DANGER OF EUROPEAN WAR REPORTEDLY AVERTED

FRANCE CALLS THREE GROUPS TO THE COLORS

Armed Force Now Estimated to Total 2,200,000

PRACTICALLY AT FULL STRENGTH

Premier Daladier Meanwhile Confers With British Ambassador On Tense Situation

Paris, Aug. 26.—(AP)—The French government today mobilized three additional military groups.

This call to the colors made France's mobilization in the face of the European crisis almost complete. The national defense ministry announced that officers and troops holding mobilization orders bearing the numbers one, five and six are called to the colors and must conform to the instructions of their mobilization cards.

France's armed forces are now estimated to total 2,200,000, although no official figures were issued. Only men numbered seven and eight remained to be called.

Premier Daladier, who signed the new mobilization order, meanwhile conferred with British Ambassador Phipps and French diplomats on the possibility of peace arising from Hitler's reported eleven-hour offer of negotiations.

Persons close to Daladier said Hitler's plan was "extremely clever," making it difficult not to envisage negotiations.

French spokesmen insisted this country would not back down on determination to support Poland in the event of German attack and to reject any "domination by force." The general impression is that the plan carried to London by Sir Neville Henderson, British ambassador to Berlin, contained Hitler's "minimum demands" and that France was calling up more troops to strengthen her stand in case she definitely enters negotiations.

Bonds For Lease Receive Approval

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Aug. 26.—Nothing but formal execution of the lease by the H. P. Edwards interests of Sanford remains to insure transfer of operation of the Atlantic and North Carolina (Mullet Line) railroad from state to private hands at one minute after midnight of August 31.

This new approach to formal inauguration of the new regime came about with approval to all intents and purposes of terms and conditions of the bond Edwards and his associates are to give to guarantee compliance with all terms and conditions of the lease under which they will take over the Mullet.

Bond approval was accomplished at a conference at which Attorney General Harry McMullan represented the state-owned line. Mr. Edwards was present for himself and his company, and C. R. Riley, manager of the Richmond branch, represented the bonding company, Glenn Falls Indemnity Company of Glenn Falls, N. Y.

Only contention developed over a cancellation clause. It was readily agreed that the bond would be for $50,000 and conditioned upon faithful and complete compliance with all terms of the lease, which provides for an annual rental to the state.

Finally it was agreed that the Edwards company will post $25,000 collateral and that there shall be a provision in the bond for cancellation upon six-months notice—the Edwards collateral to take care of any losses which might be suffered by reason of cancellation of the bond or for insufficiency thereof. Only approval of the terms by the bonding company's main office—and this seems a mere formality—remains to conclude finally this phase of the negotiations and to set the stage for formal signature and execution of the lease by Edwards.

HICKORY, DICKERY, DOCK. THE MOUSE RAN UP THE—

Kenton, Ohio.—(AP)—The old nursery rhyme which goes "Hockory, dickory, dock" has a new meaning to Harry Small.

Hunting rats on his farm. Small reported a large one became confused and scrambled up his pants leg. The farmer did some scrambling of his own on the ground until the rat ran out, only to dash up the other trouser leg.

Finally getting the rat out. Small killed it with a shot.

PREPARED FOR MONDAY SALES

Warehouses Cleared Friday; Better Grades Up

Greenville's warehouses today were preparing for Monday's sales after having cleared their floors yesterday of the last pound of the opening-week break. The market experienced the heaviest sales in its history for an opening week, disposing of 8,207,754 pounds of tobacco during the first four selling days, or an average of more than 1,500,000 pounds per day. Despite the low quality of the leaf sold, the average price reported was $15.04 per hundred pounds.

Prices continued firm yesterday and some of the better grades sold higher. It was officially reported that a number of sales were made from up to $32 a hundred for tobacco which formerly had received a top price of $27 or $28.

Although farmers have had little complaint since the market opened, a more satisfactory sentiment was exhibited over yesterday's sales than any day this week.

Offerings in Greenville during the first four days of auctions bore out pre-season predictions that offerings this season would surpass any in the history of the market. An unusually large crop was produced and farmers from all sections of Eastern Carolina are bringing their tobacco to Greenville. Sales here the first three days almost equaled offerings on the local market; the first five days of the 1938 selling season.

Although the floors were crowded throughout the first week, they were clear last night and preparations were being made for orderly sales Monday.

Weather for the Week. South Atlantic states—Generally fair first half of week except for local showers in Florida, scattered showers in latter part; temperatures normal except slightly below over northern portion first part of week.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—The newspapers have been discussing both seriously and facetiously, President Roosevelt's changing of the date for Thanksgiving Day. An editorial in a New England paper closes with this sentence: "It would be historically amusing if Franklin Delano Roosevelt finally lost favor with the American populace, not because of his unorthodox political and economic policies, but because, by God, he changed the date of Thanksgiving Day!"

The problem however is much deeper than appears on the surface. This may be the President's opening gun to help retailers. For some time his Brain Trust has known that one of the most vital steps in creating employment is to encourage buyers. Merely raising wages does not accomplish this. Increased wages means higher prices for goods without a material change in the number of workers. The answer lies in making it easier for people to buy goods by encouraging retailers in various ways. Hence a discussion of the date of Thanksgiving Day

Gaddy Accomplishes An Escape

Charley Moyer, Negro, convicted by Pitt Superior court several months ago on three automobile theft charges with Frank Gaddy, Negro, escaped yesterday from the Onslow county prison camp.

Highway patrolmen in the eastern division, making an effort to apprehend the escapee, today reported that an automobile stolen last night from New Bern is believed to have been taken by Moyer.

Officers said they were not familiar with details of the escape.

GREAT BRITAIN DRAFTS REPLY

Henderson to Return To Germany With Answer

London, Aug. 26.—(AP)—The British government will send its reply to Adolf Hitler's reported peace offer to Berlin tomorrow. It was disclosed tonight as the cabinet met in emergency session to draft the answer.

Sir Neville Henderson, British ambassador to Berlin, who flew to London this morning with Hitler's message, will take the British reply back by train tomorrow morning.

