AUTO WORKERS LEFT IDLE BY BRIGGS STRIKE

Approximately 65,000 Affected in Motor Industry

STRIKE ORDERED IN BODY PLANTS

Action, However, Results in Widespread Idleness in Highly Integrated Business.

Detroit, May 23.—(AP)—Approximately 65,000 automobile workers were thrown into idleness today as a strike in seven plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Company caused widespread lay-offs in the highly integrated motor industry.

Chrysler Corporation announced it would shut down 10 plants in Detroit, New Castle, Ind., and Kokomo, Ind., and would be unable to operate any of its units here except Dodge trucks.

The spread of idleness resulted from the cutting off of automobile bodies which the Briggs company supplies to a large part of the motor car industry.

President States Business Policies

Washington, May 23.—(AP)—President Roosevelt left with the American Retail Federation today the assurance that America "is in an excellent position to move forward," impelled by "the principles and objectives for which we have struggled for the last six years."

In a broad restatement of his business and financial policies, the Chief Executive last night told a banquet audience of 1,000 small town and big city merchants.

DISPATCH AID TO SUBMARINE

Craft Down And In Trouble In 240 Feet Of Water

Portsmouth, N. H., May 23.—(AP)—The United States navy submarine Squidus, with 82 men aboard, was reported "down" and "in trouble" in 240 feet of water today off White Island, about five miles southeast of the Isle of Shoals, off the New Hampshire coast.

The naval tug Wandank and the submarine rescue ship Falcon were immediately dispatched to the scene.

The Squidus went out with 82 men aboard on a routine "dive" at 8:40 a. m. this morning and failed to come up after an hour—usually a dive limit under trial circumstances.

Admiral C. W. Cole, commandant of the navy yard, ordered the submarine Sculpin to try and make contact with the submerged ship and at 12:15 p. m. the first contact was made after the Sculpin discovered a red smoke bomb signal on the surface of the water, indicating the Squidus was in distress.

The Sculpin learned in a telephone conversation with the Squidus that during a deep dive the induction valve was not closed and water entered the crews' quarters and after the engine room.

The Squidus was launched last September. It is 292 feet long and 26 feet in beam.

Ritch Favors Abernathy For U. N. C. Comptroller

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, May 23.—When University of North Carolina trustees convene early in June to elect a comptroller they will have one certain nomination before them—that of Leroy F. Abernathy.

The Asheville oil distributor will be placed before the trustees for consideration by Representative and Trustee Marvin L. Ritch. This isn't guesswork. It's the unequivocal statement of politics from Mecklenburg who surprised most people by keeping exceptionally quiet during this year's General Assembly session and who amazed even more by getting himself elected a trustee.

British Foreign Secretary's Decision to Champion More Binding Treaty Said to Have Followed Round-Robin Talks With Delegates of Three Great Powers

Geneva, May 23.—(AP)—British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax was reliably reported today to have decided to champion in tomorrow's British cabinet meeting a closer form of mutual aid pact among Britain, France and Soviet Russia than Britain hitherto has found acceptable.

Lord Halifax's decision was said to have been reached after last-minute round-robin talks among delegates of the three great powers here for the League council session.

These informants said he had been influenced by Russia's refusal to consider any essential deviation from its insistence on comprehensive mutual assistance guarantees and by strong French pressure.

The influence of the French general staff and especially of its chief, General Maurice Gamelin, probable generalissimo of British and French land forces in any major war, was said to be in favor of early conclusion of a pact.

Lord Halifax's talks in Geneva with the Russian delegate, Ambassador to London Maisky, French Foreign Minister Bonnet and the Polish, Turkish and Rumanian delegates were understood to have convinced him that the projected three-power combination must be concluded as early as possible.

Prime Minister Chamberlain in the House of Commons has insisted that Great Britain always had advocated "reciprocity" in the mutual aid negotiations, but that misunderstandings had kept "a sort of veil or wall" between Russia and Britain.

Meanwhile, League of Nations officials announced after a meeting of the committee charged with supervising affairs of Danzig that it had been decided to send the League's high commissioner, Professor Charles Burckhardt de Reynold, back to the Free City.

They said he was instructed to make a report on the Danzig situation. The committee includes France, Britain and Sweden.

In Favor of Delay In Announcements

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, May 23.—At least one highly probable candidate for Governor in next year's Democratic primary is in complete harmony and accord with Governor Clyde Hovey's ideas regarding deferred announcements and a short campaign.

Tom Cooper, Wilmington's colorful mayor, came to Raleigh from the Cape Fear section, went into a huddle with the Governor and almost immediately thereafter told all who would listen to him that he agrees with the idea of putting off formal announcements until around the end of this year.

Tom just barely stopped short of making the flat, unequivocal statement that he is going to run, and on occasion seemed to realize that he was all but violating the principle at the same time that he advocated it.

He did catch himself every now and then and add "I run" to some flat statement he had just made about what "I'm going to do during the campaign."

Mayor Cooper refused to appear serious about the subject for longer than a minute or so at a time as he talked to your correspondent, but underneath the surface there was clear a vein of serious, studied determination to make the race it might now that there is only one thing—except death—which will keep him out—realization that he cannot raise the money needed to finance an adequate campaign.

For, after all, His Honor knows that it costs plenty (legitimately spent) to have a chance of being elected Governor of North Carolina.

HOPE TO DROP MILLION FROM RELIEF ROLLS

Improved Business Expected to Utilize Workers

ADMINISTRATOR OF W. P. A. HEARD

Col. Harrington Testifies Before House Committee Hearing Request For Funds.

