Nazis Attack Warsaw; French Gaining In Germany

Hitler Army Driving On Poles From Three Sides

With Most of Western Poland Already Occupied, German Forces Making Major Thrust Against Warsaw In Effort to Capture Capital; May Prove Decisive Battle of Conflict in Poland

Lwow, Poland, Sept. 9.—(AP)—(By courier to Bucharest)—Overwhelming German forces, led by strong motorized units, have occupied most of western Poland in a week of bitter fighting and are now attacking Warsaw in what may be one of the decisive battles of the war.

In an attempt to annihilate the Polish army before their British and French allies get into action on the Rhine front, the Germans have thrown at least 60 divisions and an extremely large number of artillery and mechanized units into action for a swift "kill."

(German army divisions usually have 10,000 to 12,000 men.) A lack of systemized official Polish information makes it impossible to draw lines on a map of Poland showing the cities and towns already occupied by German forces. As far as can be determined on the Polish side, however, German forces have advanced into Poland from the north, east and south, occupying most of the country except the slowly diminishing wedge which juts east from Warsaw.

The office of the Pitt County Board of Education today announced policies relative to bus route regulations after disclosing that it had received a number of inquiries asking if it was possible to extend bus routes within less than a mile of a student's home.

Tanker Sunk

Amsterdam, Sept. 9.—(AP)—A message from the Netherlands steamer Bredyk today reported that the 5,548-ton British tanker Kennebec had been sunk by a torpedo, but the entire crew of 32 had been saved.

First Picture of The Athenia Sinking

Reich's Number Two Leader, Replying to Question, Says America "Will Be Along Later"

Berlin, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Britain can not defeat Germany, either by military or economic weapons, Field Marshal Goering assured the German people today. He declared that "we can hope" the conquest of Poland will be completed "14 days after the beginning of the fight"—by September 14.

He hastened to add that America was all that Britain had left, but that Germany does not need the United States as a source of supplies. Speaking with great disdain of Britain and the Nazi aviation and economic chief scouted the British theory that Germany can be worn down and told an attentive nation that "in the north and east we can not be blockaded."

Hodges, was retained as president of the local Phi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi for 1939-40 at a meeting of the non-collegiate sorority held Tuesday night in Sheppard Memorial Library. Other officers elected temporarily with Miss Hodges at the organization meeting were retained also. Plans for the ensuing year were mapped.

Family Returns From Funeral. The family of Mrs. Jennie Swan Ives have returned from the funeral which was held at the home of her son, Freeman C. Ives, near Bayboro.

The funeral, conducted by the Rev. J. P. Woodard, pastor of the Free Will Baptist Church of which she was a member, assisted by the Rev. M. Y. Self of the Methodist Church of Bethel, was attended by a large number of relatives and friends.

The hymns, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" and "Asleep in Jesus," were sung at the home and after the services at the grave. "Asleep in the Arms of Jesus," was softly sung by the Vandemere choir.

The sons-in-law, Messrs. E. B. Allsbrook, W. C. Vincent, C. W. Croom, W. H. Woodard and W. H. Williams, were active pallbearers. Grandchildren and members of her Aid Society carried the flowers.

The floral designs were exceptionally lovely, suggestive of the high respect in which she was held. The family deeply appreciates all expressions of sympathy. In her long span of life she was always kind and generous, particularly towards the less fortunate.

Mrs. Ives was the widow of the late E. H. Ives of Pitt county, who died several years ago.

Littlefield H. D. Club. The Littlefield H. D. Club met Friday afternoon. A report on Home Management was given by Mrs. Eugenia Hart.

4-H Boys and Girls. C. D. Griggs and I will make club visits next week to reorganize all 4-H clubs. We hope to have eight meetings during the school year. We urge all boys and girls who have had club work to continue with it as it takes continued efforts to accomplish anything worthwhile. To be in club one year and drop out the next demoralizes the program. All boys and girls ten years old and older are eligible. Let's get started early and give all programs our undivided attention. Try to adjust your school program so you won't need to miss any part of a club period. They are short at best and you will be disappointed at the end of the year if you give less than your best. Talk it over with your parents and get their support in your efforts. Older boys and girls who are badly needed as leaders. Please offer your services. HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES—Some meat loaves call for bacon stripping on the top. To prevent the bacon from becoming too brown before the loaf is done, arrange it during the last 20 minutes of baking.

Spiced beet slices or pickled carrots make piquant garnishes for the cold meat platter. A few of each will do, along with a few sprigs of parsley.

Waffles are grand for dessert when topped with cream cheese mixed with cherry or blueberry jam. Be generous with both the cheese and jam. No need for butter as the cheese is rich enough.

