SEN. REYNOLDS HINTS RUSSIA SUNK ATHENIA

Declares Finger of Guilt Points to Soviets

ADMITS IT MAY SEEM FANTASTIC

Declares, however, "it is no more fantastic than some other startling surprises"

Washington, Oct. 21. (AP) - Senator Reynolds (D.-N.C.), announcing he was opposed to repeal of the arms embargo, told the Senate today that in the sinking of the British liner Athenia, "the finger of guilt more clearly points to Soviet Russia than to any other nation."

"Fantastic though it may seem," the North Carolinian asserted, "it is certainly less fantastic than some of the other startling surprises of the past several months which already are proved beyond any question."

"While at the moment most Americans believe that Germany sank the Athenia, there has not been published a shred of concrete evidence to prove this."

"But in the absence of concrete evidence," Reynolds continued, "there is a much stronger circumstantial case against Russia than any other nation."

The North Carolinian, who had not previously announced his position on the administration neutrality bill, said that while he favored many of its provisions he thought repeal of the arms embargo would be "unwise and dangerous."

In the face of outspoken opposition, the administration's leadership undertook to cut short debate on the neutrality bill and speed it along toward a final vote.

Majority leader Barkley announced that before the third week of general discussion ended with today's adjournment he would ask for a debate limitation to be made effective Monday when consideration of amendments is expected to begin.

"An overwhelming majority of the Senate," Barkley told his colleagues, "feels that the time has come when an effort should be made to bring this matter to a conclusion."

At Least 67 Lost On British Ships

Bordeaux, France, Oct. 21. (AP) - At least 67 persons lost their lives in the sinking of two British steamers in the Atlantic Tuesday, authorities estimated today as they checked the stories of some 3,000 survivors landed here last night by a rescue ship.

Officials said that 61 apparently had gone down with the Yorkshire and six or seven with the City of Mandalay. The two vessels were sunk by a submarine within a half hour, about 500 miles off the Spanish coast.

Tales of hardship and terror were told by the survivors, many of whom were taken to hospitals suffering severely from exposure. All those rescued were English or Indians en route to England.

Turkish Pact As Victory by Allies

In the British and French capitals the conclusion of the Anglo-French-Turkish mutual aid pact is being hailed as a victory over Germany. This map shows why. Turkey, owner of the Dardanelles, narrow and strategic gateway to the Black Sea, would be a powerful ally, should the war spread into the Balkan tinder box. When Turkey opposed the Allies during the World War she held the passage for nine months, preventing communications with Rumania and Russia. The potential route for British ships to travel in going to the aid of Rumania, which already is jittery, is indicated by the dotted line through the g un-stilled strait. Vertically shaded areas are under French-British influence, horizontally shaded areas are under German and Russian. Germany so far refuses to admit her so-called back door has been flung wide open.

Britain-France-Turkey Map Cooperative Plans

Military Chiefs Perfecting Mutual Aid Pact

Ankara, Oct. 21. (AP) - Military leaders of Britain, France and Turkey completed extensive plans today for military cooperation under the tripartite mutual assistance treaty.

The plans, however, will become effective only in the event that the nations are called upon to fulfill their pledges of mutual aid by future developments.

"These pledges do not obligate Turkey to enter the current war between Britain and France and Germany on its present basis or to fight under any circumstances against Soviet Russia."

The conferences, which began Wednesday, concluded as General Maxime Weygand, commander-in-chief of French forces in the Eastern Mediterranean and Lieut. General Archibald D. Wavell, British Middle East commander, prepared to return to their respective headquarters by plane.

Marshal Fevzi Cakmak, chief of the Turkish army, described the results as "highly satisfactory."

The military leaders were said to have decided on the closest cooperation and coordination of their staffs in Asia Minor, Britain and France were reported to have pledged large quantities of fighting planes and war equipment for quick delivery to Turkey as well as assistance for the Turkish navy in the Black Sea.

City firemen were summoned to a Negro home on Pitt street near the old river bridge this morning by a last night at 6 o'clock.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow, but complete arrangements had not been made, pending arrival of relatives from Georgia.

Mr. Holliman is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rosa Braxton Holliman, and one daughter, Miss Mamie Holliman of this city, and a number of relatives in Georgia.

Injured Removed From U. S. Vessel

New York, Oct. 21. (AP) - Twenty-six persons were removed on stretchers from the United States liner President Harding today when the storm-battered vessel arrived after one of the most dramatic voyages in modern maritime annals.

Eyes were blackened, bones fractured and bodies bruised by tumbling furniture and heaving decks when the 13,869-ton liner was caught by a howling hurricane after rescuing the crew of the torpedoed British freighter Heronspool. Altogether 73 passenger and crew members were injured in the storm, but all except the 26 most seriously hurt were able to walk by the time the ship docked.

A cabin boy, Paul Johnson, was washed overboard and lost when a mountainous wave broke over the deck. Because of his death the President Harding's flag was at half mast when she arrived.

The hurricane, which had eluded meteorologists as a result of wartime restrictions on weather reports from ships at sea, struck the liner approximately 800 miles east of Boston Tuesday night.

Passengers said most of the injuries were caused by one huge wave propelled by a 110-mile-an-hour wind. Some said it was 100 feet high.

A fleet of ambulances and stretchers waited at the dock when the vessel arrived.

Paul Van Zeeland, former premier of Belgium, was in his cabin with his wife and four children when the wave struck. All were tumbled out of their beds and piled in a heap against the wall Van Zeeland was bruised and cut.