Washington, May 23.—(AP)—Col. D. C. Harrington, the WPA administrator, predicted today that further improvement in private business would enable the WPA to reduce its rolls from an average of 3,000,000 persons in the current fiscal year to an average of 2,000,000 next year.

He made this forecast to reporters after appearing before a House appropriation sub-committee which is considering President Roosevelt's request for $1,500,000,000 to operate federal works relief in the next 12 months period starting July 1.

Harrington said the sum asked by Mr. Roosevelt was one-third less than the $2,250,000,000 received by WPA during the current year.

Other developments: Acting Chairman Bloom D.-N.Y. and Rep. Fish (R.-N.Y.) of the House Foreign Affairs committee, joined in a request that the State Department protest to Great Britain any change in the status of the Jewish national home in Palestine.

Chairman Warren Madden of the Labor Relations Board, told the House Labor Committee that A. F. of L. rather than C. I. O. unions have turned to the board for help most frequently of late. He criticized changes which the A. F. of L. has proposed in the act.

The State Department disclosed that Great Britain has passed up an $85,670,765.05 payment on her war debt, due today.

Secretary Wallace told the American Retail Federation that for 10 years "capital has been shell-shocked as a result of the exploding of the boom of the 20's and, he said, was still timid."

Under ordinary circumstances, he said, business would have recovered by his time, "but the general world picture with a war alarm being sounded in Europe almost every week has generated a new set of fears."

President Roosevelt accepted today the resignation of James W. Morris, assistant attorney general and nominated him to be associate justice of the U. S. District court for the District of Columbia. The judgeship is a new one created by Congress. Morris was born in Smithfield, N. C., and at one time practiced law in Tampa, Fla.

PUBLIC URGED TO COOPERATE

Business Interests Are Asked to Support Banquet Meet

Edw. Batchelor, chairman of the Community Tobacco Market committee, which is sponsoring a community dinner at the college Thursday night for the purpose of creating city-wide interest in the continued growth of the Greenville tobacco market, today called on the merchants and other business firms of the city to cooperate in the movement.

Mr. Batchelor lamented the fact that the co-operation in the business section of the city had not been what had been expected and urged the business men to get behind the movement, purchase tickets to the dinner and "talk it up."

Unless the men "up-town" get behind the dinner it will not accomplish the desired results, he added.

"This is not a meeting of the tobacco interests, but one for the business interests to show those persons directly interested in the tobacco industry that the entire city is behind them in their efforts to make Greenville an even larger marketing center," declared Chairman Batchelor, adding "it is up to you to show the tobacco industry where you stand. We all realize the importance of the tobacco market in Greenville, but now is the time to go into action, let these people know we are with them in their undertaking to expand the local market into the largest in the state."

"It is a question of all for one and one for all, and unless the business interests exhibit such a spirit they will be falling in their duty to the city as a whole."

Mr. Batchelor explained that everything that helps the market helps all Greenville business and added that by boosting and helping the market we boost and help our own businesses.

Carolina Is Fine Field For News Photographers

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, May 23.—An increasing number of editors of national publications are now sending their own staff photographers to North Carolina for special pictures and layouts, as a result of the activities of the advertising division of the Department of Conservation and Development.

"Pictures made by our photographers and sent out by the news bureau are helping attract attention to North Carolina," Bill Sharpe, manager of the bureau said today. Among recent pictures sent out and accepted as special features, Mr. Sharpe cited: Pictures of the college girls who won prizes in the annual style show sponsored each year by the textile school at State College, together with a story of the show. Third Largest Steel Producer in Nation Strikes Back at CIO, Its Chieftains and Constituents in Suit Seeking to Recover Damages of 1937 Strike.

Cleveland, May 23.—(AP)—Republic Steel Corporation, principal target of the Congress of Industrial Organization in its 1937 strike against "little steel," struck back today with a $7,500,000 damage suit.

Republic, the nation's third largest steel producer, in a federal court action, named John Lewis, CIO chieftain; Philip Murray, CIO vice president, and other officers of the CIO and its constituents, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America. These organizations also were named defendants, as were approximately 700 Ohioans whom Republic identified in a statement to the press as "individual strikers and union officers."

The steel company, headed by Tom Girdler, charged the defendants conspired in 1937 to force complete or partial closing of its plants in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Illinois, New York and elsewhere.

The defendant unions all were described as unincorporated associations active in the strike, which at its height made 100,000 men idle in the Great Lakes area. The strike ended in Ohio when national guardsmen were called out to protect men desiring to return to work and it soon collapsed in the other states involved without CIO obtaining the signed bargaining contract it sought.

In the suit, Republic claimed actual damages of $2,500,000 and said it was entitled to treble damages, costs and attorneys' fees under the Clayton act.

Today's suit by Republic is one of many arising from the 1937 steel strike in which 16 were killed.

Increase Seen in 1939 Peanut Crop

Raleigh, May 23.—A 5 to 10 per cent increase in North Carolina's peanut acreage was forecast today by E. C. Blair, agronomist of the State College Extension Service.

Blair's prediction on a report of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Blair said the increase will be the largest in Pasquotank and other counties along the Virginia border, although Sampson and Robeson have indicated sizeable increases. In these southern counties, growers are substituting peanuts for cotton sufficiently to increase their peanut acreage by 5 to 10 per cent.

