FDR PROPOSES FRANK TALKS ON PROBLEMS

Disposed to have Full Discussion of Neutrality

CONFERENCE SET FOR LATE TODAY

Landon Expresses View That Congress Should Remain in Session Throughout Current Emergency

Washington, Sept. 20. (AP)—President Roosevelt was represented today as being "disposed to have a very free and frank discussion" of neutrality at his meeting with congressional and political leaders this afternoon.

This was the statement made by Stephen Early, White House press secretary, as one of the conferees. Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican standard bearer, expressed the belief that Congress, meeting tomorrow, should remain in session during the emergency period of the European war.

"There is a definite feeling," Landon said, "that Congress should stay in session. There is more confidence in united judgment of the representatives than in any one man's opinion. So much depends on the slender thread of incidents that we want Congress to stay in session."

Landon said he intended to emphasize this point in discussion with the President, if given an opportunity.

The 1936 Republican presidential nominee also declared that sentiment in the middle west, as disclosed in mail he has received, appeared to be "very strong" for an extension of the cash-and-carry methods of sales to belligerent nations. He declined, however, to say whether he was in favor of including arms, now embargoed, in such sales.

There has been a "very interesting shift" in sentiment in the last two weeks, Landon said, from a "fatalistic conviction that we would get into the war in the end" to "a definite shift in the past two weeks that we are not going to get into it."

The bi-partisan meeting, set for late this afternoon, was expected to receive a presidential plea for quick and united action in the special session.

Attack Is Fatal To Snodde A. Smith

Snodde Augustus Smith, 54, died suddenly this morning at 4:30 o'clock from a heart attack at his home here, 1201 Cotanche street.

Funeral services will be conducted from the late home at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon by the Rev. William A. Ryan, his pastor. Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery. Masons will officiate at the services.

He was born in Pitt county and for the past 26 years had lived in Greenville. He was employed in the Norfolk and Southern freight depot for 15 years and for the past eight years had been distributor for Watkins products.

Surviving are his wife and three children, Raymond L. and Leslie D. Smith of Greenville and Mrs. Francis W. Davis of Durham; three brothers, Marshall and Henry Smith of Pitt county and Arthur Smith of Tarboro; two sisters, Mrs. George Smith of Morehead City and Mrs. Gus Haddock, Pitt county; also one grandchild.

Masons will serve as active pallbearers.

PITT FARMERS CALL MEETING

Session to be Devoted To Tobacco Situation

A county-wide meeting of farmers to be held Friday night, September 22, at 8 o'clock in the Pitt county court house, was called last night by more than 100 farmers from all townships in the county in a special meeting held here.

There has been a "very interesting shift" in sentiment in the last two weeks, Landon said, from a "fatalistic conviction that we would get into the war in the end" to "a definite shift in the past two weeks that we are not going to get into it."

Lines Been Set For Armies of Occupation of Two Invading Countries, With Germans Retiring From Certain Positions and Reds Taking Their Place

Berlin, Sept. 20. (AP)—The Supreme high command disclosed today that Germany and Soviet Russia have reached an agreement on the partition of Poland, at least so far as their armies of occupation are concerned.

That the demarcation line has been set was announced in a high command communique, however, it did not say where the line runs.

It asserted the German forces would withdraw from their present positions, after "destruction of the last remnants of the Polish army there." To the demarcation line, definitely fixed between the German and Russian governments.

Whether this line lies east or west of Warsaw was not indicated. The communique said German forces had advanced to a line from Stryl, in southeast Poland, north near the industrial city of Lwow, then almost straight north to Brzesc, about 150 miles from the Soviet frontier, and up to Bialystok, about 150 miles from the Russian border.

The entire Rumanian frontier bordering southeast Poland is in Russian hands.

Presumably as the Germans retire the Red army will take their place by advancing westward from their present positions. Whether the army occupying areas later will become the new boundaries between Germany and Russia was a moot question.

Informed quarters intimated this question was not yet completely solved.

Germany's "lightning war" was considered here at an end except for mopping up activities in Poland. The Poles, however, were still fighting south of a fortified town immediately north of Warsaw.

The handful of Polish troops who gave the Germans some trouble yesterday on the heights back of Gdynia, Polish port at the end of the corridor, gave up last night.

IL DICE SAYS WAR 'USELESS'

Rome, Sept. 20. (AP)—Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia published today an implied appeal to Britain and France to come to terms with Germany.

"Italians' sensibility tempered by thousands of years again points out the right road," the paper said, referring to earlier peace suggestions made in Rome.

"The whole civilized world may once more see how correct were the visions and proposals of Rome," the paper declared. "The war was as disastrous for Poland as it was tragically useless. Now that that prediction is fulfilled in the East, the same word of good sense may be repeated for the West."

Italy announced the withdrawal of her troops from the Albanian-Greece frontier as evidence of "complete reciprocal trust" between Italy and Greece.

The gesture came as Italy seemed to be solidifying her position as the leader of the neutral states of Southern Europe.

Hull Replies to Reynolds Criticism About Returning Americans From Europe

Washington, Sept. 20. (AP)—The Agriculture Department indicated today any move to support flue-cured tobacco prices this year dependent upon farmers approving marketing quota regulations on 1940 production.

In a series of questions and answers sent to growers in Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Georgia, the department said the reason for an early grower election, expected to be held between September 30 and October 7, was to determine whether producers were "willing" to agree to regulation.

"If farmers are willing to support the program by voting in quotas, then the government can take action on a sound basis to support prices on the grades usually purchased by the foreign countries which have withdrawn their buyers," the statement said.

Other Washington developments: Secretary Hull, replying to a criticism by Senator Reynolds (D-N.C.) of State Department efforts to bring back Americans from Europe, said today "We do our best to keep our feet; if we have fallen down, we are not conscious of it."

Hull permitted direct quotation in reply to Reynolds' assertion that the government "had fallen down miserably" in providing transportation for Americans.

The WPA began a three-point program to bolster national defense, cushion effects of the European war fall demand for work relief.

Officials instructed state WPA administrators to give special emphasis to projects of particular defense value. These include municipal airports, bridges and surface highways, and local armories.

Washington headquarters started a close study of field reports to determine where the volume of relief employment could be adjusted to changing demands for private labor.

