ABANDON HOPE OF SAVING MEN IN SUBMARINE

Official Announcement Made By British Admiralty

START WORK ON SALVAGE EFFORT

Builders of Ill-Fated Craft Express Belief Men Died From Chlorine Gas Aboard Sub.

London, June 3.—(AP)—The Admiralty officially abandoned hope for the men aboard the submarine Thetis at 4:30 p. m., today.

Birkenhead, Eng.—Hope of rescuing any of the 98 men in the wrecked submarine Thetis was officially abandoned today at the offices of Cammel Laird, Ltd., which built the vessel and it was stated the men probably had died from chlorine gas.

Defeat for the rescuers meant the heaviest loss of life in history in an undersea craft.

An official of Cammel Laird announced shortly after 3 p. m. (9 a. m. EST) "We have now no hope of saving further lives."

"We consider the men died from chlorine gas. The ship carried a large quantity of chlorine which we think would have escaped owing to the nature of which she laid."

The new $1,500,000 Thetis became embedded in mud at 45 degree angle during a test dive at 1:45 p. m. Thursday.

The 200-foot craft was in water only 100 feet deep and when first found Friday morning 18 feet of her hull was above the surface.

While attempts were being made to keep the bow of the craft above water, a tidal wave came in about dusk Friday and after the hull had been visible for seven hours, swept it under sea.

When the tide slackened the hull failed to reappear. It was at this point that the Admiralty and the public were first advised that any lives would be saved in addition to those of four men who had escaped yesterday morning by the Davis "lung".

The association also voted to put a full-time alumnae secretary in the field, with some help from the college, to follow up the excellent beginnings made this year by the art-time secretary, Miss Elizabeth Copeland, Ahoskie.

Miss Evelyn Tugman, Roanoke Rapids, and Henry Ogleby, principal of Grifton High school, were named as new members of the executive committee.

Chapters of alumnae from Raleigh, Roanoke Rapids, Rocky Mount, New Bern and other cities had representatives at the meeting; and every graduating class except one since 1910 was represented, the honor class of 25 years ago having brought together for the occasion nearly a third of its members, and the 10-year class having had over 30 members present.

The Class of 1939 was welcomed into the association by the alumnae president, Mrs. Stancil, and response was made by the class president, Miss Lucile Lewis, Wilmington.

At the beginning of the program proper, the president spoke of the theme, "Silver Linings," and called on members of honor classes to interpret it.

One member told of the beginnings of the Training School Quarterly 25 years ago, from which later came the present student publications. Another spoke of the activities of the same class in music and dramatics. And Miss Daisy Bailey Waite, Raleigh, a former E. C. T. C. teacher, and Miss Maria Graham, faculty adviser of the Hosiery Sanatorium, must notify the commission charged with the selection before July 1. State Senator Joe Blythe, chairman of the group, said today.

Senator Blythe said all correspondence about the location should be addressed to Representative Oduis M. Mull, Shelby, who is committee secretary. Senator Blythe, Representative Mull and Henderson's Representative L. L. Burdick, all from the West, compose the committee which will select the site.

The chairman, who comes from Mecklenburg, said that final and definite selection of a site will be made and announced before August 1. It is this paucity of time in which to make the choice that makes it necessary that all requests for consideration be submitted to the committee not later than the first of July, he said.

The committee will gladly visit all localities interested and will give full consideration to the advantages and claims advanced by every place. Senator Blythe said.

He gave absolutely no hint that any location is favorite either with him or with any other member of the committee; but he readily admitted that the members are really "in a spot" when it comes to making a final choice—and this the more true because practically all the contending localities have real and valid evidence to support their intentions.

America Needs More Employers

By ROGER W. BABSON New York, June 3.—The church which I attend at Wellesley Hills has what is called an "Open Door." The church is open every afternoon and evening, seven days a week, and fifty-two weeks a year for those who have problems. Some layman or laywomen is in charge of the work each afternoon or evening. There are fifty of these business men and women of the community who are on duty during the year. In addition to being of help to those who call with their various problems, these conferences are of great value in enabling our leading citizens to learn first-hand of the spiritual, educational, economic and civil troubles which the less fortunate have.

Changes In Wage-Hour Law To Exempt Leaf Stemmers Predicted By J. C. Lanier

Committee Amendment Slated Pass House Monday

1,500 LABORERS EMPLOYED HERE

Exemption of Tobacco Workers From Measure Would Insure Jobs for Many Local People.

J. C. Lanier, attorney retained by the independent leaf dealers to seek changes in the wage-hour law which would enable "from 15,000 to 20,000 tobacco stemmers to retain their jobs," expressed the opinion such an amendment would be enacted by the House Monday and subsequently would pass in the Senate.

A bill has just been reported out by the House labor committee which retains all the provisions of the original amendment by Representative Barden exempting tobacco handling in early stages from the labor measure. Barden stated in Washington today.

The bill amending the wage-hour law embodies exemptions which cover all such activities as handling, grading, drying, tying, stripping and all other steps to storage in commercial warehouses before being manufactured.

Mr. Lanier, who has "practically lived in Washington" recently while working for exemptions in the labor law, said he expected the amendment would pass the House with little difficulty. The attorney has been confined to his home with illness, but expressed the hope he would be able to return to the capital city shortly to renew his activities in behalf of the measure before the amendment is taken up on the Senate floor.

"We have been working on this amendment since the wage-hour law took effect on October 24, last year," declared Mr. Lanier. Its adoption will enable from 15,000 to 20,000 tobacco stemmers in North Carolina to keep their jobs, he added. Mr. Lanier estimated that adoption of the amendment would mean that approximately 1,500 persons, many of them colored women, would be employed in Greenville factories this year who otherwise probably would be without means of support.

