

SENATE VOTES RECORD FUNDS FOR FARM AID

Total of $1,218,000,000 Provided in Measure

BILL NOW GOES BACK TO HOUSE

President Roosevelt's Second Reorganization Proposal Approved in Senate

Washington, May 12.—(AP)—A record $1,218,000,000 farm appropriation bill passed the Senate today.

The vote on final passage was announced by Senator Hatch (D-N.M.), presiding, as 61 to 14. Earlier the Senate defeated, 42 to 28, a motion to send the bill back to the Appropriations committee for reduction.

The bulky annual agricultural measure now goes back to the House for consideration of more than $338,000,000 in increases.

The Senate failed to decrease a single item previously approved by the House, but inserted or increased more than 100 items.

Most of the funds in the big bill will be used in an effort to improve farm income and prices, either through direct benefit payments to farmers or government programs to remove farm surpluses.

The Senate approved $225,000,000 for partly payments to farmers in addition to $500,000,000 for soil conservation checks. It also added $113,000,000 for removal of farm surpluses.

Other developments: The Senate approved President Roosevelt's second government reorganization plan.

The plan reorganizes a score of government agencies and abolishes the Bituminous Coal Commission, placing its functions under the Interior department. The program now will go into effect at the end of 60 days.

President Roosevelt said he would favor repeal of the undistributed profits tax provided some other measures are found to prevent what he called legal tax evasions by the wealthy.

In a long discussion of taxes at a press conference the President emphasized again his contention that in place of any corporation levies repealed there would have to be found substitute taxes to bring in the same amount of revenue.

He said the Treasury would submit to congressional committees results of its tax studies, but that they would not necessarily be in the form of recommendations.

Mr. Roosevelt said those who have been clamoring for removal of deterrents of business in the tax structure had failed to point out how to raise the revenue that would be lost.

The President said he had selected Admiral William Leahy, retiring naval chief of operations, to be governor of Puerto Rico.

Poppies Here For Sale On May 27th

Bright red poppies bloomed out today when the American Legion auxiliary received its supply of the World War memorial flowers for Poppy Day Saturday, May 27. The poppies, hundreds of carefully made replicas of the famous poppies of France and Belgium, came from Veterans' Hospital, where they were made by disabled war veterans.

The auxiliary's poppy committee, under the direction of Mrs. W. R. Jones, chairman, is putting in busy hours counting and arranging the flowers in readiness for the women who will offer them on the streets on Poppy Day, to be worn in honor of the World War dead. Preparations are being made to cover the entire city with the flowers, with the hope that everyone will join in the observance of the day and pay tribute to those who gave their lives in defense of democracy.

"Each poppy had been shaped with painstaking care by some disabled veteran," said Mrs. Jones. "Each one is slightly different from the others because they are made entirely by hand. Some are more perfect than others, due to the varying skill of the veterans, but all represent the best efforts of their makers to reproduce in crepe paper the wild Flanders poppy which grew and bloomed along the battle front in France and Belgium.

"The idea of the poppy as the memorial flower for the war dead sprang naturally to the minds of the men in France when they saw these brave little flowers blooming on the bare battle graves. Colonel John McCrea expressed it in his immortal poem, and one of the first acts of the American Legion was the adoption of the poppy as its memorial flower. The British Legion also adopted the poppy and the flower is worn in every part of the world to commemorate the sacrifice of those who fell in the ranks of the democratic powers."

VIEWS FUTURE OF YOUNG MEN

Asserts Youth Must Become International-Minded

High Point, May 12.—Presenting a word picture of his conception of the outlook for youth, Harold D. Meyer, professor of sociology in the University of North Carolina and educational director of the Boy Scouts for the South Atlantic states, told delegates to the 189th district of Rotary International in an address here today that "it has become a prime necessity for youth to become international-minded."

"Every trend in modern life indicates that space and time are being conquered that the world is being brought closer together and hence international thinking becomes a necessity," Prof. Meyer declared.

He brought out the arguments against the totalitarian youth movements of Germany, Italy and Russia, stressing their severe regimentation, overemphasized militarism, and political propaganda.

He showed how the governments of these three nations were saturating their youth with political philosophy and challenged the Rotarians to think with modern youth on the proper attitude toward them.

The speaker then pictured the trends that definitely indicate a social form of group living. "Rugged individualism gives way to societal living and group living trumps on family prestige," he said. "On the horizon of society one notes patterns of social planning, social control, economic cooperation and social responsibility. Public Health measures, compulsory education, laws, zoning in cities, restricted immigration, knowledge of birth control, regulation of agriculture, wage and hour laws, socialized hospitalization and a myriad of other forces all connote trends that demand a new interpretation of democratic culture."

One man working full time can produce the feed, raise and care for the young stock and handle a milking herd of 10 cows, it has been estimated.

Hoey Tells Bankers That Public Is Taxed Enough

Reflector Bureau. Pinehurst, May 12.—Governor Clyde R. Hoey this morning told North Carolina bankers that the public is being taxed enough and it would not be advisable for the state to increase its appropriations beyond the amount to be realized under present revenue laws. "I took the definite position before the recent General Assembly that taxes should not be increased," he said. "I still adhere to that view."

Announcement Terms Reached Between United Mine Workers and Appalachian Eight-State Operators Made Following Meet of Sub-Committee; Union Shop Provided

New York, May 12.—(AP)—W. L. Robison of Cleveland, chairman of the joint bituminous negotiations committee, announced shortly before noon today the conferees had agreed on a new contract between United Mine Workers of America (U. M. W.) and the operators of the Appalachian eight-state area. It includes the "union shop."

Robison's announcement as he emerged from the meeting of the sub-committee which reached the agreement included no mention of the union shop. As he was talking to reporters, however, Dr. John Steelman, conciliator of the federal Labor Department, broke in to say that the chief of the demands made by John Lewis, CIO chief and president of the U. M. W. A., had been agreed to.

It was not indicated immediately how many operators in the Appalachian conference, which covers eight states, would go along with the agreement.

The union shop means that all new employees must join the union within a specified time, although old employees who are non-union are not required to become union members. This differs from the "closed shop" demanded by the United Mine Workers in that all employees must join the union under a "closed shop" agreement.

