Blast Kills 19, Traps 9 Others In Kentucky Mine

Hope Slim For Safety Of Trapped Victims

20 MEN STAGING RESCUE EFFORTS

Carbon Monoxide Forms After Explosion, Caused By Underground Gas

Providence, Ky., July 15.—(AP)—F. V. Richman, co-operator of the Duvin Coal Company, announced today rescue squads had reached entries in which 19 of 28 miners were trapped by an underground blast and reported all of the 19 were dead.

Richman said the rescue party of 20-odd men then pressed on for the entry in which the nine others were trapped. Little hope was held for their safety.

There were only two unmarried men in the group of dead.

State Mine Inspector John Daniel had reported to Governor Chandler in Frankfort he understood carbon monoxide gas had formed after the explosion.

Rescue men, who declined to be quoted by name, advanced the opinion that underground gas caused the explosion.

Rescue men in the mine were brought to the surface by a cable system on which the blast occurred last night at the company's No. 1 mine north of this western Kentucky town.

Abducted By Man Sought For Killing

Elmhurst, Ill., July 15.—(AP)—Bud Erhold of Oklahoma City, Okla., reported to police here today that he was abducted in Kenosha, Wis., last night by a man he identified by pictures as Jack Russell, an escaped convict sought in four states for questioning about the slaying of Billy L. Hamilton, 23.

Erhold said the man approached him after a ball game in Kenosha last night and asked him to ride down the street. When he was placed in the car, Erhold opened a briefcase, a pistol and said, "I've already killed one man. You'd better do what I tell you."

The man directed him to drive to Elmhurst. Arriving there, he ordered him out of his car and drove rapidly away. Just before leaving he told Erhold, "I'll leave your car in the 1500 block on West Madison street in Chicago."

Hamilton, the victim of the slaying, was a milling company salesman of Arkansas City, Kans., 1938 graduate of the University of Kansas and member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Japan Sentries Reportededly Slaps U. S. Missionaries

Shanghai, July 15.—(AP)—United States and British consular authorities heard today that a Japanese soldier at Wuhu slapped two American women missionaries, an American boy and a Canadian woman missionary.

The incident occurred in Wuhu, July 3, the missionaries reported. The British and American authorities made immediate representations to the Japanese-Szechwan consulate which said it had no information, but would investigate.

Those involved, the report said, were Mrs. Walter Haskell of West Plains, Mo., of the United Christian Missionary Society; Mrs. Haskell's 14-year-old son, Winston; Miss Arina Stokks, Bristol, Conn., and Advent Christian Mission worker; and Miss Bertha Cassidy, a Canadian born in China and attached to the Advent Christian Mission Wuhu school.

Shows Where N. C. Roads Can Get Lots Of Money

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, July 15.—Work on the proposed permanent CCC camp at Mount Mitchell is at a standstill today because of chains across the only road leading to the camp site. And back of those chains is a story nearly 25 years old, but which has recently accelerated interest during the past two or three months.

LEAP OF THE SQUALUS, AS SEEN BY MOVIE NEWSREEL

These movie newsreel pictures show the submarine Squalus, sinking to break the chains that bound her to the navy's salvage pontoons, as she pushed her nose up through the boiling sea off Portsmouth, N. H. Gradually she arose and then suddenly broke free of the pontoons and leaped out of the water. After a brief pause, she began to slip back under the waves and quickly disappeared, carrying her cargo of death down to the bottom of the ocean again. Immediately the navy started at the beginning to raise the sunken vessel and recover the bodies of 26 men who perished when she sank during a practice dive last May.

ABANDON PLAN RESTORE WAGE

WPA Strikes Prove Embarrassing To Congressmen

By The Associated Press. Aserting WPA strikes throughout the country had proved embarrassing to their cause, Senator Murray (D-Mont.) announced in Washington today that a group of senators who favor WPA payment of prevailing wage scales had decided to abandon temporarily any attempt to revive this issue in Congress.

Meanwhile three pontoons, damaged when the Squalus reared her head and broke away during the first lifting operation two days ago, were hauled along side the Falcon and crew members hopped aboard the bobbing cylinders and untangled the wires and cables preparatory to repairing the lift.

Meanwhile wages were paid skilled workers until Congress, in new relief legislation, substituted a security wage provision based on a 130-hour work month. Over this change the strikes arose.

Senator Murray, author of an amendment to restore the prevailing wage, said that advocates of the plan decided at a meeting yesterday that "the present strike situation renders it inopportune to press immediately for a restoration of the prevailing wage principle."

Murray made his statement after a night of bloodshed and rioting in Minneapolis had resulted in a wholesale shutdown of WPA projects there.

One man was killed and 17 persons gassed or injured in a melee near headquarters of a sewing project, focal point of the strikers' wrath.

The project had operated in defiance of the strikers, who along with thousands of relief workers in other cities, have been protesting the loss of their prevailing wage basis.

Mayor George Leach of Minneapolis appealed to Attorney General Murphy for the co-operation of the federal government.

Meanwhile, a possible new cause of widespread strike protests entered the picture.

The Workers' Alliance, a union of WPA workers and unemployed, announced in New York that its members throughout the country would stop work for a full day Thursday to protest reductions in relief rolls. Administrators are required by recent relief legislation to drop from the active rolls to the foot of the applicants' list all persons on WPA for 18 months.

In Washington, WPA officials speculated on the possibility President Roosevelt might ask Attorney General Murphy for an opinion on the legality of a strike settlement proposal advanced Friday by Mayor LaGuardia of New York.

