

PRIME MINISTER OF RUMANIA ASSASSINATED

President Asks Repeal Of Arms Embargo Provision

DESCRIBES ACT AS DANGEROUS

Chief Executive, In Delivering Message At Opening of Special Session, Renews Plea for Non-Partisanship During Present Hour of International Crisis

Washington, Sept. 21. (AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today for repeal of the arms embargo provisions of the neutrality law because they are "most vitally dangerous to American neutrality, American security and American peace."

In a message delivered in person to an extraordinary session of the legislature, the chief executive said he could offer no hope that "the shadow over the world might swiftly pass."

Standing on the rostrum of a crowded House chamber, Mr. Roosevelt told senators and representatives he had assembled them to amend legislation which in his best judgment "so alters the historic foreign policy of the United States that it impairs the peaceful relations of the United States with foreign nations."

The "crux" of the issue, he said, was repeal of the embargo which forbids shipment of munitions to combatant nations and a "return to international law."

The President took occasion to renew his plea for non-partisanship during the present international crisis and to reassure the nation of his belief that America could keep from being embroiled in Europe's conflict.

"Let no man or group in any walk of life," the President said, "assume I conceive that regardless of party or faction the mantle of peace and of patriotism is wide enough to cover us all."

"Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace 'bloc.' We all belong to it."

Mr. Roosevelt added that "in my candid judgment," the United States would "succeed in these efforts" to keep out of war.

When and if the embargo is scrapped the President said there were other phases of policy "reinforcing American safety" that should be considered.

Restricting American merchant vessels so far as possible, from entering danger zones.

Preventing American citizens from traveling on belligerent vessels.

Requiring foreign buyers to take transfer of title in this country to commodities bought by belligerents. (Cash and carry).

Preventing extension of war credits to belligerents.

Two other objectives, the chief executive said, have been attained simply under the existing law. These are the regulation of collections of funds in this country for belligerents and the maintenance of a license system covering foreign trade in arms, ammunition and implements of war.

The President left to Congress, however, a choice of methods by which these "safeguards" should be set up—"so long as the method chosen will meet the needs of new and changing day to day conditions and dangers."

Buyer Committee

James S. Ficklen, president of the Tobacco Association of the United States, today named a committee to represent the buyers at a conference on the tobacco situation to be held in Washington in the near future.

A grower committee composed of J. E. Winslow of Greenville and Claude T. Hall of Roxboro already has been named. The two committees will confer with AAA officials.

FLYING BOATS SAVE CREW OF STEAMSHIP

London, Sept. 21. (AP)—The British government announced today that two Royal Air Force flying patrol boats had rescued the crew of 34 of the steamship Kensington Court, which sent out an SOS after having been attacked by submarines.

A Ministry of Information report said that the rescue "somewhere in the Atlantic ocean" was the first case in which an entire ship's crew had been picked up at sea by flying boats.

The Kensington Court was a 4,883-ton vessel owned by the Court Line. London was her port of registry.

Meantime, Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax declared, "We must not undertake anything that does not directly contribute to victory in the European war, in commenting on the failure of Poland to get help."

Speaking in the House of Lords, Lord Halifax said:

"One of the major tragedies of the last few weeks was that we should have had to watch the resistance of a gallant nation overrun without ourselves being able to render such direct assistance as might have produced different results. . . . I have felt it every hour and at every moment.

"But we must not lose sight of our main objective in this war—victory, and we must not undertake anything that does not directly contribute to that victory or which mitigates against it."

L. Burgin, minister of supply, at the same time told the House of Commons of creation of a war supply council and broad plans to use "every ounce of endeavor and ton of output" in Britain's drive to win the war.

Giving the nation a glimpse of the extent of the weapons Britain was forging, Burgin declared his department had placed orders for war supplies exceeding 30,000,000 pounds (currently $27,200,000) since the outbreak of hostilities.

Denies Germany Intends To Violate Neutrality

Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg Assured

Berlin, Sept. 21. (AP)—Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels gave foreign correspondents a vigorous denial of allegations that Germany intended to violate the neutrality of Belgium, the Netherlands or of Luxembourg.

"I am in a position to give a categorical, unequivocal and unconditional denial," said the propaganda minister in his first appearance before newsmen since Germany started her invasion of Poland, September 1.

"The German government never has, does not have now, nor intends in the future to violate the neutrality either of Belgium or Holland."

To a question whether this also applied to Luxembourg, the tiny duchy at the northern end of present German-French battle lines, Goebbels replied:

"Yes, you may include Luxembourg. Meanwhile the army high command reported only four centers of resistance to Nazi forces remained in Poland and Germans expected they would fall without shelling."

That the command believed that the remaining resistance was negligible already had been indicated by the departure for the western front of Colonel-General Von Brauchitsch, commander of the German army, to assume direction of the struggle with Great Britain and France.

The points still held by Poles, a high command communique said, included:

ALLIES CLAIM AIR VICTORIES OVER GERMANY

Successes Reported By French And English

MANY AIRPLANES ARE DESTROYED

Not Definitely Established Whether U. S. Made Airplanes Being Used by French

Paris, Sept. 21. (AP)—Military dispatches today reported French and British air pilots had brought down an undetermined number of German planes in the past few days in a series of victorious dog fights with German fliers over the Western front.

French communique, military sources said, had been limited only to those enemy planes which have fallen behind the French lines. They said the number of Germans who crashed was known to be "substantially more."

These sources said it was "possible" that some French planes in the air battle might have been those of the U. S. aircraft firms and purchased by France.

