Washington, April 19.—(AP)—Senator Schwellenbach (D-Wash.), asked the Senate today to continue the work of its special Civil Liberties committee by providing $100,000 additional funds.

The nomination of Alexander Fletcher Weddell of Virginia to become ambassador to Spain was sent to the Senate by the President.

Weddell is now ambassador to Argentina. He will succeed Claude Bowers at Madrid.

Weddell was born in Richmond, Va., April 7, 1876, and has been envoy to Argentina since 1933.

Fewer Deaths And Births In First Quarter Of '39

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, April 19.—Fewer North Carolinians were born and fewer died during the first quarter of 1939 than in the same period of 1938.

A compilation of State Board of Health vital statistics shows. Over the same period, the death toll in North Carolina from automobile accidents on the highways rose over the first three months of last year, the board's figures reveal.

During March, for the first time this year, deaths increased over last year, while births, for the third consecutive month continued to decline. Last month's auto deaths were listed at 58 as compared with 57 for March, 1938; though there was a decline of two (from four to two) in deaths caused by auto-train collisions.

Births for the first quarter of this year totalled 18,731 as compared with 19,466 in the first three months of 1938. For deaths, the corresponding figures are 8,401 for 1939, against 8,984 for 1938.

CHILDREN HURT IN BUS WRECK

Fifteen Given Hospital Treatment After Edgecombe Crash

Rocky Mount, April 19.—A Negro was killed and 15 children were given hospital treatment here today following a crash this morning on the Tarboro highway near here between an Edgecombe county school bus and a loaded fertilizer truck.

State Highway Patrolman R. L. Marshburn who investigated the accident, said the Negro had been identified as Harvey Murphy, 36, from Robersonville an occupant of the truck which officers said was driven by another Negro, Major Brown, 24, also of Robersonville.

Brown was taken to Tarboro and held under $1,000 bond on a manslaughter charge.

The patrolman said that both the school bus, which was carrying around 20 children to the West Edgecombe school, and the truck, apparently were headed toward Rocky Mount when the accident occurred. The officer said his investigation showed that the bus had stopped to pick up a child when the truck rammmed the bus from behind, instantly killing Murphy. After hitting the bus, the officers said the bus ran to the left of the road and into a field.

WHAT IT MEANS: THE ALBANIAN COUP By MORGAN M. BEATTY (AP Feature Service Writer) Washington—Your history professor will tell you that Italy's conquest of Albania is much more of a threat to Hitler than a blessing—in the long run! Here's how historians figure it out.

The Adriatic is the cheap shipping route to Africa, America, and the Far East for much of South Central Europe. By any other route, the extra transportation costs eat up the profits.

In pre-war Europe, Austria managed to gobble the best water-frontage on the Eastern Adriatic Sea, including the important ports of Trieste, Fiume, Zara. Further down the coast little Montenegro and Albania were independent. Serbia was strapped down, a helpless inland state.

That left Austria and Italy gnashing their teeth at each other across the Adriatic—bitter, natural rivals. The Italians, of course, dreamed their dreams. If only they could gain control of the Adriatic, and force Austria to use the Danube and Black Sea exclusively! The Adriatic then would be a handy Italian lake—a perfect retreat for the Italian navy in case of trouble. Italy would become Mediterranean Power No. 1, and show the world how an ocean should be run.

Dream Broken Up Sure enough, Italy got her hands on the great Adriatic ports of Trieste, Fiume and Zara. But—here's the historic rub—the western powers created Yugoslavia, with pre-war Serbia as a nucleus, and gave the new nation the rest of the Adriatic.

BRITAIN MAKES PROVISION FOR WAR MATERIAL

Decision Reached To Establish Supply Department

TALK CHURCHILL FOR NEW OFFICE

Cabinet Session Understood To Have Considered Several Other War-Time Measures

London, April 19.—(AP)—The British cabinet was reported today to have decided to establish a supply department to speed provision of war materials needed for Britain's vast rearmament program.

Establishment of an agency to coordinate the purchase of war materials for the fighting services army, air force and navy was known to have been considered by the Ministers in a session lasting more than an hour.

Whether the new department would have the status of a government ministry headed by a chief of cabinet rank was not immediately disclosed.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to announce the decision in the House of Commons later. Winston Churchill, former first Lord of the Admiralty and Lord Prime Minister of Munitions, has been mentioned as a possible supply Minister. Many, however, have contended that if he joined the cabinet he should be given a non-departmental post so that he would not be laden with routine duties.

The supply department, at least during the early stages would be concerned mainly with providing materials for the army.

The cabinet session was understood to have considered these further measures: Adoption of some form of military conscription; reorganization of the voluntary national service register—the listing of volunteers for emergency jobs in war time—so as to release additional men for service in the territorial of home army.

Conviction Upheld By Supreme Court Raleigh, April 19.—(AP)—The Supreme Court today upheld the conviction of James Dixon of Cabarrus county on charges of first degree murder.

