PREMIER ENDS VACATION DUE TO NEW CRISIS

Chamberlain To Return to Confer with Ministers

CABINET HOLD EMERGENCY MEET

Uncertain, However, Whether Parliament Will Be Reconvened To Discuss Albanian Situation

London, April 8.—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain will return to London tonight from Castle Forbes, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, to confer with his ministers on the Albanian situation, it was announced this afternoon.

Announcement of Chamberlain's return followed quickly an emergency meeting of the cabinet in London. After weighing the implications of Italy's invasion of Albania, the ministers issued a formal statement declaring that the Albanian situation was "still obscure in regard to a number of important factors."

In informed quarters this statement was taken as indicating that the government had not decided to recall Parliament immediately, as had been demanded earlier by leaders of the opposition.

Parliament began its Easter recess Thursday to extend until April 18.

The statement issued from Number 10 Downing street after the cabinet session said it had been arranged "that ministers concerned should remain in or near London for the present" because of "obscurity" in the Adriatic situation.

This was regarded in some quarters as an indication that the ministers at least had considered the possibility of further conferences over the week-end. Chamberlain listened in at the cabinet session by telephone from Scotland.

In some quarters it was believed Chamberlain would reconvene Parliament about the middle of next week.

Dittmer Heard At Civic Club Meet

Al Dittmer, of the Music Department of East Carolina Teachers College, was the principal speaker at last night's meeting of the Greenville Kiwanis club.

Mr. Dittmer spoke on the subject "The Growth of the State of Utah and Mormonism."

A special committee composed of Tom Wilson, Charles Wilkerson, and Dr. Robert S. Boyd had charge of last night's meeting. Mr. Wilson presided, and H. A. McDougle, club song leader, introduced the speaker.

After hearing H. H. Duncan explain the proposed permanent art gallery for Greenville, the club voted to cooperate in the project. Mrs. J. H. B. Moore of the Woman's club, reminded the Kiwanians of the Fine Arts Festival to be held here next week.

Lieut. Governor W. J. Bundy of the Seventh division announced that Lieutenant-Governor Richard E. Thigpen of Charlotte would address a inter-city meeting here on Friday, May 5. Guests of the club were Mrs. Dittmer, J. A. Collins and Pat Corey.

Two ECTC Students Go To College Meet

They plan to attend the sunrise Easter service in Winston-Salem on Sunday morning.

Queen and Three-Day-Old Son Find Rest In Greece

KING ZOG

QUEEN GERALDINE

Athens, Greece, April 8.—(AP)—Queen Geraldine of Albania who fled Tirana with her three-day-old son as Italian troops invaded her country, rested today in a primitive inn at the little town of Florina, 10 miles from the border, in Greece.

The 23-year-old queen of American-Hungarian parentage was tired and weak after a 14-hour, 160-mile ride over tortuous mountain roads in an ambulance. She was attended by two doctors and three nurses.

She planned to continue to Salonika today, if her physicians thought her able. Two unmarried sisters of her husband, King Zog, arrived there last night.

The queens' party left Tirana at dawn yesterday, accompanied by her American-born mother and a few Albanian guards.

Mrs. Gladys Stuart Girault, a former countess, is the queen's mother. The queen passed a fairly comfortable night. The baby was said to be well and healthy. Greek and Albanian soldiers stood guard outside the inn. No one was permitted to enter.

Exiled Albanian Queen Tells Story Of Flight

INVASION MAY PROVE COSTLY

Expected To React Against Premier Mussolini

Paris, April 8.—(AP)—Italy's invasion of the Moslem kingdom of Albania was reported in Paris today to have so strengthened French and British empires in the Mediterranean that it may prove a boomerang for Premier Mussolini.

"This means the end of Italy as the self-styled protector of Islam," said a high official of the French colonial office.

In Syria, where French failure to push through a 1936 Syrian independence treaty led to disorders and strikes which French troops had to quell, the reaction was immediate.

F. El Khouri, president of the Syrian parliament and outstanding leader of the Nationalist bloc which has led the anti-French agitation, issued a scathing attack on Italy. He indicated his bloc would now cooperate with the French.

"Italy's pretensions of protecting our Moslems now reminds us of the story of the lion which defends the prey he does not intend to divide with others," El Khouri said.

Even as Italian troops fought their way into the little Moslem state on the Adriatic, the Italians stationed at Tripoli, Libya, broadcast an appeal in Arabic for Moslems in Tunisia, France's protectorate, to make a demonstration next Sunday against the French. French interpreters interpreted the broadcast as a call for an Arab revolt.

Three Specific Changes In School Machinery Act

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, April 8.—The school machinery act enacted by the 1939 General Assembly contains three main departures from the law previously in effect.

These changes, which do not radically alter the general nature of the law, may be briefly listed as:

1. A clarification of the division of funds, other than State money, between county and city administrative school units.
2. Grant of authority to all school districts with a school population of 1,000 or more to vote local supplements for specified purposes.
3. Establishment of authority to pay teachers on a 12-month basis and enactment of certain changes in the rules and regulations for hiring teachers.

The first of the changes mentioned deals with technicalities surrounding the division of local funds restores local interest and initiative

U. S. CONDEMNS ITALIAN MOVE INTO ALBANIA

Statement by Secretary Hull Approved By Roosevelt

FEAR NEXT MOVE OF ADOLF HITLER

Fight Over Amount of Additional Relief Funds Continues To Hold Interest At Capitol

Washington, April 8.—(AP)—Secretary Hull in a statement approved by President Roosevelt, said today "the forceful and violent invasion of Albania is unquestionably an additional threat to the peace of the world."

The invasion, Hull said, "violates the will of all peoples in the world that their governments shall lead them not toward war, but along paths of peace."

The State Secretary condemned Italy's action after consulting with the President by telephone. The chief executive is in Warm Springs, Ga.

Hull said the chief executive agreed the statement should be made.

Another high official said meanwhile, the administration considered the Italian invasion a prelude to a more serious European crisis.

This official declared that both the State and War departments were inclined to the view that Hitler possibly in a few days might precipitate a crisis over Danzig.