Joseph Dalinda, dealer in patents for munitions products, told the Dies committee that he had expected to get $150,000 in Soviet money for his part in a deal for the building in America of a large battleship for Russia.

At the same time the Russian-born promoter said his interest was "not entirely financial."

The battleship project fell through when Russia rejected the plans, but Dalinda got $20,500, he said, for his part in bringing together a Soviet agent and an alleged "contact" man who were to aid in getting State.

Bogus Coins Being Passed In County

Chief of Police George Clark and members of the State Highway Patrol today were making an effort to apprehend a man and woman who passed two counterfeit half-dollars at the filling station of Woodrow Haddock near Winterville last night.

Chief Clark said the couple, both well-dressed, went to the filling station and purchased five gallons of gasoline, giving the attendant the spurious money in payment of the motor fuel.

Haddock did not detect the bogus money until after the couple had left the station, but rushed to Greenville and furnished the police with a good description of the couple and left the money with Chief Clark. The Greenville police chief said he intended turning the money over to secret service agents.

Asserts Britain's Purpose Is to Redeem Europe from Fear of German Aggression

Replying to Hitler's Danzig Speech of Yesterday, Prime Minister Chamberlain Says No Threats "Will Deter Us and Our French Allies" From Aim

London, Sept. 20. (AP) Prime Minister Chamberlain declared in the House of Commons today that Britain's general war purpose was "to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and liberties."

Replying to Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech yesterday, the prime minister said: "No threats will deter us or our French allies from this purpose."

"Her Hitler said much in his speech about the humane methods with which he has waged war," Chamberlain continued. "I can only say that methods are not made humane by calling them so, and accounts of German bombing of open towns and machine-gunning of refugees have shocked the whole world."

It was the prime minister's third weekly report on the conflict. He announced that the government calculated 139 British and neutral lives had been lost so far from submarine attacks, excluding sinking of the aircraft carrier Courageous, and that an additional 44 persons were reported missing. The admiralty reported 578 missing from the Courageous.

Chamberlain told the House, "It is still too early to pronounce any final verdict" on what he termed Soviet Russia's "cynical attack" on Poland.

He also declared Hitler's speech "does not change the situation with which we are confronted."

With Soviet Ambassador Matsky leaning forward from the gallery, Chamberlain declared for Poland, "the unhappy victim" of Russia's attack. "The result has been a tragedy of the grimmest character."

SCRAP DEALER PAYS $25 FINE

Asks That Case Be Tried After Being Continued

After all cases involving charges of dealing in scrap tobacco without a license had been continued, except those which were not prosed, in County court yesterday morning, J. E. Pierce appeared and declared he wanted the case against him settled.

Judge Dink James ordered the defendant to pay a fine of $25, costs to be deducted, and imposed a 30-day sentence, suspended upon condition the defendant not deal in any scrap tobacco for 18 months without a license.

After working through yesterday afternoon, the court reconvened at 9 o'clock this morning to complete its week's work.

Clarence Tripp was given six months, suspended upon payment of costs and on condition that he not drive for eight months or then, until he procures a license, after pleading guilty to driving without a license.

Will Vise Leave Poland This Size?

Although not regarded as official, some significance is attached to this map of German origin which has been distributed at Cernauli, Rumania. This map indicates creation of a buffer state of Poland between Germany and Russia, a state, incidentally, squeezed quite dry by the Nazi-Soviet vice, since Poland's former major industrial areas would be gone and her Danzig outlet to the sea would be in Germany.

Revivals Are Planned For the Entire Synod

Richmond Pastor Delivers Morning Sermon

The Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina, meeting here in East Carolina, Teachers' College, this morning, heard an address from the Rev. John Allen McLean, D.D., pastor of Glen Park Presbyterian Church, Richmond, Va., on the subject of evangelism; and a committee was appointed with the Rev. P. D. Miller, D.D., of Raleigh, as chairman, which made plans for a synod-wide revival in the spring.

The regular monthly meeting of Pitt County Post No. 39, American Legion, last night was featured by the installation of new officers and a discussion of plans and the naming of committees for inauguration ceremonies for state officials here Sunday and Monday, October 15 and 16.

J. H. Rose will be inducted into the office of state commander at the ceremonies next month and an elaborate program is being planned for the occasion.

At the same time, state officials of the American Legion Auxiliary also will be installed here. Mrs. Arthur B. Corey is general chairman of arrangements for the women's division.

New officers of the local post who were inducted into office last night were T. J. Swain, commander; Paul A. Scott, first vice commander; Asa W. Moore, second vice commander; S. H. Crandall, third vice commander; S. L. Bridges, adjutant; J. B. Kirtland, finance officer; Dr. J. W. Winstead, service officer; K. T. Putrell, guardianship officer; I. W. Netherlands, sergeant at arms; H. H. Duncan, chaplain; Dr. A. M. Schultz, historian; A. E. Gibson, athletic officer; K. T. Putrell, child welfare officer; Jack Edwards, Americanism officer; E. S. Williams, grave registration officer; G. P. Riegan, employment officer; Arthur B. Corey, membership chairman; D. J. Whitehead, Jr., publicity officer; J. H. Rose, Sons of the Legion officer. Dr. J. L. Winstead is retiring commander.

Although details for the state inauguration ceremonies have not been completed, the local post is making extensive plans for the event, at which Mr. Rose will be the principal honoree. Headquarters will be at the Proctor hotel and visiting legionnaires are expected to start arriving Saturday night, October 14, and continue coming in through Sunday. A luncheon for the executive committee is being arranged for noon Monday, to be followed in the afternoon by a parade and a dance Monday night.

States Aim To Continue Strife Until Victory Won

Government Adopts Measures to Pursue War to Definite Victory; Communique Implies Stern Objections to German Overtures for Peace on Nazi Terms

Paris, Sept. 20. (AP)—The French government, facing collapse of its Polish ally under combined German and Russian assaults, adopted measures today to pursue the war "to definite victory."

Premier Daladier's new War Ministry at the same time reaffirmed its union with Great Britain and pledged that Poland, now facing dismemberment, would eventually be reconstituted.

French attention shifted to the Aachen sector opposing Belgium, where the Germans were reported massing reinforcements coming in from Poland. The French asserted precautions already had been taken to meet any German repetition of the 1914 attack through Belgium to outflank the Maginot line.