Rural Electricity Users Doubled Since January 1

Raleigh, April 19.—Electric cooperatives, sponsored and aided by the Federal Rural Electrification Administration, have at least doubled their total of authorized customers in North Carolina since the first of this year, according to tentative and approximate figures obtained at the office of the State REA.

The total increase of customers on authorized lines of sorts (co-op, private utility and municipal) since January 1 has been greater than the increase for the entire year 1938. J. M. Grainger, State REA engineer, said:

A conservative estimate of the increase in customers on lines of all sorts this year is 15,000, he said, against an actual increase of 13,246 for the entire year 1938. The coops have accounted for the lion's share of this year's increase, their cus-

FRENCH LINER THOUGHT FIRED BY SABOTEURS

Burned Vessel Settles in Harbor at Le Havre

ITALIAN WORKER IS QUESTIONED

Shipment of War-planes from U. S. Unloaded Just Before Ship Keels Over

Le Havre, France, April 19.—(AP)—The liner Paris, once the flagship of the French Merchant fleet, heeled over and settled in 36 feet of water today, burned through by fire which officials suspected was set by foreign saboteurs.

Two persons were killed and two others seriously injured in the night-long fight against the flames which firemen said spread from two widely separated parts of the ship. One point of origin was behind locked doors.

Investigators said preliminary investigations strengthened the belief that the 34,000-ton liner was deliberately set afire.

An Italian dock worker was held for questioning by Le Havre police. A shipment of 10 warplanes made in the United States for the French army was taken off the vessel only an hour before it listed and settled in the center of the port. The planes had not been unloaded from the Paris, which arrived from New York Saturday, before the fire started.

Stevadores also were able to save $500,000 worth of French art objects which had just been loaded for shipment to the New York World's Fair. The art treasures were untouched by fire in a forward hold.

Mayor Leon Meyer of Le Havre said the suspected cause of the fire was an "incendiary" who was responsible.

Two days ago the French secret police warned both the French Lines, owners of the Paris, and the Ministry of the Merchant Marine that an effort at sabotage would be made at Le Havre.

Firemen remaining aboard the nearly submerged liner said they had succeeded in putting out the last of the flames at 11:30 a. m. (5:30 a. m. EST) more than 13 hours after they had started.

In tracing briefly the development of the modern Bible and its wide acceptance, she mentioned the fact that this book has been translated into more than a thousand languages and dialects.

It has been estimated, she said, that since the first Bibles were made, one trillion, fifteen billion copies have been put into circulation.

Miss Lewis concluded with a striking story of the appearance of a strange figure in a quarrelsome world conference of Christians, where every national group was trying to gain advantages for itself.

After the strange man had cited the famous passage from the New Testament on Charity, the delegates realized how far from Charity they had been, and found with awe that every man—Russian, Japanese, American, and many others—had heard the speaker in his own language.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR Wednesday, April 19, 1899

The suggestion to abandon the Confederate reunions after this year will hardly find a favorable lodgment in the hearts of the Southern veterans. They are not made of material to forget their comrades and while two of them remain and enabled to do so, they will get together and talk over their trials and pleasures of camp life. The Confederate veteran can cheerfully forgive all, but he cannot and will not forget his manhood.

HOLLYWOOD — They can keep on taking popularity polls and giving other realms in the prime of life she leaves indelibly imprinted in the city's annual shining example in gracious and righteous living.

Somebody ought to catalogue humor into two sections: the kind Hollywood and New York think is funny, and the kind that must be really funny because the great majority between the coasts appreciate it.

And let Hollywood consult the catalogue next time it whips up one of its "smart, sophisticated, ultra" comedies.

Sights in the day... Bette Davis's Scottie, Tibbie, losing his mistress in the studio commissary, being rescued and returned intact by that old toughie, James Cagney.

And just noises... Ann Sheridan's the "omph girl" (can it be they're going to make a movie of that title? It can) and now Joy Hodges is the "yumph girl" and it looks as if the thing will never end.

But I should! Florence Rice once said she didn't like to date actors—so she married one, Robert Wilcox.

Reflecting on Bob's professional abilities, or merely indicating that Flossie changed her mind?

Success story, as reported in a publicity release: "Morton Lowry, youthful British actor, has an important part in 'Enemy Agent'.

He got it because he can portray high-pitched excitement in a cultured British accent better than any Hollywood actor available."

Add April birthdays: Jane Withers was 13 on April 12; Shirley Temple, 10 on April 23; May Robbin, 7 on April 19; A. Hitler, the fella in the newsreels, 50 on April 20.

You'll find no more sedate appearing gentlemen on the movie set than Donald Crisp and Claude Rains.

Believe me, it is surface sedateness... The other day Crisp poked his head over a backdrop, screwed up his face and stuck out his tongue, withdrew his head hastily.

OLD HOME WEEK MURDER by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

The Characters Asey Mays, Cape Cod sleuth. Mike Slade, an artist in love with Jane.

Chapter 39 A Reformation TAG DAY went off smoothly, as Weston had hoped.