Robison made no comment when Steelman asserted the "union shop" clause was agreed upon.

The text of Robison's statement follows: "The joint sub-committee has completed its consideration of the subject matter to go into a new Appalachian contract and has appointed a drafting committee to edit such a new document. This drafting committee will promptly complete its work and report back to the joint sub-committee at 12:30 p. m. today. The general Appalachian conference is called to meet at 2:30 at which the report of this joint sub-committee will be made to it for such action as it may care to take thereon."

BANKERS HEAR WATCHDOG OF U. S. TREASURY

Comptroller General Preston Delano Defends Office

ADDRESSES MEET OF N. C. BANKERS

W. H. Woolard of Greenville, In Meanwhile, Elevated To Presidency of State Association

Pinehurst, May 12.—(AP)—Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, said here today a proposal to abolish his office and devolve its duties on other agencies would accomplish no economy or simplification of administration.

He spoke before the 43rd annual convention of the North Carolina Bankers Association.

Delano, pointing out that the comptroller's office was the oldest supervising agency in the federal government, said its extinction would be a distinct blow to the prestige of the national banks and might even imperil the existence of its dual banking system.

"In my judgment, it would be a backward step for its office and its staff not to be preserved in its present form," he added.

Turning to the banking situation, Delano said he thought "the assertions that the banks are refusing legitimate credit to industry are the result of confusion of mind as to the true nature of the banking function."

Meanwhile, expressing unqualified opposition to any increase in state taxes, Governor Hoey said the banks existing levies "should be sufficient to provide for a healthy growth in schools, health institutions and public welfare."

The governor said revenues from present taxes would increase "as the state grows and develops."

"I took the definite position before the recent General Assembly that taxes should not be increased," he said. "I still adhere to that view."

W. H. Woolard of Greenville, who was installed today as the new president, by custom, R. P. Holding of Smithfield entered the line of succession as third vice president after E. H. Roberts of Durham and R. T. Lewellyn of Mount Airy, each advanced a notch in the vice presidential list.

President Woolard announced appointment of the following standing committee chairmen, among others: Agriculture, James L. Cummins; Rocks' Mount, Finance, B. R. Roberts; Durham; Legislative, Woolard; Publications, C. A. Cramer; Kinston.

Raleigh, May 12.—(AP)—North Carolina's peach crop prospects by 19 per cent and left an indicated crop of 41 per cent of normal, the state department of agriculture reported today.

"The late winter freeze did heavy damages, but fortunately left the remaining fruit well distributed on trees," a federal-state crop survey said. "Freezes, hail storms and low temperatures since April 1 also damaged the fruit appreciably."

CONFIDENCE IN LEADER VOTED

French Chamber Of Deputies Back Premier Daladier

Paris, May 12.—(AP)—The Chamber of Deputies tonight voted confidence in the foreign and domestic policies of Premier Daladier. The official count was 375 to 230.

The vote came after the Premier, in a dramatic speech insisted that France's present strong foreign policy of opposition to the authoritarian states would have been impossible without his domestic policy of "putting France back to work."

Daladier's victory ended a two-day foreign affairs debate set off yesterday when the Premier declared France would continue building alliances and increasing her armed forces as long as her neighbors maintained "massive mobilizations."

Both the Socialists and Communists attempted to separate the vote on foreign policy from that on internal affairs.

The two major left wing parties voted solidly against the government when Daladier refused to accept the arrangements, although ex-Premier Blum, the Socialist leader, declared his party would have voted for the government on a motion of confidence in its foreign policy alone.

Fishermen Saved After Collision Of Schooners

Thirty-Six Known Survivors; One Known Dead

Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, May 12.—(Canadian Press)—Twenty-seven fishermen from the schooners Edith C. Rose and Isabelle Parker were landed near here today, bringing to 36 the number of known survivors of the collision between the two vessels.

Eleven seamen still were missing as a result of the collision of the New England fishing vessels early Wednesday morning in a heavy fog 100 miles at sea, midway between Yarmouth and Boston.

One man was known dead. Telephone messages from the villages of Westport and Freeport said the 27 had been landed there after three fishermen found them in open dories early today.

Whitney Derby, Wallace Titus and Herman Cann found the new group of survivors 20 miles west of Briar Island.

Details were not given in the brief messages reporting that the 27 were landed and were starting immediately on the 30-mile trip to Yarmouth.

A gasoline boat previously had picked up nine fishermen near exhaustion after rowing 80 miles in dories.

The survivors were found as a fleet of rescue boats and planes searched the chilled waters off the Nova Scotia coast. Both the Isabelle Parker, a Boston schooner, and the Edith C. Rose of Gloucester sank quickly when they collided in the dense fog.

TWO ESCAPEES TAKEN IN PITT

Negroes Fled From Beaufort Prison Camp Yesterday

Pitt county officers today recaptured two Negro convicts who escaped from the Beaufort county highway prison camp yesterday about an hour after having been notified that they were believed to be in this area.

Sheriff J. Knott Proctor said he was advised that two men believed to be the escapees were seen in the Cox Mill section. Deputies R. W. King and R. W. Tyson and AEG Officer J. M. Ward immediately went to the section and soon had the men in custody. Foot races were required, however, to catch both men, taken at different places.

The two convicts are Eddie Stocks and William Vann. Sheriff Proctor advised Oscar Pitts, penal division director at Raleigh, of the captures and the state officer said he would come for the men.

Stocks was sentenced to from five to seven years for highway robbery in Harnett county.

Vann was serving a two-to-three-year sentence for larceny in the same county.

SIGNS PLEDGE WITH BRITAIN

Two Powers Agree to Mutual Assistance in Event of Act of Aggression Leading To War in Mediterranean; Action Boosts French-British Front

London, May 12.—(AP)—Great Britain added strategic Turkey to her European security line-up today as the two governments pledged aid to each other "in event of an act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area."

The pledges were announced in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Chamberlain pending conclusion of a "definite long-term agreement of reciprocal character in the interest of their national security."

Asked whether an "act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean" meant an act of aggression anywhere or only in the Mediterranean, the prime minister sidestepped with the answer: "It means an act of aggression which leads to war in the Mediterranean area."

