."

"But, Petrel, can't you see it isn't your job? You're engaged to be my wife. To live in England."

"There's no longer any question of our marrying one another," she smiled at his blustering.

"But we settled all that. I know you still love Tony, and always will, to a certain degree, in spite of the rotten way he's consistently treated you. There isn't any need to throw our solid, reliable understanding over because of him."

Wasn't he going to say anything about Tamara? Didn't he want to be free? Why did he keep giving her the chances? James looked away. She understood. No wonder she had very nearly succeeded in loving him!

"If I could have forgotten Tony, I would have done," she said, her voice gentle with gratitude. "But I'm glad I failed, James. We might have been happy together, if I'd never met Hony. I might still have made you happy, if Tamara hadn't slipped into my place. Thank you for pretending so hard, to try to stop me!"

Tomorrow: A prophecy fulfilled.

Legislature Still Facing Seed Bill

Raleigh, Feb. 27.—The 1939 pure seed law is to be denied the honor of adoption at the historic Charlotte meeting.

It passed third roll call reading in the Senate there, and House members had agreed to concur in minor amendments. Then there developed some more hitches and it was the opinion of leaders this morning, that the measure will have to go back on three readings in both houses.

It first proposed a dollar tax on boxes or cases of 48 packages of seed, but the seed packers don't put them up that way and the ante had to be raised. That is material, will reduce revenue as well as changing the base of levy, and necessitates return to first reading.

Start Laboratory To Study Tobacco

Raleigh, Feb. 28.—Construction of a $63,000 laboratory to facilitate the study and control of tobacco diseases and pests has begun at the tobacco station at Oxford and will be completed in seven months, according to announcement this morning by F. E. Miller, director of the state farms in the Department of Agriculture.

The laboratory building will also house an office for the station. Besides there will be two or three other buildings to be used as garages, tool houses, etc., all of which was made possible by a congressional appropriation of $80,000 some time ago.

The main laboratory building will be three stories high, built of brick, and will house workers of the federal bureau of Entomology and Quarantine, as well as state specialists.

Addition of this modern laboratory will greatly aid the work of the state and federal departments in preventing and controlling diseases of tobacco and will mean a great deal to the farmers of North Carolina.

E. G. Moss, assistant director in charge of the tobacco test farm, is recognized as one of the leading authorities in his field in the United States. His work has been somewhat handicapped by inadequate space and equipment, a condition which will be relieved by the new laboratory.

If a candle had three ends...

Those who burn the candle at both ends are borrowing tomorrow's pleasures for today. If a candle had three ends they'd burn them all. Then, there's the fellow who never lights his candle at all. He's bluffed by his fears of tomorrow.

The destiny of our America depends upon those who can see today's needs clearly... who can await tomorrow with confidence. Such was the spirit of our gallant forefathers. Had they burned the candle at both ends, or had they failed to burn it at all... they would have accomplished nothing. Instead, they left us a priceless heritage... a land and opportunities that other nations envy.

'Minor Minors' Send Up Half Of The Rookies; Senators To Try Out Pair Of Charlotte Players

By DILLON GRAHAM (AP Feature Service Sports Writer)

NEW YORK—It's a pretty big jump from the lower class minor leagues to the majors and the odds are that only one or two rookies will make the leap this spring.

The minors, from class A on down, are contributing nearly half of all the rookies heading to southern bases and many of them show great promise.

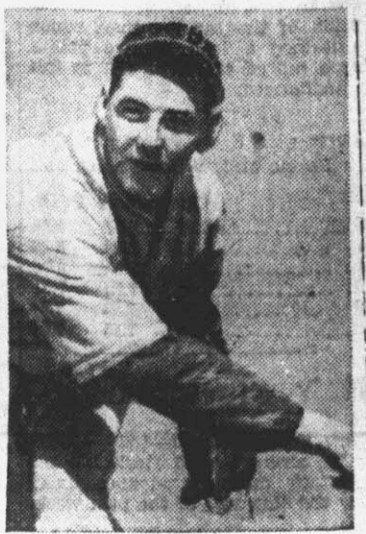

The Washington Senators look for Roberto Estalla to be a regular outfielder. The squat Cuban was a fence-buster for Charlotte last season, leading the league with a batting average of .386.