Asey spent the morning with Lane, and in the afternoon he dressed himself up according to Sara's rigid specification and took Win Billings' place on the radio program.

After the broadcast, the golden-voiced Vincent Tripp came over and congratulated him. "And you have a better accent, don't you?" he said.

"Pretty hot," she said. "Tomorrow you'll get sixty-one offers of marriage and a thousand letters about how to quadruple your capital."

"Pinky," Madame Meaux pointed to the orchestra leader. "He dated the girl up last night, and boy, did he walk into a jam!"

"It took Arthur two hours to explain where he'd been," Madame Meaux said. "The partition's thin, I couldn't get to sleep till he finished hating over old man Billings."

"I got to see you, Asey, right away. Mind if I snatch him, Em? And look, about that money, I'll be you Saturday."

"Getting married," Slade said. "Okay, Em. Come on, Asey—got your car here? Well, let's drive someplace out of the mob and get this settled."

"I've just seen Jane," Slade said. "At least, I saw her this noon. She's terribly ashamed of herself, and so am I. She's acted badly and I've acted badly, and I'm sorry and so is she."

"Well, two things," Slade said. "Jane and I are going to get married, and I—well, I hadn't realized the enormity of this until today. I went off half-cocked the other night. I knew that the Randalls wanted Jane to marry Chase, and I suppose from their point of view, you can't blame 'em. Not that I think that money is any—well, they don't know any better. Today, and yesterday, and since I've been working and helping with things, I've just begun to realize what this means to the town. Prosperity, publicity, no debt—I see why you kept the murder quiet. I've just realized what a thing this town undertook—and if you know, it's going over."

"I'm Proud!" Asey said. "I'm glad to know it," Asey said. "I'd forgotten to ask, with everything going on."

"I can't," Asey said. "I've got to see Lane, and Weston's rung me in for some judgin' at the hall. What makes him think I know a better tomato or jar of jam than anyone else, I don't know."

"Your cousin's made you a judge?" Bertha interrupted as she took away his plate. "Oh, you're a judge?"

"I'll take you," Zeb said unexpectedly. "It's probably going to rain, but—well, let's go."

"I've an idea, Asey. It's crazy, but have you ever thought that someone either in the town, or someone who came from here originally might be sore at it? Suppose they'd been failures, and blame the town. Perhaps among the tourists or the old settlers."

ARCHAEOLOGIST SAYS RUINS SHOW SEIGE EXPECTED Athens. (AP)—Prof. Carl Blegen, the American archaeologist who has completed seven years of digging into the ruins of Troy, expressed the belief that "there is some truth" in the Helen of Troy legend.

The University of Cincinnati archaeologist pictured Troy as "a fortified stronghold with a wall around it" at the time Helen was supposed to have been brought there by kidnapper Paris.

there's one with that type of grudge. "Praps," Asey said, "but the feller I chased knew around that region like a book. That lets out tourists—say, that reminds me. There's one thing I want to, to ask Jane and Eloise, about that path Kay found—"

"And hasn't Eloise crashed through about that sock Jane gave her? She's been swell, Jane says she's working like a Trojan and being an old sport."

Asey nodded. "Sort of person like her does crash through, when you least expect it. Slade, when you was last night, around fireworks time?"

"Didn't you know? I was on the evening radio program," Slade answered with a touch of pride. "When? Oh, it began half an hour before a fireworks, and ended up as the radio town fireworks began. They use a record for the program fireworks, did you know? I didn't. Tripp said I was pretty good. And you know, a lot of people must listen to that program."

"Got fan mail, did you?" "No, but a dealer I used to know came down from Boston. He heard me and he—well, he bought four pictures, and wants more."

"Fine!" Asey said. "So you can pay off your debts an' get married huh?" "These white flannels," Slade said bitterly. "These, and that radio talk, that's what got him. He thinks I've been making a pile of money, so he wants a cut. My stuff's no better or worse than it was, but he thinks—what are you laughing about?"

"A crack of Aunt Sara's," Asey told him. "I wonder if you won't die a Conservative—don't start anything, I'm jokin'. An' thank goodness you was on that program. It's got you an alibi as well as money."

"You mean you thought I was the man in the woods? Now see here," Slade began angrily. "Famous Folk Who Fished"

"Cool off," Asey advised. "An' when you an' Jane get a house, I'm goin' to get a sampler worked to put over your fireplace. 'God Bless Our Happy Home And Count Ten.' In red. Now, let's go see Jane an' Eloise about that path."

At the hollow they found Lane pretending to weed the lawn. A hospital tag dangled from one of his shirt buttons. "Eloise," he indicated the tag. "Can't you squeeze her? And the tourists, Asey, I don't like it. They've been here in herds. I wish we could shut the place up, but suppose we can't. I've got two men around, but I don't like this at all—and here come more people!"

"Do your best," Asey said. "I guess you won't bother in asking questions now. Looks like they had their hands full with customers. We'll run along, Slade."