They declared it was difficult, however, to say definitely until detailed reports from the squadrons had been received at general staff headquarters.

The French War Ministry's evening communique of yesterday announced definitely that one German plane had fallen behind French lines. It was recalled also that military dispatches last Monday reported a French pilot had brought down three enemy ships by himself.

Air victories also had been reported previously during fighting in the Sierck sector September 15 when French planes were said to have driven German fighters out of the air.

(A German high army command communique issued today in Berlin reported eight enemy war planes and three captive balloons shot down on the Western front.)

Premier Daladier's office announced he would broadcast a statement to the French nation tonight at 8:30.

Last Rites Are Held For Mrs. W. H. Wood

Funeral services for Mrs. W. H. Wood, 53, who died suddenly of a heart attack Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock at her home in Ayden, were conducted this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from the late home by the Rev. W. H. Brunson. Burial was in Ayden cemetery.

Mrs. Wood was born at Bell Arthur and was a daughter of the late John and Margaret James Nichols.

Surviving are her husband, a daughter, Miss Willie Lee Wood; two sisters, Mrs. J. B. Pierce of Ayden and Mrs. Agnes Blount of Farmville, and three brothers, Bob, Ike and Jim Nichols of Pitt county.

THHEY FELT THE HEAT

Roanoke, Va. (AP)—It was the hottest day here in three years, but even that couldn't explain why two painters at work inside a new municipal building felt overheated.

"I don't know what's the matter with me today," said one. "I'm suffocating."

"I'm burning up, too," agreed the other.

They investigated, found the newly-installed furnace was being tested. Radiators were steaming hot.

Warsaw Radio Lapses Into Silence After Explosion

REVOLT IS REPORTED IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

London, Sept. 21. (AP)—British allegations of a "serious" revolt in Bohemia and Moravia parts of Czechoslovakia which Germany absorbed were cited today as backing British hopes of enlisting Germany's anti-Nazi in her fight against Hitler.

In Berlin British reports of an organized revolt were described as "nonsense" by a spokesman for Baron von Neurath, Reich's protector for Bohemia and Moravia. He invited correspondents to visit Prague to see for themselves.

The British did not give the sources of their information.

A ministry of information communique said Britain had received authoritative information that a revolutionary movement had started last Sunday in Bohemia and Moravia and was continuing despite "ruthless" repressive measures.

"That this is not just a flash in the pan," the ministry said, "is shown by the unanimity of purpose, the tenacity and the discipline of the participants."

It was recalled in London that Eduard Benes, former president of the Czechoslovak republic, told Prime Minister Chamberlain only two days after Britain's declaration of war:

"We Czechoslovak citizens consider ourselves as being also at war with Germany's military forces."

Polish President Held By Rumanian Officials

Action Had Been Urged by Nazis, Opposed by Allies

Bucharest, Sept. 21. (AP)—Authoritative sources said today that the Rumanian government had decided to intern Polish President Moscicki, Foreign Minister Beck and other high officials, as well as Marshal Smigly-Rydz, Polish army commander.

All had crossed the frontier from Poland into Rumania.

Smigly-Rydz was interned yesterday and sent to enforced domicile at a place near the junction of the Rumanian-Bulgarian frontier.

Both Britain and France had appealed that he be allowed to leave the country while Nazis insisted that he be interned like any other soldier.

It also was reported reliably yesterday that, after a complaint to the Rumanian police by the German Consul Cernauti, General Haller, founder of the Polish legion in France during the World war, had been interned by Rumanian authorities.

Authoritative sources said the new decision of this Rumanian government would be announced officially shortly, together with an explanation of the action as one of "strict neutrality" under international law.

Anthony Biddle, Jr., United States ambassador to Warsaw, arranged to leave tomorrow for Paris.

Store Is Entered And Goods Stolen

Cozart's store near the underpass on Dickinson avenue was broken into and robbed last night of 100 pennies, two sweaters, a pair of shoes, three cartons of cigarettes, a shirt and a gallon oil can. It was reported at city police headquarters today.

The robber was said to have broken the pane in a front window and to have crawled through the bars. The door was opened from the inside, it was believed.

Objected To Presence of Nazi Band in His Country

Premier Had Been Known as "Strong Man" of Rumania Because of His Suppression of Pro-Nazi "Iron Guard"; Telephone Connection Cut, Preventing Further Details of Killing

Bucharest, Rumania, Sept. 21. (AP)—Prime Minister Calinescu was shot and killed today while driving in his automobile on one of Bucharest's principal streets.

The Premier, known as the "strong man" of Rumania for his suppression of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard organization, was shot at 12:30 p. m. (6:30 a. m., EST) from another automobile which drove alongside his own.

(At this point, when the Associated Press correspondent apparently started to give further details of the assassination, the telephone connection between Bucharest and Copenhagen was broken.)

The Rumanian government radio announced the assassination.

In Budapest the Rumanian legation reported that the Bucharest radio station shut down at 2:10 p. m. "After some minutes of wild confused shouting" which could be heard over the microphone.

(The legation said in mid-afternoon it had been unable to reach the Bucharest foreign ministry by telephone up to that time.)

The radio announcement, which interrupted a musical program, was broadcast at 1:30 p. m. and gave no details.

Calinescu's campaign against the Iron Guard came to a head in the fall of 1938 and since then politics have announced discovery of a half-dozen "revenge" plots against him. He became head of the government on March 7, 1939, succeeding the late Dr. M. Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian church.

On June 17, police said, Iron Guardists planned to assassinate Calinescu and King Carol with hand grenades at a race track.