Pending completion of the definite agreement, the prime minister said, "The British government and the Turkish government declare that, in the event of an act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area they would be prepared to co-operate effectively and lend each other all aid and assistance in their power."

Chamberlain made clear that the two countries had agreed to conclude the "definite longer term agreement," but indicated that its details had not been fully worked out.

The announcement meant that Britain had forged another link in her chain of European security arrangements, the Turkish agreement supplementing British-French pledges of support already given to Poland, Rumania and Greece.

Of the Turkish agreement, Chamberlain said: "This declaration is not directed against any country. It is designed to assure Great Britain and Turkey of mutual aid and assistance if the necessity arises."

"It was recognized by the two governments that certain matters require more precise definition and an examination of them is proceeding."

The Greenville Little Theatre Guild will present "Night of January 16," a three-act production, in the Pitt county court house here Thursday and Friday nights of next week, May 18-19. It was announced today by Dr. James B. Hawes, official of the local theatre group.

Due to the large crowds anticipated for the play, it was decided to present the play on two nights instead of one. Each performance will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

"Night of January 16," which has gained widespread popularity, is reminiscent of the mysterious disappearance of Otto Kruger, the Swedish match king, who disappeared from an airplane while en route from Brussels to London. It is still debatable whether Kruger smuggled a parachute aboard the plane and leaped to safety or was murdered.

In "Night of January 16," there has been a murder. The part of the woman on trial, charged with the murder of a character in the story, has been taken by Miss Henrie Long. Dick Waiser, dramatics director of Greenville high school, and active in the Little Theatre movement here, is playing the part of a Swede, who is secretary to the deceased.

Later, she and Miss Hilda Duet of Clinton, contralto, sang as duets Lassen's "Spring Song," in which the voices blended perfectly, the very melodious Brahms "Cradle Song," which also showed the two voices to good advantage, and Noyes's "When the Bluebird Sings."

Solos by Miss Tew were "Rose in the Bud," "Florian's Song," "Clouds" and "The Night Wind."

A clarinetist, Orval Morton of Chicago, gave "Caporetta" and "Flight of the Bumble Bee" and came back to repeat a part of the latter.

Make Her Hum

You can make Greenville hum by talking for the town; using your best efforts for its enterprises; improving your property and lots; use paint and push; plant trees with taste; remove old fences and famished soil. These things help to beautify a town and impress the beholder, whether he be neighbor or stranger. Greenville is on the upward move. Let us keep her going. All can help to do this. Don't be a balky horse in the improvement team.

C. S. Forbes broke ground today to begin building a very handsome brick store next to the building belonging to his father.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. D. A. WINDHAM

SUNDAY, MAY 14th, 1939
(Read Acts 19th Chapter)

We come now to consider Paul at Ephesus. Like Athens and Corinth, Ephesus was famed for its idolatry. Here was the pagan temple of Diana one of the seven wonders of the world. Ephesus was a city of Ionia and under the Roman government was the capital of a large district of western Asia. It is said to have been more ancient than the time of David and to have been people by a colony of Greeks. In the time of Paul it still retained much of its ancient architectural and commercial grandeur. But the inhabitants were given wholly to idolatry.

History describes them as being licentious in morals and addicted to sorcery. In such a city the preaching of the gospel seemed all but hopeless; for the people were so given to pagan worship that the great temple of Diana covered more than two acres of land and was as tall as a seven story building of today, having one hundred and twenty-seven pillars or columns. Compare this temple to some of our large buildings. It was around two hundred years in building.

This temple housed the goddess Diana, the most honored idol of the Ephesians. The people had a tradition that the goddess fell down from Jupiter (see Acts 19:35). It is the conclusion of many, and I think also that it is probable that the goddess was carved from an acrolite stone which fell in that province and the pagan natives, thought it fell from the planet Jupiter, and it therefore became an object of worship.

The fall of such stones is of frequent occurrence. One fell a few years ago near Stantonburg, in Wilson county, and beneath the surface was very white; and such fine quality as would respond readily to the sculptor's chisel.

To such a people Paul carried the gospel message, the power of God unto salvation; and God had declared "it should not return unto him void."

He first taught in the synagogue of the Jews, declaring the things concerning the kingdom of God; but he met opposition in the work for some were hardened.

Because he preached Jesus Christ as the Son of God, risen from the dead, he was denied the privilege of the synagogue; but God always prepares for the preaching of his word, and after this Paul preached in a school of one Tyrannus, where he taught for a period of two years.

As a result of this sweeping revival the whole city from center to circumference, was stirred mightily and deep. The inhabitants brought their books, most probably such as taught mythology, magic and dreams, and burned them before him. The total value of these books in our money, ranged between $28,000 and $29,000. Can you imagine the bonfire they made?

This is the astonishing results of a gospel revival conducted by a fearless man of God who would not compromise with sin for one moment.

May I pause here to wonder what would happen in Greenville if the people got a genuine case of old-fashioned St. Paul religion? I imagine I see truck loads of trashy books and magazines consigned to the flames. Loads of bridge tables and playing cards. Loads of ABC and bootleg liquor and many other such things pass on to their destiny. Some no doubt will call me old-fashioned, but the only way a lost world will ever be saved is in God's own old-fashioned way; and this way is far removed from many things practiced by church people today. After studying God's word intensely for 30 years, I have failed to find any way but the blood sprinkled way of Calvary.

When the people of Ephesus were converted there were many things they had to cut loose from and did cut loose from. In like manner we must cut loose from things and if you want to know what they are just read your Bible and talk often with your Lord.

When a great revival is sweeping a community there are some always to raise a complaint. It was so when Christ went to the land of the Gadareans; two thousand hogs were too much to sacrifice for souls to be saved. It was also true with Paul in Ephesus. There was a silversmith named Demetrius who had become rich by making silver shrines for Diana. He called together workmen of his craft and reminded them that Paul was discrediting the religion that was at the source of their wealth. And was causing the goddess Diana to be despised, who shouted allegiance to the goddess by saying "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

The whole city was thrown in confusion and two of Paul's companions were caught and rushed into the theatre, a place where people gathered for sport; a place where human beings were torn and devoured by beasts.