The rest of the day passed off quietly, although as Kay said the next morning, it was rather worse sitting and waiting for something to happen, than actually having it.

There was only a small bandage on the side of her head to record her encounter in the woods. She explained it, when she had to, by saying that she had taken a tumble.

"What's today?" she asked at breakfast. "Where's the program?" "Historical tours," Zeb said. "Very instructive. Sites of the first church, first store, first graveyard, first schoolhouse. Where the Pilgrims didn't land. Where it is thought they did, although I personally think they're having it wet. Where the British were repulsed by embattled farmers, once in seventeen-seventy something, and again in eighteen-twelve. Very repulsive folk, these Billingsgaters. Also where Mr. Thoreau stayed, and where Mr. Webster and Mr. Coolidge fished."

"Now there's a thought," Kay said. "Fishing. My boss is a fisherman. I wonder if—mm. Famous Folk Who Fished in Bottomless Pond—got a bottomless pond? There usually is one, Asey, how's for taking me fishing? I can do a fish story and please the boss and work in local color to beat anything."

"I can't," Asey said. "I've got to see Lane, and Weston's rung me in for some judgin' at the hall. What makes him think I know a better tomato or jar of jam than anyone else, I don't know."

"Your cousin's made you a judge?" Bertha interrupted as she took away his plate. "Oh, you're a judge?"

LITTLE SHOWN IN FIRST VOTE

Raleigh Election Proves Little About Reform

Raleigh, April 17.—Raleigh's municipal election Monday, first major polling held since adoption of the election "reforms" of 1939, showed not too much of anything regarding effect of the elimination of absentees and tightening of provisions regarding markers.

One conclusion it probably justified is that the "reforms" will reduce the number of ballots cast and consequently, majorities. Even this is complicated by the fact that the sudden Monday afternoon squall cutting the Raleigh vote as did the may have had as much to do with laws.

So far as the Raleigh voting is concerned, it can also be justifiably deduced that the "reforms" will have little or no effect on results of the normal, ordinary election.

For Monday a vote of more than 10,000 had been anticipated. In fact only 6,254 ballots were cast for mayor. The absence of markers slowed up voting in several precincts where the Negro vote predominates, because it required more time for the voters to figure out that valid ticket as compared with the "sample ticket" previously given them.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—If things are happening so fast in Europe that you can't make head nor tail of them, be not chagrined.

The State Department, War Department, Navy Department and other departments are equally at sea. Perhaps more so. They must not only try to determine what it means, but more troublesome—what to do about it, if anything.

Don't be ashamed to run to the library to read a book about it. They have two at the State Department. We rambled into one office while the Italian guns were still booming off Albanian shores. Two worried scholars on central European affairs were buried to the ears in books.

Plenty Of Material
They knew pretty thoroughly the background of Albania. But a superior official wanted a detailed report, including exactly what Mussolini had said on the subject a couple of years ago. "Don't think they didn't have it. They had volumes and volumes of Mussolini speeches, both in the original Italian and in the English translations. (In a pinch, somebody or other deeply hidden in the State Department probably could translate Sanskrit or ancient Egyptian if he had to, especially if it involved some diplomatic matter.)

At the War Department we encountered somebody speculating what will come of Albania. Not all the studying goes on in the State Department. There are U. S. military and naval attaches in almost every country in the world—and not for fun. The immediate guess down there was that Germany would move next in the direction of Danzig and perhaps the Polish corridor. But they were admittedly just guessing.

Up on Capitol Hill we met Senator Borah. He recalled the telephone conversation between Hitler and Mussolini before the Duce's legions crossed the Adriatic into Albania.

Borah's Version
"I'll venture the conversation went something like this," said Borah.

"Hitler: Say, Benito, go over and take Albania tomorrow. I'll announce I am backing you up and we'll see how serious Mr. Chamberlain is with this pledge to fight to save the little nations."

And Mussolini ups and does it. And nothing happens, immediately.

A White House spokesman reflected the President's mind in warning the country that continued advancement by the dictators would mean America must choose perhaps one of three courses:

1. Whether to bottle ourselves up and live on our own fat.
2. Whether to tax and tax and tax and subsidize and subsidize and subsidize our foreign trade.
3. Whether to lower our standard of living, pay lower wages and work more hours so our goods, costing less to produce, could compete abroad with totalitarian tradesmen.

Nobody around here has the answers.

Handcuffs dangling from his wrist, Claude Dickerson, mid-western desperado, nonchalantly puffed a cigarette in police headquarters following his arrest at gunpoint in New York City. Police described him as the only surviving member of the "Perkins gang" which terrorized the middle west even before the late John Dillinger and his mob started their reign of crime. Dickerson escaped from jail at Houston, Mo., in 1934.

PLAN BANQUET HONOR HOEY

To Be Staged by Carolina Society of New York

The North Carolina Society of New York at a recent meeting of its dinner committee, of which W. Y. Peyer, president of Vick Chemical Company, Greensboro, is chairman, decided to sponsor a banquet on the evening of June 18 in honor of Governor Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina, who will be in New York at the time attending ceremonies in connection with "North Carolina Day" activities to take place at the New York World's Fair on June 19.

