NON-AGGRESSION PACT WIDENED BY DEMOCRACIES

BELEATED COLD WEATHER HITS WIDE SECTION

Freezing Temperatures Visit Score of States

FRUIT AND GRAIN CROPS DAMAGED

Wisconsin, Minnesota and Dakotas, With Mercury Reading Near Zero, Coldest

Chicago, April 13.—(AP)—Snow and freezing weather gave a mid-winter aspect to a large section of the nation today.

The United States weather bureau said the cold snap was over but that no real balmy was in sight.

Extensive damage to budding fruit and some grain crops was reported in agricultural areas. Smudge fires burned through the night in the Vincennes, Ind. fruit belt. Orchardists said the plum and pear crops in Pike county were almost a total loss.

The mercury dropped to 36 degrees, just four above the freezing point in Greenville last night after having reached a high of 82 on Tuesday. The highest point reached yesterday, however, was 69.

The frigid weather was accompanied by strong winds, a velocity of 14 having been reached yesterday afternoon.

Northwest Arkansas fruit growers fear of apples, grapes and berries already in bloom had been injured by the unseasonably low temperature. Big lettuce and onion crops in Long Island, New York, were similarly threatened.

More than a score of states shivered in freezing temperatures. Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas with readings near zero were the coldest spots. Snow fell in several states, notably Ohio, Pennsylvania, Vermont and up-state New York.

Governor On Spot In Railway Tangle

Raleigh, April 13.—Governor Clyde R. Hoey is studying the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad situation carefully before making any decision or announcement about the possibility of leasing it to any company or group.

"It looks like the directors have put it squarely up to me," he said smiling in commenting on the decision of the directors to confer with him before taking any action or any lease proposal.

Tobacco Bed Covering Flies Long Distance

Strong winds recently took a tobacco bed covering from the farm of J. G. Moyer, who lives about a mile from Greenville on the Falkland highway, and it was later reported found on the opposite side of town.

Some estimates placed the distance the covering travelled through the air like a large kite at five miles, but this was believed an over-estimate.

Other farmers are reported to have lost their covering off their tobacco beds during recent strong winds.

Delegations Appear Before School Group

Raleigh, April 11.—(AP)—Delegations from Bertie and Davidson counties today asked the State School Commission to set up additional school districts in their areas.

Secretary Wallace Asks Congress To Subsidize Wheat, Cotton Exports

On Program

W. F. Owens, vice president of the State Federation of Post Office Clerks, is scheduled to make a talk at a meeting in Raleigh Saturday night called for the purpose of organizing Eastern North Carolina chapters of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Federation.

Asserts Dictator Nations Blocked Trade Program

OTHER CAPITOL DEVELOPMENTS

Rivers And Harbors Committee Recommends Numerous Project For N. C.

Washington, April 13.—(AP)—Asserting that "dictator nations" had blocked success of the administration's trade pact program, Secretary Wallace urged Congress today to back subsidies of wheat and cotton exports.

Wallace testified at a closed session of the Senate Appropriations sub-committee considering demands for a $400,000,000 increase in funds to bolster the administration's farm program.

In a 24-page prepared statement, Wallace praised the administration's crop control and benefit payment program for farmers and also the reciprocal trade program—during normal times.

"But actions of the dictators has kept that policy from meeting full success," Wallace said.

Other developments: President Roosevelt has signed the bill wiping out immunity of federal and state employees from income taxation.

The measure, which a secretary said the President signed last night, permits the federal government to tax the salaries of state officials and employees, and state governments to tax the salaries of federal officials and employees.

The new law carried into effect a policy which the Supreme Court approved in a recent decision.

High administration officials met to discuss means of keeping American business "going as usual" in the event of a European war.

They said they did not necessarily expect war or any other serious disturbance, but felt it their duty to be prepared.

Those attending the meeting included Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary Wallace, Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, and others.

The House Rivers and Harbors committee recommended authorization of 60 projects estimated to cost $69,659,800.

The bill introduced makes no appropriation. If the projects listed are authorized the money necessary for carrying them out must be obtained by appropriations next year or thereafter.

Projects in the bill included: Inland waterway from Norfolk, Va., to Beaufort Inlet, N. C. $39,000; Chowan river, N. C., and Blackwater creek, Va. $135,000; Cape Fear river, N. C. at and below Wilmington, $675,000; channel from Pamlico sound to Rodanthe, N. C. $5,000; channel from Edenton bay into Pamlico creek, N. C. $27,500; Roanoke river, N. C. $27,000; Swan Quarter bay waterway, N. C. $22,500.

Edward J. Noble, who will be second in command of the Commerce department, said the way to business recovery was in raising the total volume of business.

In a press conference one day after President Roosevelt said he (Continued on Page Two)

NAZI OFFICIALS BLAME OTHERS

Declare Democracies Responsible If War Comes

Berlin, April 13.—(AP)—Official Germany took the position today that if the world should be plunged into war the fault would lie with the democracies for not heeding Reichfuhrer Hitler's "pleas" for peace and his warnings against "international war-mongers."

The United States was presented as an example of a nation which fosters the "war psychosis."

Commenting on the decision of American insurance companies to cancel war risk insurance for German and Italian ships, a government spokesman said "if a people was being urged into war the way the American people are, nobody need be surprised if business gets jittery. This is a typical example of panic politics."

Six to eight times a day news is given out in the United States of America of the kind that only can be called war correspondents' reporting. We condemn all that sort of reporting.

"Germany is doing nothing but pleading for peace. Our Fuhrer himself has decided to call a September party rally at Nurnberg—the party convention of peace."

Blast in Zeppelin Works

Friedrichshafen, Germany, April 13.—(AP)—A weather observation balloon filled with hydrogen exploded today at the Zeppelin works, destroying a small wooden hangar which housed it. No one was injured.

Attorney General Rules Marker Bill Has Teeth

Raleigh, April 13.—Attorney General Harry McMullan has found that the newly enacted Marker bill relating to primary elections has really stringent provisions and he has ruled that under its provisions nobody can claim to be an "illiterate" for the purpose of getting help in marking his ballot unless he was registered under North Carolina's notorious Grandfather clause.

"Under the constitution every person presenting himself for registration is required to be able to read and write any section of the Constitution, except those persons who are entitled to register under what is well known as the Grandfather clause. Therefore, it is my opinion that only those persons who are registered under the Grandfather clause are entitled to claim the right to employ a marker by reason of illiteracy."