The cabinet communique, which was the first formal statement of French policy since the start of the European conflict September 3, implied stern objection to any German overtures for peace or Nazi terms such as were read here into Adolf Hitler's speech at Danzig yesterday.

The new measures approved by the cabinet were described in the communique as "military, economic and financial." Their exact nature will become known only upon publication in the official journal.

On the western front, where the French general staff's morning communique reported only German artillery fire, the armies appeared to have been held in less pending clarification of the diplomatic situation.

The French press reported dispatches from Brussels reporting that Germans were concentrating around Aachen, which, it was pointed out, was a direct route leading to the fronts, further south, where the French and German armies are fighting.

The French general staff, watching the situation closely, was reported taking precautions to meet any eventuality.

Pitt Schools Plan Additional Work

The office of the Pitt County Board of Education today disclosed that the principals of the county schools have decided to undertake the first interscholastic contests in declamation, debating and dramatics art.

It was explained that the declamation contests would be conducted in the elementary schools, while debating and dramatics would be confined to each of the 12 high schools in the county. This will be the first time that such an educational venture has been undertaken by the county schools.

D. H. Conley, superintendent of the county schools, said the purpose of the program is to "give students training in self-expression in appearances before the public."

County principals composing a committee to supervise the activities of the program are W. M. Jenkins of Ayden, R. H. Forrest of Pocolinus and J. W. Webster of Arthur.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Wednesday, September 20, 1899

Washington, D. C.—The chief interest in the national reception to Admiral Dewey in this city, will center around the illuminated parade on the evening of October 2, and the presentation of the sword voted by Congress to the Hero of Manila, on the afternoon of the next day. A large amount has been raised by popular subscription and arrangements have been made that will render the occasion unique among the many receptions to distinguished men which Washington has witnessed in the past.

Miss Lillian Carr returned this morning from a visit to LaGrange. Miss Sallie Lipscomb returned Tuesday evening from a visit to Raleigh. Mrs. T. B. Wilkinson of Raleigh, arrived Tuesday evening to visit relatives in Greenville.

To do fitting honor to a guest, some Arabs believe, they must serve freshly-killed meat. The servant of a sheik will bring in a lamb or kid—alive—so that the visitor may see what an excellent animal it is. Then it is killed for the evening meal.

Jimmie And Jean Admire Those Airplane Models

"Whoopie! Airplane models!" The screen door closed with a loud bang. The children, excited when they saw the walls of the Greenville WPA Art Gallery walls covered with model airplanes, did not notice how much enthusiasm they were showing in entering the room.

"You children have been here before, haven't you? Your faces look familiar."
"Don't you remember us? We're Jimmie and Jean. We came to see the Indian things last week, you know."

"Of course! Please excuse me this time, because there have been several hundred people here since your last visit, and it's a little difficult to fit the names to so many new faces."
"Aw, we don't care 'bout that. We want to see these models. Who made them?"
"All 'em made by the nine Greenville boys who call themselves the Hub City Modelers. They are Richard Duncan, G. A. Taylor, Jr.,

"Yeah, and sometimes these gas models are covered over with sheet balsa, silk or bamboo paper. This is covered with bamboo paper. Look! It has real air wheels that you pump up with a bicycle pump, but the wheels don't have any inner tubes. I see it has a shock-absorbing landing gear, too."

"Jimmie, I see that you know a lot about airplane models. Tell me some more. How long do you think this one would stay up on a single flight?"
"Jimmie's face flushed, but he managed to overcome his modesty and answer, "Oh, sometimes they stay up for several hours. But that's a hard question to answer, for they have been known to fly away and never be seen any more, so I guess nobody could say what the longest flight has been."

"Do you know, Jimmie, that many people find it hard to believe that these planes really do fly? Often they have never heard of model airplane contests. Of course you know about the annual nationals at Detroit. The club members tell me that the Korda was the winner there last year. We have three models of the Korda in this show."

"Yes, but I betcha this is a good flier," going over to "Ol' Reliable," and I am right. The label says that it holds the club record of two minutes, eight seconds, with an average of 45 seconds since it was made last May."

"One of the members explained to me that in flying these planes the idea is to get them high, and then they have a long way to glide. There usually are air currents under clouds. If the planes get in one of these air currents they are lucky, for then they may stay up a long time in the current."

"Sure, I've known 'em to fly almost out of sight! Jitterbug here flew two miles one time, the label says."

Jean ventured a question, "How do they get them up so high?"
"I've helped 'em wind them up," answered Jimmie. "They have a winder, or drill, stretch the rubber bands way out, several feet and wind as they stretch. This gives them a grand send-off."

"Did you young people notice these planes called ornithopters?"

Ornithoptery is the scientific study of the structure, habits, etc., of birds. These planes get the name from this term. They have a swivel device in front which is wound up, and when released causes the plane to fly like the flapping of the wings. This type of flying is passing through an experimental stage.

"The rotor plane is something they are trying out, too. Here's one half made. It's such an unusual idea to have revolving wings that look like long cups. You see, these cups are supposed to furnish the lift that is provided by the rib-shape in the wings of the other planes."

By this time Jean had become bored and had wandered over to the window seats where she was absorbed in looking at the pictures of planes that the club members had clipped from time to time.

The gallery attendant picked up the conversation here:

"There is something to admire about every plane here. The boys are to be congratulated on their splendid work. Jimmie, if you and Jean are through looking at the planes perhaps you would like to sit here at the table and look at the snapshots one of the boys took of his planes, and these magazines are full of airplane information. I have not forgotten about the promise to show you the puppets and sketches, but they will have to wait for your next visit."

"Well, we can wait for that—then we will have something to look forward to."

"Fine! But you will always have something to look forward to at the art gallery. Thursday we are going to hang up some oil paintings by Cervantez, an artist of Texas."

The attendant was interrupted. "Lady, are these planes for sale?"
"Turning, she saw a seven-year-old boy with shining eyes.

"No, but if they were, which one would you choose?"
"Eyes upon the large gas model, he answered without hesitation: "That one. I do want one so bad."
"You will have to make one for yourself some day. That's what these boys did."

