NAVY MEASURE GOES TO F. D. R. FOR SIGNATURE

House Accepts Minor Amendments Made By Senate

TRANS-ATLANTIC LINE PERMITTED

Pan-American to Inaugurate Regular Passenger, Mail, Express Service Tomorrow

Washington, May 19. (AP)—Congress sent the $773,000,000 naval appropriation bill to the White House today when the House accepted minor Senate amendments to the measure.

The big defense bill carries funds for continuing expansion of the fleet and the navy's air force, including money to begin construction of two 45,000-ton battleships.

Other developments: The Civil Aeronautics Authority has given permission to Pan-American Airways to establish transatlantic service for the transportation by air of passengers, mail and express.

Pan-American's certificate authorizes two round trips a week. Pan-American has announced plans to start the first flight from Baltimore tomorrow.

The Senate passed and sent to the House a bill by Senator Byrnes (D.-S. C.) to put President Roosevelt's two government reorganization orders into effect on July 1. The orders otherwise would have become effective June 26 and July 9.

President Roosevelt nominated O. John Rogge of Illinois to be assistant attorney general in charge of criminal prosecutions in the Justice Department.

The House committee on un-American activities, confronted with testimony which fantastically linked an anti-Semitic campaign to fear of revolution, set out to uncover the whole story and tell it to the public.

It issued subpoenas for John Van Horn Moseley, retired major general; three others mentioned in secret testimony yesterday; John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman; George Deatherage of St. Albans, Vt., and Felix McWhirter, Indianapolis, and ordered agents into a hunt for a mysterious writer who, witnesses have said, circulated "inside" information he overheard in an exclusive New York club.

Roper Is Received by King George, VI

Ottawa, May 19. (AP)—King George, VI, in an unprecedented ceremony today, received the credentials of Daniel Roper as United States minister to Canada and expressed "my sincere thanks" for assurances of friendship of President Roosevelt.

"The close friendship between my Canadian people and their neighbors," he added, "makes us look forward to the visit (to the United States) with particular pleasure."

King George and Queen Elizabeth came to Ottawa in a cold drizzle to begin their two-day visit in the capital of their largest dominion.

Coronary artery disease caused 25 per cent more deaths in the first three months of 1939 than in the same period in 1938.

New Threat

Washington, May 19. (AP)—A new threat to sale of American tobacco abroad appeared today.

F. H. Rawls, assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, told a congressional committee in testimony just made public that foreign producers were trying to convince foreign users of tobacco that their leaf was better than the American-grown product.

"We need a trade commissioner who is well versed in tobacco, one who knows the different grades and one who can go into the plants and point out to the manufacturers that by using this and that type of American type for blending they could economically produce a good product and thereby increase our exports of American tobacco," Rawls said.

VERDE ISLAND DISAPPEARING To Promote Greater Use for Cotton and Its Products

Tiny Island South of Manila Slipping Into Sea

Manila, May 19. (AP)—Tiny Verde island, some 100 miles south of Manila, with a population of 4,000 was reported tonight to be quaking and sinking fast into the sea.

Governor Caeido of Batangas province reported to government headquarters here that persons on the island, only 15 kilometers square, were being evacuated. Reports on exact conditions were meager, but it was believed those on the island were crossing the 10 miles to the Batangas coast in small native boats.

Verde island, mid-way between the island of Luzon and Mindoro, is in Verde island passage connecting the China sea and the Sibuyan sea.

Father M. Selza, director of the weather bureau, said there was no cause to fear a volcanic eruption at Verde island because the quakes were of tectonic origin.

Fire Destroys Motor At Store On Avenue

An electric motor at Askew's Market on Dickinson avenue was destroyed last night when a shortage of firemen were called to the market and kept the blaze from spreading. The call came in about 8 o'clock.

It has been estimated that 3,000-600 persons in various parts of the world are afflicted with leprosy.

Farm Problem Solved By Washington Back In 1770

By PRESTON GROVER Washington, May 19. (AP)—There was a gentleman farmer of certain renown living on the banks of the Potomac who worried because his poorer neighbors always had too much tobacco on hand and not enough good food.

Their Negro hands were often not in the best of health. Records indicate that oftentimes taxes were paid partly in money and partly in tobacco, for lack of other medium.

The gentleman farmer, who tended to his own place carefully, and had definite success growing a variety of crops and only a lesser portion of tobacco, called a meeting of his better-fixed neighbor farmers. They all recognized the problem of one-crop farms and were glad of a leader to change the practice of farmers in that neighbor-

Premier Offers To Lay Down Proposal If Germany Would Renounce Aggression or Further Use of Force; Admits War-Lost Colonies Would Be Involved in Such Peace

London, May 19. (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain offered today to lay down a definite long-range policy for European peace if Germany would renounce in a convincing way the "intention of aggression or the further use of force" in her relations with other countries.

Sneaking in foreign affairs debate in the House of Commons, Chamberlain said, however, that Britain was "not prepared to buy peace with concessions which would only lead to further demands."

He was replying to David Lloyd George, war-time prime minister, who had demanded speedy conclusion of an alliance with Soviet Russia and Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition, who had urged a clear and firm foreign policy.

Chamberlain declared that the German government itself was responsible for the lack of faith in its assertion of nonaggressive intention, and added: "If we could have such a renunciation of aggressive aim, if we could have the conviction that there was no intention of aggression or the further use of force in relations between Germany and other countries, then I think we would find we would not be backward in stating what is our view of the lines on which we would discuss the terms of a permanent peace."

Though he said Germany's demand for her war-lost colonies undoubtedly would be involved in such a peace, he said that did not mean Britain "will refuse to discuss any methods by which we can satisfy reasonable aspirations."

Plea Made To Public By Pitt Fire Warden

C. A. Bowling, county fire warden, declared today that Pitt had experienced 72 forest fires since July 15, 1928, causing an estimated loss of $23,204.

Urging the citizens to be careful not to start a fire, the warden declared that each year 156,000 of the total of 172,000 forest fires were from preventable causes.

In stressing the importance of being careful, Warden Bowling declared that in pioneer days fire helped to destroy the woods and make tillable agriculture possible and therefore was viewed with favor. "But we are supposed to have passed that stage," he added, "and have come to realize how valuable our natural resources are and what havoc fires play with them."

