

U. S. CRUISER SENT TO CHINA TROUBLE ZONE

To Protect American Interests in Settlement

AREA OCCUPIED BY JAP TROOPS

Cruiser Joins Another U. S. Vessel And Four or Five British Ships Already On Scene

Shanghai, May 17—(AP)—The United States cruiser Marblehead landed a patrol at Kulangsu international settlement today to protect American interests against any infringements arising from Japanese occupation of the area.

The Japanese national news agency said in a dispatch from Amoy that both British and American sailors had landed at Kulangsu island, which is off the southeastern China port of Amoy.

Forty-three sailors were in the Marblehead landing party. The cruiser landed at Kulangsu today, joining the United States destroyer Bulmer.

Four or five British warships were believed to be in Amoy harbor as a consequence of the Japanese invasion of the international settlement, which is established by treaty with China as international territory.

Landing of the American sailors, which was reported to Admiral Harry Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, placed the United States in the position of taking a direct hand in the Kulangsu crisis.

The United States and Britain are the chief powers concerned in Kulangsu, the first international settlement to be invaded by the Japanese thus far in the Japanese-Chinese war.

Japan termed the landing of its marines at Kulangsu, Friday, a measure of self defense saying a Japanese naval commander was endangered in an incident in which a Chinese man was fatally wounded.

COIN MACHINES HELD ILLEGAL

So - Called Amusement Devices Banned Until June 1

Raleigh, May 17.—(AP)—Revenue Commissioner A. J. Maxwell said today the state had not collected any taxes on so-called "amusement slot machines" and that it was against the law to operate such machines in North Carolina before June 1.

The North Carolina legislature legalized "amusement slot machines" which do not automatically vend coins, slugs, or tokens. Many of the machines are now in operation in the state and some here have county and city license taxes.

Field deputies of the Revenue department will meet here May 29 to consider the changes in the revenue laws for the next two years, especially as they concern slot machines.

The deputies will be told, Maxwell added, that licenses for slot machines will bear the serial number and location of each machine. Licenses will not be sent direct from Raleigh to the applicant, but will be sent to field deputies who must personally inspect each machine and if it conforms to the law the license will be glued to the machine so that it cannot be transferred.

Opposition Led By Rev. Worth Wicker

Fayetteville, May 17.—(AP)—Delegates to the annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of East Carolina voted overwhelmingly today against any change in the church constitution relative to admitting women as lay delegates to Diocesan conventions.

Opposition to ratification of the proposal was led by the Rev. Worth Wicker of Greenville.

The consensus of views brought out in floor discussions prior to the vote was that the cultural activities of the church now dominated by the women required a great part of their time and if these were performed faithfully, little time would be left for women to act as delegates.

Carries Appropriation of $773,000,000 for Department

ARGENTINE BEEF IS PROHIBITED

Other Measures Indicate That United States Taking Steps

Washington, May 17.—(AP)—The Senate Appropriations committee approved the $773,000,000 naval appropriations bill today after accepting a House-approved provision prohibiting navy purchase of Argentine canned corned beef.

On a show of hands, the committee voted nine to seven to retain the prohibition against Argentine beef which has stirred a controversy between President Roosevelt, who authorized a 48,000 pound purchase, and Western senators. Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), testified in its support shortly before the committee acted. Navy officials had urged that it be eliminated and Mr. Roosevelt had said that Argentine canned beef was superior in quality and cheaper in price.

The navy measure, which sets a peacetime record, was expected to receive prompt Senate consideration.

Another phase of the big national defense program disclosed War Department plans to put nearly 300,000 officers and men through intensive military training this summer in 132 locations in the continental United States.

This announcement was made simultaneously with Secretary Woodring's disclosure that the expanded army air corps would meet some of its needs for aviation mechanics by training 1,000 enlisted men for a year at seven civilian schools.

Other activities: President Roosevelt nominated Alva M. Lumpkin of South Carolina to be a federal judge for the Eastern and Western districts of South Carolina.

President Roosevelt has accepted, effective May 20, the resignation of Brian McMahon, assistant attorney general in charge of criminal prosecutions.

Counsel for Nathan Frank asked the Federal Communications Commission to dismiss his application for a license to operate a radio station at New Bern, N. C.