MAPPING NEW DIVES TO SUNKEN SQUALUS

Portsmouth, N. H., July 15.—(AP)—With seas gradually moderating, crack navy divers lined the deck of the salvage ship Falcon today, ready to descend to the sunken submarine Squalus to determine the extent of damage to the craft in her second plunge to the ocean bottom Thursday.

Naval officers said the repairs would be made at the salvage scene, if possible, but if the damage was found to be too great the pontoons would be towed to the navy yard. Heavy seas have blocked a second start on the difficult task of raising the craft, still the tomb of 26 men, and salvage experts were unable to draw a new plan of action until divers completed their survey. Officers said at least 25 dives would have to be made for a full study of the new situation. More than 150 dives were made during the first salvage efforts, from six to nine a day.

As they waited, the experts speculated on what might have occurred.

BATTERY WILL LEAVE SUNDAY

Sixty-four Men, Three Officers To Go To Fort Bragg

Confronted with their 18th annual two-weeks encampment that will them in all phases of modern offensive and defensive military strategy, 64 men and three officers of Battery A, 113 Field Artillery, National Guard, will motor from Greenville Sunday morning at six o'clock for Fort Bragg.

Captain Worth Wicker today declared that Battery A, 113 Field Artillery, has been selected again this year for test mobilization to be held during the ensuing two weeks. This honor was bestowed upon the local battery for a previous encampment and the success of the feat has lingered in the mind of National Guard officials until now.

Officers who accompany the boys to camp and who will direct the activities of the peacetime soldiers during the encampment are Captain Worth Wicker, First Lieutenant W. S. Tyson and Second Lieutenant Edmond Waldrop. Captain Wicker said that Second Lieutenant (Continued on Page 6)

Babson Says Small Investor Has Problem

Gloucester, Mass., July 15.—This is the queerest depression the United States and Canada have ever experienced. One of the ordinary symptoms of hard times is tight money. In our previous depressions, no one had any cash. Banks always had one eye peeled on the currency drawer. The sheriff's office was busy slapping attachments on shops and business offices. Interest rates were high. No one wanted to lend money. Everyone wanted to borrow.

Plane Sent For Sick Man Plunges Into Ocean

New York, July 15.—(AP)—Three men were believed lost today in the crash of a Coast Guard seaplane which had gone to sea to bring ashore a sick man from the ketch Atlantis.

Mackay said the Coast Guard reported three were lost when the plane sank before a line could be put on board from the ketch.

Mackay said the Coast Guard reported those lost were Lieutenant Cliftner and John Radan and the sick man, whose name was given as Priest.

The position of the Atlantis was given as latitude 39.30 and longitude 70.30, which would be roughly 200 miles due east of Cape May, N. J.

A later message relayed by Mackay said the ketch had to wait to await the arrival of the plane, and added that Yeoman Hayes and Radio Operator Evers were injured in the crash, but that three mechanics were safe.

New British Conscripts Go To Camp

London, July 15.—(AP)—Handled as carefully as boys making their first trip to summer camps, 34,000 militiamen, first peacetime conscripts in Britain's modern history, reported for service today.

Some came to camps in limousines, more on bicycles and in third class railway carriages. Whole families drove up to camp to kiss the new soldiers goodbye.

This was approved by the authorities. Everyone from austere general officers to case-hardened sergeant majors had been warned to be considerate of the new citizen army.

Special orders regarding reception of new recruits specified "no rudeness, bullying or sarcasm."

Queen Mary, War Minister Hore-Belisha and other distinguished persons visited some of the detachments. The queen mother inspected the first arrivals at Shortcliffe.

Today's conscripts will be given six months' training. Other groups will be called up at intervals until in about a year all of the first class of more than 200,000 youths between 20 and 21 will have learned to shoulder arms.

Compromise Of Jury Carried Out By Governor

Raleigh, July 15.—(AP)—Governor Hoey today carried out the terms of a compromise reached by a deadlocked jury six years ago and paroled Herman Casey of Lenoir county, who was serving 25 to 30 years for second degree murder.

Unable to agree, the jurors in 1933 decided to return a verdict of guilty of the second degree murder of James C. Causey of Suffolk, Va., and Goldsboro and after five years to petition for his parole, said Paroles Commissioner Edwin Gill. Gill recommended the clemency extended to Casey by the governor.

"If I had known how the jury arrived at its verdict at the time of the trial," wrote the presiding judge, E. H. Cranmer, in commenting on the case, "I would have set the verdict aside."

In granting the parole, the governor also pointed out that Casey had served the equivalent of nine years in prison since his arrest in 1930 and that Casey's conduct had been "good."

Five others were also paroled today. Casey has been in and out of the headlines intermittently since July 3, 1930, when Causey was shot to death in Lenoir county. Causey's charred body was found in a burned automobile.

Several Signs Indicate An Early Adjournment

END PREDICTED IN THREE WEEKS

General Transportation Legislation, However, Added To List Of Measures For Action

Washington, July 15.—(AP)—Despite President Roosevelt's admonition, it was "highly advisable" to revise the neutrality act this session, some Senators on both sides of the issue predicted today Congress would go home in about three weeks without acting on the matter.

Vacant seats at quorum calls, restlessness in protracted committee sessions and the departure of some veteran legislators indicated, they said, that the end was near, regardless of the urgent appeal made yesterday by the President and Secretary Hull for a repeal of the arms embargo provision in the present law.

