BILL DESIGNED HELP FARMERS PIGEON-HOLED

No Action On Measure Allow Farmers Regain Cotton

HAD BEEN AIMED TO REDUCE POOL

House Sub-Committee Votes to Recommend $100,000,000 Figure for WPA Relief Until June 30

Washington, April 5. (AP)—The House Agriculture committee decided today to pigeon-hole a Senate-approved plan to reduce the huge pool of government loan cotton by permitting growers to regain title to the staple for five cents a pound.

Chairman Jones (D-Tex.) said after a closed committee meeting that "we have decided to take no action on that bill," because members believe the same result could be accomplished by additional appropriations under existing legislation.

"I don't want the committee to be put in the position of blocking any of these proposals," Jones said, "but we have always contended that by increasing appropriations under existing law we could achieve results more directly and more speedily."

Jones said the committee believed that the Senate bill, approved only two days ago "came too late to do any good" this season. The measure would permit growers to buy back their loan cotton only upon condition that they reduce their current acreage by an equivalent amount.

Members of the sub-committee said the $100,000,000 allotment would receive general support from both administration supporters and economy bloc Senators.

Administration floor leaders previously had sought a compromise $125,000,000 appropriation, but economy-minded senators refused to support such an allocation.

The full appropriations committee was to act on the relief allotment later today and it was expected to come before the Senate tomorrow.

The House voted meanwhile to give its Appropriations committee $25,000 for expenses of a "thorough investigation" of the Works Progress Administration.

Hoover Cabinet Member Thinks America Should Take Sides In Conflict

In Key Position

Russia's stand in European crisis resulting from Hitler's policy of aggression puts Ivan Maisky (above), Soviet ambassador to England, in a key diplomatic position.

Later Adds If Strife Threatens Safety of United States

SAYS HE AGREES WITH ROOSEVELT

Thinks There Are Methods "Short Of War, but Are Stronger and More Effective" in Crises

Washington, April 5. (AP)—Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State during the Hoover administration, said today he believed America should take sides in any foreign conflict which threatened the "safety and defense" of the United States.

Stimson, who had lollied back in his chair during much of his cross-examination at a session of the Senate Foreign Affairs committee, leaned forward intently when Senator Johnson (R-Calif.) insisted that he say definitely whether this nation should go if friendly nations were drawn into war.

In the event Russia should align itself with France and England, Stimson said emphatically he would favor America's going to war. He added the proviso regarding this country's "safety and defense."

Stimson protested that Senator Reynolds (D-N.C.) was going far afield when Reynolds attempted to establish in questioning that Great Britain and France had been aggressors throughout history.

Reynolds also asserted that Great Britain was spending a great amount of money in this country for propaganda directed toward leading this nation into war.

In previous testimony the former cabinet officer urged abandonment of the isolation theory and asked that the President be given greater power to discriminate against aggressors and victims in wars.

Simpson said that should a general war start in Europe this spring the present neutrality law might facilitate a result that would make the United States "the next victim of attack."

He told the Senate Foreign Relations committee that he agreed with President Roosevelt that there are methods "short of war, but stronger and more effective than mere words."

SON SEEKS SAVE DOOMED FATHER

This picture shows the frantic, but vain efforts of Ronald Cerelli (center, halless), 23, to rescue his father Romeo, 48, from sand which buried him in the bottom of a sand hopper at Williston Park, N. Y. The elder Cerelli died of his injuries. Himself partially buried, Ronald was extricated and immediately sought to save his father.

DEMOCRACIES BEST ON LAND

Rome - Berlin Axis, However, Has Great Air Strength

Washington, April 5.—(AP)—Europe's new "Stop Hitler" line-up unites imposing land and sea forces, but in the air, American experts said today, the most authoritative figures give the Rome-Berlin axis superiority.

Further in the number of troops actually under arms, Germany and Italy together are shown by official reports to possess greater immediate striking power.

It is in trained reserves, naval might and resources for a long struggle that an alliance of Great Britain, France and Poland appears to some experts to be better equipped—excluding the possibility of aid from Soviet Russia, Rumania or other nations.

