SECOND PLANE CRASHES NEAR VIRGINIA FIELD

Pilot and One Passenger Resort to Parachutes

SHIP IS BURNED AFTER CRASHING

Was Second Langley Field Plane to be Involved in Crack-Up And Burning in 24 Hours

Langley Field, Va., Aug. 12.—(AP)—An army plane crashed near here today, the second crack-up and burning of a Langley field plane in 24 hours.

The pilot and a passenger jumped in parachutes, but it was not learned immediately whether they escaped injury.

The ship, an attack plane, fell near Fort Eustis, several miles from here, while engaged in a routine flight. Post officials said the plane burned.

The plane was piloted by Second Lieutenant C. T. Murrell of the air corps reserve and the passenger was Private Amelio Lenzen.

Colonel Churchill, commanding officer, said he had not yet received a report from the pilot and did not know what was the cause of the crash which followed in less than 24 hours the wreck and burning of a bomber plane and the killing of two officers and seven enlisted men yesterday afternoon.

Colonel Churchill said the crash today occurred about 10:30 a. m.

Escaped Arrested After Auto Chase

Greenville, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Sheriff N. H. McGehee said today that Cec King, escapee from State Prison at Raleigh, was captured near Lumberton early this morning in a brisk automobile chase in which several shots were fired from the automobile of the persuading officers.

Attended with him and lodged in the county jail was a man booked as Thomas Jarvis, 38, of Durham. They were charged with highway robbery in connection with the robbery this week of two filling stations in which attendants were temporarily abducted.

The sheriff said they admitted the robbery.

King was sent up from Mecklenburg county in October, 1934, for robbery with firearms and was serving a 15 to 30 years' sentence when he escaped last February in the automobile which he was driving as a chauffeur for prison officials.

The sheriff, in company with Lieut. A. T. Moore of the highway patrol and other officers, said he became suspicious when the automobile, running at "break neck speed," passed them while they were parked. They pursued, blowing the siren, but that did not slow up the other car. Then several shots, he said, were fired at the tires, the shots causing the auto to stop.

Luby Porter Dies In Wreck

Pitt Man In Accident Near Here About Noon

Luby D. Porter of Greenville, Route 3, died in Pitt General Hospital this afternoon from injuries received around noon today when he lost control of his automobile on a curve on the Greenville-Washington highway about five miles from this city.

Highway Patrolman C. R. Williams and C. L. Teague investigating, said that Porter's car, traveling at a fast rate of speed, ran off the road on the right shoulder of the highway, swerved to the left and struck a telegraph pole in an adjacent field.

Patrolmen said that Porter was alone when the accident occurred and that he was under the demolished automobile, which turned turtle several times before coming to a stop.

Porter was taken to Pitt General Hospital in an unconscious condition and never regained consciousness. Dr. J. L. Winstead, chief surgeon at the hospital, said that Porter received a fractured skull, fractured ribs and jaw, and lost much blood.

PRESIDENT OFF FOR NEW YORK TO BOARD SHIP

To Take Cruise off New England-Canadian Coast

COMPLETES TASK ON LEGISLATION

Chief Executive Received Last - Minute Report on Foreign Affairs Before Departing

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt left at 10:15 a. m., EDT, today on a motor trip to New York, where the cruiser Tuscaloosa waited to take him on a cruise off the New England-Canadian coast.

The President had completed the job of passing on legislation. All of the hundreds of bills rushed through Congress in its closing days either had been signed or rejected. White House officials announced, and the President was looking forward to a period of carefree relaxation on a new cruiser, and perhaps a bit of fishing.

In the seclusion in the study of his Hyde Park home he received a last-minute report on foreign affairs from the State Department.

Mr. Roosevelt said at a press conference yesterday that he saw no need at present of summoning Congress back to work early.

Meanwhile, Washington sources said the President had signed into law an authorization for preliminary surveys of 38 flood control projects.

In addition to sanctioning the surveys, in many sections of the country, the act made a number of changes in previous flood control measures.

It authorized expenditure of $300,000 a year for removal of obstructions to clear the channels of streams.

Also at Washington, the capital wondered whether Paul McNutt might go into the 1940 Democratic convention with President Roosevelt's endorsement as a "liberal" candidate for the presidential nomination.

Speculation as to the federal security administrator's chances of winning such White House support in the event that Mr. Roosevelt does not seek a third term, was stirred by events at the national convention of Young Democrats at Pittsburgh.

Negro Woman Facing Perjury Charge Here

Recorder L. C. Skinner of Municipal court remembers testimony given in his court, and, as a result, one Anne Bradley, Negro, is facing a perjury charge.

The Negro woman testified in court yesterday that she did not know anything about some liquor Jack Atkinson was charged with having in his possession for the purpose of sale. Judge Skinner recalled that last year, Anne, who was charged with being the owner of the liquor, testified that the liquor belonged to Atkinson.

The Negro woman was freed. After testifying yesterday that she knew nothing of the liquor, Atkinson was freed, but Judge Skinner recommended the issuance of a warrant charging the woman with perjury.

Young Democrats Favor Third Term

Pittsburgh, August 12.—After cheering a "demand" by Mayor Edward Kelly of Chicago that President Roosevelt run for a third term, the national convention of Young Democratic clubs today elected a 28-year-old New Dealer, Homer Mat Adams of Springfield, Ill., as its president for the next two years. The vote was unanimous.