Corn fritters go very well with mushroom gravy or cheese sauce. They blend nicely, too, with tomato or celery sauce. Serve them for luncheon, supper or a get-together snack.

If pears have to stand a little while when you're canning them, it's best to keep them covered in salt water so they won't darken. Use two tablespoons of salt to a gallon water. To help keep pears used in appetizers, salads or desserts from darkening, sprinkle them with a little orange, lemon, lime or grapefruit juice as soon as peeled and store in a cold place.

Lenoir County Entry Eliminates Greenville Club 15-0

FINALS SERIES BEGINS SUNDAY

Eagles Execute 17-Hit Attack Over Greenies

By JAMES WHITFIELD
Daily Reflector Staff Writer

Kinston, Sept. 8.—Manager Bill Herring's Kinston Eagles hammered three Greenville hurlers for 17 safeties here tonight and offered exceptional support behind Ed Nowak's eight-hit hurling to blank Manager Rube Wilson's Greenies, 15-0, and eliminate the Greenville entry from the finals.

League officials decided at a meeting in Greenville recently that the finals would get under way as soon as the semifinals were concluded. However, it was announced here tonight through directors of the Kinston club that finals would start in Kinston Sunday afternoon with the Williamston Martins, who gained the finals berth over Goldsboro.

Insistent raps on the door of victory were executed by the Greenies during the entire game and no one did they fail to display the spirit that kept them riding high in the Coastal Plain all season. However, effective hurling, the trait that has skyrocketed the Eagles in the semifinals, produced the Greenies' downfall tonight.

Smith Breaks Rib
Vincent Smith, Greenville catcher who has been sold to Memphis, displayed his intestinal fortitude tonight when he broke an upper rib in the second inning to avert an Eagle singleton and then stayed in the game through the fifth inning. The accident occurred when Earl Hahn smashed a scorching drive to left field, which went for a triple, but was caught out at home.

Greenville had three nice chances for scores, but failure to produce hits at the opportune time overshadowed its efforts. Black singled in the first inning, advanced to third on Rube Wilson's infield out, and was thrown out at third when Red Christopher reached first on a fielder's choice.

Vincent Smith doubled to left field in the second inning and advanced to third on the throw-in, but was left on the base when frame ended. Rusty McCall batted out a triple to the right zone in the sixth inning, but he, too, was left on the base as the fighting Kinston club paraded to the dugout.

Hitting Leaders
Ed Black, Greenville right-fielder, collected three hits in four official turns to feature the Gasnet's hitting and was trailed by Whitey Heavener, who got two hits in four trips. The other hits came off the bat of Rusty McCall, Vincent Smith and Harry Jenkins.

Irvin Dickens and George Kolozar turned in three safeties apiece in five turns at the plate to take the Eagle batting honors. Four other members of the Kinston club had two hits each.

Trophy
Umpire Ben Mitchell, deputy commissioner of the Semi-Pro Congress, presented a bronze trophy mounted on a mahogany base to Irvin Dickens, Eagle shortstop, by virtue of the .473 mark reached by the Roanoke Rapids product while playing with the Roanoke Rapids Owls. He was the leading hitter over 245 players registered in the National Semi-Pro Congress. Dickens, former captain of the Wake Forest College club, has hit above the .300 mark since joining the Eagles. Then, too, this series business has been somewhat tough for Dickens. He teaches school in the daytime and plays baseball at night.

Fitching
Big Ben Mooney started on the mound for the Greenies, but was replaced by Pat Malone after Kinston had scored three runs off three hits. Two men were left on the bases, but scored on Dallas Thornton's single to right. Thornton was the first batter to face Malone.

The Kinston hurler pitched for five innings and four more hits, at which time Freddie Caligiuri took over the job and went for five innings. Five runs and nine hits sent Caligiuri to the showers. Lefty Joe Long replaced Caligiuri and Nowak, the first player to face him, hit into a double play, the only one of the game.

Adieu, Greenies
The 1939 season has ended for you, but your efforts have been enviable. You're good in that a team has to be good to remain on top practically all season and finish in the upper bracket. You have friends in Greenville. They've watched your progress throughout the season. Despite criticism that you have received for blunders, and mistakes are natural, there has been a boost on the other side of the road. Some of you will not come back, but I'll say adieu until next season.

Starts Sunday

Finals play in the Coastal Plain League will get underway in Kinston Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with the Kinston-Williamston clubs providing the entertainment. The play-off runs contrary to the decision of the directors who met in Greenville recently and decided the finals would begin the day after the semi-finals ended. However, an agreement between the directors of the Kinston and Williamston clubs revised the decision.