British King And Queen Given Official Welcome Upon Arrival In Quebec

Royal Couple Visits New World

King George and Queen Elizabeth were accorded an official government welcome in Quebec today as they began their visit to Canada and the United States. The first reigning monarch ever to set foot on American soil, the King was told by Prime Minister Mackenzie of Canada that the subjects in the New World were never more closely bound to the throne than at the present time. The royal couple later will visit the United States.

King George became the first reigning British monarch to set foot on North American soil when he and Queen Elizabeth landed at Quebec for their tour of the United States and Canada.

The king and queen made their landing from the liner Empress of Australia at 8:34 a. m. to be welcomed by Prime Minister King and leaders of Canada and the Province of Quebec.

The ceremonial welcome took place in the shadow of the giant cliffs which General Wolfe's army scaled 180 years ago to win "New France" for the British crown.

King George wore the uniform of an admiral of the fleet. The queen was dressed in a pearl gray ensemble with an off-the-face hat of the same color.

King George made his way down the flag-decked gangway just a step ahead of his smiling consort. A tremendous welcome arose with cheering, pealing bells, screeching ship whistles and the roar of airplanes.

Canada's first view of her sovereign was one of pleasing and unexpected informality.

Mrs. Harris' poem will be exhibited on a 10-foot illuminated screen in the Panorama of American Poets, which will be featured on May 26, Poetry Day, in the communications building.

Plan Community Dinner To Boost Tobacco Mart

The starting gun in a "Talk Greenville Tobacco Market" campaign will be fired at a big community dinner to be held at the college sponsored by the Community Tobacco Market committee composed of representatives from the various civic and commercial organizations in Greenville.

The various clubs and other organizations are co-operating in the movement and expect to have practically all of their members at the dinner. It was stressed, however, that all business men and other leading citizens not affiliated with any club or commercial organization are invited and urged to attend the meeting.

The announced purpose of the dinner is to line up all Greenville citizens behind the Greenville tobacco market. The committee has adopted the slogan, "In Unity There Is Strength," and declared that while the adage is an old one, it is just as true now and applies to the local market.

The civic and business clubs are lined up solidly behind the movement, a representative from each having been named on the committee in charge. Edward Batchelor is chairman and Willard T. Kyzer, secretary.

Details of the dinner have not been worked out, but the committee is busy on arrangements and a complete program will be announced in the near future.

Terms Signed By Operators

Harlan Coal Mines Only Ones Not Now Under Contract

Knoxville, Tenn., May 17.—(AP)—Southern Appalachian coal operators signed today a union shop contract with United Mine Workers.

The announcement was made jointly by L. B. Gunter, president of the operators association, and William Turblazer, president of District 19, UMW.

Gunter said the decision to sign was "practically unanimous" among the approximately 30 operators attending the meeting.

The agreement affects more than 30 mines and approximately 5,500 miners in Tennessee and Kentucky.

Harlan, Ky., May 17.—(AP)—The Hazard county coal operators employing approximately 7,000 men, signed a union shop contract at Lexington with the United Mine Workers today as 400 additional national guard troops were ordered in readiness to move into this strife-torn coal area.

Announcement of the signing of the contracts was made simultaneously by J. E. Johnson, a member of the Hazard operators group, and Sam Caddy, president of the Hazard district UMW.

The agreement covers 40 mines, all of those in the area operated by 27 companies. These mines produce about 7,000,000 tons annually. Caddy said he was writing an order for the miners to "start work immediately" and added that some may be in the pits before the end of the day.

Signing of this agreement, the same as 15 other operating groups approved in New York last Saturday, left only the Harlan operators in Kentucky dissenting from the union shop contract.

ADDRESS MADE BY MACKENZIE

Prime Minister Tells Royal Visitors That The Throne Has Become Center Of Canadian National Life as Never Before and That 'We Are All of The Same Household'

Quebec, May 17.—(AP)—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie told King George and Queen Elizabeth today that "today as never before, the throne has become the center of our national life."

The prime minister's address of welcome was delivered at the Dominion government's luncheon for the king and queen.

"We would have your majesties feel that in coming from the old land to the new you have not left one home to come to another; that we are all of one household," Mackenzie King said.

"Free institutions and democratic ideals are as dear to the hearts of your people in Canada as to the people in any other part of the empire. We regard their preservation and perpetuation as the common concern of all."

King George became the first reigning British monarch to set foot on North American soil when he and Queen Elizabeth landed at Quebec for their tour of the United States and Canada.

The king and queen made their landing from the liner Empress of Australia at 8:34 a. m. to be welcomed by Prime Minister King and leaders of Canada and the Province of Quebec.

