SUGGESTS U. S. ADVISE JAPAN TREATY AT END

Resolution By Vandenberg Would Abrogate Pact

MEASURE GOES TO COMMITTEE

Also Provides For Re-convening Of Brussels Meet To Determine If Pact Violated By Japs

Washington, July 18. (AP)—Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) offered in the Senate today a resolution to require that Japan be given the specified six months notice of abrogation of the 1911 treaty of amity and commerce between that country and this.

The resolution also called for re-convening of the Brussels conference of 1937, now in recess, to determine whether Japan has been or is violating the nine-power treaty, pledging respect of the territorial integrity of China.

At Vandenberg's request the resolution was sent to the Foreign Relations committee.

Other developments: The House Foreign Affairs committee voted unanimously to recommend legislation designed to help Latin-American republics bolster their defenses.

First, however, it made some changes to insure protection of the country's military secrets. The House completed a congressional action on a bill fixing average annual cotton production under the Agriculture Department control program at not less than 10,000,000 bales. The present minimum is 12,000,000.

The measure now goes to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature.

The new minimum will become effective for the 1940 crop. Secretary Morgenthau praised the President's $2,800,000,000 lending bill as a real advance toward the goal of bringing our governmental expenditures within our receipts as testified before the Senate Banking committee.

The Senate approved the resolution by Senator McKellar (D-Tenn.) authorizing an investigation of Superintendent Ross Eakin's management of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Senator Vandenberg, who previously had objected to unanimous consent consideration of the resolution, supported the investigation. Senator McKellar amended the measure to provide that the inquiry include a survey of the alleged smearing of Eakin's 1936 election ballot to determine how Eakin had voted.

The resolution does not require House approval.

Sponsors Project In Block Printing

Mrs. Hilda Ogburn, director of the Greenville Federal Art Gallery, said today that a demonstration on block printing will be held at the gallery on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock for a group from Sheppard Memorial Library, but that others who desire to attend the demonstration are welcome.

Thursday's demonstration is an outgrowth of a display of block printing on textiles now being shown at the art gallery. Blocks for the art work now at the gallery were made by crafty experts, but actual printing on the textiles was done by unskilled women. However, the color combinations which blend with the designs resemble the work of experts throughout.

The display now at the gallery represents a skillful work of art, in that individual blocks have to be made for each color in a design. Since the block printing plan can be perfected on curtains or any other kind of material, making striking home decorations, the project is expected to stimulate much interest among the ladies of Greenville.

Work Is Progressing On Project For Pitt

H. L. Rivers, civil engineer, said today that although there was some handicaps about securing labor, the water and sewerage disposal project under way at Winterville is making rapid progress.

Rivers said many men who could work on such projects are now in the fields working on tobacco and other crops and that last week, particularly, need for additional labor was realized.

A 75,000 gallon water tank is still to be erected, with the sewerage disposal plant practically completed. The entire project will be completed some time in the fall.

Danzig Senators Seek Annexation With Reich

PEACE IS SEEN FOR FREE CITY

Nazi Says Solution Must Embody Annexation

Berlin, July 18.—(AP)—A German government spokesman said today that German officials believed that the Danzig question was "steering in the direction of a peaceable solution."

"We are very optimistic," he continued, but would not disclose on what the optimism was based.

"By solution it can mean only the incorporation of Danzig into the Reich," one correspondent observed.

"Our position on this question and our intentions are so well known that further restatement is unnecessary," was the official spokesman's rejoinder.

(Adolf Hitler declared April 28 that Danzig was a German city and gave notice of his demand on Poland—the other power chiefly interested—that Danzig return to the Reich as a free city.)

The spokesman's attention next was called to rumors that Hitler might be declared the chief of the state of Danzig.

"We don't propose to fall back into the practices of royalty, when after the king's or emperor's name came also all his other titles, such as grand duke, this or margrave that," the official commented.

Juniors and Middets Competing In Wilson

The Junior and midjet swimming teams of Greenville left the city this afternoon around 2:30 o'clock to compete in a return engagement with the junior and midjet fish of Wilson.

In a previous meet, the local juniors and midjets completely overpowered the Wilson swimmers. Since the locals have acquired more experience since the first meet, they are expected to make a better showing.

Sees Need Of Freighters As Well As Battle Ships

By REAR ADMIRAL HENRY S. LAND, Retired (Chairman, U. S. Maritime Com.)

Washington, July 13.—(AP)—In my state of Wyoming a cattleman should not allow himself to be without two essential weapons: a gun and a horse.

Few persons will question the need of a gun. The gun protects the herd against predatory animals. The horse, on the other hand, is not ordinarily considered a weapon. To most of us a horse is a prosaic everyday beast of burden whose value lies solely in the fact that he can carry a cowhand around the range and to town and back on Saturday night.

But the horse is a vital part of the cowhand's program for defending and protecting the herd. Without the horse, the gun would be

Body Considers Next Move To Bring About Reunion

Free City of Danzig, July 18.—(AP)—President Arthur K. Greiser of the Danzig Senate and other members of the Free City government met at the Senate building shortly before noon today to discuss the next step to bring about reunion with Germany.

Press officers said that members of the Senate, the ruling body in Danzig, would discuss any changes in Danzig-Polish relations resulting from last week's conferences at Munich and Berchtesgaden with Adolf Hitler and Albert Forster, Danzig district Nazi leader.

Officials, however, would not say whether the Senate had been called into session formally.

Forster, who returned by plane from Berlin, was not present at today's meeting, but he was known to have conferred with party and government leaders last night on suggestions he brought back from Germany. He is not a member of the government.

Shortly before the home-coming of the Nazi leader, observers on a highway leading into Danzig from Marienburg, East Prussia, counted 40 military supply trucks being driven by men in uniform into the Free City.

Neither the nature of the cargo nor the precise destination of the trucks were known.