(At Warm Springs, President Roosevelt gave full endorsement to Secretary Hull's statement that Italy's invasion of Albania constituted an "additional threat" to peace, while at the same time it made known officially here the situation presented a serious problem for the future of American trade.

"The President told a press conference he had talked by telephone with Europe and also had talked with Hull and approved the latter's statement on the 'forceful and violent' invasion of Albania.

(He said the statement spoke for itself.)

Other Washington developments: Leaders in the Senate fight for a $150,000,000 relief appropriation said they were seeking to obtain a new statement, possibly one direct to Congress, from President Roosevelt recommending that amount.

The President originally asked for $150,000,000, but the House voted $100,000,000.

General agreement to work for a $400,000,000 increase in farm appropriations was reached at a conference of 16 senators called by Chairman Smith (D-S.C.) of the Senate Agriculture committee.

Where Is Business Today?

Babson Points to Big Gains Over Year Ago

Babson Park, Fla., April 7.—Business today is better than the average business in this time, it is. Actually, it is fairly good. It could, of course, be better; it could also be worse. In cold figures, business is 22 per cent above a year ago and only 12 per cent under the peak of two years ago. Excepting only 1937 activity this spring is the highest for any similar season in ten years; This does not sound quite so bad as the average person has been led to believe, does it?

Just to show readers how activity in various industries contrasts with the low levels of 1938 and the good volume of 1937, here are some simple percentage comparisons:

- Freight Carloadings 20 per cent.
- Freight carloadings 8 per cent 20 per cent.
- Steel operations 70 per cent, 40 per cent.
- Textile activity, 36 per cent, 13 per cent.
- Electricity Construction 11 per cent 3 per cent.
- Building volume, 40 per cent, 15 per cent.

BUSINESS SIGNS POINT UPWARD

1. Labor troubles dying out.
2. Political picture better.
3. No war this Spring.
4. Raw materials cheap.
5. Inventories at rock bottom.
6. Profit margins good.
7. "Fear" only drawback.

SHIP SMASHED, CREW IS SAVED

All Persons Aboard British Freighter Rescued

Quillayte, Washington, April 8.—(AP)—A coast guard crew brought 24 of the 2 men aboard the wrecked British freighter Temple Bar safely into this station and reported the rest were "safe on the beach," after the freighter smashed hard against a rock early today off the Washington coast.

Seattle, Wash., April 8.—(AP)—The British freighter Temple Bar smashed heavily against the rocks off Carol Island near the Washington coast early today and the crew of 29 reported it was abandoning ship hastily.

Coast Guardsmen, speeding to the disaster scene, sighted the ship high and dry on a jagged rock three hours after the freighter sent out SOS messages at 4:05 a. m. (7:30 a. m. EST).

The freighter, with L. W. Tucker as master, was reported carrying a load of scrap iron for Japan.

The disaster scene is near Quillayte needles, two miles south of a Washington coastal Indian village.

Extreme rough shore land and intervening rock on the ocean slowed up the rescue parties.

All ships in the vicinity were ordered to scene and a coast guard cutter sailed at once from Port Townsend, Washington.

Fair Sunday

Raleigh, April 8.—(AP)—Easter finery should not be in danger in North Carolina tomorrow, the weather bureau forecast today. It promised partly cloudy and warmer weather for Easter day.

Herbert Kichline, first assistant director of the bureau, reported it was raining lightly in most of North and South Carolina today. The rain extended from Norfolk, Va., to Raleigh and Charlotte and to Columbia, and Charles, S. C.

"It may not be as warm as some people would like tomorrow," Kichline said, "but the rain probably will not last after tonight."

LINDY STARTS FOR NEW YORK

Sails With Wife On 'Acquittania' From France

Cherbourg, France, April 8.—(AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh sailed today for New York on the liner Aquittania.

The American airman took unusual precautions in an attempt to avoid being seen as he embarked.

The Lindberghs hurried from the second special train from Paris directly to a tender which took them to the liner ahead of other passengers.

Newsman who managed to talk briefly with Lindbergh before the tender left the dock received only the answer "I am sorry" to their questions.

They attempted to persuade him to inspect a plaque in the maritime station commemorating his 1927 solo flight from New York to Paris. Their efforts were repulsed with the same response.

Parade Ends Convention Of East Safety Patrols

Despite intermittent showers, a curtailed parade this morning brought to a climax the two-day convention of Eastern Carolina Safety Patrols conducted here yesterday and today under the sponsorship of the Carolina Motor Club.

The parade began in front of the college and proceeded past Five Points to Washington street and down Washington to Third, down Third to Evans and down Evans to Fifth street, from where they returned to the starting point. A more elaborate and longer parade was cut short by rain.

Parade contest winners were: Greenville, best poster, Elizabeth City, best slogan; Tarboro, largest number of representative in uniform; Bladenboro best patrol in appearance and best juvenile float and Ed Williams, Jr., son of Mrs. Novella Moyer Williams, was judged as having the best decorated bicycle.

GERMAN PRESS WARNS POLAND

Nazis Bring Strong Diplomatic Pressure Upon Country

Berlin, April 8.—(AP)—Germany brought strong diplomatic pressure on Poland and published newspaper threats against her today while most of Europe's attention was centered on Albania.

The campaign coincided with the return home of Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck from London, where he concluded a defensive alliance with Britain which Nazis considered aimed at Germany.

The Polish ambassador was given a full hour's talk by Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop before Von Ribbentrop started on a brief Easter vacation.

At Warsaw it was intimated that the German embassy was underscoring all that Chancellor Hitler's plain-spoken foreign minister had told the Polish ambassador in Berlin.

Meantime, the afternoon press, while still giving front page prominence to the "double slap at the democracies"—the Italian invasion of Albania and Nationalist Spain adherence to the anti-Communist pact—continued to warn Poland in no uncertain terms.

Comment of a Berlin newspaper was typical:

"Whoever concludes a treaty with England against Germany thereby simultaneously makes a pact with Bolshevism."

"The states of Europe have today but to choose between English policy against Germany or a policy of peace in pursuance of which they will automatically have Germany as their ally."

TIRANA OFFERS NO RESISTANCE

Entry Ends Night Of Disorder and Looting; Italian Foreign Minister Ciano Follows Soldiers Into Tiny Country Presumably To Set Up Regime Under Il Duce's Domination

Rome, April 8.—(AP)—An Italian army of occupation marched unresisted today into Tirana, capital of leaderless and defenseless Albania.