Adams, assistant director of the finance of the state of Illinois, was placed in nomination by Pat Bea-com, Huntington, West. Va., a candidate, who withdrew in favor of Adams two days ago.

He said Adams was a man who "will lead our democracy in the glorious path blazed by our great president" and was "young, progressive, glorious, seasoned in politics despite his youth and a tried and successful executive."

The speech set off a wild demonstration.

Kelly said he believed a third term was the sentiment of the convention.

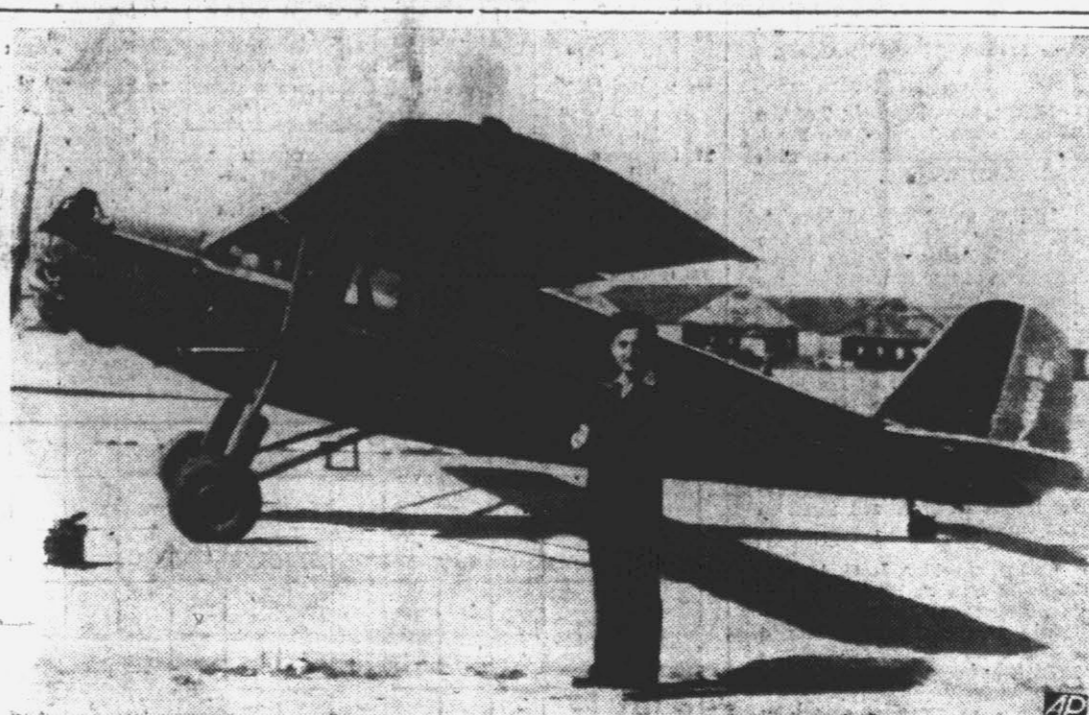

Recalling Roosevelt's words that he had enlisted for the duration of the social struggle, the mayor said: "In this economic war against starvation and unemployment and in this social struggle against insecurity, Mr. President, we demand that you continue as commander in chief of our liberal humanitarian government."

"You have lost your right to your own personal life. You do not belong to yourself. You belong to the people and the people want your continued leadership."

JEALOUS LOVE ENDS IN DEATH

Man Kills Self After Critically Wounding Divorcee

Smithtown Brank, N. Y., Aug. 12.—(AP)—A socially prominent young divorcee was shot and critically wounded after a house party on the fashionable Long Island Northshore today by a man described by State Police Lieut. Charles La Forge as a "jealous admirer."

The assailant fired three shots at Mrs. Elizabeth Greve Caldwell Corry of Delafield farm, Norton, Conn., wounded a state trooper who tried to save her, and then turned the gun on himself and sent four bullets into his heart. He died almost instantly.

Lieutenant La Forge identified him as Lawrence Sprague, 30, stepson of Dr. Shirley E. Sprague, New York City physician.

The shooting occurred in the pretentious summer home of Mrs. Madeleine Watterman Higgins, 31, daughter-in-law of the late Charles Higgins of New York, head of the Higgins Ink Company. Mrs. Higgins told police she had been separated from her husband, Tracy Higgins, since June.

Mrs. Carolyn, who uses her maiden name of Greve, is the daughter of William Greve, wealthy ex-president of the Prudence Bond Company of Brooklyn, which in 1923 insured his life for $1,000,000. Greve was in Bermuda when the shooting occurred and made plans to fly here at once. His daughter was taken to Southside Hospital, Bayshore.

Mrs. Higgins said Sprague had telephoned Mrs. Carolyn about 10 o'clock last night, a few hours after she had arrived at the Higgins home from Connecticut, which is just across Long Island Sound, but was told by Mrs. Higgins that Mrs. Carolyn was not there.

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 12.—Activity on the average American farm is about at the year's peak this week. Everyone who can run a tractor, harness a horse, use a hoe or handle a pitchfork is drafted. It is a very dry Summer here in New England but not everywhere. Crops for the entire country will be almost as big as last year's whopping harvests.

Right now cotton is being picked in the Southwest; wheat is heading up as far north as Canada; truck crops are at their peak in the Atlantic and New England States; Dixie watermelons are rolling into northern cities; potatoes and cantaloupes are moving off California's rich farms.