Last Rites Are Held For Thomas J. Davis

Funeral services for Thomas J. Davis, 78, who died Monday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ben Rouse of near Snow Hill, after having been in declining health for some time, were conducted this morning at 10 o'clock at the late home, and burial was in the Bailey cemetery near Walstonburg.

Surviving are his widow, four sons, J. B. Davis and Robert Bruce Davis of Farmville; T. J. Davis of Walstonburg, and Earle Davis of Bethel; six daughters, Mrs. Ben Rouse of Snow Hill, Mrs. Ella Gay and Mrs. Peyton Royce of Farmville, Mrs. Charlie Tyson of Goldsboro, Mrs. Harry Edwards of Washington, D. C., and Miss Helen Davis of Walstonburg.

The Workshop program was begun for the first time last year at Vanderbilt University and its extension, like those who will be at the University of North Carolina, dealt not only in subject matter, but also in the field of evaluation and guidance.

Call Conference Over Neutrality For White House

Extraordinary Night Session Arranged For Purpose Of Weighing Chances Of Revision; Republicans Invited

Washington, July 18.—(AP)—An extraordinary night conference at the White House was arranged by administration Senate leaders today apparently for the purpose of weighing finally the chances for neutrality revision this session.

The meeting, it was authoritatively reported, will include President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, Senate Democratic leader, Chairman Pittman (D-Nev.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, and three Senate Republicans, Minority Leader McNary of Oregon, Borah of Idaho and Austin of Vermont.

Invitations to the Republicans were said to have been telephoned last night and this morning by Senator Barkley.

Senator Austin said it was his understanding that the President and Hull wished to learn the individual views of the members on efforts of the administration to obtain revision of the neutrality law before adjournment.

Borah was the only member of the group who voted with the majority of the Foreign Relations committee: to postpone action until next session.

Three possible methods of revising the controversial neutrality bill were under scrutiny by the administration's congressional leaders. Barkley said that they were:

1—The Senate might be asked to discharge the Foreign Relations committee from further responsibility of the bill, which then would go directly to the floor for debate.

2—The legislation might be attached to some other pending bill as a rider.

3—Some member of the Foreign Relations committee might be won over to the administration's viewpoint, thereby reversing the 12-11 vote by which the committee recently shelved neutrality legislation until the next session.

SEVEN ATTEND S. A. WORKSHOP

Seven Greenville high school faculty members, including V. M. Mulholland, principal, left this afternoon for Chapel Hill to attend the annual Southern Workshop sponsored by the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. The workshop will be held at the University of North Carolina and will last from July 19 to August 25.

A staff of approximately 25 experts will be at the University of North Carolina to work with representatives of the 33 schools from 11 Southern states represented in the Workshop of the Southern Association. Robert Sugg Fleming, former Greenville High faculty member, will assist the staff of expert advisers.

Principal Mulholland stated "The purpose of the Workshop is to aid teachers in developing techniques whereby they may more adequately meet the needs of high school boys and girls."

A unique feature of the Workshop is the fact that representatives are free to work on their own local problems without being bound to class attendance, required readings and other routine. Furthermore, the Workshop provides the delegates with the opportunity of finding out whether present methods of teaching are the best or whether there are better ways. Representatives are continually examining school objectives to determine whether or not their respective schools are headed in the proper direction.

The Workshop program was begun for the first time last year at Vanderbilt University and its extension, like those who will be at the University of North Carolina, dealt not only in subject matter, but also in the field of evaluation and guidance.

Greenville high school is one of three North Carolina schools represented in the Southern Workshop; the others are the Goldsboro and the Asheville high schools.

Dr. Frank C. Jenkins of Nashville, Tenn., is directing the activities of the schools in the Workshop.

The Workshop at Chapel Hill is one of several throughout the United States which is attempting such a progressive program.

TRIO HOLDS UP MOYOCK BANK

Armed Negroes Take From $1,000 To $2,000

Norfolk, Va., July 18.—(AP)—Three Negroes armed with pistols entered the Bank of Moyock, N. C., today and forced a cashier, W. W. Smith, and his assistant to lie down on the floor, swooped up all the ready cash outside the vault and backing out of the small bank, got into an automobile and headed toward Norfolk.

It is believed a fourth man was waiting in a car on the outside of the bank ready to speed away. Reports said the car left the bank at a terrific rate of speed and soon disappeared.

It was reported that the robbers obtained between $1,000 and $2,000. Exactly how much money the men got away with could not be ascertained immediately.

Three Persons Missing On Ill-Fated Jap Ship

Report Declares 209 Of 212 Aboard Rescued

San Francisco, July 18.—(AP)—The Marine Exchange said today 209 of 212 persons reported aboard the Japanese freighter Bokuyo Maru were rescued shortly before the ship sank in flames 1,125 miles east of Yokohama.

Earlier reports had placed only 110 aboard the 8,519-ton vessel. The Bokuyo Maru, operated by the NYK Line (Japanese Mail Steamship Company) left San Pedro, Calif., July 2. It had put in there after a cargo of nitrates loaded at Valparaiso, Chile, began smoldering in the forward hold.

The Maritime Exchange of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce reported details of the disaster were retained in a private radio message to the Associated Oil Company from its tanker Associated, which picked up the survivors.

The 45-foot freighter sent out SOS calls for five minutes, then its signals were cut off, indicating that the fire, which evidently started among the nitrates, may have disabled the radio.

Her last reported position was latitude 36.38 north, longitude 159.8 east, putting her directly on the regular steamship line between Yokohama and San Pedro.

Officials of the Japanese line ordered four ships to the stricken freighter's assistance at first reports of danger. The closest was expected to arrive at the scene later today.

Two of the three persons unaccounted for, it was reported, were a junior engineer and a stewardess.

NEW RAILROAD STATION FOR KANNAPOLIS SOON

Washington, July 18.—(AP)—Harry A. Debutts, vice president of the Southern Railway System, said today the line was co-operating with the Cannon Mills Company, Kannapolis, N. C., in plans to erect a new railroad station there.