There was no indication what this answer would be, but it was said in informed quarters that further comment from Hitler might have to be conveyed to London.

This was interpreted as indicating the British government was unable to give a definite final reply to Hitler's proposal without further clarification of his views.

It had been expected that Sir Neville would go back to Berlin this afternoon, but this was made impossible by the length of his discussions with Prime Minister Chamberlain and King George and by the necessity of a cabinet meeting.

JAW IS BROKEN IN JAIL BRAWL

Burney Tripp In Pitt General Hospital

Burney Ray Tripp, 24, is in Pitt General Hospital suffering a fractured jaw received when he became engaged in a slugging duel with Hubert Gray, his cell mate in the Pitt county jail.

County Justice W. G. Leggett said he heard a commotion on the top floor of the jail and an immediate investigation disclosed that Gray, 18, of Greenville, had assaulted Tripp with his fist.

Tripp, bleeding and stunned by the severe blow, was taken to the local hospital, where examination by hospital physicians disclosed that he had a broken jaw bone. Dr. J. L. Winstead, chief surgeon at the hospital, said today that Tripp would be confined to the hospital for several days.

Sheriff J. Knott Proctor today placed the case in the hands of State Solicitor D. M. Clark, who he had a broken jaw bone. Dr. J. L. Winstead, chief surgeon at the hospital, said today that Tripp would be confined to the hospital for several days.

Tripp, son of Henry Tripp of Pitt county, was lodged in jail on an assault charge and was placed in the same cell with Gray, who is awaiting trial in Pitt Superior court for grand larceny.

Gray's fight came only a few hours after he had been returned to Pitt county from Iowa, where he went after allegedly stealing his father's automobile. Gov. George A. Wilson of Iowa signed extradition papers for Gray's return this week. He had been in the Denison, Iowa, jail since July 28, where he was placed following his arrest.

A criminal session of Pitt Superior court is scheduled to be held here next week, at which time Gray probably will be tried for grand larceny as well as the other charges which Solicitor Clark says he plans to bring against Gray.

PLANS IN CASE OF WAR BEING MAPPED BY FDR

Awaits Response to Second Appeal For Peace

DOING HIS WORK IN QUIET STUDY

Secretary Hull Says No Tangible Report On Hitler's Proposed Settlement With Poland

Washington, Aug. 26.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, awaiting possible response from Berlin to his second appeal for peace, concentrated today on perfecting emergency steps the United States would take in event of a European war.

The Chief Executive scheduled a full morning of conferences on war measures and reserved the afternoon for work in his private study. Officials said that for the time he did not contemplate any further moves designed to forestall armed conflict, but emphasized that this course could be changed if developments warranted.

Secretary Hull said at his press conference, meanwhile, that he had received no tangible information regarding the proposal which Adolf Hitler was reported to have made for a settlement with Poland.

Asked whether official dispatches bore out indications of a lessening of European tension, the State Department chief said it would serve no useful purpose to discuss that question in the present state of international affairs.

Mr. Roosevelt's first conference of the day was with Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, on industrial preparedness.

He then conferred with A. A. Berle, assistant secretary of state and chairman of the inter-departmental committee working to lighten the effects of a possible war. Berle was understood to have prepared various proclamations dealing with America's neutrality.

Rhodes Successor Under Discussion

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Aug. 26.—Successor to W. H. Rhodes, Jr., chief of the statistical division of the State Department of Agriculture, is likely to be chosen from the "franks" although, of course, the commissioner, Kerr Scott, hasn't violated the first principles of decency by discussion of the matter before the Rhodes body was lowered to the grave.

British Cabinet Called Into Emergency Session

Ambassador Henderson Reports To Chamberlain

London, Aug. 26.—(AP)—After a three-hour conference with the British ambassador to Berlin, Sir Neville Henderson, who flew to London from a meeting with Adolf Hitler, Prime Minister Chamberlain summoned an emergency cabinet meeting on the European crisis for this evening.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, who had been present at the conference of Chamberlain and the British envoy, went across the street to consult with Charles Corbin, the French ambassador to London, at the foreign office.

Soon after the announcement of a cabinet meeting, the Polish ambassador in London, Count Edward Raczyński, called at the foreign office.

These moves, coupled with reliable diplomatic reports on the venture of Sir Neville's conversations with Hitler yesterday, led to wide speculation on the prospect of some form of negotiation.

King George commanded Sir Neville to come to Buckingham palace after the ambassador had conferred with Foreign Minister Lord Halifax and Chamberlain.

Sir Neville intended to fly back to Berlin later today.

GERMANY EXPERIMENTS WITH 'ERSATZ' STEEL

Cologne.—(AP)—One of Germany's most widely used "ersatz" materials—artificial resin—may replace steel in the manufacture of motorcycle frames.

Artificial resin is already used to great extent in the construction of automobile accessories.

Newspapers now report that a German factory has gone one step further and is testing the stability of motorcycle frames made of artificial resin.

As far as was revealed, cotton fabric is soaked with artificial resin and then subjected to an enormous pressure of more than 3,000 pounds per square inch.

After this process, it is claimed, the material has the strength and resistance of steel plate.

The new product, the papers said, has various advantages. It is less heavy than steel. It eliminates rattling and is rust and acid proof.

Report From Berlin Says Compromise Agreed On

Authoritative German Source Sticks To Viewpoint Compromise Under Way Will Stave Off War In Face of Various Measures Indicating Hitler Preparing To Act

Berlin, Aug. 26.—(AP)—A trustworthy and authoritative informant insisted today that a compromise in the German-Polish crisis is underway and declared that "the danger of a world war is definitely averted."

The informant stuck to his viewpoint even when he was shown latest developments, including Germany's prohibition on private aviation, the stoppage of boat service to Danzig, the cancellation of a large number of trains, and the designation of upper Silesia as an "area of military operations."

All the measures, he explained, had been decided upon earlier and were now being executed, as it always takes time for an order from the top to come through to those who must put it into effect.

The turning point, the informant contended, came at 2 o'clock this morning. At that time, he said, an order to begin operations along the Polish border and at Danzig at 4:30 this morning was rescinded.