Exciting as all this may sound, I can assure readers that farmers earn what they get for their produce. Remember, there are no eight-till-five, five-day weeks on the farm. It's seven days a week, 365 days a year! The farmer is on a "job no matter whether it is 105 degrees in the shade (and mostly there is no shade) or 20 degrees below zero. And, when the end of the year rolls around, his chief compensation is the satisfaction of being beholden to no one. His cash compensation based on today's prices is largely incidental.

Gas Supply Believed Exhausted at 10 A. M.

Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Ireland remained without word of the American fliers, Alex Loeb and Dick Decker, as the deadline for their fuel supply was reached this afternoon.

It was estimated that their fuel could last only until 4 p. m. (10 a. m. EST) on their attempt to fly from St. Peter's, Nova Scotia, to Ireland.

In a monoplane like Col. Charles A. Lindbergh used to fly to Paris 12 years ago.

The weather generally was favorable on this side with westerly winds prevailing and visibility excellent off the Irish coast where Coast Guard stations kept a close lookout.

At the airport where Douglas Corigan landed on his solo flight over the Atlantic, an official reported "the weather still is favorable, but no ships have reported sighting the plane."

DR. ENNETT ISSUES REPORT

Submitted To Pitt County Medical Society

Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, Pitt County health officer, last night submitted his monthly report to a regular meeting of the Pitt County Medical Society held in the Ayden Methodist Church.

The principal activities of the Department were: typhoid clinics, maternal and infant welfare clinics, venereal disease clinics, cafe, dairy, and meat market inspection and community sanitation.

In the matter of contagious disease, we desire to report that whooping cough continues prevalent and that the number of typhoid fever cases reported jumped from 4 in June to 7 in July. This incidence of typhoid fever is evidence that the citizens are not availing themselves fully of the protection offered by vaccination nor are they fully cooperating in community or privy sanitation. The number of persons receiving a complete course of typhoid vaccination this year up to August 1 was only 4112, while the population of the county is estimated at 58,000.

The State Orthopedic Clinic, sponsored by the Greenville Rotary Club and conducted in cooperation with the Pitt County Health Department, continues to run full capacity. It is rendering a fine service to the cripples, not only of Pitt County but to the cripples of Carteret, Pamlico, Beaufort and Tyrell counties, as well.

The attendance at the Maternal and Infant Welfare centers showed a sharp drop in July. The total attendance of babies and mothers numbered only 81, while for the month of June, the total was 143.

The attendance at the Venereal Disease Clinics showed a marked drop also in July but to the same extent as did the Maternal and Infant Welfare Clinic attendance. The total attendance at the Venereal Disease Clinics for July was 2,067, while the attendance for June was 2,576.

It is probable that the urgency of tobacco work is responsible for the dropping off in the attendance at these two clinics.

Cafe, dairy, and market inspections have received a great deal of attention from the Sanitary Inspectors and we are of the opinion that steady improvement is being made in the Sanitation of these (Continued on page 2)

PONTOONS LIFT SQUALUS FROM OCEAN BOTTOM

Most Difficult Phase Of Salvage Work Completed

TO BE TOWED TO SHALLOW WATER

Partly Flooded Bow Lifted Clear of Bottom Two Hours After Stern was Raised From Mud

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Apparently maximizing successfully the most difficult phase of a history-making salvage operation, the United States Navy today lifted the flooded submarine Squalus and her 26 dead from the ocean floor that has gripped her almost continuously since May 23.

Shortly before 9 a. m. EST, the three pontoons attached to the tremendously heavy water-filled stern of the craft broke the surface amid a wild flurry of foam, indicating the after compartment had been lifted 80 feet from the bottom.

Without warning, save for a sudden burst of air bubbles, the three foremost stern pontoons broke the surface simultaneously, throwing foam fully 15 feet into the air. The pontoons themselves broke almost clear of the water, sank beneath the surface and rose again to ride side-by-side on the calm sea.

About two hours after the unyielding stern of the submarine was lifted from its bed of mud, the partially flooded bow was raised to a position about 60 feet from the sea bottom and preparations were made to tow the Squalus to shallower water of the Isle of Shoals about five miles distant.

The three topmost bow pontoons surged to the foam-covered surface only a few feet away from the side of the Falcon. They came up in beautiful alignment, foam spraying into the sunlight like a fountain.

For the first time since the lifting began at dawn a heavy cheer rang out as the heavy pontoons came to rest on the surface. Despite the flurry of the rising, the disturbance did not even approximate the wild surge that accompanied the last salvage effort, July 13, when the bow of the submarine itself suddenly broke water.

One Dead, 35 Hurt In Train Collision

Denver, Aug. 12.—(AP)—One man was killed and an estimated 35 persons injured today in a collision of two passenger trains on a crossing switch in South Denver.

The man killed was tentatively identified as A. S. Mock of Pueblo, conductor of northbound Santa Fe train No. six.

A dozen injured were taken to Denver hospitals.

The police department ordered five ambulances to the scene.

An emergency fire department crew equipped with acetylene torches was dispatched, apparently to cut open cars in which several passengers were reported trapped.

The southbound Denver and Rio Grande train, involved in the collision, was the first section of the railroad's Scenic Limited, a popular tourist train running from Denver to Salt Lake City, via Pueblo and the Royal Gorge.