SHORT SHOTS

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, Sept. 9.—Sometimes it pays to run a good bluff.

G. Q. Gilkey of Marion runs no bus lines, but for one reason or another it seems he wanted one run from Marion to Blowing Rock via Newlands and Linsville. It also seems he couldn't prevail upon any company to run a line for him.

And so Mr. Gilkey filed, with considerable fanfare and blowing of publicity trumpets, an application for a franchise for such a bus line, probably reasoning he wouldn't have to run it if he didn't want to, even if he got the permission.

But when the Queen City Coach Company heard that Mr. Gilkey had sought the franchise, it forthwith and immediately filed for permission to operate over exactly the same route.

Hearing on both petitions has been set for September 29, but it's common talk that the Gilkey application will be quietly, and joyously, abandoned.

On the front of the new Department of Justice building is carved in big letters "LAW AND JUSTICE."
"Huh!" snorted a passerby. "It looks like they think law and justice are two different things."
Maybe he's got something there.

And some irreverent wag has pinned the tag "Oscar" on the carved figure atop the same new building.

Ice cream became a wholesale commodity in 1851 when a Baltimore dairyman, Jacob Fussell, began selling it to get rid of his surplus milk.

RIGHT AGAIN, MR. CHURCHILL!

ADVENTURER: The 23-year-old Churchill battles in India. He fought also in the Sudan and South Africa.

WAR-TIME LEADER: Churchill rides with General Pershing in London shortly after the World war.

AUTHOR: In a score of books he tells about his wars, travels, jobs, ancestors.

POLITICIAN: He has been in public life ever since 1900.

By The AP Feature Service
As far back as 1935, Winston Churchill was warning against German rearmament, urging the nations to unite against aggression, begging Britain to prepare herself for the worst.

He was pretty much like a voice crying in the wilderness. But now the doughty warrior, keen-witted statesman and prolific author has been called into Britain's war cabinet as first lord of the admiralty—and once against he is in a position to boast, "I told you so."

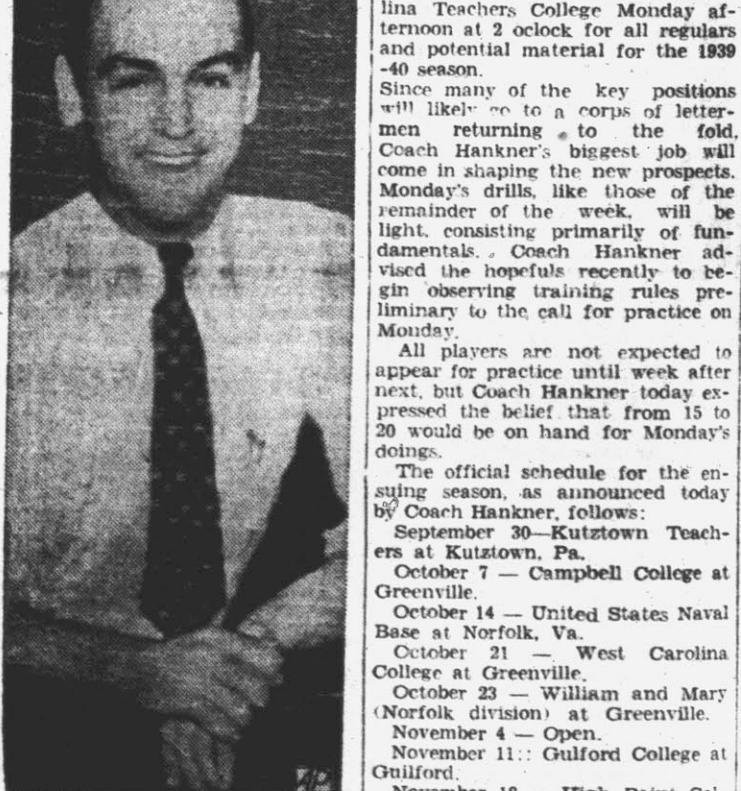

It was he, too, who pushed the attempt to break through the Dardanelles, Turkish-defended gateway to the Black sea. It was a brilliant plan, but it failed disastrously, probably because his advice wasn't followed soon enough. Thereupon he resigned and went to the trenches.

But he held one cabinet post or another most of the time from 1917 to 1929, and always has been active in politics.

Pat Johns (above), son of a Wisconsin congressman, wants to fly solo across the Atlantic to Ireland on a goodwill jaunt which he hopes will bring peace to Europe. And so he flew his plane, "Screwball I," to Manchester, N. H., to prepare for the flight. But federal authorities refused permission for the hop and ground him. Nevertheless, Pat's still hopeful he'll find a way.