Debutts said the station would be a block or so north of the present site and would be in line with a beautification program being carried on by the mills, which have extensive property holdings in Kannapolis.

Towns Failing To Report Denied Intangibles Tax

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, July 18.—Incorporated towns in four North Carolina counties failed to share in the distribution of the half million dollar intangibles tax for the past year because of failure to report tax valuations and rates to the State Department of Revenue.

In seven counties, the towns and cities received more than the county itself because of the higher municipal tax levies.

These somewhat incongruous conditions are found by analysis of the Revenue department's statement of distribution made public this week.

One other county failed to receive anything for municipalities for the perfectly good reason that no incorporated town is listed in the department's files. That is Currituck county which got $510.60 for the

ASKS JAPS FOR PROTEST OVER RUSSIAN RAIDS

Manchoukuo Seeks Direct Action From Protector

SAYS OWN NOTES WENT UNHEEDED

Soviet-Mongol Concentrations Along Border, However, Of More Concern To Japan

Hsinking, Manchoukuo, July 18.—(AP)—Japanese-protected Manchoukuo asked today that the Japanese government protest directly to Moscow against recent Soviet Russian air raids on Manchoukuo railway centers.

Previous protests have been sent by Manchoukuo to the Russian-protected Outer Mongolian government at Ulanbator with no apparent effect. Japanese believe that some, if not all, of the raiding planes are based in Outer Mongolia.

The Japanese army in Manchoukuo reported that unusual military preparations were in progress across the entire 5,000 mile extent of Siberia.

Of more immediate concern to the Japanese command was a large Soviet-Mongol concentration north and south of Nonomon hill, on the disputed Manchoukuo-Outer Mongolian border.

Fighting was said to continue in the Nonomon sector after two invading Mongol units were repulsed Monday. Other Mongol troops may have entered Manchoukuo north of this battle zone where no Japanese troops were stationed.

Before the war broke between Soviet-Mongolian and Japanese-Manchoukuoan forces had developed into an extremely serious situation, Japanese officials said.

One authoritative source said the next two days would determine whether the fighting would flare into the most extensive thus far. It has been continuing sporadically since May 11.

Officials were awaiting a formal Mongolian reply to a protest against Soviet air forays into Manchoukuo before determining their course. It was believed officially that the severity of the protest would hasten Soviet response.

Stantonsburg Man Claimed by Death

W. M. Yelverton, 82, died at his home in Stantonsburg at 4:15 o'clock this morning, following two weeks of critical illness and several months of declining health.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Yelverton Methodist Church at Faro, near Stantonsburg, by Rev. C. L. Robbins of Fremont. Burial will follow in the Bureka cemetery near the church.

Mr. Yelverton is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Henry Ballance of Fremont; three sons, L. P. Yelverton of Fountain, D. A. and E. R. Yelverton of Stantonsburg; two step-daughters, Mrs. J. R. Yelverton and Mrs. J. P. Coley of Bureka; and two step-sons, C. M. and M. E. Smith of Fountain.

Recess Taken For Pitt County Court

Only one case was tried in County court this morning, after which Judge Dink James ordered a recess until Tuesday, August 8.

The usual summer recess was ordered because of the fact farmers are busy harvesting their tobacco and would be greatly inconvenienced by being forced to come to court as witnesses or defendants.

FINE TOBACCO PROSPECTS IN PITT COUNTY—Greenville Building Up And Prosperous

From the Journal's traveling representative, who writes from Greenville under date of July 13th, it is learned the tobacco crop outlook in Pitt county is unusually fine. From Johnson's Mills to Greenville, a distance of about 20 miles, the prospects are an excellent crop, in quantity and quality.

As to Greenville which was recently visited by a disastrous fire, the people are showing great energy, and good substantial buildings are going where the fire occurred.—(New Bern Journal).

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—Your typical Britisher, particularly if he is colonial or is on duty in the possessions far from home, is pictured by Americans as being tall and leathery, a man who goes out in the bush and shoots a few hippos, returns to the club for a scotch and soda, and dresses for dinner. He always dresses for dinner.

But the other night at Lewisohn stadium, where Frieder Weissmann was conducting, the picture was a little different. A part of the program was set of variations for string orchestra on a theme by Frank Bridge. The composer of this was Benjamin Britten, a Briton. Mr. Britten indeed had just come over from London to attend this concert.

But in place of the immaculate white tie and the London tails, New Yorkers saw a pleasant young man in a somewhat rumpled sports suit with no necktie of any sort and a shirt open at the throat. No attempt to "carry on" and uphold the dignity of the Empire here. He was simply an interested visitor who happened to be an Englishman. And it was a very hot night.

The New York concert public rarely lets its guests down. Every year while he was alive, Gershwin's concert was a sellout. The invariable rule was a packed audience of 18,000 and a gate of $10,000.

The other night a Memorial concert to Gershwin was given. George Gershwin had been dead two years. Result: capacity house of 18,000 and a gate of $10,000. Gershwin, dead or alive, always fills Lewisohn stadium.

During this concert an interesting coincidence happened. A pop bottle was knocked over and it clattered loudly and perhaps disturbingly to the musicians, down the concrete ramp. Then an ambulance, with sirens in a full crop, whanged past. A few seconds later a couple of planes appeared above the open arena, with motors throbbing and propellers whirring. Such disturbances annoy the conductor and the musicians. They also annoy considerable of the audience, who resent distractions of any sort.

But these distractions never fail. During the summer season a concert is given each week, and once each week a bottle clatters down the cement seats, an ambulance screams past, and an airplane dunes overhead. The only remedy for the program to include one of those modern symphonic suites in which factory whistles blow and chains are clanked. Then the audience would accept the pop bottle, the ambulance and the airplane as a legitimate part of the entertainment.