A. Mariele, in charge of a railroad control tower near the scene, said the Santa Fe car was turned over on its side.

Use only utensils that will not react with the cucumbers or the vinegar, preferably wood, porcelain, crockery or glass.

Make a brine using one pint of coarse salt to nine pints of soft water. Cover the cucumbers with brine and weight them down with a plate.

After the pickles are cured they may be left in the brine indefinitely. To pickle they must be partially freshened.

Prepare spice bag and leave in vinegar from 30 to 45 minutes. Add one cup of sugar to one quart of fruit vinegar.

Repeat as with sweet pickles until they suit your taste.

POSTAL ODDITIES

HARMONY, CALIFORNIA

MOZART, THE GREAT COMPOSER, SENT A LETTER TO HIS WIFE SIGNED WITH 1,095,060,457 KISSES!

THIS LETTER WAS DELIVERED WITHOUT DELAY!

Dr. E. C. Cleveland, Ohio

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was born in Salzburg on January 27, 1756. When he was four years old his father taught him to play some minuets and in less than a year he began to invent little pieces himself. In 1762, he was exhibited as a "wonder-child." He fell in love with Aloysia Weber, but later married her sister Constanza. When on tour, Mozart would often write long tender letters to his wife, and almost always littered his letters with "X's" of affection. One such letter bore over a billion kisses. Odd isn't it?

TROOP 36 WINS AQUATIC MEET

To Represent Greenville In District Finale Here

Troop 36 with 36 points won the swimming meet of the Greenville District last night against troops 30 and 33 in deciding who should represent scout district in the East Carolina Council meet on August 24 when Greenville will be host to the entire council. Nine outstanding swimming teams will be on hand with their best "fish" to strive to win the Council honors.

Scouts who will represent the Greenville District are: Dallas Peel of Troop 33 in the one length free style; Edgar Denton Troop 30, in the Breast Stroke event; Ed Rawl, Troop 36 in the Plunge for District; Dallas Peel Troop 33 in the Free Style 2 lengths; Billy Turner, Troop 36 with the Back Stroke; Scouts Turner, Lee and Taylor in the medley relay; Stuart Murphy Troop 33 in diving and Scouts Jim Phelps, Taylor, Rawls and Lee in the 4 Scout free style event.

All three of the troops who entered the eliminations last night in the municipal pool therefore have some scout taking part on the 24th.

The scout executive directed the meet. Scout Commissioner Sam Underwood, Scoutmaster Sam Dees and Geo. Lautares were judges while H. A. McDougle was starter and Dr. R. L. Hildrup recorder.

The Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Greenville District Board of the East Carolina Council has been selected to help Roy Campbell the East Carolina Council special activities chairman arrange physical facilities for the council meet. Loud speaking arrangements, seats, music and many other problems are being solved by the committee in preparation for the 80 odd crack "fish" from over the council and some 500 spectators expected.

Howard L. Shaw (right) 34, a plasterer by trade, has had four wives and a great yearning to live in luxury. But now he's having romantic and financial troubles. Taken into custody by police at Chicago, he faces charges which Police Captain Charles Pawlowski said were signed by his fourth wife, Janina La Boda, night club singer, and her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Anderson, shown together at left. The singer alleged he pawned $10,000 worth of her furs and jewels and borrowed $2,500 from her mother under false pretense. During his honeymoon with Miss La Boda, police said, he obtained $11,000 from another woman who believed she was his fiancée.

New York May Get A New DiMag

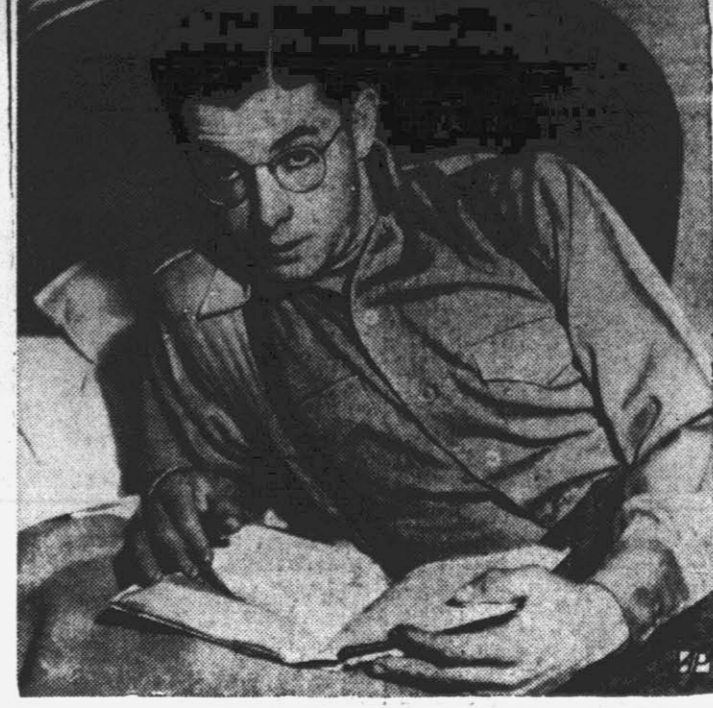

DOMINIC DI MAGGIO: Youngest Di Mag Looks Like a Student

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service Writer
San Francisco.—There'll be another Di Maggio in the major leagues next season—and he may be pulling customers to the Polo Grounds as a counter attraction to the Yankees' mighty Joe.