Citadel-Carolina Game To Be A Duel Of Stars

Contest Expected To Develop In Aerial Battle

By TOM BOST, JR.
Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 20.—Several brilliant individual duels will hold the spotlight here Saturday when The Citadel and University of North Carolina eleven clash at 2:30 o'clock in the opening game for both elevens.

The contest is expected to develop into an exciting aerial battle with George Strinweis and "Sweet" Jim Lalaine, ringmasters of Carolina's aerial circus, pitching against Graham Edwards, Charlie Sims and Hank Foster of the Light Brigade.

Another duel of extraordinary interest will be between the colorful, pass-snagging ends of the two elevens. Best of these are Citadel's Bob David and Jake Burrows, and North Carolina's Paul Severin, Jim Mallory and Chuck Kline. Severin and Burrows come by their pass-snagging naturally, both are basketball stars; and likewise Mallory, who is a brilliant centerfielder in baseball.

Another colorful performance is expected when Citadel's corps of fleet-footed backs match speed, elusiveness and cunning with Carolina's hard-running veterans. Heading Citadel's "Mercuries" are Charlie Sims, a Charlotte boy; John Howard, willow-hipped quarterback; Elmer Browning, a slender halfback and Dan Stubbs, a flashy, driving fullback. Strinweis, Lalaine, George Radman, Mike Bobbitt, Don Baker and Sid Sadoff lead the Carolina attack.

Athletic officials here are preparing to handle a near capacity "High School Day" crowd of more than 20,000. This is the first time that Carolina has erected extra bleachers for an opening game. Approximately 12,000 seniors are expected for the game and attendant High School Day program.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker
New York—They are tearing down an old brick building in the Fifties. . . . If you walk along the street you see "danger" signs, urging you to beware of falling boulders. . . . The brickbats really are a menace, unless you keep to the yonder side of the street. They fall with little regard to whom or what they hit. . . . It so happened that I came along during the lunch hour, and a big, bald Greek, about 40, was sitting with his back against the half-raised brick wall, in the broiling sun, wolfing his lunch. He turned around and cracked his left elbow, and when he did this a fellow-worker looked up and smiled. "You're lucky," he said, "striking your left elbow is always good luck." . . . With something akin to a growl, the Greek said—Well, I better not quote this Greek verbatim; it wouldn't do in a family newspaper. . . . And he said several things, and wound up by saying that he was always unlucky, that he had never had a single stroke of luck in his life. . . . Strike me if the words weren't still on his lips when a loose brick, from high above, toppled off the wall and landed on the pavement a

160 POUND BOY CITADEL HOPE

Graham Edwards All-State Halfback Last Season

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 20.—Graham Edwards weighs only 160 pounds but his football career at The Citadel is about the best news "story" ever to come from the gym of South Carolina's military college. Edwards was an all-state halfback last season and he is The Citadel's most promising candidate for All-Southern Conference honors this year.

His accuracy as a pass-thrower and his ability as a punter and a ball carrier was widely recognized in the South last fall by newspapermen and coaches alike.

When Graham entered The Citadel as a freshman from Wilmington, N. C., he and a lot of other former high school athletes turned out for the freshman football team.

The coaches looked at Edwards, chucking to themselves and felt like patting him on the head. He was too small to play college football, they told him. You gotta be a big fellow to play college football these days, they said.

So Graham didn't play football. The next year, his sophomore year, he didn't even try to get a uniform. He just stayed in barracks and reflected on his high school days and looked forward to his first love, the baseball season.

At The Citadel, a mammoth intramural program was inaugurated just before Edwards entered college. In the spring of his sophomore year he decided to play some football with his company in the intramural competition.

foot from where he was sitting. . . . Twelve inches to the left and he would have been a dead bird. . . . "See what I mean," cried the Greek, holding his eye. "A piece of that brick broke off and hit me in the eye. Lucky!" I don't quote what else he said right then either, because neither would that do in a family newspaper.

The early bustle of a big metropolitan hotel lobby about 5 o'clock in the morning is an illustration of how like machinery a well-organized staff can become. . . . There aren't any people registering except a-stray now and then, because the trains and the planes don't come in at 5 o'clock. They leave to a little earlier, and also a little later, and thereafter for the rest of the day. But 5 o'clock is a curiously dead hour in the lobbies of New York except for employees. . . . But there are more employees than you can find on an Empire State WPA project. . . . They shine that lobby as if it were a hoarded gem. . . . They sweep the carpets as though princess brides were going to trail their orange blossoms across it. . . . They dust and they mop, they get it so spick and span that usually one of the assistant managers strolls through and drops a cigarette stub, or a piece of chewing gum wrapper, on the floor, just to keep it from being perfect. After that everything's okay. Next time you're owing around at that hour, drop by one and observe this early morning drama yourself.

Heat Waves Mean Hot Slugging For League Leader John Mize

JOHN MIZE: His Hits Come When They Count

(By the AP Feature Service)
ST. LOUIS — Long John Mize, the corn-fed farm boy from Jawia, found his hitting eye early enough this summer for a slugging spurge that has brought him the National league batting championship.

At least the socking crown is apparently all wrapped up and waiting for Long John to pick it up come October 1st. As the senior circuit campaign moved into the home stretch Mize was hitting .365 and had a lead of some 30 points on his nearest challenger.

This is John Robert Mize's fourth year as first baseman for the St. Louis Cardinals. In other seasons he has had to play second fiddle to Joe (Ducky) Medwick but John has always thought he was a better hitter than handsome Joe and now he has some figures to back up his claim. The Cards will hear of these when contract signing time rolls around.

John has come close to winning the batting championship in two of his first three seasons in the majors. He was runner-up to Medwick with a .364 average two seasons ago. Last year he trailed Ernie (Shoosie) Lombardi of Cincinnati by a few points with a .337 mark.

As a freshman in 1936 John hit .329. In 1937 he hit .317. He's never hit lower than .317. He's 26, stands 6 feet 1 1/2 inches tall, and weighs 205.

Long John, big and burly, has slanting eyes and a round face. He is a left-handed pull hitter. His stance at the plate is similar to that which Babe Ruth employed, with both feet closer together than is common. In four big-league years he has a composite batting average of about .350. Better than the lifetime marks of all the other sluggers still active.