At 2 a. m., telephone and telegraph communications with foreign countries was resumed after an interruption of seven hours.

High army quarters, the informant said, strongly advised Adolf Hitler to show the same willingness to negotiate that Polish President Moscicki had shown in his reply to President Roosevelt.

The result, he said, was British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson's offer, the informant said.

This assertion was borne out by information divulged by a government spokesman this morning to the effect that "the really big decisions" are being arrived at in Berlin, Rome, Paris and London.

Sir Neville, the informant said, would not have flown to London had he not been convinced that his mission had chances of success.

In Berlin financial sections the same optimism prevailed. Here, too, it was held a turn for the better had come.

The optimistic informant agreed, as did financial and other responsible quarters, that tense days are still ahead and that anything might happen.

VanNortwick Staples.

A wedding of widespread interest to friends in both North Carolina and Virginia took place on Friday afternoon at five o'clock in the Presbyterian Church, when Miss Ramona Lovenia Staples became the bride of Mr. Nathaniel Oliver VanNortwick, Jr.

The church, with its background of palms, ferns and baskets of white asters, illuminated by cathedral candles in seven branched candelabra, formed a lovely setting for the impressive ceremony.

As the guests assembled, Mr. Brooks Fryer, organist of Tarboro, presented a program of nuptial music which included "Adagio," from Third Sonata, by Gullmatt; "Theme," from Fifth Symphony, by Tschalkowsky; "Andante Cantabile," from First Sonata, by J. S. Bach; "Liedesfreud," by Kreisler; "Lotus Land," by Scott; and "Clair de Lune," by Debussy.

Mrs. O. A. Bootwright of Richmond, sang "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," and "Still As The Night." During the ceremony, "Liebestraum" by Liszt, was played. The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," was used as the bridal procession, and after the ceremony Mendelssohn's Wedding March from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was played.

Acting as groomsmen were E. G. Bradley of Raleigh, Julian Smith of Bethel, Elbert Holmes of Farmville, Benjamin James of Robersonville, and W. S. Brown, Jr., and Staunton Harvey of Greenville. Miss Catherine VanNortwick, sister of the groom, attended the bride as junior bridesmaid. She wore a Kate Greenway model with long full skirt and carried an arm bouquet of pink asters.

Her matron of honor, Mrs. E. G. Bradley of Raleigh, wore a dress of light green net made on princess lines, with bustle back, train, and carried a bouquet of shell pink asters tied with flesh halber.

The bridesmaids were Miss Helen Gaskins and Miss Marie Smith of Greenville. Miss Louise Beckett of Virginia Beach, and Mrs. Barton Lehey of Richmond, Va., wearing bouffant gowns of Nile green net over tulle, adorned with darker green velvet ribbons and wearing matching dresses. They carried arm bouquets of shell pink asters tied with flesh halber.

The bride entered with her father, Mr. George Ernest Staples, by whom she was given in marriage. She was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Dr. Alva VanNortwick of Nashville, Tenn. Her wedding gown was a strikingly beautiful model of white net with bodice of cord lace, mesh with V-neckline and long puffed sleeves. The full skirt with long train was bound with horsehair braid. Her fingertip face veil was of illusion with a crescent of lilies of the valley. She carried a cascade of white orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Staples, mother of the bride, wore white corded triple sheer crepe, with a corsage of Belle's Times roses.

Mrs. VanNortwick, mother of the groom, wore a gown of grey lace and her flowers were a corsage of Briar-chiff roses.

The bride is the talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Ernest Staples. She was born in Dallas, Texas, and attended school at St. Gertrude's Convent in Richmond, Va. After extensive study she taught dancing at St. Catherine's private school in Richmond, and Virginia Garrison Williams private school in Norfolk. Since coming to Greenville four years ago, Mrs. VanNortwick has conducted the Ramona School of Dancing. Her maternal grandfather was Dr. Eugene Willis Bradley of Mayfield and Louisville, Ky.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Oliver VanNortwick of this city. He attended Oak Ridge Military Academy and the University of North Carolina. He is now associated with his father in the operation of the North Side Lumber Company.

Honoring the VanNortwick-Staples wedding party and out-of-town guests, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Staples entertained informally immediately following the ceremony. Mrs. Luther Bowling presided over the bride's book and the hostess was assisted in serving by Mrs. Harry Hagerly.

For the best health six or more glasses of water must be supplied the human body every day. Two-thirds of the adult body is water. Even one-third of the bone by weight is water.

Water is needed by the body for: (1) Aid in building and maintaining the cells and tissues; (2) transportation of food by means of the blood; (3) the removal of waste from the body (urine and perspiration); (4) controlling body heat.

The body derives its water from: (1) water and other beverages; (2) foods, especially fruits and vegetables.

FAIR FACTS

By R. GREY This year as last, the community displays at the Pitt County Fair will be encouraged to put forth every effort to arrange an exhibit outstanding to any previous year. Field and garden crops, home industry, educational value and the artistic arrangement of such will be the outstanding judging points in the awarding of valuable cash prizes. A community where there is such in common and a general good fellowship prevails will have a chance to prepare for this coming event. All those participating in this "Live at Home" program will be awarded, if not included in the four outstanding prizes.

Much has been added to the tobacco contest, livestock and poultry. Also a floral display and an art department. This being a tobacco country, there is no doubt in our minds but that we will have one of the finest tobacco displays ever before afforded.

Seeing the need for more stock pens, it will be necessary to enlarge the present one this year, and even the chicken house was filled to capacity last season, with a section down the center.

It is gratifying to know the need for more building has taken place. The past and present co-operation and the general situation demands a Pitt County Fair outstanding in every department. The farmer and merchant alike has joined hands in the building of this institution, which is listed third in the rating of such events.

Less than four years ago the Pitt County Fair opened without capital from any one individual and has merited its own rewards by taking care of the expense from the gross income. Clear thinking and undivided attention on the part of the board of directors was all that was needed to supplement an agricultural, educational fair with the allotted entertainment that generally accompanies such undertakings.

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL Raleigh, Aug. 26.—Major John Armstrong of the North Carolina Highway Patrol has just returned from a national conference of motor vehicle administrators and highway law enforcement officers, held in New York.

