BRITAIN SENDS PROPOSALS TO SOVIET RUSSIA

Opens Final Phase for British - French - Russian Pact

ADVISES MOSCOW DEVELOPMENTS

Russia Advised More Detailed Statement Would be Submitted Within a Few Days.

London, May 25.—(AP)—Britain was authoritatively reported today to have opened the final phase in negotiations for a British-French-Russian mutual assistance pact with the dispatch of new proposals to the Moscow government.

Informed sources said a note was sent to Sir William Seeds, British ambassador to Moscow, for communication to the Russian government which included a statement of yesterday's cabinet action and Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration in the House of Commons.

Chamberlain yesterday announced Britain was making new proposals to Soviet Russia and he had every reason to hope it would be possible to reach full agreement on an early date.

He said he hoped to be able to announce such an agreement when Parliament reconvened June 5, after a recess.

was informed a more detailed statement of the British proposal than contained in today's news would be submitted in a few days.

The foreign office said this supplemental statement would comprise the complete British formula for the proposed agreement.

Remaining details will be worked out in talks in London and Moscow.

Officials indicated the cabinet yesterday approved the general terms of the proposals worked out in Geneva in conversations between Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, Soviet Ambassador to London Malinsky and French ministers.

Civil Action Asks $2,000 In Damages

Civil action seeking $2,050 for injuries allegedly sustained when thrown from his mule-drawn cart by the animals was scabred by defendant's wagon along side the road was filed in Pitt Superior court yesterday afternoon by Ray Hamp.

The action seeks to recover $2,000 and, in addition, $50 for hospital and medical expenses, from Sam Kamrey and his alleged employer, B. Swartz and Company, Inc.

The complaint alleges that Kimrey was cleaning and shaking hives, preparatory to packing and shipping them by the side of Highway No. 11 about a mile from Greenville on April 15, and that carelessly and without thought of others shook one in front of his animal, causing the mule to bolt into a gasoline truck and injuring the plaintiff.

Mr. Sellers was a member of Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church of Seuffelton and was engaged in farming. He spent his entire life in the Hookerton community.

Besides his widow, surviving are one son, Albert David Sellers; five daughters, Mrs. Joseph Speight, Misses Elizabeth, Anna Louise, Lillie Marie and Mildred Jeanette Sellers, all of the home.

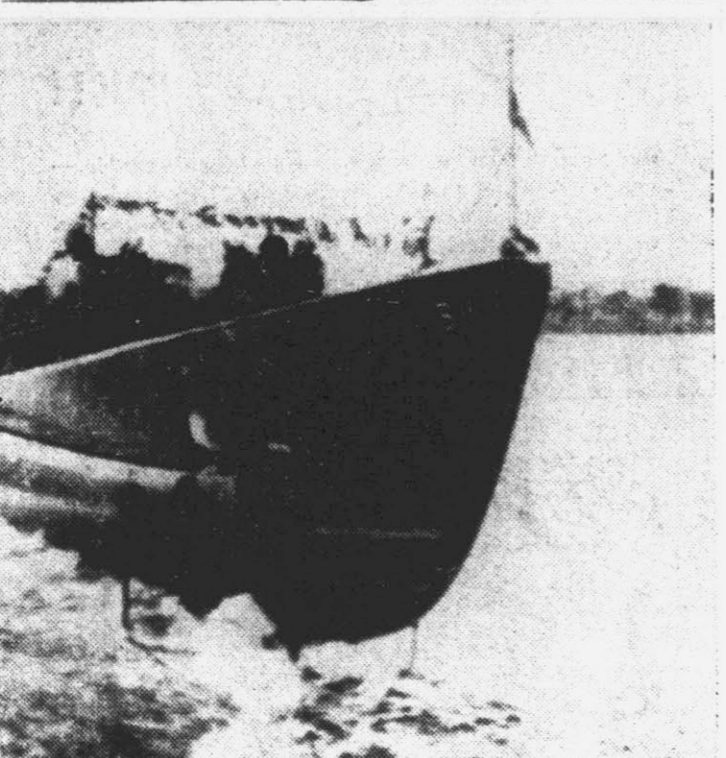

J. H. Coward Attends A-T. Trustee Meet

J. H. Coward, Pitt county auditor and a member of the Board of Trustees of A and T College for Negroes at Greensboro, left today to attend a meeting called as a result of a demonstration by students in support of the discharged coach.

Mr. Coward has been on the Board of Trustees since 1918, having been elected to succeed his step-father, W. A. Darden. Mr. Coward resided with his father, who was appointed in 1899, served on the board when Negroes also were members under Governor Russell's administration.

With 33 Survivors Safe, Rescue Crews Undertake Task Of Removing Bodies

NAVY'S GREAT SUBMARINE SINKS

The gigantic submarine Squalus was riding bravely into water when this picture was made at her launching last September. But on May 23 she sank off the New Hampshire coast with 59 men. While rescue ships sought desperately to locate her, naval officials expressed the fear 26 of the crew had perished.

Tar Heel Credited With Saving Lives Of 33 Men

Portsmouth, N. H., May 25.—(AP)—Although admitting only the barest possibility existed there still was life on the sunken submarine Squalus, Rear Admiral C. W. Cole announced today the resumption of rescue work after asserting: "We never say die until all hope is lost."

In pointing out there was little hope for the 26 men still trapped on the ill-fated submersible, Cole said the submarine's temperature had dropped 27 degrees since the craft went down Tuesday and that it tilted sharply when water flooded the after part.

From the rescue ship Falcon, to which 33 survivors were hoisted yesterday and last night, the Rear Admiral said: "Repair of the rescue chamber has been completed. We'll resume operations on the after part of the Squalus."

Above the sunken craft a stretch of water of a radius of two-thirds of a mile has been marked off by buoys and no vessels will be permitted near the rescue ship Falcon unless they have official business.

Lieut. Oliver F. Maquin, commander of the Squalus and the last of the survivors to leave her, came ashore today with the other seep crew members who were trapped for hours last night after the great rescue bell became fouled on its final trip upward from the sunken vessel.