Calinescu was minister of interior in charge of police on November 30, 1938, when an Iron Guard leader and so-called "Little Hitler" of Rumania was shot dead by guards, "while attempting to escape" during a transfer from one prison to another, according to the official version.

Despite the frequent reported discovery of such plots against him, the premier steadfastly refused to have a bodyguard.

CAPITAL CITY NOW ISOLATED

Had Been City's Only Means of Communication

Budapest, Sept. 21. (AP)—The Warsaw radio lapsed into silence early today shortly after what sounded like the explosion of artillery shells could be heard through its microphone.

The announcer had carried on far into the night despite the deep periodic rumblings until the station suddenly went off the air half way through the playing of a Polish military air.

Temporarily, at least, the only communication between the German-occupied Polish capital and the rest of the world was ended.

Silence came after the station had broadcast a grim story of Warsaw being shelled and bombed as never before and predicted, "There probably soon will be a big offensive against us."

The rest of Europe, which had been following the 14-day fight of Warsaw's defenders through almost ceaseless broadcasts from the station, was left to speculate on what might have happened.

The studio is in the center of Warsaw. Despite German aerial and artillery bombardment of the area for almost two weeks, the station had remained on the air day and night. It had gone on even while shells were falling all around it.

Four times yesterday the warning wall of air raid sirens could be heard above the calm voice of the announcer and four times the drone of diving airplanes came over the air.

The broadcaster said the raids were conducted by squadrons of 30 German planes.

Oil Painting Show At Local Gallery

A new exhibition of oil paintings by Pedro Cervantes, 21, of New Mexico, opened today at the Greenville WPA Art Gallery. It is furnished to Greenville by the exhibition department of the Federal Art Project in Washington, D. C., Holger Cahill, director.

Coming here from Greenville, S. C., the show will remain on view through October 4, after which it will be shipped to Wilmington for showing at the Wilmington Museum of Art.

Pedro Cervantes is one of the young artists whose work has been discovered and developed under the WPA Federal Art Project. He has been signally honored by inclusion in the recent exhibition entitled "Masters of Popular Painting" held at the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

Visitors to the exhibition will find the most striking characteristics of Cervantes work to be beauty of color, fine spacing and affection for theme. Selecting his subject matter most frequently from fruits and flowers, he sometimes chooses homely themes which another artist or layman might consider unworthy of treatment. His "Stove" is a beautifully drawn example of the everyday scene. A number of neighborhood subjects prove him to be adept in handling regional material. Other pictures are called "Pan Handle Lumber Company," "Bovina Elevator," "Pump House," and "Saw Tooth Range." To date this is the gallery's first exhibition in which all of the paintings are by the same artist.

Arrangements may be made for gallery talks on the exhibition by applying to the office of the gallery located on the corner of Fifth and Cotanche streets. Any groups from schools or organizations should apply in advance of the date desired for the engagement.

HERE'S HOW WAR WILL BE WON

Strategy Centers On Beating Enemy In Battle And At Home

By PRESTON GROVER
AP Feature Service Writer
Washington.—For curbstone strategists and field marshals alike the one sound way to win a war is to crush the enemy forces in front and break down morale behind.

In a modern war it takes the combined forces of the army, navy, air corps and a smart propaganda service to turn the trick.

The allies and the United States won the World war when German morale collapsed under the punishment of starvation at home and a smother of propaganda leaflets showered by airplanes among hungry troops at the front. Hammering by fresh American soldiers and hopeful allied armies stalled the German military machine. With ruin in the rear and disaster at the front, Germany gave up.

HOW NOT TO WIN A WAR — Drawing by Theo Matejko in German army weekly, "Die Wehrmacht," gives Nazi conception of what would happen to enemy tanks driving against Limes line, on western front. Tanks overturn on pointed concrete blocks and are raked by artillery in forts beyond. Allies' big problem is to find a way around or through the line.

Neither side ever broke through.

Planes work with the land forces mostly. They harass industrial areas in the rear, tearing out railroads, bombing power plants. They chase enemy planes out of the air. They break up supply trains and marching columns, and machine-gun reserves colliding in the rear. They spray mustard gas to drive the enemy out of his best fighting places.

Planes spy on the enemy movements to the rear and point out his hidden artillery and tank concentrations. They strike almost too fast for defense.

With navies it is different. The British navy once starved Germany to its knees. German submarines almost starved England to her knees. Late in the war, with American aid, the British learned how to fight submarines. They filled sea-channels with mines. Speedy destroyers convoyed cargo ships safely through submarine zones.

When navy fights navy it is tremendous. It is the ultimate national showdown. Big dreadnaughts, heavily armored, steam along in parallel columns, shelling each other with the heaviest firepower ever concentrated. Speedy destroyers rush out front like humming birds among the hawks, sacrificing themselves in order to loose floods of torpedoes, the worst enemy of the battleship.

One big mystery remains. Nobody knows—for sure—what air power can do against sea power.

Poultry Valuation In North Carolina $38,000,000

Raleigh, Sept. 20. — North Carolina's poultry industry has a valuation of approximately $38,000,000 and is playing a very important part in stabilizing the agricultural pursuits of the state. J. W. Hendricks, director of the Piedmont Test Farm at Statesville said in discussing prospects for the poultry exhibits at the coming North Carolina State Fair to be held here, October 10-14.

He pointed out that there seems to be greater interest this year than ever before in the utility as well as the exhibition classes.

"This is an indication that poultry breeders in North Carolina realize the importance and value of this great industry in the future development of our great commonwealth," Hendricks said.