In other peanut producing counties, the State College agronomist said, growers are planting approximately the same acreage this year as they have in past years.

Cold, rainy weather somewhat retarded planting operations over much of the Virginia-North Carolina belt during the past week, although in Southern North Carolina the weather was almost ideal.

"If the weather is favorable this week and next," Blair said, "it is expected that nearly all planting will be completed in this state by the first of June."

The bureau reported that stocks of farmers' grade peanuts of good quality continue to lessen until now it is estimated that perhaps three-quarters of the remaining stock may be called shelling stock.

Corn is attacked by more insect pests than any other crop grown in North Carolina.

LEAF EXPORTS TO SIAM MAY BE CURTAILED

Duties Increased and Cigarette Excise Tax Imposed

FLUE-CURED TYPE TO BE AFFECTED

Developments Expected To Curtail Consumption of the American-Grown Leaf in Country.

Washington, May 23.—(AP)—The Agriculture Department reported today increased tobacco duties in Siam, combined with imposition of an excise tax on cigarettes and the establishment of a monopoly for the sale of leaf tobacco, probably would have unfavorable repercussions on consumption of American flue-cured leaf in that country.

Siam's consumption of flue-cured leaf, largely of American origin, increased from 5,000,000 pounds in 1933-34 to approximately 6,500,000 in 1937-38, with actual imports of American leaf of that type jumping from 1,000,000 to 5,000,000 pounds.

The department said the import duty on leaf tobacco was increased in February from 37 to 45 cents a pound and in the following month the Siam government placed an excise tax on both domestic manufactured and imported cigarettes.

These developments, it is expected, will not only increase the price of leaf tobacco and of cigarettes, but will tend to encourage the domestic production of flue-cured leaf and its substitution for American leaf, the department said in a statement.

Chapter 20
Disinherited

FROM being a rather talkative person who liked to air his profound views, Thorn had become a person who indulged in long periods of morose silence, during which he stared with forlorn eyes at the distant rim of sea and sky.

"No, His car was gone when I came in from the club. I thought he'd probably gone in town for dinner. Why?"

"Oh, we had one of our arguments this afternoon. We were both pretty nasty. I've been uneasy ever since. He had a peculiar look when he stomped off."

"What sort of look?"

"Oh, it's hard to describe. Like a man who has suddenly made up his mind to do something rash and impulsive."

"I hear his car now," Lyn said, rising and starting toward the open windows. "Your imagination is working overtime, Thorn."

"He isn't putting his car in the garage, though," Geoff put in. "He must be going out again."

"Then all three of them heard a girl's voice, excited and protesting, mingle with Bob's low, assuring tones. Thorn's eyes sought his sister's with apprehension."

Bob pulled open the screen door and came in, his right arm firmly about the waist of Gretchen Landau who looked breathless and radiantly charming in a becoming ensemble of blue and white.

Bob's eyes swept the three persons facing him.

"Blessings and congratulations are in order," he announced. "Meet Mrs. Robert Russell, folks."

Gretchen, her great brown eyes wistful and anxious, smiled with hopeful friendliness into suddenly frozen countenances.

Jocelyn moistened her lips; became conscious that her fingernails were digging into the palms of her hands. "Bob, how—how could you—without telling us?" she whispered.

Thorn, whose voice should have stayed lost, said: "Married! Where? When?"

"Tonight at Yuma, Arizona. We planned over and back. Well, why don't you say it and get it over with?"

"I prefer talking to you when you're not present," Thorn declared with dignity.

"Anything you have to say can be said right now."

"Never, Never, Never"

"VERY well, if you insist, but remember you asked for it. Bob, you married out of your class. You married into a family we do not acknowledge socially or any other way. You made your choice without consulting me; therefore, you can't make the best of it. You can't bring her here to live. I won't have her family over-running my property. I won't give you any more money whatsoever. As trustee of the estate, I can refuse you. You chose her and her family, entirely disregarding your own, so take your belongings and move in with them and stay away from me. That's all, Robert."

Jocelyn cried out in swift protest against his harshness but Bob only grinned and said: "Never mind, Lyn. Nobody could do any good with the stubborn, pompous jackass! I don't want him any more than he wants me. I'll get out and be glad to! Come on, Gretchen." Taking her hand he drew her toward the stairway.

Halfway across the room Gretchen stopped, her face sullen with anger, yet somehow pitying. To Thorn and Jocelyn she declared: "How foolish you are! Bob and I love each other and we would love you, too, if you'd let us. You are hard and selfish and cruel to one of your own flesh and blood. You are hurting us, yes—but hurting yourselves more. I'm sorry for you."

She went on with Bob, her head high, her frail young body straight and proud.

Jocelyn caught hold of Thorn's arm. "You needn't have been so harsh, Thorn! Bob is our brother." His heavy face set into an expression of self-righteousness. "His wife will soon make a Mack out of him, never worry. I don't want to hear any more about it, Lyn. I'm going to bed."

"Thorn is right," Geoff averred. "Bob is still a child. When he has to work for a living and stay with his in-laws, he'll soon get enough of this hasty marriage and come running back, wondering how he can get rid of her."

"Oh, you're impossibly stupid, both of you!" Lyn stormed. "Don't you know Bob any better than that—He'll never come back. Never, never, never! Didn't you see his eyes? He is happy! He loves her! I'm beginning to think we are all stupid, intolerant fools."

"Nola is gone," Bob said. "Jocelyn looked from Geoff to Thorn, saw that her words had evoked merely a bewildered, patient indulgence from them. She ran from the room."