He made the ruling in response to a request from the Wake county board of elections regarding the Raleigh municipal election to be held soon.

District Medical Society Speaker

Today the Pitt County Medical Society is host to the Second District Medical Society. The meeting will be held at the Greenville Country Club. Dinner will be served at 7:00 and the scientific program will begin at 8 o'clock.

Dr. N. Thomas Emmett, of Greenville, is President of the Second District Medical Society, and Dr. P. P. Brooks, of Greenville, is Secretary of this society.

DALADIER SAYS FRANCE READY

Regarded As Blunt Warning To Italy and Germany

Paris, April 13.—(AP)—Premier Daladier announced today France was ready militarily for emergencies and with Britain, had promised her aid in case of need to Greece and Rumania as well as Poland.

His declaration, made in a bluntly worded statement, came only a few minutes after British Prime Minister Chamberlain announced similar commitments to Greece and Rumania in London.

It was accepted here as designed to serve two major purposes: 1. To tell Germany and Italy that any act of aggression would bring serious risk of war.

2. To bolster the determination of those countries which feel themselves menaced and are inclined to resist.

The Premier in person read a statement to the press declaring that "without verbal manifestations and without vain provocations, the nation has reinforced its defenses, to guarantee to the frontiers of France and its empire against any surprise."

The Premier added that France would go to the aid of Rumania if that Balkan kingdom considered her vital interests in jeopardy.

War, Not Politics Chief Topic Now

Raleigh, April 13.—North Carolinians certainly those of the north-eastern section, are far more interested in the developing war situation than in Tar Heel politics, according to Dudley Bagley, director of the State Rural Electrification Authority.

Your correspondent found this out in trying to get some information from Mr. Bagley regarding possibilities for the 1940 gubernatorial primary.

"Up in my section of the state," says the REA head who comes from Moberly in politically-minded Currituck, "there just isn't any interest in the governor's race right now. While I was home for the Easter holidays I made it my business to try to find out something about the political situation, but every time I start talking to anybody about politics he'd change the subject to the possibilities of war."

Nazi Pressure Brought Against Poland Appears To Have Been Ignored

Families of Officials in Germany Told Come Home

NAZI CAMPAIGN IS DISREGARDED

Danzig Free State, Meanwhile, Sends Note Protesting 'Polish Provocation'

Warsaw, April 13.—(AP)—The Polish Foreign office was reported today to have instructed officials of the Polish embassy and consular offices in Germany to send their families home.

The report was heard as Poland apparently ignored German pressure to keep her out of the "anti-aggression" bloc of Britain and France and the entire Warsaw press published editorials supporting Poland's recently announced defense alliance with England.

Officials took no public notice of a Nazi newspaper campaign which informed quarters here said was intended to "intimidate" Poland and prevent her from igniting the pact.

But the pro-government newspaper Kurjer declared that "regarding encirclement" Poland has much more to say than Germany, because German troops are concentrated all along the Polish frontier from Solvka to Memel.

Danzig, April 13.—(AP)—The Danzig Free State government today handed a note to the Polish envoy here protesting against "Polish provocation."

The cooling of diplomatic relations between the Free State, at the head of the Polish corridor and Poland has been notable in the last few days.

The official press announcement of the note said that in the last few days anti-Danzig leaflets had been thrown from Polish trains passing through the Danzig territory.

The leaflets were said to have contained a Polish demand for incorporation of the Free State into Poland.

The note referred to the "dangerous results of these Polish provocations."

To Dedicate Lodge To Slain Officer

Raleigh, April 13.—Captain L. R. Fisher, head of the western district of North Carolina's Highway Patrol, is making plans for dedication of the patrol's Lake Lure recreation lodge to George Calvert Penn, patrol member who was killed in a desperate gun battle with Bill Payne and Wash Turner, notorious North Carolina desperadoes.

Ceremonies will be held within the next four or five weeks, Captain Fisher said, the date to be determined definitely by the availability of Governor Clyde R. Hoey to be the principal speaker.

The lodge has been built by subscriptions of the patrolmen of the western district and their friends.

A fine oil portrait of young Penn has been presented the patrol by his mother. It will be given a prominent place in the lodge and will be unveiled as a feature of the dedication exercises.

N. C. Expects Take Place As Gold Producing State

Raleigh, April 13.—North Carolina will within the next few years be one of the leading gold producing states in the Union, in the opinion of State Geologist H. J. Bryson.

This view has the hearty concurrence of a Canadian mining engineer who has been examining gold deposits in Mecklenburg and Gaston counties for several months. The expert, W. E. Tumman, feels that his state really hasn't even scratched the surface of its many gold deposits.

Within the next quarter century—he predicts—North Carolina will produce as much gold as his home province, Ontario, whose output is now valued at more than $100,000,000 annually.

"It is difficult for me to understand the attitude of the people of North Carolina with regard to the gold deposits in this state," said Mr. Tumman in a conversation with Geologist Bryson. "They do not seem to realize that they have some of the richest and most extensive deposits to be found anywhere. They are very similar to those Canadian deposits which we have developed so profitably."

Mr. Bryson points out that virtually all the gold mines now in active operation in North Carolina as well as many of the better deposits are owned by Canadian interests. Mr. Tumman and his associates have already taken options on numerous gold mining prospects and are core-boring other in order to determine feasibility of working them at a profit.

"Mr. Tumman is quite right in saying that it is hard to understand the attitude of Tar Heels toward these gold deposits," said Mr. Bryson. "The fact that these experienced mining engineers are buying or taking options on large areas is a pretty good indication that it contains gold in paying quantities."

All Support Is Pledged By Britain And France

Two Countries Offer "All The Support in Their Power" To Greece and Rumania If Their Independence is Threatened; Turkey Also Included in New Guarantees

London, April 13.—(AP)—Great Britain and France pledged "all the support in their power" today to Greece and Rumania if their independence were threatened.

The action, announced to the House of Commons in emergency session by Prime Minister Chamberlain, widened the anti-aggression front started by the two powers with Germany absorbed Memel. Chamberlain made it clear the extension was the sequel to Italy's Good Friday seizure of Albania.

The Prime Minister made it plain that Turkey was included indirectly in the new guarantees, stating that the assurances to Greece and Rumania were being communicated "especially to Turkey, whose close relations with the Greek government are well known."

Chamberlain declared anti-aggression consultations with Soviet Russia were continuing when members of the House shouted: "What about Russia?"

The Prime Minister, who spoke for 34 minutes, disclosed new Italian assurances that Italian troops, planes and pilots would leave Spain immediately after the Madrid victory parade, now set tentatively for May 2.