Little brother Dominic is burning things up in the Pacific Coast League and is a cinch to graduate into the big time. Because their scout, Heine Groh, was the first to recognize Dom's talent, the New York Giants were the first club to be given a price on him.

While the Giants weigh the offer, four other clubs have come shopping at the San Francisco Seals' stadium and received Owner Charles Graham's terms. These are understood to call for a fat cash payment and several players.

Joe Di Maggio also a protegee of Graham and his manager, Lefty O'Doul, brought $75,000.
Bats .365

Dom's 1939 batting average to date is .365 despite a slump caused by bruising the tendons of one hand and straining the other one as a result. Competent observers say his throwing is sensational and his fielding the best in the league.

If it hadn't been for Walter "the Great" Mails, the youngest of the Di Maggios might now be working in a box factory. Dominic had not gone beyond the sand-lot stage, but the ex-Cleveland pitcher thought he had the stuff and induced him to come to a tryout camp.

Despite his thick-lensed glasses, Dom was signed up. He batted .306 in 1937, .307 in 1938 and this season came into his stride.

Proud of his protege, Mails explained: "Dominic has more experience now and has put 42 22 pounds since 1937. He has the same batting stance as Joe and he bats into all fields."

"Fundamentally, Dom is not a home run hitter in the sense that he lifts them. He's a level hitter and those line drives are the kind that are good for extra bases."

"He'd be a natural in the Polo Grounds because such hits would go into the right or left field stands for homers."

Wow as a Fielder
"In fielding he can cover plenty of ground in all directions. His glasses are no handicap at all. He even wears them sliding into bases."

Dominic is 21, stands 5 feet 9 1/2 inches, and weighs 174 pounds. He is one of eight children of the now famous Di Maggio crab fishing family.

Of the boys, the eldest, Tom, was a good ball player but quit the game early with a crippled arm. Next was Vince, who has been up to the majors and now, at Kansas City, is leading the American Association in home runs. The great Joe is the third, Dominic the youngest.

Prayer Answered

Kinston has taken a lease on the services of Ralph Simpson, Greenville centerfielder, who was released by the local club. Simpson had been wanting his release for some time. When he made another demand for his walking papers, he got them.

Simpson entered his second year as a member of the Greenville roster when the current season got under way. Manager Bill Herring did not use Simpson in yesterday's game.

NEW BERN GETS ANOTHER WIN

Snow Hill Hurler Is Spoiled of No-Hit Game

An eighth inning run gave Doc Smith's New Bern Bears a 6-5 triumph over the Williamston Martins last night after none other old Doc himself did some nuch hitting in the verse to produce the winning singleton.

Jim McMullen, hurled seven-hit ball for the Bears and was matched with Sieminski of Williamston, who went the route for the losers and was reached for 11 scattered hits.

Another no-hitter was spoiled last night when Snow Hill mixed in a game with the Wilson Tobs to emerge with a 3-0 victory. Kermit Ausie, a Minnesota righthander, hurled no-hit ball until the ninth. Then Olmo, the first batter, got a single to thwart Ausie's glory.

Tarboro turned in a 5-4 performance over the Greens last night for its first win of the season on local soil. The loss extended Greenville's losses to four straight.

In the first game of a twin-bill, Goldsboro defeated Kinston 3-2. This was a playoff of a protested game between the Eagles and Bugs. The game was started from the sixth inning and Ed Chapman hurled three-hit ball in a trio of innings.

In the final game of the night, the Kinston Eagles turned back Mule Shirley's Gold Bugs, 7-4, in a hard-fought contest.

Meet Mr. Lochinvar

By Marie Bizard

YESTERDAY: Philip asks Cecily if she has ever considered him as a suitor, and attempts to embrace her. Cecily is very much displeased. Now if it had been Locke...

Chapter 19 The Future?

CECILY turned down the lamps in her bedroom and went to the window, dropping to her knees and staring out into the night. The same night that enclosed him in his little shack a few miles away.

There was a very small bird on a branch that swept by her window.

"You ought to be home in your little straw bed," she scolded. "But I'm glad you're not. I feel like talking to someone."

The bird said, "Cheer up!" Cecily laughed. "I don't know whether you're saying, 'Cheer up' or 'cheer' but we could discuss it. In the first place, I don't need cheering up because I'm so happy that my heart is singing—and isn't that being happy?"

Was she happy? She tried to sound her emotions. Could a girl be happy when the man who had become the center of her universe was cloaked in mystery? Why wouldn't he tell her his name? Why did he grow suddenly remote in those moments when she felt that they were closest?

As she had done so many times before, she thought out all the memories of the times that they had been together. Two weeks before there had been the unforgettable day of their picnic. Then there had been the night of the church fair when she had come out with Laura and heard his whistle and he had walked back to Laura's cottage with them. He had said he was taking her home and they had taken the long way.

There was the day of the circus twelve miles away when he had hired a rattletrap car from the garage and over-ridden her objections about leaving the shop. What fun they had had, eating hot-dogs and drinking poisonous pop like two kids. He had bought her a pin-wheel which even now was tenderly put away in a drawer in her trunk. They had held hands while the trapeze artists danced overhead and Cecily had felt that Paradise must be like a circus tent.