Other developments: House leaders added general transportation legislation—already approved by the House Interstate Commerce Committee—to the list of measures they hope to push through before adjournment.

Representative Rayburn of Texas, the Democratic leader, said the House probably would start debate on the bill Thursday.

President Roosevelt's $2,900,000,000 lending program may reach the Senate floor late next week, somewhat changed from its present form.

With Republicans generally and some Democrats in the House and Senate promising opposition even though the plan is revised, Senator Adams (D-Colo.), member of the Banking committee considering the measure, said, "Some changes are inevitable. There are some things all concede ought to be rewritten."

North Carolina had a $3,766,346 share of the total net revenue of states and local governments last year from alcoholic beverages.

ABC administrative and collections costs amounted to $75,181, leaving net ABC revenue of $1,422,736. The general sales tax produced $1,043,702 and local ABC revenues amounted to $1,299,977.

that he would impose the regular toll charge of $1 per vehicle and 25 cents per person for all cars or trucks, government or private owned. And he put up chains across the road at his property lines and locked them. Meantime, the road was closed to traffic in both the national forest and state park sections. Travelers who pay toll to Mr. Wilson for use of his road can't get to the mountain top, even after paying the toll for running over the 200 yards of private construction, and charging it back to the state. Eventually the state will have to pay the toll.

It has been suggested that the highway commission doesn't want to spend money on a road which the federal government is likely to build in just a few years anyway. Such money as the commission has for new road work is claimed by more populous sections of the state. The matter would be simple if it weren't for just a little bit of jealousy or something between the highway department and the state park service. The Highway and Public Works Commission is the only agency in the state which can exercise the right of eminent domain to condemn land for road purposes. And the highway commission just hasn't done anything about the Mount Mitchell situation.

The park service has tried to buy the private road from Wilson, but he wants too much money for it. Reports indicate it has never been very profitable, and such value as it has is prospective rather than actual. Meantime, that prospective value is being depreciated by the present attitude in holding up development of the CCC camp in the park area. It's almost another illustration of the vicious circle.

However, the outlook isn't altogether pessimistic. The immediate problem may speed up solution of the larger problem. There is almost certain to be action taken within the next few days toward removing the barriers across the road and across the development plans for the park.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coon

Hollywood—the freight car rattling out of the big city station with all the tricks that make such things possible on a movie sound stage and the fugitive made a running jump through the open door. He straightened after the impact, looked wildly about, pulled the door closed, and then he found a protruding hook. Quickly he went to work, rasping the dangling end of his orn bracelet over that hook.

George Raft, confirmed cinema criminal, was making a getaway again. "I Stole A Million" is George's second film since he quit Paramount in protest over the innumerable bad-guy roles they handed him. His first after that was "Each Dawn I Die," in which he shared accommodations in a state hoosegow with James Cagney. In that one Cagney was an innocent victim of circumstance. Raft was a criminal. Paramount, Warner Bros., and now Universal, they all see eye to lens. George Raft is a star for stripes.

And it looks as if George himself is coming around to that point of view. He says right out that he's through putting up any fight against the bad-guy roles—that from now on he'll play anything the fans will endorse at the box-office.

LOCAL SENIORS TRIUMPH AGAIN

Overpower Wilson 90-35 In Swimming Meet Here

Greenville's senior boys scored a 52-23 triumph and the local senior girls paddled to a 38-12 victory for a combined score of 90-35 over the Wilson seniors in an East Carolina Swimming Association meet here last night.

Although Coach Vernon Ward didn't have all of his mainstays at his side for the meet, his proteges jumped to an early lead which they never relinquished. There were nine events and the Greenville boys and girls emerged with a half dozen first places and one second place. The visitors garnered one first place, two second places and one third place.

Featuring for the Greenville girls were Joy Flanagan, Mary Lee Smith, Carolyn Hamrie and Betty Tyson, while Hackney, Arcock and Connelly looked best for the losers. Kittrell, Rowlette, Johnson and Edwards supplied the damaging strokes for the local boys. Horne, Ruffin and Kelly turned in the best performance for the Wilson boys.

Kittrell, Rowlette, Johnson and Edwards supplied the damaging strokes for the local boys. Horne, Ruffin and Kelly turned in the best performance for the Wilson boys.

"Who am I," says he, "to quarrel with a theater's cash register?" (Answer from the balcony: "You're the guy who flipped a coin in 'Scarf' and got with beams a great actor—as those things happen in Hollywood.")

"The public," agrees Raft, "seems to thrill over screen proof that crime doesn't pay, and somebody has to play the parts of those who still believe it does. As long as the producers believe I'm that somebody, and keep up the weekly checks accordingly, I'll go right on playing 'em."

His "rebel tendencies"—as all those squabbles with Paramount brought out—have had one result

Play Tonight

After a summer downpour, driven by a brisk wind, submerged the local diamond just before game time last night, the team managers gave the fans the high sign and they returned to their homes. The Greenville team met the New Bern Bears here tonight at 8:15. The Goldsboro-Tarboro game was also drowned out.

New Bern and Wilson went for seven innings last night and when rain came to abbreviate things, the Bears were in front, 4-2, and clinched the win. Staging two four-run parties, the Williamson Martins breezed to an 8-3 victory over Snow Hill last night.

So that's settled. George and Mack "Killer" Gray, his diminutive "bodyguard," are leaving after the picture for a visit to Europe—Trenton, Holland, Switzerland, France (Paris in time for the Chantilly racing season, they hope). When they get back George starts a new contract covering three more movies in which he'll play the type of gent that doesn't get asked to the best homes for tea.