Cincinnati had a chance at Mize before he came up with the Cardinals. The Reds paid $55,000 for Mize on a conditional sale from Rochester in 1934 and 1935. He's never hit lower than .317. He's 26, stands 6 feet 1 1/2 inches tall, and weighs 205.

Johnny can't explain why he never starts hitting until hot weather comes. What a batting average he might have if his all-year pace was as torrid as that he sets in August and September.

NEED MARKETS HANDLE FRUIT

Northern Terminals Are Badly Over-Crowded

Raleigh, Sept. 12.—The tremendous pressure now being exerted on overcrowded northern fruit and vegetable terminals could be relieved immeasurably by the establishment of regional markets, J. W. Johansen, extension economist in farm organization at State College, said today. The setting up of these minor markets would alleviate traffic congestion, lessen some of the price decline brought about by overloading the larger markets, and eliminate a portion of the back-haul, thereby saving highways some unnecessary traffic.

These regional markets should be located strategically in relation to the movement of fruits and vegetables toward the larger markets, Johansen said.

If, for example, certain cities in North Carolina happen to be situated on highways over which pass large amounts of market-bound produce, they would have some of the necessary factors that would determine the location of regional markets.

Another important factor determining location would be a network of highways leading out to nearby consuming centers surrounding the contemplated location.

Because of the importance of modernizing the large fruit and

Tells of Submarine Aattack

His arm in a sling, this stoker of the British aircraft carrier Courageous, which was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine, is shown relating to the wife of another sailor and a friend the story of his rescue. nation's eligible cotton growers is required to continue quotas in effect for 1940. The 1939 quota was approved by 84.1 per cent of the growers voting.

Floyd pointed out that the national cotton quota proclaimed by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace for 1940 is the same as for 1939. This will make possible, with normal yields, the marketing within the quota of approximately 12 million bales during the year beginning August 1, 1940.

The conservation phases of the Agricultural Conservation program will continue to operate regardless of the outcome of the December 9 referendum, the AAA officer stated. However, marketing quotas assure growers participating in the AAA farm program who plant within their acreage allotments that their efforts to adjust supplies will not be nullified by non-cooperators." Floyd said.

Farmers who plant within their acreage allotments will be able to market all of the cotton they produce on their allotted acreage without penalty.

WE MUST TAKE THE MEDICINE

Despite the fact that there are many who ordinarily are opposed to the principles involved in the government's crop control programs, it seems to us that when the new vote is taken on control of next year's flue-cured tobacco production the farmers have no choice but to vote in favor of the program.

With a bumper crop of tobacco this year and with the markets closed because of the withdrawal of the British buying companies, the government has been asked to give its aid to the growers in order to prevent the remainder of the crop being sold at disastrously low prices. The government has expressed its willingness to give all the aid possible to prevent severe losses to the growers. It can be readily understood, however, that the government can take no steps to care for this year's surplus with the possibility of another surplus in prospect, therefore it is necessary for the growers to first prove their willingness to reduce next year's production to a reasonable poundage.

As a rule children don't like the castor oil, but when they eat green apples the medicine is necessary before they can recover from their pains, and the present plight of the tobacco farmer is very similar. Whether our growers like crop control or not, it appears to us that it is now the only way out for them. They may not like the medicine but it is necessary to relieve them of their now present pain of a bumper crop and no one to sell it to.

Washington Daybook
By Preston Grover
Washington—Maybe our own observations are limited but it is dawn upon us that we are not often finding Gideon Bibles in hotel rooms any more.

People who live about in hotels and chance to take a moment to look in the upper right hand bureau drawer will tell you that once upon a time you could bank on finding a Bible there, printed in large type so it could be read by a light swaying to the blast of an electric fan.

Out West we used to cruise about and scarcely ever did we fail to find a Bible. It became sort of a rite with us, first to turn on all the lights and then to hunt for it.

We have found the Bible in the Colonial hotel in Denver, the Bonanza Hotel in Idaho Falls, and the

YESTERDAY Lance Carroll drew Tim out of his shell. Their friendship helps Tim's standing in Boulder. After her parents leave, Buff enters into an active social life.

Chapter 15 - Soapy Buffs

BUFFS cozy apartment was filled with a laughing group of young people. Van, one of Buff's satellites, aroused Tim's disapproval at once.

"What do you do?" Tim asked him.

"I model in soap."

"You—what?"

"Model in soap. It's one of the newer arts. Soap is a softer medium than marble and—though this shouldn't be taken into consideration—less expensive. I'm doing a rather good thing of Buff now: three inches high, full length."

"Does she know it?"

The artist shook his head.

"My dear, no, and I hope you won't tell her; it ruins spontaneity to have the model conscious of posing. Here a little and there a little—her upflung arm one day, her ankles another—"

Tim found the idea of this person's concern with Buff's ankles singularly repellent.

"What," he demanded, "shall you do with your figure when it's completed?"

"Sell it. Oh, I always sell my things," he went on cheerfully. "Not for anything like their true value, of course, but even a sculptor must eat. There's a gift shop in town which handles my work with some profit to us both."

"And how much do you expect to get for this masterpiece?"

"A dollar and eighty cents," sighed Van. "The shop takes the rest as his commission."

"Not this one!" Tim spoke sharply. "So far as any figures of Miss Carroll are concerned, they're already sold to me."

The artist grinned and ran his fingers through his hair, increasing his appearance of artistic dishevelment.

"Opens a nice little avenue for blackmail, if you get me! But Art comes first with me always. Before I execute your commissions—oh, joy and gladness, at last! In order to get the commission of words—I have to know what you will do with the figures."

"Dissolve 'em in water!"

Van shook his head. "There goes a weekly payment on my grocery bill," was his mournful comment. "I was afraid you were like that. D'you think I'm going to toil with skill and a paring knife for hours to have you make a suds of Buff? Nay, not so, and no, no, Nette!"

"Then I'll keep 'em," Tim promised recklessly. "Not more than one a week, however; and aside from not destroying 'em, it's none of your business what I do with 'em, is it perfectly clear?"

"Perfectly," Van scrambled to his feet and raised his voice, waving a long arm toward the seething Tim. "Friends, behold my patron! I have a weekly commission from him—indeed, on the strength of funds to come I invite you all to eat scrambled eggs and salted fish on Saturday night. I know if I held on long enough success would surely come!"