ASSERTS PACT THREW TURKEY IN WAR'S ORBIT

Statement Made By Official Russian Newspaper

U. S. S. R. ASSAILS MOVE BY TURKEY

Declares Signer Pledged To Fight With France and Britain Against Germany And Italy

Moscow, Oct. 21. (AP) - The government newspaper Izvestia assailed the new British-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact today, asserting it "threw Turkey into the orbit of war."

In its first comment on the pact, which came after failure of Soviet Russia and Turkey to negotiate a similar agreement, Izvestia said the tri-power treaty was an "unsuccessful attempt to drive a wedge between Germany and the U. S. S. R. also to draw the U. S. S. R. into a combination which is chiefly directed against Germany and eventual enemies of England and France in the Mediterranean. (Presumably Italy.)"

"The agreement," the paper continued "can not be evaluated as an instrument of peace, it threw Turkey into the orbit of war."

Denying Russia would lose from such an alliance, Izvestia said the Soviet state maintained "freedom of action which can not be said about Turkey—Turkey has assumed responsibility which can not fail to be reflected on Turkish policies within the nearest future."

The newspaper declared that a Turkish-Russian agreement was "incompatible with Turkey's undertaking under the British-French-Turkish treaty."

Izvestia said that "under this treaty Turkey is pledged to fight on the side of Britain and France against Germany and Italy."

To Conduct Fight On Freight Rates

Atlanta, Oct. 21. (AP) - Public service commissioners turned today to the task of carrying out an expanded campaign for freight rate revisions before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The southern governors' conference meeting with the Southeastern Association of Public Utility and Railway Commissioners voted last night to include other sectional areas in the fight to level the freight rate structure.

The governors' meeting was adjourned, however, before any action was taken on whether the ICC case is to be presented in a single suit or on their individual territories or states, and the commissioners remained in session today to study details and procedure.

Business Close To 1937 Peak

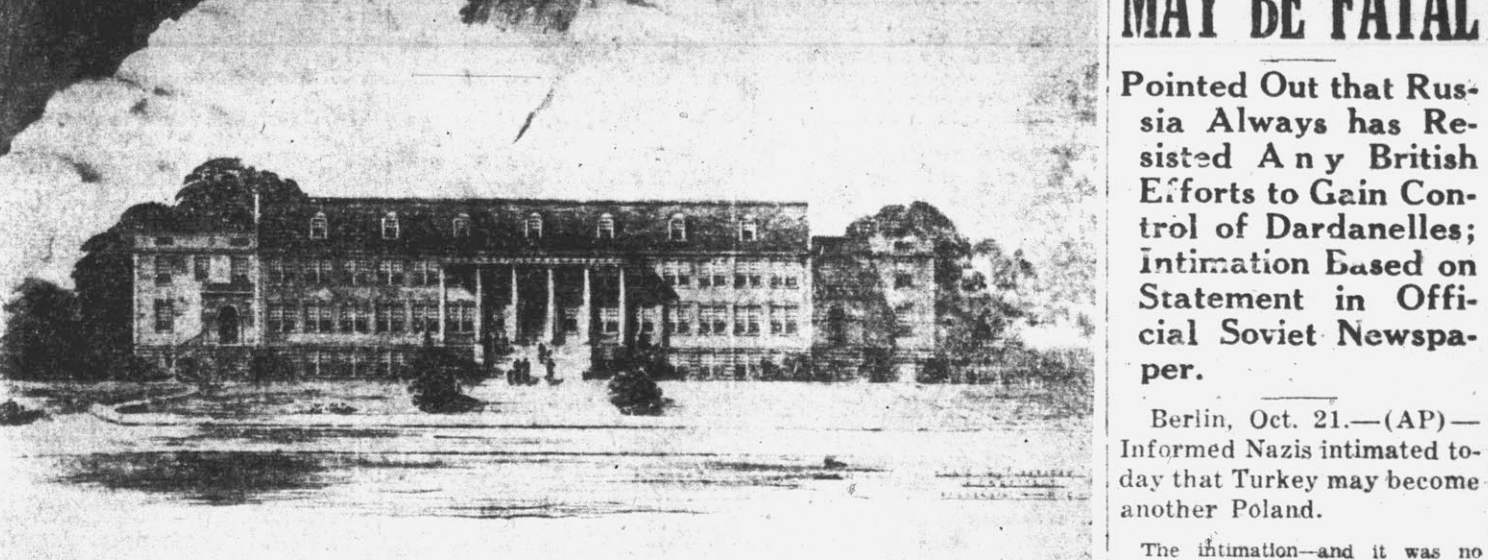

Babson Amazed at Speed of Business Upturn

Babson Park, Mass., Oct. 20 - Business this month is the best for any October in ten years. The United States has experienced one of the most sensational booms in its history in the last two months. Figures gathered from all over the country which I found on my desk on my return from the Far East, tell a spectacular story. Business is now 22 per cent above a year ago and within two per cent of the 1937 peak!

I can hardly believe that business has soared so rapidly. Yet the figures which I have at hand do not

Pointed Out that Russia Always has Resisted Any British Efforts to Gain Control of Dardanelles; Intimation Based on Statement in Official Soviet Newspaper.

Berlin, Oct. 21. (AP) - Informed Nazis intimated today that Turkey may become another Poland.