A Chinese laundry along upper Amsterdam avenue is distributing blotters around the neighborhood as a means of advertising the establishment. After stating the price list, the ad winds up with: "Work, prompt service. A trial is all we ask."

No prizes are offered for the solution.

At last, those midget autos are enjoying a break, and are seen daily on Manhattan streets. They are being used by some midtown garages, replacing the familiar three-wheeled motorcycles, for emergency service.

CRITIC. PREVIEWING MOVIES, DISCOVERS IT'S CRIME WEEK

(By Robbin Coons) "Stronger Than Desire," screen play by David Hertz and William Ludwig from the novel by W. E. Woodward.

Hollywood—In 1934 Myrna Loy and William Powell, followed up their phenomenal success in "The Thin Red Line" with a movie called "Evelyn Prentice," and here it is, all over again, virtually unchanged five years later except for different players.

Where "Evelyn Prentice" did well as a follow-up to a team's success, the present re-make has no such hit to capitalize on. Standing on its own, it is a well-acted, nicely directed piece of domestic-courtroom melodrama, with little or nothing to distinguish it aside from its engaging cast and usually effective presentation.

The material is shop-worn. The busy, successful attorney (Pidgeon) is devoted to his wife (Bruce) but has not time for romance. Involved against his will with a pretty client (Johnson), he is thrown into bad enough light that his wife is led further than she intended into a flirtation with a charming smooth-talking blackmailer (Bowman).

Just when attorney and wife have patched up their troubles and are ready to sail, second-honeymooning, for Europe, the blackmailer strikes. The wife, going to his apartment to forestall his tactics, scuffles with him and there is the inevitable bullet. Fleeing, believing herself guilty of murder, she learns that the victim's brow-beaten wife (Dvorak) is accused. She talks her husband into forgetting Europe, undertaking the defense. Finally—at the trial, she speaks up, taking the blame. This puts hubby on the spot, and he stands there squarely, as good movie husbands do, until all is smooth sailing again.

Miss Dvorak (where's she been?) clicks in the trial scene and Miss Boros, in a single sequence, is delightful.

"The Saint in London," screen play by Lynn Rott and Frank Fenton from story by Leslie Charteris.

That man's here again—for the third time. For the present adventures, here is in London, where the film was made by RKO.

The Saint, as detective fiction readers know, is a smooth individual who goes about, Robin Hood-like, leading a charmed life the while, and foils criminals—usually himself under suspicion by the police.

The Saint gets on the trail of a gang of international crooks who are maneuvering for a million-dollar stake.

He picks up two confederates in his fight on crime: Dugan (Burns) who is an ex-convict (and comedian) going straight, and Penny (Sally Gray) who is a London society girl hungry for adventure. Penny alternatively aids and hinders, unwittingly, the Saint's wily tactics—and does it so charmingly, with such pleasant blonde beauty and skill that she'll doubtless come to Hollywood.

Ralph Simpson Appears To Be Out For Rest Of Season

LOCALS COAST TO WIN EASILY

Greenies Pound Two Serpent Hurlers For 15 Hits

Greenville bunched 15 hits off two Tarboro hurlers for a dozen runs and won 12-1 over the Serpents last night.

Morris Wilson went the route for the locals and gave up only 7 scattered hits, three of them good for two bases.

Probably the biggest upset came in the sixth inning when Ralph Simpson, valuable Greenville center-fielder, was injured when he attempted a shoestring catch on Peabody Lehman's fluke. Indications are that Ralph will now have to stay out of the lineup the remainder of the season.

Last night's biggest inning was the six-run party in the eighth, which was featured by Ed Black's 340-foot homer over the right wall with Christopher aboard and Manager Rube Wilson's 335-foot round tripper with Alex Daniels on base.

The other big blow of this verse was Vincent Smith's triple, which scored Harry Jenkins, who had got on base via a single.

Tarboro's lone tally came in the second inning when Smick singled, advanced to second on Lehman's infield out, to third when Neiser reached first on Jenkins' error and scored on Deramus' single to center-field.

Greenville jumped to a four-run lead in the opening verse on Ed Black's two-run double. Rube Wilson's single and Ralph Simpson's one-run double. The locals also scored a run in the second and fourth innings. These runs alone would have clinched the victory.

The local club was host to the ladies last night and over 500 of the 1,500 fans in attendance were ladies.

Before the game started, Mayor Jack Spain presented Don King with a $37.50 watch, which was a gift of LaTares Brothers, local jewelers.

Ed Black featured the locals' hitting attack last night with a homer, a double and single for three official trips to the plate.

Gorski was the power hitter for the Serpents. He got two hits in five trips, but both were doubles. Ralph Simpson featured afield.

Diz With Mysterious Injury

BEARS GARNER TWO STRAIGHT

Snow Hill Finally Halts Its Losing Streak

Only one evening-and-night double-header was played in the Coastal Plain league yesterday, with Williamston and New Bern supplying the entertainment in this.

Williamston lost the afternoon game 4-1 when Joe Tierce got a hit in the tenth inning to win for the Bruins. Joe is a former member of the Martin staff. In the night game, New Bern won 4-2 behind the six-hit hurling of two pitchers.

After losing seven straight games, Snow Hill edged into the win column again yesterday by fading Wilson 7-6. Snow Hill began the game with a determination to win. Joe Bistrot got a homer with two on in this verse.

With Eddie Chapman's five-hit hurling, the Goldsboro Gold Bugs had little trouble breezing to a 3-1 triumph over Kinston's Eagles last night. Chapman really had the Eagles puzzled and struck out 11 men before curtains were drawn on the thriller.

Greenville's 12-1 triumph over Tarboro was the most one-sided game of Coastal Plain activities yesterday.

Gulf vs. Double Cola.
Water and Light vs. Double Cola.

Double Cola defeated the league-leading Water and Light softball boys last night, 24-11, to pull into a tie for second place.

In the other games of the evening, Tadlock won over Gulf, 9-3, then was dropped, 9-8, by Blount-Harvey.

