FRANCE OPENS "OPERATIONS" AGAINST GERMANY

BRITISH CRAFT TORPEDOED BY NAZI U-BOAT

All Except Those Killed By Explosion Saved

311 AMERICANS ABOARD VESSEL

Britain Officials Emphatically State Ship Sunk By Germany

London, Sept. 4.—(AP)—A rescue fleet, guarded by guns of British destroyers, was officially reported today to have saved all but the few persons killed by the explosion which sank the Donaldson liner Athena, which British officials said was torpedoed by a German submarine in the open North Atlantic.

There were 1,347 passengers and crew aboard, including United States citizens listed tentatively at 311.

Bulletins from British government agencies failed to give the number of dead. The main basis for hope was the announcement which the Athena's master, Capt. James Cook, wireless:

"Passengers and crew, except those killed by explosion, took to boats and were picked up by various ships."

In New York, the National Broadcasting Company said its engineers had picked up the shortwave broadcast from station DUB in Berlin saying that the British ship Athena had struck a floating British mine and had not been torpedoed by a German U-boat. DUB is owned by the German government and the announcement thus had an official tinge.

Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, declared in the House of Commons today that the Athena was "torpedoed without the slightest warning."

Giving official particulars of the disaster in the North Atlantic, Churchill said the vessel, with about 1,400 persons aboard, was torpedoed at 8:59 p. m. (2:59 p. m. EST), "about 200 miles northwest of Ireland."

British destroyers, he said, should have been on the scene by nine this morning.

"It certainly was torpedoed without the slightest warning," Churchill said, "and in circumstances which the opinion of the world had stigmatized as inhuman. According to my present information, the ship was not armed as an auxiliary cruiser."

London, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The ministry of information, answering German allegations that the sinking of the Athena had struck a floating British mine, said, "No British mines have been laid in that area" off the northwest coast of Ireland where the Athena went down.

A German news agency release given out here by members of the German diplomatic staff vigorously denied that Germany was responsible for the sinking of the liner.

The release included this statement: "We can only say that in accordance with the deliberate instructions of the fuhrer the German forces are doing nothing contrary to international law and treaties signed by the Reich. The way in which the report of the sinking has been circulated can only be regarded as an attempt to influence American public opinion in favor of those who want a further widening of the conflict."

Funeral services for Miss Merle Irene Smith, 13, who died at the home of her parents in Lenoir county Saturday, were conducted Sunday and burial was in the family cemetery in Pitt county.

Besides her parents, surviving are four brothers, four half-brothers and a half-sister. The brothers are Carson, Guy, Jack and Joe Smith; the half-brothers, Willard, Howard, Lee and R. B. Smith, and the half-sister, Mrs. J. B. Braxton.

Funeral services for Mrs. Lona Joyner Batts, formerly of this city who died at her home in Washington, N. C. Saturday night, were conducted at Lucama, a former home, this afternoon. Death followed a heart attack.

The services were conducted at the Lucama Free Will Baptist Church at 3 o'clock. Interment followed in the Lucama cemetery.

Mrs. Batts is survived by two sons, Gordon and L. T.; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Joyner; and one sister, Mrs. B. R. Raper.

Shades of 1914 Brussels, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Heavy rain from the direction of the German border, reminiscent of 1914, was heard today in Luxembourg.

The firing began early this morning. Steel plants and furnaces along the frontier were shut down as a measure of precaution.

Meanwhile, King Leopold, III, ruler of this small country, took personal command of the army and the cabinet was reorganized in an attempt to maintain neutrality.

ADOLF HITLER JOINS TROOPS

Relies On Siegfried to Shelter Western Border

Berlin, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, relying on the Siegfried line of fortifications in the west to "shelter and defend" Germany against Britain and France, joined his troops on the eastern front today to direct the drive to conquer Poland and thus "burst open the ring laid around Germany."

Declaring that "Germany will never again capitulate," Hitler left behind him an assurance of the task of subjugating Poland will take "only a few weeks" if the western army does its duty in holding off Poland's two allies.

"Then," he added in a special message to the army facing France, "the strength of our entire 90,000,000 population stands behind you."

Hitler departed to take personal command of the forces fighting on the Polish front, some 12 hours after he had rejected the ultimatum presented by the British ambassador, Sir Neville Henderson, demanding the withdrawal of German troops from Poland.

RED CROSS AID IS MADE READY

Steps Are Taken For War Relief Emergencies

Preliminary information and instructions concerning war relief was received today by J. Nat Harrison, chairman of the Pitt county chapter of the Red Cross, from Norman H. Davis, national executive of the organization.

Mr. Davis pointed out that "it is clear that the first essential is so to strengthen our own Red Cross that we may adequately meet any emergency responsibilities which may confront us." He urged "therefore, as a first step in our preparedness plans" that chapter chairmen review their respective organizations for the forthcoming Roll Call so that they may be assured of a successful and increased enrollment.

The letter pointed out that the letter was drafted before there has been opportunity to ascertain through international Red Cross channels the kind and extent of assistance which may be needed and requested by the societies of the nations engaged in the conflict.

The Red Cross, however, will assist in any way possible the return of Americans living in countries engaged in the strife.

Local Chairman Harrison immediately went into action and announced that efforts would be made to get "our chapter in order." He stated that he hoped to make this year one of the most successful in history.