He gave Premier Mussolini one more chance for friendship with Britain by declaring he looked to the Italian government for "practical evidence" that it shared its desire for good relations.

The Prime Minister refused to denounce the Anglo-Italian accord of 1938 because of Italy's conquest of Albania.

But he made it plain that Britain felt Mussolini had flouted that pact and disturbed the status quo in the Mediterranean.

The two nations in the 1938 pact agreed the status quo in the Mediterranean area would be maintained.

The Anglo-French pledge of aid for Greece and Rumania, following Italy's Albanian invasion, widened the non-aggression front which France and Britain began building with a similar pledge to Poland.

The Prime Minister said the Italian invasion had "profoundly shocked" the world.

Chamberlain announced: "The British government will lend to Greece or Rumania, if their independence is threatened, all the support in their power."

Chamberlain concluded his speech at 3:30 p. m. (10:29 a. m., EST).

Invitations Recalled. Due to illness in the family, invitations were recalled to the tea that was to have been given on Friday by Mrs. W. E. Hooker and Miss Louise Hooker, in honor of Mrs. Tom Rivers and Miss Ada James.

Reception For Dr. Tucker. Dr. N. Thomas Ennett is having a reception at his home on Elizabeth street, this afternoon from five to six o'clock, in honor of Dr. Beverley Randolph Tucker of Richmond, Va., guest speaker tonight at the meeting of the Second District Medical Society, at the Greenville Country Club. Invitations to meet Dr. Tucker have been limited to the medical profession. Dr. Tucker is Dr. Ennett's guest while in the city.

Entertain At Bridge Luncheon. Honoring Mrs. James Skinner, a fall bride, and Miss Ada James, who is to be married next week, Mrs. E. W. Water Harrington entertained at a bridge luncheon at her home on West Fifth street, on Tuesday.

Mixed spring flowers were used for decorations. The hostess remembered Mrs. Skinner and Miss James with attractive gifts. High score prize was awarded to Mrs. Bellamy of Wilmington, and the guest prize was presented to Miss Rena Clark of Tarboro.

Luncheon Hostess. Outstanding among the many beautiful affairs honoring Miss Ada James, was on Wednesday, when Mrs. W. Water Harrington entertained at luncheon, at her home on East Fifth street.

On arrival at 12:30 o'clock, the guests were welcomed by the hostess and directed to individual tables placed in a colorful setting of tulips, shasta daisies and dogwood. The tables were centered with crystal vases, filled with mixed flowers and attractive miniature flower pots marked each guest's place.

A delectable course luncheon was served by Mrs. Harrington. Mrs. W. D. Turner, Mrs. Robert Lloyd, Mrs. J. B. Randolph, Miss Louise Hooker, Mrs. Iverson Skinner and Mrs. S. M. Crisp were awarded attractive linen handkerchiefs for high cut in cards. Miss James was presented china in her selected pattern.

Exhibits Flower Paintings. Miss Maria Johnston Gramling of Marietta, Georgia, is one of the well-known artists whose work is being exhibited at the Women's Club house during Greenville's Fine Arts Festival, April 9 to April 16 inclusive.

Miss Gramling has been a student of Charles Frederick Naegele, famous portrait painter and she has studied at High Museum in Atlanta, Ga. She has a degree from Frank Wiggin's Art School in Los Angeles, Calif. Her work has been exhibited at Brook's Memorial Museum of Fine Arts. Her floral paintings have received very wide publicity.

These paintings, many of which constitute Miss Gramling's exhibit in Greenville, are a collection of water colors of Southeastern wild flowers and they are botanical and instructive as well as gracefully decorative. Among the flowers so beautifully rendered are the trumpet vine, the golden rod, the calla lily, the iris, the honeysuckle, and the chrysanthemum. The coloring, proportion and detail have all received careful attention in each painting.

Paul Green To Lecture Tonight. The Literary Clubs of Greenville invite the public to attend a lecture given by Paul Green, at the Austin building of East Carolina Teachers College, tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Following the lecture, a reception will be given at the Woman's Club honoring Mr. and Mrs. Green. Members of the following organizations and their husbands or wives are invited: Literary Clubs, college faculty, Woman's Club, Junior Woman's Club, Little Theatre, high school and college dramatic clubs, and college orchestra.

To Present Charter Tonight. The Business and Professional Women's Club of Greenville will meet tonight at 6:45 o'clock, at the Parish House of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, at which time their charter will be presented to them by Mrs. Dess Gurganus, president of the State Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs of Raleigh.

Among the out-of-town visitors expected for this occasion are Miss Velma Beam, chairman of membership committee of the State Federation, of Roanoke; Miss Elizabeth Clark, director of the Sixth District, Wilson; Miss Lois Rainwater, president of the Wilson club, Wilson; and Mrs. J. B. Spilman of Raleigh.

Junior Club Entertained. On Wednesday afternoon at 12:30, the Junior Woman's Club was delightfully entertained at a three-course luncheon by the hostesses, Mrs. Charles Whedbee, Mrs. Billy Norman and Mrs. Vance Perkins, club sponsors, at the home of the latter.

After the business meeting, presided over by the club president, Mrs. Harry Haggerty, Mrs. Billy Norman introduced the guest speaker, Miss Elizabeth Ferguson. Miss Ferguson gave an excellent talk on "Consumers' Problems," in her gracious manner. Miss Ferguson's speech was very interesting and will be very helpful to all of the members.

After the speaker, plans were made for Junior Woman's Club to attend the state convention of Women's Clubs, Monday, April 17, in Raleigh.

Those present at the meeting were Mrs. Charles Whedbee, Mrs. Nina James Guy, Mrs. Dave Mosler, Miss Virginia Bradshaw, Miss Jenni Hodges, Mrs. Harry Haggerty, Miss Frances Woolard, Mrs. Bill Barber, Mrs. Billy Norman, Mrs. Bill Cherry, Miss Jean Brown, Mrs. Dick Evans, Miss Mary Woolard.—Reported.

Sans Souci Club Meets. Mrs. Key Brown was hostess to the Sans Souci Club on Tuesday, April 11th, at her home on Forest Hill Circle, with full attendance.

Mrs. W. E. Hooker, club president, presided over a short business session. The club voted to support the proposed plan for the Greenville Federal Art Gallery.