Mrs. Keeler Honored.
Mrs. W. E. Hooker and Miss Louisa Hooker were hostesses at a delightful bridge luncheon today honoring Mrs. Howard Keeler of Seattle, Wash., who is now the guest of her mother, Mrs. Travis Hooker.

Sharing honors with Mrs. Keeler was Mrs. H. H. McCormick of Smithfield, who is visiting Mrs. W. H. Bradsher.

The attractive home on East Fifth street was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Peonies and sweetpeas were used in the entrance hall and music room. The library was lovely with many varied arrangements of larkspur, roses and California poppies and in the dining room larkspur and roses formed the setting for the tables placed for bridge.

At one o'clock, a delectable course luncheon was served by the hostesses.

Mrs. W. I. Wooten was awarded the prize for making high score at bridge, and Mrs. James Skinner the prize for low.

Mrs. Keeler, Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. James Skinner were remembered with attractive gifts.

College Assembly.
The junior orchestra recently organized at East Carolina Teachers College to give beginners an opportunity and to develop players of stringed instruments for the regular orchestra, yesterday furnished the program for the assembly period.

The program was divided into five parts, beginning with two numbers, "Blue Waves" and "Finlandia," by the full orchestra of 30 or 35 pieces. The second group was given by a string quartette composed of Miss Betty Keuzenkamp of Greenville, cellist; Vincent Romano, New York, and Spencer Hatley, Albemarle, violinists; and Orval Morton, Chicago, player of the viola.

A string ensemble played two numbers, and a violin trio—Miss Alice Powell, Clinton, Spencer Hatley, and A. Dittmer—gave "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms."

The program was closed by the full orchestra in "Merry Widow Waltz" and "Echoes from the South."

Mr. A. Dittmer is director of the regular orchestra and this one. According to him, many of the students in the junior organization already play other instruments and are in this group to learn new ones.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington.—One of the weird things that can happen to a Chinese sailor in the United States is to be hired by the Japanese to haul steel over to Japan to make bombs to kill other Chinese in interior China. Japan always has been a heavy purchaser of scrap steel and iron in the United States. Japan has few such resources of her own and we have plenty. Steel is made these days out of a half-and-half mixture of new iron and old steel and iron scrap.

Scrap comes in all shapes and sizes, old car wheels, steel rails, trimmings from steel plants, junked automobiles, occasionally an old hulk of a worn-out ship. Remember the Veterand, once a crack German liner, seized by the United States at the outbreak of war, converted into a troop transport under the name of Leviathan, and then reshaped into a money-losing United States liner? Months ago it was sold to England for scrap and under its own power steamed back to a British junk yard. Who knows? It may yet get back to Germany, a piece at a time, dropped from British bombing planes.

Japan Hints Bargains.
It is in such instances as the Leviathan that the Chinese come in. Japan, eager for bargains in scrap, is always looking out for old ship hulks which can be sailed back to Tokyo under their own power to be broken up and melted into new shapes. A sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, holding hearings on proposals to keep Japan from buying scrap steel and iron here, ran into the story. Hearing of an old ship about to be sold for junk, the Japanese bought it, had its engines fitted up just well enough to get her across the ocean. Then the ship was loaded with as much scrap as it could hold. And who sailed it back to Japan? That is where the romance of war comes in.

Chinese crews usually can be hired cheapest for such pick-penny jobs. The Japanese hire them. After all, the seamen have to eat and sea-going jobs don't grow on trees these days. On arrival in Japan, they are transferred perhaps to Oriental tramp ships always on the lookout for low-cost crews. One such Chinese crew attempted a mutiny. There was a brief newspaper account of it.

Every Scrap Used
In Japan, ship and cargo both are melted down and converted into munitions not a rivet wasted. In 1933 Japan bought a half million tons of steel and iron scrap. By 1937 it had swelled to 1,901,202 tons, dropped back to 1,381,901 tons in 1938.

Senator Schwelienbach of Washington introduced a bill seeking to embargo export of scrap. He says West Coast docks are piled with the stuff waiting shipment to Japan. But when the Senate committee looked into the business it found a hive of trouble. Big steel companies were eager for an embargo. Foreign competition for scrap steel had forced the price up to $20 a ton, within a dollar of the price of fresh pig iron. Opposition came from a thousand junk men—and the State Department. The junk men did not want to be deprived of such a rich market. Never had profits been so good.