JONES IS FIRED BY PITT BOARD

Had Been Retained in Sheriff Whitehurst Cases

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners, by a vote of three to two, this afternoon decided to advise Jesse Jones of Kinston, that he was not to consider himself any longer employed by Pitt county.

Mr. Jones had been employed in the former Sheriff S. A. Whitehurst case. He was first hired by the old board, all members of which except one, were ousted at the polls at the last election.

Commissioners Pittman, Jolly and Porter favored the motion, while Chairman Williams and Commissioner House voted against the motion.

The motion made no resolution as to F. C. Harding, also employed by the county to conduct the cases against the former sheriff, but the local attorney said in open session, that because of professional ethics, he feared he would be unable to continue in the case.

The Whitehurst case probably will be revived at the civil term of court starting Monday. It was reported that an appeal from the consent judgment in the civil cases against the former sheriff would be heard.

It also was understood that Mr. Jones had filed the appeal to the judgment.

Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Williams Funeral Home by the Rev. D. W. Alexander, Free Will Baptist minister of Bethel. Burial was in Parker's Chapel cemetery.

Mr. Whitaker was born and reared in Martin county, but moved to Pitt county two years ago. He came to Greenville from the Stokes community two years ago. He was a member of Parker's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Besides his widow, surviving are five sons, W. J. Whitaker of Chocowinity, J. E. Whitaker of Stokes, G. R. F. B., and J. L. Whitaker of Greenville. Fourteen grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews also survive.

DENMARK CITY HIT BY BOMBS

Nationality of Attacking Planes Not Known

Copenhagen, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The Danish radio today reported a high-flying airplane of unidentified nationality had dropped two bombs on the west coast of Jutland, killing at least two persons.

The report said a three-story apartment house had been demolished.

Two bodies have been taken from the wreckage thus far. One victim was a woman.

Febjerg, 140 air miles from Copenhagen, is a seaport, from which many cattle and other shipments are made to Britain.

The radio report said it was not known whether the bombing was deliberate or accidental.

Amsterdam, Sept. 4.—(AP)—A Netherlands radio announcement tonight said that German bombing planes had been seen flying west over Netherlands territory.

The German planes were reported sighted over two towns in Friesland province and farther west over the Isle of Ameland.

The report said the craft were headed in the direction of England. The Netherlands government previously had announced it was making strong representations to the British and German governments after unidentified foreign planes flew high over the country early this morning.

The implication that the planes which flew over Netherlands territory this morning were British were drawn from the fact that pamphlets carrying a British message to the German people were dropped on Netherlands soil near the German frontier.

ATTACK VILLA OF U. S. ENVOY

Bombing of Ambassador's Home "Deliberate"

Warsaw, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The United States ambassador to Poland reported to the State Department in Washington today that he believed the bombing of his villa in a Warsaw suburb yesterday was deliberate.

The ambassador, Anthony Joseph Drexel Biddle, Jr., said the German plane which dumped six bombs on his and adjoining villas dropped its cargo at a low altitude just before it came out of a power dive.

One of the bombs wrecked a nearby villa. Windows in the Biddle house were shattered, but members of the household escaped unhurt. Biddle said incendiary bombs fell on the villa grounds, but failed to explode.

The ambassador had gone to the villa when war appeared imminent to enable his family and staff to rest and so work could continue when Warsaw proper was bombed.

BRITISH SHIPS TAKE UP POSTS FOR BLOKCADE

Wardogs Take To Sea While Frenchmen March

CONCENTRATE IN BELFORT REGION

British Home Fleet In Full Mobilization With Its Ships at Battle Stations

London, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Britain's mighty fleet took up battle stations today to enforce a blockade of Germany as in the last war, while the guns of her French ally were roaring on the western front.

As the reformed British cabinet hurriedly adopted far-reaching war measures and a high war command was appointed, the French were reported to have been an offensive to relieve German pressure on Poland.

This operation was concentrated in the Belfort region north of the three-sided border between France, Switzerland and Germany.

Germany apparently was to feel the might of Britain's navy as its first taste of warfare with the nation whose seapower was overwhelming in the World War 25 years ago.

The British home fleet was in full mobilization and its ships at their battle stations, evidently to enforce a blockade of Germany.

A British admiralty order for control of contraband and searches of ships indicated Britain's blockade of Germany was put into force quickly following the declaration of Prime Minister Chamberlain yesterday that a state of war existed between Britain and Germany.

The state of war began at 11 a. m. (5 a. m. EST) when a British ultimatum to Germany to call her armies out of Poland expired without an answer from Berlin.

Surviving are two nieces, Mrs. H. Harrison Huster of Summit, N. J., and Miss Helen Sylvant of Wake Forest; two nephews, Charles and William White of Greenville.

Active pallbearers will be Drs. S. M. Crisp and D. B. Armistead of Greenville; K. A. Pittman and A. L. Wood of Snow Hill; Barba Towler and John A. Park of Raleigh; Bruce Stevens of Goldsboro and Will Ormand of Kinston.

Mrs. Batts is survived by two sons, Gordon and L. T.; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Joyner; and one sister, Mrs. B. R. Raper.

Poles Withdraw From Position in Face of Superior Nazi Forces

Polish Planes and German Armored Unit Engage In Sharp Conflict 20 Miles From Border; Two Columns of Nazi Troops Reported Dispersed With Heavy Casualties

Warsaw, Sept. 4.—(AP)—A communique from the Polish general staff today announced withdrawal of Polish forces from Czeszochowa, a town of 120,000 in southwest Poland, after a strong offensive by greatly superior German forces using tanks and heavy artillery.