Charlotte's Bucky Jacobs, a slim right hander who had a 21-and-5 pitching mark, is another good prospect, while James Bloodworth may be the Senators' utility infielder.

The Boston Bees will look over Pitchers James Doll and Tom Earley of Hartford and John Pezzullo of Savannah. Doll had a 17-10 mark. Early impressed Boston authorities with a 4-1 victory in his first National league start last September. Pezzullo, who was with the Phillies several years ago, had a great sea-

Other rookie graduates include: Pitchers Al Hazel, Evansville, and Al Moran, Hartford. Catchers Joe Andrews, Hartford, Phil Mast, Springfield, and Charles Sutcliffe, Salisbury, and Outfielder Ralph M-Leod, Hartford, all of the Boston Bees.

Pitcher Paul Gehman and Infielders Dan Long, Albany, and Willard Sorenson, Waterloo, to Cincinnati. Pitcher Elmer Burkart, and Outfielders Alex Pitko and Norman DeWeese, Montgomery, to the Philadelphia Phillies; Infielder Frank Gustine, Hutchinson, and Outfielder Bob Elliott, Savannah, to Pittsburgh.

Catcher Jake Early and Pitchers Joe Hayne and Arnold Anderson, Charlotte, and Pitcher Forrest Brewer, St. Augustine, and Outfielder Douglas Green, Greenville, S. C. to Washington; and Infielders Lou Boudreau, Cedar Rapids, and Lloyd Russell, Albany, to Cleveland.

Invitational Tournament to Open Tomorrow Night

Action in the annual Carolina Teachers College invitational boxing tournament will begin on Thursday night with a nine-fight card, with a dozen battles scheduled for Friday night.

Coach J. D. Alexander, tournament director, said the 35 fighters representing seven East Carolina schools will weigh in Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

Schools in the tournament and the fighters in each follow: Bath 2, Walstonburg 2, Burgaw 5, Clayton 5, Kinston 12, Ayden 10 and Chiswick 5.

Kinston high school, which garners honors in last year's tournament activities, is slated to do as well this year.

Wilmer Leary, a red headed Irishman fighting in the 145-pound division, is entered in the local tangle. He was victorious in the decision of the Golden Glove jamboree and is slated to take home honors for Kinston.

EDMOND TEACHERS, OKLAHOMA	This team in 1910 participated in the game that resulted in the finest defensive display of Oklahoma U's history. Score: Oklahoma 90, Edmond 1.
ROSS PLYMELL, BRIGHTON, COLO.	With the score 28-all, he sank a field goal in the last few seconds. But he made it in the wrong basket, thereby winning for the other team.
HANK STEINBACHER, AN OUTFIELDER	He is, according to Dr. Ad Schacht, the loudest snorer in the major leagues.
ART SYKES, A FISTICUFFER	He was, according to Joe Louis, on the receiving end of the hardest punch Louis ever delivered.
GORDON BUGG, COLORADO COLLEGE ATHLETE.	He was nicknamed "Jitter."

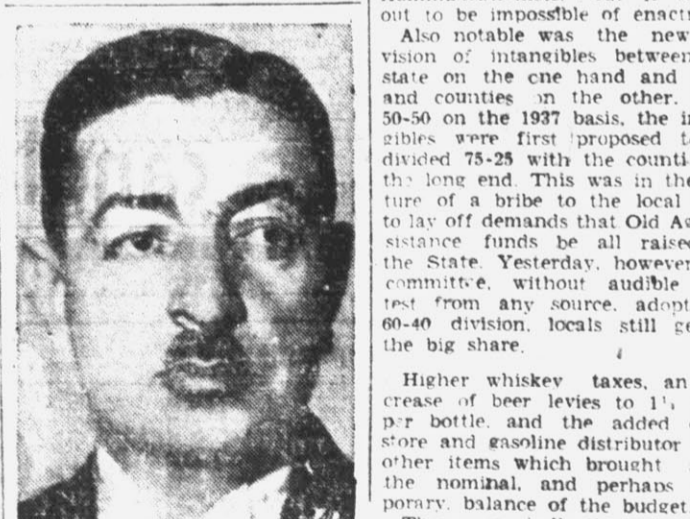

115-pound division last year, is entered in the 128-pound class this year. Clifton Jarman, winner in last year's 75-pound class duel, will compete as an 85-pound entry this year. Also entered from Kinston are Jesse Jones, 155-pound scrapper, and Robert Hartell, winner in the 98-pound class in the 1937-38 tournament. He will be in the same class this season, in that he has not added any poundage.