The program for the afternoon was in charge of the hostess. Her subject was "Our Natural Gardens." The speaker, in part, said: "We live in, not only the finest country in this troubled world today, where we are blessed in so many different ways, but North Carolina is indeed one of the beautiful spots of the world also—for nature has spared no effort to clothe our swampland, our fields and mountains in the loveliest flowers, shrubs and trees that may be found anywhere."

Mrs. Brown served a delicious salad course, individual cakes and coffee.

Mrs. John Wooten of Gastonia, was a guest of the club.—Reported.

Leaves For Richmond. Mrs. J. B. James left today for Richmond to attend the National Assembly of the Huguenot Society, Founders of Manakin, in the colony of Virginia.

Mrs. James is president of the North Carolina society and will be the official representative of this state. On Friday, at the request of Governor Hoye she will present a North Carolina flag to the Assembly.

Chatham Club Meets. Mrs. F. A. Bendall was hostess to the Chatham Club on Tuesday afternoon at her home on Biltmore street. Mrs. R. S. Neal, club president, presided over the business session during which the committees for the coming year were announced by Mrs. J. C. Lanier.

The club voted to support the plan for the Greenville Federal Art Gallery. The guest speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, who gave a very enjoyable paper on "The Pursuit of Laughter." Some-one well defined it as a good spring tonic.

Mrs. Bendall had as her guests for the afternoon, Miss Louise Carter, Mrs. A. W. Hodnett and her house guest of Oxford, Mrs. Melvin Currin.

A delicious salad course was served.—Reported.

Little Theatre Program. Participating in the annual Community Fine Arts Festival, the Little Theatre of Greenville sponsored a delightful program at the high school auditorium Tuesday evening.

The Dramateers, a high school dramatic organization, gave an original play "Drug Store Episode," cleverly written by Margaret Dudley. The cast included, Allen Dracy, Ruby Taylor, Joy Flanagan, Kenneth Woolard, George Sakas, Jesse Mumford, Elizabeth Sugg and Ted Van Wagenen.

Following this, the Little Theatre presented a tragedy "The Lampshade," by W. L. Milne, the cost composed of Paul Fitzgerald, Mrs. W. L. Hall and Richard Walser.

This program was well attended and appreciated to the very fullest extent by the audience. As was expected, it brought forth considerable favorable comment and will be long remembered as an outstanding feature of this year's festival, and of Fine Arts Week.

Members of both casts played their part well and some of them gave remarkable performances, indeed.—Reported.

Entertain At Dance. Last evening, from ten until two o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Stokes, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Dall Laughlinhouse entertained at a most enjoyable dance at the Greenville Country Club, in honor of Miss Ada James and Mr. Luther Moore, whose marriage will take place this month.

The club room was effectively decorated throughout. White dogwood banked in the fireplaces at each end of the room, furnished a beautiful setting for the dance.

During intermission, dainty sandwiches, hors d'oeuvres, nuts and tomato juice were served from a table spread with an embroidered cloth, and which held as a centerpiece an unusual arrangement of calla lilies, flanked by burning white candles in five-tiered silver candelabra.

The hosts and hostesses were assisted in serving by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harrington and Mr. and Mrs. Julian J. White.

Bear Johnson's orchestra furnished the music for this delightful affair.

Round Table Club Meets. The regular meeting of the Round Table was held at the home of Mrs. K. W. Cobb on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Howard McGinnis, the recently elected president, conducted the business session. Mrs. E. L. Henderson explained plans for the proposed Federal Art Center for the city. The group was much interested, giving approval to the idea. The treasurer was ordered to finish the annual gift of $40 to Sheppard Memorial Library. This money is used for books in which the club book plate is placed.

Mrs. J. W. Higgs gave a very pleasing paper on the use of flowers for ornament and decoration, developing the title "From Nougats to Cor-sages."

After adjournment the ladies walked through the garden of the hostess, then back to the dining room and sun room, where they were served a delicious salad plate with hot coffee.

The members were delighted to have Mrs. Milton White present again, after a prolonged absence due to serious illness. Mrs. W. B. Tighman, who had been absent for several months, was warmly welcomed also.

Other special guests of the hostess were Mrs. C. C. Christian, of Richmond, Va., house guest of Mrs. E. B. Higgs, Mrs. L. B. Garris, Mrs. Hill Horne, Mrs. Clifton Edwards and Mrs. Helene Higgs Kirkpatrick.—Reported.

Interested Program For Friday. Members of the Woman's Club are especially invited to the public hearing Miss Louise Hall of the Fine Arts Department of Duke University, on Friday evening at 8:30 in the club house. Miss Hall will give an illustrated lecture on American Architecture from Roanoke to the Smokies. This will not be a technical lecture on architecture but is rather an interesting and entertaining talk about various buildings in North Carolina, pictures of which will be shown.

Miss Hall has recently given this program in Wilmington and those who heard her there were most enthusiastic, and declared it one of the best programs given in Wilmington this year. Just yesterday women from New Bern, here for the Fine Arts Festival, declared Miss Hall's program one of the very best ever heard in New Bern.

The program committee for the Fine Arts Festival is very proud to have Miss Hall as one of the features of the week and cordially invite the public to hear her.

Senator Bridges (R.-N.H.) asked the Senate to express condemnation of all "inflammatory statements and press releases of high officials of this government which have the effect of antagonizing the peoples of other nations against us."

The Senator introduced a resolution saying that "it is the sense of the Senate that this government must do all in its power to prevent American manhood from dying on the battlefields of Europe and to protect American women and children from the hazards which modern warfare presents to non-combatants at home."

Athletics Score 14-13 Victory In Game Here

Connie Mack Honored in Pre-Contest Activities

A large and enthusiastic crowd of baseball fans from Greenville and elsewhere in this section greeted Connie Mack and his Philadelphia Athletics here yesterday afternoon.

Those who turned out for the first saw a game which was won in the tenth frame 14-13, when Frankie Hayes sent his second homer of the afternoon sailing over the left field wall, to give the A's victory over the Williamsport Grays, a farm of the Athletics.

Williamsport piled up a five run lead in the first inning, added one in the second, but the Athletics countered with two in his second, three in the third and four each in the fifth and sixth. Williamsport pushed one across in the fourth, four in the seventh and two in the ninth to tie the score at 13-13, but was unable to match the extra-inning tally of the Athletics in their half of the tenth frame.

Chubby Dean and Wayne Ambler—who graduated from the Greenies—both saw action in the game. Dean pitched three innings in which he allowed five hits and one run. Ambler failed to get a hit in his four trips at the plate. He made two put-outs and four assists. One error was chalked up against him.