During the struggle for the town, 20 miles from the border, there was a sharp conflict between Polish planes and a German armored unit, official reports said. The planes bombed and machine-gunned the troops, dispersing two columns and inflicting heavy casualties. The Poles admitted loss of four planes.

Warsaw for the first time since war began, slept through the early morning without an air alarm. After breakfast, a lone German raider flew overhead, causing a few anti-aircraft gun outbursts which were reported to have brought the Germans down in flames.

Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz issued an appeal to Czechs and Slovaks to join the legion which General Lev Prchal is organizing in Poland, declaring they had a choice between being "German slaves or throwing off the yoke." It was announced the legion would fight as a separate unit.

The resurgence of popular courage, inspired by the entry of Britain and France as allies of Poland, was spurred anew by the claim of official sources that Polish troops had penetrated German territory for the first time.

The official report said fast-moving Polish cavalry on Saturday had recaptured Leszno and Rawicz, Posenian province towns occupied by Nazi forces in their first attack, and drove the invaders back across the border. The Polish vanguard, it was said, had advanced into German Pomerania north of Breslau.

SALES STRONG DESPITE FIGHT

European War Shows No Effect On Weed Market

The war in Europe had little or no effect on the activities of the Greenville tobacco market today, in that R. C. Rankin, supervisor of sales, expressed the belief that sales for today probably would reach the 2,000,000-pound mark by the conclusion of the afternoon sales.

The spread today was regarded by observers as one of the heaviest ever seen on the Greenville market, but was not so heavy when figured in baskets and will not block the market off the regular selling schedule.

It was explained, however, the individual baskets of leaf being auctioned off are larger and heavier in weight than any seen on the market this season.

The quality of offerings appears to be unchanged from that of last week. Supervisor Rankin pointed out that very little real good tobacco is showing up on sale, with tips and other common grades still dominating.

In opening today's sales, buyers were purchasing weed at prices on the same level of those last week, but after an hour of selling, the general trend of prices was stronger.

With today's sales reaching the 2,000,000-pound figure, the market's total poundage for the season will be well beyond the 15,000,000 figure by night.

Minister Dies

The Rev. A. W. Fleischmann died at his home at 316 Eastern street, this afternoon at 2:55 o'clock, following a lingering illness. Rev. Mr. Fleischmann was pastor of Memorial Baptist Church of Greenville over five years prior to his retirement some time ago because of illness. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

AREA-CLEARED BY DANZIGERS

Brave Stand Being Made By Polish Garrison

Danzig, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The Danzig populace was cleared out of all territory adjoining the Westerplatte ammunition dump today, apparently in preparation for a smothering bombardment of the little Polish garrison that has held out through three days of attack.

No one knew how many soldiers were sheltered in the red-walled property on a thumb of land jutting into Danzig harbor, but chattering machine guns in reply to every offensive gesture told that some of them were still alive and fighting.

Planes dumped between 50 and 60 bombs into the fort yesterday while Germany stepped up the bombardment that has been aimed at the Westerplatte since shortly after the union of the former free city with the German Reich was proclaimed Friday morning.

(This dispatch at 11:30 p. m. yesterday, or 5:30 p. m. EST, was the first direct word from Danzig since the annexation.)

It was not known whether the evacuation of civilians presaged an infantry attack, the one method of onslaught not yet employed.

Another battle centered around the Polish post office in the heart of old Danzig cost approximately 20 lives before 70 Polish defenders were killed or made prisoners.

Hold Final Rites C. T. Munford, Jr.

Funeral services for C. T. Munford, Jr., 43, were conducted this afternoon at the home of his parents on 814 Evans street by the Rev. T. McM. Grant, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, and burial was in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. Munford died at his home in Forest Hills, N. Y., Friday, and the body arrived at the S. G. Wilkerson and Sons Funeral Home Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, from where it was transferred to the home Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Munford was a World War veteran and had been affiliated with a mercantile concern for 17 years. He was a member of Greenville Masonic Lodge 284.

Surviving are his widow, who was Miss Sylvia Rodman of New York; two children, Charles Thomas, III, and Richard Savage Munford, and his parents.

Active pallbearers were J. Key Brown, B. S. Warren, D. J. Whichard, Jr., S. L. Bridges, W. L. Best, Dr. Alfred Shultz, and Pickens Arthur.

Land Forces Concentrate Along Rhine

Nation's Full Forces Said to Have Gone Into Action, by Land Sea and Air, To Relieve Pressure on Poland; Details of any Planned Attack Is Withheld

Paris, Sept. 4.—(AP)—France opened land, sea and air "operations" against Germany today. The war ministry announced the nation's full forces went into action in a campaign to relieve German pressure on France's eastern ally, Poland.

On the western front, it was reported in corridors of the Chamber of Deputies, a French land offensive was concentrated in the Belfort region where the Burgundy cuts across the Rhine into Germany, just north of the three-cornered border between France, Switzerland and Germany.

The Burgundy sale is a valley running northwest between the Vosges mountains and the Alps into Germany's Black Forest.

Details of any planned attack to crack Germany's vaunted "west wall" fortifications, across from France's Maginot Line were withheld.

