CROP OUTLOOK FOR N. C. SEEN AS FAVORABLE

Prospects Here Declared To Be Best In Nation

PREDICT RECORD TOBACCO YIELD

Leaf Acreage Up 21 Per Cent As Of July 1 And Prospective Production Good

Raleigh, July 14.—(AP)—North Carolina is definitely in the most favored area of "best crop prospects" in the United States under July 1 conditions, the Agriculture Department reported today in its federal-state crop summary.

Crops in this state are now perhaps as fine as anywhere in the nation, said the report. "Since farming is the foundation of our general welfare and since soil moisture determines yields, the agricultural situation definitely is improved and is very promising in most parts of North Carolina." Rains since June 29 served to improve soil conditions which already were excellent. Today's report dealt primarily with general crops as a record-breaking tobacco crop of 701,070,000 pounds was forecast earlier this week after an acreage report on cotton plantings has indicated the state's smallest lint crop since 1878. The report pointed out that tobacco acreage was up 21 per cent in the state over last year and the July 1 "prospective production is extra good."

Fruit crops were considerably short of full crops, with a 42 per cent peach crop, as compared to 72 per cent last year. This year's crop was not as good as last year, yields from increased acreage being less than usual, but sweet potato conditions were "appreciably better than the average." Truck crops have been variable.

Typhoid Cases On Increase In County

D. N. Thomas Ennett, Pitt county health officer, said today that he is much concerned over the prevailing typhoid fever situation in the county and expressed the belief that if the present rate of new cases continues, this summer probably will show the greatest number of typhoid cases in several years. He explained that in July, 1935, there were 28 reported cases of typhoid in the county, but added there had been a gradual decrease from 12 to 15 cases a year since that time until 1939. Dr. Ennett revealed that two cases were reported in June and two in July of 1938, while in corresponding months of this year there were five reported cases for June and four for the present month.

"Two chief factors in preventing typhoid are vaccination and sanitary privies," declared Dr. Ennett, "and it is important that one be careful as to the milk and water supply and also that rooms, particularly dining rooms, be screened against flies."

It was revealed that in all investigations made by the health department in typhoid cases, not a single patient had been vaccinated. Dr. Ennett said that although clinics are held over the county each year for the purpose of vaccinating Pitt residents against typhoid, many residents fail to take advantage of the treatment for fear it will interfere with their work. Typhoid vaccinations are available at the health department offices every Wednesday afternoon and every Saturday morning.

No City Court Today. As announced earlier in the week, no session of Municipal Recorder's court was held today. Judge L. C. Skinner being out of the city for several days. No session will be held next Monday. Pending cases are set for trial Friday of next week.

Three committees of the East Carolina Tuberculosis Hospital committee were in Pitt county today, studying five sites offered for the proposed $150,000 tuberculosis hospital to be erected in the future somewhere in East Carolina.

Senator J. L. Blythe of Mecklenburg county, chairman; O. M. Mull of Shelby; secretary and Representative L. L. Burgin of Horse Shoe were accompanied to the potential sites in Pitt by a committee of 10 prominent Greenville and Pitt county residents.

Japanese Demonstration Against British Embassy Worst In Nippon History

WPA STRIKES HIS PROBLEMS

A cigarette in one hand, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, uses the other to bring home a point during a press conference that preceded a meeting of state WPA directors in a Chicago hotel to discuss new regulations and the widespread strikes of relief workers. During the meeting, WPA pickets took up positions outside the hotel to protest the regulations, including a ruling that they must work 130 hours a month.

Undaunted By Mishap In Raising Of Squalus

ACTION TAKEN IN WPA STRIKE

Fines And Jail Terms For Relief Worker Interferers

While dismissals of striking WPA employees continued, the government took steps today to enforce a law providing fines and jail terms for persons using threats to keep a relief worker from his job.

Attorney General Murphy told reporters yesterday "there ought not to be a strike against the government of the United States." He said subsequently, however, that he believed WPA protests against the 130-hour month were in a different category from strikes which would affect such services as fire and police protection.

At the request of WPA headquarters in Washington, a federal investigator was sent to East St. Louis, Ill., to look into reports that threat and intimidation had been used to prevent relief workers from going to their jobs.

Previously agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been sent to Minneapolis to see whether federal laws had been violated in connection with the WPA strike there.

Murphy said there had been some "charges of racketeering" in the WPA strike, notably at Minneapolis, and at some other points. He added that racketeering was different from the sincere types of protest which is "understandable."

The attorney general said "common sense" was needed to cope with the strikes. He explained he had suggested to district attorneys that they "keep in mind the unfortunate situation that has been created."

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, who has been attending a conference of his state administrators in Chicago, said that dismissals of workers who remain away from their jobs five days would continue. Reports of dismissals were incomplete in Washington headquarters, but at least 16,000 had been discharged up to last night.

Reports of the total on strike also were incomplete, but officials said the number had decreased from a peak of 92,770 on Wednesday.

Winston-Salem Man Dies In Beach Surf

Carolina Beach, July 14.—(AP)—Jack Houser, 16, of Winston-Salem, went to his death in the surf here this morning when he dived from a raft about 450 feet off shore into heavy seas. At noon searching speedboats and an airplane had not located the body.

Estimated 50,000 Participate In Two-Hour Exhibition, With Women And Children, Young and Old, Taking Part; American Property Reported Damaged Elsewhere In Japan

Tokyo, July 14.—(AP)—More than 50,000 excited, yelling and gesticulating Japanese demonstrated for two hours in front of the British embassy today in one of the greatest exhibitions of feeling against any foreign nation in Japan's history.

Women and children, old and young, took part. Some 1,000 police men completely encircled the embassy's extensive grounds, massing three deep in front of the heavy iron gates at the main entrance. At the height of the demonstration the throng parted and a three-wheeled motorcycle carrying four men was driven toward the gates, apparently in an attempt to force them, but the police stood fast.

Scuffling broke out as leaders of the crowd tried to climb over the shoulders of the police. They were speedily arrested and hustled away. The embassy staff worked coolly through the demonstration. The only precaution was to move away from windows.