The State Department was wary of taking such an open-handed crack at Japan. It didn't seem to be the diplomatic thing to do.

Incidentally, the army and navy allow none of their own scrap, which is considerable to be exposed. They are not going to be accused of selling metal to a potential enemy to be shot back at them in some future war.

May Revive Old Port.
London.—(AP)—The "dead" port of Paghani Harbor, which was the home of Thomas Becket, may be revived as a base for Britain's transatlantic flying boats. Experts estimated that the harbor, 70 miles from London, could be converted into a suitable base at a cost of $2,000,000.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters
Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.
Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seaciff.
Yesterday, Wealthy Nola seems entranced with Tally and tells Lyn he has a law degree. Lyn decides to show up Tally's crudity by inviting him to a Country Club dance.

Chapter 15
'May I Cut In?'
NOLA closed the door of the ladies' lounge, made sure no one else was inside, and said to Jocelyn: "I wonder why Tally wouldn't come over with us?"
"Maybe he has a sick cow. Anyhow, Bob said he promised to put in an appearance."
"Why isn't Bob coming?"
"Oh, he made some sort of vague excuse. Truthfully, Nola, he's seeing far too much of the Mack girl. It's infuriated with her and I'm worried. Bob—well, he isn't like the rest of us. He might do something foolish."
"Such as?" Nola urged.
"Well—what if he married her?"
"What if he did?" Nola shrugged, powdering her nose and drawing a crimson lipstick across her amused mouth. "She would probably make him an excellent wife."
"Nola, you're absolutely hopeless!"
"I think it is you who are hopeless," the other girl said quietly. "Social snobbery is not a pleasant affliction. Lyn, can't you like people just for themselves?"
Jocelyn paused in the process of smoothing down a stray curl of rich Auburn hair. Her face was thoughtful.

"Am I as bad as all that, Nola?"
"I wonder. You didn't used to be—at least not consciously or obviously. I think these Texans have put your back up. You resent what they've done to Seaciff and so you retreat into horrible snobbery. Real people don't do that, Lyn. They don't have to. I could mix with any sort of people and enjoy myself. If I fell in love with my chauffeur or my gardener I'd marry him. I would still be Nola. I don't retreat into snobbery because I wish, Darling, it's only the stiff and proper bourgeoisie who allow themselves to be constricted by class and convention; who fear the censure of their relatives and neighbors. I can afford to be natural and human. So can you. So can anyone if he has the least bit of common sense."
Lyn digested this while she slipped into place the full, swirling skirt of her white taffeta gown and pinned more securely to her shoulders the pale green orchids Geoff had sent.

"I just can't like the Mack family, Nola," she finally said. "Whether it's snobbery or not—they don't belong at Seaciff and I don't want anything to do with them."
"Have you tried to like them?" Nola demanded.
"No. And I don't intend to."
"Well, I have. And I learned a lot. They've been kicked around like footballs by depression and poverty and they've come out of it with their chin up, thanks to young Talbot. He gave up his chance for a career to take care of his family—and he might have had one, for he's smart and not afraid of work. His family worship him and I don't blame them. He's loyal and dependable and any girl that sets him for a husband will be darned lucky! Did you ever stop to wonder how you and I and people like us would react to the loss of our money and property? Would we whine or would we fight?"
"Oh, stop it, Nola!" Lyn said crossly. "I'm sick of hearing eulogies about the Mack family that I wish I were in Alaska! Let's go out and dance."

Introductions
NOLA gave her sleek, velvet-sheathed image one last glance of approval and followed Lyn out to the dance floor where Geoff and Thorndyke waited impatiently.
As Geoff danced her the length of the floor, Jocelyn answered the gay greetings of her friends, only half-listening to Geoff's elaborate diagnosis of the new pony's ailment. Finally, looking down at her abstracted eyes, he accused petulantly, "You aren't even listening to me, Lyn! If I bore you so terribly perhaps you'd like to finish the dance with someone else."
He felt her startled movement and followed her glance toward the entrance where a tall young man in immaculate evening clothes stood surveying the dancers with bold black eyes, a half smile on his mouth.