The Italian forces entered the city at 9:30 a. m. (3:30 a. m. EST) and was followed by Count Ciano, Italian foreign minister and son-in-law of Premier Mussolini. An official Italian dispatch said Count Ciano arrived by airplane at 11 a. m.

Italian entry ended a night of disorder and looting in excited Tirana.

Albanian King Zog had fled. An Italian dispatch said he had crossed the frontier near Koritza, Albania, into exile in Greece and was heading toward Athens.

Zog's small, badly equipped army of tribesmen, who had tried to stave off the first Italian landing parties on Albania's Adriatic coast at dawn yesterday, had been driven to the hills.

In some quarters it was believed that Albania was approaching the end of her independence. They expected Il Duce to take the Albanian hills under Italy's protection, possibly as a province, as they were 2,000 years ago.

It was expected in political circles here that a provisional government be set up quickly pending Premier Mussolini's decision on the future relations of the new regime with Rome.

(Tirana reported the American colony was sheltered yesterday and last night by Minister Hugh Grant at the United States legation.

Mrs. Wilson Receives Flowers from Hawaii

One Easter bouquet in Greenville that will be far different from any others tomorrow is that of Mrs. W. B. Wilson, who on Friday received an Hawaiian lei made of natural flowers of the island and sent to her aboard the China Clipper and air mail across the continent, reaching Greenville within less than three days from the time it left Hawaii.

The lei was the gift of Capt. Carl B. Wilson, U. S. Army, and Mrs. Wilson, who are stationed in Honolulu. The package was mailed in Honolulu Tuesday afternoon and arrived in Greenville Friday morning, having traveled a distance of about 6,000 miles within three nights and two days. Owing to the quick trip across the ocean and continent the flowers were in good condition when received by Mrs. Wilson.

The Red Oak club met Wednesday afternoon in the club building.

Mrs. James Allen gave the lesson material on "Kitchen Improvement."

H. D. Council

The H. D. Council held a called meeting Thursday afternoon in Sheppard Memorial Library. Eight clubs were represented. The building fund was added to and several pledges made. We are progressing slowly but surely with our building fund and hope to accumulate enough that will justify us to start construction as soon as possible.

Every donation is very much appreciated and is being banked as "Building Fund." The date for the county flower show will be Wednesday, May 17, instead of the original date.

Fine Arts Festival

The fourth Fine Arts Festival will open Sunday afternoon with a program given by the Symphonic Choral Club and will be completed on April 16 with Negro Spirituals sung by a Greenville colored choir. The entire program is well planned and any part will prove most interesting as well as informative. Home demonstration women are not scheduling any unnecessary meetings during the week in order that as many as can will attend. Watch the papers for program.

Spring Cleaning

Spring time is cleaning time in all homes. Even though ideal methods would result in no need for special cleaning most of us prove slack at times and intensive cleaning becomes necessary. Let's plan our cleaning days and outline what we can hope to do well without overdoing and without having everything torn up at a time. If one room is thoroughly done and the homemaker finds herself able to use the rest of the house as usual, she will not find cleaning so nerve wrecking. Learn to use all short cuts possible. If soft papers are saved they help immensely in polishing windows and do not need to be laundered.

Of course lintless cloth is good and chamolis is good though expensive. Windows are easily cleaned by adding a few drops of ammonia or a little washing soda to the water and you will find they are much easier cleaned when the sun is not shining directly on them.

After the rug has been cleaned with the vacuum or a rattan beater use a half cake of neutral soap dissolved in a quart of warm water, adding a small amount of cold water. Use with a scrub brush. Scrape off all suds and rinse with a weak salt solution, wiping with the nap of the rug.

For the varnish or oiled woodwork use one quart of hot water, three tablespoons boiled linseed oil and one tablespoon turpentine. Keep this work in a double boiler but do not set on stove—turpentine is inflammable. For painted woodwork use hot water, adding bon ami for badly soiled spots.

You will find Farmers' Bulletin No. 1180 "House Cleaning Made Easy" very helpful.

Washington—Candid shots:
Jesse Jones, RFC chairman with the mop of hair white as Texas cotton, startled the formal-minded House Interstate Commerce Committee by leaving the witness chair, climbing up on a table where he will be nearer the members on their raised dais, and with his feet resting on a chair alongside, gives them a lecture on what is wrong with the railroads. He further disturbs their equanimity by declining to give a formal statement.

"Go ahead and ask questions," he says. It takes them 15 minutes to get warmed up.
Senator Ellender of Louisiana reverses the procedure. He shuffles himself off the high dais to take a position down among the witnesses what's wrong—if anything—with the Civil Service.

In The Senate:
Senator Cotton Ed. Smith of South Carolina dumbfounds the Senate by a blanket charge that they are voting relief money "to get votes." Strolls across the chamber during his speech to ask senate Senator Reynolds of North Carolina to "plumb his heart" to determine whether he did not vote for relief money in order to get votes back home. And the senator from North Carolina grins expan-sively at the bristly moustached senator from South Carolina but refuses to agree to any such indictment. The Senate chuckles.

In The House:
Rep. Woodrum of Virginia, one of the few truly thunderous orators in the House, punches aside the loud speaker and lets the members have straight from his lungs a demand for economy. So the members vote $100,000,000 instead of $150,000,000 for additional relief. They applaud him wildly, with the biggest share coming from the Republican side, although Woodrum is a Democrat.

In The Senate Banking committee:
Diminutive Senator Glass half hidden at the head of the high table, grows anxiously out of the side of his mouth at "reputation of debts" through devolution of gold, and Senator Taft of Ohio lets his eyeglasses swing from one ear, like a gate on a broken hinge, while he seems to ponder whether that would be a good campaign argument for the presidency during 1940.

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Room:

The committee has just broken up after a secret session considering neutrality legislation—whether it shall be amended so we may help the European democracies in their desperate effort to surround Hitler.
One of the senators, pausing a moment during brainstorming consideration of international law, ships at sea and national front lines, has written himself a reminder on a sheet of paper. It says "Jennie" at the top of the page, and beneath that:

Bread
Peas
Lamb
And then he left the committee room without the reminder.