BABSON

(Continued from page one) ple trained for distribution, is out of balance. Formerly it took many more persons to produce an article than it required to sell it. Gradually this ratio has been cut down so that today many more are needed to sell an article than to produce it.

Merchants handicapped. Public authorities, however, have shown no disposition to favor the seller over the maker. Labor unions have temporarily made it more attractive to work in a shop than in a store. Taxation per dollar invested is much lighter on the manufacturer than on the merchant. The final handoff has been to restrict the hours at which clerks may work in stores and other distributing agencies to the same schedule as the hours of those engaged in manufacturing.

The main purpose of the wage and hour bill was to give higher wages and to create more jobs. Neither total wages nor total jobs have been increased. Merchants are observing the law. However, in order to pay more wages they are hiring fewer people; and in order to shorten hours, are keeping open fewer hours for business. Therefore, when the great need of today is to sell more goods, stores are open fewer hours, salesmen are making fewer calls, and even the facilities of our post offices and telegraph systems have been curtailed. If we want to get out of the present mess, all distributors must work harder and longer.

Suspend Wage and Hour Law Unemployment will be solved only as more people are put to work. More people will be put to work only as more goods are sold. More goods will be sold only as distributors keep their stores open longer hours, work more efficiently and are exempt from burdensome legislation. Then and then only will all groups have money with which to buy goods. This means that the government should remove the "ball and chain" on all merchants today; that the storekeepers and their sales should be reduced; and that the wage and hour law should be suspended. If those engaged in selling until production and distribution are again in balance.

Meanwhile, August business is holding steady. My Babsonchart Index reads 97 per cent compared with 97.5 per cent for July and 87.6 per cent for August of 1938. During the past week I have been working my way through the Middle West. Merchants, manufacturers and workers with whom I have talked out here confirm the statistics I have previously received from the Middle West. Business is brisk in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois. These six states, together with Wisconsin and Minnesota, are rated as "gold" or excellent status on my sales and credit map.

Labor Fires Rekindled Right now activity in the mid-western motor cities is temporarily stalled. Assembly lines in a few plants, however, have already started wheeling off their 1940 models. Labor troubles are the one sour note in the business setup in the Middle West. People are sick and tired of labor rows in the automobile business. It's time that Mr. Green's and Mr. Lewis' private war was killed. It's time that these gentlemen were stopped from putting the public, not only here but in all sections, "behind the eight ball."

THE PEN IS MIGHTIER THAN THE SWORD DEPT. Chungking.—AP.—Fifteen Chinese men and women writers and artists, known as the "pen guerrillas," have started a dangerous six-month cultural tour through Japanese-occupied and guerrilla territory. Led by Shelley Wang, well-known Chinese scholar and author, the group of playwrights, poets, novelists, essayists and artists were assigned by the Chungking government to compile a historic record of China's fight for freedom.

Irish Army Bomb Kills 4, Hurts 50

London, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Four persons were killed and about 50 injured today when an explosion, attributed by police to an Irish Republican party bomb, shook the north street of Coventry, 90 miles northwest of London.

The building in which the explosion occurred was believed by police to be an ammunition dump for the I.R.A. Three persons were reported arrested after the blast. Buses and trolleys were damaged by the explosion, and many injured lay screaming for help before ambulances arrived. Glass and debris were ankle deep.

Tobaccoists Feted To Barbecue Dinner

John A. Steton and Bob Keen, managers of the Steton farms in the Bethel community, today entertained burers and other tobaccoists on the Greenville market at a barbecue dinner. An estimated 100 persons, including tobaccoists and other friends, were in attendance. The dinner consisted of barbecue, Brunswick stew and other refreshments.

Pusher. Sacramento, Calif.—(AP)—The "pusher" engines used to assist trains up long grades gave Fred Keller an idea. He has invented a pusher trailer, in which the second unit of big truck lads will have its own power plant.

The lieutenant governor told news men who spied him as described, "I'll have something for you boys some time," but when pressed to say when some time will be, only joked. "Not before cold weather — you boys know a Chatham rabbit can't run before there's been frost on the ground."

Bill Sharpe, manager of the news bureau of the Department of Conservation and Development, isn't allowing anybody to overlook the fact that North Carolina is in fact, getting press attention all over the country.

Today he called attention to the fact that the August 27 (pre-date) edition of the rotogravure section of the Sunday New York Daily News has a full-page layout of pictures made at Cape Hatteras by a staff photographer.

Three of the six pictures on the page were taken from the air by a "flying cameraman." The other three are scenes in the village of Hatteras.

The 50 new highway patrolmen in North Carolina are expected to go to work in spick, span new uniforms.

By September 1, according to Major John Armstrong of the patrol. Not only that, but after September 1, it's not going to be so hard to tell a patrolman from a bus driver or a laundry truck operator. The patrol members, new and old, are going to be togged out in spanking new campaign hats of the army type—a bit of headgear which will give them something that's distinctive.

Operators of the Big Tom Wilson toll road to the top of Mount Mitchell have been awarded $8,000 by a board of appraisers in connection with the new state law passed by the 1939 Assembly which prohibits operation of any toll road on state-owned land. At least that's the information received here by the Department of Conservation and Development from State Forester J. S. Holmes, who attended the appraisers' hearing in Yancey county.

The Wilson interests asked $8,000; the going was to the state offered. The department has a right of appeal to the courts, but it's not certain whether or not it will exercise the right.

Political gossips might have made quite a story out of the sight of State Senator C. Wayland (Rippling Waters) Sprull, prospective candidate for Kerr Scott's job as commissioner of agriculture, and Lieutenant Wilkins Horton, one of the battalions of unannounced gubernatorial candidates, in very close communion on Fayetteville street, Friday morning.

They both denied vigorously, however, that they were plotting "treasons, stratagems or spoils."

Farley Calls High Grid Practice For Next Thursday

NINE CONTESTS FOR PHANTOMS

Plans Are Launched For Night Football In City

By JAMES WHITFIELD
 Bo Farley, who has been retained as head coach at Greenville high school for 1939-40, today requested all high school gridiron candidates for the ensuing season, to report for practice at the Third Street stadium next Thursday afternoon, August 31, at 2 o'clock.