Safety Urged At State Conference

Raleigh, May 19. (AP)—C. M. Kimball, executive representative of the Southern Railway system, told delegates to the tenth annual state-wide Industrial Safety Conference today that "streamline machinery will become a curse instead of a blessing unless we streamline our thoughts to safety."

Most industrial accidents, Kimball explained, need not occur as they are due to human failure.

"Millions of persons," said the speaker, "have been killed in such accidents and it is time we dedicated ourselves to the proposition that those people shall not have died in vain."

The conference started yesterday and will end late today.

Judge John Gutknecht of the Chicago Traffic court expressed the opinion that "The country as a whole has a pretty lousy traffic record" and urged reform of the bench and the bar as a means of bettering the record. He condemned "ticket fixing" in traffic cases and said responsibility for better safety records rested with judges, prosecutors and attorneys.

Dr. K. C. Garrison, professor of psychology at North Carolina State College, said that production by an individual workman is measured largely by his mental contentment and security.

FEW ARRESTS HERE

BRITISH PLAN OF ARAB STATE AROUSES JEWS

Campaign of Passive Resistance Being Conducted

GUARD SLAIN IN DEMONSTRATIONS

Proposal Would Establish New Government in Palestine with Jews in the Minority

Jerusalem, May 19. (AP)—Palestine's aroused Jews resorted today to a passive resistance campaign—non-cooperation and economic pressure—attempting to thwart British plans to set up an Arab state in the Holy Land with Jews in the minority.

Mass demonstrations that followed announcement of Britain's new Palestine policy Wednesday had abated, leaving a British constable dead and 114 other persons injured, according to an official recapitulation.

Observers expected no further incidents likely to lead to violence, but Major General Robert Haining, commanding Britain's Palestine forces, warned that troops would meet force with force, if necessary, in any further disturbances of the peace.

Besides the slain constable, who died of bullet wounds, official casualty lists in last night's disorders recorded:

As assistant police superintendent suffered bullet wounds; 11 constables injured by stones; nine injured Jews under hospital care, 92 Jews suffering less serious injuries.

Organized Jews, who abandoned work yesterday for great protest parades, were busy today with a boycott plan. Their 24-hour general strike was over.

The campaign against Britain's proposal to make Palestine self-governing, but with Jews in a minority through restricted immigration calls for:

1—Refusal to buy British goods, with intensification of production and purchase of local products.

2—Encouragement of Jewish members of municipal councils in all mixed municipalities to refuse to participate in the governments.

3—Encouragement of Jews to refuse payment of the usual municipal taxes and instead to contribute to the financing of the Jewish resistance.

On Saturday night the annual music recital will be given. It will be followed by an informal reception by the college faculty for alumnae and alumnae.

Mr. Haushalter, visiting minister, will preach on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and at 7 o'clock in the evening will speak at the Y. W. C. A. candle-lighting service.

The commencement address by the Hon. J. M. Broughton and the presenting of diplomas to the graduates on Monday morning are scheduled to close the commencement.

President Opposes Use Of Stabilization Funds For Financing Business Aids

Official Is Sent To Trouble Zone

Conference Started, Meanwhile, in Harlan County

Washington, May 19. (AP)—Attorney General Murphy announced today that Brien McMahon, assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department criminal division, would go to Harlan county, Kentucky, to determine whether there have been any violations of civil liberties in connection with the coal mine controversy there.

McMahon will be accompanied by Henry Schweinhaut, chief of the criminal division of the civil liberties unit.

Both will leave by plane today. The Justice Department has had two agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Harlan county for the last 30 days.

Harlan, Ky., May 19. (AP)—Optimistic federal and state conciliators began conferences today seeking a settlement of differences between the Harlan County Coal Operators Association and United Mine Workers (CIO) in an atmosphere of tension following gunfire and dynamiting.

The association represents 42 mines and is the only large operating group in the soft coal fields holding out against the "union shop" contract of the UMW.

Late last night the Lynch mine of the United States Coal and Coke Company, subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, became the first Harlan county operator to sign a union contract. These mines are not members of the county association.

Little Theatre Play Regarded Successful

In a murder trial authentic in every way, the Greenville Little Theatre scored in a play which will long be remembered, last night at the court house.

Thrills, surprise witnesses and heated arguments between opposing attorneys packed punch into a plot which alternately had a full house gasping and laughing. The jury in this performance found Karen Andre not guilty. Miss Hennie Long, who played Miss Andre, played an extremely difficult role with professional skill.

Charles Woodward, as Larry Regan, the gangster, gave a performance worthy of any show we have ever seen. The two attorneys, Charles Woodward and Louis Skinner, turned in stellar performances, as did Richard Waiser and Ramona Staples.

Any recitations of the other individual performances would be ineffectual in expressing their forceful presentations. The Greenville Little Theatre is a distinct addition to Greenville activities. The plays are carefully worked up to a perfection rivaling that of the professional stage. It is said that if sufficient interest is shown in this play by those who did not see it, it may be put on again either Monday or Tuesday of next week.

Bain Tells Beer Dealers To Clean Up Or Close Up

Raleigh, N. C., May 19. (Special) Backed by Governor Hoey, other high state officials and the organized $15,000,000 beer industry of North Carolina, Col. Edgar H. Bain started out here today to "clean up or close up" the objectionable places among the state's license retail beer outlets.

"A survey of the state undertaken by the United Brewers Industrial Foundation," said Colonel Bain, as he opened his new offices in Raleigh, "shows that the great majority of the retail beer outlets operate in an orderly manner. That is what we want."

"It is toward the small percentage of outlets that flout the law and disregard public sentiment that we will direct our program. We want the beer industry to operate in the same way that the food or cosmetic

NEW SPENDING PLAN STUDIED

Chief Executive Tells Reporters That He Had Never Heard That New Spending-Lending Plan Was Under Consideration and Voices Emphatic Opposition To Use of Fund

Washington, May 19. (AP)—President Roosevelt, discussing the reports that a new spending-lending program was being studied in some administration quarters, expressed emphatic opposition today to using any part of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to finance aids to business.

Questions regarding the reports were raised at the President's press conference. He said that he had never heard that a new spending-lending program was under consideration.