Carl Byrd, former Wake Forest athlete from Harnett county, and Dave Smith, whose home is in Whiteville and who attended Duke, were the other two pitchers for the Athletics.

Connie Mack was entertained at a luncheon at the Country Club preceding the game yesterday. Besides the Grand Old Man of Baseball and other officials of the two teams, a number of local baseball enthusiasts attended the luncheon.

Following the luncheon a parade formed in front of the court house and with the high school band providing music proceeded to the Atlantic Coast line tracks on Dickinson avenue. The band also provided music at the game.

FARLEY'S NINE PLAYS FRIDAY

High School To Meet Goldsboro at Third Street Park

By "SMUT" BURKS
Goldsboro's formidable crew of baseballers will invade Greenville high school's camp tomorrow afternoon to meet Coach Bo Farley's diamond entry. The game will start at 3:30 and will be played at Third Street Park.

The visiting Earthquakes are reported to have a hard-hitting array, but are lacking in pitching talent, which is also a trouble of the local team.

Goldsboro's most notable feat was their recent 11-9 victory over the strong Class A Wilson outfit in a slugfest. Pitchers Pate and Johnson are "quake standouts" and one of them will probably start on the mound against the G-Men.

The staggering Greenies are riding on a two-game losing streak. Kinston and Roanoke Rapids took consecutive games from the locals last week. The power shown by the Phantoms earlier in the season has been on the lag, which is responsible for their setbacks.

Paul Flye, whose sore arm has kept him out of action all season and is mending slowly, may attempt to throw 'em across tomorrow if Bill Taylor isn't chosen to start.

This will be the Phantoms' fifth Eastern Conference tilt. A 35-8 win over Washington is their only victory, but the boys are all primed to upset the Quakes tomorrow in what will probably be a runoff.

GREENIES FACE TWO CONTESTS

Meet College Friday And Lucky Strike Again Sunday

The Greenies will get into action against opposition Friday when they meet the East Carolina College nine. The game is scheduled to be played ed in the new Guy Smith park at 3:30 o'clock.

With the big stadium dedication program set for Saturday when Duke and Wake Forest will play a regular schedule conference game, which Greenies will not face opposition on that date, but be back on the field Sunday for a game with the Lucky Strike team of Durham.

Skipper Rube Wilson is shaping his team up for the opening game of the Coastal Plain League on April 27. The opening game will be played in Wilson, but the Greenies will return home for a Friday game.

Most of last year's players are back and are practicing daily. In addition, the local club has signed up several new pitchers and other players. With the exception of the first base position which is held by himself is planning to hold down, the infield will probably be the same as last year. Heavener and Simpson, members of last season's outer garden crew, also are back.

Los Angeles—(AP)—California's annual "roadside show"—desert wild flowers that flourish during the spring rains—is in danger of annihilation by sheep, says Prof. Raymond B. Cowles of the University of California at Los Angeles. Dr. Cowles recommends legislation to restrict grazing in wildflower areas.

Washington Daybook

Washington—Outside of the recovery problem, the Government's most acute domestic distress these spring days is the migrancy problem—and nobody knows fully what to do about it.

About 300,000 men, women and children, perhaps double that number, resume in March and April their seemingly endless quest for farm work. The center of the problem is in California.

There are two classes of migrant workers. One group of many thousands, mostly single men, for many years has followed habitually the trail of farm work as it developed with the climate. They are a self-sustaining lot and need little attention.

Most troublesome, both as to themselves and in the problem they create, are the migrant families. Driven from the land, either by drought or the steady advance of power farming, they travel in families. They carry a mass of problems of health and economy.

Told-Up Homes
They have nothing but an automobile and a few ragged household goods, perhaps a tent. Why do they go to California? There are long growing seasons and a wide variety of crops. But they have far overdone it.

In California today there are two or three or more hungry migrants for every farm job.

The huge supply of labor is at once California's curse and its blessing. California has mass production agriculture. Its citrus crops, truck crops and cotton come most from huge acreages. Much labor is needed. It has been increasingly that way for 50 years. Chinese first supplied the labor, then the Japanese, the Filipinos and Mexicans. Now these are almost exclusively replaced by Oklahomans and Arkansians. They call them "okies" and "arkies."

Probably there are 50,000 migrant families, 250,000 men, women and children. That is a conservative Farm Security Administration estimate. They get a few days work in the Imperial Valley plantings early in the year, then move northward. During the season they may travel 600 miles to the Sacramento valley.

Once there was work for approximately all who came, and pay was fairly good. Now, a family of four working members is lucky to get $600 a year. The average is $400.

Thousands live on ditch banks, or in the sage desert outside the farm belt. Disease is rampant in spots, although the state and federal agencies have attacked it. Typhoid and smallpox vaccinations are given to thousands.

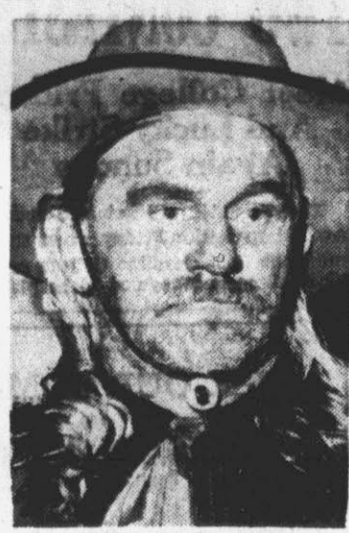

Many Are Solid Tye
There is some "trash" among the migrants, but Farm Security says far the majority are industrious types whose farms simply dried up or blew away from under them. Many California farmers bitterly resent their presence, even though they need labor for their costly intensive farming. California farm folk say the transient hordes are hotbeds of communism. Farm Security people who visit the camps say it is not so, that most are solid farmers.

But meantime their plight is almost hopeless. Most of their home states have enacted laws making it difficult for them to return. California cannot shoulder the whole load. Farm Security is helping in a spot or two. Since 1935, $1,555,000 has been paid out in relief grants to families stranded in California. Another $250,000 has been spent providing health and medical care. Fourteen permanent camps and a few "mobile" camps follow the wanderers, mostly in California, a few in other Pacific states.