Boys entered in the tournament are conceded to be good scrappers and should be able to supply local sports fans with plenty of entertainment. For many of the entries, cornbread and molasses will be converted to fight energy.

CROAT AUTONOMY demands constitute gravest problem facing Dragissha Cvetkovich, new premier of Yugoslavia.

This section was fought for with a dogged determination by Senate Finance Chairman H. P. Taylor and a number of staunch Administrationists, but it turned out to be impossible of enactment.

Also notable was the new division of intangibles between the state and counties in the other. Split 50-50 on the 1937 basis, the intangibles were first proposed to be divided 75-25 with the counties on the long end. This was in the nature of a bribe to the local units to lay off demands that Old Ave assistance funds be all raised by the State. Yesterday, however, the committee, without audible protest from any source, adopted a 60-40 division, locals still getting the big share.

Higher whiskey taxes, an increase of beer levies to 1 1/2 cents per bottle, and the added chain store and gasoline distributor taxes, other items which brought about the nominal, and perhaps temporary, balance of the budget.

There are indications that the fight has really just begun, but no real prediction can be made until sentiment has had a chance to crystallize as a result of the reporting of the Revenue and Appropriations measures to the floor.

Assembly Laymen Out-Talk Lawyers

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, March 1—When laymen out-talk lawyers on a question of court procedure...

And when a layman actually asks for more authority for lawyers and judges than the legal fraternity desires, that is news. Therefore, the Monday night session of the senate was a news meeting.

Senator Boyette explained the bill and the discretion of the legislature. He said instead of the death penalty in capital cases, when the state recommends mercy, the judge should have the right to impose a fine or imprisonment rather than death.

Senator Will Graham vigorously opposed the bill because he said it gave too much authority to juries. He doesn't think much of the jury system. His plea was that of conservation everywhere—"we have eaten alone for years under the present system, why at this late day seek to change it?"

Hardly had Mr. Graham finished when Senator Wellons, a lawyer, arose to offer amendments which made it mandatory on the judge to impose sentence of imprisonment rather than death.

Most powerful pleas for the bill came from Senators Senak and Small both laymen. Small likes it because it will cut some his lawyer fees in partition and commutation appeals. Senator Senak is strong for it because he thinks it is one step, not a very long one, toward certain some advance towards his goal of complete abolition of capital punishment in North Carolina.

The question was one of vital concern to lawyers but the laymen took charge of it and passed it through the senate.

HERE'S INSIDE STORY ON WHAT A CO-ED DOES AT COLLEGE

New Orleans—(AP)—Newcomb College girls spend as much time every week talking as they do studying, a survey shows.

Reverend a junior, found after checking among fellow students that every week they use up 21 hours poring over books and 21 hours in conversation.

And here's how the girls accounted for the rest of their time: Eighteen hours in class; 14 on sleep; 50 sleeping, one just waiting for people; 12 hours and 15 minutes eating; three at meetings such as the student council and sometimes; two hours and 55 minutes putting curlers in their hair before going to bed and taking them out when they get up and the rest of the time going from one place to another, playing games and deciding which dress to wear.

SEEKS SCHOOL FOR PRINTERS

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Feb. 28—The master printers' association in North Carolina thinks that there aren't enough good printers to supply the demand. The typographic union thinks that there aren't enough good jobs to go around. That is the reason the boss printers are supporting the bill for removal of the print shop from State prison to State College and establishment of a printing school there, while the working printers are very much opposed to any such proposition.