A delegation of five persons was admitted to the embassy and presented an anti-British resolution to H. M. Brain, secretary.

A majority of the demonstrators were members of the ex-servicemen's association, women's patriotic societies and like organizations.

Posters and handbills bearing such slogans as "Punch the British nose" and "Let's all knock down the British" dotted Tokyo. In demonstrations yesterday throughout Japan, 15,000,000 persons were estimated to have taken part.

The foreign office spokesman reiterated that the displays were spontaneous and that the police would not prevent them so long as the participants broke no law.

Shanghai, July 14.—(AP)—Travelers from Tsingtao disclosed today that American property was damaged in anti-British demonstrations there Monday and Wednesday and that the British consulate had been practically in a state of siege since July 3.

They said the premises of the Standard Vacuum Company, along with many British business firms and the consulate, were stoned. Later representatives of the anti-British committee and the Japanese consulate visited Standard officials, apologized for the "mistake" and arranged for repairs.

The travelers brought the first detailed account of the anti-British outbreaks, which had been in progress for three weeks.

The British consulate was invaded Wednesday when demonstrators seized an interpreter and one servant. Stones and firecrackers carried to the scene by trucks were used in the attack.

Art Gallery Plans Clubs For Young

Miss Hilda Ogburn, director of the Greenville Federal Art Gallery, today revealed that plans are being formulated for organizing a Sketch club for young people in their teens and a Puppet Guild for boys and girls from 9 to 12 years of age as a part of the gallery's efforts to stimulate interest in art among local residents.

It was explained that those joining the Puppet Guild will learn to make puppets and produce puppet shows, while members of the Sketch Club will be expected to contribute sketches, drawings or paintings once a week for constructive criticism and discussion.

Both organizations will begin to function within the next several days and several individuals have already registered for each. The cost for membership in either organization is free except a nominal sum charged for materials used.

Any others interested in joining may register and receive additional information by calling in person at the art gallery on the corner of Fifth and Cotanche streets. The gallery is open to the public free of charge from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. daily except Wednesday and Saturday. The Wednesday hours are from 4 to 6 p. m., and the Saturday hours are from 7 to 9 p. m.

The exhibition now being shown will remain through tomorrow. The exhibition on display is a group of paintings by contemporary American artists, and includes landscapes, city scenes, still life and figure studies. Over 500 people of Greenville and other North Carolina cities have already viewed the display.

WPA STRIKES HELD ILLEGAL BY ROOSEVELT

Says Such Action Is Move Against The Government

VIGOROUS VIEW VOICED BY FDR

President Sustains Similar Contention Of Attorney General Murphy Thursday

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today that there could not be strikes against the government and that a WPA strike was such action.

"You can not strike against the government," Mr. Roosevelt said, later sending out word to newsmen who had attended his press conference that this phrase could be quoted directly.

This permission, given only on rare occasions, apparently was designed to emphasize the President's views toward widespread WPA strikes.

He made the statement in response to a question about whether he agreed with Attorney General Murphy that they could not strike against the government.

A reporter wanted to know whether a strike of Tennessee Valley Authority employees, for example, would be against the government, and Mr. Roosevelt replied at first in the affirmative, but indicated he had misunderstood that question and added later that he did not know.

WPA workers have been striking because of a provision in the present relief law which scrapped the prevailing wage basis of payment and required 130 hours of work a month.

In backing up Murphy's strike statement, the President said first that there could not be strikes against the government. He was asked whether a WPA strike was a strike against the government and replied that it was.

A questioner inquired whether he would discuss the difficulties of the prevailing wage as compared to the 130-hours requirement, but the President replied that it would take too long, as it was a matter for an hour's discussion. He said there were pros and cons on each angle.

Better Payrolls, But Less Workers

Raleigh, July 14.—(AP)—Employment in 530 North Carolina manufacturing industries dropped 1.4 per cent for June under May, but payrolls increased six-tenths of one per cent, the Labor Department reported today.

The hourly earnings in manufacturing industries in June were up 3 1/2 per cent over May and in 203 "other manufacturing industries" besides textiles, tobacco and furniture, hourly earnings increased 21.2 per cent.

Employment in the furniture industry increased 2.4 per cent and tobacco employment was up two-tenths of one per cent, but all other manufacturing groups showed decreases, ranging up to 6 per cent in rayon mills.

Employment also was down in 70 non-manufacturing industries, 289 retail trade establishments and 113 wholesale businesses.

Dodson Will Head Tar Heel Farmers

Raleigh, July 14.—(AP)—Taylor Dodson of Bethany, Rockingham county, today was elected president of the North Carolina Young Tar Heel Farmers.

The annual meeting of delegates of the state's chapter of the Future Farmers of America ended today at North Carolina State College.

Leroy How, II, of Seaboard, Northampton county, was elected vice president, with Edward Gunn of Wentworth, Rockingham county, as secretary, and Willie Bender of Middleburg, Vance county, as treasurer. Bervin Perry of Youngsville, Franklin county, was elected recorder.

The new executive committee will consist of Jarvis Warren of Herring, Sampson county; L. G. Grigg, of Polkville, Cleveland county, and Tony Calhoun of West Edgecombe, Edgecombe county.

Aged Greenville Man Dies This Afternoon

John Baker, father of Leon Baker of this city, died at the home of his son on South Washington street this afternoon. Funeral arrangements have not been made. Mr. Baker had been in declining health for some time.

Secure Approval To Operate Radio Station In City

J. J. White, Head Of Greenville Broadcasting Company, Announces Work To Begin At Once In Hopes Of Having Station In Operation Within 60 Days Or At Least By October

J. J. White, heading a group of local business men interested in the establishment of a radio station in Greenville, announced today, following advice from Washington that the petition had been granted, that work on the station would begin at once and added he hoped it would be in operation within 60 days, or at least by October 1.

The Federal Communications Commission late yesterday afternoon granted a license to the Greenville Broadcasting station to maintain a station with 250-watt power and operating on a frequency of 1500 kilocycles.

The local petition was approved after one by Nathan H. Franks of New Bern was dismissed "without prejudice" upon request of the petitioner that his application not be considered.