Because of the aerial armadas of Germany and Italy, Paris and London would be, in effect, hostages, subject to the peril of destruction in the event of war, in the view of Major General George H. Lynch, American chief of infantry. Other authorities said, however, that this would not decide the outcome of a major conflict.

Latest available official data, subject to revision almost daily because of sudden movements on the European military checkerboard, gives this picture of the relative strength in land forces:

Great Britain, exclusive of dominions, 268,500 men; 573,500 including trained reserves.

FRANCE SEEKS TIGHTEN BLOC

Troops Dispatched to Syria With Turkey's Consent

Paris, April 5.—(AP)—It was officially announced today that French troop reinforcements had been dispatched to the Sanjak district of Alexandretta in Syria, but the number of troops en route was not given.

The dispatch of reinforcements was declared to be in full accord with an existing French-Turkish understanding and official quarters said negotiations for settlement of the Sanjak question was proceeding normally.

France was reported in informed quarters to have assured Rumania that in event of European war the Dardanelles would be open to French and British warships.

Bustly building the southern part of the "Stop Hitler" bloc, France was said to have received assurances from Turkey, which controls the entrance to the Black Sea, and Rumania's "back door" of support for the French-British line-up preserve the independence of small European countries.

In exchange these sources said Turkey was told she could eventually annex the Sanjak district, although unrest in Syria made that impossible for the present.

Paris, April 5.—(AP)—Sixty-seven year old President Albert Lebrun of France was re-elected for a second seven-year term today, breaking a half century old tradition of one-term presidency.

Hopkins Announcement Relative To Residence Starts Political Talk

Flooded With Inquiries On Presidential Hopes

TO SET UP HOME IN BOYHOOD CITY

Fact That Hopkins Is Guest of President at Warm Springs Regarded Significant

Warm Springs, Ga., April 5.—(AP)—Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins' announcement here that he intended shortly to establish a voting residence in his boyhood home of Grinnell, Iowa, had Warm Springs flooded today with inquiries from the politically minded in Washington and elsewhere.

The fact that Hopkins is here as a house guest of President Roosevelt and has been mentioned frequently as the chief executive's first choice for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1940 focused unusual attention on the commerce secretary's decision to move from New York state to Iowa.

Hopkins, in confirming reports which originated from "close friends" in Grinnell, denied flatly that politics had any bearing on the situation. He said he felt it his duty to his motherless 7-year-old daughter, Diane, to afford her a permanent home and could think of none better than the state of his birth.

This explanation failed to satisfy those who queried today by telephone and telegraph. He kept himself unavailable temporarily after the original confirmation.

Plan To Make Map Of Electric Lines

Raleigh, April 5.—J. M. Grainger, engineer of the State Rural Electrification Authority, is working on a huge map of North Carolina which when completed will show every electric power line in the state as well as every highway.

It will be at least 16 feet long and probably about 10 feet deep, and Mr. Grainger says that the REA will have to get a bigger office in order to hang it on the wall.

He began working on the huge chart last October and does not expect to have it completed and up to the minute as to power lines before August 1; though he of course does not give full time to drafting the map. The chart will show clearly the differentiation between private utility, cooperative, and municipal power lines.

Only One Case Tried At Afternoon Session

One case was tried at the afternoon session of Pitt County court yesterday, bringing to seven the number disposed of during the day, and leaving the docket in comparatively good shape.

Frank Peyton, Negro, was convicted of failing to support his child and was ordered to contribute one dollar weekly for this purpose.

Candidate?

HARRY HOPKINS

The possible candidacy of Harry Hopkins for the Democratic presidential nomination was viewed with even additional seriousness today following confirmation by the Secretary of Commerce that he had established voting residence in Grinnell, Iowa, his boyhood home.

Erwin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, will offer the response to Mayor Blount's welcome. Coleman W. Roberts, president of the Carolina Motor Club, will serve as toastmaster and brief talks will be made also by J. H. Rose, city school superintendent; Ronald Hocutt, director of the Highway Safety Division; W. T. Kyzer, secretary of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce; and C. R. Wood, recreation superintendent of Durham.