Charles Smith Kunev of Tulare, Calif., was born on a stretcher from a coast guard patrol boat up the ramp and thence between solid ranks of marines to a waiting ambulance.

The other crew members appeared in good condition, however. While there was general rejoicing throughout the country over the rescue of the 33 survivors, a grim, quiet atmosphere prevailed in this city as preparations to remove the bodies got under way.

New Prison Minister Is Well Known Here

The Rev. L. A. Watts, Methodist minister now in charge of the Charlotte circuit, but who yesterday was named to succeed Dr. E. C. Cooper as director of religious training for the state prison system, is well known in Greenville.

The Rev. Mr. Watts lived here at one time and is married to the former Miss Lallah Brown of this city.

He was named to the prison position by the State Highway and Public Works Commission and will receive a salary of $2,400, the same as paid to Dr. Cooper, who resigned to become president of the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Columbia, S. C. The Rev. Mr. Watts will take over his new duties on July 1.

Increasing numbers of North Carolina cotton mills are focusing their attention on the one-year-old cotton communities being established in the state by J. A. Shanklin, cotton specialist of State College.

Crime In N. C. Pays For Bureau Of Investigation

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, May 25.—Crime does pay, despite the repetitious admonishments of moralists and writers. Proof is the existence and high-grade functioning of the North Carolina Bureau of Identification and Investigation.

The Bureau has come into some newspaper prominence recently by reason of its connection with investigation of the Goldsboro flogging case; but few outside the very inner circles know that Director Fred C. Handy and his staff have taken part in more than 150 cases of all sorts and from all sections of the state since the first of the current year.

The legislators of 1937 authorized establishment of the Bureau, to be paid for by the extra costs to be levied in every criminal conviction—fifty cents to go to the Bureau and fifty cents to the Law Enforcement Officers Pension and Retirement fund from each case.

And so crime does pay, in North Carolina, for a very active agency concerned wholly with its detection and punishment. And, incidentally, North Carolina is one of only eight states in the Union to have a completely equipped Bureau of Investigation, though practically every one has a Bureau of Identification.

"Dress rehearsal is on tap for tonight in final preparation for Friday's presentation. The play itself has seen its heyday on the famous stages of New York and Detroit with movie star Basil Rathbone as the main character in the original cast.

"The Swan" offers something new to the public in the way of high school plays. The elaborate costuming, which is in keeping with a royal castle setting in a mythical kingdom in modern times is probably the finest and most complete ever had in a senior play of G. H. S.

Katherine Kyzer will portray Alexandra, the princess who is encouraged to a mild flirtation with Dr. Nicholas Agi, the castle tutor, and falls in love with him upon learning of his sincerity and real love for her.

Clara Crispager, as Alexandra's mother, Beatrice, desires a marriage for Alexandra and Prince Albert, a visiting suitor, which would again elevate them into the royal family of Dominica.

Supporting cast includes John Lautares as Caesar; Grace Parker as Maria Dominica; Dorothy Weaver as Beatrice's sister, Symphora; Dallas Peeler as Count Wunderlich; and Mitchell White and Gene Skinnip as the two young princes who are being tutored by Agi.

R. G. Weyer, high school dramatic head, is ably directing the play and assures the audience of plenty of genuine entertainment, in a serious and mythical.

No invitations issued in Greenville.

Inter Se Book Club. The Inter Se Book Club held its last meeting for the year on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Joseph M. Taft.

The president, Mrs. Wyatt Brown, after calling the meeting to order, welcomed the guests for the afternoon.

The papers for the afternoon, "Chastity Before 1900," by Mrs. David Evans, and "Silver and Pewter Before 1900," by Mrs. James S. Jenkins, concluded the club's study for the year—"Our American Heritage Before 1900."

Mrs. Evans traced the development of glass making and the uses of glass from that which was found in ancient tombs and runs to modern times explaining different kinds of glass and showing pictures and valuable old glasses to illustrate her talk.

Mrs. Jenkins outlined the uses of silver as money, for ornament and for household uses from the earliest civilization until 1900.

In giving the history of pewter, Mrs. Jenkins said that while pewter was known to the Greeks and Romans, it did not come into daily household use until after the Restoration in England. From there it was spread to America, where it was very common until the middle of the nineteenth century, when china began to replace it.

After a short business meeting, during which the program for next year was announced, the hostess, assisted by Mrs. William Taft and Mrs. M. B. Massey, served a delicious ice course.—Reported.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have a crown of acid waste in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of poisonous waste.

When functional kidney disorder permits poisonous matter to remain in the blood, you won't feel well. This may cause aching backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. If you have trouble with frequent urination, passing with smarting and burning, there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as having to ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, and successfully by millions for over 60 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes get out the acid waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

By BETTY CLARKE (AP Feature Service Writer) Many a budget-restricted bride wistfully eyes the expensive beauty salons when she shops for her trousseau. This one time in her life, she thinks she'd like to go in and order the whole card.

To get an idea of what would happen if she did, I visited one of the swankiest Fifth Avenue contour shops. Here's what happened—it may give brides a few ideas:

A very efficient young woman in a gymnasium suit took me into a room and I was weighed. She got out her tape measure and sized my upper arm, bust, waist, upper and lower thigh, upper and lower calf and my ankles.

"Slightly on the hippy side, aren't you?" she said with a smile, "we'll take care of that. We'll also give you some exercises for that spare tire around your middle."

She led the way to a mirrored gymnasium. There she put me through: SODE BICYCLING—Lying on one hip I had to pedal my feet a while, then repeat the exercise on the

Library News

Southern Life, Home and Garden Magazine, published at Raleigh, N. C., is a new and up-to-date very pleasing monthly publication. In an editorial of the May number is this sentence: "We believe that the South has the ability, the intelligence, the will to produce as fine a publication as any other section of America—a magazine that will reflect the graciousness, the courtliness, the beauty and art of living in the South today."