Other distinguished guests to be invited include Orville Wright, who with his brother flew the first airplane at Kitty Hawk in 1903; Grover Whalen, president of the New York World's Fair; General D. E. Nolan, director of states' participation; Thomas A. Morgan, president of the Sperry Corp., formerly of Henderson, who is serving as technical advisor to the North Carolina World's Fair Commission.

The entire membership of the North Carolina Society of New York will be invited to the dinner, together with all visiting North Carolinians in New York at the time.

"North Carolina Day" June 19, is expected to be one of the great days of the New York World's Fair since plans have been practically completed for the largest air raid ever undertaken by private pilots. Something over 100 planes from the Carolinas are expected to arrive in New York on the afternoon of June 18. There also is planned a 100 car motorcade and several special trains.

A number of bands, sponsors, color bearers, state highway patrolmen and others will take part in a parade proposed to be held on Sunday afternoon, June 18, in New York and another parade at the fair grounds on Monday, June 19.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL and LYNN NISBET

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, April 19—Tom Bost dean of Raleigh newsmen, wrote early this week that practically all the correspondents in the state capital know what Dr. Ralph McDonald is going to do, but can't write it. That is true, but your correspondent does feel at liberty to quote, without comment what this correspondence wrote under date of March 25.

"No (Dr. McDonald) left open only one possible avenue to public employment. He said he is hopeful to get back to his college teaching."

This indicates that his election or appointment for whatever is the proper term for getting a teaching job to some instructional position at the University of North Carolina is not at all impossible.

"There are, in fact, reports now current around Raleigh that he will be named head of a Department at the Chapel Hill institution."

In his sprightly article regarding Dr. McDonald, Mr. Bost facetiously remarked that the one-time gubernatorial candidate might do well as an evangelist.

He probably would, but your correspondent feels it perfectly proper to say that this isn't what Dr. McDonald has in mind. That's just in case some took Tom's humorous comment seriously.

As fast as Raleigh gets ride of one crowd of people it gets another. There was the legislature; then the Congress of Farmers and Teachers; then the current session of the Women's Club Federation; and at the end of this week the Legion Fumakers—the 40 and 8—will invade in full force.

Mrs. Harry B. Caldwell, superintendent of the juvenile Grange work of the National Grange and wife of the State Grange, will be off of five representatives of the National Grange at next week's Washington conference on "Children in a Democracy," called by Federal Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State Health Officer, will attend a conference of state and territorial health officials in Washington, which opens tomorrow and which will continue through April 25. The conference, he said, will be of the utmost importance in health work. It will, among other things, consider the Wagner bill which the Federal government would appropriate $80,000,000 for what amount to a socialized medical program.

Under its terms the Federal government would grant funds to states wishing to step into the curative side of the medical field in addition to the preventive. The program has been endorsed, with the exception of secondary insurance features, by the American Medical Society, Dr. Reynolds said.

Adjutant General J. B. Metz admits that "my opinion isn't worth any more than any other's" but goes on record as predicting that Germany and Italy will not start a war immediately.

FAMILY BLOWN FROM HOME - BUT ESCAPE DEATH

The family of W. P. Oliver was blown from the home and landed across the highway but all escaped with minor injuries in a terrifying tornado which struck near Texarkana, Texas. The wreckage of the Oliver home is shown above. Elsewhere the fates of the storm were more deadly. At least 20 persons were killed at Center Point near Collins, Ark., seven perished at Haynesville, La., and six lost their lives in scattered sections of Texas.

Hitler's Life Expectancy 73; Most Rulers Tops In Fifties

ADOLF HITLER: How long can he keep it up.

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (Associated Press Science Editor)

NEW YORK — The world would like to know what lies ahead for Hitler as he comes up to his 50th birthday tomorrow.

The probability curve is based on statistics. It does not prophesy for an individual but it does show his probabilities. In science, probabilities are considered significant.

Thus, at his present age, the probability is that Hitler will live to be 73. This is the chance in Germany. In the United States this "expectation" of the life insurance tables would be one year less.

This expectation could be greatly modified by one set of figures, which for Hitler are not available. These are the life spans of ancestors. His chances are definitely those of the ancestral average.

Best Years in Late 50's
These missing figures could even write a sharp change into Der Fuehrer's old age prospects, a possible margin of 26 years. That figure is the average gap between short-lived persons, as found by Dr. Raymond Pearl of Johns Hopkins University.

Another statistical field, ages of leadership, is all in Hitler's favor.

These ages have been found by Dr. Harvey C. Lehman of Ohio University.

If Hitler were a military leader only, or even an American college president, his peak of accomplishment might, statistically, have been passed already, or be over in two years.

But his work compares better with government rulers, American Presidents, business and financial leaders and American ambassadors.