The air force was understood to be co-operating with land forces while the fleet blockaded battle positions in the Mediterranean.

Authorities started emptying Paris hospitals for military use. The first night of France's state of war with Germany had passed without word of the firing of a shot.

Former Local Man Dies At Danville

Prior to Mr. Tucker's going to Danville he was connected with the firm of C. T. Munford in this city.

Rusty And Red Spark Thrilling Ten-Inning Triumph

DON KING WINS ANOTHER GAME

Kinston Loses 1-0 After Spectacular Fight

Red Christopher's timely tenth-inning single to left with two away and the sacks loaded gave Greenville a 1-0 triumph over Bill Herring's Kinston Eagles in a thrilling semiprofessional opener. Paid admissions were 1,965.

Don King had charge of the mound for Greenville and was matched with Kinston's Sid Stringfellow. Don turned in his twenty-first win of the season as he gave up three safeties over a 10-inning route. Stringfellow allowed five safeties.

Greenville set the stage for its only run when Rusty McCall, the fellow who really featured for the Greensies, blasted a scorching triple to right center in the tenth inning. Stringfellow walked Jenkins and Smith intentionally and Red Christopher's blow ended the game. The Greensies rushed out on the infield and shouldered Red to the showers.

But none of the fans will ever forget the play in which McCall, Greenville left-fielder, thwarted a Kinston run in the eighth and saved Greenville from a 1-0 defeat. Kapura singled in this verse, advanced to second on Koloza's sacrifice and went homeward on Thornton's single to left, but was caught out at home on McCall's spectacular throw.

Two errors by Manager Wilson, a walk and a hit batsmen put four men on base for the Eagles before the eighth inning. The Eagles collected two hits in the eighth and one in the ninth for their only safeties of the game.

Greenville had three hits recorded in its behalf through three innings of play. Stringfellow settled down and hurled no-hit ball until the tenth, when the locals added two more safeties.

Vincent Smith amused the fans in the fifth when he turned a somersault in front of the Greenville dug-out to hold a foul blow that came off the end of Kapura's bat.

Manager Red O'Malley and his proteges didn't fare so well at the hands of Mule Shirley and his Gold Bugs. Ed Chapman limited the Martins to eight scattered hits as his mates offered fine support. This was the other opener for the Coastal Plain League's semiprofessional play.

Williamston and Goldsboro will clash again tonight in the Williamston park and Greenville and Kinston. The order will be reversed tomorrow night. Night games start promptly at 8 o'clock.

Carolina Gives Support To Carolina's Gridiron

Has Share Of Home Town Hopefuls Already

By M. R. ALEXANDER
Chapel Hill, Sept. 4.—The University of North Carolina football squad, which resumed preparations today for its early opener with Citadel here September 23, to be followed by Wake Forest, is going to have its share of home town boys and supporters.

More than half of the squad members are North Carolina boys. The others come from nine states, with no other state contributing more than six.

A total of 46 candidates have already reported, including 10 lettermen, Severin and Malloy at end, Kimball at tackle, Woodson, Slagle and Abernethy at guard, Stirnweiss and Lalanc at quarter, Radman at half, and Sadoff at full. Two other lettermen, Chuck Kline at end and Bob Smith at center, and Jack Jones, sophomore center, were expected today.

Five of the veterans and probable starters—Kline, Kimball, Woodson, Abernethy and Smith—are North Carolina boys. And of the two positions where no letterman is available, Mike Bobbitt from Greensboro is getting first call at right half and Christian Siewers from Winston is scrapping it out with Dick White at left tackle.

The starting eleven, therefore, will have a decided Tar Heel cast and may have as many as seven home-state boys.

Pepsi-Cola's Supply Of Sugar Sufficient

Walter S. Mack, Jr., president of the Pepsi-Cola Company, in answer to questions as to "what war would do to Pepsi-Cola's sugar supply," declared today the company now has in storage, or under contract, a sugar supply which "should be adequate to serve for the next three years."

"It should be remembered," said Mr. Mack, in answer to interrogation by interviewers, "that Pepsi-Cola refines its own sugar and that, when war clouds first gathered over Europe, we took steps to have delivered sufficient sugar to cover a long-range planning and manufacturing program."

Mr. Mack further pointed out the sugar in Pepsi-Cola is so refined and manufactured as to be easily digested and assimilated by the human body. The Pepsi-Cola Company, he added, is believed to be the only soft drink business that so treats and refines its own sugar from the raw state.

Chapter 39

A Lot Of Telling

"WHERE is Philip?"
"In jail, ma'am."
"I beg your pardon?" Locke mocked.

"Say, you even got me mixed up." The sheriff roared at his joke.
Olivia said, "Mr. Callen isn't Mr. Callen," as though that explained it.

"He's a long-wanted jewel thief, a member of an international ring," Dr. MacDonald said.

Cecily said, "And I'm the Queen of the May, I suppose. Or, am I delirious?"

Gloria said, "If you'll all keep quiet I'll try to make it plain, Cecily. Philip Callen is really Slick Rawlins. Only he's really Gloria broke down, laughing. She reached across Cecily's cot and clutched Locke's good hand. "This is Philip Callen, you little liar! Your fiancé!"

Cecily sat up.
"No she isn't a liar, Miss Watts. She is my fiancée, aren't you, darling?"