Bob and Gretchen, perceiving the lighted windows, cautiously opened the back door into the Mack's much-lived-in kitchen. Tears filmed Gretchen's eyes at the scene before them, so different from the one they had just left. Her mother had spread the great square table with a bright blue cloth and had placed in its exact center an angel-food cake with a miniature bride and groom iced in pink and blue on the top.

"Oh, Bob, isn't it sweet?" she whispered, slipping her hand into his. "I wonder if Mama and the others are asleep?"

A delighted cackle followed her last words. The door into the next room burst open and Moms and Gramp and Tally confronted them.

"I couldn't keep your secret, children," Mrs. Mack confessed. "I told Gramp and Tally at dinner time. They were so excited about having Mister Bob for her 'daddy' I promised to wake her when you got home."

"Cantankerous Idiot"

GRETCHEN ran into her mother's arms, while both Gramp and Tally tried to shake Bob's hand at the same time.

Tally grinned. "Gee, Bob, I'm glad to have you in the family! I couldn't have picked a better husband for Gretchen myself."

Gramp hobbled over the cupboard, rummaged among the supplies a minute, then triumphantly held up a jug of red wine. "Well, get out that glass and we'll drink to the kids' wedding."

As if loath to have her out of touch for a moment, Bob held Gretchen on his knees while they ate and drank. Gramp, reminiscing, went into long detail about his own wedding to O'Connell.

Gretchen laughed, running her fingers through Bob's hair, touching her soft, pale cheek against his. Gramp halted his rambling narrative to ask: "Say, you two ain't going to get too all-fired high and mighty 'gain on the other side of the fence?"

Gretchen slipped her arm about Bob's shoulders and squeezed hard. She said, her eyes defiant. "We aren't going to live on the other side, Gramp. We're going to live right here with all of you."

"If that ain't the best news I've heard. But say... what about them folks of Bob's? 'Pears they don't hanker to truck with us folks."

Tally sobered. "What did happen, Bob? Mind telling us?"

"No, I don't. Thorn had a fit. Said he wouldn't dole out any more money and ordered me to get out."

"And your sister?" Tally urged. "Did she feel the same way?"

"I don't think so. That's the queer part of it. I thought she would side with Thorn, but she gave him the devil! Didn't do any good, though. Thorn's stubborn, bull-headed and class-conscious."

"Now, Bob, just give your brother a little time to get used to the idea of your marriage," Mrs. Mack advised, her motherly face tolerant and wisely serene. "He'll come apologizing and want you to come back. Seems like folks don't get used to new things right off."

Gramp snorted. "Thorn is a good name for that cantankerous idiot! Never did like him no more'n he liked me."

"Steady, Gramp," Tally soothed. "Bob is welcome to live here as long as he wants to stay." His eyes appraised his new brother-in-law shrewdly. "You could go to court and try to get your share of the inheritance, Bob."

"I'd rather not. I'd rather work. Although—I, Bob shrugged ruefully—"I don't know what on earth I'm equipped to do."

Tally smiled. "There's plenty of work to do right here if you want to help me. How'd you like to be a farmer, Bob?"

"I'd like it."

"Then it's settled. Get yourself some working clothes tomorrow and I'll make you a partner in the vegetable, fruit, and dairy business."

WHAT IT MEANS: TAX TALK

By MORGAN M. BEATTY, AP Feature Service Writer
Washington.—Tax talk this late in the spring of the year 1939 means more patches for the seat of Uncle Sam's tax trousers.

Those tax trousers are already filled with patches from gallus-hitch to cuff. Everybody admits they're too full of patches. Everybody who knows anything about taxes agrees that new trousers—a complete new tax system—is a desperate need.

But it is simpler for the Congress and an administration—to talk and patch and patch and talk. Also it's safer. The terrible task of designing a complete new system would take months, perhaps years.

And when it was all put together, there'd be no guarantee that it would fit. And Congress would be right where it is now, taking it on the chin for not solving that enigma known as the nation's tax problem.

The American tax problem has been accumulating for 150 years. Through all those years, the tax structure has been building, willy-nilly, a piece at a time. Nobody stopped to work out a pattern. Now nobody seems to have the courage to do it.

The result: Today no citizen knows how many taxes or how much taxes he pays. Leastways no reputable statistician is willing to stick his neck out and estimate the average citizen's tax bill. Taxes are hidden in tariffs, cigarettes, automobiles, tires, parts, cameras, movie-tickets, lipstick—nearly everything you buy.

Panics Slash Returns
During panics, such as those in 1893 and '97 and 1907 and '21, receipts fell off with the national income, and the federal government went deep into the red. But along came good years after each depression, and increasing tax payments, or higher tax rates, paid the government out—or nearly out—of debt.

But not so with the latest depression. Something happened to our economic system. The tax system, patchwork that it was, went completely hawwire with business.

At the same time social services and relief for destitute citizens became a necessity. They cost money, big money. Better national defense in a topsy turvy world seemed imperative. That, too, costs big money.

Tax rates have been upped steadily, but to little avail. Alcohol taxes returned to carry part of the load, but they, too, fell short.

The result today is a 40-billion-dollar national debt, climbing at the rate of four billion dollars a year.

The ideal answer to the problem is prosperity. Tax receipts go up with the national income. An 80-billion-dollar national income with the present rates would solve the problem. That income would be twice our national income at the bottom of the depression, and would practically double tax receipts. It's very fitting that once each year we should put on a poppy to show that we still remember these dead and still are devoted to the ideals for which they gave their lives.