The Double Cola victory came in a game of hard hitting, three homers, by Cyrus, Wilson and Clark, having been marked up. The winners racked up eight in the first, five in each of the second and third frames, which gave them a lead Water and Light was never able to overcome.

The Tadlock-Gulf contest was better than the score would indicate and up until the fifth inning the teams played on fairly even terms, but in the fifth Tadlock went far out in front with three runs.

Blount-Harvey scored two runs in the last half of the final frame to overtake and defeat Tadlock, after the department store boys had pulled within one run of the insurance team at 8-7 in the last half of the fifth. Holding Tadlock scoreless for three innings, Blount-Harvey made one in the fifth and two in the seventh.

He's Hurt Again

The old injury jinx seems to have taken a liking to Ralph Simpson, centerfielder, pictured here. Ralph returned to the Greenville lineup last week after being on the hospital list for several weeks. When he attempted a shoestring catch of Peabody Lehman's smashing blow to center last night, Ralph was injured again. Now it looks as if he's out for the rest of the season.

Every county in North Carolina will receive loans to help farm tenants become owners under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, according to information received here by FSA Supervisor Z. T. Koonce, from the State Director of the Farm Security Administration, Vance E. Swift.

Blanketing the entire state, fifty new counties were designated by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace upon the advice of the State Advisory Committee.

"The FSA has helped 389 tenants in North Carolina to become land owners during the past two years," Mr. Koonce said. "Congress, in its battle to keep the American farmer on his farm, appropriated $40,000,000 recently to be used under the provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to help stop the alarming trend from farm ownership to tenancy."

These loans are made for a 40-year period at three per cent interest. However, the act provides that after five years payment in full can be made at any time. Under a variable payment plan farmers may make larger payments in good years with smaller payments due in years of partial crop failure or low prices.

Mr. Koonce said repayment of these loans all over the United States is remarkable with borrowers repaying 35 per cent of maturities. Further information about how to apply for these loans will be given by the County Supervisor

Washington. No congressional act will solve the railroad problem. The railroads need what every industry needs—more business.

Nothing will create a greater volume of traffic for the railroads except greater economic activity.

Better prices for the farmer, jobs for the 10,000,000 unemployed and a restoration of purchasing power for the masses will do more for industry and the railroads than all the legislation in the world.

The whole economy of the United States is sensitive to the financial stability of the railroads. The American public has invested billions of dollars in railroad securities. Hundreds of thousands of persons are directly dependent upon the railroads for employment.

As a factor in national defense, railroads are irreplaceable. They are vital as a means of transportation for the farmer, the producer and the public.

When the Interstate Commerce Commission was created in 1887, it regulated the railroads which then and for years later had a virtual monopoly in the transportation field.

But today other forms of transportation flourish—they have been fostered by means of reducing freight rates.

FOUR BLIND DATES

Chapter 36

Mistaken Identity

RICHARD CRAFTONBURY reached the foot of the steps and proceeded a yard or two along the gravel path that led away from them.

"My property," he said, somewhat pompously, "extends right down to the Sound."

Miss Dorothy South shot an apprehensive glance over her shoulder. She had some vague idea of attempting to signal Ape Coletti to desist from crossing the particular gentleman with his blackjack.

Perforce she had to bring her head back to a normal position to give attention to Richard Craftonbury.

"If you look across the water," Richard Craftonbury was saying, "you can see the lights of."

He got no further. There was a quick step behind him and a soft dull thud. For the ten thousandth part of a second Richard Craftonbury, whose mind had been on lights, realized that the world contained twenty million multi-colored lights and that all of them were in his head.

A horrified scream rose to the lips of Miss Dorothy South, but she choked it back. The next instant Ape Coletti was at her side, grinning complacently.

"But wuz dat guv I socked, anyhow?"

"It's a long story," she said, in a tone calculated to discourage further questioning.

For ten miles they flew along in silence.

"How wuz dat guv I socked, anyhow?"

"That," she said, "was the guy who owns that estate."

"De big erl muckymuck?" Coletti inquired.

"But I ought he wuz in Yur-rup," said the Ape.

"He was. He came home unexpectedly."

"Wul, geez," said the Ape. "He'd be as good a snatch as de other lug."

"What's matter wid you anyhow, Dottie? Losin' yer grip?"

Miss South looked at the Ape with an expression that might have been a distant cousin to admiration.

"Good Lord, Ape," she cried. "For once you seem to be right. I was a fool not to have thought of that. I—I guess I was a little confused for the moment. Turn around quick. There may be time yet."

Coletti did so. The car roared back toward Saltair Acres.

In a few minutes they were again abreast of the wall that bounded Mr. Adams's estate on the highway side.

They picked their way carefully back through the parkland. But fifty yards from their goal, they stopped short. Through the trees they could see lights swinging and the breeze bore voices to their ears.

He arrived without mishap. Then, working in the dark, he took a ball of twine from his pocket. In a very few minutes the wrists and ankles of Richard Craftonbury were securely bound.

The binding completed, Mr. Coletti produced two large handkerchiefs. He still disdained a light.

This was his work and he was a master at it. Let rank amateurs among binders and gaggers risk detection by creating illumination.

He, Coletti, was a prudent experientist who had used the touch system. Crushing one of the handkerchiefs into a wad, he inserted it in the unprotecting mouth of Mr. Adams. Then he stretched the other handkerchief to its full length, placed it across Mr. Adams's mouth and secured it behind his head. The job was finished. Ape Coletti was at a loss as to how to proceed.

Quick Thinking

OF A sudden he thought more deeply about the Chiseler. When that acid-tongued grammarian arrived to find an unknown individual, who probably had no commercial value whatsoever, trussed, gagged and waiting for removal, heaven help the Pride of the Coletti.

what. And Mr. Coletti had no intention of waking up there with her. He had the keys to the car.