The day that he brought her Mary Poppins and said that Mary had nothing on him; he could slide up banisters and promised to show her one day.

"He talks about the future. He's going to take me to the Battery to see the veils of fog at dusk. We're going to sit in the Stadium with the stars and hear Tchaikowsky. He's going to take me to Little Italy, to see the Fete of St. Genaro. He's going to slide up a banister but..."

But, in the meantime, he talked about the past, about the future, yet he was as elusive as a moonbeam. There was an incomprehensible about their relationship, about his very self that haggled at her happiness. There was an air of unreality about the whole thing, as though Locke were a character she had read about who had stepped out of the pages of a book and returned to them and she had forgotten the title of it.

Or rather, as though she had never known the title.

"He's maddening!"

HE had a way of turning off her questions as though she had never asked them, a way that was done so gracefully that she was not aware of it until the question came to her again. She hadn't meant to ask him questions, yet she could not control her impulses.

He had an Irish way of answering her questions by asking questions of his own. He knew all about her. He knew about her childhood, her schooling, the things she liked and the things she didn't like, her code and her acceptances. She had told him things she had never told anyone.

"He's maddening," she confided to the small bird who lingered on for some reason of his own.

"Cheep!" the bird retorted unmistakably.

"Oh, yes, cheep! But I'm not, my fine feathered friend. I protest, you mustn't get the idea I'm throwing myself at him. Indeed, I am cool as can be when I see him. He doesn't dream that every time that little bell tinkles over the door, my heart does cartwheels all over my insides. He doesn't know that I walk along the street with eyes in the back of my head. No, indeed!"

"He doesn't even know that I don't live except when I'm at the shop. This"—she spread her arms to include the house—"is merely an interlude that must be endured every night. But he doesn't know. And I shall never tell him and if he doesn't speak... but he will! He will!"

Later, lying open-eyed in her bed, Cecily wondered if she had dreamed all the things she wanted to believe. Was it only because Locke had filled the dull world with glamour that she had imagined he was drawn to her? Had those happy silences between them been merely silences? Not something dear and precious that you accepted because you both felt them?

It was already September. There were only a few weeks longer for her to be in Vickersport. Only a few weeks longer to make something real and lasting of her enchantment. What then?

She had made vague plans to open a shop in New York on her return. At another time, she would have been thrilled, filled with her plans. Now she couldn't bear to think of them. She couldn't see herself anywhere but where she was. New York was as remote as Tibet—and as foreign, because there would be no Locke there.

He had talked about New York but she had never been able to make him say that he would be there, or that he would see her there. Oh, he was a very unsatisfactory person. Why couldn't she have fallen in love with a solid sort of person?

Why couldn't she have fallen in love with someone—say, like Philip Callen? There wasn't really anything wrong with Philip. Everybody liked him except her, self!

Maybe I'm fated to be one of those women who always make mistakes, she thought cheerfully. I guess I'm not cut out to be the femme fatale type; and all the rest of us, according to current literature, have to make mistakes.

She was almost asleep when she thought of that. Then a new thought woke her up. Why hadn't she thought of it before!

Locke hadn't kissed her. Three times he had acted as though he wanted to, and then, deliberately he had turned away.

Evidently, he hadn't because he would have thought his kiss was serious, and if it was, Cecily meant to find out.

YESTERDAY: Every time she sees Locke, Cecily's heart turns cartwheels, but she still can't penetrate his reserve. The summer season is nearly over. Meanwhile, Laura confesses that she's seriously interested in Donald Hemingway.

Chapter 20 Two Kisses

"DON'T you want to tell me about it?"

"There really isn't anything to tell you, Cecily. Only... I care for him and I think he cares for me." Cecily felt a swift dart of envy.

"He has been teasing you, hasn't he?"

Laura smiled like a schoolgirl. "Very much. When he doesn't stay in here, I mean on the days when he doesn't, he drops around to my cottage. And last night he took me back to his house to dine. He told me there hadn't been a woman in his house, I mean a hostess, since his mother died thirty years ago. He showed me all the silver and everything and then when we got home... she couldn't go on.

"Well?" Cecily demanded.

"He told me... he told me that he had been thinking about me ever since the night of your first party and... and when he was leaving he kissed my hand."

"Considering what kind of a man he is, Laura, you could practically sue him for breach of promise if he doesn't propose."

"Then he told me how beautiful the winters were here and he asked me if I wanted very much to go back to Boston this winter."

Cecily leaned down and hugged her. "There's nothing that makes me so happy as to see a good girl get her man and it looks as though you had got him."

Laura looked up. "Oh, Cecily! I know that Donald is a typical down-Easter, a dyed-in-the-wool Puritan and no movie hero, but I don't mind. I'm not a very gay person myself."

Cecily laughed. "And as long as you have no past to hide, nothing that would shock Donald, you're quite safe."

"Of course I haven't!" Laura protested.

"Nobody ever has that I know, that's what makes life dull," Cecily bantered. "The movies and the thrillers always make out that everybody has something to hide, but who has?"

"I've been hiding my light under a bushel for years," Locke's voice interrupted. "I've made a neat little number, as you can see."

"You do always come in on cues, don't you?" Cecily laughed at him, the song in her heart springing up, his presence the appeal that started it. "Where did you come from?"

"The back door. I've been having a talk with Silas. Think he ought to go into politics. What a future! He's the man who warms the heart of the community, not to mention its feet. Why, if he ran for the office of sheriff, who'd dare to turn him down? He could go on strike and wheel supply."