Parted By Death

One of the saddest sights among survivors of the torpedoed liner Athena was that of nine-year-old Roy Barrington of Toronto. His mother, Mrs. Joseph C. Barrington, perished in the tragedy. But the boy was snatched from the sinking ship and was landed at Greenock, Scotland. They are shown on the deck of the Athena when they sailed from Canada.

Tobacco Prices Expected

Come Back If War Lasts

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Sept. 8.—Tobacco growers who are already disappointed with prices being received for their crop will get no immediate comfort from a study of the past history of leaf prices and European wars.

What they will learn is that if precedent is followed this time prices will toboggan downward—and rapidly. To be at least a year before coming back. Then, again on the history-repeating-itself theory, there will be a sharp comeback which will continue as long as the war continues.

Your correspondent tried to get something resembling a prophecy as to the course of tobacco prices out of W. P. Hedrick, State Department of Agriculture specialist, but he was far too wary for that and contented himself with sketching briefly what occurred back in World War days.

He pointed out that many of the same conditions exist today as existed then, but cautioned that there are now present additional factors which were not present in 1914. These new factors, he pointed out, may upset the whole equation based on the past.

Figures in his office, however, indicate that the course of events this time is starting about as in 1914 when Europe blazed into hostilities. The first effect then was a drop in tobacco prices.

Maybe He'd Given The Wrong Address

Oklahoma City — (AP) — It was September, but Eddie Burks suggested to his 3-year-old son, Lynn, that if he wrote early enough to Santa Claus he might get a bicycle next Christmas.

"I'm not writing Santa any more," said Lynn. "Last year I wrote for a xylophone and he brought it to a kid in the next block."

It Happened One Night.
Kansas City, Mo. — (AP) — W. N. Peters, retired Callaway county farmer, reports he went to bed one night recently with sandy hair and awakened with a white thatch.

"But then," he says philosophically, "most men of my age, 85, are white-haired. In the cases of my friends the change has come more gradually."

Discovers Secret of The Sword of Damascus.
Canton, Ohio — (AP) — This is the story of Dr. W. Stuart Carnes who pursued through the years the secret of the Damascus sword.

"The blade must be tempered in blood," said age-old legends. "The secret must be passed only from father to son. The sword must be bent till the blade touches the hill and sharpened until it will shave hair."

Explorer, archaeologist and lecturer, Dr. Carnes studied the legends when a schoolboy and saw in them a challenge.

He experimented in chemistry and metallurgy, seeking to combine temper and flexibility in a blade of Damascus requirements. Today he is exhibiting to friends the "sword of Damascus reproduced."

Dr. Carnes can bend the blade till it touches the hill. He has shaved himself with it.

Control of the process was the all-important problem. He displays his success in meeting it with the aid of an 18-inch piece of metal divided into sections.

The first will cut glass, the second split a hair and the third shave nails. The fourth has the qualities of spring steel and the fifth can be bent between his fingers.

The secret, lying in the mixture of chemicals and heat treatment, was solved by trial and error perseverance. Dr. Carnes intends to keep it.

war upon the chances of re-employment of crop control measures. Hedrick was by no means definite in any predictions.

He readily agreed that first result is to take the minds of growers off control and center them on immediate effects of war on this year's prices. He also expressed the opinion that the uncertain conditions as to prospective markets would make control much more difficult to work out on any reasonable basis, in view of the fact that nobody will be able to tell in advance what markets are likely to be open to the American growers on any given crop date.

NO TIME FOR PANIC

While the closing of the tobacco markets might temporarily upset the plans of some of our farmers, and through them our various lines of business throughout this section, it is to be hoped that our people will not become unduly alarmed over the situation.

When the British buying companies found it necessary to retire from the markets because of circumstances beyond their control, there was no other sane step to take than to close the markets temporarily until the situation can be carefully considered and steps taken to protect the farmers from serious losses that they would necessarily have to bear if the crop was sold with a part of the buying companies not represented on the sales.

We believe that within a very short time plans for continuance of the markets will be worked out and in the meantime the farmers should make every effort to preserve their tobacco in the best possible condition. We advise that you check your pack-houses carefully for leaks and see to it that your tobacco is kept dry and in good condition.

Frankly, we believe the farmers are better off with their packhouses filled with unsold tobacco at this time than they would be if the markets continued open without competitive buying and the tobacco sold far below its value.

We repeat, this temporary closing of the market creates an unexpected situation, but in the end we are sure that a satisfactory solution can be found. In the meantime, we urge our farmers not to become unduly alarmed. In the past we have overcome even worse situations and we are confident that this time will be no exception.