Farley, who coached at the high school last year and during a previous season, received his Masters degree in physical education at East Carolina Teachers College in exercises held Friday, and will serve as critic teacher in this capacity at the high school. He will also work with the college in its cooperative practice teaching program at high school.

Night Football
 In announcing the call to practice, Farley disclosed that negotiations are being made to play night football, which will be something new in the way of outdoor athletics at Greenville high school. Since night baseball has produced receptive turnouts in commercial circles, it is expected to do as much for local high school football.

Season's Schedule
 A nine-game schedule has been completed and was released today through the coaching staff. Except for a game scheduled to be played here with Washington, all other games are definite. The game with the Pam Pack may be shifted to Washington, in that such a request has been filed.

The schedule follows: October 6, seven there; October 13, Plymouth here; October 20, Tarboro, there; October 27, Roanoke Rapids at Greenville; November 3, New Bern here; November 11, Goldsboro, here; November 17, Edenton, here; November 24, Kinston, here; and November 29, Washington, here.

Herman Fulkerson of Kentucky will be on the coaching staff at the high school again this year and will be assistant to Coach Farley who declared, with the attitude of all pre-season mentors, that "we are expecting one of the best football seasons in the history of Greenville high school."

But Coach Farley's air of optimism was not assuaged merely to give the "fourth estate" something to write about, in that he has roster of prospects who exceed many advanced expectations. Regulars returning to the fold, including those who saw plenty of action, and others who experienced occasional action, are bracing Farley's bright outlook for a successful 1939 gridiron contingent.

Mainstays
 Larry James and John Collins, who sparked the end zones last season, will be supplying the punch in these berths again this season; Russell Rogers and Spencer Carroll will be equipped to handle the offensive drives of the foe; Warren Parrish will add new life to the line; Charles Williams and Rivers Goodall will handle the center zone, and Marvin Stocks, George Sakas, George Tyndall and Earl Kittrell, who turned in commendable performances in the backfield last season, will help produce more adding machine scores this season.

Since summer vacations tend to put an athlete "out of shape," Farley called attention to the fact that all prospective candidates should begin observing health rules that will prevail after the practice gets under way. "Getting in shape before the season starts enables a player to turn in better performances after the season is launched," said Farley.

Candidates reporting for practice next Thursday are requested to bring their own practice costumes, in that equipment will not be issued for several days after the practice is started.

Lefty Joe Long Pitches Locals To 3-2 Verdict

Red and Gracie Are Greenies' Power Hitters

Greenville has Joe Long, Gastonia southpaw, to thank for that 3-2 win last night over Bill Herring's Kinston Eagles.
 Joe hurled no-hit ball over a three-inning period toward the end of a game here some time ago in making his debut with the Greenies, but last night's game is the first professional affair he has started.

Long became tired after giving up five hits over a seven-inning stretch and Morris Wilson took over the mound and finished the job. Wilson hurled hitless ball the next two innings.
 Only one of the Greenies' runs was earned. Sidney Stringfellow did the huriling for the losers and was reached for a half-dozen hits.

After Kinston had scored a run in the third, the Greenies deadlocked the score in the fifth when Wilson reached second on an error and came home on Vincent Smith's single. Kennedy tripled and scored on an error in the same verse to give the Eagles a 2-1 advantage.

When the game reached the eighth-inning stage, Red Christopher's double, scoring Gracie Allen, who tripled, deadlocked the score at 2-2. An Eagle mistake produced the winning score.

Four More Here
 Only four more home games remain on the Greenies' home schedule and one will be reeled off tonight at 8 o'clock in the Guy Smith stadium when the Greenies clash with Bill Herring's Kinston Eagles.
 Tonight's contest will be the last scheduled Saturday night contest of the season. The Greenies will conclude their home schedule here next week. The Greenies defeated the Eagles last night.

JOE AND HARRY HAVE 30 EACH
Bistroff Gets Another Homer As Mates Lose to Martins
 Rain, the unwelcome guest at any ball game, stole an anticipated show between the Tarboro Goobers and Mule Shirley's Goldsboro Gold Bugs last night, but other teams in the league put up good fights as the hour approached for the semifinals. The keynote of Williamston's 5-2 showdown with D. C. Walker's Snow Hill Billies came when Joe Bistroff got his thirtieth homer to tie the score in homers with his little brother, Harry Soufas, who also has 30 circuit clouts.
 Another feature of the contest was Bob Emer's huriling. Four Billies reached him for seven scalded red hits, but they were not effective enough to overcome the Martins' scoring spurge.
 New Bern's game with the Wilson Tobs featured the fine pitching by Jim McMullen, who held the losers to four hits and one run after the second inning. He whiffed 10 Tobs batters to top off his performance.
 In the only other game of the Coastal Plain League, Joe Long, Greenville southpaw, pitched a 3-2 decision over Kinston's Sid Stringfellow.

MIDGETS TAKE NINE MEDALS

Entered In Eastern Competition In Kinston
 Nine medals were awarded to Greenville midgets yesterday in the East Carolina Swimming Tournament held in Lenoir county.
 Jean Hillon was high scorer for the Greenville midget girls, having garnered first place in diving, second place in back stroke, and was awarded a medal for the honor. Jean was awarded three medals in the meet.

The midget girls' free style relay produced first-place honors for the local entry. Greenville girls participating in this event were Jean Hillon, Catherine Spearman, Anne Beatty and Mary Andrews Whichard. Each of these girls received a gold medal.
 In competition for midget boys, Dennis Fleming, who won a third place in back stroke, was awarded a bronze medal.
 Hennie Ruth Whichard was the only entry from Greenville for the junior girls and placed third in the back stroke (50 yards) to receive a bronze medal award.
 The other medal was a silver award. This was taken by Thornton Taylor, an entry for the junior boys, who placed second in the 220-yard free style swim.
 The local seniors will journey to Tarboro Monday for the championship meet of the East Carolina Swimming Association.