The intimation—and it was no more than that—was based on the fact that Izvestia, Soviet Russian government newspaper in Moscow, said Russia had no reason to regret Turkey's action in signing a mutual assistance pact with Great Britain and France.

Commentators pointed out that Russia throughout her history had resisted British attempts to control the Dardanelles, strategic gateway to the Black sea.

They said that as long as Turkey remained neutral Russia could be satisfied to leave the Dardanelles in her friend's hands.

But now that Turkey definitely has allied herself with Great Britain, they asserted, cause was given for Russia herself to assume mastery not only of the strategic gateway, but of Turkey.

They said they believed Turkey probably would be carved up as Poland was by Germany and Russia.

Meanwhile a release by DNB, official German news agency, which said that the challenge of Britain and France in the European war had been accepted, was described authoritatively as introducing no new elements into the existing situation.

Officials said it was intended merely to combat constantly recurring reports Germany was on her knees begging for peace.

Adolf Hitler, made a peace offer once, it was said in sources close to the foreign office, and if the hatchet is to be buried now the initiative must come from the other side.

Tommy's Join French Force

Paris, Oct. 21. (AP) - Semi-official sources reported today that British transports were shuttling across the English channel at the rate of three each night, landing thousands of additional troops to augment the French on the Western front.

Little activity was reported from the zone of hostilities, except for the skirmishing of all patrols. The French and Germans were said to be jockeying for positions on isolated heights and in small wooded areas to strengthen their lines.

The regular morning communique of the War Ministry spoke of the patrol raids and "harrassing fire of artillery."

Military dispatches indicated that the muddy no-man's land, about a mile wide, separated the main line positions of the opposing forces. The patrol operations were said to be confined largely to two areas where the Germans attacked in force early this week—just east of the Moselle river and between Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken, in the center of the northern flank.

Military sources said the French advance guard was still on German soil, except for a strip near the Luxembourg border and north of Bitche.

Semi-official military quarters said that about 100 landings of British troops had been made in the first month of the war.

Select Outstanding Students.
The choice of outstanding E. C. T. C. juniors and seniors for listing in the 1939-40 American College Yearbook, made this week by a student-faculty committee, included four Greenville seniors—Dorothy Hollar, Ethel Gaston, Bill Shelton and Har## vey Deal—and a junior from Pitt county, Hazel Owens of Fountain.

In all there were nine seniors and six juniors. The seniors were Annie Laura Beale, president of the Methodist Student Association; Juanita Etheridge, Woman's Student Government president; Dorothy Hollar, Tece Echo editor; Kathleen Strickland, president of the E. C. T. C. Future Teachers Association; Mary Helen Gullidge, chairman of the social committee; Ethel Gaston, president of the Dramatics Club; Iris Davis, president of the Poe Literary Society; Bill Shelton, president of the Men's Student Government; and Harvey Deal, editor of the "Titan."

The juniors were Bill Merner, president of the junior class; Doris Blalock, treasurer of the Y. W. C. A.; Rebecca Ross, treasurer of the junior class; Erlene English, vice-president of the English Club and History Club; Rebecca Shanks, house president; and Hazel Owens, house president.

The five students still on the campus who were among those chosen last year to represent the college in this yearbook were not eligible this year, as a student's name may appear in this book only one year. They are Clifton Britton, Sarah Ann Maxwell, Gladys Brock, Prue Newby and Mary Parker Johnson.

The yearbook, "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities," published annually by the National Federation of America, gives the names of students selected as outstanding in colleges and universities throughout the country.

The E. C. T. C. campus leaders were chosen by a committee composed of the Dean of Women, the Dean of Men, the presidents of the Junior and Senior classes, and the presidents of the Men's and Women's Student Government Associations.

The Factory Would Pay
Even at paying a cent a pound for it, a great quantity of ice was used in Greenville the past summer. If the price had been as low as in towns where there are ice factories the consumption would be much larger. There would be enough consumed in Greenville and vicinity to make a factory here pay well.

 At Panama we dug it ditch; You bet it cost us plenty; There was one big mess to which Was only one of twenty.
 These varmints got the diggers goats; Flight under their holmeins; Until the army sent its boats; Filled up with good petroleum.

The General got his sprinkle pot And loaded it on his scotch; And with his deadly aim he shot; And yelled, "You turn me loose!"
 That skeeter rolled upon its back; As every one now knows; No more it tried its lips to smack; And turned up all its toes.

The General snatched a innocent And dabbed it on his scotch; "This is no place for sentiment," He said, and scratched some more.
 Then every digger soldier cook; Grabbed him a sprinkle can; And when a skeeter took a look; It ran and ran and ran.

Reflector Bureau

 Raleigh, Oct. 21.—Now that Governor Clyde Hoey has announced it will be "all right with him" for the suspected candidates for Governor to come out into the open, there seems reason to believe there will be some formal announcements soon; but, not too soon, mind you, lest cynics suggest that there has been too much subservient toadying to the Hoey whims.
 Cynics will also point caustically to the fact that the Governor did not give the green "Go" signal until after a visit to Raleigh by brother-in-law Q. Max Gardner.

directly in the soil. They may be placed directly in the open if they are covered with a mulching of pine needles or wheat straw. Evergreens should not be stored in the sand or sawdust. For detailed information we suggest that you write this office.