See "Southern Life" at Sheppard Memorial Library. It is a magazine that ought to be on the home library table.

pictures taken. It's true, as he said, that they're "easy to get along with." But the amazing thing is that there should be players, as there are, who act as if they were conferring a favor when they're asked to "hold it for a still."

Because the still-man, like everybody else on the set, is doing his job as best he can. His job is to take pictures good enough to print—pictures of the stars in particular, so that the paying public will get the idea that those stars are people of importance and worth paying to see on the screen.

The "nice people" of the screen—including Miss Campbell and Crosby—would be "nice about it" regardless, even if they weren't smart enough to realize that co-operation (or call it good manners) is an investment in success. The not-so-nice people? I know still-men about town, still taking pictures, who aren't too sorry about some of yesterday's stars and their unemployment problems.

This Campbell girl—how'd I get side-tracked from her in the first place?—is a definite "comer" along the stellar highways. Beautiful, intelligent, ambitious, and a talented actress besides, she is not of the "fame overnight" school of stardom. But look for her one day, perhaps after "The Star-Maker," to click sensationally.

If "Men with Wings" had lived up to expectations, she'd have been a star by now. It was her first "A" picture and she was splendid in it. (She had done eight films before that, all "B's." Interesting item: Her contract was up for renewal during "Men with Wings." Paramount's New York office waited to see a rough cut of that film before renewing—seems nobody there had seen her on the screen before!)

For the record, she's a Chicago girl who chose a stage career over teaching, which she had practiced (in the drama department) in college. She had picture offers after her first minor stage appearances, turned them down because they all seemed based on the fact that she was "photogenic," skipped her acting potentialities. She stayed on to prove that she could act—and insisted, when new film offers came, on a contract that would leave her free part of the time for the stage. Paramount gave her one.

HIS ONLY JOB IS TO CARE FOR TREE

Southwold, England. — (AP) — A gardener has been appointed with the sole duty of looking after a Cornish elm tree which King George planted at his boys' camp in 1936.

He is Colonel F. H. Brown, who asked for the (unpaid) job because the tree's life is threatened by acts of souvenir hunters.

The American Sway!

The spirit of '76 has hit the night clubs of '39. Latest of the Yankee Doodle ditties they've sponsored is a dance called "The American Sway" which Georgie Hale has originated to introduce a new Broadway hot spot show.

It's intended to show the spirit of American youth" says Hale.

Billie Bernice, who calls herself a "Tulsa, Okla., Yankee" and who is captain of the chorus, here demonstrates the number, using "prop" flags. In the finale, Miss Bernice and the chorus toss away the flags, don snare drums, and prance off to a martial rhythm.

Outstanding Leaders To Get Elon Degrees

Elon College, May 25.—Elon College will confer honorary degrees upon five outstanding leaders in the nation, state and church at the forty-ninth commencement exercises Tuesday, May 30.

The five men are Josiah William Bailey, senior senator from North Carolina, and Jonathan Daniels, editor and author who is to make the graduation address, who will be awarded the honorary degree of doctor of literature; the Rev. Robert Wood Coe, pastor of Leyden Congregational Church, Brookline, Mass., and the Rev. Roger Eddy Treat, pastor of Bushnell Congregational Church, Detroit, Mich., who will be awarded the honorary degrees of doctor of divinity and Thomas Alfred Morgan, chairman of the board of directors of the Sperry Corporation, who will be awarded the honorary degree of doctor of science.

The degrees will be conferred by Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College.

TWENTY-SEVEN OUT FOR TEAM

Report For Tank Team on First Day of Practice

Twenty-seven candidates for the Greenville municipal swimming team worked out for the first time at the local pool yesterday. This number included 7 junior boys, 11 senior boys, 2 junior girls and 7 senior girls, promising well-rounded teams in all except the junior girls' division.

The assignment for yesterday included light calisthenics, starts, turns and a warm-up swim of eight lengths of the pool. Toward the end of the period, 50-yard tryouts were held in all divisions.

Until the local schools close, workouts will take place at 6 p. m. daily except Sunday.

Those reporting yesterday were: Junior boys, Gene Johnson, Gattis Honeycutt, Billy Gilford, Denis Fleming, Bob Smith, Jack Edwards and H. R. Goodall, Jr.; senior boys, Joe Williams, A. B. Bracey, H. L. Brown, Bickett Carroll, Spencer Carroll, Johnny Laurens, Claude Hardy, Snag Clark, John Horne, Bubber Rowlett and Jim Phelps; junior girls, Frances Glass and Jean Harrington; senior girls, Lib Wells, Ann McCormick, Burnice Smith, Lib Sugg, Frances Willard, Jane Harrison and Joy Planagan.

A LOT OF RED TAPE FOR ONE CUSTOMER

Des Moines, Iowa. — (AP) — The Nebraska Power Company of Omaha obtained a franchise from the Iowa Commerce Commission to build a power line in Pottawattamie county.

To get it the company had to:

- 1—File a bulky application.
- 2—Draw a map showing the area to be served.
- 3—Advertise a complete report of the contemplated improvement three times.

The franchise granted is for a half-mile line to serve a single customer.

Cooperatives Given Right Extend Lines

Raleigh, May 25. — (AP) — The Rural Electrification Authority approved plans today for construction of about 100 additional miles of rural power lines in Pitt, Nash and Wilson counties, and some 50 more in Columbus county.

The Edgecombe-Martin Electric Membership Corporation will expend $82,000 of federal funds for the Pitt, Nash and Wilson expansion, and the Four-County Electric Membership Cooperative will spend $60,000.

The Authority granted a petition of the Brunswick County Electric Membership Cooperative to expand its territory.

Toledo, Ohio. — (AP) — Dr. V. C. Williams caught a pheasant by its tail. He and a friend, hunting, saw a bird land. Following its tracks, they saw tail feathers sticking out of a snow bank. The pheasant had buried its head.

All the doctor had to do was grab the feathers and—presto—he had his pheasant.