Mr. Lanier explained that approximately 65 per cent of the tobacco sold here is shipped abroad and that unless the amendment is enacted the independents probably will have to resort to stemming by machine or ship the tobacco unstemmed, which would result in the loss of a large payroll.

He served Wake county in the state senate in the sessions of 1927 and 1929, and was elected to the presidency of the North Carolina Bar Association in 1936. He was also state elector at large in the same year.

Mr. Broughton has always taken an active interest in religious affairs of Raleigh, having served as superintendent of the Tabernacle Sunday School of Raleigh since 1913.

TAX REVISION SUGGESTED BY BUSINESS MEN

Eight Point Program Recommended To Committee

MANUFACTURER'S PROPOSED PLAN

Changes in Tax Structure Designed to Put Idle Men, Machinery and Funds Back to Work

Washington, June 3.—(AP)—An eight-point program of tax revision designed to "put idle men, idle machinery and idle funds to work" was recommended to the House Ways and Means committee today by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Noel Sergeant, secretary of the association, presented the program with the declaration it would go far to promote the objectives outlined last week by Secretary Morgenthau, that is, increased flow of capital into provide industry and the promotion of tax equity.

The recommendations, paralleling many of those made by Morgenthau, follow.

Reduction of federal surtax rates which discourage investment of savings in private industry; abolition of the present capital gains and losses tax provision; exemption of corporate dividends to individuals from normal income tax since it involved double taxation; elimination of the taxation of intercorporate dividends which results in double taxation; abolition of the undistributed earnings tax and the combined excess profits and capital stock tax; elimination of the ban on consolidated returns and of the ban on offsetting previous capital losses against current profits.

Other Developments. The Supreme court conferred for the last time before adjourning for the summer on Monday.

After delivering decisions and announcing whether it will review a number of cases, the court will adjourn Monday until next October.

A report from usually well-informed persons said President Roosevelt might veto the $1,218,000,000 farm bill which an added complication into congressional efforts to revise the tax structure.

Roosevelt has asserted repeatedly that Congress called last year to keep promise that new revenues would be raised to meet certain farm benefit payments.

Washington, D. C., June 3.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's temperature had returned to normal today, but physicians ordered him to remain in his study as a precaution against a heavy schedule of activity during next week's visit of Britain's king and queen.

The President, who has been suffering from a recurrence of a sinus infection, got up today and tackled an accumulation of "paper work."

He received no callers and, because of threatening weather, decided to forego a Potomac river cruise.

However, the President did sign legislation designed to strengthen national defense from Alaska toward the Orient by surveying treacherous, uncharted waters.

It was an act providing $1,425,000 for construction of two ships for the coast and geodetic survey which will expedite the surveys at the request of naval officials.

Whitehurst-Davis. Beautiful in its simplicity and dignity, was the wedding of Miss Evelyn Davis and Grover Whitehurst, which was solemnized in the home of Mrs. Riddle James May this morning at eight o'clock, in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends.

The Reverend M. Y. Self of Bethel, officiated, using the ring ritual.

The bride descended the stairway, where she was met by the groom. The vows were spoken before an improvised white altar entwined with English ivy, which was flanked with baskets of Queen Anne's lace and feverfew, and lighted by white cathedral candles.

The bride wore a dress of navy blue with navy and white accessories. Her corsage was of brides' noses and gypsophylla.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride and groom left for a trip to Washington, D. C., and the World's Fair. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Whitehurst will make their home in Bethel, where Mr. Whitehurst is engaged in farming.

MODES of the MOMENT

Many of this summer's cocktail frocks are dark and sheer. This one of dark blue lace, designed to go on to an informal dinner, is topped with a fragile hat of singed white ostrich tips mounted on a peaked cap of black velvet.

garden flowers. Upon arrival the guests were greeted in the front hall by Misses Audrey, Edith Gynn, Virginia Lee and Lila Mae Allen. Various games and contests were enjoyed during the evening. Mrs. B. L. Tyson, Mrs. Sam Pollard and Clifton Crawford played a number of tricks and all joined in singing several songs. A plate consisting of chicken salad sandwiches, potato chips, salted nuts and cakes and an iced drink was served. Miss Allen received a large number of gifts, expressing the high esteem in which she is held in this community.

GAME WARDEN GETS HIS MAN

Raleigh, June 3.—Determined and wily people these game protectors. Three men in Richmond county have been arrested, convicted and fined because Protector Walter Bray just made up his mind he'd get them. Reports kept reaching the protector that illegal fishing with gill nets and wire fish traps was going on in Robert Dell Pond. The protector made several normal and ordinary early morning efforts to catch the culprits in the act, but it was a case of no soap either time. Bray noticed that every time he'd approach there would be a shrill whistle and when he got to the water's edge there wouldn't be a soul in sight. So he went out one night while it was yet pitch black, found himself a nice hiding place in the underbrush near the place where the nets and traps were located and just stayed there until daybreak. "Just as it started to get light, the three men showed up, got in their boat and went out to the nets and traps," reported District Game Protector Tom Carter of Rockingham to the Department of Conservation and Development. "After they had taken out some of the fish, Bray walked down to the edge of the pond and ordered them to come ashore and surrender. He also ordered them to bring the nets and traps in." The convicted men were John Spivey, J. F. Spivey and Clyde Terry, all of Richmond county. After the trial Protector Bray learned that his inability to sneak up on the men in daylight was due to the fact that they habitually posted a small boy in a tree nearby as a lookout. When the boy would see anyone approaching he would emit a shrill whistle. Illegal fishing for warm water game fish in rivers and ponds with nets and traps is rapidly being broken up by the county game protectors who are making it hotter and hotter for violators. Commissioner John D. Chalk of the game and inland fishing division says.