4. Don't forget to mow your winter lawn. Many people make the mistake of not mowing their Italian Rye grass and thereby allowing it to become tall and slender; sometimes bedding down and choking out the permanent grass. Give the lawn a good application of well rotted farmyard manure and perhaps three hundred to four hundred pounds per acre of a 4-8-4 fertilizer; set your lawn mower as high as possible, mow often and you should have an attractive lawn all through the winter.

who has been formally challenged now with "running the state by long distance telephone."
 The contention will be that as soon as the Hoey-Gardner pair got their gubernatorial ducks all in a row the "let 'er rip" signal was flashed.

Still on the Governorship situation — Commissioner of Revenue Allen J. Maxwell's friends scoff at the alleged opposition to their candidate by the merchants group. They offer in rebuttal an assertion that the merchants who won't vote for Maxwell because of his sales tax views are so minded that they will not vote for Lieutenant Governor Horton, either, nor for anyone except an outspoken, forthright "Anti" anyway. It follows, they contend that such strength as Maxwell may lose will not get to any really formidable rival anyhow.

Death of former State Senator J. O. Bell, Sr., of Henderson county, removes one of the outstanding figures of the State Election Board. The westerner wasn't quite as drastic in his views on election law reforms as some of his colleagues, but he was universally regarded his clean-shooting.

 This one ought to be submitted to Ripley. It happened at the Raleigh Legion Post's 20th anniversary "chow" Thursday night.

Willis Smith, a charter member of the post, had offered two tickets to the Syracuse-Duke game as prize in a drawing from the hat of those present. On the stage with Smith for the drawing were Garland E. Bobbitt, post commander, and Josephus Daniels, Jr., Raleigh editor who was to do the drawing. Kidding the Legionnaires, it was announced that the first name drawn was Smith's the second Daniels' and the third Bobbitt's. All this was prearranged and according to design and nobody was fooled in the least.

After the squawks had reached a climax, Jim Daniel, News and Observer reporter, was called up to make the draw. He plucked forth the name of your correspondent, who is Adjutant of the local Legion post, and already provided with passes to the game Saturday. The tickets, therefore, were declined amid further yells of "frameup."

Washington. The second of President Roosevelt's agencies for handling relief and labor problems has been placed in the hands of an army man.

Elmer Andrews, administrator of the Wage-Hour division, just resigned and was replaced by Lt. Col. Philip B. Fleming of the army engineers.

The Works Projects Administration for some time has been managed by Col. F. C. Harrison, until his recent resignation to Harry Hopkins.

Just why Andrews went is a mystery to more than one. Of the several labor-aiding agencies created under the New Deal, the Wage-Hour administration has been the most popular, or at any rate, the least unpopular.

One prickly troublemaker attributed the routing of Andrews to envious opposition from Madame Perkins, secretary of labor. We ran into a flat denial of that from one source, who said he was in a position to know that the two got on better than average.

Nevertheless, it is to be recalled that there was friction, or an appearance of friction, in the beginning as to whether Andrews should be financed by appropriations entirely apart from the labor department, or whether he should be just a wing under Madame Perkins.

Colonel Fleming, now in the office of engineers on the upper Mississippi, is pictured in contrast as a... by A. F. D.

The Creeping Man

by Frances Shelley Wees

YESTERDAY: Michael, Tuck and Miss Lissy agree to play at different tables so they can study everyone at the Deane's bridge party.

Chapter 11 Twelve On A Chair

THERE was no certainty about Duncan's winning. It was Bunny's queen of hearts that decided in their favor.

"I suppose, partner," said Mrs. McBain, in her deep slow voice, "there was nothing we could have done?"

Duncan's cold voice cut the air. He looked straight at Devoe. "Something obviously had annoyed him. Angered him. That," he said, "is where you're dead wrong. One can."

It was an ultimatum. He was while Mrs. Deane was gathering score cards and making preparations to serve supper that Michael wandered out into the veranda and found Dr. McBain sitting there alone smoking.

"Have a seat," McBain said hospitably, pushing forth a wicker chair. "Thanks. I found myself rather in the way, there in the house."

"And I lovely night." They smoked in silence. "How are you liking it out here?" McBain asked after a moment.

"Great. It's like the country. Wish we could stay here all the time." "It's not so good in winter. The University doesn't keep these back roads open, and we have to walk everywhere—pretty cold. Cut off from human society once we get home from the Buildings."

"And I suppose there are disadvantages in living in one another's pockets out here?" McBain emptied his pipe. "Can't complain," he said.

"I shouldn't think Mr. Deane was so easy to live with. He wasn't always pleasant in class." "He doesn't mean any harm. He's been here so long he thinks he owns the place, and if things don't go exactly as he wishes he gets fussy. His nerves aren't any too good—although I don't like that term. Perhaps I should say his control is weakening. He's getting on, you know."

"He must be. And Devoe—Devoe is probably stranger, isn't he?" "Yes. Only been here a year or two. Don't know him. Don't have much to do with him. Different departments."

"Duncan Murchison is Chemistry, isn't he? He seems a decent chap." "He is. Clever lad too. He's got a future ahead of him. Brains and ambition. He's a good head in the lab."

"His brother works with you, doesn't he, Dr. McBain? What's he like?" "There was a moment's pause. McBain smoked steadily. Then, "He's very clever, too. Edgar Murchison. One of the best physiologists we've ever had here. Takes short cuts and gets ahead of the old folks every time. Our research is going ahead by leaps and bounds. We'll have something there to be proud of, one of these days."