Meantime Farm Security says 1,700,000 more farm families are on the verge of being crowded off the land, partly by power farming. Each tractor displaces one to nine families, an average of about three families. Tractor sales have increased 50 per cent in five years, nearly doubled in parts of the South. The tractor farmers are not criticized by Farm Security. Low prices force the surviving farmers to cut costs where they can, but a bright spot is that some up, of which

Greenville Is Visited By Soldier Of Fortune

Captain Jack Lloyd, 70-year-old soldier of fortune, adventurer, veteran of many wars and revolutions, frontiersman, ranger and plainsman of the old days, who is known the world over as "Burning Daylight," was a visitor in Greenville Wednesday and Thursday. While in the city, the veteran called on the staff of The Reflector, showed his more than a thousand newspaper clippings gleaned from the leading papers of the world, gave us the high-lights of his colorful life, then told us he was heading towards Washington, D. C., and New York where he hoped to visit the World's Fair for several days.

CAPTAIN JACK LLOYD

The story of the aged veteran, who travels the country over, dressed in the garb of the old days, typical western hat, boots and belt, wearing his hair to his shoulders, his features bronzed by the suns of the Arctics and Tropics, is stranger than fiction, for he tells you that at the age of 5 years his people were massacred by the Indians while members of a wagon train, heading for the new plains country of the west. The Captain was born in East Texas, and is a quarter-blood Indian, with the instinct of the young, Lloyd tells you that he escaped the massacre and was found by Rangers, soldiers and cowmen, who were attracted to the scene of the diaster by the smoke from the burning train. He was placed in a chick wagon of a cattle drive that was headed for Abilene, Kansas, and it was in that famous cowtown of the early days that he met James Butler "Wild Bill" Hickok and the one and only Col. Wm. F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody.

Staying in that cowtown for several months, he tells you that an outfit that was heading to the north country picked him up, and that the next thing he remembers is that he was in the midst of the famous Deadwood, South Dakota gold rush, and recalls how Calamity Jane took him in, and how he again met Buffalo Bill and Wild Bill in the gold camp. Then he tells you that today he is the only person living that witnessed the killing of Wild Bill in Deadwood, on August 2, 1876, being shot in the back of the head by Doc McCall, who was later legally hung in Yankton for the crime.

At the age of 13, as he best tells it, he started out on his own, and when he was 18, after having made all of the most famous camps of the west, joined the Texas Rangers for the first time, and he tells you with a wink, that you had to be a man at that time to join the Rangers.

Just name a gold or silver camp back in the days of the Forty Eight and Nineties, and the aged veteran will spin you a yarn about the same that would make your hair stand on edge.

It was during the days of the great gold rush to the Alaskan country, when the cry of gold was heard round the world, from the Yukon and Klondyke, that Lloyd broke into the limelight of the world, for it was after his famous drive from Skagway to Circle City, his drive over the trail and his first trip into what is now known as Dawson, that the late Jack London wrote the story of "Burning Daylight," a story of the North country that will never be forgotten as long as a sourdough lives to tell the story of the famous mail drive made by "Old Daylight."

Down in South Africa, when the cry of the "little bits of glass" was heard from the Kimberly, he was one of the first Americans that made the trip to the Kimberly country, and after getting a few rocks he returned to America and wrote several interesting articles regarding the world's greatest diamond rush. In Colorado he was with the silver and only Senator H. A. W. "Silver Dollar" Tabor when the latter was the most-known man in the West. He was also with Death Valley Scouts on several trips and hobnobbed with Rattlesnake Pete, Deadwood Dick and Doc Carver.

Well, listen to this for additional adventure. In the World War he was with the British Intelligence department, and "balled out" in the Spanish-American affair, when the cry of "Remember the Maine" rang throughout the country, he joined up with "Teddy" Roosevelt and his Rough Riders. In the Boer war he was with Lord Roberts and was in the battle of Ladysmith. In the Russian and Japanese affair he tells you of joining the Legion of Death, and then tells you, like all good soldiers of fortune, he done a hitch in the French Foreign Legion; and he knows what it means to be sent to the Last Outpost, and what the life Beau Geste means to a real trooper.

Down in old Mexico, he was with the famous Mexican leader Pancho Villa for more than three years, and vows that Villa was one of the squarrest men that he ever fought under in any affair. Again he tells you that Pancho was blamed for many things that were never committed under his orders, and that at all times Villa was a real man when it came to women and children of the poor class of people.

In Nicaragua he was with Sanstro for several months and tells you that the little bantam leader of that Banana revolution was a fine chap, and that he did not deserve to be shot in the back.

Some of his last affairs that he

CO-EDS SPEND MORE THAN MALE STUDENTS

Bloomington, Ind.—(AP)—Though it's Joe College of Indiana University who pays for dates, Betty Co-ed spent on an average $50 more last school year than he did.

Mary M. Crawford, economics instructor, said she found in a survey the average woman student spent $63.29 and the average man $63.07. The biggest difference came in the spending for clothes.

A sophomore sorority member spent the most—a total of $2,010—and a freshman the least—$207.50.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL and LYNN NISBET

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, April 13.—Governor Clyde R. Hoey, always a prolific speaker, was really pushed on his tour of Hyde and other Eastern counties the first of the week. He made no less than ten talks—varying in length from five to fifty minutes—between one o'clock Monday afternoon and four Tuesday afternoon.

"And the worst of it was" complained His Excellency, "there were so many people who went with me to all the places I spoke that I couldn't make the same speech ten times; I had to think up something different to say at each stop."

The Governor, incidentally, worked out in the pitcher's box at Tarboro prior to the Philadelphia Athletic-Williamsport game. "Connie Mack looked me over and assured me I showed very good form too" he bragged. "Maybe I can get a job with his team later this summer."

It has been said that straws indicate which way the wind is blowing, and so there may be some connection between Lieutenant Governor Wilkins Horton's new car and his gubernatorial intentions. His purchase was, as he expresses it, "entirely involuntary" and the result of a wreck, but it is noticeable that he bought a big shiny Buick, not a rattling Tin Lizzie.

However, nobody but Bob Reynolds can get elected by going round in a dilapidated old wreck and buying his gas on credit at every filling station—so maybe the Horton choice isn't proof positive he's out of the running.

Incidentally, the Lieutenant Governor, walking up Fayetteville St. yesterday, encountered Andy Monroe (Carolina Power and Light public relations man) wearing one hat and carrying three in his hand. "Don't you want one of these, Governor, to throw into the ring" queried Andy. "You know it's rather a dirty ring and you probably would not want to get that nice one you have on all smeared."

There's some doubt about the literacy of numerous North Carolina teachers. It arose when whole flocks of visiting pedagogues of the feminine persuasion, blandly turned their ears into and off Fayetteville Street to the postoffice. The only explanation consistent with innocence of deli brats law breaking in that they couldn't read the big "NO TURN" signs up at the corner.