The raising of poultry and marketing eggs and chickens should be a primary and essential part of any diversification of farming in North Carolina, Hendricks added.

Speaking specifically of the Fair he predicted that between 1,500 and 2,000 birds, ranging from bantams to Plymouth Rocks and including ducks, geese and turkeys will compete for awards next month.

Clean, trim skyliners contributed much to the styling of the new 1940 Nash automobiles, according to George Walker, noted industrial designer, who is shown with one of the new Nash models (the Nash Ambassador Eight two-door sedan), which he designed in collaboration with Nash engineers, says that the principles of aero-dynamic streamlining just beginning to be used by leading manufacturers today will be the most important element in automotive body design in the coming decade. Exemplified in the new Nashes, this new type of design has brought not only a new operating efficiency to motor vehicles by reducing wind resistance and road noises to a minimum, but has given them a breath-taking new beauty. Distinguished for their eye appeal, the new 1940 Nashes also are said to offer what is described as an "Arrow-Flight" ride. The perfected riding qualities of the car are attributed to an advanced type of springing which combines the action of long, synchronous leaf springs and giant shock absorbers in the rear, and soft, individual coil springs in front.

Washington - Events, not words, will largely determine whether and when the President will get Congress to repeal the arms embargo.

Weeks before the special session began, the barrage of words had swelled to World War proportions. "Not one could say that more than a vote, or two had been switched one way or another among the closely-divided ranks for and against revision of the Neutrality act."

But in the month or two months the special session likely will last, events in Europe can materially shape public and congressional opinion. An outbreak of German "triflingness" in the air or at sea would be an important factor.

It is a fair bet that corresponding "triflingness" in the form of "retaliation" on the part of Britain or France would not stir corresponding settlements in America. Public opinion already seems attuned to expect German "triflingness." And it would probably attempt to excuse or minimize "retaliation."

Neutral Partiality
 Sinking of the Athenia undoubtedly influenced much public opinion to a more friendly attitude toward England. A similar affair about October 10 might work wonders in Congress.

The attitude of partiality toward our old allies is so evident publicly and so widely held in the Administration that advocates of "embargo repeal" now are seeking to point out that a nation can still be neutral and yet be helpful.

This view has no standing at all among senators such as Nye of North Dakota, who interpret every step friendly to England as simply walking further into the war.

Out attitude toward Canada is cited as a sample of partiality as distinguished from neutrality. The President has stated that no foreign power will be permitted to conquer Canada. Certainly that is being very partial to an enemy of Germany. But it is unneutral to recognize something that is as well established as the movement of the tides? Defense of Canada is as much a part of our scheme of national protection as defense of North Dakota.

What's Overlooked
 What is very much overlooked in the neutrality fight, moreover, is that the Administration is seeking revision of the Neutrality act, not repeal. The Administration is seeking to repeal only the section imposing the arms embargo. The measure drafted by the Administration last session—and still officially supported—retains much of the old act and proposes, in addition, sharp increases of certain powers in the hands of the President.

On important increase would be to authorize the President to designate certain sections of the sea as "combat zones" from which American ships would be excluded. He has no such power now. It would allow the President to be terribly unneutral in designating such zones, as critics of the idea suggest. However, a President always can be unneutral in many ways, if he is so disposed.

The Administration also sought to write out of the present act the section that prohibits arming of American merchant vessels against the submarine menace. But the House last session would have nothing of it, even though it accepted most of the rest of the Administration's bill.

President Wilson tried to get the authority to arm merchant vessels in the last war, but a "group of wilful men," some still in the Senate, "let him have it. To arm

After A Man's Heart
 by JEAN RANDALL

YESTERDAY: Feeling a certain responsibility toward Buff, Tim keeps an eye on her new friends, especially Van. He buys up all Van's soap sculpture of Buff until she puts a stop to it. Then a gossip item appears in the paper saying that Buff's affections are engaged.

Chapter 16
Tim Blows Up

TIM, coming home from a long day's work, had just time to wash and brush up before the boardinghouse dinner was served. George had preceded him so he was unprepared for the chorus of congratulation which arose upon his entrance.

"Good work, old man!" said a young college professor. "I've met Miss Carroll and I admire her immensely. But why not get it over a hint before the paper got it?"

"Lucky dog," sighed someone else before Tim could answer. "Only child of rich and distinguished parents, smart as whip herself, and easy on the eyes. Does she have any friends you could introduce me to, Tim?"

"What," demanded Tim, "is all this about?"

Half a dozen voices told him, in full detail and at great length, of the situation. Under the circumstances, Tim could not deny the engagement; neither would he confirm it; he hung evasive replies in every direction and escaped from the table as soon as possible. In ten minutes he was confronting Buff, for once alone in her living room.

"Did you actually put it in the paper?" he demanded. "If so—well, there is such a thing as playing fair, Buff! I'm here tonight to let myself be jilted. Get it over in a hurry, will you? I can't stand any more public congratulations."

To his astonishment she said soberly: "I didn't put it in the paper, Tim, that is, if you mean the paragraph that came out tonight. But I suppose I'm morally responsible, just the same. You were here yesterday and heard what I said. How was I to know Van would telephone to the society reporter and vouch for the truth of his bit of news?"

"Was that all there was to it? The only basis for everybody thinking and saying—"

"That was all there was to it. But it seems to have been enough. She didn't suppose you're still terribly averse to the idea of marrying me, I mean? Why, Tim? You really do need a wife, and I—more than ever I need a job, somebody to look after."

Tim remarked acidly that he was opposed equally to being anyone's job, or the subject of maternal care.