Was it only last year he did that "different character" in "Souls At Sea"? The fellow with curly hair who sang and romanced and died heroically? Who remembers it? Not the producers, certainly. One of them said, just the other day, talking about George: "He's definitely the type for gangland stuff, the menace, the swarthy alley boy. He can get sympathy, which a star of that kind must have, but you can't picture him as the dashing hero type, now can you?"

Atley Donald, Yankee Rookie Is After 20 Victories

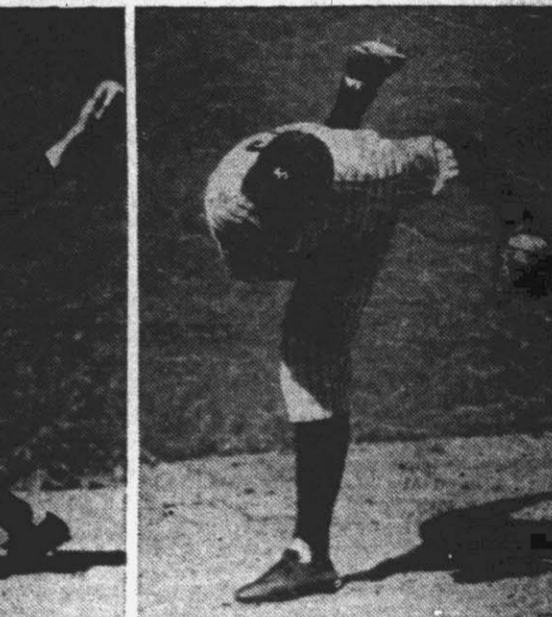

Here's the way Atley Donald rings up a strike: He bends forward and low to get momentum....

He faces the batter, grips the ball firmly, raises his left foot for the forward step, and rears back....

He pulls his right arm far back, plants his left foot down toward the plate and prepares to fire....

The ball is on its way, with plenty of speed as Donald throws the force of his body into the pitch.

By DILLON GRAHAM
AP Feature Service Sports Writer
New York—There are only a handful of rookie pitchers in baseball's hundred years who have won 20 games. But it's quite likely that the Yankees have come up with such an ace this season.

He's Atley Donald, a lanky right-hander from way down in Chandrant, La. He'll turn 27 in August. Donald is 6-feet-1 and weighs 184. The unbeaten Southerner paced American-League flingers as the race moved into the July stretch with 10 straight triumphs. With nearly two-thirds of the campaign yet to go, Atley has a better than fair chance of copying 20 victories.

No other rookie has ever authored a string of as many as 10 straight wins. And not since 1932, when Monte Weaver of Washington did it, has a rookie won 20 games.

And don't jump at the conclusion that he's winning just because he has that Yankee artillery behind him. Donald has pitched good enough ball to win with any club. He's got plenty of natural skill, with a sharp curve and a good fast ball.

During the early weeks Donald's control was none too good, but now that defect seems to have been eliminated. He has acquired the self-confidence he needed and rival clubs are finding him a tough customer.

Three of his triumphs have been scored against Cleveland. The Chicago White Sox also have been his victims three times. He has beaten St. Louis and Philadelphia once and Washington twice.

Donald had a short trial with the world champions last year but his progress was marred by an attack of influenza. So he went back to the Newark farm and won 16 games, while dropping 7 in previous year he won 19 and lost only 2 with Newark.

Long winning streaks are not new to Donald. He piled up 13 straight with Newark in 1937 and the year before, when he was with the Yankees' Binghamton farm, he won 12 in a row.

Proof that he can put the ball where he wants to and fool 'em in the clutch is shown in his 710 strikeouts in five seasons with Wheeling, Norfolk, Binghamton and Newark.

Donald, who went to Louisiana Tech, was an unscheduled rookie at the Yankees' St. Petersburg, Fla. camp in the spring of 1934. He went to Florida on his own hook, turned up at the Yankee camp and told Manager Joe McCarthy he wanted to pitch.

Joe liked his looks and sent him into the club's farm system for seasoning. It looks now as though he has had all the seasoning he needed.

Washington Daybook

By COMDR. L. P. LOVETTE
Unlited State Navy
(Pinch-hitting for Preston Grover)

Washington, July 15.—About 225 years ago, a Monsieur de Callieres wrote a handbook for ambassadors entitled "How to Negotiate with Sovereigns." At one place, he said, in effect, that "stuffed shirts" in diplomatic circles served for ostentatious display by parading wealth and carrying great names to swanky gatherings.

And he added: "But when affairs have to be negotiated, a man is needed, not an idol."

The United States has had such a man in Admiral H. E. Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, the officer charged with the protection of American nationals and their property.

The navy is an independent branch and not subject to orders of the Department of State, although that department formulates and interprets matters of major national policy. Nevertheless, American ambassadors, ministers and consuls often have to act in concert with naval officers.

The co-operation of state and navy officials in China has been a splendid example of team work. From the very beginning of the Sino-Japanese war, Admiral Yarnell has considered it his paramount duty to protect United States nationals and United States possessions. In close co-operation with astute Ambassador Nelson Johnson and other officials, and with a naval force often dispersed in far-flung outposts, the admiral has insisted with justness, firmness and discretion upon the preservation of American rights and the prestige of his country. This was no mean job to accomplish without threat or bluster.

