CLEARING SKY MAY RESULT IN REAL FIGHTING

Storm Lifts After Week of Rain, Snow And Sleet

NUMBER GERMAN RAIDS REPULSED

Some Military Experts Predict Dry, Cold Weather May Be Turning Point on Western Front

Paris, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Both German and French commands were reported to have sent out scouting patrols today as storms over the Western front lifted after more than a week of wind, rain and snow which paralyzed military operations.

Skies cleared during the night and a dry cold set in at the start of the ninth week of war, which some military experts predict may prove to be a turning point.

The French morning communique said that several German raids had been repulsed. A German unit detected throwing up earthworks east of the industrial city of Saarbruecken, was reported dispersed by the French mortars.

Military dispatches said the Germans were maintaining heavy troop concentrations all along the front. Military men said several days of dry weather would still be necessary however to dry the soaked ground and permit large-scale operations.

Premier Daladier conferred with Air Minister Guy La Chambre on the state of allied defenses against a possible German aerial offensive.

A French deputy warned France against depending too heavily on the United States for war supplies and urged that home industries be organized on an increased production basis.

Henri D. Karillis, a member of the Chamber of Deputies, said in his newspaper that France should not get the idea that "from the moment she can count on American aid she can dispense with fabricating herself defense materials destined to pursue the war."

Morton, Jr., was given a 30-day sentence, suspended upon payment of costs in each of two cases, one charging careless and reckless driving and the other speeding and violation of a traffic ordinance; Horace Vincent was acquitted of a careless and reckless driving charge; Jack Moore, Negro, was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon and given a 30-day sentence, suspended upon payment of $5 and costs.

Pendergast Faces Additional Count

Kansas City, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Tom Pendergast, one-time boss of the Kansas City Democratic machine, and R. Emmett O'Malley, former state insurance superintendent, were named today in indictments returned by a grand jury investigating settlement of the Missouri fire insurance rate case.

The county jury indicted Pendergast for bribery in connection with settlement of the $9,000,000 fire insurance rate case. O'Malley was charged with accepting a bribe in connection with the compromise.

Both are now in Leavenworth penitentiary serving sentences for Federal income tax evasion.

The body of Carl Bivins (above), 38-year-old flying instructor, was found in a thicket near Macon, Mo., 24 hours after he disappeared from Brookfield, Mo., with a passenger in a yellow plane. Don F. Stiver, superintendent of Indiana state police, announced at Indianapolis that Ernest Pletch, Hoosier aviator, had confessed the slaying.

HEAVY DAMAGE LEFT BY FIRES

McCormick Music Company Suffers $6,000 Blaze

Four fires broke out in Greenville between 9 o'clock yesterday morning and 6:30 o'clock this morning, two of which caused considerable damage.

The most destructive was at the McCormick Music company at 121 West Fourth street, which was discovered about 6:15 o'clock last night and was extinguished about 9 o'clock. It was not certain whether the fire originated in the attic, paint shop, or among phonograph covers.

L. B. McCormick, owner, estimated that the damage would total $6,000, partially covered by insurance. Besides water and smoke damage, tools, stock and record cases, phonograph covers and records were destroyed. Electric phonographs also suffered heavily from the blaze. Mr. McCormick was high in his praise of the local fire department, giving the firemen credit for saving his papers, records, etc. The owner was out of the city when the fire broke out. He was advised by telephone, however, reaching here after the blaze had been extinguished.

The other disastrous fire was in the Bama section, where 10 colored tenant houses and a small store building owned by W. B. and H. E. Young were destroyed by a fire which broke out about 11:30 o'clock last night. The fire was said to have started when a kerosene stove blew up in one of the buildings, located on Pitt street extension. Firemen were handicapped in fighting the conflagration because of the fact no water mains extend into the section. Only booster lines and what little water could be secured from pumps were available. Firemen, however, did manage to save four houses in the path of the blaze, which lasted for three hours. The loss of the buildings was set at approximately $5,000, covered by insurance.

Firemen were summoned yesterday morning by an alarm from the box on Sixth and Roosevelt street, but when they arrived they could find no fire and no one was at the box to tell them where to go. It later was discovered, however, that the blaze was on the roof of a Negro home in the vicinity, but the fire was extinguished with only slight damage.

At 8:30 o'clock this morning firemen were summoned by a fire on Long street, where a house owned by Cleve Williams and occupied by Lee Duncan, Negro, was destroyed. Firemen reported the fire was practically burned up when they arrived.

Truck Driver Robbed Near Ayden Saturday

J. C. Youngblood, owner of the Sunshine Cleaners here, revealed that one of his drivers, Bill Clark, was held up by two Negroes Saturday night about 8 o'clock at a site about a mile east of Ayden.

Mr. Youngblood reported that the driver's money bag containing between $20 and $25 was taken from him by the two robbers, who drove off in the laundry truck. The truck and empty money bag were found about two hours later by the Ayden police. Mr. Youngblood reported, about 200 yards off the Ayden-Stokestown highway.