"This has gone beyond a joke," he went on wrathfully. "If it ever was one to start with! You're too young to know your own mind, as I've pointed out to you more than once. However, if you feel you must mother somebody, go adopt yourself an orphan—twins preferably."

"No Meddler?"
 SHE made no reply and glancing up he saw she was blushing furiously.

"And well you may," he went on. "Have you not womanly reticence, no modesty? Coming here to Boulder and telling practically everyone you meet that you and I are engaged—"

"That's enough!" The color receded from her face, leaving it rather frighteningly pale. She balled her small hands into fists and brought them together in her lap. Her blue eyes seemed almost black, their pupils dilated.

"I wouldn't marry you now if you were the last man on earth! Practically everybody, indeed! You sound as if I stopped the very newboys on the street and confided to them my wild passion for you!"

She leaped up and stood before the fire, her small figure outlined against the rough stone of the fireplace.

"I'm not retracting a word I've said, remember! I do think you need somebody to—be with you, to be a friend and comrade. I do think I could have done a lot for you. But I'll not be insulted, Tim Corilas, or accused of being deficient in modesty and what not! Not by you or any other man! I'll call the paper tomorrow and demand a retraction of that paragraph. I'll tell everybody I know that so far from being engaged to you, I simply loathe you! I'll refuse to speak to you the next time we meet on the street. I..." she choked with rage.

He felt suddenly greatly ashamed of himself. This girl had taken in—or rather let him stay where he had already installed himself—and given him the kindest of care. If in her friendly zeal she had gone a little too far, it was for him to protect her from herself rather than to hurl brutal accusations in her face.

American ships to fight their way through a blockade, submarine or any other kind, is exciting business.

SHORT SHOTS

Raleigh, Sept. 21.—Two murderers, a man and a woman, who were sentenced to serve combined terms of 36 years were among four prisoners whose paroles were announced yesterday. They had served between them a total of about twelve years, counting gained time—or about one-third what the courts said they should serve.

Both affairs were family killings. Martha Little went to prison from Pitt county for the second degree murder of her husband, James Little. She was convicted in March, 1938, and had served, with gained time, nearly five years of the eight to ten year sentence imposed. She is colored.

H. C. Leitner, white man, was convicted in Halifax at the August term 1934, for killing his daughter-in-law. He got 28 years and served, with gained time, more than seven years.

He rose and stood close to her, noting as he did so that the silky top of her head came only to his shoulder. So little and young, but so terribly determined! He smiled and sighed together.

"Look here, Buff," he began gently. "Can't we forget all this and just be good friends? Start all over, I mean, as if I hadn't—hadn't come a cropper last summer and made you... sorry for me? Can't we let it be that we've known each other a few weeks, like each other—and 'all right'—a deep—and more earnest note crept into his voice—"I really do want your friendship, my dear."

Still she made no answer and presently he picked up one of her hands, finding it icy cold to his touch.

"I'm a brute, barging in here to talk as I did. It was just that every living soul at the boardinghouse started congratulating me, and I was in a devil of a fix, wondering how to deny the rumor without seeming to reflect on you—"

"That," she said, "need no longer worry you. I said I'd call the paper tomorrow, didn't I?"

"Infatuation"

"WHAT do I care about the paper? Lord knows it printed plenty about me last summer that I don't even care about the people at the house—now. What I do care about, Buff, is that we should be friends."

She tilted her head and he was relieved to see a smile tugging at the corners of her mouth.

"All thought of marriage eliminated?"

"All thought of marriage eliminated," he really made an admirable husband," he pleaded. "Late for meals more often than not, going back to work in the laboratory till midnight. Knowing nothing of women, I'd probably say and do the wrong thing on every occasion I give you my word, Buff, I was delighted by nature as a perennial bachelor."

"Is that why you became engaged to Iris DeMuth?" she asked coldly.

He started as if she had struck him, his face whitening.

"I suppose everyone is entitled to lose control of his emotions once in a lifetime." He gripped the back of a chair with tense fingers. "I realize that what happened last summer is public property but even so, I don't enjoy having actual references made to it in my presence."

"I wasn't actually thinking of giving you pleasure! I was merely inquiring, in my feminine, illogical way, why you were so keen on marriage last summer if you've felt all along you'd make such a terrible husband to any girl you honored with your—what? Resignation? Childish succumbing to her wishes? Fatalistic yielding to circumstances?"

"Infatuation," he said curtly. "Kid stuff. I should have had an attack and got it over with in college. May we drop the subject now, please?"

"With pleasure." She walked deliberately to her big chair, settled herself in it comfortably and crossed her slender ankles. "And shall we also agree to our separate ways? I like it here in Boulder. I've made plans to do some work in this apartment, I've reached an agreement with my parents about what we shall all do this winter. So you can have me off your mind; can, in fact, be late to as many meals as your landlady will allow, labor in your laboratory until dawn for all it concerns me."

He folded his arms and leaned against the mantelpiece.

"We're not to be friends then?"

"You'd like to be?"

"More than I can tell you! You're swell person, Buff, and even if you don't want my gratitude for what you did for me at the ranch, it's still pretty vivid in my mind. It's just that—that I don't want to come here as—as often as I'd like—and—"

"And rouse false hopes in my maidenly heart?" Her grin of genuine amusement was reassuring.

"Suppose you let me look after my heart, Tim. So far I've done a better job of it than you seem to have done with yours. Friends it is, and the latchstring's out for you and George whenever you come our way. Webby mourns over you if you don't come for dinner at least twice a week. She's got it firmly fixed in her head that you're a victim of malnutrition. When I point out to her that you and George eat at the same place, she counters with the undeniable fact that George is overweight and you are not."