TREATIES OVERBOARD

The admiral knows, as we all know, that the disarmament treaties have gone by the board. And that so has the Nine-Power treaty of February, 1922, which treated the principal of the Open Door and bound the signatories of which Japan was one, to respect the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China.

The admiral was confronted with a great military power on the march. And, to confuse matters more, China was pursuing the "scorched earth policy," dynamiting and burning during the mass retreat. The admiral met this state of affairs with equanimity.

It was Admiral Yarnell's duty to conform to his government's position as enunciated by Secretary Hull: "This country constantly and consistently advocates maintenance of peace. We advocate abstinence by all nations from use of force in pursuit of policy and from interference in the internal affairs of other nations." We advocate faithful observance of international agreements.

The nationalists of western powers were nervous and in some cases panicky. Huge investments were going up in smoke; American women and children had to be evacuated; shipping had to be commandeered. But amid the great chaos in the Orient, Admiral Yarnell stood firm.

STUDIES BOOKS AND MEN

The admiral meant what he said when, in September, 1937, he informed all commanding officers of the Asiatic fleet: "Naval vessels will be stationed in ports where American citizens are concentrated and will remain there until it is no longer possible or necessary to protect them."

FOR BLIND DATES

By Edwin Rutt

YESTERDAY: Thinking the Chiseler is crazy, Mrs. Dipping attempts to detain him. Thinking she is nuts, he tries to escape. In the ensuing struggle, Mrs. Dipping tosses the Chiseler's pants out the window.

Chapter 34

I Love You Truly

AT ABOUT the time that the Chiseler's pants lay in dry-dock, the party in the dining-room began to break up. Not that the revels were ended by any means. The participants, replete with food and champagne, had merely decided to adjourn to the living-room.

On the way they had to pass through a spacious hallway with a door at either end. Mr. Tacks Adams was not the man to let such an opportunity get past him. He suddenly tucked an arm through one of Packy North's and drew her out into the night.

By now Packy was getting used to the precipitous ways of Mr. Adams.

"Where are we going?" she inquired calmly.

"No place in particular," Tacks said. "I just thought you might care to look over the grounds."

Packy shrugged. "Oh! All right. This really is a beautiful place. I'd love to see it by day."

"It's a date," said Tacks quickly. "How about tomorrow?"

"Well, I don't know. I think I'll be busy tomorrow."

Just then it occurred to her to wonder why her lips didn't clip out a short sharp "No" as they had been accustomed to do heretofore to all proposals made by Mr. Adams.

Was it possible she was losing her grip? If so, she would take immediate steps to correct this condition.

"I'll call for you at one o'clock," Tacks said.

"No," said Packy, making a colossal attempt to summon decision. "No, I can't do it."

But was obvious even to Miss North, that something had happened to Miss North. Her words did not carry the ring of conviction. Tacks just laughed at her.

"You're failing, holder-outer," he said. "You didn't mean that."

"I did too."

"Don't believe you."

"Oh, come on," Packy suddenly. "Show me this place."

They went down by the Sound. The water lay dark and shimmering under a star-hung sky.

"I love you," Tacks said.

Packy made no reply. She wasn't honestly prepared to reply to this. Under the drift, intermingling ornaments of the formal garden, Tacks tried again.

"I love you," he said.

Involtarily, Packy drew a little closer to him.

"That's a heavenly scent," she said.

"You're a heavenly girl," said Tacks. "I love you."

But there wasn't any soap in the formal garden. Well, perhaps he'd have better luck under the giant trees in the parkland. He escorted her thither. Overhead, branches stirred restlessly.

"I love you," he said.

Packy sighed. "What a one-trick mind."

Tacks put out his tongue at the trees. As objects under which to speak to a woman of love, he decided, trees were distinctly behind the door. He would leave the trees to her.

But there wasn't any other place to go unless, of course, he conducted a second tour of the Saltair Acres premises. He ruled against this. He felt chilled and sunk. And then, all at once, he got sore. Here he was laying his life at the feet of this woman and she treated him like a mess of cold spinach. It was more than mortal flesh could bear.

Casting Discretion
HE STOPPED and faced Packy. They were in the shadow of the house, beneath a lighted second-story window, and Tacks fancied he heard voices dimly. But it made no never mind. He was going to put this thing across. He was tough, that was what. Suddenly he seized the shoulders of Miss Patricia North and shook them hard.

"Listen, you," he said abruptly, casting discretion to the four winds. "You can't make a tramp out of me. What the dickens do you think I wrote you those letters for? What the dickens do you think I burned up your telephone wire for? What the dickens do you think I risked my life with that ravenous wolfhound for? What the dickens do you think I set night clubs on fire for? What the dickens do you think I buy ambulances for? For fun? Hey? Well, get this and get it once and for all. I love you, do you understand? I love you so much I'd curl up and die for you and I don't mean maybe. And I'm getting sick of having you toss me aside like a pair of old shoes. I love you, you—you—you stand in for an icicle. And, so help me, I'm going to marry you if it's the last thing I do on earth and just try and stop me. Try and stop me, do you hear? DO YOU HEAR ME, GULP?"

As a general rule, Mr. Adams would have forbidden such an outburst under circumstances as these. The "gulp" that he now loosed off was really a protest against something that had come hurtling down out of the night and draped itself around his head just as he had been on the verge of reiterating his undying love for Miss Patricia evacuated.

In regard to Japan's June warning for vessels and nationals of third powers to evacuate Straitok, Admiral Yarnell replied that United States naval vessels would remain as long as American citizens were in need of protection.