The Problem of Co-education.
Louisville, Ky.—(AP)—For years separate high schools for boys and girls have been maintained in Louisville and Mrs. S. I. Kornhauser, a vice president of the city parent-teacher council, says the "real" reason is the intense athletic rivalry between two of the boys' schools—Manual High and Central.
C. L. Jordan, retiring principal of Manual High school, advocates co-education as "the natural situation." He says boys and girls should not be separated in adolescent years.

After A Man's Heart
by JEAN RANDALL

YESTERDAY: George Weekes tells Buff to be kind to Tim because she had an unfortunate love affair. He tells Tim to be kind to Buff, because she seems to have the blues, also.

Chapter Six
Buff Breaks Down

THE letter had come; the letter Buff had expected and dreaded. She had known that it would be like Eleanor was slow to make up her mind, but when she did she acted with decision and entire thoroughness.

Her daughter caught her breath when she took the fat envelope from Atkins. She was far too pre-occupied to observe that the foreman's manner was odd; that he fidgeted, cast a glance toward her which was a mixture of appeal and defiance, and in the end stalked away without opening his mouth.

Up the stairs Buff flew with her letter. Tim's door was open and he roused himself to mark those flying footsteps. And noticed that they dragged forlornly and surprisingly just before the girl went into her room and closed the door behind her.

Minutes later—or perhaps it was hours—she caught the sound of muffled sobbing from somewhere. He had been so far away from the ranch, been with Iria, hearing her hauntingly sweet voice, dwelling on the soft radiance in her uplifted brown eyes, that it took him some time to realize that what he was really listening to was little Buff Carroll crying in her room.

"An 'ter love affair gone wrong," he concluded grimly. "Nothing I can do about it either. Or can I? Shall I hobble... and invite her to weep on my shoulder? Did I want to weep on George's shoulder—when—when—no, of course I didn't! The only thing I wanted was to be let alone. Still, girls are a different—queer. Maybe she'd like a bit of brotherly sympathy." He scowled. "Oh, lord! Hate to barge in and risk being told to mind my business. Confound it! The child'll tear her own throat to pieces if she doesn't let up."

He considered the man who, presumably, was responsible for all this woe.

"What more does he want?" he demanded angrily of his injured leg. "Money—I suppose Carroll's got something, and this girl's his one and only; looks—George seemed to think she's not too homely—the prestige of being a famous cartoonist's daughter. Maybe he's one of these modern-day brains in a woman." He decided. "That stuff she writes—maybe he holds it against her. But he needn't read it!" he said somewhat fiercely. "Anyway I'll bet his own past is nothing to frame and hang on the wall of the living room."

He looked at his watch. "I'll give her five minutes more; then, if she doesn't stop that crying I'll make a nuisance of myself and offer sympathy. Maybe she'll be so furious it'll distract her."

It was the shortest five minutes he had ever known. The long hand of his watch seemed to race. When the limit was up, he hobbled resignedly toward the door. His head ached and he knewed a good deal more about this time. There was a moment's silence and then Buff's voice, curiously muffled, replied.

"Who is it? What d'you want?"

"Tim." Without further ado, he opened the door and limped inside. He frowned again at seeing her in that, unhappy ball on the bed. "Don't do that!" There was a cry of protest in his tone. "It doesn't do any good. He isn't worth it. Buff, though I know you won't believe me. As a matter of fact, he's an egotist of the first water. Confound it, why shouldn't you write if you want to, if it amuses you? It's your life after all!"

"W—what do you mean?" Her breath rose and fell stormily. "He doesn't mind my writing. It was his idea in the first place."

"Oh, it was! Another explanation dawned on him. "Jealous, eh? Invading his own field? Well, all I've got to say is he's a louse."

Slight Misunderstanding

SHE jerked herself up to one elbow, swept the loose waves of hair from her wet eyes. "You shan't call him that, Tim! Corlies! He's the dearest, the finest... and what do you know about him, when it comes to that? You've never laid eyes on him!"

"Nor wish to," he informed her coldly. "I know the kind of guy he is. absorbed in his own concerns—I suppose he calls it his work!—and paying no attention to anyone else unless he feels his supremacy is threatened. You're darned well out of him, Buff. If you'd just face it!"

"But I don't want to be rid of him! And you're simply silly about his being jealous. Anyhow, he didn't write; it was she—Eleanor!"

He made frenzied motions with his hands. "There's an Eleanor—it is there! I might have known! Always a triangle of some kind. I'm that in the Garden of Eden—right down through the ages. And Eleanor wrote you! He'm doesn't that show you? Doesn't it?"

"Tears welled into her drowned eyes, spilled over the swollen lips. "Of course it does," she admitted solemnly. "I knew it before, though. It's just seeing it put into words."