"In that case," Olivia pronounced, wrapping her quilt about her. "I suggest that we go and have a look at the remnants of my house and allow Cecily's fiancé to tell her the story himself."

"Don't forget your jewels, Mother," Gloria said, picking up the leather case that had been lying on the table. "You ought to have learned a lesson tonight."

Cecily's eyes avoided Locke's—only he wasn't Locke any more—as the others went out.

Then she said, "I wish I could crawl under this cot."
He said, "Shall we?"

"Oh, Locke... I mean..."
"Locke's my name," he said. "I told you it was, Philip Locke Callen."

"You told it to me once before and I didn't believe you. Oh, darling, how can you ever forget the way I've treated you! The things I thought about you! Only I didn't dawn in my heart."

"I know more about your heart than you do, young lady, and I'm going to spend the rest of my life telling you about it."

"You'll have a lot of telling to do! And you might start now. I'm completely in the dark. You seem to be everybody's darling as well as mine. Of course, that's not unexpected exactly except that they don't know you as well as I do. You see that's the surprising thing about it. I didn't know that they knew you."

"They didn't, Cecily. I never noticed before that your nose turns up. I thought you were only turning it at me."
"I'll do worse than that if you don't go on."

"Well, then, not only was I unknown here but I am also practically unknown everywhere and that's the way it all began."

Pulp Writer
"ARE you really going to talk sense?" she pleaded.

"If I don't look at you I may be able to. Otherwise my mind wanders. All right... all right, look out for that bad arm. Now then—I'm a pulp writer, which means that nobody ever heard of me because I use a string of pen names. I did have one book to which I carelessly attached my real name. And that one book didn't make me famous. As far as I know, no one had ever heard of Philip Callen."

He struggled to get at a cigarette with his left hand. Cecily managed it for him.

"I'm going to be a help to you," she said.

"You are, my love. I got this," he indicated his helpless hand, "slugging a guy right on the kisser."

"What's a kisser?"
He demonstrated.

"Well, probably have to spend the winter here if I'm to hear the rest of this story," she said patiently.

"Imagine my surprise one bright summer morning to discover via the New York Chronicle that I—Philip Callen, no less—prominent author was the house guest of the distinguished Madame Darrell."

"I saw that clipping. In fact I sent it to Jean Tuthill of the Chronicle myself!"

"Providence moves in a strange way... Well, sir, I say to myself, I'd better take myself for a little trip and find out what poor bloke has to use my name. Then, on that fortuitous night when I fell into your clutches... Cecily made a face at him and got kissed for her trouble. "Where was I? Oh, yes, that first night... I discovered that you seemed startled when I told you my real name. I see, Philip, this lady knows that bird and may be we can find out something. But

"You've got a black eye! And I suppose that belongs to me, too?"
That's what they call a mouse, Cecily. And you're right, it belongs to you. Having only one eye, I'll have to see through yours."

Cecily swayed toward him.
"Philip Callen, no mere man could bear the brightness of the things, I'm seeing through them now."

"Close them," he said, "and tell me what you see now." He kissed them gently and Cecily said, "Heaven!"

The End.

After A Man's Heart

by JEAN RANDALL

Chapter One

No Nurse Wanted

THE famous cartoonist spoke with decision.
"People! I must have people about me. I need to rub shoulders with my fellow men!"

"Yes, darling," his wife agreed absently.

"I see now I wasted months at the ranch. Still, perhaps not wasted. The Cowboy Cartoons—were not exactly a failure. He paused expectantly. He had a child's lovable desire for praise. But since Eleanor, his wife, and Buff, his twenty-year-old daughter, were deep in their own thoughts, he went on, a tinge of reproach in his voice. "Every so often I need to learn the same lesson over again: that the creative artist cannot afford to dissipate his energies." He lit a cigarette, half closing his eyes against the ascending smoke. "Simply wicked extravagance, my devoting all that time to domestic duties!"

Eleanor started. It was not often that Lance surprised her. She had had many years in which to grow accustomed to the big man's eccentricities and contradictions.

"Domestic duties, Lance! In heaven's name—"

Buff, leaning against the door-frame, regarded her parents with indulgent amusement. She knew where all this talk was leading. Presently when Lance had aired his theories and her mother had agreed without really hearing them, it would be time for Buff to lay hold of the situation.

"Domestic duties," Lance was saying firmly. "Daily orders to the foreman, instructions to the house-keeper—"

The conjugal worm turned, astonishing himself almost as much as her listeners.

"Lance Carroll! You never instructed a housekeeper in your life. I doubt if you so much as remember the name of this one. As for the foreman—"

"When?" his dear child demanded. "I've trailed about with you wherever you've gone—rather to formal education, anyhow." She anticipated the protest she saw hovering on her father's lips.