Organized Labor Drive Planned For This State

Reflector Bureau.
By LYNN NISBET
Raleigh, April 7.—Tentative plans of the American Federation of Labor toward an intense organization drive shortly, as disclosed in Raleigh during the last days of the legislative session by James F. Barrett, southern organization representative, suggest far more than a little casual activity of organized labor in the primaries next year.
It is no secret that the American Federation of Labor felt the sting of legislative defeat of the wage and hour measures proposed, although its spokesmen—three of whom were in Raleigh throughout the ninety-day session, quit the capital city without uttering anything resembling a threat of retaliation. Newspaper stories that labor had been "handed a blank," however, accurately tell how labor officials feel about the matter.

Apart from inaugurating a vigorous campaign in North Carolina, which state was chosen from among ten in the southern grouping to attempt the first fight for an interstate law along the general lines of the national wage and hour act, there are several signs of a labor alliance with another group which didn't fare so well at the hands of the 1938 law makers.
Labor representatives here during the legislature are known to have spoken frequently in "off the record" talks of the plight of the 23,000-odd school teachers in the State and to have expressed no little surprise when Governor Hoey, when asked by the teachers to take the radio and build a fund under the legislators, declined to do so and referred them to their patrons back home.

There isn't any secret about the fact that the Federation of Labor would like to add these 23,000 school teachers to its membership roster. In many states the teachers are organized and affiliated with A. F. of L. The American Federation of Labor claims a paid up membership of North Carolina now of 150,000 notwithstanding defections amounting to several thousand to the CIO during the past two or three years. Additions to the membership are being made wherever campaigns are conducted, and labor officials expect a militant membership of a quarter million in the state by the time the 1941 legislature convenes.

Several times during the legislature it was noted that Labor and farmers interests worked together mightily closely in promoting legislation, and a probable tie-up between the organized farmers and organized industrial workers is not impossible. It is known that the Federation has been more or less openly courting the Farmers' Alliance.

Farmers generally fared mightily well at the recent session of the legislature, but this success does not minimize the need for constant vigilance on their part to hold what they have gained. Organized Labor would not be averse to capitalizing on the good standing of the farmers.

County Farm Agent R. R. Bennett appeared before the board and explained the purpose and need for such a campaign and then introduced L. C. Whitehead, representative of the biological survey division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Whitehead promised to co-operate with the city and local business men if a rat-exterminating program was undertaken. Mr. Bennett also pledged the assistance of the office. Under the proposal the city and business men would co-operate in an effort to exterminate the entire city of the rodents, which in addition to destroying property carry diseases.

City Finance Officer Marvin L. Westmoreland, who was named on the committee to investigate such a program, asks that it be made clear that the project is not one sponsored by any commercial agency, but one recommended and advised by the various government agencies.

OLD HOME WEEK MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

The Characters
Asey Maye, Cape Cod sleuth.
Kay Thayer, girl reporter.

Yesterday: Lane has found a shotgun shell, but Asey isn't bawled over by the news.

Chapter 30
A Little Experiment

"In spite of the rain," Asey said, "you can tell that these flowers ain't been watered, or dug around, can't you? The ground's hard as a rock, even a little under the surface. That was a heavy downpour, but it didn't soak in much. It's been pretty dry lately. And here, on this slant, the water run down an' off into the drive, see where it went?"

"What if the rain didn't soak in? It could have washed out the shell, couldn't it? Asey don't you see where it was? It washed out, right there," Lane pointed to the hole again.

"It did," Asey said, "because it was stuck there this mornin', or last night, so that a good rain would wash it out. Lane, I'm not tryin' to muss this up, but can't you see? The ground around is hard. Where you found the shell, it's soft. It was dug up, an' the shell stuck in, just so it'd wash."

Lane said a number of bitter things.

"Yesterday mornin'," Asey said, "you raked this whole area, didn't you? Monday night you an' me took flashlights, didn't we, over this whole area? We raked it. We walked up an' down around this garden plot. We both said it was hard an' dry. Lane, how could we be missed here? If the ground was around were softer, I'd say it could have washed out. But it's hard. And this rain wasn't heavy enough to wash anything out of a hole like that. And if the shell had been buried here before, we'd have found it, see?"

"Listen," Lane said, "can't you figure that this means the case?"

"I can figure enough to figure that someone wanted me to think so."

"The Warren girl," Lane said firmly, "stood near here, probably in the lee of the apple tree, and shot Mary Randall, and then tossed the shell."

"That's another point," Asey said. "Shell. Why not shells, Lane?"

"Tossed the shells aside—I bet you I can find the other if I dig up this garden."

"Why," Asey inquired, "bury 'em separate? Oh, Lane!"

"If I dig up this garden, I'll find another. Anyway, then Warren took the gun and beat it to the pond, and tossed the gun in the water. Then she came back and let you in the house, and let you find the woman."

"I wouldn't have tossed a shell, or the shells, aside. Not if I intended to dunk the gun in the pond right afterwards. I'd have flipped the lot into the water, all at once. Why complicate things by leaving the shells here?"

"All women," Lane said, "don't think alike. Where are you going, Asey?"

"Kay an' I," Asey said, "are goin' to make a little geographical survey. While we're gone, you dig up the zinnias an' prod around the petunias. An' find the other shell for us, an' I'll bet any sum you want, you'll find it in a nice little hole dug just for it. So long."

"Now what," Kay asked as Asey took her elbow and propeled her toward the woods, "what is your idea, and what is your theory?"

"A Nice Safe Place."

"SOMEONE," Asey told her, "after givin' the problem due thought, come to the conclusion it'd be easier for him if instead of makin' this a hundred percent mystery, we was allowed to find a suspect. First point is shells. So Lane finds a shell, in a place I personally grabbed every inch of. Shortly he will find another shell."

Kay walked along a few steps in silence.

"Then you think that the gun I found is planted, too?"

"Wa-el," Asey drawled, "now s'pose you wanted to get rid of a gun yourself. You got two things handy. Thoph's Pond, an' the Atlantic. There's an undertow along shore, an' you got a fifty-fifty chance of havin' your gun go for ever, or havin' some bather find it at low tide. To do a good job with the ocean you ought to dump your gun in the channel, an' that needs a boat. Too hard. The pond's nearer. The pond's also more obvious like, ain't it?"