Other features of the banquet program include motion picture pertaining to safety, "Remember Jimmy," and another motion picture showing the National School Safety Patrol on parade at Washington, D. C. In addition, captains of patrols represented in the safety festival will make brief talks on safety patrol activities in their respective schools.

A. M. Huggins, safety director of the Carolina Motor Club, and F. C. Fox, membership director of the organization, were in Greenville today working with local residents in making last-minute preparations for one of the largest safety feasts ever sponsored in East Carolina.

BRITISH PRESS TOLD DISCOUNT SCARE SPEECH

Directions Given Personally by Prime Minister

STANHOPE TALK CAUSES CONCERN

First Lord of Admiralty Had Declared That Anti-Aircraft Guns of Fleet Manned

London, April 5.—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that he personally gave directions that British newspapers should suppress or discount Earl Stanhope's "man the guns" speech because it gave an incorrect impression.

Chamberlain said he had acted to "spare the public unnecessary agitation" over the declaration made by Stanhope, first Lord of the Admiralty, last night.

The Prime Minister said amid laughter and cheers: "Apparently my efforts to spare the public unnecessary agitation were not altogether successful, but the incident will, at any rate, have served to demonstrate the constant readiness of the navy for all eventualities."

Chamberlain said Stanhope's statement was "unpremeditated" and denied that the first lord of the admiralty had asked the press to give special prominence to his statement.

Prime Minister Chamberlain's tendency to treat the incident as a misunderstanding left the impression that Stanhope's position in the cabinet would not be impaired.

Stanhope, in a speech last night, declared that anti-aircraft guns of the fleet were manned "to be ready for anything."

It was understood that the discussions between Foreign Minister Joseph Beck of Poland, and the British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax resulted in a pledge that Poland would fight for Britain if she be threatened by an aggressor.

This would be in return for the British pledge to aid Poland, in effect, constituting a military alliance.

Britain was understood to have informed Italy that, now the Spanish war was ended, Italian troops should be withdrawn from Spain.

TOBACCONISTS HOLD MEETING

K. W. Cobb Honored By Local Tobacco Board of Trade

Marketing problems, especially those pertaining to the orderly sale of tobacco, were the subject of discussion at a meeting of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade yesterday.

President R. M. Garrett called the meeting so that the board might have a general discussion of matters which were always assured of an orderly well conducted sale, however Mr. Garrett stated that there was always room for improvement, and that it was his intention to exert every effort to this end.

Before adjourning, K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sale for the past 15 years and who retired at the end of the 1938 season, was signally honored. A. E. Hobgood, manager of the Greenville branch of the Export Leaf Tobacco Company, made a short talk paying tribute to Mr. Cobb his 15 years of loyal service to the market and the great part he had played in building it.

At Mr. Hobgood's suggestion, Mr. Cobb was elected an honorary member of the organization which he served so long and so efficiently.

Conservation Division Fares Well At Session

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, April 5.—The Department of Conservation and Development, charged with administration of a widely diversified program throughout North Carolina, fared better than fairly well at the hands of the just-adjourned General Assembly, a recapitulation and summary of acts affecting it shows.

At one stage of the legislative proceedings officials were frankly in a blue funk over the prospects for drastic and serious budgetary cuts, but when all had been said and done the department emerged in good shape.

Bail Is Set For Musica Brothers

New York, April 5.—(AP)—The three surviving brothers of F. Donald Coster-Musica, self-slain president of the McKesson and Robbins Drug company and five co-defendants charged with mail fraud, violation of the Securities Exchange act and conspiracy.

After a brief hearing, Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell set bail totaling $37,500 for the eight members of the group of nine who were indicted last Thursday on fourteen counts.

Arraignment of the ninth defendant was deferred until tomorrow. Bail for the three Musica brothers, George Arthur and Robert, was set at $5,000 each.