When the print shop was established at the prison some 15 years ago, master printers and employed printers alike opposed it. The argument was that it was convict competition with free labor. During the past dozen years the shop has done a great deal of the ordinary printing for the state departments, and has reasonably well justified its existence. Competition with outside printers was not so keen as was feared, and the working printers, at least, are reconciled to the present set-up. Owners of print shops, who have large capital investment in machinery that must be idle part of the time, still do not like the idea of prison competition. They think that if the equipment is transferred to the college it can be done under some plan which will preclude the actual delivery of any finished printing to state departments, and that at the same time it will make the available supply of competent printers larger, and so might reduce the potential labor costs in their shops.

Components of the printing school at State College point to what they call the failure of the school of journalism at Chapel Hill as evidence that the proposed school would not be worth a great deal in actually hitting young men to set type and make printing presses.

Meaningless plans for establishment of a print shop at the college would do the college printing, but which would have no incident, if any, while as a training school are going along.

LOUIS-GALENTO FIGHT IN JUNE

Promoter Mike Jacobs Makes Expected Announcement

Miami Beach, Fla.—March 1—Promoter Mike Jacobs made his expected announcement today that Tony Galento would meet Joe Louis in a heavyweight championship bout some time in June.

Two-ton Tony signed for the bout late last night and Jacobs said Louis' agreement was assured. The site of the battle has not been decided, but Jacobs said it probably would be in New York, Philadelphia or Chicago.

Herman Taylor, Philadelphia promoter who had first call of Galento's services, said he had agreed to let Jacobs stage the fight to give Tony a chance at the title and, incidentally, a consideration of "a nice little percentage."

OFFERS ADVICE ON LESPEDEZA

Crop Explained By County Farm Agent R. R. Bennett

County Farm Agent R. R. Bennett today released the following statement advising farmers on the value of lespedeza crops and where and how it can be produced satisfactorily.

Farmers who have tried lespedeza place it among the best hay, pasture, and soil improvement crops in the county.

1. The soil requirement for lespedeza in Pitt County:
Lespedeza grows best on our loamy, fairly heavy or stiff soil. None of the varieties seem to do well on the light-course sandy soils.

2. Variety to plant in the county:
(a) The Lespedeza is a general purpose variety but is particularly adapted for grazing. It resists itself under closer grazing conditions than the other varieties.

(b) Tennessee 76 is one of the hay varieties of lespedeza adapted to this section and commonly grows 8 to 24 inches high. This variety is 3 weeks later than the Common Lespedeza.

(c) The Kobe Lespedeza has proved to be a splendid hay variety for this section and grows from 8 to 24 inches or more in height.

(d) Korean Lespedeza has not proved to be adapted to as wide a variety of soils and has met with more failures in the county than the other three varieties. At present we do not recommend that a large acreage be planted to Korean Lespedeza.

3. Rotations and Method of Seeding Lespedeza.
Common, Tennessee 76, or Kobe Lespedeza may be seeded on top of the ground in the spring on winter oats or other small grains. A smoothing harrow or weeder may be run over the field to scratch the surface of the ground and cover the lespedeza lightly. This will help to prevent the lespedeza seed from being washed into low places by heavy rains and will not injure the small grain.

Lespedeza may be seeded on top of the ground after spring oats. The oats should be sown first and harrowed in. The lespedeza can then be broadcast or seeded with a drill on top of the ground. If broadcast lespedeza may be covered very lightly with a smoothing harrow or left without cover. Rain will cover the seed on level ground.

If the seed are sown with a grain drill the disk should be raised so as to just touch the surface of the ground. The chain dragging back of each disk will cover the seed sufficiently.

If a good growth is left on the land the first year the land may be disced and a crop of oats or other small grain sown; and still the lespedeza will usually reseed itself the second year.

4. Fertilization:
In general it will not pay to use fertilizer on lespedeza in this county. If lespedeza is sown with a grain drill it may be necessary to mix some lime or fertilizer with the seed in order to get the proper distribution.

5. Characteristics and Practices to growing Lespedeza.
(a) Lespedeza should be sown on small grain in February or March. Common, Tennessee 76 and Kobe Lespedeza will germinate in four or five weeks. When seeded in February or March the seed will usually germinate late enough to avoid freezing and early enough to become well established before hot, dry weather.