"Scandal-Mongers" "HE gets a lot of criticism for his methods," Michael threw a deliberate rock into the pool. "It struck a mark. McBain pounded his pipe angrily on the railing. "Yes, he does. It's ridiculous. The lay attitude toward science hasn't changed visibly since the middle ages. They demand that we find cures for cancer, for all diseases, they furnish money to have it done. And then they raise a horrible row when a man goes about it his own way. How can they expect us to be able to perform these miracles unless we can experiment with living organisms?"

"Experiment with living organisms," Michael repeated after a moment. "That's what they got Murchison for, wasn't it?" "It was."

"Honestly, Dr. McBain, don't you think a man can go too far in the name of science?" "McBain swung round on him. "It's all the way you look at it," he said. "I'm older than Murchison. I was trained years ago, when every human life seemed valuable. When people were supposed to have souls. When their bodies were sacred. That's all tomorrow today. I can't forget my training, but I refuse to condemn a warmer man who comes in with brilliant ideas and wants to try them out. Some of these people—Deane for instance—who condemn Murchison so unmercifully would be the first to come to him for help if they needed it. He laughed shortly. "You'll pardon my outburst?" he said. "But we've had a lot of trouble around here over the very subject you've brought up. A lot of hard feelings."

Michael waited, but McBain evidently decided the matter was closed. Still—

Let It Go Their Goals Oklahoma City—(AP)—Best laid plans of mice and men— Two boys with an idea "acquired" two goats, one nanny, one billy, from an Oklahoma City backyard. They traced the nanny for another billy and then headed for wide open spaces near Oklahoma City.

The strange procession aroused the curiosity of a citizen who called police. Intercepted, the boys explained their idea was this: If bull fighting was a paying proposition in Mexico, then it ought to make a mint of money in the U. S. A. If billy goats were substituted for bulls, they were all set for a "trial run" when police intervened.

White and Gold Paris—(AP)—The Duchess of Kent has gone in for white and gold. She selected for formal court wear a dress of white silk persey, cut on slim straight lines, all-over embroidered in a scattered design of gold stars and sequins, the embroidery repeated on the long court train hanging from the shoulders. The Countess of Darnley has chosen a gown of white moire, and Lady Mary Greaves, a model in silver and white lame, with a silver lame train. These are all Molyneux models.

YESTERDAY: Michael talks discreetly with Dr. McBain about Murchison and learns that the latter's experiments were with living organisms, also that Murchison was not interested in other women. Mrs. Deane asks Mrs. Murchison about her diamond necklace. Mrs. Murchison denies possessing one.

CHARLOTTE JEAN," said Tuck next morning as she dried the newly washed flower vases. "We had a marvelous omelet cocktail last night. Mrs. Deane is an awful good cook. Not that you cook the melon, of course," she added hastily as a question grew in Charlotte Jean's eyes. "It seemed very simple. I poked mine to find out how it was done. Order some melons today, will you? One of every kind they have."

"Yes, Mrs. Forrester. Did you drink it or eat it?" "We ate it. Like an oyster cocktail, Charlotte Jean."

self they'll be ugly?" "I can't get nothink to say about it, mum." Tuck turned away in despair, and encountered the gaze of Miss Lissy, who had come into her own back garden, and was leaning on the hedge. "What's that idiot doing?" she asked, none too quietly. "Tuck went closer before she answered. "He's making rockeries, Miss Lissy," she replied sweetly. "I think they're wonderful. Don't you? So picturesque."

"Hmpf. Who told him to?" "I'm sure I don't know. What per's has charge of the gardens out here?" "He has, mostly. But the man's a fool. He has the brain of a hen."

"She changed the subject abruptly. "I suppose you had a wonderful time last night?" "Yes, I did. It was awfully nice of Mrs. Deane to have us. Lovely party, wasn't it?"

"There were suddenly a great many more wrinkles in Miss Lissy's face. "A lovely party," she repeated distastefully. "A lovely party—yes, the way a wormy apple is lovely."

"Ligh. Surely..." "Miss Lissy's eyes were sharp. "How did you like Mrs. Murchison?" she demanded. "I notice you didn't spend much time with her."

"I didn't have the opportunity. I think she is very beautiful." "Beautiful?" She stared at Tuck for a moment, then turned away from the hedge. "I suppose she is, if you want to think so."

"She compressed her lips angrily for a moment. "I'm going to ask about those rockeries," she said briskly. "I won't have any in my garden. If he tries to unload his cast-off stones on me I'll throw them at him."

"Licked To A Frazzle" "IT was a thoughtful Tuck who greeted Michael when he came home at lunch time. Bunny was spending the day in town and coming out with the District Attorney later; so Tuck and Michael had lunch alone, and she told him the whole long story of Charlotte Jean and Higgins and Miss Lissy, and all the minor complications. Michael did not seem as worried as she wanted him to be.

"I'm afraid you'll let everything get on your little nerves, honey," he said. "People have their individualities, you know. All of them aren't bonded up in mystery. Probably Higgins had too much beer last night, and talked through his hat, and has a hang over, and I've told you what's the matter with Miss Lissy. She's jealous. Too bad all the women who live in this house are beautiful. And by the way, Mrs. McBain's a beauty, too. She's got Mrs. Murchison licked in my mind. Licked to a frazzle. It's like comparing a little French dressmaker's model with a Greek statue."

"Michael," said his wife severely, "we will now change the subject. What happens to things when they're bonded up in mystery? Do they go right spang into the furnace without a pause?" "Is this a rhetorical question, or does it require an answer?" "I need an answer. It's my neck-lace. I dropped it last night and down it went, whoosh, somewhere. I looked into it as far as I could stretch, but I can't see it."