The United States Navy stayed on the job. Admiral Yarnell is well fitted for his duties.

North. But the thing, a clingy sort of thing rushing a-down the dark, had stopped him right at the line of scrimmage. Surprised and distracted as he now reeled from side to side, spluttering, choking and pawing futilely at this arrangement which covered his face.

It was the Chiseler's trousers. Destiny, with its infinite capacity for making monkeys out of mortals, had decreed that the section of this garment commonly used for sitting purposes should obliterate the Adams countenance temporarily. Wherefore the pantaloons, not working for the moment, descended gracefully from the Adams forehead and fluttered idly in the night-breeze. As a result Mr. Adams's appearance, as he staggered and pawed, was not unlike that of a two-trunked elephant on a jag. And it was too much for Miss Packy North. Miss Packy North simply stepped daintily to one side, threw back her head and gave way to the finest, most fluent laughter that she had enjoyed in many a moon.

"W-what is it?" stuttered Tacks, speaking indistinctly from under the fabric.

With a Herculean effort Packy checked her mirth.

"I-I d-don't k-k-know," she gurgled. "Y-you—you look s-so silly."

"T-take it o-off," commanded Tacks, landing an ineffectual right on the knee of one of the pantaloons.

"Oh, here!" Packy giggled. "I-I'll help you. S-stand s-still."

She lifted the garment off his face. "It came up, k-keeping like a spent blowfish."

"What the hell is that?" he asked brusquely.

"I don't know," Packy said. "It feels s-soft. Oh, you l-looked so f-funny." She began to laugh again.

Tacks struck a match.

"My God," he said. "It's a pair of pants."

"S-so I s-s-see," chortled Packy. "Who," Tacks demanded severely, "is throwing their trousers out of this house?"

"I'm s-sure I don't k-know," said Packy. "If—if only you could have seen yourself. 'Oh, L-Lord!' She launched into another gale of laughter.

SHORT SHOTS

Laugh That Off
NOTHING is better calculated to arouse the beast in man than a laugh with an undercurrent of criticism. In Mr. Adams suddenly lost interest in the trousers. He flung them from him angrily. They draped themselves tastefully over a bystanding bush. The next instant Mr. Adams had Miss Packy North in his arms. He kissed her with a kind of justifiable violence.

"There!" he said, with savagery. "Laugh that off!"

Packy wrenched an arm free. Tacks holding her grimly, more than half expected a sock on the nose. To his infinite surprise and gratification, he didn't get it. Instead, the arm went around his neck.

"Oh, Tacks," whispered Packy softly.

Wonderingly, Mr. Adams kissed her again.

"D-darling," he said, a little fearfully "you will—you will..." Her head went down against his shoulder. "Of course, I-I guess I knew from the first that I'd have to, sooner or later. I was going to hold out a little longer, but you're so funny and crazy. Tacks, I-I don't think I'd ever have half as much fun with anyone else."

All at once, miraculously, Mr. Adams found himself striding in triumph through the heavens. A star got in his way and he kicked it in the pants. For pure joy he chimed himself a couple of tunes on the rinks of Saturn. Then he took a long, running slide along the Milky Way and came down to earth again.

"You—you actually mean it?" he said breathlessly.

Packy's eyes came up to his. There was no mistaking the light in them.

"Well," she said, in a strange, little voice, "what do you think?"

Mr. Adams put his long right arm about her waist.

"Come," he said masterfully. "Where?" Packy wanted to know. But she came.

"Listen! Do you think I'm going to let that little mutt, Cutler, be the only one to announce his engagement tonight?"

Packy hung back.

"Oh, no, Tacks," she said. "Not in front of all those people!"

In front of the whole cockeyed world, if you please," cried Tacks. "I'm flying high. I want to go places and see people and do things."

She smiled up at him. Her eyes were like black stars.

"All right, dear," she said. "If you want to."

They slipped around the side of the house, into an arched way, with the intention of entering by the door that faced Long Island Sound. It was as well, perhaps, that they chose that route or else they might have met a grid of cigar smoking Apollon straddling over the way. For even as they quitted the lawn a yellow taxi was racing through the parkland of Saltair Acres.

"Sure this is the right house, gu'nyou?" inquired the taxi-driver.

The Assyrian in back bit clean through his cigar.

"Right house?" he barked. "Of course, it is, you fool. Don't you think I know my own house when I see it?"

The Onslow solon was much less talkative about gubernatorial candidates than he was about absentee voting. His neighbors in Onslow, he says, are more interested right now in getting tobacco ready for market than in politics. However, he did hazard the opinion that probably the next governor of North Carolina had not yet come into the open. Asked to name him, the ruddy-tinted Phillips just grinned and suggested that time will tell.

Capitol hill rumor is that Mrs. Helen Robertson Wohl, who ran against State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson last time, will make a try for Thad Eure's job in the secretary of state's office next year. The lady hasn't quite made up her mind, say the gossips, but she will almost surely try for either treasurer or secretary of state.

Best Vote Getters Always In Demand As Candidates

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
(AP Feature Service Writer)
Washington—Webster's law, pronounced nearly a century ago, rules the political roost.

Daniel Webster pontificated: "... The question is, who will poll the most votes..."

Barring upsets, it will be a question in 1940, not of who is the best man, or even who is the greatest American, but of who can roll in the ballots. State political leaders will decide that at the nominating conventions.

That's how it was in 1848, when Webster was making his third unsuccessful run. New York's president-maker, Trurlow Weed, had called on Webster to talk over possibilities.