Kay nodded.

"But now," Asey paused for a moment, "s'pose you'd decided that Thoph's Pond was the ideal spot to get rid of your shotgun. In. So what?"

"Why, you'd dump it there!"

"Sure," Asey said with irony. "You'd march right out on that old wharf pilin', an' you'd dump it right off the end, wouldn't you? Right where all the tourists die, an' the summer cottagers get clean, an' where all the dogs, includin' Amos the wonder dog, get their weekly wash. A nice, safe place. Sure."

"I never thought of that," Kay said honestly. "I suppose you would at least hurt it off a bit."

"At least, you'd go round to the other side where no one bathes, an' it makes off into the real mud, an' you'd pitch the gun as far as you could send it onto the mud bottom. Now, climb up on this stump. Can you see the pond?"

"Of course I can!"

"In the hollow? Yes. For that matter, I can see the ocean, and the lighthouse, and two coaslers off shore, and the Town Hall tower, and the bell tower of the First and only Congregational church. What is this, a course in landmarks?"

"Exactly," Asey said, "and you are Jane Warren. I'll give you an hour to work out the shortest an' most direct route, an' the most passable, from Randall's in the hollow to the ice house. There are two paths. You take 'em an' get familiar with 'em, an' then we'll try a little experiment. Oh, it's rainin' some more. You mind? If you don't want to do this—"

"I only get about half the idea," Kay said, "but I'm willing to do anything that might help."

"This will. Now, this is your affair. Personally, I think the least detours, or anything, you can."

"I won't need an hour for that."

"Oh, yes, you will," Asey said, "an' learn it. Think how this'll help you. A color. Bayberries, scrub pines, checkerberries," he picked a leaf, and chewed it, "nice Cape air, an' a first-hand acquaintance with Cape rain."

"Local Color"

At the end of an hour Kay returned to where Asey sat on the stump.

Her legs were scratched with brambles and one shoe string had broken, her face was smudged and her red hair was soaking under her beret.

"Add local color," she observed, "mosquitoes, red ants, two snakes, three skunks—happily not very observant—and a splendid assortment of insect life and prickles. How did the early settlers take it?"

"I've always wondered," Asey told her, "when you've rested well go back an' try this out."

Lane greeted them with little enthusiasm.

"It's the shotgun the Warren girl bought with that check of Prettyman's," he said, "I called Boston and checked on it."

"The bears out your ideas," Asey said.

"I suppose so. But the other shell—yes, I found it. It was dug in, like you said. What've you been doing?"

"I just been sittin'," Asey said. "Kay, she's been investigatin' our local flora an' fauna."

"What are you up to?"

"Well," Asey said, "this is a continuation of our timin' project—how you pick up these words! My cousin Syl has takin' to callin' his garbage hole a refuse disposal project. Well, Lane, Kay's goin' to stand by the apple tree, an' say 'Boon, an' then she's goin' to pretend to dig two shells in—just for fun—an' then she's goin' to run to the ice house at the pond, dump a gun in, an' rush back to the house in eight minutes I'm goin' to bag the knocker. Let's see if she can be stand by the answer. Now look, we'll time this shell diggin', too. Let's see what happens."

Lane hesitated. "But Jane knew the ground," he said at last.

"Kay probably knows it just as well, an' she's got the advantage of not havin' any shotgun to carry all day long, an' the disadvantage of a light rain. That ought to even it all up. Set, Kay? Got your watch ready, Lane? You start her off."

Lane gave the signal, and Kay darted to the garden, where she dug two imaginary holes, inserted two imaginary shells, and covered them over with a brushing motion of her hand. Then she turned and set off toward the pond.

Asey and Lane walked over to the house.

"Guess you're right," the latter said. "You seldom aren't right, but darn it, no one ever solves a case like this, and I got carried away. Why the plant?"

"Find out someone who doesn't like Jane," Asey said. "An—I must tell you about Brinley."

Lane interrupted him in the middle of his story.

"Eight minutes are up. Go on."

Asey had time to finish his story before Kay panted back.

"Eleven minutes over time," Asey moved aside to let her sit on the front step. "Are you done up?"

"Give me a cigarette!" Kay said.

"I haven't done anything so strenuous since I played hockey in my youth—ain't it amazing, the way you get to lose the use of your legs as you grow older? Anyway, Asey, I went the shortest way, and I was like to break my neck I went so fast, and here I am. Even if you take time off for the digging process, I'm still way behind, aren't I?"

Continued Monday.

MILE A MINUTE IS PROHIBITED

State Has Definite Speed Limit Of 60 Miles Per Hour

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, April 7.—When you press your foot down hard on the accelerator and drive more than a mile a minute on any North Carolina highway you are breaking the law.

The 1938 assembly for the first time in the state's history has put a top limit on automobile speed and put it there without any equivocation, ifs, ands or buts.

The new law says, in words of virtually one syllable, that it shall be "unlawful" to drive any motor vehicle at a speed in excess of 60 miles per hour. There are, it is true, a few exemptions such as policemen in line of duty, ambulances, and a few other special classifications under specified circumstances.

Previous laws have been haphazardly affairs that made speed above certain limits presumptively unlawful, but they always left loopholes open for the courts to let defendants dodge through.

With the exception of the new speed limit and restoration of bicycles to the list of vehicles, there were few important changes made in the motor vehicle laws.

Buses weighing more than 22,500 pounds cannot be legally licensed in the future, but those which already have licenses can continue to operate. Penalty for operation of unlicensed buses over that weight is set at $1,000 fine.

Major John A. Armstrong, head of the Highway Patrol, says he has not yet thoroughly digested the new laws and regulations pertaining to his division, but he does not believe that there have been any radical changes except as already outlined.

Greenville emerged victorious in junior high school and grammar grade competition in the track meet sponsored by the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce in the opening fete of the East Carolina Safety Patrol convention here yesterday afternoon.

Yesterday's track meet was previously scheduled to be held at the East Carolina Teachers College Stadium, but was transferred to the local high school ravine for the benefit of spectators.