For all these classes, the ages most likely for attaining their peak of success are from 55 to 59 inclusive.

Among the world's non-hereditary rulers, for 10 years ending in 1937, Dr. Lehman finds that 81 per cent of the years of service were after the age of 50. Twenty-two per cent of those years were after 65. Only 19 per cent were before 50.

Among American Presidents, 87 per cent attained their leadership after 50 and 71 per cent after 65. Justices of the Supreme Court are probably not a fair comparison as to age with the position of Der Fuehrer. The justices' most frequent ages were 65 to 69 inclusive.

But among 50 American business leaders, persons who reputedly face much nervous strain, 96 per cent attained their top after 50, and 48 per cent after 65.

These all are calendar ages. Physiological age, the fact that some persons grow old early, may be 10 years different. But there are no data on Hitler's physiological age.

Good Way To Live Long.
His abstemious and celibate living has been publicized and guesses have been made as to whether this indicates some physical flaw. However, it should be remembered that careful living is not statistically as 20-year-olds, and that of ability personality and efficiency are desired, some men of 80 are superior to many at 20.

Eccentricities have been charged to Hitler. But history has a host of great who were eccentric. This host has not been reduced to the "probability curve." But psychological studies indicate that not only eccentricities but also instabilities of mind or body were often a vital cause in the drive to greatness.

Greenies Lose 8-7 in Exhibition Game Yesterday

Clarence Roper's Lenoir Indians scalped Rube Wilson's Greenies-8-7 in an exhibition baseball game yesterday afternoon at the Third street park.

Lenoir's longest drive of the game came about in the third inning when Lloyd Stooks, Indian second sacker and left-hand hitter, poled a round tripper over the right field wall after Umpire Walter Latham had called three balls and a strike on the batter. This was Lenoir's first hit of the game.

Staging a five run party in the fourth, Lenoir took a decided lead. However, the Greenies scored two in the fifth and five in the sixth to go ahead. Wells of the visitors doubled to left field in the seventh and scored on Wegher's single to deadlock the score. Kobalt tripled in the eighth and scored on Allen's error.

Lenoir used four hurlers off whom the Greenies collected ten hits. Morris Wilson was reached for a half dozen safeties and Badger for four in the Greenies' doings.

Featuring the Greenies hitting was Red Christopher a second sacker, who got three singles. A double and two singles collected by Wells topped off the hitting doings of the Indians.

Man About Manhattan

New York—An interesting experiment is taking place down at 799 Seventh avenue. Jack Robbins, whose name heads the largest music publishing house in the country, thinks "Swanee River" is the greatest of all American folk songs. He thinks it is so superior that it isn't worth while to compare "Swanee River" with other American songs.

Guided by this enthusiasm, he has invited 25 well known composers and arrangers to interpret "Swanee River" after their own fashion, to make their own arrangements of it. If 25 people witness a fire or a flood their accounts will vary widely, even though each tells exactly what he sees. That's what Robbins wants here—25 different "Swanee River" stories.