(b) Rate of Seeding.
About 35 to 40 pounds of seed should be used per acre to insure a good stand. When drilled a good stand can usually be secured with less seed than when broadcast.

(c) In June and July it is important that the lespedeza field should be clipped as often as necessary.

Glee Club Of G. C. To Give Program

The Greensboro College Glee Club, under the direction of Walter Vassar, head of the voice department at Greensboro College, will appear in concert here Monday March 6 at 7 o'clock in Jarvis Memorial Methodist church.

This organization, well known throughout the south for its excellence in singing, has presented approximately 100 concerts in the past three years. The Glee Club has sung several times for both the Eastern and Western Carolina Methodist Conferences. In addition to other numerous appearances earlier this season, the club joined the Neustingers, a Greensboro male chorus, in presenting Camille Saint-Saens' "Christmas Greater" on December 14. More recent concerts have been presented in Winston Salem, Leaksville, Spray, Lenoir, Charlotte, Statesville and Thom asville.

The Glee Club's appearance here Monday night is the second concert to be presented in their ten day tour of North Carolina and Virginia, including a concert in Washington, D. C. The Club will leave Greensboro on Sunday March 4, and plan to return on March 13.

ALMOST OVERLOOKED $50,000 WORTH OF GOLD

Palmer, Alaska (AP)—A pike under an unlikely looking boulder was worth a small fortune to John E. Carlson.

Carlson, head of the Tunnel Mining company of Cantwell, says a large part of the seasons final gold cleanup of $50,000 came from beneath a boulder the miners nearly overlooked.

"The boulder was about two feet off bedrock," Carlson says. "It didn't look as though there was anything of value under the rock

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, March 1—(AP)—Selling in aircraft and steel blocked the stock market's advance today after the slow rise of the past week.

While a few shares set new high marks for the year, prices near the fourth hour were well mixed. As the list hesitated, dealings slackened to about half yesterday's pace.

The late February rise in bonds carried over into March.

Library News

Miss Marguerite McGinnis who spent several years with relatives in Greenville and is now teaching in a western state, has given some Indian dolls to be added to the Round Table collection in Sheppard Memorial Library. They are Ketchichina dolls, hand carved by Hopi Indians from the root of the cottonwood tree. They are hand painted and have a head dress of feathers, taken from an eagle which is kept chained to the tribal roof.

This is a kind of doll god, given to the children of east days and used for religious teaching.

Edward Harris has given a doll dressed to represent a woman of India.

Particularly striking are the bead ornaments on the face and heavily dyed finger tips.

All of these dolls are now in the display cases at the library.

Attend Convention in Ohio

Fodie Hodges of Grimesland, president of the East Carolina Teachers College chapter of the honorary education fraternity Phi Sigma Pi, and Vance Chadwick of Straits, a member of the local group, represented their chapter at a biennial convention of the national organization held in Cleveland, Ohio, last weekend.

Both Hodges and Chadwick made short talks at the convention on the work of the E.C.T.C. chapter and what such an organization should mean to a college.

Though not at the convention, Dr. J. B. Flanagan, sponsor of the East Carolina Teachers College's Tau chapter, was elected national historian to serve for the next two years. Other officers elected were from California, Chicago, Pennsylvania and North Dakota.

Representatives of 14 chapters were at the convention.

Harvey Deal of Greenville, is vice-president of the E.C.T.C. group; Leo Burks is secretary, and Ray Pruette of Forest City, is treasurer.

Headache, Bad Breath Tell of More to Come

Just as Paul Revere's famous ride warned of the Redcoats' coming, so Nature's messengers—headaches, biliousness, bad breath—often warn of faulty elimination.

Neglecting these signs may cause a host of constipation discomforts: sour stomach, belching, no appetite or energy; mental dullness.

It's so easy to wake up your lazy insides. Just take spicy, all vegetable BLACK-DRAUGHT. Its unusual help comes from its principal ingredient—an intestinal tonic laxative which imparts tone to lazy bowel muscles.

Millions of packages used testify to BLACK-DRAUGHT's merit. Try it.