In the junior high division, Greenville scored 21 points; Elizabeth City 14 points and Wendell 10 points. John Spearman of Greenville, with 18 points, was pace-setter in this division. Greenville scored 41 points and Kinston 4 in grammar grade activities. Jack White of Greenville scored 13 of the locals' points.

TENNIS MATCH ON NEXT WEEK

Duels on Tap at College Monday and Tuesday

Coach H. C. Haynes' East Carolina Teachers College tennis team has a pair of stiff duels on tap for next Monday and Tuesday, with both contests starting at 1:30.

High Point College's tennis team will furnish the opposition in Monday's matches and Atlantic Christian College will meet the locals in a return engagement on Tuesday.

Which as High School Day at ECTC in opening their season, the local netter suffered a 7-2 loss at the hands of Lenoir-Rhyne of Hickory. In a nine-way match at Wilson on Tuesday of this week, the locals defeated Atlantic Christian College 8-1 in an exciting affair.

Tuesday's attraction will be offered to over 2,000 East Carolina high school boys and girls expected to attend the annual High School Day sponsored by East Carolina Teachers College.

Sunday Game

Manager Rube Wilson of the Greensies stated last night that the exhibition game between the Tucky Strikers of Durham and the Greensies to be played Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, will be played in the Third St. Stadium instead of the new ball park as previously announced.

Tickets On Sale

The Junior Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the baseball game between Wake Forest and Duke here on April 15, at which time the new Guy Smith park will be dedicated, has started an intensive drive for the sale of tickets to the game. Tickets were distributed among the members at a meeting this week and may be secured from anyone of them. The tickets also are available at Nisbet-Proctor store.

PLAY 'HEADER HERE MONDAY

ECTC Pirates to Meet High Point In Twin Bill

Coach C. Virell Yow, High Point College Purple Panthers will oppose Coach Gordon Gilbert's East Carolina Teachers College Pirates in a two-game series Monday and Tuesday, April 10 and 11.

Tuesday's game will be the outstanding athletic attraction for the annual High School Day, which will bring to E. C. T. C. over 2,000 East Carolina high school boys and girls. This contest will get under way at 2:30 o'clock, which Monday's game is scheduled to start promptly at 3:30.

Coach Yow and 16 hopeful left High Point early Friday morning and played New Bern's entry in the Coastal Plain League in an exhibition game at New Bern yesterday afternoon. This afternoon, they were playing Tarboro, a Coastal Plain continent, in the Tarboro park.

The 1939 diamond club at High Point stacks up strong at every position. A corps of ten lettermen turned up for practice this spring, plus many newcomers. This gave Coach Yow good material to whip into a pennant outfit. As last year's third place team in the North State Conference, the Panthers looked good, but this season appears to be even better.

Mound assignments this season are falling into the capable hands of Lefty Elmer Cashatt, Hal Yow (brother to Coach Yow) and Frank Fernandez, freshman right hander from Clarkburg, West Virginia, powerhouse hitter, is seeing service behind the plate for the season.

Stanley Berr, a High Point infielder who is a newcomer from Charlotte, has had several opportunities to sign pro contracts. He is described by Coach Yow as "the best college infielder I've seen since Tommy Irwin was at Carolina."

Whether the week-end exhibitions in which the Panthers participate will retard their playing progress can not be determined until they meet the Pirates on local territory next week.

THREE SPECIFIC CHARGES IN SCHOOL MACHINERY ACT

These officials are afraid that the change will lead to the larger and richer districts grabbing the cream of the teaching crop because of their ability to vote supplements, while their smaller and poorer neighbors cannot.

To obviate this possibility, however, many safeguards have been thrown around the permission for supplements.

Briefly here's what the change does:
It permits any school district with more than 1,000 school population to vote special supplements for any or all of three purposes: (a) a twelfth grade; (b) a ninth month and (c) increased vocational educational facilities.

It does not permit this, however, unless and until the supplement has been approved by the board of education of the district, and its tax levying authority (universally the county commissioners except in the case of city units); and not then unless and until the supplement has received a majority of the qualified voters (not the vote cast) at a special election called after due notice. Nor can there be any gerrymandering of existing districts, as power to fix school districts is lodged in the State School Commission, not in local authorities.

IT'S THE OVERHEAD that counts when Hush Stewart brooms Alladin for a film role, at a lion farm in El Monte, Cal.

As for the third change, which is the one vitally affecting teachers, the new provisions are not drastic upheavals in existing law.

The act provides the method by which teachers can get their year's pay in twelve equal monthly installments instead of in eight as at present, but is so worded as to make sure that this method of payment is not forced on any unit where the majority of teachers don't want to be paid that way.

In order to get paid in twelve installments request for it must be made to the State School Commission by any administrative school unit before October 1st of any year. Such request can only be made where the method of payment has been approved by (1) a majority of the teachers of the unit (2) the superintendent of schools for it and (3) the governing body.

It is also provided that to receive the twelve installment payments only those teachers who are employed for at least eight months are eligible.

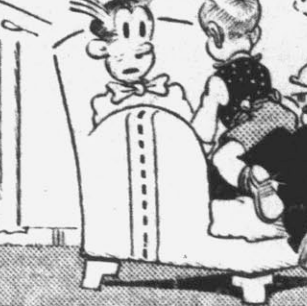

School commission officials are of the opinion that there will be few units from which the 12-pay request will be made. They believe that there is no general demand among teachers for the permissive system.

The method of applying for teaching positions has been changed slightly by a provision that any person desiring a post as teacher must apply for the same "in writing." This applies to new teachers, not to those who desire re-election to posts they hold.

It is assumed that all teachers normally desire re-election and there is no provision that they must make any application of any sort. On the other hand it is provided in the new act that before the end of every term the authorities must notify every teacher, in writing, of election or rejection for the next year. It is then provided that any elected or re-elected teacher who desires to resign must do so at least 30 days prior to opening of the next term on penalty of being suspended from teaching in North Carolina for one year, unless the penalty is expressly waived by school authorities.

downward. Definitely not. The improvement has simply been postponed by one war scare after another. Three out of every four investors, bankers, business men, and merchants whom I see say: "I'm not doing anything until I see what Hitler does next." Those who seem least worried of all are Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Consumer. They keep right on with their retail shopping despite war hysteria. They are showing more sense than most "business men".