Representative Lindsay Warren has been working on the Greenville application for some time and Mr. White gave him much of the credit for securing its approval.

Mr. White said that as recognition of this service, Congressman Warren had been invited, and already had signified his intention to accept, to make the dedication address over the broadcasting system.

Although many questions regarding the radio station are still unknown quantities, in the words of Mr. White, he said the station would be maintained as a public service and its facilities would be available to various civic organizations, churches, the college and other institutions of the city.

Several proposed locations are in mind, but this matter will not be decided yet as approval of the FCC has to be secured. A representative of this department will come to Greenville in the immediate future to make a survey of the proposed sites. Mr. White said, however, that it was proposed to erect the station in the main business section of the city, if such a location was approved.

He also stated that it was the intention to maintain a station at the college so that broadcasts from there could be made with little trouble.

It also is proposed to operate the station both day and night, up until 10 o'clock. This, however, must be approved by the Communications Commission. Whether the local station will have a "tie-in" with one of the major broadcasting systems also was unknown, but an effort for such a set-up is contemplated.

Mr. White said he had been advised by experts that the radio station will provide a better reception anywhere within Greenville and all of Pitt county than any other station. The exact territory it will satisfactorily cover, however, will not be determined until a survey of the soil, climate, etc., is made.

Speaking of the station, Mr. White emphasized two things; that Representative Warren was largely responsible for the local petition being approved, and that it would be maintained as a community project, serving Greenville and Pitt county.

Charlotte Perkins Is Contest Winner

Charlotte Perkins, attractive daughter of Mrs. Virginia Perkins of this city, last night was presented with a silver loving cup in a bathing beauty contest held at the municipal pool and will represent Greenville in a similar contest at the Wilson Tobacco Festival by virtue of the outcome of last night's judging.

Miss Perkins was dubbed "Miss Greenville" and besides the loving cup, was presented with a bouquet of summer flowers donated by a local florist. She will also represent the city in a bathing beauty contest at the annual Morehead City Festival.

Miss Emmy Lou Scales, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Scales, was chosen some time ago as the city's queen for the Wilson festival. Haywood Dall, local music dealer, was master of ceremonies for the festive last night, which were staged under the sponsorship of the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Girl Ends Fast

Ellis L. Chambers, a painter of Memphis, Tenn., lost his job, left home in search of work and his 11-year-old step-daughter, Grace Virginia Palmer, who asked him to begin fasting. She said she wouldn't eat until he returned. She is shown disconsolately watching for his return. Two days after he disappeared, Chambers came back home and Grace Virginia began eating.

FRENCH MIGHT IS PROCLAIMED

Daladier Declares Army Is Invincible Against Attack

Paris, July 14.—(AP)—Premier Daladier declared tonight in a world-wide Bastille Day broadcast that the French army was invincible against any attack.

The premier and national defense minister, who earlier in the day had watched 30,000 of France's finest troops parade on the Champs Elysees with British guardsmen in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the French revolution, said:

"Any menace, any effort at domination, will find us resolved to defend French liberties and to join our efforts with those of all people determined to safeguard their liberties."

Crowds massed before him in the great amphitheatre of the Trocadero roared their approval as he proclaimed that the French army "is capable of breaking any attack that could imperil our country."

"France," the premier declared, "menaces no one."

"We dream of no conquest," he continued. "We desire only peace among all people and we have the firm will to concentrate our efforts to protect it in that loyalty and that spirit of human collaboration which alone can save civilization."

Calling his audience's attention to the French-British display in today's parade, the premier said: "Our reborn aviation is united to the aviation of a great friendly people who would protect our soil as we would protect theirs if it became necessary for us to resist attack."

In the morning a display of armed might and an initial group of 152 French and British planes was followed by a fleet of 250 French aircraft, including 57 fighters hovering closely in the United States.

More than one million persons saw the demonstration, the first joint display of military might by the two powers since the World war.

Planes, tanks, big and little guns, motorized equipment and a cross section of the troops, of both nations, 30,000 strong, paraded before the reviewing stand where President LeBrun, Daladier and British War Secretary Hore-Belisha stood with the high command of France's and Britain's air, land and sea forces and the rulers of the French colonial empire.

Among LeBrun's guests at the main reviewing stand was Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of President Roosevelt.

PLEA IS MADE BY ROOSEVELT FOR ARMS BILL

Terse Message Requests Neutrality Legislation

SEEKS MEASURE AT THIS TERM

Says Action Should Be Taken For Cause Of Peace And In Interest Of Security

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—President Roosevelt told Congress today neutral legislation should be enacted this session "for the cause of peace and in the interest of American neutrality and security."

In a terse 100-word special message, Mr. Roosevelt forwarded a statement by Secretary Hull entitled "Peace and Neutrality," in which the State Department head referred to "the present situation of danger."

The President's message gave "full approval" to Hull's statement. After a reference to the 12-11 vote of the Senate Foreign Relations committee to defer action on neutrality until next session, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"It has been abundantly clear to me for some time for the cause of peace and in the interest of American neutrality and security, it is highly advisable that Congress at this session should take certain much-needed action."

"In the light of present world conditions, I see no reason to change that opinion."

The Foreign Relations committee, meanwhile, moved into the spotlight again with Chairman Pittman (D.- Nev.) predicting approval soon of his resolution to ban shipment of war supplies to Japan.

Other developments: Federal farm officials went ahead with plans to subsidize exports of cotton despite an almost unanimous opposition of cotton trade and textile organizations.

Representatives of the cotton industry told officials in a closed conference yesterday that they were opposed to the plan, designed to help the United States regain lost foreign markets. They offered, however, to co-operate to make it "as effective as possible."

Indict Local Man For Lenoir Wreck

Highway Patrolman C. R. Williams said today that he had arrested R. R. Ackiss of Greenville on a charge of manslaughter and that Ackiss had been placed in custody of Kinston authorities. Bond was set at $1,000.