"Every World war veteran, of course, will join with the other patriotic citizens in wearing a poppy on Poppy Day and contributing as generously as his means will afford to the welfare of those who are still suffering from the war, the disabled veterans, their families and the families of the dead. The little red flowers of remembrance will be offered to us by the women of the American Legion Auxiliary, our wives, mothers, sisters and daughters, who will work through the day as unpaid volunteers.

"We veterans should set an example by being among the first to have a poppy on our coat in honor of our fallen comrades."

In a 321-mile race from Appeldern, Holland, to Berlin, a German racing pigeon averaged a speed of 60 miles an hour.

HIGHEST RATE IN WILMINGTON

Electricity Users Pay Most in N. C.; High Point 2nd

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL.
Raleigh, May 22.—Latest figures of the Federal Power Commission, which has made a thorough analysis of power rates in all communities, show that of all the electricity users in North Carolina cities of more than 30,000, Wilmingtonians pay the most, closely pressed by High Point's residents.

The vagaries of varying rates in varying consumption brackets cause Durhamites who use more than 500 kilowatt hours per month to pay more than is charged either in Wilmington or High Point. Residents of the Bull City are also soaked hardest when they use as little as 15 kilowatt hours, but in the middle brackets they get off somewhat easier.

Incidentally the variations in rates for varying consumptions bring about some queer quirks—as is shown by the fact that Asheville and Raleigh residents pay far less, between 15 and 100 kilowatts than do the good burghers of Charlotte, Winston-Salem and Greensboro, but once the 250 k.w.h. mark is passed the last three cities have rates well below the Asheville-Raleigh level.

Of course these Federal Power Commission figures aren't novel or startling—the figures have been given out from the State Utilities Commission quite often; but they are a bit timely just now in connection with the High Point power controversy. At the risk of being branded "a tool of the power trust" it might be pointed out that the cities served by the two major companies of the state—Duke and Carolina—have the lowest rates.

On the theory that the average residential customer uses between 100 and 250 k.w.h. per month, here is a comparison of the bills in the eight largest cities of North Carolina for those amounts of electricity:

Firemen Hindered By Curious Public

Both Acting Police Chief J. L. Whichard and Fire Chief George Gardner today called attention to the dangers arising from citizens rushing to fires, hindering firemen from reaching the blaze or leaving after it has been extinguished.

A fire in Cooperneid, Negro section, Saturday night, which destroyed the house occupied by Andrew White, provoked the warnings.

After the fire, which was on a dead-end street, firemen were delayed 30 or 45 minutes in returning to the station. "If a fire had broken out in some other part of town it would have been just too bad," declared Chief Gardner. The Negro house had burned down before firemen arrived. The loss was estimated at $600.

"It looks as if we might have to make some arrests," commented Acting Police Chief Whichard, who said that firemen were greatly handicapped in going to and from fires

Post Commander Backs Poppy Day

World war veterans of Greenville were urged to remember and pay tribute to their comrades who died in the war by wearing a poppy on Poppy Day, Saturday, May 27, in an appeal issued today by Dr. J. L. Winstead, commander of Pitt county post No. 39 of the American Legion.

"The poppy is the memorial flower of the World war dead," said Commander Winstead, "and brings back visions of the poppy-studded fields of France and Belgium where so many of our comrades gave their lives in the nation's service. It is

Washington Daybook

By Preston Groper

Washington—Remaining a presidential candidate for a whole year without getting too far out in front or too far behind is ticklish business, if done right, and a heap of mistakes can be made before the 1940 national conventions.

Just now a candidate with a "Von" as part of his name would be sunk before the start. "Van," as in Senator Vandenberg, is no handicap, however. That is Dutch and they haven't gone Nazi or Communist in Holland.

Presidential candidates can still kiss babies, with moderation. It is good build up and keeps a man's face in the papers—but the babies MUST be under 17. Senator Reynolds of North Carolina isn't a presidential candidate—unless very recently—but a couple of years back he kissed the late Jean Harlow for publicity purposes. North Carolina didn't like their Bob kissing Jean on Page 1. They let him know about it during the campaign, but they didn't quite toss him out of the Senate.

A candidate can do well for himself on a public issue, but it ought to have a lasting favor.

Foreign affairs are risky and the President always has most of the aces in that game. Vandenberg, a Republican entry, and Senator Clark of Missouri, a Democrat, have gone 100 per cent isolationist. That is taking the long chance.

Anybody being pro-English just now is likely to make enemies of a lot of German and Irish stock in this country—to be pro-German is to be considered a Nazi.

You Have To Be Good

Best bet: Be 100 per cent American, for the Monroe Doctrine, against entangling alliances, for a Navy second to none and for an army and air corps strong enough to protect the American Empire. Protect American interests everywhere but assure that one drop of American soldier blood shall be spilt on foreign soil.

There are contradictions in that, but if a presidential candidate can't get around them he isn't clever enough to be President anyway.

On domestic affairs, cut the budget to the bone, out the Bureau, but discharge not a single deserving Federal employee. For the first time in six years a candidate can be for business, big and little, but not TOO much. Harry Hopkins, now Secretary of Commerce, is working that side of the street.

Lowering taxes without reducing revenue is a good summer speech pot-boiler. Another summer trick is to catch a trout about eight feet from a camera.