North Carolina Farmers Get Much From Assembly

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, April 4.—Agriculture in North Carolina fared better at the hands of this legislature than in any other legislature in more than twenty years, said Dr. B. W. Kilgore Tuesday. The doctor can speak with knowledge and authority, because he has been intimately connected with agriculture in the state for fifty years; and recently was accorded honors by several agricultural groups for his services to the state.

Analysis of the law enacted by the 1939 assembly shows that the agricultural program was given a boost at every point where the issue was missed at all. More than $300,000 additional appropriations were made from the general fund for the various phases of farm work.

GREENIES SET FOR FIRST TILT

To Play Lucky Strike Team of Durham Here Sunday

By BERT MOYE

When the Greenies meet the Lucky Strikers of Durham in their first exhibition game here Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the Guy Smith ball park, it will be the second time that these two teams have met in pre-season tilts.

Fans who witnessed the game last season at Third street stadium will no doubt recall the eleven-inning thriller which was played between the two teams. Chick Miller, who played second base for the locals last season, was the man who hit a timely single in the ninth to knot the count at four-all and caused the game to go into extra innings. Then in the eleventh inning it was Tommy Thompson, Greenie shortstop, who doubled to score Huffstetler, the Greenies third sacker, Greenie third baseman, with the winning run was made.

Two were out of the last twenty-eight games, the With a team that won twenty-four locals made one of the best records ever made in the Coastal Plain loop for winning streaks. With a majority of last year's team here for this season, the Greenies should prove to have a good ball club again this season.

TO SEE ACTION HERE ON APRIL 15TH

The Duke University infield combination shown above will be seen in the new Guy Smith park Saturday, April 15, when Duke and Wake Forest will play a regular scheduled baseball game here. The game and park dedication is being sponsored by the recently-organized Junior Chamber of Commerce. The four above, all sensational infielders and also mighty potent at the bat are, left to right, Glenn Price, third base; Captain Russ Bergman, shortstop; Crash Davis, second base; Eddie Shokes, first base.

As a part of clean-up week the Boy Scout Patrols will collect tin cans and other trash. The Patrol collecting the most tin cans before Tuesday, April 11th will be given free passes to the theatre.

Only three more days before the dead line of registration for the Camporee. If your Patrol has not registered please register at once so you will not be penalized for getting in the competition after the seventh of April. Only four patrols have registered from Greenville. Sign up at once.

The City of Tarboro is cooperating to the fullest extent in the preparation for the Boy Scout Camporee to be held April 14th, 15th and 16th. They are giving each Scout a half-pint of sweet milk for each meal and the National Biscuit Co. is giving shredded wheat for breakfast each morning. Connie Mack will lead the Boy Scout parade to the ball park where they will be guests of honor at the game between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Williamsport Grays. One boy will be selected from each district in the Council to sit with Connie Mack.

Following is a report of a Court of Honor held Monday night, April 3rd at the Eighth Street Christian church, with over sixty boys present. The Scout Masters Training course also met at this time.

Washington - Strategists studying German efforts to get at materials and food become more and more aware that England has not wasted her time in these past 300 years getting her hands on strategic points in the world's geography.

The net result of this is that Germany has either to fight England at a disadvantage to herself - or head east if she wants to get at food and supplies. Of course she can be peaceable and trade, but that doesn't seem to be the way to do things these days.

England's control of key points is felt most keenly just now by Germany. A map of Europe shows why. At no point can Germany get access to the open sea without England's permission, or without overcoming England.

It also explains why England continues to build up her already superior navy to enormous proportions. She wants to protect her key points.

A Half-Drawn Cork. England's strategy of a half-drawn cork at the outlet of the Baltic, Germany is behind the cork. To reach the open ocean, she must travel either through the English Channel, or northward between England and the Scandinavian peninsula.

Through her economic pact with Rumania, Germany already has a footing of some sort in the Black Sea. Perhaps Turkey will let her go from there through the Dardanelles into the Mediterranean.

But there again appears England, in command of the strategic spots, Gibraltar at the west and the Suez Canal at the east.