Washington.—Of the 435 members of the House, about 35 take regular workouts in their private gymnasium, another 35 work out occasionally, and an additional cluster show up for the lighter treatments calling for sun-lamp baths and massage.

They have a regular gymnasium in the new House building. Only since 1933 has there been more than a half dozen regulars to show up for sitting-up exercises. In that year Representative Lambertson of Kansas was the only Republican. Since then the number of users has grown steadily.

House members almost to a man are wary of too much publicity about their gymnasium. Some won't go near the place because they fear their constituents would think they were spending all their time playing volleyball but instead of working for the home folks.

A year or so ago pictures were taken of the members riding the mechanical horse, rolling on the medicine ball and taking hot baths. The publicity didn't sit well and they now have banned photographs.

PAY TO PLAY
 We were piloted through the place by Representative Richards of South Carolina, one of the group who in 1935 began to put the place really on its feet. Prior to that there was virtually no equipment. Now they ask contributions of $5 a year from regular users to buy equipment. This year there are 90 contributors, 34 of them Republicans.

Most of the gymnasium devices are designed to tighten up stomach muscles. Peter Henderson, a pretty tough drill sergeant during the war, has an eye on the members to see they don't overdo it. A flabby 50-year-oldster begins jumping the rope, Pete stops him. Too hard on the heart. He puts him to rowing. There is a regular rowing machine and a special new gadget that is like a nightmare of a ride on a bicycle. It folds all up between your legs and you stretch your stomach muscles, pulling it together again, rhythmically.

Some members like running on a treadmill. They could get that exercise by galloping up and down the capitol corridors, but it would look funny. Most unusual device is a "belly-wobbler" that slowly rolls the tummy back and forth. Not many use it. It looks too foolish for words. They prefer the mechanical jugglers that shake you all over.

THEY'RE TOO, TOO SHY
 One of Trainer Pete's troubles is self-consciousness among the members. Pete gets them over their shyness and soon they are rolling on medicine balls or playing games without concern for appearances.

Most of the regular exercisers prefer competitive games. Pete thinks it is because they are a competitive lot by nature.

Most of the regulars come from industrial centers, like New York and Michigan. Farm states contribute fewest. Pete finds the city members most aggressive at play. Occasionally he jacks up the country members. At hand-ball or pad-dleball the country members like to let the ball come to them. Pete makes them run after it the way the city members do.

"They get on to it soon," he says. Competition between Republicans and Democrats is rare. They used to have party baseball teams, but that broke up when Representative Carter of Wyoming, the Republican's best pitcher, was retired to the bush leagues by the electorate. The gymnasium is one of the few advantages House members have over senators. Their gymnasium is bigger and much better equipped.

It probably doesn't mean much, but neither Speaker Bankhead, Majority Leader Rayburn nor Minority Leader Martin makes much use of the gymnasium.

The Characters
 Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heir-ess
 Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate of Seaside.

Yesterday: Little Betsy takes Jocelyn's doll and bracelet to show Uncle Bob what she wants him to get her.

Chapter 22
Betsy's Apology

A HALF hour before supper Bob and Gretchen and Tally changed into swim-suits and splashed and swam in the warm summer surf. When the sun was half over the horizon they came out of the breakers, laughing and calling to each other.

"Race you up to the house," Bob challenged.
 Jocelyn's car was in the Macks' driveway. She was waiting for them near the back door, looking smart and expensive in a suit of pale green linen, a floppy linen hat framing her vexed face, her small feet tucked into high-heeled green sandals.

"Hello, Lyn," Bob said. "I'd kiss you if I wasn't dripping."
 Gretchen and Tally started on into the house.
 "Just a minute, please," Jocelyn ordered. "I wish to speak to all three of you."

She held out a red hair ribbon. "Is this Betsy's?"
 "Why—why, yes," Gretchen affirmed. "Where did you find it?"
 "In my room. My French doll is missing—you know, Bob, the one Geoff brought me from San Francisco—and the musical powder box and my emerald bracelet. Since I found her hair ribbon on the floor beside my dressing table, I gather that Betsy took the things."

Bob looked at his wife, who appeared completely astounded. "I'm very sorry, Lyn," he said. "I'll get the things, of course, and return them to you."
 Jocelyn had meant to be reasonable about the whole affair, but Tally's eyes were so scornful that she heard herself blurt out:

"It isn't that the items are valuable, Bob. But the child certainly should know better than to steal. You must punish her severely so it won't happen again!"

Gretchen pushed the damp black hair off of her cheeks. "I will not punish her, Miss Russell," she declared. "I don't blame her one bit. We've always been too poor to buy her fancy dolls and other toys. The ones we gave her were cheap and shoddy. She never saw beautiful, expensive things before. She's not a thief and she knows better, but she wanted them so badly she took them anyhow, knowing she couldn't keep them and knowing she would be punished. Don't you realize she's still a baby? Only five years old? I have taught her not to take things that aren't hers, but even grown people sometimes forget if they are tempted enough. I'll get the things for you and I'll talk to her about it, but I refuse to spank her or let anyone else!"

Gretchen hurried into the house, Tally following. Bob looked at his sister's perturbed face.

"I'm so ashamed of you, Lyn," he said, then turned his back and slammed into the kitchen.

'Unfair'

BETSY'S misdemeanor cast a pall over the usually gay dinner table in the Macks' kitchen. Betsy herself was not present, having been confined to her room by her mother, who had talked to the flushed, defiant child until she burst into tears.

"I couldn't get a word out of her," Gretchen said miserably. "I don't know what to do. I wouldn't have had this happen for anything. Whatever possessed her, anyhow?"

"Jocelyn needn't have made such a fuss," Bob asserted.

"Would you like me to handle it?" Tally asked, resting both Bob and Gretchen were too distraught to be reasonable.

The young couple nodded. "Tally's allus the goat," Gramp commented. "Don't you go startin' a fight with Josie now. She probably feels just as bad as you about it."

When the meal was finished Tally went up to Betsy's room, collected the pillored articles and the child, and went around to the Russells' front door.