"Which register did it fall into?" "The one in the little dressing room."

"Probably the pipe has a crook in it. I will investigate." "Could it have gone into the furnace, Michael? Or some place where we won't get it?" "Rest assured, my love, it could not. Even if the furnace were burning, it would be quite safe curled up snug and warm inside the jacket. He was running down the basement stairs as he talked and Tuck followed him.

"Let's see now," he muttered. He wandered about looking at the ceiling, his hands in his hip pockets. "It'll be in the southwest corner... that room's right over the study..." he put his hand on the big square pipe that ran flat along under the floor for several feet and then took an abrupt bend to the furnace. "Here's where your beads will be," he decided. "This is the study ventilator, and the dressing room probably connects with it somewhere up above in the floor."

"Can you get them, Michael? It looks awfully solid." Michael got a screw driver and performed a minor operation on the ventilator, at the angle where it entered the basement. He peered into the opening. He put the screw driver in and moved it about. "That's funny," he said. "Are you sure that's where they went, Tuck?"

"Of course I'm sure. I just dropped them right bang into it." Michael peered into it again. He pressed the opening wider, and put his hand in. The ventilator was empty.

"Couldn't they be farther along, Michael?" "I don't see how, unless they had feet. That pipe runs flat for ten feet before it takes another bend. They'd slide some distance, of course. As he spoke he was pulling the sheet of tin loose along one side of the pipe, and watching inside it.

"The necklace was emphatically not there."

He spoke of "increasing despair" among Germans since war began.

IN AT START—Senators Tom Connally (left) of Texas and Albert Thomas of Utah, Democratic members of senate foreign relations committee, are credited with having helped draft the neutrality bill being considered by a special session of congress. Since the war began Sept. 3, the American public has been signing petitions, arguing, writing to congressmen about the bill.

SAID THE SENATOR FROM IOWA—Multiply this animated discussion between Democratic Senators Guy Gillette (right) of Iowa, Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania, and Robert R. Reynolds (left) of North Carolina, and you'll have a rough idea of the nation-wide debates over the neutrality bill. The bill would wipe out the present embargo against arms sales to warring countries, would require belligerents to take title to goods purchased in U. S. before shipment, and provides that American goods be carried to belligerents in non-American vessels.

OPPOSES—Sen. Hiram Johnson (above), California Republican, contends that neutrality bill's 90-day credit clause abrogates the law which forbids loans to debt-defaulters.

CAPITAL TRUCE—Their difference of opinion didn't prevent this friendly meeting of Sen. Key Pittman (right) Democrat of Nevada, foreign relations committee chairman who's guiding the bill, and Sen. William E. Borah, Idaho's Republican isolationist, who opposes repeal of arms embargo. Under the bill, the President could designate combat areas barred to Americans.

right On Intolerance Being Waged By Jews

The fight against intolerance through a concrete manifestation of Lincoln's principle of charity to all is demonstrated in the day-by-day work of the National Jewish Hospital at Denver, according to Miss Rose Handelman, field secretary of the institution, who arrived in Greenville today.

During her visit here Miss Handelman will confer with members of the National Board of Directors and Hospital supporters. Local residents on the National Board are Mrs. Luther H. Bowling and Dr. A. M. Schultz.

Oldest charitable institution in the United States for the free treatment of tuberculosis poor, the National Jewish Hospital this year is celebrating the completion of four decades of non-sectarian service. Its doors have been open for forty years to victims of the white plague from every state in the union. Although almost entirely supported by Jews, it has raised no restrictions as to creed, the only qualifications required of an applicant being that he need treatment for tuberculosis and be unable to pay. The motto of the hospital is "None May Enter Who Can Pay—None Can Pay Who Enter."

Especially notable are these accomplishments when it is considered that the hospital receives neither federal nor state aid. Miss Handelman pointed out, "For the democratic ideals of tolerance and charity to all of which the National Jewish Hospital is a living symbol, are upheld by thousands of voluntary contributors who use this practical method to express their convictions."

Among the most progressive of American tuberculosis institutions, the National Jewish hospital has two departments for children, a preventive for those predisposed to tuberculosis, and a separate building for children with active tuberculosis. It maintains a research department which according to the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, is to be credited with some of the "most fundamental discoveries made in relationship to the germs of tuberculosis and our methods of attack upon it."

There is also at the Hospital a vocational therapy and rehabilitation department designed to train patients in useful trades and vocations which they can follow without detriment to their health when they leave the hospital.

SEEK HOT RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Observer Wonders If Any Pep Can Be Put Into Fight

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Oct. 21.—Of course the voting is still a long time off, and there's time enough for all sorts of changes between now and then, but as things stand today the principal question worrying observers of North Carolina's coming political campaign isn't who will win, but whether any pep and vinegar whatsoever can be injected into the race.

So far the answer is an emphatic "No," but it was sagely observed not so long ago by one of North Carolina's editorial writers that there never has been a really dull gubernatorial primary where there was any opposition whatever; and the prediction was made that the 1940 affair will prove no exception to the rule, which is as it may be.

Certainly no one of the suspected half dozen candidates can claim any edge over the field at present. There are those who insist that Lieutenant Governor W. P. Horton will have the "Administration" support, which if undeniably true would put him in a mighty fine spot; but there is no observable evidence that the statements are anything except the offspring of the hopes of those making them. Neither by word nor act has Governor Hoey manifested the slightest preference for Horton or anyone else for that matter—nor has any outstanding and admitted leader of the predominant "ins" put his shoulder squarely to the Horton wheel and given a noticeable push.