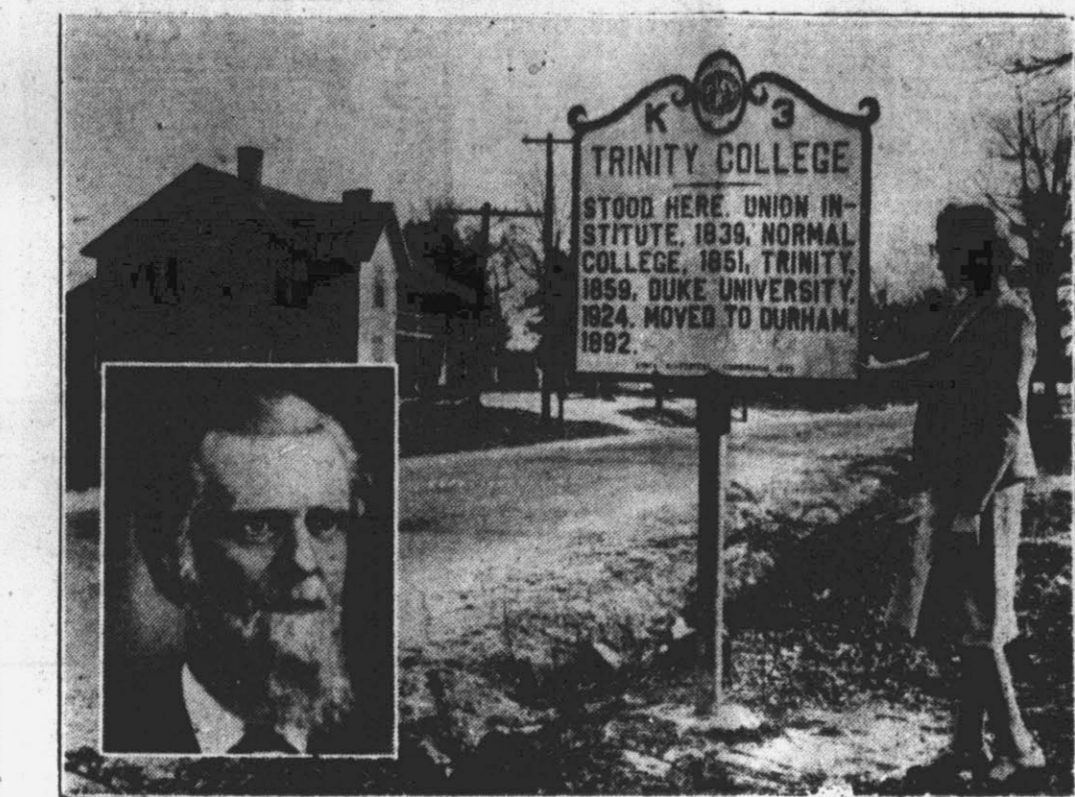

They're going to be published in one folio, or album, and they'll probably cost a dollar, or maybe two dollars. But there is no commercial angle to the stunt. The composers haven't received anything for their work, and Robbins won't realize a dollar on sale. Every quarter above actual printing expenses will be turned over to deserving musical charities. He has been three years selecting composers and collecting their finished manuscripts. Most of them are in now. Here are some of the men whose versions will be included in the folio, and a word or so identifying them:

Johnny Green—he wrote "Body and Soul." Peter De Rose has composed more than 200 songs, his latest being the Number One hit of today, "Deep Purple." Louis Altar, "Manhattan Serenade." Claude Thornhill is an arranger. Dana Suesse, "The Night is Young and You're So Beautiful." Rube Bloom, "Song of the Bayou." D. Savino is a musical editor.

Van Alexander is co-composer of "A Tisket A-Tasket." Spud Murphy is an arranger. Ferde Grofe "Grand Canyon" and "Mississippi" suites. Victor Young, "Sweet Sue." Vernon Duke, hailed as the logical successor to George Gershwin. Frank Signorelli, "Park Avenue Fantasy." E. M. Sampson "Stomping at the Savoy."

Hugh Frey is the father of rhythm music. Bob Zurke, pianist with Bob Crosby. William Grant Still is a composer of symphonic ballads. Thomas Grisselle, "Two American Sketches." Eastwood Lane, "Adirondack Sketches."

SITE OF OLD TRINITY COLLEGE

As Duke university this week-end celebrates the centennial of its origins many references will be made to Union Institute, Normal College and Old Trinity College, the university's antecedents in Randolph county. The above picture shows a marker that indicates the institution's site at Trinity, N. C., during the first 54 years of its existence. Dr. Braxton Craven (inset) was the institution's president for 49 of these years. A series of community exercises, culminating May 8, will be held at Trinity commemorating the 100th commencement held at that place. A community school has been operated at Trinity continuously since Trinity college moved to Durham in 1892.

MANY ENTERED IN STYLE SHOW

115 Girls from Sixty-One Communities To Take Part

Raleigh, April 18—Girls from nine North Carolina colleges—115 of them representing 61 Tar Heel communities and 99 of their residents of the state—will come to Raleigh Thursday to model clothes of their own design and make at the twelfth annual Style Show presented at the State College textile school.

Outstanding among guests who will see the show will be a native North Carolinian, Dr. Claudius T. Murchison who is now president of the Cotton Textile Institute. He will speak at State College Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock on "A Program in Defense of Cotton."

Participating colleges, with the teachers of home economics who will accompany the girls are: Peace—Miss Bertie Lee Whitesides, High Point—Miss Lola Barry, Queens-Chicora—Mrs. Guy Eason, Meredith—Miss Jennie M. Hanyen, St. Mary's—Miss Elizabeth Eason, Elon—Miss Lida Muse, Flora McDonald Red Springs—Miss Thelma M. Hall, Lenoir—Mrs. I. D. Moon, and Greensboro College—Miss Bernice J. White.

The Style Show was originated by Dean Thomas Nelson of the textile school to demonstrate the value of cotton in production of stylish, wearable clothes. More than 1,200 girls have participated in the annual revues, modeling garments made of fabrics designed and woven in the textile school by Dean Nelson's students.

Each year the show has attracted increased interest. Expert stylists have been amazed at the attractiveness and fine workmanship. Last year the deans of all the textile schools in the nation gathered at State College for the Style Show.

Georgia's 1938 peanut crop averaged 800 pounds an acre, an increase of 60 pounds over 1937.

Jack Mason, arranger. Art Tatum may best be described as a stylist. Bob Bagar is a critic. Teddy Wilson, formerly pianist for Benny Goodman, has his own orchestra. Frank Skinner is under contract to Universal Pictures. Lennie Hayton is a conductor. William H. Challas is noted for his arrangement of "In a Mist."

These are the 25 men and one girl who are passing Stephen Foster along to you as they see him. Comparisons should be an interesting pastime, once the folio reaches the music counters.