When it was brought out that the heart of this plan provided for utilizing part of the stabilization fund to finance new federal help to business, such as purchases of railroad equipment, Mr. Roosevelt said he was opposed to monkeying with the fund.

"The program has not yet taken definite form, it was learned, but is being put into shape for submission to President Roosevelt and possible transmission to Congress."

As tentatively outlined it would include: Release of $1,500,000,000 of the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and use of the money to finance a nation-wide home building program.

Establishment of new federal machinery for loans to business with emphasis on advances to small firms.

Liberalization of Social Security benefits with discussions centering on old age pensions of $40 monthly for single persons and $60 monthly for married persons.

Government insurance of loans for utility construction.

Reduction of the five per cent interest rate on construction loans by the Federal Housing administration.

Government purchase of new railroad equipment and its rental to the carriers.

Five Cases Tried In Friday's Court

Alex Junior Dupree, Negro, was acquitted on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and Arthur Teel, Negro, was found not guilty of a charge of driving while drunk.

Fred Baker, convicted of drunkenness, was given a 3-day sentence, suspended upon payment of court costs.

Henry Moore, Negro, was tried on abandonment charges and non support, but judgment was left open.

S. W. Hobbs was convicted of driving drunk, but freed of hit-and-run charges which grew out of a wreck last week. He was given a 90-day sentence, suspended upon payment of a $50 fine and court costs. His driving license was revoked for 12 months.

PEOPLE INDIGNANT Believed To Be Malicious Political Prosecution

Much excitement was occasioned in Greenville Thursday by the coming here of a U. S. Marshal who proceeded to serve warrants on quite a number of our leading citizens and ordering them to appear before the U. S. Commissioner. The warrants charged that they interfered with the election at Parker's Cross Roads precinct, this township, last November, and kept some persons from voting.

The case was set for a hearing at 10 o'clock this morning, and those against whom the warrants were issued were on hand. That the arrests have aroused the indignation of almost our entire people is very apparent, for all believe that it is the outgrowth of malice and political spite.

The hostess served a tempting salad course with coffee, followed by an ice course with decorated individual cakes.

Mrs. Berry Bostic, Mrs. W. D. Pruitt, Mrs. C. E. Oakley, Mrs. Vernon Parrish, Mrs. C. M. Warren and Miss Leah Day Pope were tea guests. Mrs. Fitzgerald remembered the honoree with a cold-meat fork in her chosen pattern.

BAIN TELLS BEER DEALERS TO CLEAN UP OR CLOSE UP

(Continued from Page One) with the district committees. Colonel Bain will confer with Attorney General Harry McMillan on the policy of the new brewers and North Carolina beer distributors committee to shut off supplies of beer to retailers who tolerate abuses in their establishments and thus offend public sentiment.

Governor Hoy, in his message to State Director Bain, said: "I believe your acceptance will assure the success of this movement in North Carolina."

"I will recommend your organization as a valuable ally in the cause of temperance and law enforcement. The fact that your regulatory campaign is self-imposed is highly commendable and should guarantee public acceptance of your far-sighted intentions."

The brewers and North Carolina beer distributors committee, Colonel Bain said in taking over his new post, is not concerned with legislation, politics or trade. The mass meeting at which the new state committee was formed had J. P. Price, Greensboro distributor, as chairman. Price said: "This program's objective is to act in a way which will safeguard the social, moral and economic benefits of an industry which provides North Carolina with about $1,500,000 annually in taxes and license fees. From the general fund, this sum is largely earmarked for public schools."

"This industry provides a payroll of about $9,000,000 annually for North Carolinians, and it is estimated that the re-legalization of beer has created a new business volume of nearly $10,000,000 a year within the state."

On the executive committee of the new group are six brewers doing business in the state and six distributors. The distributors are Price, chairman; W. S. Burruss of Raleigh, secretary-treasurer; Fred Mills of Wadesboro; W. E. Griffin of Durham; Edward Hecht of Charlotte and Frank E. Barnard of Asheville.

Colonel Bain accepted his new post in private industry after resigning from the state Senate this week. He has been twice decorated for bravery in the World War, is active in the American Legion and is chairman of the executive committee of the United States Army Reserve Officers Corps. He is known throughout the state as "North Carolina's Will Rogers."

The movement is sponsored by the United Brewers Industrial Foundation, an organization of leading brewers whose aim is to establish the industry's acceptance of social responsibility and desire to co-operate with the authorities.

Similar "clean up or close up" programs are in operation in Nebraska, Kansas, Tennessee, and Maine. In North Carolina, as in other states, the committee will launch an educational campaign by means of institutional advertising.

FARM PROBLEM SOLVED BY WASHINGTON BACK IN 1770

(Continued from page one) of small-farm families live on a diet almost devoid of vegetables. The trouble, it would seem, is that there were not enough George Washingtons back in 1770.

And now that we have finished with George we will get back to Washington. There is a certain word often used in these parts that symbolizes much of the trouble arising between business and the government over the matter of tax revision. It is the longish word "appeasement" that was imported from Europe, where it came into disrepute at Munich.

Early this year there was much evidence of a shift in administration sentiment. Harry Hopkins was going to the Department of Commerce to work at restoring business confidence. He said that he considered that his major job.

And somebody started calling it "business appeasement." You could feel a chill in the Washington air almost at once. Appeasement, as it came from Munich, meant surrender.

President Roosevelt suggested that reporters hunt up a new word to cover the situation.

It has become evident that the hunt for a new word was not intended as a joke. The President refused to be put in the position of the "retreat from Munich." He has said repeatedly since, for emphasis, that the administration was not retreating. The Democratic party wins, said he, when it stands for liberal principles, loses when it slips away.

The chill between government and business continues. The United States Chamber of Commerce was belligerent in its meeting here. Such

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. D. A. WINDHAM

Sunday, May 21st (Jer. 35:5-10; Eph. 5:15-21; 6:1-4) We come to consider the cause of the fall of empires; the filling of institutions for the insane and the feeble minded; the touching of chain gangs and penal institutions; the breaking up of homes, the ruin of lives, and the filling of untimely graves. The cause of more heart aches and tears than any one thing in the world. One that is facing us as a major problem.