"Here!" He limped forward and wiped her face with his own handkerchief, thoroughly and matter-of-factly. "I don't believe crying helps. I should think, however, if resignedly he put his arm about her. "How on my shoulder, my dear child! You've certainly earned the right to."

She took full advantage of the handsome offer. She was homesick, lonely and unbearably depressed. She wanted Lance's big arms about her, Eleanor's soft voice to speak soothing words. Failing these, Tim did pretty well as a substitute. When she raised her head at last, she looked definitely more cheerful. She blew her nose, gave a final mop to her eyes and leaned back on her pillows. Then it occurred to her to ask:

"How did you know? Did he—he write you? But, no, of course he didn't. They don't even know you're here. That you exist, so far as that goes. How did you know?" she repeated.

"I heard you crying. I figured out the rest. It wasn't hard. A girl—a pretty girl—let me guess, George says you're pretty. What does a pretty girl usually cry about? A love affair gone wrong. So I came to offer my sympathy."

He got to his feet with the air of a man who has performed his whole duty.

"Wait a minute! You're wrong—you've got it all wrong. The letter's from Eleanor—"

"Yes, you told me. I suppose he thinks he's in love with her now?"

"Well, of course he's in love with her! She's his wife!"

"Look here," he began sternly. "You don't want to be mixing up in a think like that. If he's married to her, you keep out. I'm surprised at you, Buff. I didn't think you were that sort of girl."

'They Don't Want Me'

"Will you let me explain?" It is difficult to be icy when one's eyes are puffed and red, and one's cheeks still glazed with tears, but Buff managed it. "Eleanor's my mother. The man who encouraged me to write is Lance, my father. Now will you stop this idiotic babble of triangles? You've been seeing to many movies," she said disapprovingly.

"Mother?" he said, astounded. "Father? But why are you crying?"

"They've gone off on a motor trip." It was the only explanation she could think of but even to her self it sounded woefully inadequate.

"Good gosh!" he commented slowly. "Good—gosh. So that's it!"

"You've stayed here to look after me; given up something you'd set your heart on doing. Buff, I—"

"I've done nothing of the kind she snapped. "You could have stayed here with Mrs. Webb and I should like to look after you. It's just that—that—that—I'm beginning to quiver and the tool I'm holding resolutely in hand. She has cried enough for one day. "They don't want me!" she burst out. "That's what Eleanor said in the letter. They want to be by themselves for a while longer."

"I see." The first smile she had ever beheld on his face twisted at his lips but he suppressed it manfully. "Well, that's pretty bad, my dear, but it might have been worse. You'll all be better, I think, for a little change from each other. People often are."

"That's—that's what Eleanor said."

"What do you plan to do when this trip is over? When you've fired or re-hired Atkins, whichever you decide?"

"I don't know," she told him in a small voice. "Something—some thing that keeps me busy, that's—that's independent of them. I know they're right; I know I should be leading my own life. The question is: what shall I do?"

He gave the matter frowning attention. "Write? You could take an apartment somewhere and devote yourself to writing."

"I suppose I could. Sounds pretty dreary though. Eleanor says they'll be in Chicago in three weeks and I'm to meet them there that we'll stay all winter in an hotel apartment. But Lance won't stay all winter there. He'll get a yen to sketch something in some outlandish place, somehow on the snow in Maine, or hummingbirds in Peru and off they'll go."

"Off you'll go, too?"

Washington Daybook
By Preston Grover

Washington.—The much-abused neutrality act gives the President authority to prevent or diminish two practices which did much to draw the United States into the last war.

One is to prevent American citizens traveling in the war zone on ships belonging to belligerents. That would have prevented the loss of American lives in 1915 on the Lusitania. It would not necessarily have prevented Americans coming to harm on the recently sunk Athenia because exceptions are made for people fleeing from the war zone.

The other grant of authority is to permit the President to place restrictions upon use of United States ports by armed merchant vessels.

It is a fair bet that attempts will be made to save these two provisions of the neutrality act, even if the arms embargo feature is taken out at the expected special session.

THE SUBMARINE QUESTION

The question is, does a merchant vessel lose some of its special privileges when it mounts a cannon, even for defensive purposes? In the last war Germany contended that an armed merchant vessel was not entitled to warning before being sunk. Secretary of State Lansing saw the point of the German argument.

He knew that it was a common practice for British merchant vessels to wait until the submarine arose to give warning, and then either try to ram it or fire a shot into it. A submarine is a helpless target before a cannon. The slightest puncture in its thin shell sinks it.