There are intimations that Labor is rampant for J. M. Broughton and that the Raleigh attorney will get the biggest part of the McDonald support of 1936—himself assertions that Dr. McDonald even will be found backing Broughton when the time comes.

As with the tales about Horton, there is not even enough evidence in support of these boasts for Broughton to make out a prima facie case. Unquestionably Mr. Broughton will get some labor backing; undoubtedly some McDonald lieutenants will be for him; and certainly the good Doctor hasn't committed himself against the capital city candidate. But that there is any general trend of labor to Broughton is not apparent; that he will get the bulk of McDonald support is to say the least highly doubtful.

There is a tendency to disregard Willis Smith's prospective candidacy, many dismissing it as highly unlikely; and there is no reason to believe that Smith could or would sweep the state like a prairie fire or a Franklin Roosevelt. There has come to this bureau reports of Smith strength in sections where it has been quite unsuspected that he had any, but these reports carry no great conviction, though one Revenue Department employee who gets about quite a bit and who is possessed of considerable political acumen whispered to your correspondent that the Smith would be of necessity, tied to the Maxwell (chariot wheels) reported that down in Union county and that section of the Piedmont, Smith is far stronger than anyone unacquainted with the situation could believe.

There has been and still is a tendency to figure Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell out of the race. Somehow or other there are scores of honest observers, as well as other scores who see only what they want to see, who sincerely doubt that the State's revenue expert can make the grade in the race, though the post he now holds. To the Maxwell credit, however, it must be said that his highway improvement program is one of the few concrete plans submitted by any candidate, and there's no gainsaying its appeal to masses of Tar Heel voters.

Mayor Thomas E. Cooper—Tom to practically everybody—seems to have made the biggest hit at this week's Political Union speechifying at Chapel Hill, but with the total attendance there put at something less than 300, that hit wouldn't seem to be much more than a scratch single through the infield—certainly no home run or even double in the political Worlds Series.

There is also a strong tide of opinion that Tom's goose has been completely cooked by refusal of Dr. McDonald to smile upon the Cooper candidacy and though Tom professes to be utterly indifferent, there's no getting away from the fact that this development has done him much less than no good at all.

Yet if anybody is to put color, fight and fire into the campaign it's this same Tom Cooper and those who like to see the political party flying want the Wilmington mayor to stay in there pitching as he can pitch when the occasion arises. His slaps at high-salaried judges retiring on pensions, in contrast to low-salaried teachers who must go on relief and Old Age Assistance when they are worn out in the public service is going to make Tom votes—there aren't many judges and there are a lot of teachers; but even so there isn't apparent any Cooper tidal wave.

Last to get recognition as a prospect, Lee Gravely of Rocky Mount has the advantage that comes from having been comparatively unexposed to the slings and arrows of jealous rivals. Yet this almost announcement was not followed by a hallelujah chorus of praise and joy from Murphy to Manteo. He may get up steam as he goes along, but there's no noticeable flame in the firebox right now.

If candidates are a dime a dozen, North Carolina hasn't more than a nickel's worth in the six now in the race.

Wayne County Man Victim Of Affray

Raleigh, Oct. 21.—(AP)—William Henry Monk, about 27, of Goldsboro, was fatally stabbed and B. E. Elks, also of Goldsboro, suffered knife wounds in an altercation with three unidentified Negroes here early today, Coroner Roy M. Banks said.

Banks said Monk and Elks, along with R. D. Whitehurst of Beaufort, apparently stopped their car on the Wendell highway just outside of Raleigh shortly after midnight and an argument ensued between them and three Negro men who happened to be passing.

Monk and Elks and the Negroes, he said, began a fight in the course of which knives were flashed, while Whitehurst waited in the car.

Monk died shortly afterwards and Elks was taken to a hospital here for treatment of minor injuries. Police are looking for the three Negroes, but said they had not been able to identify them.

Louisburg Makes It Easy for Loafing Visitors

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Oct. 21.—Louisburg, a comparatively near neighbor of Raleigh, makes it easy on loafers, particularly during the tobacco marketing season. At least, that's what Bill Sharpe of the News Office at the Department of Conservation and Development, contends.

The Louisburgers, he points out, are inclined to the belief that life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness include the privilege of a bit of public leisure.

Taking note of all the traffic rules and regulations, signs, markers and stripes which plague motorists and pedestrians alike, Louisburg has gone to bat for its citizens and country-people who like to stop on the street and talk about politics, the War and hunting.

Along a couple of busy streets, the sidewalks have been marked off in three lanes. Center lane is strictly for walking purposes—the two outside lanes are for the innocent falling which is part of the pleasure of a southern town. A few benches are placed in the loafing spaces.

Under the Louisburg system, a farmer can come to town and sell his tobacco in this bustling town in no danger of being pulled around by hurrying Saturday afternoon crowds. Upon meeting his friends from the next county, the group simply steps over into the loafing zone, and there, protected by law and manners, they may chin to their hearts content.

The system works both ways, too, such bustling as Louisburgers undertake in getting to their work may be done in the stream-lined walking lane without interference. Loafers infringe on this lane at their peril.

Ministers Of City Visit College Here

The annual presentation at chapel of members of the Ministerial Association of Greenville and young people's workers of the various churches, to the student body of East Carolina Teachers College, was presided over by the Reverend W. A. Ryan, on Friday, October 20.