"It's Tally!"—Jocelyn gasped. "He's coming toward us—he's going to cut in with me!"
"Who invited him?" Geoff blustered. "I'll have him thrown out!"
"I invited him. Don't you dare make a scene, Geoff Kensing!"
Then Tally was next to them, smiling down at Jocelyn as if they were the best of friends. "May I cut in?"
Feeling as if all volition had left her, she went into his arms; felt them tighten about her slender figure and guide her into smooth steps. He could dance. And well. She relaxed a trifle and dared a peek upward. He appeared perfectly composed and at ease. He did not look out of place or strange. He might be any one of the young men in the club set.

Other couples passing them stared curiously. Tally said: "Disappointed because I didn't wear my overalls and boots?"
To save her life she could not have answered one word. Relief swept her as the dance ended and he took her over to Geoff. Meeting Geoff's eyes squarely he held out his hand, saying, "We haven't met, Mr. Kensing; I'm Talbot Mack."
Geoffrey extended a limp, unwilling hand, appraising young Mack with hostile eyes as their hands clasped briefly. Then Nola sauntered up and greeted Tally with a warmth that froze Thorn's frown on his face.

"I'm so glad you've come," she smiled, her eyes twinkling as she noted the frowning circle about his mouth. "I can't tell you how pleased I was when Jocelyn told me she had insisted on your being with us tonight. Has she introduced you to everyone? No?" Nola turned to Lyn who was palpably bewildered and annoyed. "Lyn, has she ever introduced you to the evening?"
"We want to know everyone, don't we, Tally?"
Jocelyn, her chin set stubbornly, took Nola and Tally on a round of the ballroom, her blue eyes becoming stormier with each introduction she performed.
Ruth Benton smiled archly. "What's the idea of holding out on the rest of us?" she scolded. "You can expect plenty of female visitors from now on!"
Most of Lyn's girl friends made similar remarks.
Jocelyn felt she had reached the bursting point when Eleanor Pilkington invited Tally to a party the following afternoon.

"I'm afraid Mr. Mack will have to disappoint you," she said, striving for control. "His cows and chickens and a truck garden to look after."
"Yes," he agreed with imperceptible good humor, "I happen to be a farmer, Miss Pilkington."
Mocking
"WHY, that's marvelous!" Eleanor cooed. "I had no idea you were the young man from Texas."
A blast from the orchestra halted conversation. Without asking permission, Tally drew Jocelyn into his arms and danced her out on the floor. Geoffrey, a vexed expression on his usually mild face, cut in. Over his shoulder Jocelyn watched Tally find Nola and sweep her, laughing, into the dance. There was a resentful twinge in the region of Lyn's heart.
Geoff blurted, "Just what is the idea of asking him here?"
"Because I wanted to."
"But why? You said you couldn't bear him."
"I can't."
"Then why on earth..."
"You don't understand women, Geoff."
"I guess I don't! I guess no man does."
"I think," mused Jocelyn, "there is one man who understands them far too well." A little laugh of self-derision escaped her. Tally had known very well just why he had been invited. Once again he had thwarted her.
Geoffrey, preoccupied, missed a step and trod on her small green slippers.
"Hadden't you better call the veterinary and find out the state of your pony's health?" she suggested. "You certainly haven't your mind on dancing."
His eyes were uneasy. "Come outside with me, Lyn. I want to talk to you."
In the semi-darkness of a porch corner he lifted her chin with his finger-tips. "You do love me, don't you, Lyn? I've never questioned it before, but now—"
"Then why now?" she asked lightly, absorbing all the dear familiarity of him. This was the man she wanted for life. Substantial, dependable; her own kind of person. He would make a dutiful husband and—a fine father for their children. He was good to look at, too. He had a nice firm face; clear fair skin; pleasant hazel eyes; and—
"Of course I love you, Geoff," she declared.
He appeared satisfied. His lips brushed her forehead. "I know our love affair has never been one of those wild, reckless things you read about in books and see in movies," he said, "but that sort of thing isn't real, anyhow, we're not that kind of people, are we, Lyn? We are restrained, well-bred, intelligent persons who plan our lives with our heads instead of our emotions. That's why our marriage will be failures. Look at the example your grandmother set—"
"Yes," Lyn thought. "I have. She spent her entire life wishing she had married another man! Is this quiet, friendly feeling I have for Geoff really love? Is it all I will ever feel? Or will marriage make a mockery of it?"
"You're shivering, dear," he broke in on her disturbing thoughts. "Let me take you inside."
The evening went merrily on for everyone but Jocelyn, or so she told herself. No matter who her dancing partner was Tally constantly and consistently cut in. He pursued her ardently; he smiled into her eyes; he clung to her hands when the music stopped. He behaved, to all appearances, as a man completely enthralled with a girl. "Yet he isn't," Jocelyn thought, hotly resentful. "Beneath it all he's mocking me, laughing at me, enjoying the way everyone is talking about us!"