They parted on that note, Buff sat for a long time in her big chair after he had gone, so long that Mrs. Webb slipped in to see if she had forgotten the lights. Just before the girl went away to her room, she stopped for a hesitant instant beside the mantel; then with flushed cheeks, she tiptoed up and laid her lips to the place where Tim's hand had rested.

section are for President Roosevelt's plan to revise the so-called neutrality act.

There may have been one or more which escaped this bureau's attention, but Oscar Barker's announcement for Congress in the Sixth district to next May's primary appears to be the first such formal entry made in any Congressional race.

The announcement puts an end to the wishful thinking of some Guilford county politicians, one of whom solemnly assured your correspondent a few weeks ago why Barker won't run for Congress again. "He'll never get around to announcing."

The Barker record in the North Carolina House as representative from Durham includes a big part in adoption of the state's present gasoline inspection code. For that part, he gained the opposition of the petroleum industry representatives.

It will be interesting to watch what this industry does if Barker should, perchance, be opposed by John Caffey, of Greensboro, who left the oil folks flat on their backs in the last legislature, deserting them completely on the diversion of highway funds from after soliciting their aid in his campaign for election.

At that, they'd probably still have the incumbent, Carl Durham, to support, thus avoiding the necessity of choosing which of the two—Barker or Caffey—they like the least and hate the most.

Wilson's sheriff offered to care for English fox hounds if they were in danger of being destroyed to conserve food in the old country. He probably wants to start a pack in opposition to Valle Frederes's famous fox-hunting in Brunswick. This noisy hunt is turning up for a season in which they are expected to break last year's record of 123 brushes. They already have seven, despite the fact that snakes are still active in Brunswick's swamps—and there are plenty of both snakes and swamps.

Man About Manhattan
 By George Tucker

New York—One of the most bewildered men in New York today is Hugh Mearns, professor of psychology at New York University, who once wrote a simple quatrain and after 29 years saw it develop into singing America's current wacky song favorite—"The Little Man Who Wasn't There."

During its historic development, Tin Pan Alley has taken its music material from many sources and quite often the original of a song has been so remote from the nerve center of music that final production is cause for wonderment. Such is the case with "Little Man, etc.," now heard everywhere. Larry Clinton and Glenn Miller, two pretty good boys, have recorded it.

It was Clinton who cleared up the original of the Mearns quatrain for this amused New York spondee. Back in 1910 Mearns wrote it for Harvard University Hasty Pudding Club production, and it ran along in this vein:

"Yesterday I saw upon the stair A little man who wasn't there. He wasn't there again today. Oh how I wish he'd go away."

This bit of classic absurdum became campus tradition. A few weeks ago two other Harvard graduates, Bernard Hanighen and Harold Adamson began tinkering with a melody to fit the words, which persisted in running through their imagination, and in this manner a very zany number has found its way to the always unpredictable public.

Meanwhile Mearns, the professor of psychology, sits in a class room at New York University and shakes his head. Even the psychology books, which he knows by heart, do not give the answer.

There once lived a Czechoslovakian—and he may still be living, though he remains unheard from and is, or was, somewhere in Europe—with the jaw-breaking handle of Jaromir Vejvoda. He came from that part of central Europe where polkas are the custom rather than a novelty, and so four or five years ago he composed himself a tune and finally got it played by an obscure brass band (no one would publish it), which gave the piece a little publicity, and by a miracle, someone finally bought it for a few pennies.

This is the same merry shout which since has been recorded by Victor under a series of titles, namely, "The Jelly Roll Polka," the "Pretzel," etc., and which finally was arranged, with appropriate lyrics, and released under the title of "Beer Barrel Polka."

And so the obscure Mr. Vejvoda has come belatedly into recognition, though as yet no one knows how he has taken his success. As previously noted, he was a Czech, and

an Hour From Now

THROW down your newspaper; turn off your radio—get your family and grab your hat!

Down on the streets right now is the bright and beaming face of a 1940 Nash. And just looking at it will make you feel good all over!

One sweep of glittering line, it looks gay as a Mardi Gras—and twice as exciting.

But don't waste time staring. You belong in the driver's seat. For that's where the fun begins.

Before you start, turn on the Weather Eye to the comfort you want. (It offers new conditioned air wonders this year.)

Just a nudge of your toe, and in one split-second you'll get a good idea of what a hundred-odd stampeding horses can do. Three finger flicks—and the gears are shifted. Then—a lift, a rush, a click—and a new Fourth Speed Forward lends soft wings to your ride.

Don't worry about that Sunday driver ahead. There's something new in the throttle—the Nash Automatic Overtake. Just press your toe—and leave him dawdling in your dust, wondering where you came from—or where you went.

Then head for a backwoods road where the others dare not follow... and feel what happens.

Ruts and bumps rush up to meet your spinning wheels, but—they never seem to reach you. Your hands stay idle on the wheel.

It's riding magic, pure and simple. A ride so smooth, so level, so silent that you might be in your easy chair at home, or sleeping in the Nash convertible bed.

It's the new Arrow-Flight Ride... result of an entirely new springing combination... and we dare you to say you've ever experienced anything like it, or known steering that was so sure and effortless.

With singing heart, you give the throttle another nudge.

From where you're sitting, the world looks like one straight, unending ribbon of road ahead... in a land of perpetual spring.

It is—and always will be, in your Nash... long after other cars are parked for good.