"Eleanor's headaches—"

"They're getting better, Buff. You said so yourself. There's no earthly reason—"

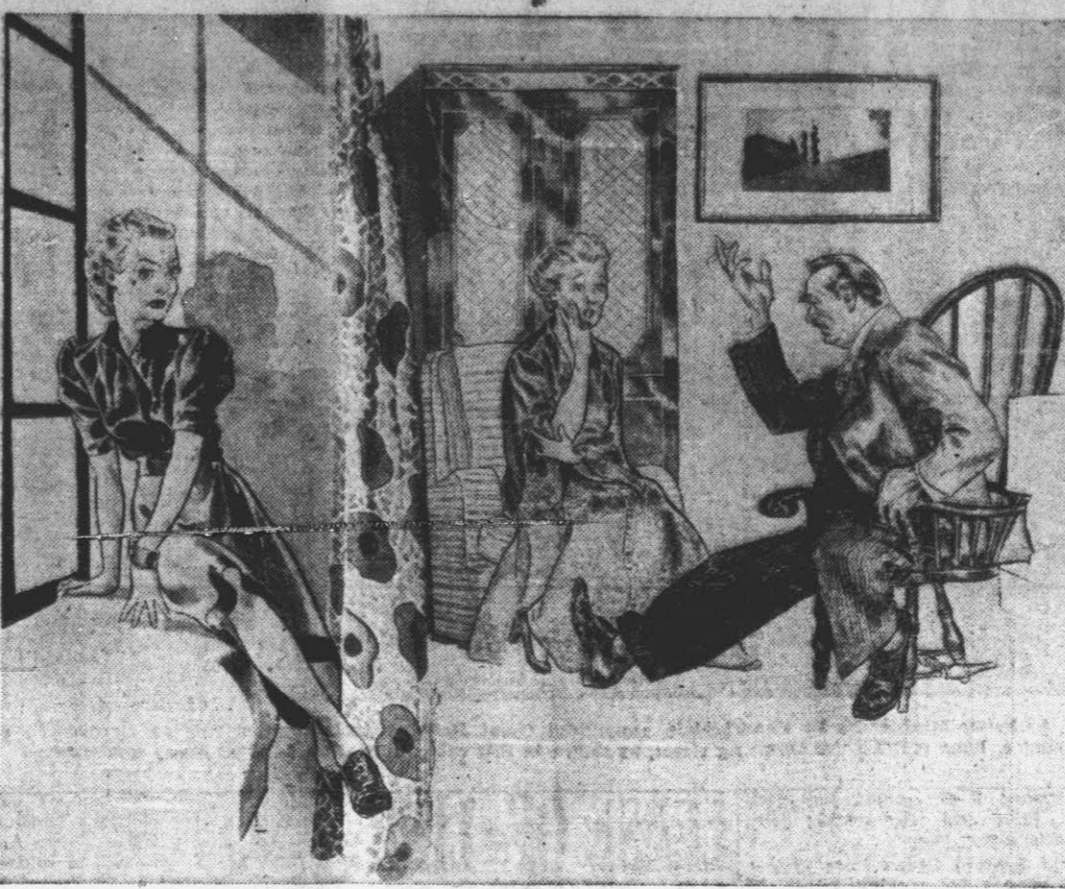

There should have been no reason, Buff thought, but there were dozens of them. She thought back to the time when her mother had typhoid fever. The Carrolls were in a small hamlet in Mexico where Lance had gone for "atmosphere."

It turned out that there was more atmosphere than civilization. The sturdy fourteen-year-old child had taken prompt charge of everything: her badly frightened father, the stupid Mexican cook, the filthy nurse who was all they could get for a time... The physician had learned to leave directions with Buff, to consult with her. She had looked after her parents ever since.

"I'll drive," she decided. "I can do it easily in two days, Lance, you'll keep well ahead of schedule! Eleanor, you must promise me—"

Even when they had assured and reassured her, she was slightly uneasy. Her mother's headaches, while they lasted; Lance's procrastination, his habit of lavish tipping, of buying furniture which they would never use, the possibility of his changing his mind about the Canadian trip and substituting something less desirable—Buff sighed. She could not always be on guard, she knew. Some day she would have responsibilities of her own—She always frowned and bit her lip at this point in her musings. Lance and Eleanor would simply be lost without her!

And it was late in the afternoon of that same day when she received the shock which almost sent her mind reeling. She was curled in the deep window of their common sitting room, absorbed in the busy traffic of the street far below. When she heard her parents enter she did not stir, supposing herself to be

Then Buff received a shock which almost sent her mind reeling.

I do that Lance would get himself tied into knots without you." A little frown drew her thick brows together. "I hate to leave you, though. There's quite a bit to be done at the ranch. Do you think you can manage without me for—say, a week? Perhaps ten days?"

"Manage? Manage! My dear child, you talk as if we were infants. Or morons. We've managed without you—"

"When?" his dear child demanded. "I've trailed about with you wherever you've gone—rather to formal education, anyhow." She anticipated the protest she saw hovering on her father's lips.

"Eleanor's headaches—"

"They're getting better, Buff. You said so yourself. There's no earthly reason—"

She was curled in the deep window of their common sitting room, absorbed in the busy traffic of the street far below. When she heard her parents enter she did not stir, supposing herself to be visible to them. She forgot the long velvet curtains which had fallen into place behind her.

"Lance"—it was Mrs. Carroll's voice, thoughtful and slightly troubled—"how can we get it over to Buff that—that—"

"That we do not require a nurse!" came the swift pronouncement. "I don't know, Eleanor. I don't know at all, my dear. It's growing on her, too—this overflow of maternity. What I'm afraid of is—"

"Yes, I know. That she'll take it all out on us instead of saving it for its legitimate channels. Buff is a born mother."

The girl sat frozen in her place, too stunned by her mother's first words to realize that she was eavesdropping.