"Oh, dear, he's off on his nonsense!" Cecily said dolefully.

"On the contrary, I'm here for business reasons. I've made a shelf for you. You've been ruining those prints propping them up on a wide shelf, so I've made a neat little number, as you can see."

He went to the door and got the shelf he had left there. He brought it back to show them. It was about four feet long and two feet deep. It held grooves at top and bottom to support the photographic prints so that they wouldn't buckle or curl.

He explained the principle of it to the girls in the manner of a college professor explaining a difficult engineering problem.

"Pretty cute, eh?"

Cecily chewed the end of her pencil. It was pretty cute, she did agree, but she had her mind on something else.

If she expected to do any experimenting, this was the time to do it.

"Laura," she said suddenly. "Mrs. Brickell's little boy stopped me on my way down this morning. He said his mother can't get around without a cane since she sprained her ankle and that she wanted to finish her green wool sweater. I wonder if you'd mind taking some wool up to her?"

"But she isn't!"

"Some Day, I'll Understand"

CECILY'S eyes flashed a signal. "I think it would be awfully nice if you would," she said firmly. Obediently, Laura got out some green wool and slipped on her white coat.

When she had gone, Cecily sat down and regarded her guest. "I think it was very sweet of you to make that shelf for us," she began.

"Oh, it's strictly business," he answered blandly.

"Business?" I see. How much?"

"Well, I'll tell you, let's do it this way: would a dollar be too much?"

"Not a bit," she said, nettled. She had thought it was a present. But when she went for her purse, she felt still more that all he had to do something to earn enough to live, and a dollar was cheap enough.

"There you are," she said, giving him two dollars.

despite low prices for farm products. Not generally known is the fact that business recoveries have come more often with low prices and good crops than with high prices and short crops. Why? Because big crops mean more jobs on farms, more bustle in farm towns, more activity in farm canneries and storage houses, more traffic on farm railroads—in short, more business in farm regions, more total purchasing power in the nation.

Food Lowest in Five Years

Furthermore, big crops mean that food bills will stay low and families can buy more food. These bills are now the lowest in five years! If the city man plays the game square, and keeps his wages and prices low, the farmer, in turn, can buy more products from the city man's factory. So, as long as prices stay down, everyone receives more goods.

After all, any real standards of living must be measured in terms of goods—meat in prices or in money. If, however, the city man now tries to boost his prices, the farmer may get some. Certainly, he is not going to stand for farm prices dropping much lower without some cutting of city wages and prices as well.

Lexington, Ky.—(AP)—Horsemen have a reputation for being taciturn. Thus Miss Minnie Stevenson, secretary of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association, had no trouble figuring out what W. J. Galvin, Wilmington, Ohio, harness race veteran, meant when he wrote:

"What about a box for the trots?"

The line was in the middle of a full-sized sheet of paper. There was nothing else but his name.

Miss Stevenson immediately reserved a box for the coming Lexington trots, harness horse program, for Galvin.

The famous baths of ancient Rome were without one item we consider a necessity—soap. To rid a Roman of bodily soil, a slave wielded a strigil, or skin-scraper.

Grapefruit cultivation began in Florida but has had its greatest development in the last 20 years, in

He gave one back. "Just the cost of the wood to you."

"So now, you're a carpenter?" she asked, returning the other bill to her purse.

"I'm an odd-job man," he corrected.

"You don't stay at one thing very long, do you? A couple of weeks ago, it was fish that engaged you."

"Fish and carpentering, I'm rather a dilettante, you know, dabbling in this art and that. And doing very well," he added with a twinkle in his eye. "In fact, I sold two pounds of mushrooms to old man Fuller for a half a dollar this morning. I was planning to have a luscious meal of them for myself but gold tempted me."

Something struck deep in Cecily's breast. What had he had for lunch?

"And the berry season is here with more bright prospects. By the way, Cecily, what do you know about making raspberry jam? Does it take a trick?"

Cecily had risen and stood before him.

"Locke, are you serious? Are you really going to make jam for yourself?"

He tilted her chin up and smiled down on her but his eyes did not laugh.

"Why?" he asked softly.

She couldn't say. "I can't bear for you to be so poor—hungry, perhaps." She couldn't say anything. Yet her eyes were full of things.

And there in broad daylight, in the open where anyone might walk in, he bent down and kissed her on her parted lips.

Cecily closed her eyes and swayed toward him. Then his arms were around her, holding her close, tenderly. She clung to him for a moment. Then she stepped back.

Still she kept her eyes closed, reluctant to let the breathless moment go.

His hands grasped her arms, commanding her to open her eyes. When she did, she saw that his eyes had darkened and that his face was worked with his effort to conceal his emotions.

"I'm sorry, dear," he said, releasing her.

"Oh, don't be sorry," she whispered. "I'm glad, Locke! I wanted you to!"

"Did you?" His question was for her eyes which answered him.

"You shouldn't have," he said strangely. And then, abruptly, he turned and left her.

She couldn't move. She felt powerless, although she wanted to call him back. She felt that that was the time to ask him questions in that moment; she could have said, "Do you love me?"

But when he was gone, she was glad that she hadn't.

"He will come again and some day I'll understand," she said.