NO HOPES FOR PEACE HELD BY GREAT BRITAIN

Government Indicates Stand in Formal Statement

NAZI SAVAGERY IN CAMPS CITED

Admiralty, Meanwhile, Announces Encounter Between British Destroyers and German Planes

London, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The British government indicated tonight there was not the slightest hope of reaching any settlement with Nazi Germany, in a statement dealing with German concentration camps.

An introduction to the statement, containing a collection of affidavits which Britain cited "Nazi savagery" in "the treatment of German nationals in Germany 1938-39," declared:

"These documents were not written for publication and indeed as long as there was the slightest prospect of reaching any settlement with the German government it would have been wrong to do anything to embitter relations between the two countries.

"Even after the outbreak of war His Majesty's government felt reluctant to take action which might have the effect of inspiring hatred.

"But the attitude of the German government and the unscrupulous propaganda which they are spreading compels His Majesty's government to make public these documents so that public opinion both at home and abroad may be able to judge for itself."

London, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The Admiralty announced tonight that British destroyers and German planes had met in battle today off the Dogger bank in the North Sea. An Admiralty communique said:

"This morning off the Dogger bank a flotilla of our destroyers came into action with two German bombers. There were no casualties or damage to our destroyers and it is not known whether the enemy suffered damage.

GERMAN CRAFT SEEN ON RAIDS

British Fighter Planes Scare Off Nazi Fliers

London, Oct. 30.—(AP)—British fighter planes went up to investigate the presence of unidentified aircraft off the Essex coast today and a German plane also was seen over the northeast coast, the Air Ministry announced.

Air raid signals were sounded in London by mistake.

The Ministry issued two communications, the first saying:

"An air raid warning which was given in the east Kent area this morning was due to the presence of unidentified aircraft off the Essex coast proceeding south.

"British fighter aircraft went up to investigate. As announced, the all-clear signal was sounded 10 minutes later."

The second communique said:

"An enemy aircraft was observed off the northeast coast of England this morning. British fighter aircraft went up to investigate, whereupon the enemy aircraft made off in an easterly direction before contact could be made."

Air raid warnings, sounded in London at the height of the morning rush to work, sent thousands hurrying to shelters, but the Air Ministry announced the signals were in error and began an investigation.

Grandmother Offers to Sell Eye

Mrs. Grace Davis of near Chattanooga, Tenn., here shown holding her three-month-old grandson, has offered to sell the cornea of one of her eyes for $5,000 in order to give her five children "the chance in life to which they are entitled."

Everything Set For Chest Drive

The third annual Community Chest campaign in Greenville will get under way officially with a breakfast in the Proctor hotel tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock and officials have expressed the intention of winding up the drive on Friday.

A budget of $6,000 has been set for the city, a figure higher than that for last year. The budget was increased because of the inclusion of the Girl Scout organization and the increasing demands on emergency relief. The Girl Scouts have been budgeted for $600.

The emergency relief fund was increased from $500 to $1,000 by directors who fixed the budget. It was explained that a large number of needy cases, for which no provisions have been made elsewhere come to the attention of Chest officials each year and this fund has been inadequate in the past to take care of the demands made on it. The Thrift Shop Service League, Boy Scouts and Salvation Army, along with Girl Scouts and the emergency relief fund participate in the Chest, inaugurated for the purpose of having one concerted drive instead of individual campaigns in the city.

Campaign headquarters have been set up in the Thrift shop over J. Key Brown's drug store.

General Chairman W. A. Ryan said he had invited a number of prospective workers to attend the breakfast tomorrow morning, but added he had been unable to get in touch with many who probably would be willing to give their services. He urged any person, whether she or he had been called or not, to attend the breakfast and enlist in the drive. In case a person is unable to attend and can not attend the breakfast, he or she is urged to go to the campaign headquarters as early after the breakfast as possible.

It is the aim of officials to complete the solicitation in the downtown district tomorrow and to devote Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to the outlying areas and to making repeat calls in the business districts where prospective subscribers were not seen on Tuesday.

Chairman Ryan urged the public to cooperate with workers so as to complete the campaign in as short a time as possible.

STREET PARTY AWARDS MADE PLANNED HERE FOR SABOTAGE

Two Blocks to be Roped off for Hal-lowe'en Dance

German - American Commission grants $50,000,000

Washington, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The German-American Mixed Claims Commission awarded approximately $50,000,000 today to Americans with claims against Germany arising from the Black Tom and Kingsland N. J. sabotage cases of 1916 and 1917.

The commission last June 15 found Imperial Germany responsible for the munitions disasters in the New York port area prior to United States entry into the World War.

Today's action made the definite award to the claimants.

STIFF DEBATE PREDICTED ON EMBARGO BILL

House Gets Measure On Take it or Leave It Basis

FOES WANT TO MAKE CHANGES

Administration Forces, However, Anxious to Prevent Any Amendments Being Offered on Floor

Washington, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Offering the Senate neutrality bill to the House on a "take it or leave it basis," administration leaders took sharp issue today with demands of arms embargo advocates for a chance to revise the legislation.

This question of parliamentary procedure important to both sides for tactical reasons, was laid before the House Rules committee. It was a skirmish holding tomorrow's debate in the House.