Forty Years Ago Today

There are Officers, Too. Greenville is shipping cattle to Richmond. The animals are kept up there and stall-fed a while, butchered, shipped back here and sold for Richmond beef. A little stall feeding at home might save the freight both ways. But we people do business that way and follow the same methods about other articles we consume—cotton goods and tobacco, for instance—pay freight two ways instead of manufacturing the raw material at home.

ECTC ALUMNAE MEETING HELD

(Continued from Page One) from the college, spoke on "Why I Sent My Daughter to E. C. T. C.," declaring that she loved the college so well that her daughter had "just grown up expecting to attend E. C. T. C.," and that she had sent her to her own college because the motto of that college is to serve and because she wished her children to attend schools that are "on the incline rather than the decline" in growth. President L. R. Meadows spoke in greeting to the visitors, pointing out the needs of such a growing institution—a gymnasium, a boys' dormitory, another girls' dormitory, as 36 girls had to be quartered in the infirmary last fall, additional units in the training school, and a college community building. He made several suggestions as to how the alumnae could help. After the program there was a luncheon in the college dining hall. Los Angeles county's charity budget has risen from $25,000,000 to $42,000,000 in two years.

College To Offer Librarian Course

East Carolina Teachers College is introducing for the first time courses in Library Science in order to enable teachers to qualify under the requirements of the State Department of Certification as librarians in small high schools. To meet this requirement, a teacher must have had at least six semester hours credit in Library Science courses. The state high school supervisor has set up for the present this minimum requirement in order to induce teachers to qualify for this work and in order that there may be some teacher in each school who has some training in handling a high school library. Teachers may meet this requirement in a six-weeks session of the summer school by earning the six semester hours, which is the equivalent of nine quarter hours. East Carolina Teachers College is planning to offer this work during both the first and second terms of its summer school of 1939. There has already been a large demand for this work and it is expected that classes in the Library Science work will be large.

Announce Prog'm Of Colored School

The Industrial High school of Greenville today announced its program for the commencement exercises to be held in York T. Temple next Wednesday night, June 7, at 8:15 o'clock.

F. D. Bluford, president of A. and T. College of Greensboro, will deliver the address, and will be introduced by C. M. Epps, principal of the Industrial High school.

Music for the occasion is being furnished by the Grimesband and Glee Club of the Industrial High school.

The Rev. T. McM. Grant, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church will lead the invocation. The salutatory address will be delivered by Clementine Dawson and Sara M. Taylor will make the valedictory.

James L. Little, chairman of the school board, will present the diplomas, while B. B. Sugg, another member of the board, will present the seventh grade certificates. J. H. Rose, superintendent of the Greenville city schools, will make appropriate remarks.

Principal Eppes will present the visitors. Vocal numbers by the Glee Club are "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "In Bright Mansions Above," and "Lord, I Want to Be a Christian," which will be sung by the Glee Club and audience. A solo, "Joshua Fit De Battle of Jericho," will be rendered by Rosamond Johnson.

J. H. Moyer Sustained Broken Bone In Foot

J. Howard Moyer, one of seven Greenville men who miraculously escaped drowning when the 54-foot yacht Dixie went down in Pamlico Sound Sunday night, is suffering with a broken bone in his foot. As soon as the sunburn heals the foot will be placed in a cast and Mr. Moyer will be confined to his home for some time.

Mr. Moyer was said to have suffered the broken bone Sunday night when a wave knocked him against an iron rail on Monday afternoon when he and three others were attempting to go for aid in a small life boat. On the trip Mr. Moyer stood up in the boat holding a piece of canvas as a sail to get the benefit of any breeze.

J. H. Waldrop, another of the party, said this afternoon Elijah Edwards of Belhaven, also on the ill-fated trip, had called and told him that the boat had been brought to port, water pumped out and several personal articles, such as watches and other things too heavy to wash away were found in the bottom of the craft. Mr. Waldrop and others left for Belhaven this afternoon to get the belongings found in the boat.

CONGREGATION MAKES COPIES OF THE BIBLE

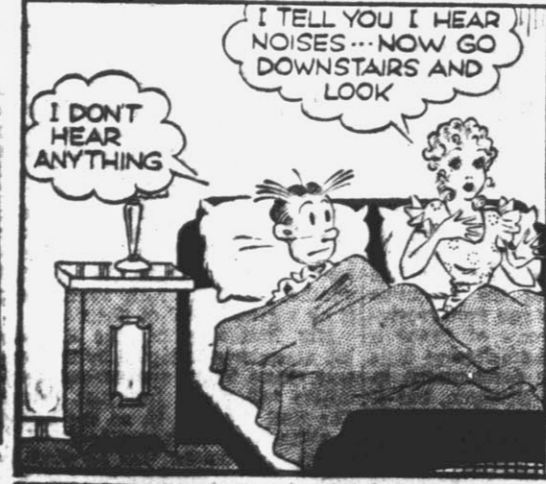

Cleveland—(AP)—The Bethany English Lutheran church has found a new way to study the Bible. Each of the church's 450 members contributed toward producing a handwritten copy of the New Testament. Many copies pages, some worked on the binding and others on the hand tooled leather cover. The Rev. J. H. L. Trout, pastor, devised the project "to increase interest in the reading and study of the Scriptures."