The arrest followed an investigation into an accident on the night of July 4, which cost the life of Miss Thelma Cooper, 24, of Farmville. The accident occurred when the automobile in which Miss Cooper, Ackiss and Trey Coward, another Greenville man, were riding failed to make a curve and struck a ditch about a mile and a half from Kinston.

Coward, according to Williams, is under a $500 bond as a material witness. Miss Cooper was listed on the report of Patrolman J. K. Clay as investigating as the driver of the car. Williams said, however, that Kinston authorities have a statement signed by Coward declaring that Ackiss was the driver of the death car.

Williams said that all three occupants of the automobile were said to have been under the influence of liquor.

That chair was made to sit in, young lady. Look how you're tipping it!

Abusing furniture is an offense in many families second only to mistreating children and pets.

For furniture represents an investment and there's no excuse for being careless about it.

Don't sit on the arms of chairs or tilt them when you're sitting in them. It probably would serve you right if an arm came off—or you took a spill. If you arrive at a party too late to find a seat, stand. You'll look better than you would draped on the arm of a chair in which someone is sitting, anyway. You won't have to screw your neck around to carry on the conversation, either.

Don't move heavy furniture by scooting it along a smooth floor—or ploughing it through a nice, thick rug. One moving job can do a lot of irreparable damage, you know.

3. (a) Brother of the late Huey Long and new governor of Louisiana. (b) Former army chief, recently in U. S. (c) Retiring superintendent of Molokai leper island.
4. $50,000,000.
5. True. (10.6 per 1,000 live births vs. burcau).

OLD FAITHFUL SAYS EXPERT, SHOULD BE YOUNG FAITHFUL

Yellowstone National Park—(AP)—Old Faithful's youthful fountain, after all, it seems.

"This world famed geyser has been spouting approximately 200 and not 10,000 years as we had supposed," C. Max Bauer, park naturalist, said recently, after a study of the Old Faithful core.

Before that, he said the geyser probably was a hot pool or a fountain type geyser.

Old Faithful still draws the crowds when, at 66-minute intervals, it spouts 10,000 odd gallons of water 150 feet in the air.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—When and if the producers get around to checking up on "waste" in their necessarily erratic industry, I hope they'll take stock of the human goods they blindly consign to, practically speaking, the shelf. And there's no better example of wasted talents in town than is afforded by the story of Walter Abel.

Here's an actor proved not only on stage but on screen. After one unhappy experience in Hollywood, hired from the stage but kept idle, he tried again. It was unfortunate that his return was as D'Artagnan in RKO's re-make of "The Three Musketeers," because he's not exactly the swashbuckling type. He did what he could with that role, more than justified his stage reputation as the vigorous attorney in Spencer Tracy's "Fury." At RKO he went not only to the B's, but to "Second Wife," such a bad B that it drew crowds—to laugh at and hiss and cheer everything in it. Fun for the audiences, but tough for Abel. Since then, always, Abel has filled leading roles in secondary films, or secondary roles in better films, and nobody has given him a chance to repeat his "Fury" bit.

The other evening, arriving early at a preview, I sat through most of a little quickie which was obviously a re-amping of the "Boys Town" theme. Abel was the star, and he was doing a good job with the part and the dialogue handed him. But no actor can survive too many snicker-flickers. Abel has had more than his share of them.

Gregory Ratoff, of all people, has gone prima donna. Closed sets on "Intermezzo" the other day. It was only coincidence that Dennis O'Keefe, playing in support of Sandy, the milkman's daughter, in "Unexpected Father," picked a milk truck for his auto collision. O'Keefe with only a couple of scenes to go, was "doubled" for them. The part and the dialogue handed "Gone with the Wind"—and a sneak preview, because of tremendous footage, beginning at 6 p. m.—Henry Fonda will be Tom Joad in "The Grapes of Wrath," with John Ford, the right man for the job, directing. Randolph Scott was shooting up the Bellini Union saloon for a scene in "Frontier Marshal" and the man on the sidelines, winning was Marvin Sutton, special props expert. Sutton had worked a month building the 30-odd "old" lamps Scott riddled in one quick take. For more than 20 years he has been making period lamps for movies.

The forgotten woman, Sigrid Gurie, is being remembered because of her work in "The Forgotten Woman." She gets the lead in "Rio," a special that has been waiting for Danielle Darrieux of France, who will be the forgotten woman of Hollywood if she doesn't settle some of those French lawsuits and face these cameras some more. Small boys are small boys even in grease paint. When the fire-bells changed for that little blaze in the Goldwyn projection room, Masters Gary Cooper and David Niven were among the first on the scene. Incidental interesting discovery: the "Goldwyn touch" smells just as rank, when burning, as any other celluloid.

Sunday School Lesson

By D. A. WINDHAM

We have before us now the tragic folly and failure of Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, who ascended the throne at his death. Rehoboam found the treasury bankrupt and the people burdened by heavy taxes to the extent they were complaining and to the point where the spirit of revolt was at high tide. Extravagant expenditures had been made and the whole nation was burdened with taxes.

The people came together at Shechem for the coronation. Just why this place was selected was most probably to remove them as far as possible from Jerusalem, where the seat of discontent lay; but it seems to me that God was working in the whole matter and the following reasons should be considered. Shechem was the capital stronghold of the great and powerful tribe of Ephraim and a popular gathering place for the people, and had from time to time since the time of the exodus from Egypt disputed the supremacy with Juda. There was traditional glory also about Shechem; its very name means shoulder and adjacent to the city was a huge valley which made it appropriate for the service of the coronation. It was here that Abraham pitched his tent and Jacob bought his only property in Canaan, and there the first great national assembly was held on entering Palestine, and there the law was publicly read and adopted as the national code, both civil and sacred.

Here mid such sacred recollections the people came to crown Rehoboam king. They came to him for him to state his policy of government and at which when stated were sadly disappointed. He made them understand that their burdens were not to be reduced but increased, and his reign was to be more tyrannical and severe.