Webster opened with his truism about the man who would poll the most votes.

"He's Zachary Taylor," said the sagacious Thurlow.

"Why," protested Webster, "Taylor's an illiterate frontier colonel who hasn't even voted in 40 years!"

"He'll poll the most votes, Mr. Webster."

Webster soon had proof that his own law ruled politics.

Everyone in the running today has to face that law. There are four ways to convince politicians you're the man: (1) prove your leadership; (2) wait for the lightning to strike; (3) inherit the endorsement of a powerful president in office; or (4) build yourself to presidential stature in the eyes of the voters.

Favorite Son Talk
The build-up is the only one of those roads open to most men in the ring today. Only one, the President, can claim proven leadership, and there seems to be a lot of argument about that. At the moment, only one—Harry Hopkins—seems to be in a position to inherit the presidential blessing. As for an accidental nomination, it would be foolhardy for any candidate to wait for that.

So the mentionees must take the build-up road.

As Kirke Simpson, dean of the Washington press corps, will tell you, the first sign of the build-up in modern times as "favorite son" talk. Bending your ear to such talk you get a list like this:

Boss Defies Court

W. J. Greene, WPA area engineer, was cited for contempt of court by Superior Judge John C. Mitchell at Cartersville, Ga., after Greene refused to show his list of relief workers to the Bartow county grand jury.

Greene is shown leaving the federal court building in Atlanta after United States District Judge E. Marvin Underwood rejected his petition for a habeas corpus writ to void the contempt citation.

Webster's law still applies. Reams have been printed about the third term, pro and con. When you get to the facts, they're as rare as dirt on Aunt Nellie's shawl. Here are all four:

1. Washington deliberately stepped aside after two terms, although the constitution does not limit the number of terms. Why he did that aside from age, is not crystal clear.

2. Jefferson quit after two terms in the hope he was establishing a precedent. He feared more than two terms might lead to a personal dynasty.

3. Grant was defeated for a third term. You can't prove whether he lost because he had been a pretty bad president, or because he defied the third-term tradition.

4. The Coolidge and Teddy Roosevelt angles aren't quite relevant. Neither of them served two full terms.

In view of Webster's law, what, then, is the third-term talk all about? It is planted for the sole purpose of preparing to influence voters. If the mass of voters can be excited about it, their convictions may affect their votes.

In relation to President Roosevelt, the question is not whether he should run for a third term, but how many voters think he should, or should not, and think strongly enough to vote their convictions.

WANTED FOR BASE-STEALING—This time the law catches up with "Jeep" Handley, chronic base-stealer with the Pittsburgh Pirates. Though felled above, the Jeep usually makes good; his recent record of 13 "thefts" led the league.

'OUT THAR' AMONG THE ROCKIES—Though she lacks the west's usual chaps and sombrero, Lisbeth Lindenberg of Charleston, W. Connie, whose name was whittled down from Cornelius McGillicuddy, went to bed while the A's were in a losing streak. Above, he's shown at the left with another baseball veteran, Clark Griffith, the "Old Fox" of the Washington Senators. At the right, the lean, tall Mack who was called "Slats" during the 80's in Massachusetts, signals from the Athletics' bench.

VETERAN—Baseball calls him the "grand old man." Connie Mack was born Dec. 23, 1862, in East Brookfield, Mass.

SCORING A HIT—When he snared a senorita back in 1937, Connie Mack observed that he hoped the Athletics, then in training, would snare a pennant that year. But they didn't, the Yankees being in the saddle. Under Mack's guidance, the A's won nine American league pennants and five world series up to 1939. Their last series was in 1939; they beat the Cards.

SERIES VICTORY—In 1911, when Connie Mack and John McGraw (left), N. Y. Giants manager, shook hands, the A's won the world series from the Giants by a 5-4 margin. The Athletics took 11 games. In 1912, they won the series from the Yankees.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, July 15.—(AP)—Despite a further timid profit selling the stock market maintained its equilibrium today and sufficient bidding appeared at the close of the session to lift scattered favorites, fractions to more than a point.
Dealings were slack as many traders elected to lengthen the week-end holiday, shunned Wall Street. Transfers approximated 100,000 shares.
Bonds and commodities were a trifle mixed.

Library News

A half-hour of stories and songs directed by Miss Christine Johnston as a reading garden feature on Friday afternoon completed a very successful week with the children at Sheppard Memorial Library. A story hour at 4:30 will be part of the regular Friday afternoon reading garden exercises each week now. If there is rain at this time the meeting will be held in the junior reading room.
Remember, children and young people, in town and county—4:30 Friday afternoon. Reading Garden Story Hour!

interest will amount to in 1960, there seems to Mr. Maxwell little need of adding the $3,600,000 which will accrue in the next four years. These items total $21,812,753. Added to the approximately $30,000,000 which would be spent on road improvement if the present rate of building were continued, gives a grand total of $51,812,753 available for highway improvement for the next four years. Ten million dollars possible diversion might be added. But in any event two and a half million is being tied up all the time under the present contingent diversion provision.

It is this idle money that worries Mr. Maxwell. As chief tax collector for the state he knows how hard the money is to get. He hears the complaints of taxpayers before anyone else hears them. He hears the plea for the use of the state, not to lie idle in banks or reserve funds. One of two things are bound to happen, says the commissioner. Either the state must spend more of this road money on its roads or the taxes must be materially reduced.

BRITONS COME TO VISIT U. S.