Some doubt whether young Tom Dewey's caterpillar moustache will summer well out in the West. Cowpunchers and ranchers from the prairie like 'em scraped off clean or else sticking out all over.

Six inches more height would help Mayor LaGuardia. He may have name trouble too. It has been generally accepted that his forebears came from Italy, not a popular country here just now, but at a recent Washington hearing the Mayor remarked that his people "bailed from Spain."

Farley Gets Votes

If party organization will do the trick, Postmaster General Farley will have an inside track for the coming year. He can pin down delegations.

A good family name helps. It made votes for President Roosevelt in 1932 and would make votes for Senator Taft of Ohio and Senator Bennett Champ Clark. But names can boomerang.

A sense of humor is good, but candidates can't be too funny. In spite of his nearly 70 years, Vice President Garner has forged ahead with wise cracks always combined with sage advice given pithily. A brand of calm statesmanship is not bad. That's Secretary of State Hull's bid.

A candidate can be neat, but not gaudy. The Lucius Beebes will never lead the country back to normalcy. And the days of sockless Jerry Springer and baggy trousers

SHORT SHOTS

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, May 23.—Jovial Judge Walter Siler came over to Raleigh from his Chatham county bailiwick Monday, stood on the corner in front of the Utilities Commission and kept a quartet of news men convulsed with laughter so long that it's certain none of them got round to covering his "beat" as he should.

Naturally, the reporters asked Judge Siler what the gubernatorial situation looks like from his angle. He immediately and solemnly announced an announcement to end all announcements:

"I am announcing—right now that I am coming over to Raleigh soon to announce a date on which I will announce that I will not announce for governor. That seems to be about the proper procedure to follow in view of the backing and filling of those who are now mentioned in the race. It's got so that the presumption is that every man in Wake county is a gubernatorial candidate unless he specifically says he isn't."

Covering a remarkably wide field in astonishingly short time, the Chatham notable expressed his views on almost innumerable subjects.

The WPA personnel will have a negligible effect on the voting in North Carolina. "They're too slow and there's only one day for voting. The WPA workers will never get to the polls," he cracked.

And there should be a pension for everybody, in the Siler opinion: "The old feds because they need it, the young fellows because they haven't had chance to accumulate anything—and the middle aged because they will have to bear the burden of pensions for all the rest."

His opinion of the historical markers put up over the state doesn't flatter Dr. C. Crittenden of the Historical Commission and the others responsible for the legends:

"Down our way, for instance, there's a marker for the 'Southern boundary of the Lord Granville grant," he said. "Now the only trouble with that is there never was any Lord Granville 'grant' and the boundary of the land Lord Granville did own is just 18 miles south of the marker."

The judge thinks maybe he'll run for the 1941 General Assembly so that "I can invite them to hold a one-day session at Haywood, which came within one vote of being the state capital, and another day's session at Bennett, the geographic center of North Carolina."

He got over to reminiscences of his long legal career and told of the prospective client who came into the office bewailing the fact that somebody had framed him.

"Somebody planted liquor in my car. While I was in the barber shop he slipped some whiskey in it, and the law found it and they've broken up the whiskey, impounded my car and arrested me," said the p.c.

"How much whiskey did they get?" queried Siler.

"Oh, just 57 gallons," said the client.

"My, my!!! That fellow sure hated you a lot," commented the judge.

Then he told of the old chap who came in and wanted to annul a marriage.

"How long since you got hitched?" asked Judge Siler.

"Thirty-nine years," was the answer.

"Now look here, Bill, you know you can't get an annulment of a wedding that took place that long ago," admonished Mr. S. "How can you expect that?"

"Well, I just found out last night that my father-in-law never did have a hunting license—and he didn't have any right to carry that damn shotgun."

April Best Month For B and L Firms

April was the best month in five years for the building, savings and loan associations of North Carolina, according to John B. Craven, Lexington president of the North Carolina Building and Loan League, who stated that these community associations had made over $2,350,000 of loans during April. These represented 1374 loans of which 478 were for the construction of new homes amounting to over $1,600,000. Two hundred and ninety-six homes to the amount of $180,000 were purchased through these associations. The balance of 600 loans to the approximate amount of $870,000 were for repairs and reconditioning, refinancing and other miscellaneous purposes.

The employment of hundreds of workers was facilitated by these loans which are fast building the communities of North Carolina and play such an important part in stimulating business.

April was also an excellent month from the standpoint of savings. As reported by the state in its report on the installment savings series which were issued during the month of April, indicating greater interest of the public in saving systematically through the local home financing associations.

are passed—unless we have a revival of saggy individualism. But if things get that haywire something can happen.

Business Chiefs In New Big Jobs Take Opposite Sides O New Deal

For the New Deal is Edward J. Noble, chairman of the board of Life Savers and new assistant to Secretary of Commerce Hopkins. Against the New Deal is W. Gibson Carey, Jr., president of Yale and Towne and new head of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

HOPKINS' MILLIONAIRE AIDE APPROVES F. D. R.'S AIMS

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
AP Feature Service
Washington—Right hand man to Business Booster Harry Hopkins is rich, Republican Edward J. Noble of New York, Greenwich, Conn., the Thousand Islands, Florida and Washington.

Noble made a fortune in packaged candy and came into Government service about a year ago as head of the Civil Aeronautics Authority because he "wanted to learn a little about the biggest business in the world."

He says that now when he goes up to his home in Greenwich, fashionable New York suburb, Republican acquaintances there subject him to "terrific ribbings" because of his close association with the Roosevelt administration.