C-SALES TEAM TAKES SERIES

Defeats Blount - Harvey; Royal Crown Also Wins

Carolina Sales defeated Blount-Harvey, 8-7, last night to enter the semifinals and Royal Crown took the first game in their semifinal series with Double Cola by the score of 2-1.
 As the scores would indicate, both games were hard fought and close throughout.
 Blount-Harvey put on a four-run rally in the fourth frame to take a 6-5 lead, but Carolina Sales came back in the sixth to score three and win the contest.
 Royal Crown made one each in the second and fifth, while Double Cola was able to score only in the third.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—One of the barriers to agreement on the Mexican oil dispute lies in the hope of some of the operators that next year's elections in Mexico and the U. S. will bring changes of policy.

In Mexico conservative voices are asserting that socialization of the country under President Cardenas has proceeded too far for the present. Now is time for consolidation of gains. The same thing has been said for several years of the New Deal.

In the United States the suggestion is advanced that a change of administration in 1941 may bring a change in our attitude toward Mexico. Some hardening might be expected. A shift in the U. S. attitude would be equally as important as a change in the Mexican attitude.

Long experience demonstrates that no administration in Mexico can survive without U. S. approval. Huerta tried it for a time before the World war, but finally folded.

If the U. S. should withdraw recognition from the present type of Mexican government under protest that it is irresponsible, in time that government likely would fall and one would rise with a disposition to be more "friendly" toward American interests.

Mexican Constitution
Already there have been at least two sharp changes in Mexican policy under the new constitution. Shortly after its adoption in 1917 there was a disposition to advance forcefully toward its objectives, to make big estates into little ones for division among the peasants, and to take for the government a greater share of the revenue from natural resources. (Mexico's newest and biggest oil field for instance, had to pay 15 to 35 per cent government royalty.)

But in time the leaders of the Revolutionary party themselves began to acquire property and to turn conservative. There were other reasons for the change as well. Even President Calles in 1929 began to express some doubts of the utility of the agrarian reforms.

Then came Cardenas. He swung the other way. Big estates, owned by Mexicans as well as Americans, were broken up.

The oil trouble has made some headway toward a settlement, but the outlook for a change of policy in the U. S. or Mexico or both has encouraged oil men to peek two times at this hole card. Their troubles began several years ago. So another 18 months may not be fatal. They would go a long way to escape the full force of the present Mexican policy.

The Mexican constitution and accompanying laws promise the workman an eight-hour day, decreased night work, reduction of child labor, a six-day week minimum wages, a share in the profits and double pay for overtime. The employer is required to supply good homes at low rent, schools, hospitals, industrial accident compensation and death indemnity. Employers must pay the strikers during a strike—providing the strike is a lawful one.

That constitution is a peon's jackpot. It is a knock-em-deader. Company Profits High?

The oil workers consistently received the highest wages in Mexico, but continued asking more—putting on a big load of demands in 1936. In addition to blanket pay increases, they wanted, for instance, double pay for working in the rain or on oily ground.

A Mexican board of experts asserted that the companies could pay more than they admitted. The board accused British companies of siphoning profits into Canadian companies.

Company compromise offers failed. Expropriation followed. There isn't enough free money in Mexico to pay for the oil company investments unless the most extreme of Mexican views is accepted. That is that the companies already have earned many times what they have invested, so that little or nothing is owed for the costly plants.

Meet Mr. Lochinvar

By Marie Bizard

YESTERDAY: Locke finds Laura knocked out on the path to his cabin. She doesn't recover until morning. Locke tells her she must keep secret what happened. Meanwhile, Cecily, worried, gets Donald Hemingway to help her look for Laura.

Chapter 32

Odd Behavior

COMING toward them was the slight figure of a woman leaning on the arm of a tall young man. her face turned up to his.

Laura and Locke. As the two couples approached each other the air was electric.

Cecily could feel Donald Hemingway stiffen. She was conscious of feeling two things in herself at once: relief to see that Laura was safe, a quick stab of jealousy.

Laura's face had been turned up to Locke's, the way that she Cecily had so often looked at him. Whatever Locke's reaction, none of them could tell.

Laura was nonplussed. She was startled to see Donald there so unexpectedly. Cecily's presence had destroyed completely her joint plan with Locke to tell her another story. Waves of flushes rose in her cheeks, giving her a look of blatant guilt.

"Hello," she said. There was so little else to say.

"Hello," Cecily said. "Nice day for walking," Locke commented.

They might all have met casually on Fifth Avenue, Cecily said. "Oh, Locke, I don't believe you know Mr. Hemingway."

They bowed to each other. Oh, if only I could call a taxi and get into it, Cecily thought. Why doesn't somebody say something! Why did people have to look guilty?

Laura, surprising, broke the silence. "I was just coming in," she said. "It was such a beautiful morning I couldn't resist the impulse to take a long walk. I had no idea it was so late. Then I happened to turn my ankle and I don't know how I came along and offered my arm."

"Oh! Is it turned badly?" Cecily inquired quickly, solicitously. Anything to ease this strain. "Mr. Hemingway dropped in to take you to lunch and I . . . I thought that we might go out and pick you up at your place."

Cecily was thinking: Never mind that you know Laura hasn't turned her ankle. Pay no attention to the thought that Laura's cottage was in another direction.

"Oh, thank you, Donald. I'm afraid that I can't lunch with you today."

Donald murmured that he was sorry. Cecily thought that perhaps the four of them would spend the rest of their lives as an innominate group standing there by the roadside. And how could she spend another minute there when she couldn't meet Locke's eyes?

She had met them once and for the first time since she had known him, his glance had dropped before hers. After that she couldn't look at him.

Funny, how quickly a thought can dart through your mind. You can think: Laura is in her early thirties, but she is as pretty as a young girl and men like Locke could like girls like Laura. He might have been attracted to her all the time that he was coming to see me!

At last they began to move along. Donald walking as though his legs were sticks and his mind was fixed on mortgages. Mortgages to be foreclosed, Cecily thought.

Then Locke said, "Sister Anne! Sister Anne! What do I see in the distance? As I live and breathe, a chariot! Now, milady, you shall ride."