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, June 3. — Former Governor and Senator Cam Morrison of Charlotte dropped into Raleigh and the Governor's office Friday.

Says State Auditor George Ross: "The next governor of North Carolina will be that gentleman upon whom the present Governor leans a favorable nod."

"I am not for any man who would repudiate the administration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt."

"No user of strong language under ordinary circumstances, Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell lapsed into the profane the other day when a news man, commenting on the continuous and unbroken increase in gasoline tax collections:

"North Carolinians may not pay through the nose for some things, but they are certainly paying thru the nose—at a rate of more than two million a month in gallonage tax on gasoline."

"We met and I was elected chairman; Odus Mull was named Secretary; and we made L. B. Burgin treasurer of the committee," said State Senator Joe Hlythe of Charlotte, of the committee to choose a site for an eastern North Carolina tuberculosis sanatorium.

"But what in the world do you want with a treasurer?" asked a friend.

"Well of course we don't but we wanted to give every member of the committee some recognition," replied the Mecklenburger.

This week's revocations brought 14 drivers' licenses taken away

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

Chapter 30
Fred Jones

JOCELYN led the two men through the side entrance and up the stairway to the back of the house into the room which had been Bob's. When the driver had deposited two cheap new suitcases and left, the little man turned to her.

"I'll pay two weeks in advance, he stated, again opening his wallet. "How much?"

"Fifty dollars a week."

He handed her five twenty-dollar bills, then removed his cap. His mouse-colored hair was clipped so short his scalp gleamed through it.

"My name is Fred Jones," he said. "I've been sick in the hospital for months. Up near Frisco. They thought I'd never get better, but I fooled them. Now I got to get well and when I saw your ad in the 'Frisco paper I figured this was just the right spot. I won't be no trouble to you, Miss. You won't hardly know I'm here."

"That's quite all right," she managed what she imagined to be a brisk businesslike smile. "Just ask for anything you want. The beach is only a few yards away; the stables are right back of the house; the swimming pool is the side where you came in. Would you like to have lunch down stairs?"

Turning his back to her he stared out the windows. "Can I get it up here? I'm pretty worn out, Miss. I gotta get some sleep."

Taking this last remark as her cue for departure she hurried to her own room and locked the door. She slipped on her slippers and looked at her watch. One hundred dollars! She hugged herself gleefully. She'd show Tally how helpless she was. Now, if someone else would come this afternoon...

Yet, after her jubilation died down she began wondering about her queer little guest. Disturbing suspicions darted into her brain. That gray pallor; that clipped hair; those drooping, close-set eyes. Hospital, maybe, prison, more likely. If he had come out of prison was he dangerous? Should she let him stay without demanding references? Still, hotels didn't ask references as far as she knew. Besides, she had accepted his money. Probably he had been sick in some sanitarium. Anyhow, she needed the hundred dollars badly.

Too, after what had happened this morning, she had to show Nola and Tally that she could make a go of this place without their help, so she deliberately thrust doubt and suspicion from her mind and went down to the kitchen to supervise the luncheon.

That night at dinner Jocelyn had to introduce Fred Jones to Nola and Thorndyke. Thorndyke, observing the man's flashy clothes and poor grammar, retired into aloofness. Meeting Jocelyn's glance he frowned in tacit disapproval. She eyed him defiantly and maintained a careful cordiality toward Jones.

This was the first time today she had seen Nola. She felt certain that Tally had repeated the conversation of the morning to her, for she spoke little and was not at all friendly. He would tell her, Jocelyn thought rebelliously. Nola probably considered her a stubborn little fool. Well, let them think whatever they pleased.

White And Obscuring
AFTER dinner Jones announced his intention of going for a walk; Thorndyke said he was going to town; Nola departed for the Mack's. She had been over there all afternoon, Lyn reflected resentfully. At least Jones' presence at dinner had prevented Thorndyke from repeating his fatuous overtures of the night before.

He appeared resigned tonight, though. He had not even looked at Nola.

As the long hours of the evening stretched toward twelve Jocelyn knew a depressing loneliness. This side of the house was so quiet. So sort of lifeless. This was the sort of night that ghosts might walk, if one believed in such a thing. Fog, white and obscuring, cut off the sky and the ocean; wavered, salty and damp, through the screens of the windows to permeate the rooms with its cloudy fingers.

Sandy, curling at her feet beside the fireplace in the great drawing-room, moved and groaned in his sleep. Jocelyn tried to concentrate on her book.

The slow tread of feet across the stone veranda outside startled her until she remembered Mr. Jones who had gone walking. Why, he must have walked miles during this time. Adjusting her book, she pretended absorption in its pages, fighting off a vague fear of being alone with this strange little man.

He came through the room and went on up the stairway without speaking, evidently not seeing her. Yet more startling than his eerie footsteps was the chuckle that drifted down to her now. She had never heard a sound like it before. It was gleeful, yet merciless; ecstatic, yet somehow demonic.

Her uneasy movement awakened Sandy. He yawned, sat up and put his paws on her knee, wagging his tail. She lifted him into her lap, relieved to feel something warm and alive against her. She tried to shrug off her mood. Imagination. The three servants were only a few rooms away.

Yet the melancholy of her mood persisted. She wished Thorn would come home. Twice she started toward the stairway and came back to the fire. At this moment it seemed impossible that people were talking and laughing and being happy on the other side of the house. It wasn't the sturdy partition which kept her away, she reflected; it was a stronger barrier. A barrier she had erected by means of selfishness, resentment, and stubborn pride. There was no need of this loneliness; this feeling of isolation. She could have been in there right now with Bob and the others. She could have made herself one of them. But worst of all she thought miserably, the man she loved was on the other side of that barrier.