He tore along beneath the trees. Ahead of him shone the lights of the highway. A low stone wall, dividing the property of Richard Craftonbury Adams from the public thoroughfare, rose to bar his way. The Ape, going good now, took it in his stride. A moment later he was in the field where they had left the car.

With a suppressed cry of triumph he leapt into the vehicle, switched on the lights. In a second he had inserted the key in the ignition and started the motor. But, just as he was heading the car out of the field, he received a shock that momentarily chilled his blood.

"Step on it," said a voice from the seat behind him.

The Ape flashed around. Then he relaxed.

"Dottie!" he exclaimed. "Don't ask why I'm here," Miss South instructed him. "Just drive."

The Ape was willing to drive. But he was not prepared to refrain from asking questions.

"How'd you know where de car wuz?" he inquired.

"I found it by using my head," Miss South informed him. "I knew the Chiseler would leave it somewhere handy. And I'll tell you something more, Angel-Face. If you hadn't had the keys I'd have had half-way to New York already."

By now they were speeding down the main road in the direction of the hamlet just mentioned.

"Say," demanded the Ape interestedly. "How come you bring out dat wrong guy, Dottie?"

"This was subject upon which Miss South cared not to dwell.

SHORT SHOTS

Raleigh, July 18.—A trip of more than 300 miles over North Carolina highways Sunday furnishes the basis for two observations: First, the greatest menace to safety on the highway is not the recklessly fast driver, but the self-righteous ultra-conservative who moves along at about 15 to 20 miles an hour, holding up traffic and wearing the patience of other drivers to a frazzle.

Second, the state highway patrol's superb unobtrusiveness. Whatever else might be charged to the patrol, it cannot be charged—and proven—that it makes itself unduly conspicuous. One patrol car parked at a filling station was the only obvious indication of the patrol's existence over that 300 miles of main traveled highway.

The farmers field day at Piedmont Test Farm near Statesville Thursday is the second in the series scheduled. The first was at Blackland Station, Wenoona, last Thursday. On Thursday of next week, July 27, the Oxford tobacco station will observe its field day. Others projected are at the Upper Coastal Plains Section, Rocky Mount, August 10; Mountain Station, Swannanoa, August 17, and the Coastal Plain Station at Willard, September 14.

Color armers also will have their own field days. The only place and date fixed so far for the Negroes being at Oxford on August 11. Several others are being planned. In recent years Negro farmers have shown more and more interest in such occasions and record-breaking attendance is expected this year.

There must be some sort of psychic fascination about a hole in the ground; or, at least, about a bunch of workmen digging a hole. Your correspondent this morning counted 69 persons, mostly able-bodied men, hanging on the fence watching excavations for the new Hudson-Belk store. Walking on up to the head of Fayetteville street 41 were counted sitting or standing looking at the big steam shovel digging up the sidewalk in front of capitol square.

Whether the fascination was because of the hole-digging or whether the spectators were dreaming of the new buildings to arise over the holes, their interest was certainly undivided.

Reminiscent of the strenuous efforts of many suburban areas to prevent extension of corporate limits of North Carolina towns during the last legislature, is the news coming from Columbia and Greenville, South Carolina. In both of those cities suburbanites are begging to be taken inside so they can get the facilities provided by the municipalities at less cost than they now have to pay. Principal objection raised to extending limits at Raleigh and Wilmington was made by large taxpayers inside present town limits, who said that it would cost more to service the new area than the taxes collected therefrom would justify.

Add to the list of North Carolina events for August the livestock show at Hemp, small town in upper Moore county. Held for the first time last year, this show features native horse and mule colts. It was inaugurated to foster interest in livestock raising. Attendance last year was estimated at three thousand and this year, on August 12, ten thousand people are expected. Sponsored by the Moore County Breeders Association and aided by extension forces and the Department of Agriculture, the show brings hundreds of work horses, mules and colts for exhibition, pulling contests and sale.

NEEDS NEED OF FREIGHTERS AS WELL AS BATTLESHIPS

of our country experience prosperity only if their major product can be sold abroad. The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, which created the Maritime Commission, set up as one of the prime policies for the commission the fostering of our export and import trade.

Because it is necessary to have good ships, with good technical equipment the American people through their government are now spending substantial sums of money in order to give American labor and American industry this work. The people are spending more for these ships than they would have to spend if they were built abroad at cheaper foreign wages or with fewer safety devices.