Mr. Ryan opened the program by requesting the audience to sing "Come Thou Almighty King," after which he read the First Psalm, following it with prayer.

He next presented to the student body Mr. Patrick, minister of the Immanuel Baptist church and president of the Ministerial Association, who made the remainder of the introductions. Mr. Patrick presented first the student secretaries.

Miss Sarah W. Whitmore, student secretary of the Presbyterian church, declared when introduced that she "felt greener and fresher than the greenest, and freshest freshman present," as she, too, is new in Greenville.

Miss Mary Lee Ernest, secretary of both the Memorial and Immanuel Baptist churches, said that she would like to become acquainted with every student in E. C. T. C. this year, no matter what the denomination.

Mr. Patrick then introduced the ministers present. Dr. R. S. Boyd, Presbyterian minister, formerly from Georgia, compared the E. C. T. C. young ladies with the peaches of Georgia, and Mr. Landeck, Lutheran minister, welcomed the "late-sleepers" to the Lutheran place of worship, at present the Rotary Club building.

Mr. Ryan, introduced by Mr. Patrick in a jocular manner, welcomed the students to the Christian church. He declared, however, that the students of E. C. T. C. visiting the different churches would not, from the sermons, be able to tell the denominations of the churches. The churches here are all characterized by liberal philosophy, informal service, friendliness, courtesy and genuine interest—a sort of Brunswick Stew," he said.

Those who were unable to be present were Mrs. Ryan, Christian student leader, Dr. Simpson, Memorial Baptist minister, Mr. Grant, Methodist minister, and Miss Davis, Methodist student leader.

The surest way to get superior type cockerels is to purchase from breeders who have been doing family testing over a period of years, says C. F. Parrish, extension poultryman at State College.

New York, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Cotton futures rose four to 10 points today on active spot house absorption in the face of limited offerings.

Trade price-fixing and local buying also helped with the upturn. Hedging was light and there was not much cotton for sale after yesterday's decline.

Utilities Smash All Records

(6) Coal: For two years the soft coal industry has been in the doldrums. Ever since the 1937 boom back-fired, the coal mines have been limping along at about 60 per cent of normal. Within six short weeks, daily coal output has caromed up 25 per cent. The recent report stating that the first barge load of coal sent to Europe in twelve years has left the United States provides a clue as to the war's effect on this industry.

(7) Mining: Copper sales in September were the highest on record. Metal prices have been marked up 25 to 30 per cent. Operations at the copper, zinc, lead, iron and other mines are marching toward the 1937 levels. Meanwhile, activity in the petroleum industry as a whole is at an all-time high.

(8) Utilities: The measure of activity in the electric industry is the weekly power consumption figure reported in the newspapers. Readers who follow this total know that more electric power is being used today than at any time in the history of the country. In almost every week since Labor Day, consumption of electricity has set a new all-time peak.

(9) Machine Tools: The machinery and machine tool industry is small compared with such giant industries as building, railroads, and steel. Nevertheless, it is a vital barometer of activity in the labyrinth of industries such as cutlery, business machines, aviation, radio, hardware, railroad equipment and the like. Hence, it is very encouraging to learn that machine tool orders in recent weeks have smashed all previous records.

Opinion Divided on Trend

This is the most bullish report on American business that I have been able to write for two years. There is no forecasting in what I have said above. All statements are facts concerning what has happened. Whether or not activity can continue at the present pace is another question and one which is too difficult to answer right now. Some observers believe that this boom was touched off by the war and will fold up like an accordion if hostilities are suddenly halted. Others insist that the tremendous step-up in industrial activity was already under way this summer and would have taken place, though less rapidly, war or no war.

I have not had time yet to study the situation and take any position on this question. Perhaps the answer is a middle-ground—somewhere between the above two views. However, unless retailers boost their merchandising efforts and keep their cash registers clanging, the industrial boom will peter out. In order to maintain our current paper, raw materials and goods which have been purchased in anticipation of higher war prices, must move along to the consumer so that new orders can be placed with manufacturers and raw material suppliers. A few weeks should tell the story.

Costumes Catch Fire In Greenville Theatre

A fire in the dressing room of the Pitt theatre yesterday afternoon was quickly extinguished, but only after some of the costumes of the players in "Wake Up and Cheer" had been damaged beyond repair.

The fire is believed to have caught in some costumes hanging around a light bulb, the clothing having become too hot. The blaze had only got a start, however, when someone entered the room and extinguished it.

John McDowell and Eugene Berryhill, Mecklenburg County 4-H Club members, will represent North Carolina at the National Dairy Show at San Francisco, October 21-30.

Woodwork Cleaning

To clean enamelled woodwork, melt 1/2 cup shaved soap in two cups of boiling water. Whip to a lather and apply with a sponge to a small space at a time. Wash, then wipe off the suds with a dry cloth and quickly rinse with a clean soft cloth. Proceed until all the woodwork has been cleaned. This method helps prevent streaking.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Oct. 21.—(AP)—A mild revival of the war buying urge came into the stock market today and steels, motor trucks, aircrafts and specialties were lifted fractions to more than a point.

While extreme gains were shaded in some cases at the close, many favorites emerged at the day's best levels, with a handful in new high territory for the year.

Dealings, slow at the start, picked up a little momentum later with several large blocks of low-priced issues changing hands at about where they finished yesterday.

Transfers approximated 600,000 shares, or more than double last Saturday's total.