Tim, feeling as though he had borne as much of this sort of thing as he could, departed abruptly.

A few days a small box was delivered at his boardinghouse. It was plastered with labels, warning all beholders that it was "Fragile," "Perishable," "Breakable," but its flimsy container was little or no protection to the figure within. Tim took it out and viewed it carefully, hoping or fearing that several serious accidents en route accounted for its appearance. If it was as it had left the creator's hands, then Tim was paying two perfectly good dollars a week for practically nothing at all; for by no stretch of the imagination could Buff be recognized in the weird object thus disclosed. Beyond the fact that it was female and presumably human, it looked like nothing on earth.

"Booby Prize?"

WEEKS came in and found him staring at it.

"Booby prize at a baby party?" was his cheerful inquiry. "Soap isn't it? I don't advise using it, Tim. You might cut yourself on all those sharp lines."

Tim put it on his closet shelf. "I think you're right, George. Don't be surprised if you see more of them appear. It's my way of contributing to the Community Chest, that's all."

He took occasion to make a tour of the gift shops in the town. In a window he found several of the soap figurines. Even while his surprised gaze rested on the display a clerk's hand withdrew the most hideous. Presently a woman came out, bearing triumphantly a parcel which Tim was sure contained one of the VanLander masterpieces.

Tim wandered away in a trance. "That makes three dollars and eighty cents he's earned—earned! Good Lord!—this week. I suppose on the strength of it he will give several parties. And I thought Buff was a sensible girl!"

Sheer curiosity took him back to see her a few days later. He approached the subject of VanLander cautiously.

"I met an artist here last week," he told her. "Have you seen any of his work?"

He was relieved to hear her denial. "He's invited me up to his apartment to see a display of it, but I've been too busy to go. He says he's very successful, however. A sudden thought occurred to her. "Didn't I hear him announcing that you had become his patron? You must have been very favorably impressed by his work!"

Tim found himself in a dilemma. If he told her he was buying Van's productions in order to spare her the shame of being exhibited in soap to the eyes of Boulder, she would naturally wish to see these presentiments of herself. She was the daughter of Lance Carroll and really knew something about art. Tim wondered whether her wrath would fall upon his head for presuming to find a likeness to her in Van's laundry writhings, or for his colossal ignorance in encouraging the artist in what amounted to criminal activity in soap.

"I ordered some of his things before I saw them," he said at last. "I wish now I hadn't. They're beyond words."

"How d'you mean—beyond words?" She was curled in a deep chair, one foot under her, her chin propped on her hand. She asked the question with interest.

"They're like something a backward four-year-old might do if you encouraged him sufficiently. I... was led to believe they were—were otherwise."

Buff grinned at him. "Tim dear, you do not need me, don't you realize it? What you're trying to say is that Van told you he was doing me, and intending to display the figures in a shop window. So you came nobly to my rescue by buying up in advance anything he chooses to whittle. You're simply putting a premium on that sort of silliness. Suppose a couple of water colonists—and heaven knows the place is full of 'em!—confide to you that they're doing a profile, full face, or figure of me and intend to show their wares in a prominent place. Shall you immediately corner the market on all possible Buffs?"

"Male Clinging Vine"

HE muttered incoherently, once more rethinking himself the world's worst idiot.

She said briskly, "I'll speak to Van myself! Hush, I shall, too! After all, you were my guest and he took advantage of you."

Tim's jaw squared. "Still bent on taking care of me, are you Buff? I hoped you'd forgotten that foolish idea."

She put on her softest and most feminine expression.

"Tim, there's a gadget to the stove that neither Mrs. Webb nor I can understand. Personally, I'd just ignore it, but we-by fear—we'll be blown up in our beds some night. I wonder if you'd look at it and try to figure out what it's for?"

Presently he was tinkering happily with an oven thermometer which had temporarily forgotten its duties. By the time he had adjusted it, dinner was ready and they had set a place for him.

For one reason and another, he drifted into the hall of dining with Buff at least once a week sometimes oftener. George usually accepted the invitation for him. Also Tim could not quite rid himself of a sense of responsibility for this young girl who was staying in Boulder because of him, and had surrounded herself with a group of young people about whom he was a trifle dubious.

"That VanLander guy," George said thoughtfully one evening as they were driving out to Buff's. "He practically lives there, did you know it? He's a fool and Buff knows it; but he's leaning so hard on her that she's going all maternal and protective about him. She's a set-up for the male clinging vine I wish we could think of some way to give him the gate."

Somehow this anxiety on the part of the usually cheerful Weeks upset Tim. He remembered that Van had either been departing or arriving for the last half dozen times Tim himself had called. It was true that Buff had stopped what she called "Van's soapy sales" to the engineer. Van apparently harbored no resentment toward what he had counted on as a steady source of income. He remarked casually that he had sold "three Buffs," and the object of his artistic achievements gave Tim a reassuring nod.

"I've seen 'em," she said. "Nobody could possibly recognize me in fact one of 'em looks like the sheeted dead, the other two like a Cubist's nightmare. Rest easy Tim."

"What's it to Tim?" Van inquired casually. "You two engaged, or something?"

"It amounts to that," Buff said. "Which was why the paper next evening had a none-too-subtle paragraph to the effect that no Boulder swain need exert himself to woo the talented and charming visitor to their fair city since her affections were already engaged."

with something elevating to do.

There is a stern warning against taking the Bibles, a warning we have always felt obliged to heed. We have some special feeling that it is an extraordinarily evil thing to steal a Bible, even from a hotel room.

Our first discovery of the absence of Gideon Bibles was in Washington. At that time we lightly attributed it to the chance that hotels and the Gideon people had limited faith in politicians. In Washington they see all kinds and likely enough are most impressed by the worst.

But we missed the Bibles again

Our recent cruises have been mostly confined to the East. And our luck in finding Bibles has been increasingly poor.

You must understand that we do not keep the Bibles when we find them. The Gideon Society distributes them as a philanthropic enterprise to provide traveling salesmen and an occasional newspaper man

Hollywood.—Here's the question you'll be answering, with your dimes and quarters and half-dollars, during the next year:

With a big fuss going on across the water, and the world suffering a sick headache because of it, do you want your movies "neat" or "frilly"? Do you want to read and hear about war, and then—for relaxation and entertainment—go to a movie theater and see a movie about war? Or do you want to use that two to five hours (depending on whether your theater serves double or triple features) to get away from it all, to forget?