Tears of yearning and misery and self-reproach splashed down her cheeks, tumbling off to dampen the dog's black fur. He wriggled around, thrust up his head and kissed her chin with his pink tongue.

"You haven't been very happy, either, have you, Sandy?" she whispered. "Deep down in your heart you'd like to make friends with Tex, wouldn't you?"

He growled low in his throat, barked sharply. She turned her head to see Fred Jones peering at her from the doorway. She had not heard him come down the stairs. With an effort at composure she asked:

"Did you wish something, Mr. Jones?"

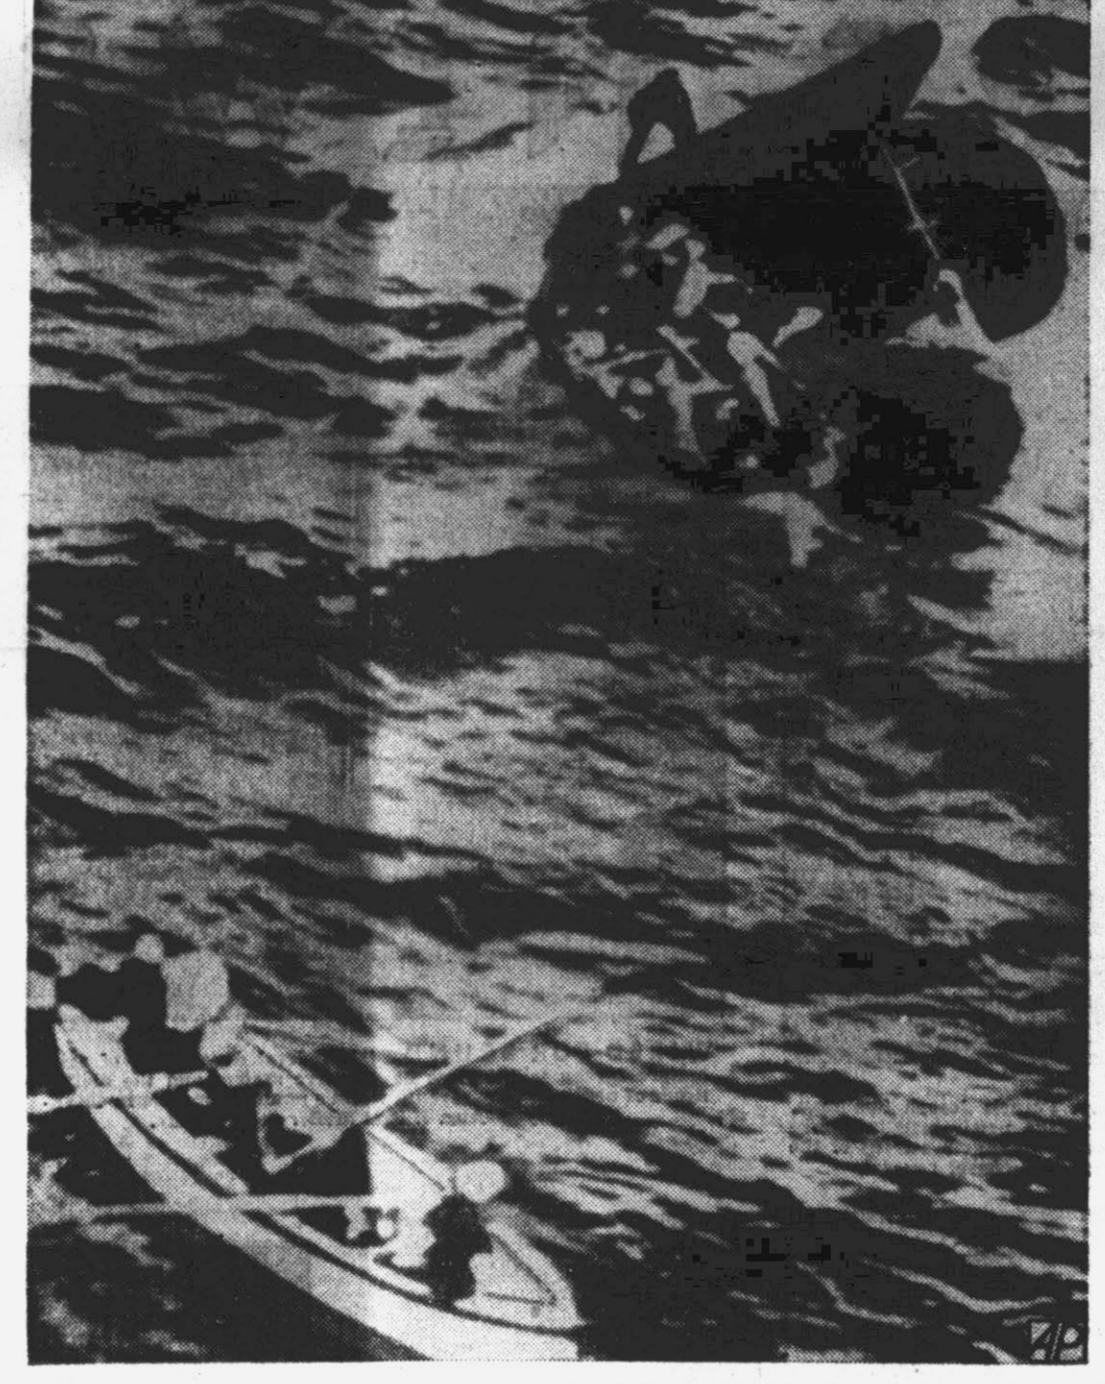

Relief
"ME? No." He came on into the room, walking with a queer shambling gait. He kept looking at her. "You own this place, Miss?"