We're asking you, with nothing but your own preferences, experiences, and instincts, to get behind the wheel of a 1940 Nash. For ten glorious minutes—that's all.

Then decide if any other car today... of any power, weight, or wheelbase... can give you as much downright fun as this new, lower-priced Nash!

Get your hands on it now—for you'll regret every minute you don't own one! Your Nash dealer is waiting. Come on—it's getting late—let's go!

Record Crowd Expected To See Carolina Clash

Softball Meet

President J. D. Simpson today called a meeting of the board of directors of the Greenville Softball League to be held in Mr. Campbell's office at the Carolina Sales tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Simpson urged a full attendance as important matters relative to the season recently closed will be discussed.

Wolf Concentrates on Defense to Stop Cadets

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 21. — With a thin line of veterans dotted with a few bright stars like George Stinweiss, Jim Lalanne, and Paul Severin, plus a sizable number of rookies who are willing and ambitious but untried, the University of North Carolina football forces are hoping for the best Saturday—and preparing for the worst.

The Citadel's Light Brigade rides into Kenan Stadium for the opener, and where Coach Ray Wolfe has kept the Tar Heels at offensive maneuvers through most of the early season, he has shown his regard for the Cadets this week by concentrating on ways and means to check Graham Edwards and Co's fast running game and dangerous aerial attack.

A record first-game crowd of more than 20,000 is expected to be on hand for the opening conference battle and attendant High School Day program, and the contest is expected to prove a stiff test for the re-built and crippled Tar Heels as well as to give a close line on what can be expected of the Wolfmen on the heavy schedule to follow.

The Citadel has back virtually its entire squad from 1938, which won six games—the same number Carolina won—and held strong Georgia and State eleven to one touchdown margins. It is reported to have a fast, hard-hitting line; an exceptionally speedy coterie of elusive backs; and a dangerous passing game engineered by three triple-threaters, Graham Edwards, Charlie Sims and Hank Foster.

Edwards and Sims are North Carolina boys as are two other Citadel regulars, Captain Bill Spain at center and Dan Stubbs at full, and several reserves. Edwards comes from Wilmington, Sims from Charlotte, Spain from Raleigh, and Stubbs from Lenoir.

Carolina is pinning its hopes for victory principally on 12 seasoned lettermen, headed by Stinweiss and Lalanne, two brilliant triple-threat quarterbacks; Paul Severin and Jim Mallory, two fine ends and remarkable pass receivers; George Radman, a good all-round back; and Gates Kimball, a 200 pound tackle war-horse.

'LOST COLONY' VIEWS SHOWN

Patent Closed, But Not Forgotten by Papers

Raleigh, Sept. 21. — "The Lost Colony," Manteo's and Roanoke Island's big summer attraction, is closed, but it is still unforgotten by the Metropolitan papers.

Though the spectacle was viewed by the last audience of this year on September 4, the Daily News of New York, in its September 17 issue carried a full page of pictures of various characters in the drama. Included was the very first successful picture showing the audience as well as the performers during a presentation of Paul Green's piece.

A large picture showed the water-side theatre filled for a performance. It was made principally because Bill Sharpe, manager of the News Bureau of the Department of Conservation and Development, told Martin McEvilly, chief picture editor of the Daily News, that it could not be done.

McEvilly is a red-headed Irishman, and that's why the picture was successfully taken. His Irish rose on being told something

CAPT. ALLEN JOHNSON

Champing at his bits and raring for game-time and going-time to come is Captain Allen (Sweet Pea) Johnson, Duke's fearless leader. He was put on the sidelines recently due to a pulled leg muscle and was the most uncomfortable man on the squad for he wanted to do but one thing—get back in that lineup. One of the finest guards in the nation last season, Johnson should be ready for his greatest campaign. And the Lexington, N. C., boy looms as one of Duke's greatest captains.

"couldn't be done" and so he assigned one of his top-flight picture men, sent him down from New York to Manteo in one of the paper's special photographic planes.

It took the expert four days to make arrangements and make the shot, but he did and McEvilly is now laughing at Sharpe and his "can't be done" declaration.

Other pictures show a group of Roanoke Island girls making up for their parts as Indian maidens; Tommy Fearing jerking soda in his dad's soda shop wearing a natural full beard he grew in order to play Governor Raleigh Lane; County

NEGROES FIND LEGUMES PAY

Colored Farmers Of State Finding New Profits

Raleigh, Sept. 21. — Negro farmers of the State are finding profit in hay and legume crops, it was reported today by C. R. Hudson, state agent in charge of Negro work for the State College Extension Service. He quoted narratives by Negro Farm Agents J. W. Jeffries and D. J. Knight in Alamance and Halifax Counties, respectively.

Jeffries reported that for the first time in history, Negro farmers in the tobacco section of North Alamance made more hay than they could save. Tom Anderson of Mebane, Route 3, cut 20 tons of hay from 10 acres of lespedeza. He had planned to cut over 15 additional acres of lespedeza, but found he had more hay than he could use, so he turned over the 15 acres of the legume crop on land which will be planted to corn next year.

The Alamance agent also said that Walter Truitt of Erland, Route 1, harvested nine tons of hay from four and one-half acres of lespedeza. He bought 100 pounds of Korean lespedeza seeds in a cooperative shipment last spring for $5.00. After allowing $14.50 as the cost of labor and seed, and figuring the value of his hay at $15 a ton, Truitt found that he made a profit of $120.50 from the investment.

Knight reported that Tussie Williams of the Harrison Community in Halifax County conducted a summer legume demonstration and found that crotalaria produced more than 1,000 pounds more green forage per acre than velvet beans under the same fertilizer, weather, and soil conditions. The crotalaria outyielded cowpeas by 50 per cent, and produced nearly 3,000 pounds more green forage per acre than soybeans.