Hollywood would give more than a couple of plugged nickels for the answer, served hot and certain, at the moment. Hollywood doesn't know, and it has to guess.

There are going to be war pictures, certainly. Red-hot, from the news angle. "Thunder-Afloat," story of submarine warfare in the last war. Metro finished it just before the new fracas started. Red-hot, too, is Warner's "Espionage Agent," finished just before President Roosevelt turned over anti-spy activities to the FBI. First new (present) war story bought is "Bat-talion of Death," by John Monk Saunders, dealing with a "suicide organization" of Frenchmen who know they'd die soon regardless and decide to die for France instead. Paramount got it. Warner's "Fighting 69th," dealing with the New York regiment, is still under way, and Twentieth has announced "The Tanganyika Exploit," story of British heroism.

But the music-and-gaiety school of thought has its followers, too. Audiences—especially in war countries if their theaters are opened—will want to forget. They'll want music and comedy and pretty girls—and Hollywood is going to give them all three.

It would not be surprising to see the happy ending even more the rule than it is in normal times, nor to see a concentration on "human interest" and "heart" stories of the type of "Boys Town," "Four Daughters," the Hardy Family series—all of which serve to remind that, war or no war, the human animal has his decent, emotional side as well as his barbaric.

Action melodrama seems set for a hearty ride, too. Violence figures in practically all the "epic" movies, from the wild-westerns like the projected "Virginia City" (sequel to "Dodge City") to the heroic sagas like "The Real Glory" and "Four Feathers" and "The Light That Failed"—all of which are war although not THIS war. C. B. DeMille says he's going ahead with his elaborate "Northwest Canadian Royal Mounted" epic, with locations in at-war Canada, just as though nothing had happened.

But in the end, it's you with your coins who will decide which guesses were right.

And it wouldn't do any good to poll you now, because the movie-makers have to work two to six months in advance with their conjecturing.

And besides, what you think about it now may be just the opposite of what you'll be thinking—with your money at the box-office—half a year from now.

At best you're not predictable, and in a war-conscious world you're a formidable sphinx.

In Cleveland at the last Republican national convention. We stayed that time at the Cleveland hotel, a very top-flight hostelry. To be strictly non-partisan, we will add that we did not find any Bibles in the Ritz, Carlton nor the Bellevue-Stratford hotels in Philadelphia at the time of the Democratic convention.

It is possible the Bibles were whisked out in advance of the conventions. After all, they were designed to be saved for more or less constant travelers, like salesmen and not for random politicians.

Last year we found such Bibles in one of two hotels in which we stayed in Boston, but don't ask which. We can't remember the name of either.

New York has left us with a zero. Not a Gideon Bible have we found. But one friend, who says that once upon a time he did find a Gideon Bible on a dull evening, convinced himself that even Jesus at times had troubles with His press.

Jesus cured a dumb man at Sidon and urged that news of the miracle not be published, "but the more He urged, the wider published it was."

SHORT SHOTS

Raleigh, Sept. 20.—In his address of Monday night in opposition to changes in the current neutrality act, Congressman Harold D. Cooley delivered himself of some of the nicest alliteration heard in some time.

As a sample: "We ought not to mix babies with bullets, men with munitions, women with weapons."

State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson North Carolina's 1939 roadside

Neutrality Chief Commissioned

Basil Harris (right), veteran shipping expert, is shown in Washington as Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau handed him a commission placing him in charge of the treasury's neutrality enforcement machinery. Harris will be commissioner of customs and assistant to the secretary.

beautification law, providing, among other things, that no one may leave or keep any old automobile or automobile parts within 150 yards of a hard-surface highway unless hidden from sight by a fence, is about to get its first severe test.

In Durham on Arthur Mattox was convicted and ordered to remove the unsightly car or to build a fence as an alternative to getting a sentence. He has appealed to Superior court and indicated he'll go all the way to the Supreme court if he loses there.

Only three of North Carolina's 21 cities of more than 10,000 population consistently report their automobile accident figures to the National Safety Council.

The three are Raleigh, Greensboro and High Point, according to H. T. Sorenson, a field representative of the council.

"I think it is desirable for our whole citizenship to obtain a fuller knowledge of aviation, its problems and its advantages, and to give due attention to the men and women and organizations responsible for American air progress," said Governor Hoey in endorsing Air Progress Week.

"BUILD-UP": WAY TO EASE WOMEN'S PAINS

Many weak, run-down women are in a vicious circle. Their under-nourishment often leads to what is called functional dysmenorrhea and its symptoms—headaches, nervousness, irritability, intermittent cramp like pains—from which many women suffer. Sure way to break the vicious circle is by building strength and energy, which so many find may be done with the help of CARDUI. It stimulates appetite, aids digestion, and thus helps in this "build-up" of physical resistance. Women also report that, if taken just before and during "the time," CARDUI lessens the pain and discomfort of the period.

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS ITEM OCCASIONS SMALL COMMENT

It took WPA research workers to discover that the biggest news story in United States history received only two lines of small type in the Pennsylvania Evening Post when it occurred. On July 2, 1776, that journal recorded: "This day the continental congress declared the United States free and independent states."

One of the greatest needs in North Carolina is more milk cows on farms, says John A. Arey, dairyman of the State College Extension Service.

Armed Merchantman Brings Americans Home

First armed merchantman of a belligerent nation to reach the United States was the British liner Aquitania, which docked at New York with 1,825 passengers, 669 of them American. The Aquitania carries two guns for protection against sea raiders. One of the guns, canvas-covered, may be seen behind passengers in the foreground who are going through the customs.

Bridge Builders Speed Nazis

German labor troops such as these had a big hand in making it possible for the Nazi army to carry its "lightning war" into the heart of Poland with a speed that amazed observers. Good roads and bridges are few in Poland but work men preceded the heavy mechanized equipment, building highways and river spans as they went. This squad of workers (top) is carting trusses from a truck. They quickly shove the trusses into place across a stream (center) and tanks cross over (bottom) with little delay.