OLD HOME WEEK MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

The Characters
Asey Mayo, Cape Cod sleuth.
J. Arthur Brinley, pompous seaman.

Yesterday, Asey thinks Brinley is the man he has been chasing, until he notices that Brinley's shoes are much too clean to have been in the woods.

Chapter 34 The Last Billings

HE COULD have changed 'em." Hamilton voiced Asey's own thoughts.
"Them, but he couldn't have changed his whole outfit, ham-cuffs all clean. An' his shirt, An' An' tie. An' then look at me Hamilton. I wonder if I ain't been oretty much of a plumb out 'n' out 'em!"

J. Arthur coughed. The cough said, plainer than words could have, that Asey had stated the case with admirable exactitude and clarity.
"Brinley," Asey said in a subdued voice, "What was you doing up there? What's your story?"

"Why, after I got home," Brinley said, "Walter Rutledge called and told me that Win Billings had run off, and would I help hunt for him. I'd got my clothes off, and I didn't want to much, but I felt that I ought to, and Bessie was busy around the house—the hasn't had a speck of time to get things done of course—and she said, why not help for a little while. She thought it was my place to do. So I changed my mind and told Walter I'd come."

"Those your usual clothes for huntin' people on a wet night?" Asey asked.

"Bessie had put out my clean things for tomorrow," Brinley said, "and I never realized it until I got over to Walt's, later. Walt said that Win had probably made for the woods somewhere, and I thought of the icehouse—they say Vin lived there one winter—so I came up here. I know the way pretty well, because of taking Amos up so often, and I thought I'd just look here and then go, and I wouldn't get dirty. As a matter of fact," he added in a burst of honesty, "I didn't think Win could have got this far from town, and I didn't go all the way to the ice house at all. These are my last clean pants, and the cleaner's man doesn't come till day after tomorrow."

"Huh," Asey said. "An' there are lots of others out huntin' Win Billings, too?"

"Oh, yes, Weston and Jeff Leach—that's why I thought I'd better go, if they were taking the trouble. There were a dozen or so others, Jeff and Wes had a town map and were marking off spots where Win might be, and everyone had a spot to go to—"

"Didn't you take any kind of light with you?"

"I had a flash, but I lost it in the woods," Brinley said.

"Who was you with durin' the fireworks tonight?"

"Sara, and Jane, and Jeff, and Bessie," Brinley said, "and a lot of others. The fireworks weren't very good tonight. The dampness, I guess. There's no fog to-day now, and the radio says fair to-morrow, and I do hope it clears off for the tag day—"

"When I stopped you an' held you up," Asey said, "why didn't you tell me this?" Asey knew he was being unreasonable, but now that he knew for sure he had let his man slip through his fingers, he couldn't help being and sounding irritated.

You Got Him

"I TRIED to," J. Arthur said, "but I—well, I was afraid. I've never liked firearms, and there you were, poking me in the stomach with that gun!"

"Brinley," Asey said, "give you the keys to your car? Have 'em to Ham—I know, you don't like strangers drivin' your auto, but do you want to walk back to the car? I thought not. Hamilton, get his car. We'll drive him back to the hollow. An' drive me, too. I don't suppose I was ever so tired in all my born days."

He felt very old and weary as he got out of the car at the Randall house.

Lane ran up to him.
"By George, Asey—you got him! How you did it, I don't know or care, but—"

"I didn't," Asey said. "Brinley was just on a hunt—"

"Who said anything about Brinley? Come into the house and take a look—we found him. One of your shots got him in the shoulder. Not much, but enough to stop him, apparently. He was down by the pond. Come on! And how you could ever hit him on a night like this, with this fog, I don't know! Man, you're wonderful!"

"Lane, are you crazy?" Asey demanded.
"Oh, come on! He even had Kay's beret beside him—he's the one, all right! Come on—"

Walking mechanically, as though he had been wound up with a key, Asey followed Lane into the living room of the Randall house.

On the couch lay the haggard figure of a man! He was muddy and dirty, and his clothes were torn and his hair in wild disorder.

Cummings, bending over him, obscured the man's face.
"Who is it?" Asey asked blankly.
"Win Billings," Cummings said. "He—Why, Asey, you look about done up!"

"I am Win Billings—you mean, Win Billings?"
"The last," Cummings ripped in two a strip of adhesive tape. "The last Billings of Billingsgate. May-be you can get a word out of him. We can't. Nice clean wound, Asey. You're one of the few men I know who can shoot someone up with out making a nasty mess for me. There, you'll recover, Win. In fact, you got off about as easy as Kay did."

Asey sat down in a chintz-covered arm chair.
"Doc, this is sort of mixed up in my mind. Just what happened here?"

"Ask Win," Cummings said. "Maybe he'll talk for you. He won't for us. You'd think he'd taken a vow, or something. Not a peep out of him."

Asey looked over at Win.
"Lane," he said, "you an' the doc clear out for a few minutes, will you? Maybe I can settle this."

"I don't trust him," Lane said. "I'm going to stay. He's playing possum. He's not anywhere near as weakly as he looks. And he's sober—"

Kind Of Fed Up

THEY left reluctantly. Asey took them left his pipe and then remembered he had no tobacco.

He looked around, forgetting that there would probably be no tins of tobacco lurking about in an exclusively feminine household.

"In m' pocket," Win said. "Coat's on the chair."
"Thanks," Asey fished around in the coat pocket until he found an oiled silk pouch. "Pretty swell, that," he said. "Present, I guess—"

"No good," Win said. "Don't taste right."
"Same tobacco I use," Asey remarked.

"Same I use, too, but gimme 't'bacco from a tin. I says to them wimmen. I don't want no sashay bag!"

"Kind of fed up with Old Home Week, are you?" Asey inquired.

Win Billings sat upright on the couch and spit with great accuracy into the fireplace.

He was tall and straight and remarkably well-preserved for an old fellow, particularly one so rarely sober. His hands were amazingly steady, and his voice firm, and the stubborn jutting of his chin interested Asey. A hawklike nose, a high forehead and a stubborn chin were Billings characteristics, but hitherto Asey remembered no trace of such stubbornness or force in Win.

"Huh," Win said, leaning back against the wall. "Damn this about it's worse'n rheumatiz. Look now, Asey Mayo. Did I ever ask anything of 'em? No House? No Food? No Relief? No Pension? No Never asked nothin' of nobody, 'cept maybe 't'bacco, an' I done work for that."