In Jeremiah 35:5-10 we have an account of the Rechobites, a nomadic tribe of men of which very little is known. However, we do know they were of the Kenites; and had associated themselves with the tribes of Judah.

Their name, as other Hebrew names, have a meaning and significance. The name is in three syllables and is formed of three roots, each of which has a meaning. "Rech" means descent or posterity; "ob" fatherhood or paternalism; "Rech" has an elastic use but the most probable one is moral piety, or uprightness. If we can rely on his name and what we can learn in an indefinite way, he was what we would call a good man.

It was the belief of many people in the Bible time that good men could confer a blessing on his children and that blessing depended on them keeping the command of the parent. Isaac and Jacob conferred blessings on their sons; therefore Rachel conferred one on his household, and to be blessed, happy and prosperous they must be shepherds and not live in houses, but tents; and they were to drink no wine or alcoholic drinks. And the Lord declared that in that case there should be no want of a man to stand before Rechab.

This prediction has been miraculously fulfilled; for they were in the time of Jeremiah and even later in the Bible and less than 50 years ago a colony of them were seen in Arabia, and they still cling to their fathers' teaching and command.

Jeremiah set pots full of wine before them and said "drink ye wine"; but they positively refused to drink it. On the surface this appears that Jeremiah was tempting them, but such was not true, for God tempts no man, but if man will yield to him he is ledeth not into temptation but delivers us from evil.

The writer once heard a preacher say Jeremiah tried to get them to drink wine. God pity the flock led by a shepherd so uninformed of God's word. Jeremiah was teaching the Jews a lesson on obedience and was demonstrating the same by the sons of Rechab; and he knew they would refuse.

These Rechobites honored their father and their days have been long on the earth, and some of them, according to God's word, will be here at the second coming of Christ.

Paul in Ephesians 5:15-21 refers to those who use wine as fools. The late Dr. Laughinghouse said "A fool is the individual who knowingly makes a mistake." The man who has seen a drunk and knows how he looks is a fool to drink. If he has smelled and knows how he smells, he is a fool to drink. If he has heard one talk; he is a fool to drink. If he has seen one walk; he is a fool to drink. When a person knows it will make him look, walk and act like a fool, and smell like a third-class guano factory, and then drink the pop-squall damnable stuff, Paul was justified in calling him a fool.

Indulge me to simplify the translation in verse one by substituting the word "constantly" for "circumspectly" as it is in perfect accord with the Greek.

Paul would have us use caution in all our decisions and in this matter caution is doubly necessary; and the people of Pitt county could have used more caution when the control vote was cast. I can name four churches in Pitt county with a membership larger than the vote cast against control. The watchword was it will eliminate the bootleggers, but it failed. But one thing is certain it has done, it has increased drunkenness in an overwhelming proportion and swelled the dockets of our criminal courts.

But this is but a pebble on the mighty sea in comparison to what is to follow in the wake of our folly. When the laws of heredity and prenatal influences have imposed their penalty in when we as a people will drink the bitter cup of remorse to its dregs. When "the iniquity of the fathers have followed to the third and fourth generations" then and not until then, we will know the result of our folly. A tremendous per cent of the mental and physical degenerates that we have today can be traced to alcohol; add to these the probable and almost certain increase and Dix Hill and Caswell will have to be doubled, making no mention of the endless broken hearts.

Society, the business world, in fact no one has a place for a drunk. Where is the man who would ride a bus with a drunk at the wheel, or a passenger train with one at the throttle? Where is the general who would put a drunk in command of a division of soldiers? Where is the business man who would retain in his business a habitual drunkard? Where is the mother or father who wants their girl to marry one? Alcohol renders a person useless and nobody has a place for him; so Paul meant what he said in Eph. 5:15 when he called him a fool.

With the countless failures about us in every sphere of life, how can one think he can hope to make shore against such a current? It is beyond me to understand.

The medical profession has fixed no definite period when the system is free from alcohol when once filled. You only have to look around you to see the effect in the child as a result that the parent was intoxicated, or partly so, at the wrong psychological moment. If the individual only had to suffer it would not be so bad, but others must suffer as well. Paul says again "No man liveth to himself and no one dieth alone." A pebble dropped in the placid waters of the lake will cause a small circular wave to start and it will grow as it moves; so with a mental or physical degenerate, the number will increase until God alone knows what will be the ultimate result. As these lines may fall into the hands of some thoughtful person, let me warn you that one day you must reap what you sow, and those lives affected by your folly will meet you at the judgment.

With idiots and feeble minded offspring to your credit you may be like Esau who had sold his birthright for a morsel of pottage, who found no place of repentance.

I must at least speak a word about environment. The Bible teaches "that we are our brother's keeper" and that two cannot "walk together except they agree." There is an invisible law that makes persons seek the same level and the higher will descend to the lower in ninety per cent of the cases; so if a temperate man habitually associates with men who drink, the chances are nine to one he will form the same habit. For this reason we should remove the unwholesome environment as far from them as within our power.

The law of mental reaction also must be considered. The things about which a person thinks will react in life; therefore if the drink habit is forever before the rising generation we can expect nothing less than unfavorable reaction.

Therefore I join our Governor by saying we can't hope to reach a high stage in a moral, social, intellectual or spiritual sphere on a ladder supported by alcohol.

The last scripture quotation in the lesson has to do with the child's respect to his parents. No greater honor and respect can be heaped on the head of a parent than to develop into a well rounded socially and intellectually well balanced man or woman, and nothing can distinger from his mind. "Every body has a right to be happy." The circle closed in again, shutting out Jocelyn. She hurried to the terrace to round up her guests for supper, refraining from mentioning the old man's presence to Geoff or Thorn. But when the guests, talking and laughing, filed into the house, Nola saw Gramp and called a delighted greeting. Jocelyn noted his relief and pleasure at seeing Nola, who immediately perched on the arm of his chair and affectionately ruffled his hair and teased him about marrying the Irish maid.

For the next hour, busy with her guests, Jocelyn did not permit herself to think of anything but her duty as hostess. She reminded Thorn, when he frowned an objection to Gramp, that this party was for Nola and if Nola wanted the old man it was their duty to be tactful.