"Part of it. Why?"

"Just wondered. Will this fog keep up?"

"Until morning, probably. We sometimes have fog several nights running but it's always nice and sunny in the afternoons... be quiet, Sandy! Sandy had kept up the low growling and even her stern admonition failed to quiet him.

RESCUERS SEEK TO SAVE CREW OF THETIS

Efforts of rescuers to save the more than 80 men aboard the new British submarine Thetis, the nose of which is stuck into mud on the bottom of the Irish sea near Birkenhead, England, are shown in this air view. The tail of the submarine is shown projecting above the choppy surface of the sea and one man may be seen standing on it. Two boats hover close to the wreck. Four of the men aboard escaped shortly after the vessel was located and the Admiralty believes all will come out alive.

This group must now slash their standard of living, it means even less trade and fewer jobs. No WPA or government relief program has yet been devised to help the investor, executive, or employer group. In short, an entirely new problem is developing today in connection with unemployment. The employer class is now suffering with all others. Since they are the ones who must provide the jobs, the time has come for action.

Private Ownership Or Fascism?
If we are to continue our system of private ownership, there must be radical changes in the attitude of the government, labor leaders, and even preachers toward employers. Unless the state is to take over all industry and be responsible for giving everybody a job, then it is essential that it help rather than hinder employers. When there is a shortage of work, the need is for more employers. This is the simple and only answer to unemployment!

We are, therefore, for a class situation. Either we must change our American system of government and turn to state capitalism (which ultimately develops into Fascism) or else we must change our attitude toward employers, builders, and investors. We have played at this thing too long. Now that we are suffering, we can delay the choice no longer. When scores of well-paid executives are forced to sell their homes, slash their standard of living, and return to manual day labor, then we come smack up against a problem which has not yet occurred during the depression.

Must Encourage Unemployment
If the great need today is for more employees, we must encourage employers. The following are three days this can be done:

1. Taxes can and must be lowered. I refer to city taxes, state taxes, federal taxes, and the other hundred and one taxes now inflicted upon employers. This, moreover, is not an appeal for the rich. As far as I am concerned, Roosevelt can put a 90 cent tax on the "play boys." I am asking for lower taxes on homes, business blocks and factories. No matter how much money the federal government is willing to loan for new houses, building will not increase until taxes are reduced. It is the taxes which you must pay on your home and on the addition to your plant that hold back building. Merely lowering the interest rate on mortgages will not encourage you to build a new house if your taxes are going to increase more than what you save on mortgage interest!

2. Labor must let up on employers for awhile. I believe in collective bargaining. The wage workers of the corporation have as much right to combine and negotiate through some person of their own choosing as have the stockholders. When labor leaders, however, think that they must get a little more each year for their members in order to hold their jobs and collect their dues, it is very dangerous. Wage workers should realize that their leaders may serve them better at times by urging a reduction in wages or an increase in hours. The current theory about hours is wrong. Reducing hours ultimately increases prices so that the net result is a loss in the number of jobs. Only as more is produced, is there more to divide.

3. Restriction and regulation as to building operations and other new plans of employers should temporarily be lifted. Every kind of handicap today is placed upon a man who wishes to build a new factory or store or even to put an addition on his plant. I recently wished to have a new toilet put into my building and was obliged to consult four different government officials to make this simple improvement. Employers must now secure city permits, state permits, federal permits, labor union permits, fire permits, smoking permits, and various permits of other kinds before they can spend a dollar!

Not only this, but people in the neighborhood oppose the addition on the factory because it will create more noise or something else. The time has come when parents must choose between having noise, smoke and a job for their children, or no noise and no job. In the meantime, employers are saying to themselves, "What's the use? Life is too short." As a result, the number of employers is getting smaller every day instead of getting bigger as is needed in order to create new jobs.

But the above is not the worst. While the numbers of employers in the basic industries—food, clothing, and shelter—is rapidly declining, yet those engaged in promoting gambling, liquor, race tracks, slot machines, night clubs, and pulp magazines are constantly increasing. This is the most serious factor of all. The character of our young people is being undermined, while the men over fifty are being thrown into the scrap-heap. I am still an optimist for the long pull, believing that the American people will some day come to their senses. This "some day" must come very soon, however, if the unemployment problem is to be remedied under our current form of government!

Horses Up In Value.
Belfast.—(AP)—European war preparedness has pushed up horse-flesh prices at Irish Country Pairs. France, Poland, Switzerland, Britain, Germany and Italy are buying all the best horses for their crack cavalry regiments. Troops have risen from around $100 to $300 each. Traffic laws were in effect in England as early as 1853, long before the invention of the automobile.

Greenies Rained Out; Martins Win To Take Loop Lead

PLAY AT HOME MONDAY NIGHT

Wilson Beats Tarboro Snow Hill Licks Tarboro

The Greenville-New Bern game scheduled for last night at Guy Smith park was rained out, but the other six teams saw action. Williamston defeated Kinston 6-2 and went ahead of the idle Greenies to take first place in the league standings.

Wilson won over Tarboro 5-4 and Snow Hill beat Goldsboro 5-2. The Greenies will not be at home today nor tomorrow. They will go to New Bern tonight and will begin a two-game series with the Martins in Williamston tomorrow afternoon.

The next home game, Monday night, will be against the Williamston Martins and good weather prevailing, a large crowd is expected to witness the contest as it will be the first game here since Wednesday night, when the Greenies took the Martins seven to one.