SHORT SHOTS

Raleigh, May 17.—"Charlie Johnson (State Treasurer) and Thad Eure (Secretary of State) have more titles than I have, but I've got the longest," bragged State Auditor George Ross Poul.
To prove his contention he pointed to his position as "Chairman of the Board of Commissioners of the Law Enforcement Officers Benefit Retirement Fund."
All three officials are by virtue of their posts members of all sorts of boards, commissions and bureaus.

Raleigh is still getting its share, and more of conventions, conferences and get-togethers of various and sundry sorts.
The North Carolina Youth Exhibit and Conference will be conducted at the Memorial Auditorium Friday and Saturday of this week.
Thursday and Friday the tenth annual state-wide Industrial Safety Conference, organized in 1930 by the North Carolina Industrial Commission, will be held here with headquarters at the St. Walter Hotel.
This year's conference is to "celebrate a decade of industrial safety progress," according to the program.

Two notes on climate and weather.
Note 1.—The aged and genteel Negro who operates the Supreme Court building elevator commented thus on your correspondent's casual and conversation-making query—"When will we get some real spring weather?"—"When de Lawd gets ready to give us to us."
Note 2.—A Raleigh resident, who once lived in Wilmington made this observation about the City-on-the-Cape Fear: "It's the only place in the world where you can get up in the morning feeling like you don't have to work when you know all the time you've got to labor like hell."

think they see the writing on the wall heralding a new wave of prohibition sentiment and want to get out from under before it's too late. Their selection of Colonel Bain was wholly logical and in ordinary parlance, a "natural," as the hard-bitten but frank and outspoken Goldsboro lawyer is widely known, universally liked and generally regarded as being tolerant and liberal on the issue of intoxicants, while at the same time "tough guy" enough to make it dangerous for recalcitrants in the industry who don't want self or any other kind of regulation for it.

When and how the industry's new policy will be formally made public has not been announced, but it is certain to break before the end of this week, with a meeting of distributors to formulate definite and fixed policies and ratify the Bain selection to head the industry's campaign.
General objective of the drive will be to disassociate beer and those who handle it completely from the low type of dive and bootleg joint with which it is sometimes connected, at least in the public mind. Colonel Bain will head this sort of drive and will have little connection with trade practices within the industry.

He will devote his entire attention to his new post, and it is assumed he will open headquarters, probably in Raleigh, though the colonel himself is slated to retain his residence in Goldsboro.
The whole setup is in line with the policy recently adopted by the beer industry all over the country. A nationwide advertising campaign has been conducted in an effort to acquaint the public with the beneficial results claimed to flow from the brewer's and their product; and organizations similar to the one planned for North Carolina have been set up in numerous other states.
It goes without saying that the new organization will do its very best to keep from the appearance of being a huge political lobby, but like other organizations for other industries, it will probably get credit in the public eye for being just that. Witness, for example, the North Carolina Petroleum Industries committee during the recent legislature, when it was assailed as the "Oil Lobby." Purely by coincidence, the N. C. P. I. C. is headed by a former state senator, S. Gilmer Sparger, who represented Stokes and Surry in two Assemblies.

One of the interesting angles will be the new body's attitude toward bootleg joints operating largely under cover of beer licenses. There is speculation whether the new group will develop into a really effective law enforcement agency. If Colonel Bain is seriously given the job of "cleaning up" the fur is certain, to fly, as he has the reputation of doing what he sets out to do.

If, as is probable, the group goes into action as an ally of law enforcement officers, things are going to happen on a big scale.
In the tourist season there is an average of 15,000 Americans in Mexico City.

Play New Bern Here Tonight; Tarboro Friday Night

The cellarite Eagles defeated the Greenies last night 8-3 while the Williamson entry was winning over Snow Hill 9-5 and the Martins replaced the local line at the top of the league standings.

It was the fifth loss of the season for the Greenies, previous losses having been suffered to Williamson, Tarboro and two to Goldsboro.

The Greenies also will be at home tonight and on Friday night, meeting New Bern tonight and engaging the Tarboro Serpents in a night contest Friday.

After Greenville had scored two runs in the fourth, the Eagles made seven in the sixth and retained the lead throughout the rest of the game, each team scoring only once afterwards.