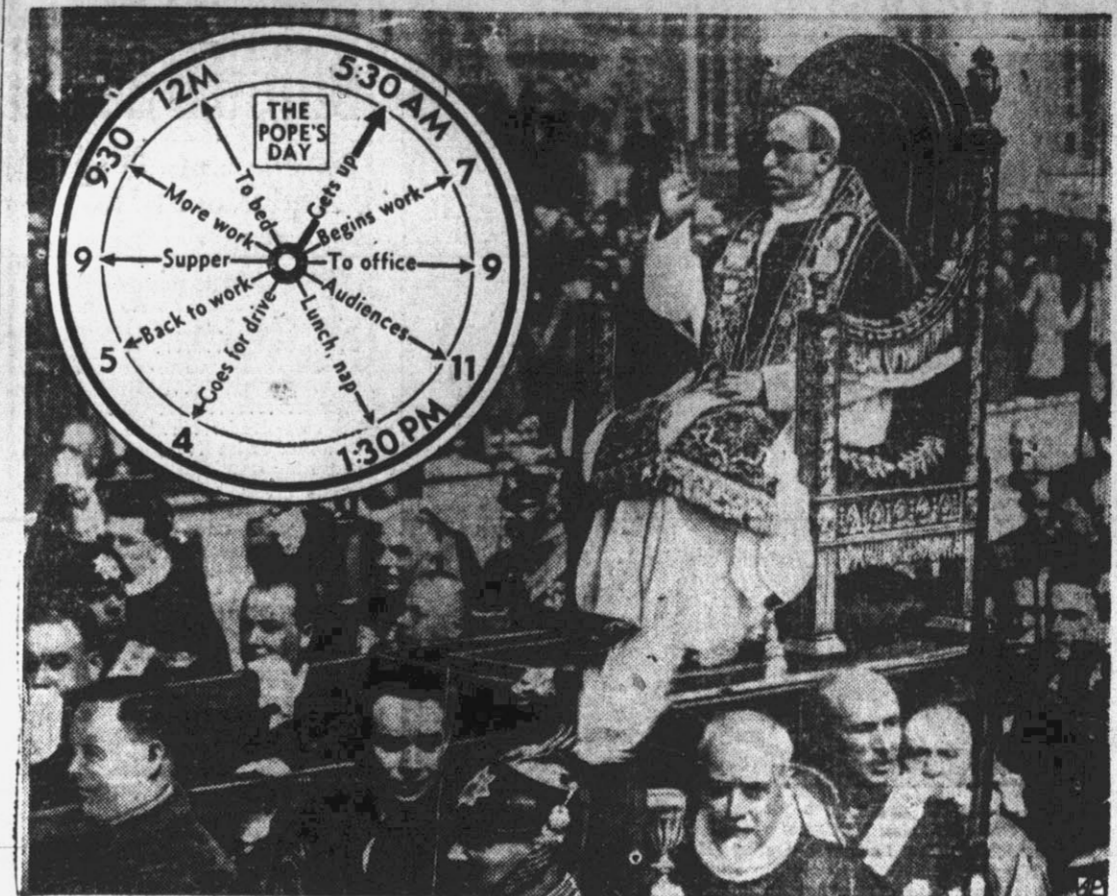

The American people do not lose this money. The Maritime Commission's construction program will have put into pay envelopes of shipyard workers about $140,000,000 between January 1, 1939, and the end of the next fiscal year. It will at the same time have resulted in purchase of material amounting approximately to $175,000,000. It will have been the means of paying overheads and profits to the amount of some $78,000,000.

But, in addition to this, we can get our return by traveling and shipping on American-flag ships. In this way we can get the fine service which is being provided on American vessels and we can make it less expensive to operate them; thus making it less necessary for them to be subsidized.

Along with other southern grid coaches, Horace Hendrickson of Eion College is finding that Carl Voyles, new William and Mary likely looking prospect. The Eion coach thought he had a 200-pound football prospect lined up, but Voyles stepped in.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana is an old-school Democratic liberal. He held the party in 1924 to become the running mate of Old Bob LaFollette, presidential nominee of the Progressive party. He opposed F.D.R.'s court plan. Wheeler is 57, has been in the Senate since 1922. He is a veteran student of the transportation problem, which he discusses here.

Pope Cuts Working Hours On Advice Of Physician

The photograph, showing the pope being carried to the Church of St. John Lateran in May, is one of the latest made of him. Clock shows his usual schedule.

BY EDWARD KENNEDY

Vaticana City.—(AP)—On the advice of his physician, Pope Pius XII has stopped staying up so late.

During his first months as pope, he frequently worked and read till early hours of the morning; in the study next his bedchamber.

The pontiff exercises 15 minutes, then goes to the chapel of his private apartment, where he celebrates mass, assisted by a privy chaplain.

He then humbly assists the chaplain as the latter says mass.

The pontiff's breakfast follows—coffee with milk, toast and butter. It never varies.

It's 7 o'clock now and while most of Rome gets its last few winks of sleep, the Holy Father settles down to his daily work.

He first reads the morning papers and then begins on his correspondence in his study. A secretary is beside him, but he reads most of the letters himself, making notes regarding their disposition on the margins in his tiny out precise handwriting.

At 9 o'clock he goes to his larger office in the library of the papal palace. There he receives Luigi Cardinal Maglione, papal secretary of state and his leading collaborator.

They spend from a half hour to two hours together, depending on the amount of work. Vatican policy—which includes intense work in behalf of world peace—and reports of papal nuncios on a multitude of subjects affecting countries throughout the world are discussed.

Prepares for Next Day

Then come the private audiences, and public audiences two days a week. These are usually over at 1 p. m. and the pope receives Monsignor Arborio Mella di Sant'Elia, his master of chamber, to arrange the next day's audiences.

At 1:30 p. m. he eats a modest luncheon after which, in the Italian manner, he retires for an hour and a half's nap. This gives him seven hours sleep a day in all.

At 4 p. m. His Holiness descends to the court of Saint Damascus, where his big American automobile is waiting. He is driven about the flower-bank d, tree-lined lanes of the Vatican gardens for a full hour. During the drive he reads his breviary.

Back at work by 5 o'clock, he spends an hour preparing for the next day's audiences. By studying the list of callers and information about them he is able to discuss things interesting to his visitors with a familiarity which often amazes them.

Each evening he receives Monsignor Giovanni Battista Montini, assistant secretary of state, for another discussion on church matters. Before the monsignor leaves, he assists the pope in evening prayers in the private chapel.

Nine o'clock is supper time. This is another light repast and as at all his meals, the pope eats alone. He does not linger at the table and usually has left it by 9:30, with two and a half hours more for work before the 12 strokes of the big bell of St. Peter's tells him bedtime has come.

beige with frost-white accessories. There's a sentimental trend in some summer costume jewelry made of pastel plastic hearts or flowers. Blackberry (a deep wine) is a smart summer hue—particularly when frosted with white. Lace-trimmed, cotton babette lingerie reminiscent of grandmother's is much in vogue this summer. Brown furs are heralded as smartest, both for coats and trims, in the coming winter mode. The Duchess of Kent has chosen colorful summer hues; she has costumes in pale cyclamen, sun yellow and a turquoise-green and gray combination. The 1939 vogue for long-sleeved shirts with shorts has left its mark on the smartest beaches. Paris clothes for Gaiety, that of Egypt, emphasize blues in an evening gown of spangled turquoise net and a day ensemble in blue and white printed crepe. The Hon. Mrs. Reginald Fellowes wears shoulder straps of contrasting color—once fuchsia pink, the other bright green—or, her white satin evening gown. Newest pantie girdles have been lengthened to reach almost to the knee to give a smooth, unbroken line to the silhouette. Most amusing trick in fall hat trims is a row of gilt "beau-catcher magnets" encircling one of the new bulky crowns. New Plan For Clothing Sizes May End Children's Misfits

Because of the sad story suggested by these two pictures, Uncle Sam is plugging a new system of measurements to designate sizes of ready-made clothing for children.