Retail Trade Better
We should be thankful that they are. By continuing to buy, they force stores to reorder merchandise; force manufacturers to buy raw materials; and force workers to keep employed. If they were as chicken-hearted as those who are scared stiff by sensational radio and news dispatches, trade would be as low as a year ago. As it is, retail sales are relatively good. Prices are well below last Easter season; yet profit margins in many lines are better than they were even in 1937. Those businesses that are lagging are being held back by

"fear"—and "fear" alone.
The pet peeve of many business men has shifted from Washington to Berlin. Some, however, are still more worried about "what Mr. Roosevelt is going to do" than "what Hitler is going to do." These men do not yet realize that the New Deal, as such, is waning. The President could not get a new anti-business law through Congress with a carload of crowbars. Moreover, we may get some tax relief even if there is no real economy at this session. So the Washington angle certainly looks better.

New Farm Plan
The one unhappy factor in the outlook is the low prices of wheat, corn, cotton, citrus, dairy products, and vegetables. Barring a severe drought this year, they will probably remain down—although there may be slight gains from current four-year-lows. I'm not an advocate of high food costs—or any other high costs for that matter—but the farmer is entitled to a fair price for his labor just as is the union worker and the salaried employee. He may get a "break" in Secretary Wallace's new stamp method of distributing surplus farm commodities. The latest scheme sounds more practical than any experiment that has yet been tried.

Industrial raw materials are a real incentive to buyers at present prices. Those who are worried about the failure of commodity prices to rise should study what has happened in the past. The most prosperous eras in the history of the world have been in periods when commodity prices were low—and stayed low. The labor outlook is better, too. There have been less strikes so far this year than in any similar months since 1933. Inventories are down to rock bottom. Any further improvement in retail trade means that goods must be manufactured rather than taken out of stocks.

No War This Spring
Hence, I cannot understand why business men should be so worried today. The stage is set for better business. There is not going to be a general war in Europe this Spring. Why stew about it? If every uncertainty in the picture caused us to hesitate and worry, we would never get anything done. "Crises" from Europe will continue, but gradually we will become immune to them. Hence I believe that as Spring works along, our business gains over a year ago should become bigger rather than smaller. So cheer up, and get your share of the greater volume of trade.

PARADE ENDS CONVENTION OF EAST SAFETY PATROL

and local, that regardless of the effort made to advance safety, it is hopeless without the co-operation of the public. He pointed out that not a single fatality has occurred at schools when the safety patrols have been on duty. "Students of grammar grade age, as a result of the safety patrols, are the only individuals in the United States to show a substantial decrease in traffic accidents and fatalities," he declared.

Col. E. G. Flanagan of Greenville, former Pitt Senator, introduced Speaker Ward. Others who also delivered brief talks, hinged on safety, were Dr. L. R. Meadows, president of East Carolina Teachers College; A. A. White, Bladenboro school superintendent; Senator Arthur B. Corey; J. H. Rose, superintendent of Greenville city schools; Ronald H. C. State Highway safety director; J. Nat Harrison, president of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce; and Captain Charles D. Farmer and Major J. T. Armstrong of the State Highway Patrol.

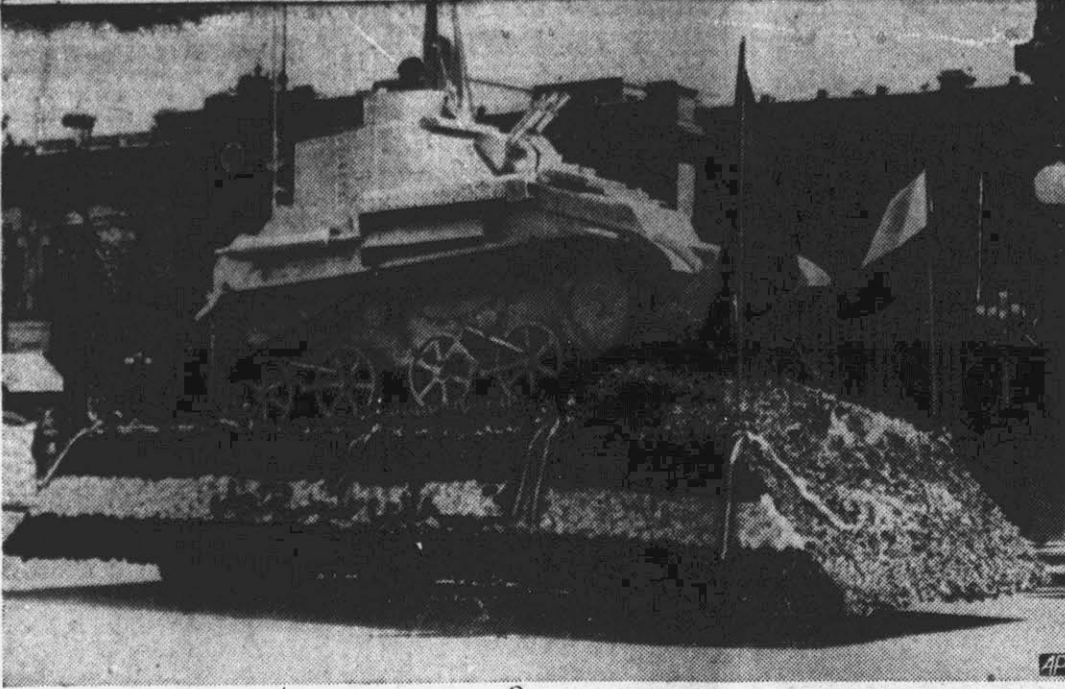

Another feature of the banquet meeting came about when Lee Folger, Sr., of Charlotte, chairman of the board of directors of the Carolina Motor Club, presented the Greenville Safety Patrol with a gold cup for having won first place in the drills staged yesterday afternoon in the Greenville high school ravine. Elizabeth City was second in the judging, done by State Highway Patrol officials, and Wendell was third. Wilmington delegates, disqualified because of failure to wear proper costumes, were given an honorable mention.