MAX DIDN'T HURT HIM!

"Max didn't hurt me with a single punch... At that, he can hit hard." So quote Lou Nova, here shown in his dressing room at New York after his victory over Max Baer in their boxing bout. Just as elated as Lou is Former Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock, whose hand is on Nova's head. By winning the fight Nova also won the chance to fight the winner of the Joe Louis-Tony Galento bout.

Rain last night again interfered with the Greenville softball league, adding two more games to the growing list of postponed contests. Last night's two contests were to have been games which were rained out on May 24. With several games ending in ties and rain blocking others, President J. D. Simpson will have a task on his hands to get all of the scheduled games run off, unless some afternoon games are played. So far, however, no decision has been reached regarding the daylight contests.

GREENIES SIGN TWO CHUNKERS

June Badger Released; Simpson, Daniels On Idle List

Manager Rube Wilson of the Greenies today revealed that two new hurlers had been signed who have been with Kinston part of this season; and Norman "Red" Daughtry, also a right hander, whose home is in Norfolk, Va., but who has been playing with Suffolk. Both Ralph Simpson and Alex Daniels are on the suspended list now. Skipper Rube said he expected the signing of the two men to bolster the pitching staff of the Greenies considerably. Both have good records and were signed only after close investigation by the Greenville club officials.

Three Negroes Faced By Whiskey Charges

Two Greenville Negroes and one from near Paoctulus were taken in custody last night on charges of transporting illegal liquor. The trio was "jumped" by Beaufort county officers in that county and were chased across the line. They were caught on the Washington-Paoctulus dirt road. Prince Grimes and his brother were taken in custody at the spot, but Julius Staton, sitting on the outside of the front seat, jumped from the car and ran. Pitt officers later took him in custody near Paoctulus. All three were taken back to Beaufort county where they will face trial. Local officers, who were called to aid in the case since the trio crossed the county line, said 15 gallons of bootleg liquor were found in the car. That combination of nitrogen and hydrogen known as ammonia at one time was obtained by destructive distillation of the horns and hoofs of animals. The resulting solution of the gas was known therefore as spirit of hartshorn.

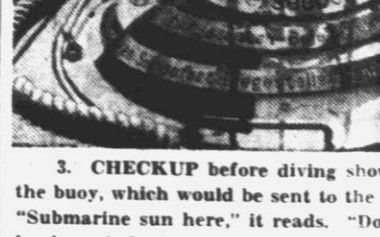

SUBMARINE SCHOOL

1. ON THE DECK of training ships young Germans go about their duties at the "unterseebootsschule" Germany has established at Neustadt, on the Baltic.

2. IN THE CLASSROOM, the program to keep the navigation of a submarine's navigation room straight. Officers keep moving it out of position to simulate operating conditions. Those indicators show how well the beginners are doing.

3. CHECKUP before diving shows everything is okay with the buoy, which would be sent to the top if boat didn't come up. "Submarine sun here," it reads. "Don't leave this buoy." Similar buoy helped navy spot Squalus quickly in recent disaster.

4. JUST IN CASE of accident, students learn how to use this lung. U. S. has similar equipment, but Squalus rescues were made by diving bell.

FRIENDSHIP OF TWO PEOPLES, the Dutch and the Belgian, was demonstrated again in Europe when Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands arrived at Brussels to repay King Leopold (both shown, above) for his official visit to her country last year. The thousands massed at the station cheered when handsome King Leopold, greeting his royal guest, kissed her hand.

Gas Tax For Fiscal Year To Exceed $24,000,000

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL. Raleigh, June 2.—North Carolina's revenue from the gallonage tax on gasoline yielded in 11 months of the current fiscal year within $421,212 of its returns for the full 12 months ended last June 30; and it is now as certain as taxes which are classed in the same "cinch" class as death that this year's complete figures will for the first time in history show a total of more than $24 million dollars. In other words, Tar Heel motor vehicle owners are paying through the gas tank hose at a rate of more than two million dollars a month. Last year's total from the tax was $22,747,032, while through May 31 this year receipts amounted to $22,325,820 with another month to go on the full fiscal counting period. If the average of the last 11 months is maintained the final figure will be $24,355,440, which leaves a margin enough over the 24 million mark to make its attainment a certainty to all practical intents and purposes.

State officials on all sides point out that there is plenty of need for revenue from gasoline—or any other source which goes into the highway fund—in view of the fact that State Highway and Public Works Commission officials have repeatedly estimated that it would cost 40 million dollars to put the state's primary road system in up-to-date condition from the standpoint of adequacy and safety.

It does appear that none of the fund realized from the gasoline tax will be taken under the "contingent diversion" provisions of the revenue act, as all signs point to a sufficiently large balance in the general fund, as of June 30, to meet estimates for the coming biennium. All of which means that Governor Hoey will be able, shortly after July 1, to make further allotment of highway funds for use on the roads. When that time comes, there will be considerable interest in whether he allots to the secondary roads, to the primary roads, or without strings, thus leaving allocation undisturbed.

There hasn't been any outward manifestation of dissension over allocation of funds between primary and secondary roads, but that is always a subject for argument. In previous allocations the governor has been quite kind to the secondaries, with at least two specific grants of funds to them as against only one allocation (the most recent), which was described as "for betterments," thereby leaving the question of what roads should get the money an open one.