At this moment God used the town clerk to appease the riot and after a short address from him the crowd was dismissed.

About four years later Paul wrote a letter to these people who believed and in that letter he reminds them that they are a building fitly joined together, Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone. The cornerstone of a building is a stone to which every piece of material bears a relationship. Jesus Christ is the chief cornerstone of the church; every member must bear relationship to him if they are to fit into the service of soul-saving, and if that relationship is broken, then in Paul's own language "they become a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal."

When that relationship is broken by so many members of the church; the church loses its harmony and the world no longer admires it, and its prestige in the community is lost.

BUILDING IN WHICH MIXED JURY MET, IS TORN DOWN

Laramie, Wyo.—(AP)—The building in which the world's first partly female jury met in 1870-71 is being torn down.

The Laramie DAR chapter placed a tablet on the ramshackle old building in 1922, noting it was there that women for the first time were permitted a part in deciding court cases.

It was difficult in the frontier town to get the men to return verdicts of guilty, and since the territorial legislature had just enacted a law granting women suffrage the grateful folk of Laramie promptly decided it also conferred upon the women the right to jury service. Six women were summoned for the grand jury.

This startling event in the far West caused King William of Prussia to send a congratulatory cable to President Grant and New York newspapers sent special correspondents to cover the session.

Chapter 11

Both Sides Of The Fence

BOB RUSSELL nosed his car up to the garage doors and blasted his horn. Nothing happened. He climbed out and peered inside the garage. Both Jocelyn's car and Thorn's were gone. He grinned and ran thin brown fingers through his hair. Why should he expect them to be home when he hadn't let them know he was coming? Opening the rumble-seat of the roadster he took out his tennis racquets, sweaters, and pigskin bag. Turning toward the house he spied the eight-foot fence, completed, but not yet painted. He laughed with malicious amusement. "Humphreys!" he called, hearing the echo of his own voice through the silent rooms. "What the devil?" he muttered; then remembered it was Thursday, the servants' day off. Lyn and Thorn were no doubt at the club for the day. He was hungry and tired. He did not want to go to the club. He was weary of people; his kind of people. He had won his first two matches at the Los Angeles meet and lost his second two. He had been, alternately, a conquering hero at the mercy of society matrons, and a vanquished hero at the mercy of commiserating friends. He had disliked both roles. He only played tennis because it was clean sport and vigorous exercise and if he lost to a worthy opponent it bothered him not at all. He cared little for fame or its perquisites. However, he reflected wryly, his friends and supporters were not so philosophical. He mimicked in imagination what would happen should he go back to the club: "Bob, old man," someone would say, clapping him on the back, "he hated being clapped on the back—'rightfully' sorry about your beastly luck. Must have been off your game, eh? Well, you'll show them next time. We're all for you! We're betting on you, old man!"

And he would say: "No, I wasn't off my game I never played better. Maybe beat me because he is a better player."

And then: "That's sporting of you to say, Russell, but we know it isn't so. You're the best in the West! Come on, have a drink... I dropped a few hundred on you but I'll never miss it."
 "To the devil with all of them!" he said now, going slowly up to his room. "I'm sick of being treated like a race-horse!"

As he passed Jocelyn's room he heard a faint "Meowrr..." and a scratching on the door panels.

"Hello, Tex!" he exclaimed, opening the door. "What are you doing in here?"

The big white cat extended his forepaws along the carpet and stretched lazily, then strolled sedately toward the back stairway. Bob watched him go; hesitated a second; went after him and scooped him up under one arm. "Cat," he declared, "you may be the means of putting food into my mouth."

Bob knocked on the door of the Macks' kitchen, holding tightly to the indignat Tex.
 Gretchen opened the door, flushed with pleasure when she saw Bob. "Oh—you got back—"

"No," he teased, "I'm still in Los Angeles. Say, why doesn't your cat like me?"
 "He will; if you toss him up over your shoulder."
 Bob did, with the result that Tex relaxed in limp contentment. "I had no idea cats were such rugged individualists," Bob said, looking over Gretche's head at the other members of the family grouped around an oilcloth-covered table. "May I come in?"

Scowl On His Face

MRS. MACK, carrying a steaming platter of steak and onions from the stove to the table, looked at him and beamed. "Come right in, Mr. Russell. We always have our dinner in the middle of the day. Most folks do when they live on a farm because the men are good and hungry at noon-time after working since sun-up."

Bob sniffed the tantalizing odors of hot bread, steamed and buttered cabbage, fried meat and onions. He liked the clean, shiny look of the white oilcloth and the substantial thickness of the cheap white plates and cups. He wanted desperately to ask an invitation but the scowl on young Talbot's face made him hesitate. Tally lifted a small piece of meat to Betsy's plate and cut it into squares. He said, challenge in his tone: "Isn't all this rather plebeian to a Russell?"

"No," said Bob, "it isn't. I'm hungry and it looks good."
 "Well, why didn't you speak up before?" Gramp demanded, piling potatoes and cabbage on his plate. "Draw up a chair and set."
 "Thank!" Bob wedged in between old Mack and Gretchen. Without another word, he reached for what he wanted and proceeded to eat with enjoyment.

"I wish you folks would call me Bob," he said between mouthfuls. "Maybe I am a Russell, but you shouldn't hold that against me. I can't help it. In fact, I had nothing to say about it. I'd just as soon be a Smith or a Jones. How about some more cabbage, Gramp?"
 "Sure, Bob," the old man chuckled. "I kept 'telling' 'em you ain't like them other two. Josie's all right 'cept she's chock full of high-falutin' notions."
 "Sure," agreed Bob good-naturedly, "but when I tell her that she says I ought to get a soap-box and make speeches. Say, how come the dividing fence?"
 Tally looked up from his plate and met Bob's friendly, curious eyes. His frown relaxed a trifle. It was difficult not to like this lanky, clean-cut chap.

"Your brother gave me the idea," Tally explained tersely. "He objected to the sight of my chickens cowering in the yard of my family. He decided to shut off his view. That's all."
 "Did he squawk much about your method?"
 "Narry a word," put in Gramp. "I'll get it," Gretchen offered, pushing back her chair. "Mom's been cooking all morning and she's tired. Would you like cheese on your pie, Mr. Rus—I mean, Bob?"