However, old Talbot Mack, with the assistance of willing cupbearers, soon became comically intoxicated. Struggling to his feet he danced for them, awkwardly shuffling his feet, slipping and slipping on the tiled floor in his high, crumpled shoes; but the more he danced the more he was urged on, until great drops of perspiration came out on his forehead and rolled down the deep creases of his face.

Thorn fidgeted with annoyance. Gramp fretted the exasperation. Jocelyn thought, "They're making a fool of him—it's awful!"

With abrupt decision she went through the lower hall to the communicating door which led into the Mack's domain. Turning the lock, she went through and marched up the broad stairway, her eyes flashing with indignation.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress. Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seacoff.

Yesterday: After the dance, there is even more restraint between Tally and Jocelyn.

Chapter 17 A Party

NOLA suggested: "Let's throw a huge party tonight. Impromptu affairs are always more fun. Let's get on the telephones and call everyone we know in Santa Barbara."

"But—" Thorn began. "Silence!" Nola commanded. "I want a party. If you insist, I'll be the hostess and assume full charge; but a party I'm going to have and that's that!"

"All right," Thorn assented. "Suit you, Lyn?" "All right by me. The servants will have a fit, though."

"Then order caterers from town," Nola said. Thorn flushed. "We really can't afford the hoped-for expense. You see, so far we've been living on our stock dividends. Grandmother left us forty thousand in secure stocks and bonds, but even good dividends from that amount is no fortune. We're far from being rich, Nola."

"Oh, I didn't know, of course." A constrained silence gripped all of them for a few minutes. Finally Nola asserted: "I've just about completed negotiations for giving away ten million dollars to the government toward re-forest-ation."

"Why—that's a splendid idea," Thorn exclaimed. "However did you arrive at it?"

"Oh, with the help of a lawyer friend."

Jocelyn felt sure she meant Tally and Thorn's peace of mind. Nola would never divulge the lawyer's identity.

"Anyhow," Nola went on, "the point is this—if I can give the government ten million, I guess I can give my hosts and their friends a party."

Thorn's eyes, appealing and miserable, met Jocelyn's.

"You'll do no such a thing," Jocelyn declared. "You're our guest. Besides, I haven't played hostess for a long time. Our servants can't make out very well. Come on, all of you, and get busy on the telephones! Be sure and offer midnight swimming."

People literally swarmed over the right division of Seacoff that evening. Both the piano and the radio were going full blast; the drawing room was crowded with dancers; the swimming pool splashed with swimmers; the terrace echoed with the shouts and laughter of couples playing children's games and driving hillside cars from them. Jocelyn, thinking it was such a very nice party, was puzzled when, a little past midnight, Humphreys told her Tally was on the porch asking for her.

"Tell him to come in," she advised.

"He says will you please come on the porch, Miss Jocelyn, for he is not dressed for a party."

Making an excuse to her dancing partner Jocelyn found Tally leaning against a stone balustrade. He was attired in his working clothes; his hair tousled and tumbling over his forehead.

"Hello—did you want to see me?"

"Yes." His voice was brusque. "Don't like to spoil your fun but none of us can sleep with so much noise going on. Betsy has nearly driven Mother crazy, and I have to be up at sunrise."

Unwonted Guest "Oh—I didn't realize. I'm really sorry," she said sincerely. "I'll turn down the radio and feed everyone. That usually quiets them. I'm sure we won't give you any more trouble."

"Thank you. I'll try to get some sleep. Good night."

Before she could say anything further she had disappeared into the shadows around the corner of the house. For a few minutes she remained where she was, her thoughts strangely depressing. Then, with a shrug, she went back into the drawing room, crossed to the radio and turned it lower.

Going into the kitchen she gave orders for serving the buffet supper on the great oak table in the dining-room.

When she returned to the party another guest had arrived; an unwelcome and unbidden guest; old Talbot Mack.

Already some prankster had ensconced him in a comfortably cushioned chair and had collected a group of listeners who encouraged him to relate his more colorful adventures on the "Seventy Seas."

Gramp, spying Jocelyn, hesitated. A wistful expression crept into his discerning old eyes. "I hope you don't mind me coming into your party this way, Josie," he apologized. "I heard laughin' and music and it seemed like I just couldn't stay away—it's been so durned long since I went a-partyin'."

Bob Russell crossed the room with swift strides and laid a reassuring hand on the old man's stooped shoulders. "Of course she doesn't mind," he asserted. "We're glad to have you, Gramp."

The circle closed in again, shutting out Jocelyn. She hurried to the terrace to round up her guests for supper, refraining from mentioning the old man's presence to Geoff or Thorn. But when the guests, talking and laughing, filed into the house, Nola saw Gramp and called a delighted greeting. Jocelyn noted his relief and pleasure at seeing Nola, who immediately perched on the arm of his chair and affectionately ruffled his hair and teased him about marrying the Irish maid.

For the next hour, busy with her guests, Jocelyn did not permit herself to think of anything but her duty as hostess. She reminded Thorn, when he frowned an objection to Gramp, that this party was for Nola and if Nola wanted the old man it was their duty to be tactful.

However, old Talbot Mack, with the assistance of willing cupbearers, soon became comically intoxicated. Struggling to his feet he danced for them, awkwardly shuffling his feet, slipping and slipping on the tiled floor in his high, crumpled shoes; but the more he danced the more he was urged on, until great drops of perspiration came out on his forehead and rolled down the deep creases of his face.

Thorn fidgeted with annoyance. Gramp fretted the exasperation. Jocelyn thought, "They're making a fool of him—it's awful!"

With abrupt decision she went through the lower hall to the communicating door which led into the Mack's domain. Turning the lock, she went through and marched up the broad stairway, her eyes flashing with indignation.

Not knowing which room was Tally's, she stopped in the center of the upper hallway and softly called his name. A few seconds later a door opposite opened and a pair of sleepy eyes blinked at her.

"TALLY," she implored, "please come down and get your grandfather. He—they're making sport of him. It—it's cruel. Please come and take him away and keep him out of—"

"Your parlor!" Tally finished. "Which reminds me, I did promise you we would stay out of your parlor, didn't I?"

"Yes—but that isn't why I came."

"Isn't it? I don't see why you bother to pretend an interest in Gramp's welfare when the truth is you're ashamed of him."