Speechless
CECILY was never so glad to see anything in her life as the ancient horse-drawn lumber wagon on that have into view and drag up beside them.

"Hi! Dod!" Apparently Locke knew all the natives. "We've got a lady here who has an injured ankle. Do you think you could balance her on that plank that serves as your carriage?"

Dod reckoned he could. Very tenderly, Donald giving no help, Locke assisted Laura to a comparatively safe spot on the single plank between the rear wheels.

"When you get home—and you must go home directly—put that ankle in water as hot as you can stand it and keep it off for the rest of the day. It'll be all right tomorrow, I'm sure."

Cecily, anxious to escape, said, "I had better go with Laura."

Laura said, "Oh, it isn't necessary, Cecily."

Cecily couldn't believe her ears. "But I . . ."

"Locke's right. I really ought to rest and I'll be good as new tomorrow. You'd better get back to the shop, Cecily."

"Since I'm leaving you in good hands, I'll be getting back to work," Locke said, as Laura drove off. And with no more than a wave of his hand he turned and walked back the way he and Laura had come.

"Pinch me," Cecily whispered when she could get her voice.

"I beg your pardon," Donald said. Laura called out, "Thank you for the invitation, Donald. Please ask me another time."

Cecily hadn't seen the expression on Donald's face but she did see the desolation on Laura's before her cart rounded a corner in the road.

Donald and Cecily, speechless for the first few yards, retraced their steps. Then Cecily said something bright about the Yacht Club dance, getting, she noted, no response. Somehow she managed to keep conversation going until Donald escorted her to her door, without once forgetting what his guest at the inn would think of the delay. It was then nearly two o'clock. An odd hour for lunch in Vickersport.

But would you tell her, please, if there was anything that wasn't odd that day? You meet your best friend on the road with the man she knows you are in love with. Fate, that wily playwright, takes the moment when you start looking for her to turn up that old cottonball of a bank president that she's foolish enough to fall in love with.

You know perfectly well that Laura and Locke are not interested in each other that way. Or do you? Anyway, you know that Laura is incapable of doing anything wrong or unfair.

That man could get away with anything! At this very minute Cecily was prepared to think that he'd murder Laura in her bed to get away her wrist-watch with the ten diamond chips.

Also, at that moment, Cecily would like to have strangled someone who had choked her.

'Please Come'
IT SEEMED to her that day that every person who came into the shop came in merely to find something to eat or to get some toiletomics with one woman, the loss of nuances in translations with another. She picked out love stories for a fierce-browed old lady, did up a gift package for an invalid, hunted down a copy of James Elroy Flecker for someone.

She exchanged books in the circulating department. Stamp Write the date on a card. Six cents. Fifteen cents. The little strong-box was filled that day, but it gave her no satisfaction.

She got out her cost sheets and calculated the cost of taking her new stock back to New York. She tried to wrestle with the problems attendant on opening a shop in New York. But figures flew out of her mind. She couldn't make herself write neat columns.

Cecily was fed up with books. With people. With Cecily Stuart.

At five o'clock she drew the Venetian blinds in the window, banked the fire in the hearth and put up the fire-screen. She tidied the effects of the day's business, put away her cards and put on her coat.

She was angrily tucking her hair under her blue felt when the knocker on the door thudded heavily.

"No more customers," she said under her breath. "I'm tired of waiting on people."

The knocking was insistent. She sighed and opened the door. There was a little girl there. "I gotta note," she said, holding it out in her grimy hand.

Cecily tore open the envelope. "Please come out, Cecily," Laura had written. "I want to talk to you." There was nothing more but Laura's name.

Cecily felt as though a weight had been lifted from her heart. It was bad enough to lose Locke; it was a tragedy to lose her friend.

Cecily said, patiently, "I'm trying to understand, Laura, if only you'd tell me something."

Laura's face, under her brave rouge, was white. Her head throbbed with pain and she couldn't tell what to say. The pain kept coming between her and what she was trying to say to the other girl. She wished that she could take a sedative and shut out all the imps that possessed her mind. Shut out the memory of Donald's bold, unflinching stare during those weeks that she'd known him, watched the light in his eyes grow warm, and in that warmth she had blossomed.

"Surely there is a simple explanation," Cecily persisted. "I'm trying to lose you one. I've said all there is to say." Laura made a turn about her living-room and stared out the window morosely. "I did go to Locke's place, or I started to . . . that is, as I told you on the telephone. I did talk to him. I felt the same way I did when I talked to you in the afternoon. But what was said—well, I can't tell you."

They were right back where they started from.

Continued Monday

Mexico isn't having too much success operating the wells. American and British refineries buy little Mexican oil. Many workmen are jobless.

On the other hand, Germany is buying oil and filling Mexico full of German machinery and goods. The whole thing is bad for the good neighbor policy. Moreover, neither American officials or businessmen want the Mexican expropriation idea to set a precedent for the rest of Latin America. Every last one of those countries has a provision in its constitution permitting expropriations. Once out of hand it could go like a bunch of firecrackers.

Russo-German Non-Aggression Pact In The Making

A historic moment in world history—the signing of the Russo-German non-aggression pact—is recorded in this picture from Moscow, which was flown to Berlin and thence radioed to New York. Actually signing the document for Russia is Commissar of Foreign Affairs, Vyacheslav Molotov (second from right), while Joachim von Ribbentrop (left) of Germany, stands side by side with Dictator Josef Stalin. Left to right: Von Ribbentrop; Sta Hn, German Under-Secretary of State Gaus; German Legation Counselor Hilger; Molotov, and German Ambassador to Moscow Count von der Schulenberg.

JOHN T. GRAVES S.Y.D. SPEAKER

Effort Was Made To Land Senator Tydings

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL.
Raleigh, Aug. 26.—Announcement that John Temple Graves will be principal speaker at the state Young Democrats convention in Charlotte early next month puts an end to really serious efforts which were made to land the "keynote speech" post for United States Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland.

Incredible as it may seem, in view of the tremendous howl that went up after the famous (or infamous, according to the viewpoint) Tydings speech at the 1937 Victory dinner here, there isn't the slightest doubt that vigorous and genuine efforts were made by a certain clique of Young Democrats to get an invitation for the Marylander to speak at the Charlotte convention.