"You bet I would!" Bob's smile was expansive. "Mrs. Mack, that's the best meal I've ever had in my life! Say, Tally, want some help painting that fence of yours?"
 "I haven't bought paint yet," Tally replied shortly.
 "We're broke," said Gramp, eyeing the empty meat platter with lugubrious eyes. "I s'pose we'll be eatin' chicken again for a spell."

'A Good Idea'

BOB was silent a minute; then a mischievous gleam crinkled his gray eyes. "Instead of eating your chickens, why don't you sell them? Sell the eggs, too, and your spare milk, and there's plenty of ripe oranges and lemons on your side of the orchard. Say, what about planting one of these roadside stands down on the highway? You know what I mean? You must have seen a lot of them when you drove through from Texas. You could sell enough produce to buy a lot of things."

Gretchen queried dubiously. "But what would your brother and sister say?"
 "Do any of you care?" Bob swept the circle of faces with discerning eyes.

"No," asserted Tally. "You don't. And it's a darned good idea. Bob, I'll get to work on the stand this afternoon."
 "You'll have to have signs," Bob went on. "I ought to make a good sign-painter; I studied art; mind if I help?"

A slow, humorous smile warmed Tally's face. "I'd be glad of your help, Bob. I think you're heading for trouble, though, trying to sit on both sides of the fence."

Bob met Gretchen's admiring dark eyes. "I don't seem to mind," he said, thinking: "She's pale and sort of sad-looking, yet she's the prettiest, loveliest, sweetest thing I've ever seen."

By evening Bob and Tally and Gramp had erected a wooden lean-to with shelves and a counter beside the south end driveway leading off the highway into the Macks' property. It had been a hot afternoon and the men were sweaty and dusty and tired.

"Come on in the pool for a swim," Bob invited.
 Tally hesitated, his face suddenly boyish and wistful. The idea of a cool plunge was tempting. A wry smile flickered over his mouth. "I'd like to, Bob, if I thought your family wouldn't catch me."

"What if they do? You're my guest."
 "Sure, but this feud has grown hotter since you went away. Either one of them would jump at the chance to order me to my own kennel—or I'd better not. Say, your cook won't be back until late; you'd better eat supper with us tonight."
 "I will if you'll go swimming with me," Bob persisted. "Oh, come on Tally. Are you a mouse or a man?"

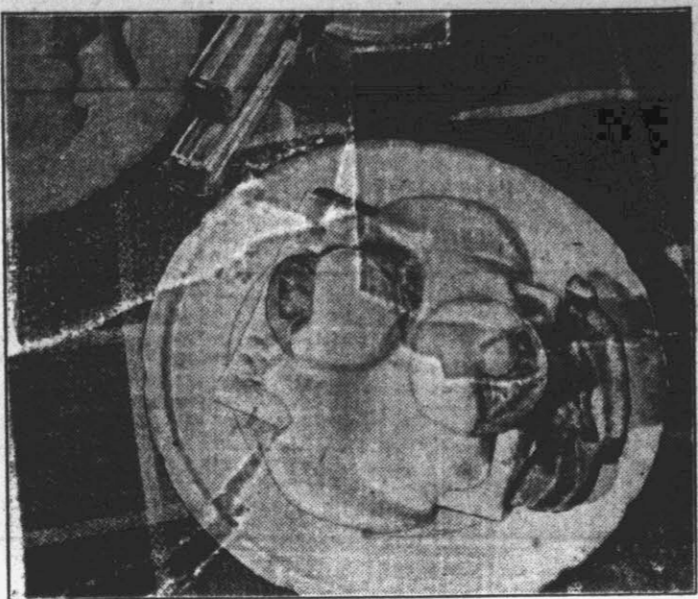

"I think your sister will tell you I'm no great swimmer," Tally retorted. "Okay, Bob, you win."
 A few minutes later they plunged into the pool, raced each other to the farther end, then turned a their backs and floated lazily.

"I never thought your trunks would fit me," Tally said. "I'm heavier than you."
 "Maybe twenty pounds or so, but I'm as tall as you. I'm so raw-boned I look skinnier than I am. No matter what I put on I look gangly—all feet and hands and Adam's apple! But my clothes would fit you, I'll wager." He eyed the other man's muscular body, noting the broad shoulders, tapering waist, and arrow hips. "You've got the perfect build for a half-back—"

Tally did not answer. Sometime, perhaps, he might tell Bob that he had played half-back for Texas University; not now. Even to himself it was difficult to explain why he was so determined that the Russells believe him to be a rough, untutored farmer, accepting him as such or not at all.

Rarebits and Crackers Were Made for Each Other

Premium Rarebit

TENDER flaky crackers, covered with a smooth golden rarebit, will find a welcome at almost any spring luncheon, for it's a partner-ship that comes pretty close to gastronomic perfection.
 Then, too, it can be made as elaborate as you like—add grilled tomatoes, tender asparagus tips or seafood to this combination, and it makes a dish that anyone would come back to for more.
 Here we offer two pet recipes for rarebits and then some special suggestions for dressing them up for extra-special occasions.

Make a sauce with the butter, flour, milk and seasonings. When thickened and smooth add the cheese. Stir until cheese is melted and rarebit thickened. Serve immediately on flaky crackers which have been heated in the oven for a few minutes. (4-6 portions)

TEN MARKERS ARE APPROVED

More Historical Spots In State To Be Designated

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, May 12.—Ten more spots in North Carolina, more or less historic, will soon be appropriately marked. Approval of inscriptions for ten new historical highway markers has been announced by Dr. C. C. Crittenden, secretary of ing 50 cents each in a sales promotion campaign for their employers. The 10 Atlanta dressmaking plants are paying a union scale—all they can afford right now," explains John S. Martin, union spokesman. "Their business, however, affords less than 30 weeks employment annually. If we can sell a few thousand dozen dresses for them, we will have more work—and more pay. We should have at least 33 weeks' work a year."