America Finally Has Balance In Tourist Trade

London, July 15.—(AP)—For the first time in history the United States this year may show a favorable balance in the Anglo-American tourist trade.
Estimates of London travel agents are that within the past 12 months the number of English visiting the United States has increased by 500 per cent while there has been a 50 per cent decline in the number of travelers coming from America to Great Britain.
War fears are held responsible for the steady decline in the tourist volume from the United States. The world's fairs, an unwillingness to visit former vacation spots on the continent or patriotic reasons if no other—and a growing interest in the United States as a possible friend in hour of need are declared responsible for the greatly increased number of steamer bookings westward.
The recent visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth is an added factor in stimulating the number of British visitors to the United States. Special rate tours following the "Royal Route" are being advertised. Travel agents say tourists to Europe this year are different from their predecessors and are going different places.
Teachers and professors are still a summer staple and their number remains relatively constant. The collegiate play boys and girls on ample allowances, however, are not the conspicuous features they were a decade ago. They are being replaced by more serious types of young people who are in growing numbers seeing Europe by walking, hitch-hiking and bicycling their way from one "youth hostel" to another.
Disruption of international trade has greatly reduced the number of American business men on regular trips abroad. Replacing them to some degree has been for two seasons past a small influx of new "American millionaires," as those who make their living off the tourists see them. They are on their first visit to Europe usually and they come from the Middle West and the South.
Despite strained international relations there are few new barriers for the transatlantic visitor. Spain has not yet recovered sufficiently from the revolution to be generally open to travel. What was Czechoslovakia may not be visited except through the use of a special permit issued by the German authorities. Elsewhere, however, the American tourist, because of his current enjoyment even more than his former welcome.

Agent Discloses Success of Tour

R. R. Bennett, county farm agent, today revealed that 125 farm men and women and 4-H boys and girls participated during both days of the trip, which carried them over 131 miles of farm lands in the county.
Dr. J. B. Cotner, president of the North Carolina Crop Improvement Association and chief instructor in agronomy at State College, discussed and praised the breeding work and production of certified seed, by M. O. Speight of near Winterville, on tobacco, cotton, corn, oats and soy beans, Bennett said.
It was explained that the tourists observed considerable damage from Granville wilt and black shank in tobacco fields and that the diseases were discussed by Dr. Luther Shaw, plant pathologist of State College, and J. L. Bullock of the Tobacco Experiment Station of Oxford on Lewis Speight's farm near Winterville.
All processes in pickling were observed at James' Pickling Plant and 2.9 per cent annually. These bonds can be "cash in" at any time on 60-days' notice.

Diversify Savings Accounts
Depositors' money is as safe in the above-mentioned places as it can be under present circumstances. Inflation or repudiation may come. If so, my guess is that it will wipe out 25 per cent to 75 per cent of the purchasing value of your cash or savings account. No one, of course, knows just how much repudiation or inflation we will have or how it will come about. Savings accounts, "Baby Bonds," and even life insurance would suffer, but nevertheless, young people should take this risk.
When buying life insurance, my advice to young husbands and fathers is to buy straight life insurance with no "fills." It is the cheapest form of protection and, after all, you buy insurance for protection, not for an investment. Massachusetts and New York have savings bank policies which are considerably cheaper than private company policies. The competition of this savings bank insurance is not entirely fair to the private companies for the tax status is not comparable. It shows the savings possible when high sales commissions, plush offices, unnecessary overhead, and wasteful distribution costs are eliminated.
New Houses No Bargain
After a good start on several small savings accounts or Baby Bonds, and plenty of life insurance, the next step for our young family is a home. No one building a house with union labor is getting any bargain today. Certain material prices are almost as high as wage rates. However, interest rates are low and offset the other factors to some extent. While the wages of building labor are as high or higher, than in 1929, the wages of building money (interest) are only half as high. So I am still in favor of a young couple getting their home started as soon as possible.
Pick out a good centrally located neighborhood in or near a college town if possible. Build a simple compact, well-insulated home that will stand up through the years. Avoid the type of home that is "in style" at the moment. It is only a fad and will depreciate much faster than homes that have remained in good taste in New England or Virginia for 300 years. Take a FHA installment loan mortgage. Bargain for the lowest interest rate possible. Be sure to get enough land with your house so you can have a kitchen garden if you are out of work.
Pick Only the Best.
Now our young family has its cash reserve, life insurance and mortgaged home. The latter is its good protection against inflation as the other two items are vulnerable to it. From now on you can buy other forms of investment—preferably good stocks. Pick a broad group of conservative issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Get

Sharpshooter

One hour after Harvey Vigna, Sidney, Neb., garage employe, was sworn in as a special officer, he shot and killed an unidentified bandit suspect in a running gun battle at Sidney, Neb. Vigna shortly afterward began scouring the plains country nearby for the slain man's companion, suspected of having participated with him in the robbery of the Farmers State Bank at Fort Morgan, Colo. A report that the holdup men were heading toward Sidney caused Police Chief S. H. Moore to deputize Vigna.

Asking Local Police To Assist In Arrests

Greenville police have been asked to assist in the arrest of Edward Thompson, his son, Johnnie Thompson, and Raymond Archer, each of whom is wanted for crimes in Rocky Mount, Nashville and Tarboro.
Edward Thompson was said by police to be an escaped convict from Virginia. It was revealed that a girl, 22 years old, and a woman is in the company of the hunted men. Police said they had been asked to help Washington, N. C., police arrest Fate Reddick, Negro, who is wanted in Washington on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.