German War Birds Smash Way for Army in Poland

These pictures, taken "somewhere in Poland," show how German flyers go about conducting an air raid on a Polish city. Based in what appears to be a pasture, the aviators (upper left) study maps of the countryside and city chosen to be bombed. They gather up their fur flying suits (upper center) and take off (upper right). The lower left picture shows the planes arriving over the ill-fated town. Then one of the ships releases a bomb (arrow in lower center) and it strikes in the town (lower right), sending columns of smoke skyward. (Paramount News-Associated Press Photo).

Prince Is Killed

Reported killed in action somewhere in Poland was Prince Oskar of Prussia (above). 24-year-old grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany. He was the first of the Hohenzollern line to die for the Fatherland in the German-Polish war.

How Germans Took Poland by Surprise

This picture, taken by an official photographer with the German army, is typical of the "Blitzkrieg" or lightning war that brought the Nazis such quick success in their Polish campaign. Members of a German motorcycle unit are shown rushing into action through a shelter of trees after a rapid dash from the frontier over quiet country roads (straight into the heart of Poland. The photo was passed by both German and British censors and was flown to the United States. (Paramount News Associated Press Photo)).

'General Mud' Betrays the Polish Army

The Poles had counted on "General Mud" to bog down the German army invading their country. The roads of Poland are unpaved and the defenders confidently expected the fall rains to set in and transform the dusty highways into impassable lanes of mud. But the rain didn't come and Germany's highly mechanized army swept into the heart of the country without transportation handicaps. Here's one of the Nazi motorized units speeding over a typical Polish highway in the vicinity of Bydgoszcz. (Paramount News Associated Press Photo).

SPEAKS UP—"The President probably wants to get us into war on the Allies' side," said Sen. Brewster (D., N. D.) before the Senate. He thinks the President should wait until the situation is clear before deciding whether to aid the Allies.

Victim of Mine

Nan Etchison (above), 13, formerly of Richmond, Va., was drowned when the Norwegian freighter Emda struck a mine off the Netherlands coast and sank with a loss of 17 lives. Her mother was rescued. The child's father, John E. Etchison, Jr., lives at Ocala, Fla.

They Lived in the Path of Mars

These Polish lads seem to wonder why the heel of Mars should have crashed their home in Warsaw. According to the caption passed by the British censor, they're sitting beside the scattered belongings from their home after a raid by German bombing planes. (AP photo from Paramount News).

German Artillery Sweeps Through Burning Polish City

Through smoke that hides their guns, this German artillery detachment rolls through an underpass in a burning Polish city. At the left a cow watches placidly as the guns and drivers pass. (AP photo from Paramount News).

New York, Sept. 20.—(AP)—The speculative play in war stocks thinned out today after many had approached their recent peaks on an early push forward.

Gains of one to four in leading issues around the start were reduced to fractions or eliminated entirely in some cases. A few held advances of more than a point.

Volume approximated 2,200,000 shares.

Hood Voices Shakeup of Banking Supervision

By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Sept. 20.—North Carolina's Commissioner of Banks Gurney P. Hood is advocating a drastic shakeup in this country's present methods of bank supervision. His ideas of needed changes include abolishing the Federal office of Comptroller of the Currency, a concentration of supervisory powers in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and adoption of rules for supervision which will make procedure uniform for both State and National banks.

The Commissioner's ideas were presented to the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks at its 38th annual convention in Salt Lake City, Utah, this morning. Mr. Hood, who is president of the association, left a copy of his address to the convention for release from Raleigh. His talk was scheduled to have been delivered at 10 o'clock this morning.

The address was somewhat on the speculative side in that it pulled no punches in describing failure of the past and present systems of supervision to prevent the failure of large numbers of banks, both State and National, and in its blunt recommendations for measures which could be undoubtedly be followed by widespread repercussions.

Mr. Hood, as a preliminary to a twelve-point plan for the future, outlined history and development of the country's banking system, with particular emphasis on the tremendous proportion of banks chartered only to go out of existence later because, he said, of ineffective supervision.

Speaking early in his address of supervision exercised by the Comptroller of the Currency over national banks he asked rhetorically "is supervision effective?" and answered himself with an emphatic "No!"

He followed his analysis of failure on the Comptroller's part with equally damning facts and figures regarding the Federal Reserve System, and various state supervisory setups concluding in each case that methods of supervision have been woefully weak and inefficient.

His recommended remedies contemplate very largely a concentration of supervision in the comparatively recent innovation in the banking field, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, an agency which Mr. Hood has frequently lauded in the past and which he has held out as one of the outstanding accomplishments of the New Deal in improving banking conditions in the country generally.

His theme song of supervision is "uniformity," a theme clearly set out in one of his concluding paragraphs:

"There is no just reason why the United States government should have three separate agencies, all authorized to supervise banking institutions when one agency could do a much better job and would receive the better support of both depositors and stockholders."

Arguing for the FDIC as the logical agency to perform these functions he said:

"The logical Federal agent to perform this service (supervision) is the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, as it is the only Federal agency that has a direct interest in all of the banks represented. Its member banks must be kept sound or the corporation will fail. If the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation fails, it will be death knell of private ownership of banks in this country."

Outstanding among the dozen recommendations submitted by Mr. Hood were:

1. The office of the Comptroller of the Currency should be abolished and its duties and personnel transferred to the Federal Deposit Inurance Corporation.

2. Authority to examine state member banks by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System should be delegated to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the examining personnel of the Board transferred to the Corporation.

3. The ex-officio member of the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation should be eliminated and the appointment of a third full-time member of the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation should be eliminated and the appointment of a third full-time member authorized, the salaries of the three members to be not less than $15,000 a year each.

4. Congress should authorize the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to erect a suitable building in Washington, D. C., on the land adjoining the Federal Reserve Building to be occupied exclusively by it.

5. There should be created an advisory council to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation composed of representatives of National banks, state Federal Reserve System members, State Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation member banks not members of the Federal Reserve System and state supervisors.

6. Provision should be made for semi-annual examination of all nation banks by the FDIC.

7. Provision should be made for the annual examination by the FDIC of all State-chartered banks which are members of the corporation; and copies of the report of these examinations furnished the state supervisor of banks.

8. All supervision procedure in this country should be made uniform in its entirety.

9. That every endeavor be made to have directors and employees know their own institution thoroughly and have a knowledge of banking generally.