An Strength Important. But if it really comes to a battle for food, as it did in the last war, England herself is not invulnerable. Strategists point out that Germany, in command of the air, could well starve England to her knees.

It may be true that a well-armed navy can defy an air armada. That is yet to be tested in war. But it is certain that merchant vessels can be destroyed from the air.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL and LYNN NISBET

Raleigh, April 5.-Welfare department officials didn't have much to say about it before its enactment, but now they are openly quite pleased with passage of what they call the "Beggars" bill.

"Under it we can keep these solicitors from making a racket out of begging funds for sub-standard institutions out of the state," she said.

One of the most paradoxical bills of the entire legislative session was one introduced by Caswell's Claire Taylor regarding commercial fishing in the waters of his county.

Departing legislators Tuesday looked a bit bedraggled, not to say woody. It was a tough almost all-night session Monday, and many were the celebrating parties held even after the 2:31 a. m. sine die quitting.

Currituck's Gideon Boswood could not even get wild fowl shooting prohibited in his county of Wednesday. Game division officials explained that it has been shown by facts and figures that these so-called "lay" days increase rather than decrease the slaughter of birds.

Even right on the edge of the "love feast" in the senate Monday night, the western Democrats could not forego the chance to take a slap at their Republican neighbors.

In that connection Senator Wayland Spruill explained how Senator J. V. Bowers of Avery came to a Republican. Back when the western senator was a youngster, so said Mr. Spruill, the elder Bowers was a staunch Democrat and a great admirer of Woodrow Wilson.

During the prolonged "love feast" in the senate, when every senator was telling every other one how much he loved him, Senator Ballentine was presiding.

A combination of serious and humorous gift-giving prevailed. Governor Horn and other officials were presented valuable silver. Gordon Gray was given a mallet.

In the matter of State parks the department also scored late but decisive victory. Economy minded legislators at one point seemed so intent on holding down expenditures that there was serious doubt whether the department would be able to go ahead with its state parks at all.

OLD HOME WEEK MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

The Characters

Asey Mayo, Cape Cod sleuth. Kay Thayer, cute girl reporter.

Yesterday: Kay reports a bruise on Janie's shoulder, possibly made by a gun kicking. Diving into a pond, Kay finds a shotgun.

Chapter 27

The Woman In Possession

THE couple who had been diving from the wharf took an intense interest in the shotgun Kay had salvaged.

"Gee, Sammy," the woman touched the trigger with her finger, "isn't it funny, huh? Isn't it funny? You know, I said I seen something down there, don't you remember? But I didn't think it was anything out a stick, maybe. Sammy, didn't you see something down there too? Didn't you think you seen something? I thought you said you did."

"Yeah," Sammy said. "I seen something I didn't think it was a stick. I knew it was a gun. I was just going down for it when she come."

"See?" the woman said to Asey. "We knew it was there, all the time! Now, I don't want to get sore or anything, but we knew it was there, and we was going to get it, you see—"

"It pierces my heart," Kay said. "It shatters me to small bits, but neither of you possibly could have seen it. I didn't see it myself. I felt it. Therefore, if any claims arise—"

"Well, now just you look here!" the woman raised her voice. "I guess we did see it too! I guess we knew it was there! I guess, if anyone's going to march off with that gun, we are. Do you hear that?"

"I think," Asey said, "they heard you over in Woonet. And I rather think that you—"

"Fresh, huh?" Sammy demanded. "Want to start trouble, huh? Well, listen! We seen that gun, and it's ours, and who do you think you are, to—"

"Who do you think you are, you?" the woman chimed in. "I never seen such a town as this! You hicks, you seem to think you—"

"And what's more," Sammy continued, paying no attention to the woman, "I lost a gun here in this lake last fall. My boat tipped over, and I lost—"

"Fiddlesticks," Kay said, wondering why Asey didn't make any more of a stand. He was fishing around in his pockets, handcupped somewhat by the shotgun firmly clutched under one arm. "Fiddlesticks, and pooh, I don't believe a word of it. You just think you can bully us into handing the gun over to you, that's all, and it's the most nonsensical notion I ever heard tell of."