The scorpions mentioned as an instrument of torture in place of the whip does not mean the scorpion as we know it, and is mentioned elsewhere in scripture, but refers to the Arabian shrub called the scorpion thorn, a long switch-like shrub with long thorns from a little less than an inch to slightly over an inch long, very sharp and very close together; and some authorities say

Tomorrow's House Designed For Living

By JOAN DURHAM

(AP Feature Service Writer) Good news for you people who have been worrying about regimentation in the World of Tomorrow. You'll live in the kind of house YOU like.

There won't be that Industrial Age danger of letting yourself into your next door neighbor's house by mistake. Your home and his won't look much alike—judging by the 15 homes in the New York World's Fair Town of Tomorrow. All 15 are different.

Common Sense To Survive

Even the building materials differ. Eleven types of exterior wall construction are in the display, from plywood to brick.

Common sense will help you people who plan to build in the World of Tomorrow, however. You'll eliminate a lot of unnecessary items that people who lived Today haven't had the foresight to shake off.

The rooms we don't use much today, for instance, will disappear. Big dining rooms won't happen there. Instead, you'll make the most of your living room—where you spend much of your time, anyway—and have just an alcove or a little section of the living room that may be closed off while you eat.

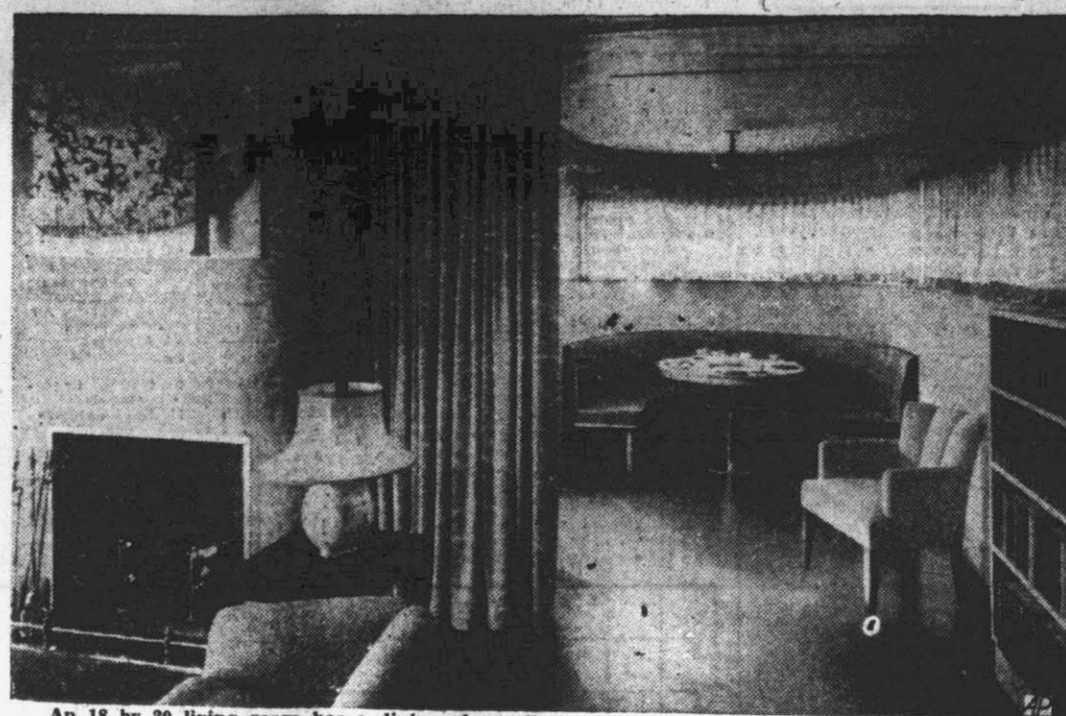

Basements—where many of the fatal accidents occur in Today's homes—will vanish. In their place you'll have a "utility" room on the first floor. Your big furnace will be turned into a neat little item over there in the corner, with your air conditioning unit and your laundry equipment right along-side.

Something Old, Too

You'll recognize the necessity for a little privacy, though. All this business of one great big happy livable room won't prevent you from having plenty of bedrooms. (The three or more bedroom house predominates in the group).

You'll also be sentimental enough to hang onto something old—to combine with all of your somethings-new. You'll probably insist on a hearstone, symbol of the family unit for countless generations. Thirteen of the 15 houses have them.

But some of you will change the traditional two-car garage. Maybe you'll build it onto the front of the house—so you can have space for a big garden at the rear. And maybe you'll have a table tennis table over in one corner, a table you can let down when you drive the car out into the driveway.

An 18 by 20 living room has a dining alcove that may be cut out by closing a curtain.

There are lots of other things you'll fancy—a garbage disposal unit in your kitchen that reduces all the waste to a pulp you can flush down the drain; a steady cascade of water over your sun-porch roof, which ends in a cool, little pool just beyond your bridge table. (You'll still be playing contract). And you'll probably fancy a glassed in sun deck on the second floor where your grandmother's sleeping porch would have been, or a conservatory you can see from both the living room and the dining room, because it's set in between them.

ONE REASON TO BE WARY OF MARRIAGE

London—(AP)—British women are alarmed because they forfeit their British citizenship on marriage to a refugee alien. Many women are technically without a country after such a marriage.

Green opaque glass lines the walls of this kitchen of tomorrow and its beautiful windows look out on a yard full of flowers.

Britons Playing New Game

Britons are playing a new game on horseback—a mixture of polo and lacrosse called "polo-cross." It is played with a long-handled racket which is used to scoop up a solid rubber ball and throw it into a net goal.

About 90,000 safety razor blades are used annually in Hollywood studios for scraping and splicing film.

The house in which Andrew Johnson was born in Raleigh, N. C., has been moved to three locations.

Mother Names Son Kidnaper

Mrs. Eliza Middlecoff Emery (left) wealthy widow, told Sheriff Martin Ansbro of Stockton, Calif., that she was forcibly kidnapped by her son, Hubbard Middlecoff, 36, and others from the home of her friend, Mrs. Olga Chadd (right) near Stockton. She refused to intercede in behalf of Middlecoff and six others jailed in connection with the charge. Mrs. Emery was found by police in a San Francisco hotel.