"I don't see eye to eye with the New Dealers on some of their methods, but I believe nearly all of us—business managers, stockholders, employes and consumers—are generally agreed on the main objectives," he says.

Post-War Success

Now 56, Candyman Noble won his spurs as a business go-getter back in the early twenties. Yet as the government's No. 2 man in the drive for industrial recovery he seems almost as boyishly shy as when he was the patched-pants, licorice-licking son of an upstate New York feed and fuel merchant in the nineties.

"I believe we are on the threshold of complete cooperation between 'business and government,'" he says, economic progress of course, is the uncertainly created by the European situation.

Noble stepped from a $12,000 a year chairmanship of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to a $1 a year job as business appeaser for Secretary of Commerce Hopkins. His big salesmanship job with CAA was selling President Roosevelt the idea of training 20,000 young pilots yearly as a boost for aviation and a bulwark for national defense.

Ed Noble came down to Yale university from his home town, Groverneer, N. Y., in the early 1900's. His father had scraped together enough money to pay part of the boy's college expenses and young Noble augmented those funds by establishing in collaboration with an Italian boarding house keeper a students' eating club.

Completing a business course at Yale, he and another go-getting youngster named J. Roy Allen, saw a chance in a candy market then limited to 80-cents-apound bonbons and penny-apiece licorice sticks and jawbreakers. They developed a mint ("Life Saver"), and starting in a small loft in Manhattan promoted it in 12 years to an $11,000,000 enterprise.

A few years ago Noble left the active management of the business to associates. He turned his attention to flying, power-boat cruising, investments in banking and aviation, and the Edgar J. Noble Foundation, a charitable and educational enterprise.

Millionaire Noble was fishing in Florida two years ago when he met Hopkins. They liked each other, and when the Civil Aeronautics Authority as created the President asked the Republican-aviation enthusiast to head the agency.

Noble's approach is one of easy, almost hesitant, persuasiveness. He may be putting on the pressure but you don't get the idea he's crowding you.

SPOKESMAN FOR BUSINESS FED UP ON EXPERIMENTS

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
Washington—W. Gibson Carey, Jr., the new president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, parts his hair in the middle and carries a heavy shot of American blue blood in his veins.

But that's as far as he goes with Little Lord Fauntleroy, born on the right side of the tracks.

For he speaks two-fisted Anglo-Saxon on the American pattern, and plain enough for any truck driver to understand.

His bent is orthodox economics, his fetish self-discipline, and he smokes a pipe incessantly.

He bears down on one fundamental principle of modern capitalism—encouragement for corporations and people with money to risk in private enterprise.

Just Has To Be
"Why just about the bush," he exclaims, with all the enthusiasm of a college economist going to town with his pet theory. "Private money goes to work when private money has a chance to earn a profit. When private money goes to work, the men and women of this country go to work. You can talk around that proposition, but you'll always wind up with the same answer."

"And what," he asked, "is that answer?"

"You already know it," he smiles; "Everybody knows it—hard work, more hard work, and self-discipline. The more you work, the more you produce, and the more you earn. There's no shortcut; there never will be. That's common sense economics."

The new president of the chamber is the youngest, and probably the most enthusiastic and aggressive chief ever elected by the association of some 750,000 big and little corporations in the United States.

A Healthy Go-Getter
He's a bit on the tall side, rather heavy, and as orthodox in dress as he is philosophy. His complexion is ruddy, fairly radiates health. His blue eyes are almost gray, his hair a light brown.

Who's Who tips you off on his ancestry. He comes from the Maryland Calverts, people who first settled Lord Baltimore's land grants. Carey doesn't care to discuss that; says it means nothing to the man in the street.

This go-getter was born in Schenectady, went to war in 1917. The record books give him credit for getting out in front of his men in France—and giving them leadership by example. He's the first A.E.F. soldier who ever headed the chamber.

Graduated from Union College in Schenectady in 1917, he entered the business world via a pulp and paper company in New York. In 1929 he took a berth with Yale and Towne of lock fame, and became president in 1932. He lays no claim to being a self-made man, but he does boast that he likes work, and believes it's the only way to success from any rung on the ladder.

He dodges politics for public discussion, but you can't fail to guess he's fed up on New Deal experiments—certainly some of them. Carey likes all sports, excels in none. Likes nothing better than his pet economics for reading purposes; second choice, philosophy. He's married, and the father of a girl, 12, and a boy, four, and he now lives in a Connecticut suburb of New York city.

If you don't believe in the Chamber of Commerce—stay out of his way. He's liable to sell you a bill of goods on that organization and make you think it's the finest lodge that ever held a meeting.

WITH TWO ENGINES 'DEAD,' this Boeing transport plane flew steadily in a test flight above Seattle and climbed easily from 9,000 to 10,000 feet. The plane carried its maximum load of 45,000 pounds and had been cruising at more than 240 miles per hour, until the pilot slackened speed to 150 m.p.h. to permit picture-taking from smaller plane flying nearby.

Man About Manhattan

New York—Harlem, black opal of the Metropolitan area, is famous for its rent parties. This is a manifestation of the family or community spirit enabling hard-bitten brethren to stand off the landlord and obtain a few extra vegetables besides.

According to Jennie, who is 23 and in love and who dabbles in the numbers game and supports her mother and three squalling young sisters, they are great fun and a sure way out of the wilderness. They work like this:

"You're broke and the rent is due next Monday. Your landlord is impatient. You haven't even got enough money to buy a steak. But everybody knows you.