Jocelyn came out on the porch, observed the little girl's tear-stained cheeks, and felt wretched about the whole affair. Betsy regarded her with solemn, chastened eyes as Tally gave her a little shove forward.

"I'm terribly sorry I took your doll and things," she recited dutifully as per instruction. Then on her own she asked, "I didn't steal 'em, though. Mister Bob said one time he'd get me a doll like this one and I just wanted to show it to him so he'd know what kind to get me—an' I thought maybe if he saw the box that sings and the bracelet, he maybe would get me those, too. I was going to put every single thing back. I was honest and truly, Miss Jocelyn!"

"You didn't tell me that, Betsy," Tally chided.

"I couldn't, Uncle Tally, 'cause everybody scolded me so much—' 'There were tears in Jocelyn's eyes as she knelt down before the little girl. "I'm sorry, too," she said softly.

"You see, when I was a little girl my grandma always bought me everything I wanted and I didn't realize how a little girl would feel when she saw pretty things she couldn't have. I want to give you the doll and the singing box and I'll buy you a bracelet that will fit your wrist much better than this big one."

"You mean I can keep Molly?" Betsy asked in an awed voice.
 "Yes."
 A little hesitantly Betsy went close to Jocelyn and reached out her chubby arms. Jocelyn drew her near and hugged her. "Is everything all right now?" she whispered, deeply stirred by the feel of the child's trembling body.

"No," declared Tally. "It isn't Betsy cannot have the things."
 Jocelyn stared at him over the top of the child's head. "But why not?"
 "Because she has to learn not to help herself to other people's possessions. Do you think this experience will do her any good if now, after raising a row and accusing her of stealing, you very generously give her the things?"

Jocelyn stood up, contempt darkening her eyes as she met his. "I think she's had her lesson. I also think you're being unfair and unreasonable!"
 "And I think you're being inconsistent and stupid!" he retorted. "Come along, Betts."

"I want the dolly—," she wailed. "Jocelyn gave it to me, Uncle Tally—"

'Mire Of Self-Pity'
 HE PICKED her up in his arms. "You can't have it, Betsy. It isn't yours."
 "You are the most impossible, the most stubborn, the most contrary male I ever saw in my life!" Jocelyn raged.

"Oh, be quiet," he ordered. "You make me sick. I'm not going to have Betsy growing up into a spoiled brat, and that's final. If she finds out now that she can't have her own way whenever she wants it, she'll be a fit companion for people when she grows up."

"Meaning I'm not?"
 "Exactly."
 Thorn-dyke opened the door and peered out at the bustling antagonists. "What's going on out here, Lyn?"

"Good night, Miss Russell!" Tally said with stiff politeness, ignoring Thorn. He strode off around the back of the house, holding the weeping child against his shoulder.

Thorn tried again. "Lyn, what is the trouble?"
 "Oh, it's none of your business!" she snapped and pushed past him into the drawing-room.

Thorn, his feelings injured, wandered off toward the beach; settled disconsolately on the wooden steps leading from the terrace down to the sand. He had no place in particular to go; nothing in particular to do. He was a very lonely man. He felt very sorry for himself. Nobody wanted him around.

Nobody liked him. Nola was probably having a grand time in Honolulu and was glad to be rid of him. He wallowed in a mire of self-pity.

If, he considered, he had followed Nola to Honolulu at once there might have been a reconciliation. He really had wanted to, but that procedure would have necessitated digging into the intact bulk of inherited securities. It seemed to him now that he had been very foolish to hoard the money. Bob was independent of it and Lyn, marrying Geoff, soon would be. There was no valid reason for being miserly. That forty thousand, invested, might make him a great deal more. Any sort of business venture was out of course, but he had heard tales of making money quick-ly and since the entire sum was practically his, he might as well put it to some good use, for if he lost it and nothing like that would happen, for he was much too stupid to lose it, he would be hurt; and, if he made lots of money, Lyn as well as himself would benefit.

Besides, Nola had so much money that he, comparatively speaking, was a pauper. Nola might have more respect for his capability if he could demonstrate a concrete example.

A shuffling sound on the other side of the fence disturbed his reflections. Good heavens! couldn't a man think without being aware of the intruders who shared his house?

A gaunt stooped figure rounded the last outpost of fencing and ambled through the sand toward him. "H'lo," Gramp offered serenely. "It's a mighty purty night out ain't it? I jest couldn't make my old bones be still with that there moon a-shinin' over the water. That old sea is mighty trech'rous though, even if it looks mighty harmless from here—"

Thorn followed the old man's glance out over the vast reach of ocean and surprised himself by saying, "I guess it is treacherous, at that. You sailed on 'er for a good many years, didn't you?"

"Yep," Gramp, bracing himself on the stair railing, sank with slow effort to the step just below Thorn-dyke. "A man does peculiar things when he loses a woman he loves. After your grandma run away with Homer I just didn't mind much what become of me."

State Rural Electrification Authority Engineer J. M. Grainger tells (refusing to identify) of the rural line owner and operator who told him recently of the "tremendous slash" he had made in his rates, which he said had been reduced from 20 cents per kilowatt hour to 10.

Knowing that the man buys his current, wholesale, at something like a cent and a half, Mr. Grainger thinks the fellow may be able to bear up under the shock of the reduction.

Of the 88 projects listed on the State Highway Commission's December Bulletin of May 15, no less than 27 were slated to be completed not later than June 1, while eight others are due to be finished before the middle of next month.

Incidentally, the 88 repair projects under way as of May 15 were a dozen more than two weeks earlier.

According to the April accident report of the highway safety division only one driver with less than three months' experience was involved in an accident that month—but the one was fatal.

Drivers with from three to six months' experience had two crashes in which there were casualties—and one was a fatality.

Of the 80 deaths in April highway accidents, no less than 30 of the slain were pedestrians. Eight were killed crossing a highway, seven walking along the roadway and five were children at play in the street.