Washington Daybook

By Louis Johnson

Assistant Secretary of War (Pinch-hitting for Preston Grover, on vacation) ... Washington. Practically every day since Munich, in Washington and in every part of the country that I have visited, I have been asked these questions by newspaper men:

"What is the state of our air defenses?" "How do we compare with Germany?"

Since newspaper reporters reflect most accurately the state of the public mind, I presume all of America seeks the answer to these two questions.

I am happy to state that our defenses on land, on sea and in the air have been strengthened and improved. In the air, especially, we have made significant progress.

In the year ending July 1, we received from the industry approximately 700 airplanes which, type for type, can be matched against the best produced anywhere in the world. During the same period we allotted new contracts for more than 800 planes, which are in advance of many of the world's present outstanding models.

When Congress fully appropriates the money necessary to give us an air armament of 5,500 to 6,000 planes, we will be on the road toward achieving adequate national defense in the air for America.

PLANES AND THE MEN

By adequacy, we mean not only planes but skilled operators to fly them, trained combat crews to man them, experienced mechanics to maintain them, efficient equipment to protect them, ample bases to support them, men of outstanding leadership to command them—all fundamental assets of a well-balanced air force in sufficient quantity and quality to defend the western hemisphere against aggression today.

I emphasize the word "today" because no one can foretell what may be the developments of tomorrow. Adequacy is a relative term. What may be enough to protect us when the present program is realized, at some future date may prove wholly insufficient. We in America do not have the privilege of the last word on the subject of our military needs. We must keep pace with world conditions and armament developments.

The menacing weapon of today is the long-range bombardment airplane. At Munich, the mere threat of its use changed the whole picture of Europe. Today its potential power continues to dominate military policies across the ocean. It is our duty to prevent its use or the threat of its employment as a factor in the life of America.

Some may feel that a successful attack against this hemisphere from the air, and particularly against continental United States, is too fantastic to be worthy of serious consideration. May I warn these skeptics that aviation is improving far too rapidly for anyone to predict any limitations upon its potential powers?

Consider merely the revolution in speed. Not so long ago, we were hoping to approach 250 miles an hour. Today we have planes that can fly at 400 miles an hour and the day is approaching when we may have speeds of 500 to 600.

WE'LL DEFEND THE WEST

In planning our air program we are not trying to match the forces of Germany or of any other nation. We are planning a system that adequately will defend America and its continental frontiers. We have

FOUR BLIND DATES

By Edwin Rutt

YESTERDAY: While Mrs. Dipsang mends his trousers, the Chiseler explains that he is a fond parent who has come to protect his daughter from the wild party downstairs.

Chapter 33 Mad Moments

"I CAME here tonight," stated the Chiseler, "with a heavy heart. Arriving, I had no very clear notion as to how to proceed. A self-effacing man, I shrank from essaying to gain admittance to the house in the orthodox manner. And I was afraid, too, that a knowledge of my presence would cause my dear Lydia embarrassment. But, being desperate, I determined upon a bold stroke. I ascended the ranspout outside. It was my intention to slip quietly downstairs, conceal myself behind some door or portiere and watch over the welfare of my loved one. And that, Mrs. Dipsang, was the innocent and, if I may say so, laudable motive that led to my presence on your balcony."

He ceased and, taking out a handkerchief, blew his nose. Then, with a delicate movement, he wiped the corner of one eye. "You'll forgive me my eagerness," he added. "I am most distressed."

Mrs. Dipsang was visibly affected. She forgot to sew on the pants. "Well, my dear man," she said, in a kindly voice, "you're making a mountain out of a molehill, I'm sure. You mustn't take on so, Mr. ... you haven't told me your name."

"I have purposely evaded doing so," said the Chiseler. "Inasmuch as my daughter's reputation is at stake tonight, I am terrified at the very thought of publicity."

"Why, of course," said Mrs. Dipsang solicitously. "I understand."

At this point the Chiseler exhibited a marked ability for switching from the sentimental to the practical.

"How are you getting along with those trousers?" he asked.

Mrs. Dipsang estimated the repair work. "I'm about half done."

Behind the screen the Chiseler fidgeted.

"Without wishing to presume on your kindness," he said, "I'd be obliged if you could shake it—er—make a little more haste."

"You want a good job, I suppose," said Mrs. Dipsang. "I can't do it if I hurry."

"I'm not over-fastidious," said the Chiseler. "Just pull them together somehow and let me have them."

For several minutes there was silence while Mrs. Dipsang's needle carried on the rescue work.

"You know," she said presently, "when I first saw you tonight, I thought you were—well, a burglar."

A pained expression appeared on the Chiseler's face.

"To think of it," he said, in a hushed voice. "Oh, the mortification!"

"I only said that I thought you were a burglar," Mrs. Dipsang said hastily. "Of course, I can see now that you're not."

The Chiseler relaxed. If she were willing to grant that he wasn't a burglar, some progress had been made. But he was not out of the woods yet. Why didn't she hurry with his pants?

As if this thought had communicated itself to her by some subtle telepathy Mrs. Dipsang spoke.

"Nearly finished," she said.

Behind the screen the Chiseler sighed gratefully. Now to arrange to silence this credulous woman and depart to begin profitable work.

"Splendid," he said, rubbing his hands. "But there is one further favor that I must beg of you, Mrs. Dipsang."

Man With Delusions

MERELY this," said the Chiseler, with impressive earnestness. "You will understand, of course, that I feel a certain delicacy in having entered these premises unbeknownst to the majority of the occupants. In order to aid me in accomplishing the purpose for which I have come, may I request you to tell no one here of my presence? In fact, it would facilitate matters if you were to remain in this tastefully-furnished apartment while I go downstairs and ascertain that nothing untoward has befallen my poor Lydia."

instructing an imaginary butler to serve him banquets and ordering his groom to bring his underling before the door. And now it was becoming more and more apparent that she was confronted by any other gentleman who labored under delusions.