And so the union dressmakers—most of them girls earning from $14 to $20 a week—voted to finance the advertising campaign. They raised $400 to mail an appeal to 2,800 buyers for southern stores to "buy Atlanta dresses and help southern industry."
 A half-dozen pieces of sales literature were sent out in an envelope under the name of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, the organization of those participating in the promotion. An illustrated folder explained Atlanta dresses "are not made in sweatshops" and appealed to buyers to heed quality rather than "cheap bargains."

Martin said the response had been favorable and that the promotion would be followed with similarly financed sales campaigns in the advance of each dress season. "Why shouldn't we help the manufacturers and help ourselves at the same time?" he said.

the North Carolina Historical Commission, and the text sent to the foundries where the markers will be made.

The ten follow:
 Arthur Dobbs: Royal governor, 1754-65, author, member Irish parliament, promoter of search for Northwest passage, is buried at Saint Phillips Church (Brunswick county).
 Salt Works: Established by order of the provincial Congress, April 24, 1776, for use during Revolutionary War. They were located 1 1/2 miles east (Carteret county).
 George Washington owned a tract of land nearby. He surveyed and formed a company to drain a part of the Dismal Swamp, 1763.

Iron Works: Many iron mines and forges were operated within a radius of ten miles of this point between 1790 and 1800 (Lincoln county).
 Qualla Boundary: Soco Gap, initial point of U. S. survey, 1876, of Cherokee reservation created through earlier efforts of W. H. Thomas, white Cherokee chief (Haywood county).
 Elias Carr: Governor, 1893-97, president of the North Carolina Farmers' Alliance, "Bracebridge Hall," his home, stands one mile north (Edgecombe county).
 Shocco Springs: Famous health resort, social and recreational center in nineteenth century; 4 1/2 miles southeast (Warren county).
 Regulators' Hanged: After the Regulators were defeated at Alamance, May 16, 1771, six of their number were hanged 1/4 mile east (Orange county).
 Trading Ford: On famous trading patch used by Indians and early settlers. There, Greene, retreating from Cornwallis, crossed (Rowan county).
 Sink Hole Mine: Remains of old mine, one of several in this area worked long ago for mica, probably by the Indians; 4 miles southwest (Mitchell county).

A dollar's worth of grass pasture, fed to a dairy cow, brings a market return of $12 worth of butter or $15 worth of cheese or $35 worth of bottled milk, research at Texas A. and M. College indicates.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—One of the surprise sights for visitors to Hawaii is to see the Navy's mid-Pacific fuel supply strung about Pearl Harbor in surface tanks.

Rep. Scrugham of Nevada, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee handling the naval appropriation bill, calls it reckless to keep the supply above ground.

"It ought to be buried," he insisted.

Admiral Leahy, chief of naval operations, did not appear disturbed over Scrugham's visions of the place being bombed and the whole supply burned.

"We are of the opinion," Admiral Leahy said, "that those tanks are sufficiently widely dispersed to make any general fire hazard remote."

Leahy told the subcommittee that the British were planning to spend $175,000,000 to bury 1,000,000 tons of fuel oil for the navy.

Not So Much Danger?
"If the British government is going heavily into the construction of underground oil tanks," said Scrugham, "that bears out my thought on the subject."

"There is this difference," said the British oil tanks are much closer to possible enemies than our tanks at Honolulu are," replied Leahy.

The tanks at Pearl Harbor were supplied by the late Doherty of naval oil reserve, same and filled to capacity in exchange for naval oil acreage in California. The whole oil deal, in which Teapot Dome entered as one phase, created a smell that still can be detected in remote corners of this capital—but the Navy got the tanks and the fuel.

Oil seems to be like gold these days. It is no good until it is dug out of the ground, out once it has to be buried again to be kept safely.

While we are on the subject of overseas matters we might mention that there is a steady sale here of "foreign mail stationery," very light and very thin. Yet you can write on both sides of it. The idea is to make foreign air mail cheap.

Postage on a bulky air mail letter to China on ordinary paper will hit you for a dollar or more. The light paper will put it over for 40 cents.

Court Battles Lawyers

And you might like to know that the Supreme Court's rapidly changing liberal slant is a bit baffling to Washington lawyers and judges. In a trial in federal district court here an attorney quoted a dissenting opinion of a Supreme Court justice in support of his case.

"With the change in the attitude of the court," he told the judge, "this may soon be the governing view."

Luckiest member on the Supreme Court, incidentally, is the newest justice, William O. Douglas. After serving barely six weeks on the court during which not much work will come his way, he will get a four months' vacation. His vacation pay at $20,000 a year will run to $6,666. But he probably will read law like one bewitched. There is no course in school teaching you how to be a Supreme Court justice. You have to learn it the hard way.

The Supreme Court has fixed

Before Packing Wool Clothes Away

If you want to avoid moth damage, here's what to do. First, expose all garments, blankets, etc., to sunlight. Then have them dry cleaned or steam pressed or brush them very thoroughly. Next, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder and, after dusting out the clothes closet or trunk thoroughly, sprinkle Bee Brand Powder liberally in the corners and over the bottom. Lay a sheet of paper over the powder and place clothes on top. Finally, cover garments with wax paper and over it all, sprinkle a covering of Bee Brand Insect Powder. In the Fall, your clothes will be clean, fresh and free from moth holes.

Raleigh, May 12 — A Raleigh Negro woman gets six months in State's prison for voting under the name of another.

If there be any truth in the charges and countercharges bandied about by Democrats last year, there were cases in which white men got two years in office by voting hundreds of folks under the names of others.

So far it is noticeable that the politician, or politicians, who inducted the Negro to violate the election laws, hasn't even been brought into court. And it's dollars May 29 as the day for summer recess, a job it can do better than Congress. Congress still doesn't know when it will quit, or whether it can. A half-dozen filibusters already are threatened on one subject or another.

When the Supreme Court decides to quit, it quits, and there is no filibustering by the minority, even to support a dissenting opinion.

to doughnuts he never will be. Speaking of politicians, statistics from the state's chief game protector indicate that there are one thousand and one polecats in North Carolina's game refuges. Wonder who counted them?

The State Board of Elections got used to smells enough last year to have qualified for the job.