Oddly, perhaps, only seven of the 30 pedestrians were killed within the limits of a city or an incorporated town. The country road seems a bit deadlier than the city street.

 Oklahoma City, Okla. — (AP) — "It's been a long time between snips, but I've cut this hair before," said Barber G. M. Luttrell as he worked on the head of Walton Neumeyer.

It wasn't until Neumeyer got out of the chair and stood his full height upward that Luttrell snapped his fingers.

 "I've got it," he said. "You're Tree Top. The last time I cut your hair I had a hard rock for a barber's chair, on the side of a French hill. You were waiting to go over the top. I was the barber for Company H, 141st infantry."
 "We nicknamed you Tree Top because you were so tall."
 Only 27 of the 250 men of the company ever came back from the Belleau woods, and Luttrell and Neumeyer were among the survivors. Sure, Neumeyer remembered that haircut 21 years ago.

Greenies Rained Out; Play Here Friday And Sunday

BILLIES AGAIN DROP MARTINS

Tarboro Beats Goldsboro; Wilson-New Bern Rain

The Kinston-Greenville game scheduled for there last night was rained out, as was the New Bern at Wilson affair, but Snow Hill chalked up a 9-7 victory over Williamston and Tarboro eked a 6-5 victory over Goldsboro.

The Greenies were to open a two-game series with Goldsboro in the Wayne capital tonight and return here to meet the Goldbugs tomorrow night.

The Greenies week-end series will be with New Bern, the two teams playing there Saturday and here Sunday afternoon.

Tarboro, by virtue of its victory last night while Williamston was idle pulled into a tie with the Martins for second place and runner-up to the Greenies.

Snow Hill, which has been defeating the best of 'em of late is running close on the heels of the runner-ups, having won the same number of games, but with two more defeats to its credit.

TWO SOFTBALL GAMES HALTED

Rain Interferes Wednesday Night; No Games Tonight

Last night's scheduled softball games were called on account of rain. It was the first time this season that rain has interfered with play, but one game ended in a tie.

President J. D. Simpson will fix dates for the games to be played. Last night's schedule included Water and Light vs Tadlock Insurance and Blount-Harvey vs Double Cola.

President Simpson also has announced that the games scheduled for tonight will be played tomorrow night. The postponement was ordered because of the Community Tobacco Market committee dinner tonight. The two games to be played tomorrow night will be Gulf vs Carolina Dairy and Blount-Harvey vs R. C. Cola.

FAIR NO HELP TO BROADWAY

Exposition Blamed for 'Ailing' Show Business

By GEORGE TUCKER
New York, May 25.—(AP)—An anxious and somewhat disillusioned Broadway watches May slip into June with no sign of the crowds and the showers of gold that was to lift everybody out of the well.

The tourists just haven't materialized and what business the Fair has done has been with the New Yorkers themselves, who, abandoning their own, have left Broadway high and dry, with the result that many plays are folding prematurely while others languish before empty houses. The seriousness of the plight is illustrated eloquently by a telephone call to the box-office of one of New York's leading dramas, a play which until a few weeks ago had proved a lucrative investment for its angels. A woman from a nearby community telephoned and asked if two seats could be held 26 hours, or until she could get into the city and claim them.

When this request was made the box-office manager burst out laughing. "Lady," he said, "you could get here five minutes before curtain time and have the best seats in the house."

Nor is Broadway alone feeling the blight. Billy Rose is closing his Casa Manana, once the talk of the town, and two other clubs that began so ambitiously a few weeks ago are drying on the vine.

This is being written at night, and a few moments ago, on the way to this office, I passed the great outdoors garden fashioned in the heart of Rockefeller center. This is where the ice-skating rink used to be, and amid shrubs and flowering vines there are dozens of tables, each manned by a waiter, alone under the stars. In all that desert of empty elegance just two customers were in evidence. They sat in moody detachment, toying with their beverages, wondering perhaps if this was really New York or whether they hadn't wandered into the wrong town. What a place for lovers who want to be alone!

They saw the real tourist influx will begin in June and climb steadily through the summer. It had better begin if Broadway is to survive, for the New Yorkers are spending what money they have to spend at the Fair, and Broadway is becoming a rag, a bone and a hank 'o' hair.

New York, which knows no restraint, frequently deals itself a body-blow by claiming record crowds, thus frightening away many people who would like to visit the city but who have on desire to bang their noggin's against waning hotel accommodations and jostling throngs.

Pay no heed to these lavish claims. The crowds aren't here. Hotel accommodations may be had anywhere, seats to choice theaters are a drug on the market, and the only real annoyance you are likely to encounter is in traffic, where it becomes increasingly difficult to break through the screen of empty taxicabs cruising the streets in the search for fares.

Thus endeth the first weeks of our discontent. But optimism, like stray daisies thrusting their brave little heads through the cracks in the sidewalks, is still alive.

The reason: "No matter how bad things get they couldn't be any worse than they have been."

Black locust is one of the most durable and satisfactory woods for farm fence posts, says E. W. Grubb, forester of the State College Extension Service.

MERCURY OWNERS WRITE AN AD!...

All these statements are actual quotes from letters by owners of the new Mercury 8

"During the last 20 years I have owned and operated many different types and makes of automobile, but I have never yet experienced the thrill and ease of operation that I have with my new Mercury..."

"First car I have ever owned whose gasoline mileage exceeded my expectations...with the speed ranging from 50 to 70 miles an hour, the gasoline mileage was 18.4 miles per gallon..."