Those making the efforts said they were working for a "vindication of Senator Bailey," who rightly or wrongly was credited (or charged) again, depending on the point of view, with maneuvering the Tydings bid to the 1937 affair which was followed by a "correct the record" dinner in order to wipe out some of the bad tastes left in the mouth of so many by the Tydings tirade against the principles and methods of the President whose victory he was supposed to be celebrating.

There seems no reason to believe that Gordon Gray, state Young Democrat, or any others in really responsible posts ever took the efforts of these Bailey supporters seriously; but it is not open to successful contradiction that there were genuine, serious efforts made to bring pressure enough on Young Democrat big wigs to get an invitation for Tydings.

The son of the President and his wife had come on from Paris with Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President, en route to the United States.

WAKE LEGIONS PLAN PAGEANT

Will Celebrate Ratification of Constitution

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Aug. 26.—Raleigh's combined service organizations of the American Legion (Legion Auxiliary and Forty and Eight) will commemorate the sesquicentennial of the United States constitution by presenting a historical pageant at State College athletic field, October 2 through October 6. Garland A. Bobbitt, general chairman of the pageant committee, announced today.

Historical data for the production has been furnished by Dr. C. C. Crittenden of the North Carolina Historical Society and every effort will be made to make the presentation entirely authentic to the last detail, Mr. Bobbitt said.

The pageant will be composed of a series of episodes and interludes depicting the early history of North Carolina.

An honorary committee, headed by Gov. Clyde R. Hoey, has agreed to sponsor the pageant. Other members of this group already selected include Mayor Graham Andrews; Colonel J. W. Harrelson, dean of administration at State College; State Auditor George Ross; June Rose, department commander of the Legion; and Secretary of State Thad Eure. Other members will be added from time to time, Bobbitt said.

Headquarters for the pageant have been established by the Sir Walter Hotel and already nearly a score of charmen have been selected to head groups in charge of varied activities.

GRIDIRON WEEK ENDED TODAY

Baseball, Basketball And Track Set Next Week

Chapel Hill, N. C., Aug. 26.—Football Week at the University of North Carolina Coaching School ended today, and next week will be devoted to basketball, baseball, and track.

The attendance this week, according to Secretary E. R. Rankin, was 75, representing 14 states. A number of new coaches are coming in for the other sports next week, and the total should run close to a hundred.

Coach Bill Lange, who takes over the Carolina basketball team this year, will give the course for basketball coaches for the first time. Baseball will be under Coach Bunn Hearn, and track under Director R. A. Fetzer and Coaches Dale Ranson and Johnny Morris.

The lectures, demonstrations and drills this week were handled by Ray Wolf, Bill Lange, Johnny Tatum and Jim Tatum, football; Mike Ronam, boxing; and Chuck Quinlan, wrestling and training.

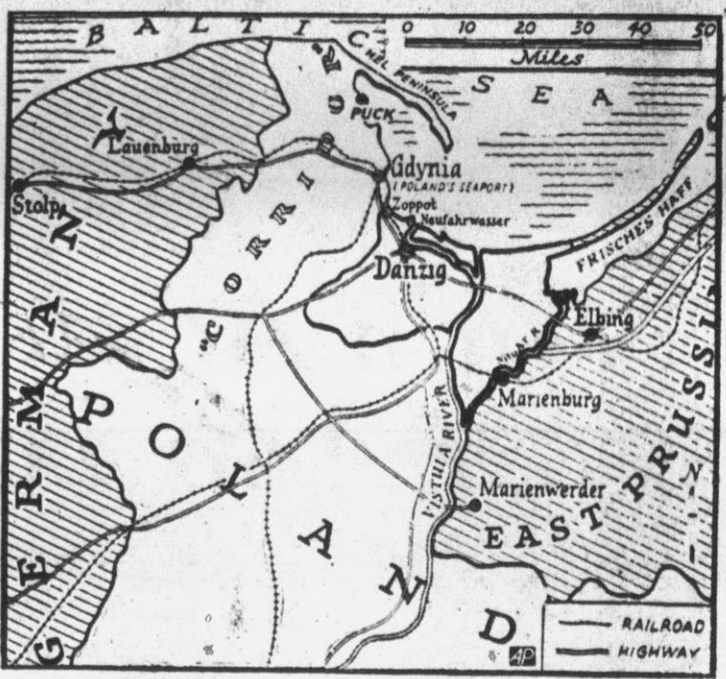

Highlight of the closing sessions included the annual dinner, presided over by Coach Wolf, and Director Fetzer's talk on leadership, morale and spirit.

"Mental attitude and psychology are fifty per cent of your battle," Coach Fetzer told the men, "and the coach who limits himself to technical instruction has failed to do a real job."

"We all have seen big fine teams go to pieces and fail to give the results expected. And we have seen inferior material fired by spirit and morale rise to unbeatable heights on a particular day."

"What is the difference? Leadership and morale," Mr. Fetzer said.

Where Hitler Would Colse In

This map of a close-up of the Polish Corridor, Danzig and Gdynia shows how swift action by Germany in the direction of Danzig would close Poland's corridor to the sea and choke her by a blockade made effective by Germany's pact with Russia. Germany would have control not only of the roads and railroads connecting the greater part of Poland with her seaport at Gdynia but also of the Vistula river and its water-borne commerce. Note also that Germany would have three highways and two railroads across the corridor to East Prussia to close the gap.

"You can lead where you can't drive," he advised the coaches. "The coach whose only hold is fear is not doing a job like the man who is in there working with, leading and inspiring his boys. You coaches also have to provide the confidence, staying power, and fight your boys need to steady them."

Mr. Fetzer also stressed the importance in building morale of good physical conditions, of not overworking the boys if they are to do their best "on Saturday, and of building up athletic tradition among players and students."

"I know some people scoff at a losing coach as building character and a winner as teaching football," he said. "But if a coach is sincere in his efforts to mold spirit and building character, he is in a position to take any such ridicule, and in the end he will come out on top and win his share of victories, too."