Important and intense activity in the governor's ante-room: gubernatorial Secretary Bob Thompson, Office Secretary Miss Mamie Turner and energetic U. P. News Man Walter Dushman attempting to classify a bug black for the most part, but with peculiar white stripes down its back.

"It's a Japanese beetle," vowed Robert. "It's a boll weevil," swore Dushman. "I think it's a cathedral bug," can't you see that church drawn on his back," asserted Miss Mamie.

But the affair will go into history along with the Lost Chord, the Unfinished Sonata and the missing link. The bug flew off before an entomologist—or whatever it is that identifies bugs—could be called.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—There is an author in New York who frequently finds himself in financial jams, but he never lets these things bother him. He is a fun-loving fellow with no thought of tomorrow and a source of unending entertainment to his friends.

Recently he was among those present at a tea and he told of the monetary problems that forever arose to confront him. "Now take my new book," he said, "which will come off the press next week. Don't anyone here ask me for an autographed copy. I'm being sued for $350 now by my old publishers. I bought that many books and autographed them for friends but the book never sold enough copies, after my first royalties were paid, to take up the slack. The only reason my car hasn't been attached is because I don't own a car."

This was not merely self-depreciation. He meant it. He it was who came north a dozen years ago, from Georgia, and told of having graduated from some fashionable school down there. He gave the name of the place. Later a friend of his was visiting in the south and decided to look up his pal's old Alma Mater. Shortly thereafter he returned with the tidings that it wasn't a place of learning at all, but a reformatory.

On another occasion a group of us was lounging about this fellow's apartment when a process server knocked on the door.

"Is Mr. X here?" he wanted to know.

"No, he isn't," returned Mr. X glibly. "He left for Florida two days ago and won't be back till September."

"You're a liar," declared the process server, "and I've got a paper here for you."

"Oh, have you," said X, "what oh-oh-oh-oh-oh tag in front."

When the tumult and speechmaking die, it will be an interesting thing to figure which has "busted up" the most schools this spring—Governor Clyde R. Hoey or Superintendent of Public Instruction Clyde A. Erwin.

The state Supreme court was hearing oral arguments, and we do mean "hearing," as the counsel-at-the-bar was bearing down hard with all his oratorical energy.

Justice M. V. Barnhill was spied by reporters standing out in the hall outside the court room, smoking and apparently enjoying himself.

"Getting a bit of relaxation, judge?" queried one of the news men.

"No, just walked out on a jury speech," he replied dryly.

Charitable, the reporters did not go in to see who was making it.

There was an even break in the 10 decisions handed down by the Supreme court this week. Five were affirmed and five sent back for new trials or reversed outright.

A bit out of the ordinary was the fact that all cases decided were from the civil side of the calendar sort of paper?"

"You're being sued."
"Okay," said X, "just throw it up there on the mantel with the others."

Reporters should, above all else, be accurate. Names and addresses are important. Remember that we know a fellow who is a reporter and a columnist. At the free telephone exhibit at the Fair, where anyone may telephone anywhere in the United States for nothing, he put in a call for his sister at Wichita, Kansas.

"I want Mrs. Kennedy, at Eighth and Spruce," he told the operator. Meanwhile 300 strangers, each supplied with earphones, were listening in on the call.

After some delay the operator said, "Are you sure your sister's name is Kennedy and that she lives at Eighth and Spruce?"
"Think so," said Charlie.

"Well, we've found a Mrs. Kennedy, at Fourth and Fir, who says she's your sister. Will that do?"
All of which proves that a telephone booth is no place for a man with a typewriter to do business—particularly if the booth has glass sides, where all the world can peek in and gaze in.

Goldsboro Goes On Batting Spree To Sink Locals, 12-3

SCORE 11 RUNS EARLY IN GAME

Red Christopher Out of Line-Up With Illness

Greenville lost its third game of the 1939 season and its second to Goldsboro last night. The Goldbugs scored 11 runs in the first three frames and came out with a 12-3 victory.

After those first three innings it was a good game and the two teams played on about even terms. Spence—starting hurler for the Greenies—just wasn't up to his regular form, or else those Goldbugs just had some hits in their system and used him as the victim. Anyway, Goldsboro went on a hitting spree and "Lightning" was removed in the second frame with none out. He was replaced by Hoodie Briggs.

Earl Smith, East Carolina Teachers College student, replaced Red Christopher at second base. Christopher, out with an ulcerated stomach, may not be in the line-up for some time to come. Smith apparently was a little nervous on his first assignment and two errors were chalked up against him. He made four assists and four put-outs, however, and was one of the three local players to get as many as two hits.

George Rimmer, who has been doing some heavy hitting this season, clouted a homer.

STOCK PUT IN FISH STREAMS

More Than Five Million Placed in N. C. Waters

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, May 12—Those anglers who fail to catch any fish in North Carolina streams can blame the depression, Hitler or their Aunt Emma for it, but not the Game and Inland Fisheries division of the Department of Conservation and Development.

Because the division has put more than five million little fishes into something more than 300 miles of Tar Heel fishing waters—and, ye gods, that's a lot of little fishes anyway you take them. And they've been put in since July 1, 1937.

The stream stocking has been done from the six hatcheries operated by the department; and most of the stocking has been done with trout in the western part of the state.

Getting down to actual cases and fish, reports to the department headquarters here show that upward of four million trout of the three main varieties has been distributed from the five hatcheries at which these cold-water fish are raised. Division between brook and rainbow trout has been quite close, with 2,242,680 of the latter species and 1,997,464 sent out to swim in lovely streams in the mountains. Brown trout to the comparatively insignificant number of 22,250 have been distributed, all from the "Petie" Murphy hatchery.

Of warm water fish, not so many have been set afloat; but they've been caught. Bass numbering 506,866; bream, 156,525 and crappie, 43,500, are listed.

Reports of the various hatcheries make interesting reading. They're something like financial statements only instead of reciting "Cash on hand." One of the impressive things about the reports is the comparatively small loss of fish eggs. For example, the Mt. Mitchell hatchery reported, "Eggs received, 285,003." "Total lossage of eggs, 21,688." "Lossage fry and fingerlings, 59,099." "Fish hatched for distribution, 213,215."