"Listen!" Sammy shouted her into silence. "That gun is ours, see? It belongs to me. And we're going to have it, and take it—take—ah—"

He and the woman stared at the two badges Asey was nonchalantly fixing on the lapel of his jacket. One said, "Chief of Police," and the other was a state police badge.

"Oh, well," the woman said hurriedly, "maybe it ain't your gun, Sammy. Yours was a bigger gun. It was a much better gun, too. After all, if they're going to get sore, why what's the use of raising a rumpus. I always say—"

Nerve And Gall

"IT'S been nice," Asey said, "havin' this little chat with you. Any time you feel like continuing it, you'll find me at my offices in the Town Hall. Ask for Mr. Mayo. So long."

Looking terribly injured and outraged, the couple departed. They were muttering, but they were wise enough not to mutter very audibly.

"Well, I never!" Kay said. "How simply—what nerve! What gall! Asey, did you ever in your life see anything like that?"

"Tourists," Asey said. "Just tourists. They'd call a cop if you stepped foot on the lawn of their own house—always providin' they got either a lawn or a house, but travelin' puts the gypsy into 'em. I found some one day makin' off with my great grandmother's best hooked rug that I'd been airin' on the line."

"They were pinching it?" "Oh, my no, what a horrid thought!" Asey said. "Of course not! They'd left me fifty cents. Offered me two-fifty, but they left. Didn't seem wise at that point to tell 'em how much Bill Porter made me insure it for—Kay, how in time did you find this gun?"

Kay smiled. "I was trying to make a nice spectacular dive to impress you, and it was shallower than I thought, and I bumped. You were right about the nasty bottom. It's all muggy with weeds and things. I hit something in the weeds and grabbed at it for fun, and that's the story. Asey, is it the one?"

"It is." "But you haven't even looked at it!"

"See that tag? Says 'Anniversary' at it!"

Special on it. And the gun ain't been in the water very long, either. Under the circumstances, I think you've done a noble task. Will you finish your swim so we can get back an' look into it in a large way? While you're gettin' the mud off, I'm goin' to put the car top up. Our shower's just about hoverin' over Ames's woods at this point."

"I'll hurry." Asey stroled back to the car and put up the top. Just as a few tentative drops of rain began to fall, Kay hurried back and wrapped herself in a white terrycloth robe.

"That's not bad, really," she said, "that water, I mean. It's warm, but the air's getting cold. I have a feeling that the clambake is going to be rather soggy. Asey, how do you get the car out of here? Can you turn around?"

"I can ease her out," Asey backed into a thicket. "That's the one trouble with this beast, she can take a pile of turnin' on these lanes. The blow comes if someone decides to drive down that little path as we're comin' up it. Someone, say, like Sammy an' his girl friend." He leaned out to gauge his distance from a clump of scrub oaks. "An' in that case we get a buff on the bumper or some scratched paint. Oh, my goodness, gracious! Shant' you die?"

"What's wrong now?" Kay asked as he stopped the car and pulled on the brake.

"Look yonder, will you? There's food for thought."

'Dear Miss Fairlawn'

BACK over by the ice house another couple had appeared but these two were no tourists. Not even a light grille could disguise the chubby figure of J. Arthur Brinley.

With him, a wrap over her bathing suit, was Madame Meaux.

"Teh, teh," Kay said. "Dear Miss Fairlawn, I always thought my husband was true to me, but recently we had a guest staying to our house, a Blonde Woman from Another World, and I find from many warm friends that she was often seen in my husband's company, often in disillable. Dear Miss Fairlawn, should I turn a deaf ear towards this entangling web, or should I bundle the little wench into the meat chopper. Answer soon."

Asey chuckled. "I wrote answers to a column like that," Kay said. "For six months, and for six months the world seemed populated entirely with Blonde Women and Tall Dark Men and Sprightly Widows and simply finchish children, all violently demented. Asey, what's your Blonde Woman doing with that Faithful Husband?"