Jocelyn bit her lip. "Very well. If that's your opinion we'll let it go. Just get him out and keep him out."

She fled down the stairs feeling fearful at his unjust accusation; for it was unjust, she assured herself. Tally and his family had done nothing but annoy and humiliate her since the day of their arrival. Tally had thwarted her every move. He was horrid and mean and egotistical! He had kissed her only in order to humiliate her. He had no doubt humiliated many times over the way she had capitulated that night at the club dance. Well, he could just laugh out of the other side of his mouth, for he was nothing to her but a necessary nuisance that had to be borne until the day she married Geoffrey.

Tally, putting in an appearance ten minutes later, was dressed in well-fitting white flannel trousers and a spotless white shirt. His black hair was dampened and combed. He went over to his grandfather, returning pleasantly greetings which welcomed him, and gently put his arm about the old man.

"Come on, Gramp," he coaxed, "it's past your bedtime."

"Nola wants to go!"

Nola tweaked the old man's ear affectionately and took his other arm. "Time little boys were in bed," she scolded. "And if you're good I'll take you for a long ride tomorrow. Word of honor!"

He winked solemnly, teetering on shaky legs as they lifted him from his chair. "All right, Nola. Can't say 'no' to a pretty gal—never could—"

Supported between Tally and Nola he stumbled away, nodding drowsily.

Now, their chief entertainer gone, the guests milled around the laden dining table, recalling to each other hilarious bits of Gramp's recitals. Jocelyn sighed. Tomorrow these bits would be strewn all over town.

Bob jiggled her elbow. "Don't look so vexed, Lyn. Everything's under control. Everyone is having a swell time!"

Geoff caught her and carried her off for a dance. Intent on matching her steps to his, she relaxed against his solidity, thankful for his substance and familiarity. Maybe Geoff was not exciting nor pulse-stirring, but at least he was a known quantity.

The first warning of more upheaval came from the terrace. Sandy, supposedly asleep in the rear depths of the house, began barking with frightened frenzy. A shrill childish voice ordered him to "Shut up!" Then a small apparition clothed in a long cotton nightgown, holding a squirming white cat under its arm, appeared in the doorway.

Geoff halted. "Good heavens! What now—"

To Have Charge Camp Leach Week-End

by Frances Hanna

MARTHA BARTON

Saturday afternoon Troop 1 and Troop 2 of the Intermediate Girl Scout group will leave Greenville for Camp Leach. Returning from the Rocky Mount rally, this group will go directly to camp and remain until late Sunday afternoon. Anne B. Blank is the senior student lieutenant in charge, assisted by Martha Barton, junior student lieutenant. The staff in direct charge of the outing will be the senior Court of Honor, consisting of Betty Webb, Margaret Johnston, Margaret Lee Duke, Jose Barnes White, Ann Hardee, Evelyn Foley and Frances Kittrell.

ANNE B. BLANK

Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, approximately one hundred Girl Scouts will leave Greenville to attend an Eastern North Carolina rally of Girl Scouts in Rocky Mount. Those cities being represented there are: Greenville, Tarboro, Wilson, Henderson and Rocky Mount. Although the present organization of Scouts has only been in effect since January of this year, three troops from Greenville, composed mostly of Tenderfoot Scouts, will make their introduction at the conference. Considering the short period of time that the troops have been formed, Greenville should be quite proud of the number of its Girl Scouts. Even though the group has not been formed over five months, this city will have the largest aggregation of registered Scouts in attendance; Rocky Mount is second with 6; Tarboro third. The purpose of the rally is to stimulate the spirit of scouting through the state and to acquaint leaders with various programs in different sections of the state. The program of the day will consist of Scouts participating in competitive skills in fields they have studied; and an entertainment program, each town offering some part. Troop 1 from here is presenting two short plays. The first is entitled: "Required—One Man." This participating are: Charlene Moye, Elizabeth Kittrell, Margaret Johnston, Peggy Rose Smith. The second play is called "Anything to Get Votes."

The participants are Betty Webb, Ann Hardee, Janet Evans, Eloise Warren, Frances Kittrell, Mary Elizabeth Austin, Virginia Simpson. Registration will be at 10 o'clock at Braswell Park in Rocky Mount. The day's program will be ended at 4 o'clock with taps.

Crowds Fill Church At Revival Services

by Frances Hanna

The revival at the Free Will Baptist Church here had a record attendance last night, when the building was overflowed. With Council No. 42 Degree of Pochontas attended in a body.

The congregational singing was augmented by visitors from other congregations and choirs.

Evangelist Cloud used as a subject "The Devil's Barbershop" and said in part, "Speaking of Sampson, we find in the 13th chapter an account of Sampson's birth."

"You can play with sin but sin does not play with you. A ship must come to the dry dock to be scaled and we must come back to God and be cleaned. We must stay at the cross of Calvary, that our souls may be pure and clean."

Butte, Mont.—(AP)—There was a doctor in the crowd that stood in the warm spring sunshine gazing upward at men at work removing a cornice from a high building.

"Say, doc," said a gazer, "what's the scientific name for what we would be exposing ourselves to if the sun was stronger?"

"Amygdala helesitis," promptly replied the doctor.

Which means sunburned tonsils.

Washington Daybook
 By Preston Grover

Washington—This current battle between "Senate irreconcilables" and administration forces over neutrality legislation derives its background as well as its personalities and its strategy from one of the truly dramatic battles of American history—the debate on the League of Nations.

When debate on neutrality began early this session there was intense excitement over the outcome of Munich. There was highly idealistic talk of saving the democracies.

In the Senate are two major survivors of that other battle over the league. These two are Borah of Idaho and Johnson of California. They remembered that the league idea started with words about saving democracy. Together they fought the league. Together this time they framed the strategy by which they hope to keep from the President those grants of power carried in the Pittman and Thomas bills.

As in the case of the league, the strategy already is having an influence upon neutrality legislation although the debate is barely started.

Delay is part of the strategy. That is an outright adoption of anti-league methods. Borah and the irreconcilables kept the pot boiling for months before ever the vote came on the league.