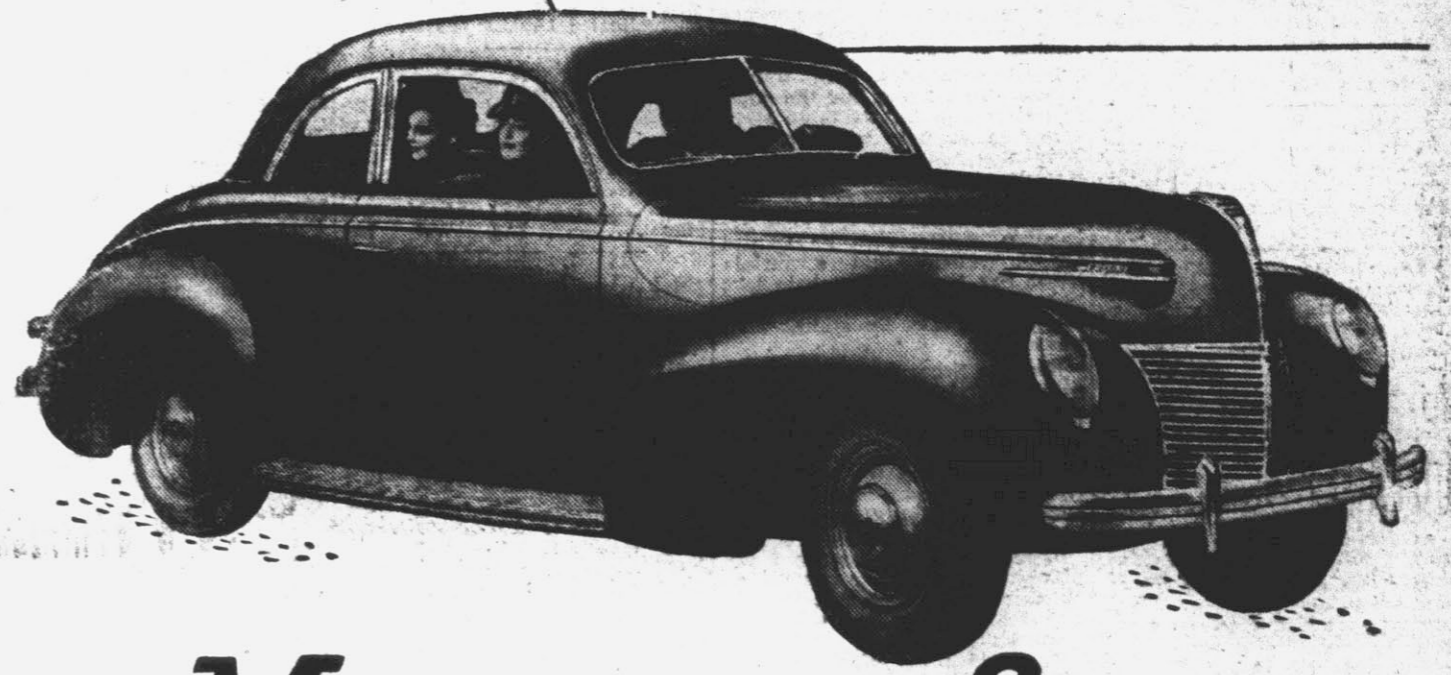

"All cars, of course, have their special points and features, but I don't believe that I have ever before found one that combined all of the desirable features of the Mercury..."

"I am of the opinion that in the Mercury I have small car economy with big car performance, riding qualities, safety and elegance. The way this car handles...is amazing..."

"I have owned both lighter and heavier cars than this but none that exceeded the Mercury in roadability...fulfilled every promise...about 18.8 miles to the gallon...a marvelous product..."

"I drive along the streets and necks are craned...stop, and passers-by gather...go into my favorite parking lot and attendants scramble for the privilege of jockeying it around..."

CRIME IN N. C. PAYS FOR BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Director Handy wasn't appointed until mid-year in 1938; he did not find up his personnel until about September 1, and then he found the quarters (3 small rooms in a local hotel) too small to permit establishment of anything resembling an adequate setup. On January 1, the bureau moved into the fourth floor of the State's "Red Brick" building, where it is now located and where it will stay only until completion of the new Department of Justice building.

Up on that top floor there has been accumulated almost all the equipment needed for a top-flight crime detection agency. There are microscopes of all sorts and descriptions with which Firearms Specialist J. W. Powell can determine whether a bullet was fired from a certain gun. Identification Expert Malvin C. Hoover (once in the FBI bossed by his namesake, Edgar) can compare finger prints to his heart's content and with the newest devices for so doing. Documents can be subjected to all sorts of tests to determine their authorship or authenticity. Hairs can be tested to see whether they came from the head of a certain suspect or from another. There's everything the scientific sleuth can want in doing his sleuthing.

And so Agents Oscar Adkins, Guy Scott and Harry P. Paul can gather evidence in the field, send it into Raleigh and soon get the benefit of the soundest and best results of scientific research.

That these men have been as successful in their field as the famed Federal FBI operatives is evidenced by the scores of convictions all over the state and by scores of letters from Solicitors, Judges and Sheriffs attesting that these convictions came through State Bureau efforts.

The bureau enters cases only when requested by local authorities or upon specific direction of the Governor under whose direct command it now operates. After July 1 it will become part of the State Department of Justice, with the Attorney General as its big boss, but Director Handy says there will be little but a nominal change; with the functions and activities about as now.

The Bureau's operatives have to date been successful by a judicious mixture of applied scientific, modern methods with the old, but still completely essential, application of common sense and everlasting stick-to-it.

On the one hand, as an example of applied science, was the case from Harnett county in which one of the commissioners had received an extortion note, threatening dire consequences if he did not put a packet containing $100 in a rural mail box. A tricky scheme to rip the writer as he called for a dummy package filed; but suspicion was directed toward a young man and a scientific comparison of his handwriting with the extortion notes brought from him a complete confession.

On the other hand, illustrating the use of horse sense and a refusal to give up, was the recent Murphy horror in which a nurse was criminally assaulted and a patient robbed by a marauder who broke into the hospital at night.

Local authorities were frankly baffled—their theory laid the crime to a white man; but the State Agent called in to help was convinced from the nurse's story that the manner of the assault pointed unerringly to a Negro as her assailant. He had no clues but just kept circulating around until he learned almost casually that a certain Negro had hired a taxicab to take him from Marion to Atlanta, Ga., the morning after the crime. That was enough.