"You are heavenly patient with her, darling," came Lance's admiring voice. "You let her decide the very gowns you buy! It's getting a little wearing. But she's such a darling, and she'd be so hurt—"

"Heart-broken," Mrs. Carroll said. "We've all sort of drifted into our present attitude toward one another. She is such a determined little thing, and it's been easier to give in to her than to protest—"

"After all, Lance, she's usually right!"

"Who cares? I'd rather be wrong than—"

"The epigram he had intended evaded him. He finished lamely: "than forever led around by a twenty-year-old girl." A note of anxiety crept into his voice.

"Why doesn't she marry, Eleanor? Nothing wrong with her, is there? She's not pretty exactly, but she's darned attractive. She's clever, too. Why—"

For Her Own Good
THE answer came a little forlornly. "It's because of us, Lance. She holds men at arms' length because she doesn't—because she's afraid."

"I thought so," was the artist's grim comment. Unhappy silence claimed them both for a few minutes. "What can we do about it, Eleanor?"

"I've been thinking, Lance. This idea of hers of going to the ranch seems—seems almost providential. I mean—oh, I do hate talking about darling Buff!"

"Go on! It's for Buff's own good."

"Oh, I know it! That's all that makes me consider it for a moment. It's so unkind, so deceitful—"

"What is? You've got some plan in your mind, darling. Out with it!"

"I thought... while she's at the ranch we'd start on our motor trip. Without waiting for her, I mean."

We'd wire her, of course—tell her something came up that hastened our plans—"

"She'd come right after us," Buff's father said.

"No. That's part of the plan; the—almost wicked part of it. We'd tell her we didn't know exactly where we were going; that she'd better stay at the ranch until she heard from us."

"Alone on the ranch!"

"Not alone," Eleanor said indignantly. "She'd have Atkins and Mrs. Webb, just as she'll have them for the week she planned to stay. And you know how safe it is out there, Lance. You remember the road—"

"God knows I do!" he remarked with fervor. "If one can call it a road! It's not likely to tempt anyone from the highway who doesn't have urgent business at the end; and no one has business there but Buff herself; Buff and Atkins when he goes into Loveland."

"Well, that's the plan. If we were away from her—a month—"

Lance jumped. "A month! Golly, you have more nerve than I have, Eleanor. A month away from Buff! She'll go into fits of anxiety about us."

"No, she won't, Lance; no, she won't, darling! Because I'll write. We'll both write. Casual letters at first—to say we don't know just how soon, just where we'll be... and then a definite one to tell her we think that as long as we've made so much of the trip without her, we'd better meet her in Chicago. She seemed to gain courage with each word she spoke. "I'll write her frankly that I think we need a little vacation from one another; that all families should separate now and then; that we're best parents, after all, and entirely capable of looking after ourselves."

He said darkly: "It would be just our luck to have an accident, or lose our traveler's checks—"

"You see, Lance—how we depend on her! It isn't fair to Buff, and it's bad for us. The child should have a little freedom. She should begin to realize that—well, that men should figure in her life. Not your friends, not the silly young fellows that are forever hanging about you—oh, I know you can't help it, but they do hang, just the same—but the kind of men she could marry. Business men, Lance, who play tennis and golf, and take two weeks' vacations, and fall in love..."

Her voice trailed off as she went into her bedroom. Her husband followed her. Five minutes later a pale and shaken girl crept across the floor and sought her own room.

A CANDID TALK WITH

WHO SHE IS
BORN in an age of flattery, ineffectual Victorian women, Lady Baldwin began stalling her less vigorous contemporaries early. Her husband, Stanley Baldwin, three times prime minister of England, wouldn't have stayed in politics if she hadn't persuaded him to keep on. He might not have won re-election if she hadn't campaigned for him all over the countryside. She loves speech-making; he detests it. Sometimes her campaign methods shocked society, notably the occasion when she entertained 50 charwomen at tea.
Lady Baldwin speaks intensely, dramatically, deftly parrying questions she does not wish to answer. Only tangible evidence of her Victorian background is her high-curved hair arranged in pompadour fashion, and the wide velvet ribbon she wears around her throat.
She has twice been honored by the crown. King George V made her a dame of the British Empire for World War services. The present king conferred on her the Order of the British Empire for maternity care campaigns.

"Since women have come more into the limelight in England, they have passed a great deal of good legislation benefiting women. When it comes to bills for better maternity care, the men, poor dears, go off their rockets. They just don't know what to do."

"We have a good system now. All poor mothers, whether their babies are illegitimate or not, get proper care free of charge."

"I would rather call illegitimate children 'natural' children, the way writers in Shakespeare's time did. 'Natural' is a prettier word than 'bastard,' don't you think?"

"Even now, we don't have enough hospitals. It is my ambition to have the big maternity hospitals set up as base hospitals—following the old war-time plan—and have other smaller hospitals draw on the big ones for their specialists."

"A flying squadron, literally flying, could operate between the large and small units, carrying specialists, emergency equipment and so on."

"I would love to see such a system set up. I'm not interested in public office. I never was. As far as public life goes, I am only my husband's shock absorber."

"I suppose I have committed all sorts of crimes. But after all, I was born in a generation where we were taught nothing. The war came, and we had to act. We were thrown into the vortex to sink or swim."

"I have never tried to preach to my children. They have always acted as they thought best. I have tried to teach them only one thing—that first of all comes service to their country."