In the fourth Simpson singled, Rimmer singled, Heavener fanned, but Wilson walked to fill the bases. Jenkins fanned and Earl Smith, second baseman, tried to force a sacrifice to replace Red Christopher, who is out on account of illness, got a nice hit to short center and went to second as Simpson and Rimmer came home. Vincent Smith tied to third for the final out of the inning.

The Eagles pounded two hurlers unmercifully in the sixth. Dezik and Hahn singled in succession. Kennedy bunted and Briggs threw wild to first. Dezik scored, Kennedy going to second and Hahn to third. Kolozar filed out to second base, but Blanton singled to left field to score Hahn and Kennedy, putting the Eagles in a 3-2 lead, but they were not through scoring for the frame. Thornton singled and advanced to second on Rimmer's error. Badger went in to replace Briggs. Nowak's single, Kapouria's two-run double and Hahn's double accounted for the remaining Kinston runs in the sixth. The seven runs were made on as many hits.

Greenville made its third and last run of the game in the eighth on singles by Heavener, Wilson and Vincent Smith. Kinston also added another, pushing one across in their half of the ninth on Kennedy's hit. Kolozar's sacrifice and Thornton's single.

It was Ladies Night and despite the cold weather a large crowd witnessed the game.

So Negro To Stay In Pen "Victim" Changes Mind;

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, May 17.—Parole Commissioner Edwin Gill this morning ended a long investigation of the Charles Smith case with announcement that the Columbus Negro will not be paroled or pardoned in view chiefly of the fact that Mrs. Sarah Lyles, prosecutrix in the case which originally ended in a death verdict, has changed her mind again and now says that Charlie did invade her home at night and attempt to attack her.

The Commissioner said the matter has been one of the most trying and complicated ever to come before him. It has been under investigation for months. What made it so tough was the inability of the prosecutrix to adhere to any one story for any length of time. There were many cross-currents of opinion and influence from Columbus and reports and rumors regarding the motives of those seeking clemency for the Negro were numerous and varied—running from stories that prominent white men were seeking to get him out of prison because he was a good "stiller" to assertions that petty jealousies between officers who did and did not participate in Smith's capture were at the bottom of the rumpus.

But above all the difficulties were the frequent veerings of the prosecutrix. At the trial she positively identified Smith as her assailant. Later when application for commutation of the death sentence was under consideration she said "There is a possibility that there was a mistake made in the identification of my assailant." Still later she came to Raleigh and made to Commissioner Gill the positive assertion: "I admit I made a mistake. Charlie Smith is innocent."

If it had ended there, or if there had been other angles to the case Smith would likely have been set free very soon after this sort of declaration. But, as Commissioner Gill said in a statement issued today: "It must be remembered that Charlie Smith was not convicted solely on the testimony of Mrs. Lyles. There were other circumstances, including the positive identification made by her father, Clarence Lyles, who was 14 years of age at the time the crime was committed."

Also there was a caution from Superior Court Judge John J. Burney (who was solicitor at the Smith trial) that everything wasn't as simple as the Mrs. Lyles exonerations of the prisoner might imply. And so Commissioner Gill let things rock along in order that there might be time for cooling of passions, reflection on the whole affair, and a clearer, calmer examination of the whole picture.

Then when Mrs. Lyles was visited and interviewed again there was another story. According to the Gill statement of today: "In connection with our further investigation, an agent of the Commissioner of Paroles recently talked with Mrs. Lyles. During this interview she frankly stated that she had lived with his mother, but resides in South Carolina with relatives."

There were intimations at the time of Mrs. Lyles' statement that Smith is innocent that she had been influenced by Henry Britt, whom she had married after the trial and conviction of Smith. When the last investigation of the matter was made by Mr. Gill's office, Britt was in jail in Robeson county (his offense was not indicated by his mother) and Mr. Gill said that the charge was that Britt said that Mrs. Lyles (or Britt) didn't seem to know her own mind about the matter.

In more or less informal comment on the case, Commissioner Gill indicated a belief that the jury which first convicted Smith did not act primarily—certainly not altogether—on the testimony of Mrs. Lyles.