Now the Negro is on Death Row, pending decision of the Supreme court on his appeal from a first degree and rape double-capital crime conviction.

Then there was the recent trial of three men and a woman for the murder more than three years ago of Oliver Hawn in Catawba county. There came an apparently insignificant "tip" from a convict at Caledonia prison farm that he could give some information about the Hawn killing.

The Bureau was called in; Agent Adkins went to work on the case and as the result of his unflinching work there was a wholesale verdict of guilty of second degree murder.

On file in the Handy office is a letter from the Sheriff of Catawba county which says flatly and without equivocation that except for the efficient work of Adkins there would have been no trial, much less a conviction of anyone.

The Bureau has not sought publicity—and has received almost none except that attending its efforts in the Goldsboro case.

Your correspondent found Director Handy willing to answer direct questions, but not to volunteer material which might be used to popularize and advertise the Bureau. Expert Hoover was courteous and competent in showing the writer all the $6,000 worth of equipment and the nearly 20,000 finger prints now on file in the Bureau.

On the Goldsboro case investigation the Director was discreetly mum if not completely evasive, but he did remark smilingly:

"That's a case we'll be damned if we don't."

"That's a case we'll be damned if we don't."

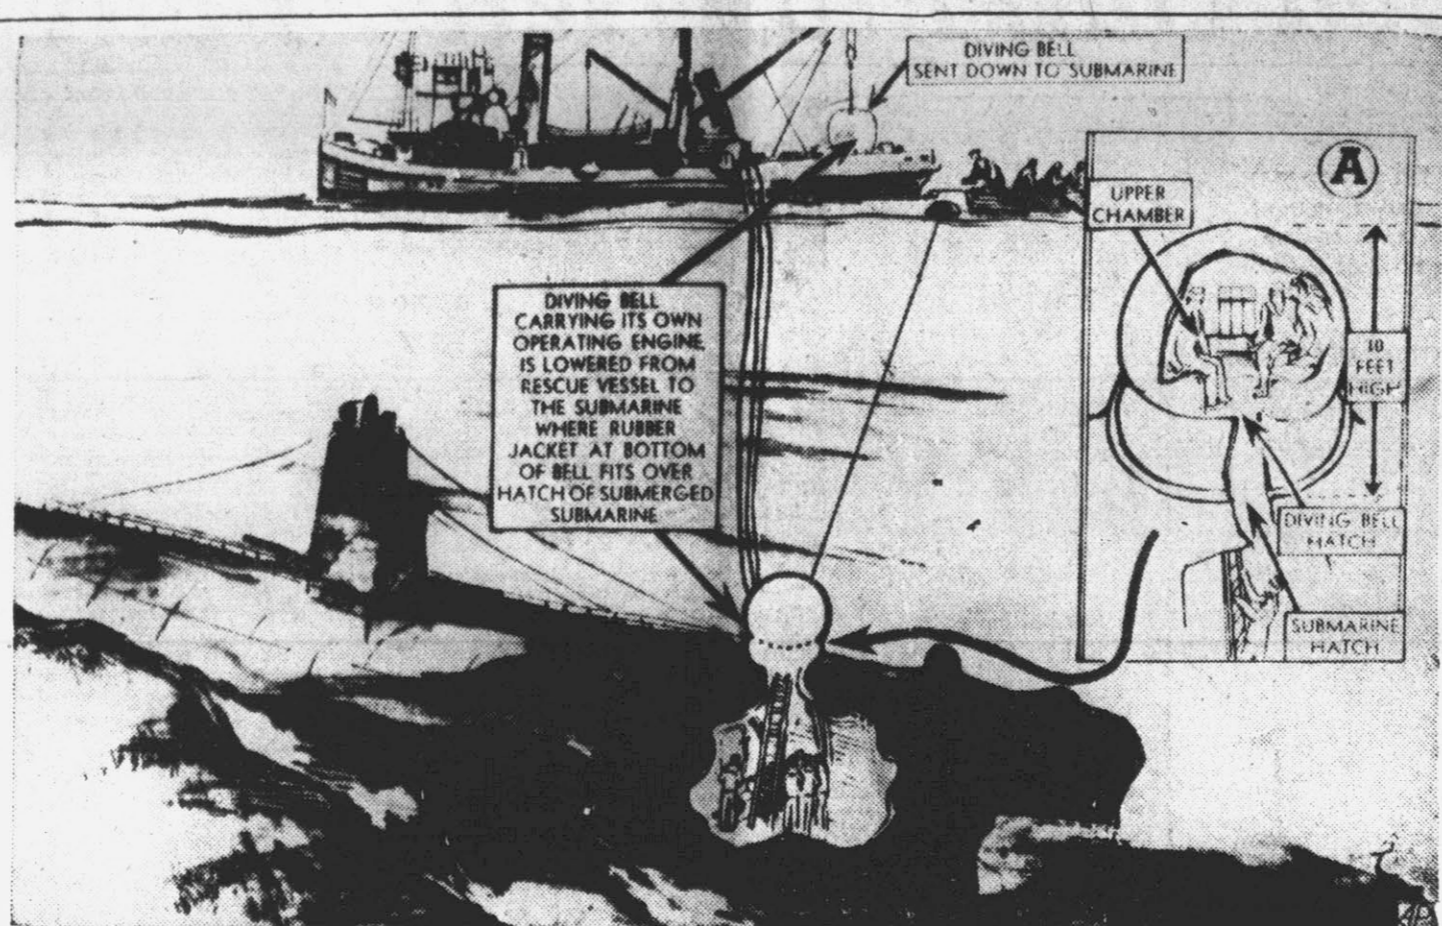

But if it's breakable, your correspondent predicts that Handy and company will break it.

New York Cotton

New York, May 25.—(AP)—After hitting a fast rallying pace at the opening of today's market, sufficient profit-taking opposition appeared to chop down prices substantially at the close.

At the best, gains ran up two or more points, but final plus marks generally were in small fractions, and numerous issues finished unchanged to down a shade. Transfers approximated 1,000,000 shares.