Coincidentally with the rise of gasoline tax receipts to more than $22 million so far this year, the yield of the inspection fee on motor fuel passed the million mark, reaching $1,059,546.47 through the May receipts of $100,733.41. This means that the general fund will benefit to the tune of almost a million this year through the unheralded, but none the less actual diversion of this money which is yielded through the inspection levy on gasoline. From the yield expenses of the primary division are paid, but these inspection expenses do not amount to much, if any, more than a hundred thousand a year, with the result that there is left for the general fund some million in "gravy." A somewhat unusual feature of the May revenue report was that every single one of the five motor vehicle bureau tax items showed an increase. Over in the revenue division the net was an increase, but there were several items which fell below May of 1938.

License taxes yielded $189,627.49 this year against $153,386.24 for May, 1938; title fees jumped to $13,415.50 from $10,396.33; bus and franchise tax collected were up to $23,078.85 as against $14,290.13; the gallonage levy netted $2,134,771.94 compared with $2,085,990.59; and the inspection fees soared to $100,733.41 against $85,812.16.

For the whole, the May increase amounted to $151,951.73, or 6.58 per cent.

STATE STANDS TO BENEFIT BY SUGGESTED AMENDMENT

(Continued from Page One) available. Mrs. Bost said—that goal being to raise the average aid to dependent children check to $20 per month per family, calculated on a basis of three children to the family.

The present North Carolina average per family is about $16, she said, which is only about one-half the national average.

While Mrs. Bost is figuratively keeping her fingers crossed and hoping for the best, Nathan Yelton, director of the Old Age and Dependent Childrens Aid Division, is going through the exacting task of preparing the budget for the coming fiscal year, first of the new biennium, which will begin July 1.

After so long a time he has succeeded in getting in the requests from all counties and is in a position to total all these requests up and learn—as he undoubtedly will—that they far exceed in the aggregate, the money his division has to spend.

Then will come the tough job of cutting the requests to fit the funds. In some cases it will not be too hard, as the requests of some counties will be found obviously all out of line and they can be pared without undue wrestling and wrangling. But even after that's done it is likely that there still will not be enough money to go around to all the requests which appear just and reasonable on their face.

One unexpected difficulty has already bobbed up, Mr. Yelton said.

It had been estimated that approximately 75 to 80 per cent of the widows of Confederate veterans would be eligible for transfer from the regular pension lists to the old-age assistance rolls; but although full returns are by no means in yet, the percentage of widows eligible

Dancing The "London Bridge"

Dancers of Soco Gap in the Balsam mountains near Asheville, N. for the transfer is running only between 50 and 60 per cent.

Some have been found too young, others have left the state—still others have remarried or have funds or for some other reason cannot qualify on a basis of "need." None of these reasons apply against their receipt of pensions and they will continue to draw them right along; but the officials were hopeful of getting most of them on the old-age roster where matching of funds by the federal government would make available more money for other old-age beneficiaries.

Mr. Yelton hopes that there will be some increase in the average old-age assistance checks, which now is below $10 per month, but it is extremely doubtful that it can go beyond that mark, if, in fact, it gets there at all.

New York Cotton

New York, June 3.—(AP)—Further mild convalescence was exhibited by the stock market today, but the buying pulse was still well below normal.

While selected stocks, motors, rubbers, rail orders and specialties managed to hold gains of fractions to around a point, numerous issues were virtually at a standstill when the closing gong sounded.

Transactions approximated 200,000 shares.

Bonds followed a narrow trail.

Seek Federal Buyers For N. C. Bean Marts

Goldboro, June 3.—(AP)—W. C. Denmark, operator of the Goldboro market, said today the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation would make a survey to determine the need for placing buyers in Eastern North Carolina to support the bean market.

Representative Barden of the Third district asked yesterday to secure government aid for low-priced beans, replied the agency would begin the survey, Denmark said.

Denmark said bean prices opened again today at 35 to 50 cents a bushel basket.

Man About Manhattan

New York—Times Square at 5 o'clock on a warm, sultry morning is just a wide spot in the road. Everything is changed from gay to grey. Traffic is so sparse that Broadway seems doubled in width. The great electrical displays with last night were fantastic beyond belief are now dull, cold steel structures, barely readable.

Countermen in all-night restaurants are sleepy and tired. Customers are few. You see scrub women of their knees scowring the floors of the theaters. They carry great pails of warm soapy water and brushes. Some of them piece out a fair living. I once knew a charwoman who sent her daughter all the way through college. But most of them live from lover to lover.

The dull rumble of the subway seems miles away, but it is only 12 feet straight down. Unhindered by traffic, the cross-town cars scurry like lackrabbits. It is only hour in the day when the motormen have any fun.

Food trucks hurry up to the hundreds of restaurants which adorn the Square. Milk cans clatter on the curb, and beer kegs rattle down ramps into the basement of bars. Stray mammals, looking disheveled and cold despite the warm air, lounge in doorways. A stray cat sends up its eerie, half-human cry. This is Times Square at 5 o'clock on a warm spring morning.

There is a remarkably able Mexican waiter who likes to hang around the Latin restaurants and waiters know they enjoy themselves at the tables. The customers never know they are being sketched until with a bow, the artist hands the sketch to them. The sketch is yours to keep, but, of course, a tip is expected.

Anything from a half-dollar up will do, but if you go below this sum he is likely to sav. "Senor, this isn't a very good likeness of you. I will do another one." Then he lashes out a bitter, sarcastic caricature and slams it down on the table. These caricatures are anything but complimentary. They garble your features with gluttony, lust and greed. Then the artist stalks away. He has been tossed out of more than one restaurant for insulting guests in this manner.

The decline of 110th street as a Cuban center is emphasized by the metamorphosis which has overtaken