It stood to reason. Obviously, anyone who would suspect that nice Van Harkness of evil designs upon flowering womanhood was not in his right mind. No, it was only too manifest. The gods had sent her a man of regal aspect. But he was a little touched in the head. And, thought Mrs. Dipsang, it behooved her to keep him in her care for two reasons—(1) that she had completely succumbed to his charming manners and dignified deportment even while realizing that he was distinctly potty and (2) that she owed it to her employer to prevent a man with delusions and, possibly, homicidal tendencies from wandering at large about the house.

Therefore, she would detain him by gentle means. Then she would nurse him back to normalcy, feeding him carefully and seeing to it that he got plenty of broth.

"What you need now," she said, beginning her campaign, "is a good hot cup of broth."

"The Chiseler could not agree with this prescription."

"What I need," he said fervently, "are sewers."

The way to handle this, decided Mrs. Dipsang, was firmly.

"You cannot have your trousers again tonight," she said, as one speaks to the clamoring child.

Behind his screen the Chiseler jumped and swore.

Mrs. Dipsang smiled. It was only on the second time that this gentleman had sworn. His delusions doubtless took a milder form than Dipsang's. When in the throes of hallucination Dipsang had frequently been wont to curse the entire personnel of his estate up hill and down dale.

"I've done it take on," she said soothingly. "In a little while you can lie down and get a good rest. I've a nice room for you. And see! Your pants are finished. They're all ready for you tomorrow."

"Woman," said the Chiseler, "give me my trousers."

"I have told you," said Mrs. Dipsang, "that your trousers are finished, work as one. The President's program for air defense has merited the confidence it enjoys. An America united for national defense is our strongest bulwark for peace."

Mental Case

"IN HEAVEN'S name ..." began the Chiseler and stopped suddenly. There was no question about it. The woman was a mental case. He should have perceived it long since. In all probability she was an indigent relative of the head of the house, suffering from some mild form of imbecility. To cater to her, Mr. Adams had doubtless given her the post of housekeeper which she held in name only. Because she was nuts.

Inconceivably nuts, cursed the cupid who had led him to her. But there was no help for it now. He was confronted by an inferior mentality against which subtlety would be unavailing.

Conscious of the loud note struck by his under pants he stepped from behind the screen somewhat sheepishly.

"I want my trousers," he said in a pettish voice.

"Now, now," said Mrs. Dipsang. "What did I tell you?"

The Chiseler, in a casual manner, inched nearer.

"Tell me, Mrs. Dipsang," he said, with apparent irrelevance, "about how many servants would a house like this have?"

"Well, now, let's see," Mrs. Dipsang computed on her fingers.

"There's Mr. Matherton, he's the butler, and Marcel, the chef. Then there's Higginson."

She broke off abruptly, emitting a subdued cry. The Chiseler, hands stretching for her throat, was bearing down upon her like a ferocious species of whiskered grampus in red-and-white underwear.

But the outstretched hands didn't quite make it. With unsuspected agility Mrs. Dipsang was out of her chair. Still clutching the trousers, she ducked under the Chiseler's arms and slid around behind the chair.

"See here," she panted breathlessly. "You go straight back and sit down. Or I'll scream. I really will. You oughtn't to be running round in your underpants, anyhow. 'Tisn't decent."

But the Chiseler had made up his mind. He glowered at Mrs. Dipsang over the back of the chair. Then he made a sweeping lunge around it.

It was the wrong move. It had the effect of driving Mrs. Dipsang to desperate measures. She glanced wildly at his grasping fingers and backed against the wall. She was somewhat terrified. The gentleman's mania had suddenly taken a violent form but, for all that, she didn't intend to lose him. He was a gift from the gods and it was her job to take charge of him and nurse him back to sanity. But she couldn't do it if he were to repossess himself of his trousers and depart. And, at this point, there was but one way of preventing him from doing precisely that.

SHORT SHOTS

Raleigh, July 14.—Your correspondent approached Insurance Commissioner Dan Boney with the query, "Do you have a good insurance story?"

"None," said he. "Very quiet, but our department is getting along all right. Insurance rates in North Carolina have a downward trend."

"Well, if I can't get an insurance story, I'll take a political story," he said. "This political situation is too muddled for me to be getting into it. I not only don't have any idea who will be the next governor, but I haven't any idea who is going to run."

Quite a bit of comment has been heard around capitol circles on the condition reports of state banks as of June 30. Most unusual subject for comment is the unusually large amount of money lying idle in bank vaults, and the much larger amount in federal government securities. There is a feeling that this money should be put to use in private business enterprise. Composite statement is being prepared for all of the state banks, and it is expected to show that too much of the depositors' money is thus tied up.

The condition of national banks is about the same, but with more excuse in the public mind. As members of the Federal Reserve System national banks are expected and required to absorb a large part of government securities.

Admittedly these reports show that the banks are perfectly sound and safe. There could hardly be safer investment. The criticism, if it might be called that, is against keeping money out of use.

When the State Capitol was built over a hundred years ago such things as electric lights and air-conditioning had not been dreamed of as practical utilities. The building was erected of native stone and was designed to stand as long as there should be need for it. Years ago when steam heat pipes and electric wires were installed, workmen had to cut into solid granite many times. Last year the whole wiring system was overhauled to provide for the increased load and now a job of fire-proofing and making the building fire-resistant is nearing completion. Again grooves for wa-

Greenies Win To End Three Straight Doubleheaders

MORRIS HALTS EAGLES' STRIDE

Alex And Gracie Furnish The Hitting Power

After playing three consecutive doubleheaders which produced more wins than losses, Rube Wilson and his boys will settle down to normal activities here tonight when they clash with Kinston in the Guy Smith stadium at 8:15 o'clock.

Greenville tangled with the Kinston Eagles yesterday, losing the afternoon game 4-1 and triumphing in the night affair 12-4, with Rube Wilson hurling the evening affair and Morris Wilson going the route in the second engagement.

Rube was matched with Kinston's Bill Herring in the afternoon, the latter being reached for a triple and double by Gracie Allen, popular Greenie shortstop, who got these in four trips. Allen was the only Greenie to garner more than one safety off Herring. The Greenville skipper gave up only a half-dozen hits.

Greenville completely overpowered the mighty Eagles in the night affair and Ople Pace, the starting hurler, was yanked with two away in the second inning. It was in this verse that the Greenies staged an eight-run party to pile up a lead which the locals never relinquished.