BOTH PAIRS of coveralls are "size 6" but neither fits this 6-year-old boy. One trouble is that one manufacturer's size 6 may be different from another's. And one may be too big or small for his age—the federal is seeking a basis other than age.

THE BUREAU OF HOME ECONOMICS tackled the job and, with WPA finances and assistants, weighed and measured 147,088 children in 15 states and the District of Columbia. The experts took 35 different measurements on each child to determine what combination would be the most accurate on which to base clothing sizes. They decided that height and hip circumference should be basic measurements. Sizes would include boys 39 1/2 to 70 inches tall, 19 to 39 inches around the hips; girls 39 1/2 to 67 1/2 inches tall and 19 to 40 around the

LEAGUE FIXES 1940 PROGRAM

Big Chief of Public Works To Be One Speaker

Raleigh, July 18.—(AP)—Principal guest speaker at the convention of the North Carolina League of Municipalities at Wrightsville Beach on August 17, 18 and 19, will be John M. Carmody, newly appointed big chief of all federal-aid work projects. Announcement of Mr. Carmody's acceptance of the invitation was made here today by Patrick Healy, Jr., executive secretary of the league. Adding spice and interest to the banquet session will be Senator Reynolds, who will serve as toastmaster and present Mr. Carmody.

It may surprise some folks to know that this is the thirtieth annual convention of the league. Until employment of full-time secretaries about three years ago, the league didn't get much attention. Now it is a very potent influence in town and county affairs in North Carolina.

Indicative of the increasing prestige of the league is the fact that its publication, The North Carolina Municipal News, has been adopted as the official organ of similar associations in North Carolina and Arkansas, and its name has been changed to Southern Municipal News.

The Municipal League convention gets underway on August 17, which is the last day of the joint meeting of the associations of county commissioners and registers of deeds. This means a full week of local government study at Wrightsville, beginning August 15.

The convention program is well balanced, providing for separate group meetings of officials of big cities, small towns, city managers, clerks and finance officers, etc. Two subjects are expected to occasion much lively discussion. One is the proposal to levy federal income tax on returns from bonds and securities of local units. The league will oppose this idea with all the force at its command. Another interesting discussion is anticipated on the questions involved in municipally owned utilities.

Sub Is Resting On Almost Even Keel

Portsmouth, N. H., July 18.—(AP) The disabled submarine Squalus, in which 26 men died, was found to be resting on the bottom on an almost even keel today when a diver made the first descent since the undersea craft tore away from its lifting pontoons last Thursday. The diver reported the sub had

GINNERS MEET IS SCHEDULED

North Carolina and Virginia Session This Week

Raleigh, July 13.—Ginners from North Carolina and Virginia will be called together by the State Department of Agriculture at Raleigh, Friday, July 21, to discuss the advisability of organizing a two-state agency for the promotion of better ginning and improvement of the cotton industry.

Fred P. Johnson, gin inspector of the department's cotton warehouse division, said today that invitations to attend the meeting have been extended to 1,000 gin operators in Virginia and North Carolina. The session will begin at 10 a. m. in the board room of the Agricultural building here.

G. M. Lester of Jackson, Miss., president of the National Ginners Association, will be the principal speaker. He will explain the purpose and value of associations in a program to render greater cotton ginning service to the grower.

However, in accepting an invitation to address the ginners, the association president said that he hoped the group would discuss their mutual problems and plan their own organization.

"From personal contact with North Carolina ginners, I believe that a majority is willing to cooperate in an organization with a definite purpose of improving custom-gin service," Johnson said. "However, it is expected that ginners will attend the meeting and decide for themselves whether or not such an organization would be mutual help to the grower and ginners."

"With the smallest planted cotton acreage in 61 years, improvements in gin service are more important today than ever before and the ginners' problem will be more acute," he added. "Naturally, with a small indicated crop, adoption of the most modern business methods is essential to the prosperity of the industry."

Pupils Get Training In Use of Telephone

By The AP Feature Service (Knoxville, Tenn.)—Tom Smith, youthful school principal, thought it would be a good idea to give his 8- to 12-year-old pupils a practical course in telephoning. He put it up to them in a questionnaire.

The pupils thought it would be a good idea, so now there's a telephone classroom, and the dial click busily as the boys and girls work at such details as:

Speaking distinctly; knowing what you want to say before making the call; explaining clearly, courteously and immediately who you are and what the call is for; listening attentively to what the other person has to say; allowing the person who called to close the conversation.

Tar Heel Spuds Sold. Raleigh, July 18.—(AP)—North Carolina Irish potato growers have shipped 6,830 cars this year, compared with 8,470 last year, and shipments are practically over. A. R. Harless, marketing specialist, reported today. Pennsylvania buyers took 1,820 car loads of North Carolina potatoes this year, Harless said, with Ohio buying 1,082 and New York 1,044.

The traffic death rate in the United States last year was 12.9 for every 100,000,000 vehicle miles.

Pantry Shelves Full of Ants?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep shelves and cupboards free of food particles, sugar, etc. That's what attracts ants. Second, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder. Sprinkle it in corners and along the back edges of shelves. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under wall boards. Build a powder barrier between the ants' nests and places where they feed. As they crawl through this powder, they will pick up enough killing particles to kill them. Repeat these directions at regular intervals, and your pantry will soon be free of ants.