"So you go to the butcher and say, 'Joe, big rent party at my house Sunday night. I need four chickens and a 10-pound pork roast. You trus' me?'"

"And Joe says: 'Sure, anything you want. What time ah'm suppose to be there?' And I tell him, 'Anytime after eight, brother, anytime after eight.'"

"Then I go to the grocer and say, 'Joe, big rent party my house Sunday night. I need four loaves sandwich bread, some pickles, relish, olives, some butter, some sweet potatoes, and four cans of green peas. You trus' me?'"

"And Joe says: 'Sure, anything you want. What time I'm suppose to be there?' And I tell him, 'Anytime after eight, brother, anytime after eight.'"

"After that I go to the liquor store and say, 'Joe, big rent party mah house Sunday night. I need six quarts gin. You trus' me?'"

"And Joe says: 'Sure, anything you want. What time ah'm suppose to be there?' And I tell him, 'Anytime after eight, brother, anytime after eight.'"

"Then I go to a man who runs a beer parlor and say, 'Joe, big rent party mah house Sunday night. I want to borrow that nickel-slot phonograph. You trus' me?'"

"And Joe says: 'Sure, anything you want. What time I'm suppose to be over there?' And ah tell him, 'Anytime after eight, brother, anytime after eight.'"

"By that time everybody in Harlem knows we are having a rent party. The four chickens and the 10-pound pork roast arrive. The nickel-slot phonograph arrives. The gin gets there and so does the sandwich bread and the potatoes and everything else. We cook all day and borrow plenty of glasses for the gin from the neighbors.

"By that time it's eight o'clock and everybody comes. Everybody and somebody with him. They start

Greenies Defeated 6-4 By Billies; Eagles Here Tonight

TWO REGULARS OUT FOR TIME

Both Simpson and Christopher Now on Sick List

Rube Wilson's Greenies with two regulars missing from the line-up, was defeated 6-4 by the Snow Hill Billies at Guy Smith park last night.

Let us hasten to say, however, that the two substitutes, Daniels for Simpson in the outer garden, and Ted Meloni for Red Christopher at second, fell short in no manner in last night's contest. Neither erred and Meloni got three for five to lead the Greenies at bat. He doubled on one of his hits and also drove in one of the local runs. Utility man Daniels hit safely once.

Greenville out-hit the Billies 15 to 11, but the Greenies were unable to follow-through in most instances.

Snow Hill got off to a one-run start in the second inning, added two in the third and two more in the fifth, in which frame Wilson was relieved by Briggs. The Billies added their last run in the sixth and were held scoreless for the last three innings.

Greenville got started in the fourth, when the locals pushed one across on Smith's triple and an infield out. The Greenies got started on what looked as if it might be a winning rally in the seventh. Rimmer singled to start things off, came home on Heavener's double. Heavener reached home on Wilson's single. Jenkins then singled. Lou Cicerele then took over the hurling duties from Therfall and cut the rally short. Meloni, however, cracked out a double, scoring Wilson. Jenkins was thrown out at first and, although the Greenies filled the bases again Smith was hit by the pitched and Briggs walked. Allen filled to center and Daniels fanned to end the inning, with three runs, and three left on base. Both teams left plenty of men on bases. Greenville 14 and Snow Hill 12.

The Greenies will also be at home tonight at 8, meeting the Kinston Eagles.

Blount-Harvey and Tadlock Insurance played to a 10-all tie last night, as the second week of softball got under way here. In the other game of the evening Water and Light defeated Double Cola 15-9.

It was the second win for the utility boys, who have suffered one defeat. It was Double Cola's third consecutive defeat.

The Blount-Harvey team had an opportunity to gain a clear title to first place, but failed. On the other hand a victory for Tadlock would have placed that team on a two wins to one loss basis. The tie game will be played at a later date, to be set by President J. D. Simpson.

CLUBS TURN IN GOOD PLAYING

All Coastal Plain League Games Fast Exhibitions

All clubs turned in good performances in the Coastal Plain league last night and scores in all instances were kept fairly low.

Kinston defeated Williamston 6-2; Tarboro over Wilson 5-4; Goldsboro licked New Bern 9-6, while Snow Hill was winning over the Greenies 6-4.

Six of the teams are pretty closely bunched in the standings, Greenville, leading with 15 wins and eight losses, is trailed by the sixth place clubs, New Bern and Goldsboro, by only five games.

Snake Put Out For 120 Days

Suspended for Attacking Umpire Tom Lane Recently

Judge Bramham, minor league baseball czar, served notice yesterday that any occurrences such as happened in Kinston recently would not be tolerated.

The Eagles were playing the Greenies when Umpire Tom Lane, since discharged, was almost "mobbed" by the fans and, according to persons at the game, had his feet stepped on by Manager Fred "Snake" Henry.

Judge Bramham suspended Henry for 120 days and served notice that any such demonstrations as that at Kinston might result in the town's franchise being revoked.

President Ray Goodman, who conferred with Judge Bramham, declared that neither would tolerate players or fans failing to give the umpires proper respect and support. The rules state that it is the duty of the home club to protect the umpires from any possible violence.

Bill Herring has been named temporary manager of the Eagles.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, May 23.—(AP)—Attempts to pump further rallying fuel into the stock market were only partly successful today and leading issues finally moved listlessly to lower levels. A smattering of minor gains, however, was in evidence at the close.

Transfers were around 450,000 shares.