Greenville's junior high school and grammar grade Safety Patrol members, competing in the track meet sponsored by the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce, were awarded ribbons for having swept both divisions for honors. The meet included competition in the 75-yard dash, standing broad jump, running broad jump, and 375-yard shuttle relay. John Spearman was pacesetter for Greenville in Junior High competition, while Jack White paved the way in grammar grade doings.

Following last night's banquet meeting, the delegates assembled in the Austin building of the college where movies pertaining to safety were shown. The "safety crusaders" along with others in attendance, developed an air of hilarity as a result of the humorous tactics of Herman Joseph, well-known humorist. Patrol leaders were heard also in last night's activities.

Curtains were brought down on the opening day of the convention with an open forum held in the high school auditorium. What has been done and what can be done to advance safety among the youth of the state occupied the discussion. Guests living too far from Greenville, who were desirous of participating in today's parade, were housed in the city-county armory and in local homes.

The Eastern Carolina Safety Patrol convention concluded here today with the day of the largest safety drills ever staged in Greenville. Allen Bracey, prominent leader in the local safety movement, who was highly complimented last night for his enviable work in safety and his untiring efforts to make the convention a success, said it is hoped the rally can become an annual affair for Greenville.

WAR TANK IN A BED OF ROSES appeared in a parade at Cairo, thus mingling grimness and gaiety to celebrate marriage of Princess Fawzia to crown prince of Iran.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, April 8.—(AP)—European worries combined with doubtful domestic business prospects to give the stock market another sharp kick today and leading issues dropped to new lows since last June. Declines ranged from one to five points generally. A few high priced shares were off seven or so. Most pivots were at or near bottom marks of the day at the close. Bonds softened with stocks.

Disappointment Over New Act Is Expressed

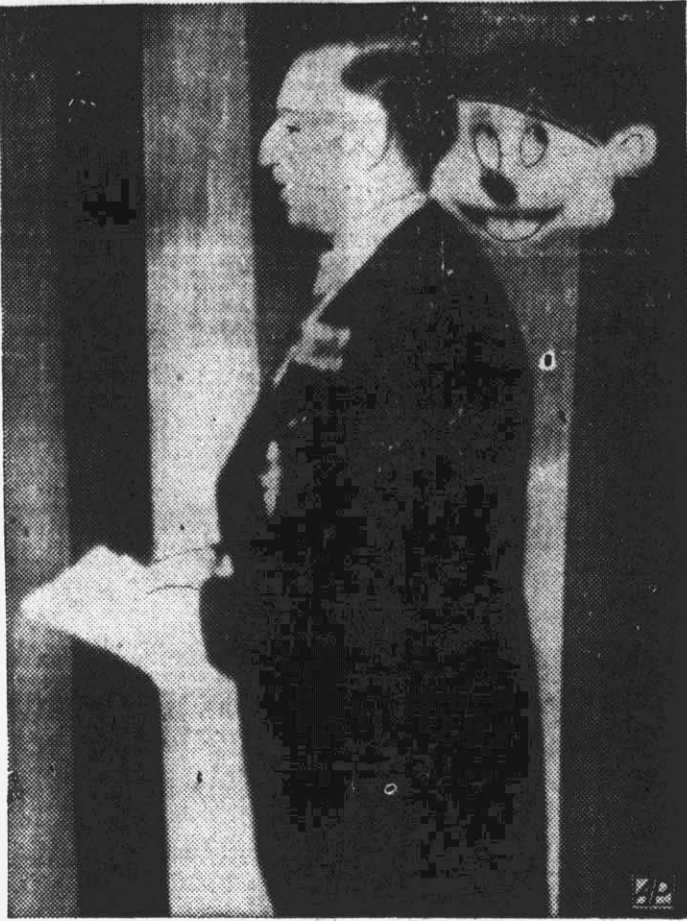

(Raleigh, April 8.—(AP)—Attorney General Harry McMillan said today the act which created the State Department of Justice was "disappointing" in carrying out its principal objective—unification of state agencies charged with the responsibility of protecting the state against crime and the criminal.

However, he added, "it is hoped that this important purpose may be brought nearer from the start which has been made."

"In many important particulars," the attorney general said, "the legislature did not follow recommendations of a committee which studied state laws and enforcing agencies and suggested the department."

"The act, however, does contain features which were recommended by the commission, and which I regard as among the more important recommendations made."

DOPEY LISTENS TO STANHOPE!

If a cat can look at a king, then there's no reason why Dopey the Dwarf (remember Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs?) shouldn't listen to an earl. This radio photo was made aboard the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal and shows Earl Stanhope, first lord of the admiralty, as he made the sensational statement indicating that precautions against air raids were taken in England by the British navy. The admiralty lord spoke at a motion picture program aboard the vessel and the picture of Dopey was included in the decorations.

Priscilla Lane is the lovely heart interest whose antics are the concern of a household in comedy "Yes, My Darling Daughter" which opens at the Pitt Monday.

ECTC TO HOLD ANNUAL EVENT

High School Day To Be Observed Next Tuesday

If the number of acceptances of the invitations to High School Day at the College next Tuesday continues to grow, campus and town that day will be full of visitors from the high schools of eastern North Carolina. Already over 2700 have signified their intention of visiting E. C. T. C. on that occasion.

This will bring high school seniors, parents, and school officials here from over ninety schools, representing thirty-one different counties.

After registration and issuance of luncheon tickets from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, the morning will be devoted to a program in the Wright Building and free time for visiting some of the workrooms and centers of educational activity on the campus, including the library, the science and home economics laboratories, the manual arts and public school arts department, the physical education, and music departments—in the Wright Building, the typing rooms, the English laboratory, and a dramatics exhibit in Austin Building, the Y.W.C.A. Hut, and the Training School.

These "workrooms" will all be open in the afternoon also. In addition to these, the home economics practice house and its nursery will be open to visitors between 1:00 and 2:00 in the afternoon.

This will be followed by various forms of entertainment which the guests may choose among, including a baseball game, a tennis match, a moving picture, and dancing.

A barbecue luncheon will be served out of doors at noon.

Last year's procedure of gathering at the city swimming pool for a grand march to the auditorium will again be followed, with the E. C. T. C. band leading the procession.

The Plymouth High School band will furnish the music for the morning's program.