A TWO-FOLD REASON

But England and France were adamant. They insisted it would be a very unfriendly act for the United States to insist on a change in the rules. England had a double-edged reason for insisting on the old way.

First, the more ships sunk without warning the worse the picture of "German frightfulness" could be made to appear in America.

Second, sinking a ship without warning meant use of a torpedo. Submarines can carry only a few torpedoes. If permitted to come to the surface and sink the merchant ship with gunfire after due warning, naturally its supplies would last longer.

WARSHIP RULES

The neutrality act recognizes this situation. It gives the President power to make regulations which armed merchant vessels must accept if they use American ports. The purpose of the section, of course, was to permit the President to declare that any armed merchant vessel must abide by regulations for regular warships. A belligerent warship can stay in an American port only 24 hours under normal circumstances. Since no merchant vessel can come in, take on a cargo and leave in 24 hours, it would just about compel England to leave her merchant vessels unarmed.

NOTICE

Sept. 5th, 1939.
At the request of D. T. House, Jr., a member of the Board of County Commissioners, I am under the terms of Section 1296 of the N. C. Code (Michie), calling a meeting of the Board of County Commissioners to be held Monday, Sept. 11, 1939, at 9 o'clock A. M. in the Grand Jury room at the Court House.
J. N. WILLIAMS, Chairman.
Sept. 5-6-7-8-9

NOTICE

Chapter five, Article One of the Ordinance of the City of Greenville reads as follows:
Section 3—It shall be unlawful for any person owning a dog or bitch to suffer or permit said dog or bitch to run at large within the corporate limits of the town of Greenville. Any person violating this ordinance shall, upon conviction, be fined ($10.00) dollars.
Section 4—That if any dog shall be found running at large within the corporate limits of the town of Greenville, and his owner shall be known, then it shall be the duty of the police to seize said dog and impound him, and shall immediately advertise said dog for three days at public places in town of Greenville. If his owner shall appear and claim him then it shall be the duty of the police to deliver said dog to such owner upon the payment by the owner to the police of such expenses as shall be incident to the keep of the dog, and such fine and costs as shall be imposed by the court as provided for in Section 3. Upon failure of the owners to appear at the expiration of the three days, or upon his failure to pay the expenses, cost and fine above enumerated, then it shall be the duty of the police to kill said dog, or sell and deliver him to any person who will pay said expenses, fine and cost.
The said Ordinance shall be strictly enforced on and after the 10th day of September, 1939. Please protect your dog.
JACK SPAIN, Mayor.

STATE GAINING IN INDUSTRIES

Fifty-One New Plants Located Here In Eight Months

Raleigh, Sept. 9.—During the first eight months of 1939 there were established in North Carolina 51 new industrial plants, J. T. Anderson, industrial engineer and chief of the division of commerce and industry, Department of Conservation and Development, said today.

In addition 66 new additions to existing plants were built during the same period, Anderson said.

The ratio of new establishments is running slightly behind 1938, during which there were 124 new industrial locations in North Carolina and 78 additions to existing plants.

Mr. Anderson reports, however, that prospects for the last third of the current year are bright and there is no distinct possibility that the record of 1938 will be equalled or exceeded.

Of the 50 new industries — 28 were established in the first four months of this year, 23 during the four months between May 1 and August 31. Of the 66 additions — 39 were established in the first four months, 27 in the second.

Of the new plants 29 may be grouped as textile, as follows: dyeing and finishing 5; hosiery 16; knit goods 2; cotton yarn 2; silk and rayon 1; and miscellaneous 5.

Of the other 22 the types follow: flour, feed and meal 1; food and kindred products 6; furniture 1; paper and printing industries 7; mining 1; woodworking 1; and miscellaneous 5.

Of the additions, 60 were to textile plants, of which were hosiery. Others were dyeing and finishing 5; knit goods 3; silk and rayon 5; cotton goods 8; cotton yarn 5; and miscellaneous 4.

"We feel that the 1939 record is good and shows a steady, substantial growth in the state's industrial setup," said R. Bruce Etheridge, director of the Department.

BUS ROUTE RULINGS, POLICIES EXPLAINED

erate buses for high school and elementary pupils separately. This would be very desirable if it could be done everywhere, but we must follow uniform policies.

2—It is not possible to allow exceptions in routing buses, such as rainy-day changes or changes to meet peculiar conditions. The law does not make provisions for physically handicapped children, and we must meet the requirements of the law.

3—In your routings, do not consider the children living within one and one-half miles of the school. We have no obligation to them.

4—Buses must be left on the school grounds during the day. This is a regulation of the commission and must be adhered to.

5—For the purpose of transportation we are able to ignore district and county lines. Pay special attention to routes which cross county lines. If you are in doubt, contact the surveyor in the adjoining county before you make a final decision.