"Consider," Asey said, "we're some of the Virtuous Wife's many warm friends." Asey said, "we'll park right in this thicket an' eavesdrop. It's a wife's privilege to know all."

"They see us, don't they? They simply must!"

"They ought to, but they ain't looked over this way, an' the car's behind bushes—wonder if we ain't misjudged J. Arthur, Kay? See him pursue her behind the ice house? All the same, I bet on Madame. This is what you might call a new slant on Brother Brinley."

Madame Meaux stroled to a little patch of sandy shore, took off her robe and folded it with immense deliberation, while J. Arthur hovered restlessly in the background. With the same pointed deliberation, she walked to the edge of the water, dabbled a foot in it, and then walked doggedly into the pond.

J. Arthur called out something indistinguishable to her, but she never turned her head.

He called again, and then shrugged and walked over to the ice house and the old loading piles.

"I rather think," Kay said, "that J. Arthur has been forward. Maybe he even made advances. Asey, by heaven—look!"

Brinley, after picking up a piece of broken oar, had walked out to the end of the piling and was prodding around almost exactly over the spot where Kay had found the shotgun.

"I think," Asey got out of the roaster, "that we'll go chat with Arthur. If he seen us leavin' he might feel we was miffed with him. An' I don't know anyone I have kinder thoughts towards than Arthur. I shouldn't want him to think otherwise."

"Who," Kay agreed, "are we, to slink off like a couple of ships in the night?"

Brinley's head jerked up at the sound of their approach, and he began nervously to edge back to shore.

"Hi," Asey's voice was silky. "Oh, hullo. How do you do? Er—how do you do?"

"Fine," Asey said. "Fine." After all, he thought, J. Arthur had asked him twice.

"It looks rather like rain, doesn't it?" Brinley dropped the broken oar down on the sand.

"It is raining," Asey said truthfully.

CITY HOST FOR PATROL RALLY

(Continued from Page One) Saturday morning's activities of the two-day program will be centered around a colorful and ingenious safety parade, to be led by Corporal L. Jackson of the State Highway Patrol, who will be mounted on a horse. Corporal Jackson has been selected as chief parade marshal. The parade, in which members of the Greenville fire department, police department, State Highway Patrol, American Legion honor guard, honor guests, Safety Patrol members, Boy Scouts, combined with attractive floats and banners entered by civic organizations and schools, will start at the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad at 11 o'clock.

The parade will move down Dickinson avenue to Washington street, proceed by the court house and down Evans street to Five Points, from where it will go to the high school.

Besides the newly costumed Greenville high school band, musicians from other schools have consented to participate in the "grand safety march," which brings to the city the greatest galaxy of safety-conscious youth ever assembled in Greenville for any kind of event.

Safety patrols from the following schools are expected to be represented in both days of the program: Greenville, Ahoskie, Ayden, Beaufort, Bladenboro, Burlington, Carolina Beach, Clayton, Clinton, Edenton, Elizabeth City (city and high school), Fairmont, Fayetteville, Goldsboro, Graham, Henderson, Kinston, Lumberton, Mebane, New Bern, Oxford, Plymouth, Roxboro, Sanford, Snow Hill, Tarboro, Washington, Wendell, Whiteville, Wilmington, Windsor, Williamston and Wrightsville Beach. The Greenville Chamber of Commerce will provide breakfast for the overnight guests, who will be housed in the city-county armory and homes in the city. It was explained, however, that sleeping accommodations are being provided only for delegates living too far away from Greenville, who desire to participate in the parade on Saturday morning. Members of the safety patrols and bicycle brigades in Greenville schools have been drilling daily this week to prepare themselves for the rally.

SCOUT DIARY

This is an advance reading of what many Greenville Scouts who attend the Patrol Camporee in Tarboro April 14-16, may write in their Scout diary!