"An' they washed an' dressed you up," Asey said. "An' they—"

"An' made a show of me!" Win said violently. "Won't stand for it. Won't stand it no longer. Said no. Mean it." He drew a pipe from his pocket. "Gimme that pouch."

Asey filled his pipe and lighted it for him.
"Win," he said, "what'n time happened tonight?"

"Put me 'bed, they did," Win said bitterly, "seven o'clock. Locked the door. I got out the window. Got out 'fore, if you want to know. This time I was through. Feller give me a ride up here. Nice feller, no nonsense about him. I says, gimme a lift, an' he did."

"Headin' for the ice house, huh?"
Win nodded. "Well, kind of lost m'bearin' in the fog. N'en first thing I know, someone starts shootin'—one, two, three. Right to me. Says to me self then, I says, 'b'golly, I am through! Won't stand it no longer. They can shoot me full of holes like a sieve 'f they're a mind to, I says, but no more showin' off for 'em. Why? Never asked 'em for nothin'. Why sh'd I have to dress up for 'em? That's what I says to m'self! Celebration! They don't know how to hold no celebration, Asey! Take like when the Gen'ral come. Turkey red carpets, urns full of flowers, silk hats an' Prince Alberts, plenty to eat, plenty to drink—Asey, I thought it all over, an' it ain't right. They can shoot me all they're a mind to, but it ain't right. Won't stand for it no more, neither!"

Man About Manhattan

By George Tinker

New York—That the Fair is driving the city people to the suburbs and the suburbanites to the country has been made more than clear to the residents of Rockland county, New York, and some of them are pretty sore about it. Rockland county is 30 or 40 miles from Manhattan, and there is no reason to believe that what has taken place there hasn't been put into effect in other surrounding territories.

This is what has happened: Nearly a year ago a group of agents began browsing through the nearby villages taking leases on houses for rent at a very nominal figure. They tied these dwellings up in iron-clad leases and have proceeded to hold onto them for the Fair. Now they are sub-letting these houses, apartments and buildings at sky-high rentals, pocketing the profits, and grinning to themselves while the county folk writhe in chagrin. The profits gained are running from 70 to 200 per cent.

A suicide on the east side has left a $2 bank note, a copy of Shakespeare's "Macbeth," and a Ace of diamonds as the legacy to whomever should find and claim them. He had no relatives, and the latest information is that the body as well as the ace and the bill and the book had been taken over by the city.

Mention of a high card in connection with the death always reminds me of Joe the Boss, czar of the metropolitan underworld, who was succeeded upon his death by Lucky Luciano, vice overlord now serving time at Dannemora.

Joe the Boss was playing poker at a table in a Coney Island spaghetti joint one afternoon when a couple of thugs stepped through the door and riddled him with lead. Joe was dead before he hit the floor but when the police got there he was still clutching the Ace of diamonds in his fist.

Joe was the last of the gang czars reputed to bear a charmed life. He had been shot at and missed many times. When they finally got him he was given one of the first of the ornate funerals which later came to characterize the rites of fallen gang chiefs. Joe was laid away in a $15,000 casket, and 60 Cadillacs followed him to the grave.

All this preaching about there being no nudity or shows with sex appeal at the Fair should be taken with plenty of salt. There will be everything from burlesque and strip to nude ranches and Lady Godivas, but it would serve a lot of people right if the public took their word for it and sought their entertainment elsewhere.

It should be recalled that no World's Fair has ever existed without the girl show angle predominating. Always there have been "Little Egyptians" and bubble dancers. Nobody objects to them, for there's always more talk than nudity, anyway. Everybody knows there will be plenty of entertainment of the risqué variety. What I can't understand is why people put out stories like that. Do they think they can entice millions of visitors by offering them lectures on botanical research?

"I WANT QUALITY TOBACCO THAT'S WHY MY CROP GETS NV SULPHATE OF POTASH"

H. J. PHILLIPS, R. D. 1, Warsaw, says: "For several years I have side-dressed my tobacco with 100 pounds of NV SULPHATE OF POTASH per acre. This gave me better quality and increased yields. In 1937 I had more than 30 acres in tobacco, operating six barns. I certainly could tell the difference in the superior quality of the tobacco side-dressed with NV SULPHATE OF POTASH. This year of all years quality is of utmost importance. That's why I am side-dressing my whole crop with NV SULPHATE OF POTASH."

J. B. AYCOCK, Fremont (right), says: "Side-dressing tobacco with 50 pounds of NV SULPHATE OF POTASH and 50 pounds of NV SULPHATE OF POTASH-MAGNESIA has given us bigger yields of better quality."

OTIS GRAY, R. D. 2, Snow Hill (below), says: "I tested extra potash on my tobacco this year—side-dressing half my crop with 75 pounds of NV SULPHATE OF POTASH per acre. With the extra NV SULPHATE OF POTASH, the tobacco had body and weight. It was softer, more mellow and oily. I will use NV SULPHATE OF POTASH again this year."

R. F. GORE, R. D. 3, Clinton, says: "I tested NV SULPHATE OF POTASH on my tobacco last year, buying 200 pounds for two acres. The big difference in quality and yield decided me to side-dress my crop this year. The side-dressed tobacco ripens better, has more weight and better-quality leaves."

for TOBACCO The Tobacco Research Committee recommends side-dressing tobacco with potash, equal to 100 to 200 pounds of SULPHATE OF POTASH per acre, within 20 days after transplanting. The Committee states: "Experiments indicate that the acre value of tobacco may be materially increased by additional potash."

for COTTON The North Carolina Experiment Station recommends side-dressing cotton with 50 to 100 pounds of MURIATE OF POTASH, or 125 to 250 pounds of KAINIT per acre, on fields which have shown heavy Rust damage in the past and where the complete fertilizer treatment contains only 3% POTASH.

PRODUCE FENCE POSTS BY THINNING SHELTERBELT

Washington—(AP)—Dust bowl shelterbelts are growing so fast they are a surprise even to the national forest service.

Planted only three years ago, some of the shelterbelts already are producing farm lumber.

The new woodlands, planted as soil and water conservation projects, belong to the government and one of the first calls to thin them out came from a land owner near Cordell, Okla. He reported the trees, planted on his property, were large enough for fence posts.

Oklahoma forest officials who inspected the trees, confirmed his report the woodland needed thinning. Similar reports have come from other shelterbelts in Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas.