But look around at other sweet ones of the past.

Kay Francis in "In Name Only" is a deep-dyed wixen masking her mercenary schemes to hound poor Carole Lombard and Cary Grant. She's such a she-devil in angel's clothing that she darned near wrecks the others' lives, and the plot to boot. Remember when Kay was self-sacrificing herself on the screen so much that she was practically washed right off it by her tears?

And who's this? Myrna Loy, no other. "The perfect wife." The smart, gay, warm and loving Mrs. Nick Charles of "The Thin Man." The girl who had said goodbye forever to screen wickedness, to the vamps and oriental schemers she used to play before she was "discovered."

But look at our Myrna now! In "The Rains Came" she's that "woman without morals," who sees her man and goes after him, who tolerates a stupid husband but doesn't let marriage annoy her too much. It's true she reforms in the end—but what an unscrupulous, immoral dame before it comes!

For a collection of unpleasant, unromanticized femininity there's no better display case than "The Women" affords. Rosalind Russell, the arch-cat of malicious gossip in this one, has played "straight" hero-human traits, and traits that make her seem real flesh-and-blood rather than a wishful celluloid mirage.

Bette Davis probably started it—this debunking of the frail and and lovely, noble, frail. She sunk dramatic teeth into her Mildred—unhappy, despicable Mildred—in "Of Human Bondage." If she started it, she has kept it up. Bette's "Jessebel" was a heller. And Bette's Charlotte in "The Old Maid" is not a pretty creature, but a woman with psychosis and complexes and, deep down, rather mean. Bette's Elizabeth in "Elizabeth and Essex" will be another one, you can be sure.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coon

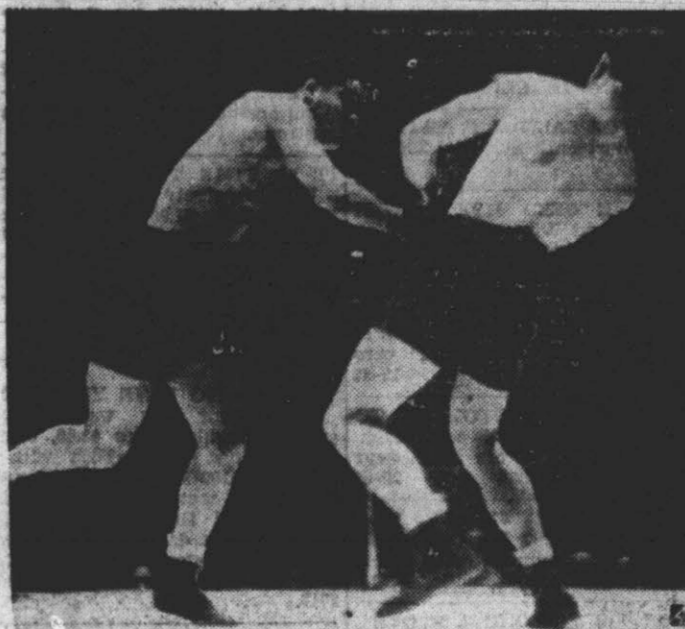

Hollywood—Something had better be done about this before we innocent males have nothing left to enshrine on pedestals.

I'm talking about the fall of the movie heroine. She isn't, as you may have noticed, all she ought to be. She isn't, not entirely anyway, that lovely goddess of beauty and sweetness and sincerity she was, un-failingly, for many thousand reels past. She certainly is no longer merely that Girl met by Boy.

She is, in short, becoming a human being—with some pretty nasty

Smashing Right Kayos Bob Pastor

No, sports fans, this isn't a picture of Joe Louis' lethal punch to Bob Pastor's chin in the 11th round last night, but shows the world's heavyweight champion using his right to take a 10-round decision over the scrappy New Yorker in 1937 before Louis became champ. A blow on Pastor's chin in the tenth round last night is believed to have gained the verdict for Louis, who finished the job in 35 seconds of the 11th. Pastor was knocked down four times in the first round before an estimated 50,000 fans.

ines, but never so devastatingly as her present assignment. Paulette Goddard, as a cat with some redeeming qualities, glories in the role. And Joan Crawford, who in a few assignments has gone noble on us, emerges here as the epitome of the cheap, gold-digging, ruthless and predatory female.

It used to be said that a romantic star was "brave" when she took on such unsympathetic tasks as these. Where the bravery is involved is not soon apparent. Kay Francis looks to be on the high road again, and "The Woman" may revive Joan Crawford's admittedly dwindling fame. "The Rains Came" will boost Myrna Loy's rank in dramatics—and Bette Davis, the classic example, owes all she is and has to a double-dealing Mildred.

Police Watch For Red Spots.

Oklahoma City.—(AP)—There's marked money among the 100 nickels a thief stole from the Blue Bell Inn's nickelodian.

Each time the "house" played a free number a nickel tipped with red fingernail polish was used by the cashier to distinguish it from the nickels of customers.

So police are watching for the appearance of nickels with red spots.

Beat Brummel, who, in immaculate, fastidious attire, set fashions for years died penniless in 1840, the possessor of only unkempt, tattered garments.

Four Men On 12 Tractors.

Sudan, Tex.—(AP)—Cotton farmers near here have experimented with new equipment that guides a tractor from one end of the cotton row to the other without a driver at the controls. At each end of the rows are men who turn the tractors about and start them back. In trials, four men operated 12 tractors.