HARVARD DEAN DUKE SPEAKER

To Appear on Centennial Program Sunday Morning

Durham April 19—Dean Willard LeRoy Sperry, of Harvard University divinity school, one of America's foremost clergymen and religious educators, is to deliver the sermon at Sunday morning's service of thanksgiving and rededication at Duke University, which is part of the institution's centennial celebration "The Years That Give Wisdom" is the topic to be used by the distinguished speaker.

Receiving his formal education at leading institutions in this country and England, Dean Sperry has also taught and lectured extensively in both countries. He... was ordained to the Congregational ministry in 1908 and held pastorates in Fall River and Boston, Mass., before devoting his full time to religious education. He taught at Andover Theological seminary before joining the Harvard faculty.

Dean Sperry is the author of some ten volumes, and numerous articles in the fields of religion and education. He has served as dean of the Harvard Council on Religion and Organizations of similar nature.

Several other prominent religious leaders are to participate in the Sunday morning service, which is to begin at 11 o'clock.

Special music for Sunday morning's service is to be furnished by the University choir.

WHAT IT MEANS

Adriatic's eastern shore except for a strip held by tiny Albania. Central Europe still had an outlet into the Adriatic. Italy was deprived of her coveted lake!

As the years went by Italy loaned money to little Albania, and otherwise penetrated her economy, until the independence of that Balkan state was little more than a shadow. The Italian puppet, moreover, was separated from the heel of the Italian boot by a mere 50-mile strip of water. Would it be much of a trick to close the Adriatic with the Italian navy, in case of trouble with Austria or Yugoslavia?

Old Austria, meanwhile, had become a part of Hitler's new Germany. Furthermore, reports are piling up that Hitler's agents are filtering through Austria into Yugoslavia and stirring up the Croats. And American observers are gathering figures showing that Germany is driving other trading nations out of Yugoslavia. If those signs mean anything, they mean Hitler has eyes on Adriatic outlets.

So, asks your historian, is it mere coincidence that Mussolini blows the trumpet to get the world's attention and marches on Albania, a country he already controlled for all purposes except the military? Naturally the Italian dictator outwardly is defending the Rome-Berlin axis.

Duce Distrust Hitler?

Your history professor suspects that the noisy Italian excursion is really the first sure sign that Mussolini doesn't trust Hitler, never has, and never will. Moreover, historians see it as evidence that Mussolini has decided to do something to make Hitler think twice before he leaps hereafter.

The Italian partner in the axis is writing himself an insurance policy against too much Hitler in the Adriatic. For if the Italian dictator openly controls the gate between the heel of the Italian boot and Albania, he'll have to be consulted BEFORE—not after—anybody makes a move in the Adriatic.

In short, Mussolini has wrangled himself an invitation to the party if there's going to be one to carve up the Yugoslavian melon.

That much of the picture, the historian is fairly sure about. Beyond that, however, there lie tempting vistas.

Where, asks the historian, does Yugoslavia actually fit into the European jig-saw? Among the great powers, France alone has military obligations to the war-created state. But with Czechoslovakia gone, what point would there be in defending another Balkan state wedged in between Hitler and Mussolini?

In fact, from the standpoint of the Franco-British alliance, wouldn't it be a good idea to let Mussolini play Hitler to Yugoslavia all by himself?

4. A better co-operation between the city and East Carolina Teachers College.
5. More adequate playground in Greenville with a public recreation program, with strict economy.
6. A cleaner and more beautiful city in which to live.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, April 19.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened unchanged to three higher, despite the earlier Liverpool markets. The trade and New Orleans bought, while Bombay, the south and locals were sellers.

At the end of the first hour prices were holding at the opening levels, or unchanged to three net higher.

Activity quieted down toward noon and prices held close to their opening levels, or unchanged to five higher.

DREAMS OF HARMONY AMONG THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS may hover over the eighth Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru, but some of the Argentine youth with Fascist ideas borrowed from Europe's dictator states, Germany and Italy, have a different dream. While United States diplomats were seeking agreement with the Argentina delegation on solidarity for the western hemisphere, the Argentine Nationalist Youth alliance—which claims 600 boys of high school and college age—were giving Fascist salute at statue of Gen. San Martin.

How the plus of OIL-PLATING brings you more than an oil-change

YOU know right off that the fresh oil needed in your crankcase today, isn't to lubricate the crankcase. Either your oil is in the bearings and up to the cylinder head every turn of your engine, or your lubrication isn't 100%.

Now what's the chance for any of the general run of oils to stay up while you've parked the car, for instance? Just about as much chance as there is for a geysers to stay up all by itself! Then every time you start, don't pistons get up to the top before oil gets up from the crankcase? You kill that risk by changing now to OIL-PLATING.

The "magnetic action" of Conoco Germ Processed oil—patented—makes OIL-PLATING stay on inner engine surfaces throughout all your stops, starts and runs this Summer. Your Germ Processed oil keeps a steady hold on the "Full" mark, too, as you'll see—by changing today to Your Mileage Merchant, Continental Oil Company