Incidentally, the fish now being put into the streams aren't such small fry as you might think. They're mostly six inches and up.

WILSON AGAIN RACKS UP WIN

Trip Martins, 8-3; Billies and Serpents Also Win

Wilson, newest entry in the Coastal Plain League, seems to be coming into her own, having racked up an 8-3 win over Williamston yesterday.

Tarboro, close on the heels of the league-leading Greenies and Martins, defeated Kinston 9-1. Snow Hill, meanwhile, was winning over New Bern, 9-4, to take the lead in the second division clubs.

Panthers Beat Pirates By Close Score of 4-3

College Opens Two-Game Series With Naval Base

High Point College edged a 4-3 win over East Carolina Teachers College yesterday to conclude their play for the present season, but the Pirates have two more games to whittle from their schedule.

Coach Gilbert and his boys, who have been on a baseball road tour since Sunday motored into Greenville last night—none of the team being very energetic—and this afternoon went on the field to play the first of a two-game series with the U. S. Naval Base of Norfolk.

Both High Point and the Pirates went scoreless for the first three innings yesterday, with the Panthers scoring three runs in the fourth verse and the Pirates two.

Coach Gilbert's boys produced another tally in the eighth inning to deadlock the score at 3-3. However, their run was duplicated by another High Point score in the same verse to break the deadlock and determine the victory. Berg's single scoring Cochrane, decided the win.

Leading the Pirates' hitting attack was Bill Shelton, who garnered four hits for five trips to the plate and Norman Mayo and Mickey North

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, May 12 - (AP) - The stock market today resembled nothing so much as a backward-minded tortoise. The list slipped slightly into reverse at the start, extended declines later to a point of so for leaders, then, after moderate recovery, came virtually to a standstill. While there was a handful of gamblers at the close, minus signs predominated. Transfers were less than 250,000 shares.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

Hollywood - Distances are deceptive in Hollywood. You can drive all day and never leave Los Angeles, but in 15 minutes you can swifter on the Gold Coast of Africa. You can trundle out Ventura boulevard, past the perennial real estate, orange juice, grape juice, hot dog, turkburger, flower, dog and cat stands, make a sudden turn to the left, and there you are - as close to the Gold Coast as you please, and only 15 minutes from Universal City.

"The Sun Never Sets." That's the name of the picture on location there, and the Union Jack rustles faintly in the slight breeze that makes the heat bearable. In 10 minutes a softie begins to wish the sun would set, it's that hot. But the show must go on, to coin a phrase. Art must struggle forward, a movie must muddle through.

The native village of thatched huts is off there by the gently rolling hills covered with scrubby vegetation. Over here is the white house, also palm-thatched, of the British trail-blazers. Farther toward Ventura boulevard is the mine - full of valuable movie ore, and providing the bone of contention in the plot. They are shooting at the doorway of the big house, Basil Rathbone, in khaki shorts, khaki blouse, sun helmet is rushing in, calling "Helen! Helen!" and is met at the door by Helen (Barbara O'Neil) in khaki boots and hat on, ready to go.

The director, Rowland V. Lee, wears a battered straw hat, open shirt. He's waggish today. When Barbara and Basil, whose dialogue indicates they are about to flee together, have done the scene twice,

Lee says: "You look like Venus and Adonis." It's their hats. To get their faces in, without too much hat, they've been running out of the camera lake tango dancers poised cheek-to-cheek for a close-off. Two takes later, they've mastered it, manage an escape less graceful but more natural. "What's that whistling?" cackles Lee. Assistants and prop-men scatter, soon report: "Not whistling - it's birds." "African birds," specifies one genius, which settles everything.

Lunch. It's in boxes, from a chuck wagon, and the stars and principals assemble under a tent to eat from board tables, the others scatter about the "camp." Gestures to the star table: white linen tablecloth. The luncheon menu: cold meat plate, cole slaw, hard-boiled egg, half canned peach, apple pie, bread and butter, strawberry ice cream, milk. Too hot to eat much, but good humor prevails.

Luncheon talk: John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath," which Barbara O'Neil is reading but nobody else has. Will it be a picture? Is it censorable? Lee tells about two best-sellers he made into movies. Books bought for sensational qualities, all of which were censored out - result, two floppers.

Rathbone reports $8,000 profit on charity party. Mrs. Rathbone gave. And Virginia Field's bright quip: "Sometimes I doubt my own insanity!"

Nash County Escapee Returned To Prison

Raleigh, May 12 - (AP) - The state broke even today in its ledger of escapes and recaptures of prisoners. Oscar Pitts, penal superintendent, reported two escapes and two recaptures, the latter including: Rudolph May, 30, who escaped from the Nash camp last August, was returned here from Baltimore, Md. He was sentenced in Edgecombe for 90 days for assault with a deadly weapon.

ANIMAL LIFE CAUSES 'TOMATO SOUP SEA'

La Jolla, Calif. - (AP) - For years the occasional reddish color of the Gulf of California, which has given it the name of the "Vermillion Sea," was considered due to silt washed down by the Colorado river. Now Dr. M. W. Johnson of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography says the color is actually due to minute marine animals known as noctiluca. Their concentration at times is so intense, he says, that the water looks like tomato soup.

Nearly 70,000 landholders entered into co-operative agreements with the Soil Conservation Service to demonstrate better land practices.

For each 100 pounds of feed it consumes a steer returns 2.8 pounds of edible human food solids; the lamb, 3.2 pounds; poultry, 4.2 pounds; and the hog, 15.6 pounds.

This is the Picture Where You Belong! $894 AND UP. It's the pattern - no mistaking that - you'll find plenty of admiring glances following wherever you travel in this stunning Buick. But what we were shooting for was something more than attention - and mister, look how we hit the bull's-eye! You try out the driver's seat - it fits. You take hold of the wheel - it seems molded to your hand. So you ease down on the gas - and pronto, you've got rhythm! You fingertip the wheel - presto! there's control! You wing down the straightaway, cruise around curves, swoop up the hill. Your car is almost a part of you, your wish is its action! So, you happily discover, here's where you belong! It isn't the big and powerful wallop in that big Dynaflash straight-eight alone.