6—Section 24, School Machinery Act of 1929: "The use of the school buses shall be limited to the transportation of children to and from school for the regularly organized school day."

ADOPTED CHILDREN SHOULD KNOW THEIR STATUS

Chicago, (AP)—Adopted children should be informed of the fact that they are adopted—and as early as possible—the American Medical Association advises.

"Of course, four years of age is not too young to do this," the AMA journal says. "Young children so informed have no emotional reaction and grow up just as secure in their status as do other children."

Here's how to make adopted children proud, instead of disappointed, of their status, the journal suggests: "Tell them that whereas most of their friends had to be accepted, their foster parents picked them out and chose them from a group of children and liked them best. This usually pleases the child and helps break the ice."

If adopted children aren't told when they are young, there always comes a time when some one outside the family tells them, the journal says, and "in such a situation later on in life, it is likely to cause one's derable emotional reaction."

rise sharply. With the gold flow from Europe to New York now on a par with the gold flow from New York to Europe, the war marks the turning point in the era of record low interest rates. Wages will work higher, offsetting rising costs of food, clothing and other necessities. Money jobs will open up, but taxes and other costs of doing business will continue to advance. Over the long term, however, we will find that this war boom is a very costly boom.

America Must Stay Out

Most important question of the hour is America's position. Can we stay out? I imagine this issue has been debated in every home from Honolulu to Boston this past week. Surely, we must have learned our lesson from the last war. We did not make Hitler, stupid European diplomacy of the twenties made him. My whole sympathy naturally is with England and France. They are our first line of defense, but we are not responsible for their mistakes and we should not spill the blood of American youth to pull chestnuts out of the fire for these countries.

We must, however, back President Roosevelt's new program for further defense expenses 100 per cent. Certainly, we must defend this hemisphere. Hitler, Stalin, nor Hirohito must not get even so much as a toehold in the Americas. The Monroe Doctrine must be enforced to the limit. If England and France are our first line of defense, then Latin America is our second and a far more vital one.

New York Replaces London

In this connection, readers may remember an article of last winter in which I said that our strongest defense—in fact, the most powerful military machine in all the world—was the United States Treasury and the credit of the American dollar. The dollar is today the strongest currency in the world. The British pound and allied currencies have cracked wide open. London can no longer support them. Whatever else happens in the war, one result is already clear: New York, not London, will be the future financial and monetary center of the world.

But just as the pound has broken under the onslaught of Britain's huge pump-priming expenditures of the past decade, so can our dollar be smashed. I want to repeat my warning of last winter—our best defense against armed invasion is the protection of our public credit and our dollar. Instead of sending our youth to the battlefields of Europe to save something from somebody, we must protect our dollar and our democracy from within! They go

Dear Mr. Tunstall:

I wish to thank you for the check for ninety-two dollars ($92.00) received today from your company, the National Casualty Co. The payment was prompt and satisfactory. Especially due to the fact I was hurt three days after giving you the application. I feel that—our best or professional woman—should have one of your policies. I also like your Hospitalization policy that costs only 75 cents a month, although I did not have the occasion to use it this time.

INVESTIGATE 21,420; ALL ARE INNOCENT

Butte, Mont.—(AP)—The Department of Justice has investigated 21,420 persons suspected of a part in the kidnap murder of Charles Mattson and found them all innocent.

That information was contained in a letter from FBI headquarters in Washington to W. Guy Banister, special agent in charge of the Butte field office, recently.

Tips concerning the case have come to FBI agents from all parts of the nation, the letter said. Each tip had to be investigated thoroughly on the chance it might be "the right dope."

Charles Mattson, 10, was kidnaped from his home at Tacoma, Wash., and was held for $28,000 ransom on December 27, 1936. His body was recovered near Everett, Wash., on January 11, 1937. The case is one of two unsolved kidnappings on FBI records. The other case was that of Peter Levine of New Rochelle, N. Y., kidnaped February 24, 1938.

There are approximately 300,000 safety signs on Kansas highways, erected at a cost of about $8 each.

HIS GIRL FRIEND WAS NOT IMPRESSED

Cleveland, (AP)—A 21-year-old Clevelander, charged with robbing two postal sub-stations, phoned government inspectors and offered to surrender if they would allow him to give up "sensationally" to show his girl friend he was not a sissy.

The youth said they should come to a friend's house. There, he said, he would dash out the rear door and stop, pretending he was cornered in the back yard.

The cautious inspectors, however, stationed a man at the rear door. The youth dashed, was confronted by what he called "the biggest pistol you ever saw."

The girl wasn't awed.