Thursday, April 13: Will tomorrow never come? It seems the gang of fellows in my patrol and I have been practicing for the Tarboro camporee for months. Just this afternoon I warned the fellows that Mr. Junius Rose, our school superintendent, will arrange for us to get out early so we could be in Tarboro at 10 or soon afterwards as those who will arrive after 12 noon will be penalized 10 points for each hour—and 10 points may mean the difference between a blue and a red ribbon. (Of course, we'll get a blue!). Gosh, I wish tomorrow would hurry up!

Friday, April 14: I sure am glad yesterday isn't today—then it would be Friday, the 13th, and you know what that means. Ugh! Well THE day finally came and it wasn't even sun-up before the gang came around and we put our tents and cots and foodstuffs where they could take it over for us to the camporee headquarters. We went to school all right, but it didn't mean anything. We couldn't concentrate. Our packs were packed and when we got out we hurried to leave for Tarboro. When we got there, me, being patrol leader, registered for the patrol and then we pitched tents. My patrol is in the Croatan, while the other two patrols from the troop are in the Tuscaroras and Cherokee campsites. There are 68 other patrols with us in this block. Each of us have a 30x30 plot of ground. We remembered to put the tent pegs slanted toward the tent as it was a pup tent. My what a gang! Looks like a million—but Chief said it wouldn't be over 900 anyway. My patrol must remember to visit the other campsites tomorrow. That ball game with Mr. Connie Mack will always be remembered. No, I wasn't the one to sit in the president's box, but I saw as much as those fellows did anyway. Greenville's band was good and there were some good looking girls in it, too. And that campfire! Boy, did my patrol have a good stunt. Hope we get it put on tomorrow when the best stunt of all three campsites are given in the ball park. Oh hum... I'm sleepy—night.

Saturday, April 15: Another big day. My feet are sure tired, but I'm happy. I think the Scouts in my patrol did swell (I mean great) and we may get the blue ribbon. Let's see, what did we do? Gosh, I had better write what we didn't do. Cook and eat—three times today (and some candies and pop in between times), those events in the morning and afternoon, the inspection by the East Carolina Council officials led by that grand man, Judge P. C. Harding. Then there was a special treat—they took us to a special Scout movie called "Young Eagles." The campfire—our farewell one, they called it—was scrumbuntious—or something. I never knew they could put so much in that hour and a half. Let's see, we had Pat Alderman with Carter Darrow lead the singing and some Scoutmasters to pep things up and there were stunts (my patrols didn't win the honor, but a Charlie McCarthy stunt was the only one better). I must stop—can't write as much as last night. Wish tomorrow would come so I could see what color that ribbon will be—night.

Sunday, April 16: I'm back home. That postcard has just been mailed telling Mayor Brooks, Peters, Jr., what a swell time we had. That was a good idea, the postcard one—to let 'em know we arrived safe and sound. I thought we'd get up before the chickens, but I guess we were just too tired. Anyway, we finally did and in time to have our tents struck and the turf replaced by 8, when church call sounded. The services were plenty good—short and sweet and the kind boys like to hear. I should have put it first that we only won the red ribbon—missed the blue by less than a dozen points. Oh well, next year we'll win that blue one and we won't wait until a few weeks before the camporee either to start practicing. Yes, sir—ee, it was a grand and glorious fourth—I mean camporee!

NO SCENE FROM 'HAMLET' is this, showing Richard Bennett, veteran actor and father of the famous Bennett sisters, as he turns a neat spade. He's breaking ground for the Bucks county (Pa.) playhouse, which he'll direct.

A RUGGED INDIVIDUALIST, Norwegian Tom Murstad chose to interrupt his ski jump at Badger park in Yosemite national park with this somersault. He then continued his journey downward but doesn't recommend the stunt for amateurs.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, April 5.—(AP)—A calm atmosphere returned to Wall Street today and the stock market cautiously tried to rally. A mixture of small gains and losses replaced the wide drop in the preceding session. Traders seemed to have little zest for the buying side, however, and prices near the fourth hour were almost motionless. Trade turned quiet.

Many in Wall Street saw signs of another "breathin spell" in the prolonged European crisis, and some international bankers were unshaken in the belief the British and French would come to terms with Mussolini before the situation in the Mediterranean became more serious.