Morris Wilson went the whole route for the Greenies last night and gave up nine hits. The Kinston hurlers allowed the same number of safeties, but the Eagles' hits were good for only four runs. Johnnie Yent, who was released Tuesday night by the Greenies, did some hurting for the Eagles last night.

Alex Daniels, who saw some action on the first sack yesterday afternoon, was the power hitter for the Greenies last night. Alex got three hits in five trips, one of which was a triple, and batted in three of the locals' runs.

Tonight is "Ladies Night" at the Greenville park and all ladies will be admitted free as guests of the club.

Walkers Have Advantage Over O'Malley All-Stars

By AUBREY SHACKELL

There seems to be no question but that the Walkers have the decided advantage in hitting and pitching over the O'Malleys for the forthcoming "dream game" when the all-stars meet in the town leading the league on Sunday night. The game will be played July 24th.

The Walkers lead the O'Malleys with the stick 307 to 292, and their pitching is better 690 to 632.

The averages are incomplete as of July 13th. Here are the way they line up as of that date:

BOTTLERS WIN AND LOSE ONE

WILSON STOPS BRUN ATTACK

Seven Home Runs In Game At Snow Hill

One of the biggest upsets in the Coastal Plain League yesterday came when Wilson's Tobs jumped on those pace setting New Bern Bears for a pair of triumphs in an evening and night twin bill.

Wilson's team reached three Bruin hurlers, including the best, for nine safeties in the afternoon game to win 10-8, and in the night game the Tobs pounded McCullough's throw for 20 hits and won 12-4.

There was also plenty of excitement when Peahead Walker's Billies mixed with the Williamston Martins in a two-game affair, but the count was divided. Williamston edged an 11-10 win over the Billies in the afternoon, while Snow Hill won 5-2 in the nightcap.

One of the most enjoyable features of the clash was seven home runs. They were obtained by Rimmer, Villeplique, and spires for Williamston, and Soufas, Bistrow, Burnette and Malsano for the Billies.

Tarboro continued to struggle, undisturbed, in the peaceful bottom berth of the league last night as Mule Shirley's Gold Bugs scored six runs as compared with lone run of the Serpents.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, July 14.—(AP)—Further cashing of profits in today's market served mainly to slow dealings and failed on the whole to disrupt prices to any great extent.
The proceedings got off to a listless start and the pace inclined to drag for the rest of the day. Transfers approximated 500,000 shares.

Meteor Missed Them.
Clyde, Kas.—(AP)—Members of the Lester Hess family, near here, heard something shooting through the air. A meteorite, 13 inches in circumference had missed the house by inches, struck the radio aerial, grazed a porch and embedded itself in the ground several inches. They recovered it and found on side resembled granite; the other a house brick.

Could Pet This Rattler.
Kansas City, Mo.—(AP)—Frank Newson just about stepped upon a rattlesnake out in Callaway county, but the snake couldn't do anything about it. His mouth was filled with a squirrel he was trying to swallow.

PHOTO MEMO Prison's No Fun For A Baby, Either

By Lydia Gray Shaw

IT ISN'T much fun but a guy has to do something to entertain himself, and the young man making fishy faces at the left is doing the best he can in the space provided. He's too big to be shut up. What he wants is room to scabble around to his heart's content. Turn him loose with plenty of floor space to play in and he has a fine, independent time—too busy to make those funny faces.

Baseball Executives At Cooperstown Dedication

Representatives from the 11 league members in the National Association, including several from the southern states, met in Cooperstown, N. Y., to celebrate the centennial of baseball and dedicate their own library and museum. Left to right: Charles Moore, Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga Look-out; Major Trammell Scott, president of the Southern Association; "Steamboat" Johnson, Southern Association umpire; Judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis, czar of baseball; Bob Smith, Chattanooga pitcher; Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta Crackers; W. B. Carpenter and Ollie Anderson.

North Carolina Becomes More Library Conscious

Raleigh, July 14.—While deploring the fact that public libraries in Charlotte have been closed as result of an advance election on a special tax, and decision of attorneys that the county and city commissioners cannot legally appropriate tax funds for library service without vote of the people, Miss Marjorie Beal, executive secretary of State Library Commission, thinks that good may come out of the situation. Certainly the people of the state are becoming more library conscious because of interest aroused by the Charlotte case.

Several other cities and counties which heretofore have made appropriations out of the general fund for libraries are canceling these appropriations for the coming year.
Some are continuing them, and there are even one or two new ones.
Upon the whole, however, the result of the publicity accorded the Charlotte ruling by the attorney general, which was based upon a Supreme court decision in a Wilmington case, has been to seriously cripple library support for the immediate present.

A number of Mecklenburg citizens have petitioned for a new election and Mayor Tom Cooper of Wilmington has asked the Supreme court to reopen the matter involving issuance of bonds there for playgrounds and library maintenance. Meantime both these centers are getting along with crippled or no library facilities.
Most serious effect of the current turmoil is being felt in smaller counties which were just beginning to manifest interest in libraries. It is with these groups that the Library Commission is doing some of its most effective work, and for this reason Miss Beal is keeping in very close touch with the attorney general's office.

Accountants And Lawyers Studying Tax Practice

Raleigh, July 14.—Tentative steps, if there can be any such thing, have been taken by the state associations of lawyers and certified public accountants toward getting together on an equitable basis for presentation of evidence before administrative boards on questions involving taxes.
Lawyers claimed then and now that adjustment of insurance claims and settlement of tax cases before

Bridges, Daughter Go To Hearing

Harry Bridges, alien CIO leader on the west coast, and his daughter, Jacqueline, 14, are shown aboard a boat en route to Angel Island in San Francisco bay for the opening of his deportation hearing. The government seeks to deport Bridges on the grounds that he is a member of the Communist party.

The professions here expect that the steps now being taken toward cooperating committees will bring about solution of the problems.

Gyroscopic motor cars, with only one front and one rear wheel, have been successfully operated.

New Zealand has an extremely low death rate compared with the world average.