Slump in Idealism
 There was a "slump in idealism," as writers of the time called it. Gone was much of the sentiment to evolve machinery from the war designed to make the world safe for democracy. By the time the league pact was submitted to the Senate July 10, 1919, more than one-third of the Senate—enough to block ratification—had already plumped for reservations.

Delay tactics went into force, coupled with the same "educational" processes adopted in the present consideration of neutrality legislation. Contrary to custom, the hearings of the Foreign Relations committee on the league in 1919 were public. Twenty years later—against contrary to custom—the hearings on neutrality have been open and widely reported.

But it also happens that in the present neutrality debate, administration supporters also had the advantage of experience in the league affair. Franklin D. Roosevelt was then assistant secretary of the navy. In 1920, as Democratic candidate for vice-president, he carried the torch for the league.

Profit From Experience
 Profiting from Wilson's experience, the present administration has avoided an uncompromising attitude on neutrality.

It is generally accepted that the Pittman bill is at least the temporary goal of the administration. Its principal effect will be to aid England and France in time of war.

In the Pacific it would open the munitions gates to Japan, but Senator Pittman, who is chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, would handle that by a special embargo on arms shipments to Japan.

The league finally was drowned under an ocean of amendments. A reservoir of amendments is awaiting the Pittman plan to aid the democracies.

And what will be the outcome?

SHORT SHOTS

Raleigh, May 19.—Lawyers themselves under suspicion as a class cannot undertake to set up ideal or imaginary standards when they undertake to pass upon the conduct of another lawyer, it is vigorously contended by Durham's R. O. Everett in a brief filed with the State Supreme court in behalf of Paul Escoffery, Negro lawyer who has been disbarred by verdict of a bar committee and, on appeal, by a jury verdict in Superior court. The Escoffery appeal will be argued next week.

"This proceeding is a legal matter," says Mr. Everett. "The respondent is about to be deprived of valuable property rights, and the charges must be treated in the ordinary legal understanding. The lawyers cannot have ideal or imaginary standards when they undertake to pass upon the conduct of another lawyer, nor can a lawyer be required to attain that degree of perfection as Caesar did his wife, not only to be pure, but to be beyond suspicion, when the whole profession, according to its own admission stands under suspicion before the public tribunal.

Lawyers are neither Don Quixotes nor Sir Arthurs of the Round Table; neither are they devils. They are average individuals, dominated by the same motives and impulses as the average citizen and in the dealings of a lawyer with his client imaginary and unattainable standards should not be set up. The law does not expect it, but they should be judged by the standards and community sets for other individuals occupying the same relationship.

Commissioner of Agriculture W. Kerr Scott and his department are not going to get any of the worst of it from the coordinating committee of 13 that will deal with and handle any existing matters of duplication, overlapping or disagreement, and such controversial matters as may arise in the future between the Department and State College.

Representative E. A. Rasberry of Greene county thinks that State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson would run ahead of the field for governor, insofar as the Rasberry section of the state is concerned.

"His connection with every county official through the local government commission would give Mr. Johnson the inside track, I think," said the "Sheriff."

The Greene county man also said he does not think the Treasurer will run.

The Colonial Room of the Sir Walter was packed with safety appliances of the very latest and most effective type—being shown in connection with the Industrial Safety Conference now going on under sponsorship of the North Carolina Industrial Commission.

There were grim reminders, however, that even the best of safety programs doesn't completely eliminate hazards and accidents. There was one display of a wide variety of artificial arms and legs.

Members of the legislature just can't seem to stay away from Raleigh, even during the off-season. Recent visitors spied by your correspondent included Lieutenant Governor W. P. Horton, Representative Jim Vogler of Charlotte, State Senator John Larkins of Jones county, and "Sheriff" Rasberry from Greene.

There are several political observers hereabout who are willing to bet even money that when the dust has cleared away the 1940 gubernatorial field will be composed of Lieutenant Governor Horton, Raleigh's J. M. Broughton and Wilmington's Mayor Thomas E. Cooper.

'WE WILL FIGHT ALL IMPERIALISM' reads sign carried in recent Buenos Aires parade of the Alliance of Nationalist Youth (Alianza De La Juventud Nacionalista). Observers say Fascists support group. Marchers promise to "build a new Argentina."

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT, this and other Albanian soldiers who had a country of their own before "Good Friday," April 7, 1939, when Mussolini's legions took over Albania's 10,629 square miles, recently visited Rome. There, Italians found amusement in the traditional skipper uniform. Soldiers of the former royal Albanian guard took oath in Italy's army.

REPRESENTING THE CIO of which her father, John L. Lewis, is head, Kathryn Lewis (left) hailed 40,000 workers and Popular Front party members in a recent celebration at Santiago, Chile. Her words had to be repeated in Spanish, however, by this translator. She said that "North American labor is watching Chile's effort to establish firmly the Popular Front."

New Bern Defeats Greenville 6-5 In 10-Inning Contest

GREENIES TIE SCORE IN 9TH

Two in Eighth And Three in Ninth Only Local Runs

Greenville came from behind in the eighth and ninth innings at New Bern last night to knot the count at five-all, but the Bears pushed over one in the tenth after holding the local scoreless in their half of the over-time frame and won 6-5.

The same Tiny Osborne, who kept Don King from getting a no-hit game here Wednesday night, scored the winning run. Osborne hit a Texas leaguer over third and reached second. Queen was hit by a pitched ball and Gene Kessler, pinch hitter scored the winning run.

The Greenies tied the score in the ninth in a rally which included a two-run homer by Manager Rube Wilson—the blow that tied up the game.

The Greenies threatened in the tenth on McCullough's wildness, but the hurler was relieved by Darwin Cobb who retired the Greenies without any scoring.

EAGLES IN WIN OVER MARTINS

Wilson Defeats Tarboro; Snow Hill Victorious

Kinston's lowly Eagles turned back Williamston league-leading Martins behind the five-hit, one-run pitching of Bill Herring. This was the fourth victory of the 1939 season for the Kinston club.

Tarboro suffered a 4-3 setback at the hands of the Wilson Tobs in Wilson yesterday. The Serpents loaded the bases in the ninth, but Milton Jirak stopped a hard-hit ball and the game was over.

This first such school was formally opened on July 3, 1839, at Lexington, Mass. but within a few years was moved to its present site in Framingham.