When William E. Cashin devised a single fingerprint system, Capt. Constantine Sarlis, a police official from Greece, was invited to inspect the new system. Unknown to officials, Sarlis took a single print of Cashin's back to Greece and reproduced it on a letter. A few weeks later Postmaster E. J. McCorack turned the letter over to Cashin for possible identification. An assistant postmaster promptly delivered the letter to Cashin.

By ETHEL NICE, H. D. A.
Pactolus H. D. Meeting
The Pactolus club met Monday afternoon with Mrs. H. B. McBride. Mrs. McBride gave a report of her trip to the State Short Course. The club voted to see Mr. Webb of Kingston in an effort to get their road hard-surfaced as early as possible. The London trip was reported by the home agent.

H. D. Council
Eight clubs were represented at the council meeting Wednesday afternoon. It was decided to have the annual Achievement Program on November 8, April 3, 1940, was set as the date for the district meeting, provided the other counties agree. All club presidents were made a part of the building committee and met in the home agent's office this morning. Bulb price lists were given out to all clubs as this is the time to get bulbs for next spring. House Furnishings was approved as a major subject for next year.

Club Schedule
Falkland H. D. Club—Tuesday, 7 p. m., picnic at Farmville swimming pool.
Red Oak H. D. Club—Wednesday, 3 p. m., in club building.
Littlefield H. D. Club—Friday, 3 p. m., place to be announced.

Muscadine Grape Recipes
The muscadine family includes the following well known varieties: Scuppernon, Thomas, Mish, Eden, James, Memory, Smith, Flowers and Loda. Most of these grapes make excellent juice of fine flavor. The Thomas is perhaps the best, and does not require the addition of any sugar. The cold pressed juice is very superior in flavor to the hot pressed or cooked juice.

Equipment and Supplies—One crusher (for small quantities a dish pan and a grape juice bottle or potato masher will serve the purpose). 1 wash boiler (for processing jars); 3 dish pans; 1 potato ricer (to remove seeds); 2 yds. cheese cloth; 1 jelly bag; 1 measuring cup; 1 wooden spoon; 2 doz. quart jars (for pulp, juice and jelly stock); jelly glasses; sugar; grapes.

Cold Pressed Grape Juice—Select firm grapes for making juice. If large quantities are used, a grape crusher will be necessary. For small quantities a potato masher or a bottle can be used with satisfactory results. After the grapes are crushed pour them into a cheese cloth bag to strain off the juice. Allow the juice to stand in buckets for one hour, to settle, then filter it through a flannel jelly bag. Pour at once into hot sterilized jars. Partially seal the jars and place them in a hot water canner. Cover the jars with water. When the water begins to boil vigorously remove the canner from the stove immediately, remove the jars and complete the seal. The inside temperature of the jars will be approximately 185 degrees F. when the water begins to boil around the jars. Higher temperatures will injure the flavor of the juice.

Grape Paste Stock—Remove the hulls from the crushed grapes left in the cheese cloth bag. Cook the grape pulp slowly in a large dish pan until the seeds begin to separate from the pulp. Stir the pulp with a wooden spoon during the cooking as the pulp scoches easily. Remove the pan from the stove. Pour the pulp through a colander or use a potato ricer to remove the seed. Pour the hot pulp into hot sterilized jars and process in a hot water canner for 30 minutes at boiling temperature. Remove jars from canner, complete the seal and store until ready to make the paste.

Grape Jelly—It is best to make the finished paste in small quantities. Two cupsful of pulp and one cupful of sugar will give good results if cooked in a large flat-bottomed dish pan. Cook carefully stirring constantly with a wooden spoon until the mass will hold its shape. The paste should be of the consistency of fudge. Pour the finished paste on a platter or a marble slab to cool. When cold cut in one-inch squares and roll in granulated sugar. When thoroughly dry the paste can be packed in wooden boxes.

Grape Jelly Stock—8 pounds of grapes (one-half under ripe); one quart water. Crush grapes and boil with water 20 minutes; strain through cheese cloth and pour juice through a flannel bag. Pour into sterilized jars and process 20 minutes. Store in a cool place until ready to make jelly. In grape jelly the cream of tartar crystals slowly settle to the bottom and by this method crystallization in the jelly is reduced to a minimum.

Grape Jelly (made from stock)—Test juice with alcohol and add the required amount of sugar. Grapes usually require from one-half to three-fourths as much sugar as juice. Cook to 223 degrees F. or until the jelly sheets from the side of the spoon. Pour into hot sterilized glasses and seal.

LEASE OF LINE IS UNSETTLED

No Early Agreement Of Maintenance Probable

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Sept. 4.—The Old Mullet Line (name changed from Atlantic and North Carolina to Atlantic and East Carolina) has begun operations under lease to the H. P. Edwards' interests, but there is a strong likelihood that the amount the state of North Carolina will get for its first year's operation will remain in doubt for some time yet.

This comes about by reason of the claims of the Edwards' company that maintenance of the railway was poor and inadequate after an agreement had been reached as to the rental to be paid for it by the new A. and E. C.

The dispute was argued before the directors of the A. and N. C., with Edwards claiming a rebate of some $25,000 or more, while officials of the state-operated line claimed it had been adequately maintained.

Final result was the appointment of a committee from the directors to go into the dispute in conference with the Edwards interests. Arbitration was provided for in the event the conferees fail to reach an agreement, and it is this failure to get together which now looms as a very distinct possibility—though by no means a certainty.