The Simple Life

TONY RICHARDSON dug around in the smooth stones of the beach. She selected a handful with flat edges. Her careful scrutiny was worthy of better things—of pearls, let us say, at Cartier's. She had pearls, inherited pearls. She was the debutante of Gloria Watt's season—perhaps you will remember—whose mother bought her a foreign car, accompanied by a chauffeur of her own; a silver fox cape, and the suite de luxe on the smartest of the trans-Atlantic floating palaces to celebrate her seventeenth birthday.

At the moment, like the other five girls on Gloria's picnic luncheon, she was embracing the simple life.

She scaled a very flat stone into the icy blue water and watched it skip across the surface. "Hi, Gloria!"

"Yes, darling," Gloria answered, concentrating on getting the first olive out of a bottle.

(Continued from page one) are bigger, egg output greater, prices less. Dairy farmers are not feeling happy either with milk and butter selling for 10 per cent less than last Summer. The silver lining in the dairy cloud is the low cost of feed. Low hog prices contrast with the relatively good prices for beef and lamb. Compared with last year fruit ranchers have fared the best of all the farm groups. Fruit prices could not have dropped much below a year ago anyway.

The buying value of the farm dollar, however, is holding its own. This means that despite the sag in farm prices, the farmer's costs have also dipped—including farm wage, living costs, and production costs. Last Summer, the ratio of prices received to prices paid by farmers (Normal, or 100, was 1909-1914), stood at 74. Today, the figure is about the same, it was 72 in 1937, at its lowest ever, and 82 in 1932, at its highest (105) in 1926. In this time ple ratio lies the answer to one of the biggest political riddles of recent years: Why didn't the New Deal's carefully fostered courtship of farmers and laborers get anywhere?

Farm-Union Hookup The Book

Trying to hook farmers up with union laborers is about as easy as getting water and oil to mix. The farmer is a capitalist. He hires labor. When a farmer needs an electrical job done, can he afford to pay $1.40 an hour with wheat at 60 cents a bushel, cotton at 9 cents a pound, and milk at 10 cents a quart? The farmer knows that the only way he can afford to support wage unions is by establishing a price union of his own and charging as high a price-scale for his product as the union does for its product. To do this, the farmer would have to get $2 per dozen for eggs, 60 cents a quart for milk, and $3 per pound for steak.

The farmer believes that prosperity will return to America only as we produce more goods for less money. That is why I am bullish

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The stock market had plenty of rallying field today, but buying ignition failed to catch until the final part of the session, when selected issues were given a quiet push for gains of fractions to a point or so.
The list pointed selectively upward at the start, then backed away. While minus signs were to be seen here and there, advances predominated in virtually all departments. Transfers approximated 250,000 shares.

Witness Being Held In Default of Bond

Raleigh, August 12.—Director Frederick Handy of the State Bureau of Investigation said today that Alma J. Hargrove, Columbus county deputy sheriff, indicted for murder in connection with the death of his son.
H. L. Pierce, agent in the state bureau, has been working on the case. Trial is set for August 21.

Washington Daybook

Washington, — Reports coming both from Tokyo and London that England had asked the United States to assist in stabilizing Chinese currency found very limited support here.
First there is considerable doubt that China now is especially anxious for her currency to be stabilized, at least if she has to participate in the stabilization. As long as Chinese money was supported by gold or foreign exchange, the Japanese made good use of it by buying up quantities of it in exchange for paper money issued by puppet governments they set up. The Japanese got quantities of foreign exchange and gold that way.
And, second, the United States Treasury has had peculiar experiences with its agreement with England and France to stabilize their exchange and our own. Treasury officials might be expected to hesitate to join England in an enterprise mostly beneficial to British trade with the Chinese.

FUNNY BUSINESS

Some of the Treasury's dealings with England and France have been as funny as a Noel Coward comedy. A few months ago, Paris decided to lower the value of the franc a trifle. In accordance with the tri-partite monetary agreement, she was supposed to notify the United States and England so they could either object or take steps to protect their own currency.
France gave the notification in due order but had first given the tipoff in Paris so that French currency operators were in a position to rake in a neat profit—at the expense of British and American operators.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau was thoroughly angered. It happened about that time that he was decorating a coast guardman with a medal. A news reporter, knowing of the French escapade, asked jokingly whether the French were going to decorate him with a medal.
"They already have," replied Morgenthau in the same light spirit, but with a sly grin he added: "With the double cross."

Through various channels this little inside yarn, much garbled, got into the hands of writers for the paper published by Father Coughlin. What should come out but a story criticizing Morgenthau for accepting decorations from a foreign government while this country was

A BRITISH SCHEME
More recently England had an eye for devaluing its currency from its approximate $4.86 level to $4.50, a cut which would give British traders an advantage over Americans. To see what the response in England and in America might be, rumors of the intended move were "leaked" out to London papers.
Naturally the Treasury suspected what was afoot. Treasury officials correspondingly "leaked" a story that any such move by England would bring a cut in dollar values to meet it. England, in no mood to have a currency war just now with the United States, killed the plan.
This little story of the British was told in part by Senator Wagner of New York in recent Senate debate to support the President's request for continuation of his power to devalue the currency. Wagner said it demonstrated that the United States didn't have to devalue its currency to win currency wars.

Just the fact that the President had the power of devaluation, he said, tended to stabilize international exchange.
If you want the other side of that argument, consult Senator Glass of Virginia.