The identification by Clarence Lyles—who said he saw the Negro very clearly by the light of a lamp in the Lyles home—and other circumstances connecting Smith with the crime were sufficient, Mr. Gill said, to have convicted the Negro without Mrs. Lyles' testimony. In view of Mrs. Lyles' flat repudiation of her court testimony, the case excited state-wide interest and

YOUTHS APPLY FOR INSURANCE

Young Folks Register Under Old Age Insurance Act. Rocky Mount.—More than half of the 130,698 old-age insurance accounts set up in 1938 for workers in North Carolina were for men and women under 30, according to a statement issued today by R. S. Marshall, manager of the Social Security Board's field offices at Rocky Mount.

More of these accounts, he stated, were assigned to young people between 15 and 19 than to persons in any other age group. Mr. Marshall called attention to the fact that workers who already had jobs in employment covered by federal insurance got their numbers at the start of the program in 1937; and, therefore, the bulk of the new applicants are naturally young men and women who are taking, or are about to take, their first jobs.

The records show that applications for account numbers received in North Carolina during 1938, from young people 15 to 19 years of age, amounted to 35,985. Some 31,921 applications came from workers 20 to 24 years old, with those from 25 to 29 accounting for 19,298. This heavy demand for social security account numbers in 1938 was found among young people in all the states.

The preponderance of young applicants is particularly noticeable among women. About 55 per cent, or 22,870, of the women who applied for social security account cards in North Carolina during 1938 were under age 25. Of the state's 89,094 male applicants, 45,570 were under age 25.

HAD ROUGH TIME AND STILL DIDN'T WIN. Cheyenne, Wyo.—(AP)—C. J. (Doc) Rogers really "roughed it" during his campaign for state auditor.

He reported to the secretary of state that his campaign expenses were "nearly nothing, I hardly spent a nickel." "I got me a bed roll and I made it a practice to drive out of town a few miles, park under a sheltering tree, fix the bed roll and go to sleep," he said. "I always ate with ranches and farmers when I had the chance." He was defeated.

Greensboro Record says--

THE SWASTIKA'S OMINOUS SHADOW! The people of this country need to be more fully awakened and more thoroughly aroused to what is going on in the United States in the way of foreign espionage and the spread of anti-democratic and anti-American propaganda.

A few months ago the country was stirred and amazed by revelations in connection with the uncovering of a nazi spy ring, centering in New York, Washington and other large cities, and spreading out over the nation. Some of the spies and propaganda-spreaders were arrested, convicted and sent to prison, but, alas! most of them managed to slip through the fingers of the law.

"Confessions of a Nazi Spy" is a cinema production based on the recent expose. The Record has been privileged to see the pre-view of this intensely interesting, shocking and truly astonishing picture which is soon to be shown in all over the United States and that everyone may see it. It should serve to arouse popular patriotism, to better inform us of the efforts which are being made to undermine our democratic institutions and ideals with the most dangerous and heinous foreign "isms," and to put us eternally on guard against spies and propagandists who strive to wreck America and remake it according to nazi specifications.

Many Attend Revival At Free Will Baptist

Last night the auditorium of the Free Will Baptist Church was packed to its capacity and the Sunday school rooms were over half full. Rev. R. P. Harris, former pastor of the church sang "The Child of the King," after which Evangelist Steve Cloud brought a stirring message on "Evangelize or Fossilize."

Rev. Mr. Cloud said in part: "A tree in a forest that is dead is called a fossilized tree. Our churches of today are filled with fossil Christians. There is nothing I would like to see more than a revival here in Greenville."

"I. The only hope for the church is to evangelize. Just as we drink water to sustain the body so we must revive our Christians to keep our churches alive. What would you think of your fire department if the men sat talking while the town burned? What does God think of us for sitting by while souls go into eternity without Christ? They crucified Christ not because He crucified them but because they wanted, but because He gave them what they needed. If I were a football coach and the signals I used were not working, I'd change my signals. If your way of doing things for God is failing, try another plan."

"2. Revivals are scriptural. The profit of old cried out to God to revive his people. Ezra preached a great revival. Denominations were born in revivals. All constructive work has come out of a great revival. Revival is needed when people are cold. As I walk the streets of Greenville I hear the people talking of baseball, their business, their farms, but none of them speak of God. We need a revival when Christians cease to pray. God grant that we may have some knee-slavery."

"3. How can we have a revival? If my people, which are called by my name shall humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." II Chron. 7:14.

Each afternoon at four o'clock, the Booster Band meets (ages for all children and adults who are interested). The children are very enthusiastic over the evangelistic easel board and object talks along with the choruses taught by Rev. Pelt.