Representatives of teachers' colleges from all over the United States are expected to attend this celebration.

LEGION BACKS JUNIOR TEAMS

Seventy-five Boys Attending Thursday Practices

All Pitt county boys who were not 17 years of age prior to January 1 are urged to go out to Third Street school any afternoon at 3:30 and try out for the American Legion junior baseball team.

An estimated 75 youths went out yesterday for the first practice, but practically all of them are from Greenville, and sponsors desire to have all sections of the county represented.

Bo Farley, well-known Greenville athlete and coach, is in charge of the boys. In addition to the first-string team, it is estimated that several club teams will have to be formed since so many boys are out for the team. In this manner, the various teams will be able to have games among themselves.

The regular season will open on June 5, with games to be played between Wilson, Goldsboro, Snow Hill, Rocky Mount, Kinston and Greenville. The winner in this group will play the winners in other groups until the state winner is decided.

Gibraltars A Fort With out Fear, And A Town In Shadow Of Daath

Here's the Rock of Gibraltar as it would look from an enemy plane. The harbor is closed in times of emergency by booms swung between the ends of the moles, or seawalls.

(By The AP Feature Service) If the 17,000 civilians who live in the rickety buildings at the base of British Gibraltar are jittery, the world may well forgive them. For these folks know that batteries of Big Berthas, aimed at them right now, probably will start dropping tons of explosives around them within a few minutes, if a European war is declared.

They hear that German, Italian and Spanish guns are in place at Algeiras, seven miles across the bay. And they believe more guns are hidden in the Spanish Moroccan mountains 15 miles across the strait.

Invulnerable, Says Expert Nearby in the Atlantic, the Nazi navy is holding target practice. And in the Mediterranean, Italian warships and submarines are maneuvering.

But British officials aren't worried. They recall that they've held Gibraltar for 300 years. And they believe that—with French help—they still can fight off all comers. A British naval expert sums it up thus:

"In my opinion, Gibraltar is invulnerable. It can return blow for blow, and it's very improbable that the lobbing of shells and bombs into the harbor... would seriously interfere with normal work in the dockyards or with the movement of ships."

Gib is a three-mile-long, 1,400-foot-high, primary marble crag jutting into the gateway to the Mediterranean from the Spanish peninsula. The town of Gibraltar clings to the western side, behind an excellent harbor.

The Dutch Helped Unarmed British bobbies in the same uniforms worn on Piccadilly—patrol the narrow streets. But the residents, who speak a jumbled Spanish, regard them as foreigners. Turbaned Moors, Spanish soldiers, Indians, Senegal Negroes and American tourists rub elbows.

The British grabbed Gib—with Dutch help—from Spain in 1702, and have never been ousted. Their most formidable challenge came in 1779 when they withstood a harrowing siege by Spain that lasted four years. At that time they carved galleries into the side of the Rock.

Now the Rock is honeycombed with caves and galleries where powerful guns are in place. Recently, anti-aircraft guns were placed near the summit to cope with attacking bombers. On a level area near the Spanish border a landing field is being rushed to completion.

Every day guns on the Rock fire salvoes that shake the town, at targets in the straits. Residents open their windows just before firing time—to prevent the glass from shattering—then go unconcernedly about their business.

Puffs of Smoke A tunnel that will shelter 1,200 persons is being pushed through the Rock. This, plus the numerous caves, will accommodate the whole population, if necessary. Every resident has a gas mask. And several months supply of food has been stored.

Anyone who has read Richard Halliburton's account, in "Royal Road to Romance," of his unhappy attempt to slip past guards and photograph fortifications, realizes the rigid precautions the British take. The only clues outsiders have in trying to locate the guns are the puffs of smoke they can see during the daily target practice.

Low-flying planes identify every ship passing through the straits. Civilians in the town are under constant surveillance and any questionable characters are sent packing.

By such precautions as these, the British hope to keep their powder dry for any future siege.

PLAN COTTON COUNCILS FOR 61 N. C. COUNTIES

(Continued from page one) Upchurch said. More or less on the political side, the council plans to support, aid and foster efforts to bring about a modification of national transportation tariffs and freight rates, so as to give the cotton belt of America more favorable freight rates, according to the resolution of establishment, which is to say, in short, that it will fight for the removal of rate discriminations against the South.

It will also demand, if a federal processing tax on cotton is proposed that it be accompanied by provisions for a compensatory tax on all competitive materials.

For its educational campaign, the council is seeking a budget of $250,000, of which North Carolina's quota is $8,800.

Of the proposed campaign, Mr. Upchurch said: "An intensive educational campaign on the uses of cotton will be part of our program. It is estimated that more than 15,000,000 people of the cotton-producing states look to cotton for their livelihood. Their prosperity depends upon the increased use of cotton and cotton products."

Counties in which units have already been organized are Cleveland, Edgecombe, Halifax, Hoke, Iredell, Johnston, Mecklenburg, Nash, Pitt, Robeson, Rowan, Wake, Wayne and Wilson.

Those in which the council proposes to form units are Alamance, Alexander, Anson, Beaufort, Bertie, Bladen, Brunswick, Burke, Cabarrus, Carteret, Catawba, Camden, Chatham, Chowan, Craven, Cumberland, Currituck, Davidson, Davie, Duplin, Franklin, Gaston, Gates, Greene, Harnett, Hertford, Hyde, Jones, Lee, Lenoir, Lincoln, Montgomery, Moore, Northampton, Onslow, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Polk, Richmond, Rutherford, Sampson, Scotland, Stanly, Union, Vance, Warren and Washington.

GIRL, 5, BECOMES A MOTHER

This exclusive picture shows Lina Medina, 5-year-old Peruvian Indian child, and her 5.96-pound son (in arms of nurse) born by Caesarean operation in the presence of 60 physicians at Lima maternity hospital. Picture was made the day after the infant's birth. Terming the case one of the strangest gynecological events ever known, Dr. Hipolito Larrabure, the hospital's chief surgeon, said the age of the child mother is corroborated by the fact she is three feet one inch tall and still has her first set of teeth. He said she is a little over five years of age.

L. G. Turrou, former F.B.I. agent, technical director on "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," talks it over with Paul Lukas. The picture opens at the Pitt Theatre today.