The administration forces, confident of duplicating their Senate victory for embargo repeal and a "cash and carry" trade program, wanted to prevent amendments being offered from the floor. They insisted that the House vote on the original Senate bill.

But Rep. Fish (R-N.Y.) leader of the anti-repeal bloc, contended that the House had a right to alter the measure as it saw fit. He served notice that he not only would fight in committee for that privilege, but also would seek at least three days of House debate. Repeal chiefs tentatively suggested two days.

Although administration lieutenants claimed victory by at least 30 votes, Fish disputed this statement and estimated the margin for either side at less than 10 votes. Rep. Boland (D-Pa.) the Democratic whip, was taking a poll to ascertain the views of all party members.

The alleged attack took place last Wednesday about 12:30 o'clock. According to the complaint, the defendants entered Mr. Youngblood's place and in the presence of the plaintiff's wife and two other white women, addressed the plaintiff in a rude and insulting manner and that Mack Brown ordered the plaintiff to take off his glasses and go outside "that the defendants had a matter to settle" with Youngblood.

The complaint further alleges that the plaintiff asked the defendants to leave and that they not only refused, but persisted in their insults to him and their advances and insulting remarks, "all in furtherance of their malicious design and purpose to beat plaintiff up personally and to injure and destroy his business and property."

It is alleged that after the plaintiff had asked the defendants to leave three or four times, both defendants viciously and maliciously attacked and assaulted the plaintiff, beating him over the head and face. The complaint states that the plaintiff was of the belief that had it not been for the timely arrival of assistance, the defendants would have killed the plaintiff, who states that he is 51 years of age and suffered bruises and lacerations, severe pain and soreness and has been in a highly nervous condition since.

It is also contended that the plaintiff's business has been injured and damaged and that a valuable watch was broken in the alleged assault.

A criminal warrant also was sworn out against the two defendants last week and, following a preliminary hearing in magistrate's court, they were bound over to Superior court on charges of forcible trespass and assault with intent to injure.

The trouble is said to have arisen over drainage from Youngblood's property emptying onto Brown's property.

Dink James represents the plaintiff.

Three Greenville Negroes, Tobe Taft, Michael Taft and Clarence Cozart were painfully cut by a "strange Negro" Saturday night and Chief of Police George Clark said he believed the Negroes were telling the truth when they said they did not know who cut them.

"It looks like some strange Negro came to town and really got three of our Negroes," the chief declared. Each of the three victims required medical attention. The altercation took place on Allen's alley.

IS SENTENCED FOR BURGLARY

Negro Gets 15 Years, 13 Of Which Are Suspended

Arthur Spain, 17-year-old Greenville Negro, being held in county jail several months on a charge of first degree burglary, pleaded guilty to second degree burglary in Pitt Superior court this afternoon and was given a 15-year sentence, 13 of which were suspended upon good behavior and upon condition that he does not violate any state laws.

Spain entered the home of Dr. Carl L. Adams, went into the room of the college professor and stole some $3.03 from his pockets.

James Clark and Tony Gray, Negroes, were convicted of liquor charges, and the former given two years and the latter one year.

Heber Chapman, Negro, was given three years in a reformatory and an additional year for breaking and entering.

Jame Andrews, Negro, was acquitted of possessing whiskey for sale, but George Andrews was given six months sentence.

Moses Carr, Negro, was given five years for assaulting officers, but the judgment provided for suspension of the sentence at the expiration of one year and provided the defendant remain of good behavior and not violate any laws.

Further Advances In Price Of Weed

A general price advance was indicated for Eastern North Carolina flue-cured tobacco sold this week according to the U. S. Agricultural Marketing Service and North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

Compared with last week, average prices were 50 cents to $2.00 higher on most grades with the largest increases occurring in the smoking leaf cutters and better grades of leaf. Common to fair quality leaf and fair to fine quality lugs were the principal offerings. Smoking leaf cutters and lugs composed a larger percentage of the offerings than last week. The general quality of the tobacco showed an improvement over that sold last week.

Roars At Dies

This picture of Joseph Curran, husky president of the National Maritime union (N.M.U.), was made as he roared at Rep. Martin Dies of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. "I'm an American, my Americanism is just as good as yours," during a hearing at Washington. He followed that up with the comment, "What a circus!" Dies threatened to cite him for contempt after that. Curran charged the Maritime Commission was "stabbing seamen in the back."

U. S. RECEIVES FIRST CLUE OF CITY OF FLINT

Vessel Said to Have Departed from Norway Port

IS HEADING FOR GERMAN PORT

Norfolk, Va., Woman Receives Word from Husband; Third Assistant Engineer is Aboard Ship

Stockholm, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Reports from Norway today said that the United States freighter City of Flint, released from a Soviet port to her German captors, had departed from Tromsø, Norway, late this afternoon.

These reports were the first clue of the whereabouts of the American vessel.

The City of Flint was said to have sailed at 4 p. m. (10 a. m. EST) from Tromsø, the northern Norwegian port where the captured ship halted briefly on its northward journey to Russia more than a week ago.

In Norfolk, Va., Mrs. Mary Robertson of Norfolk said she had received a message reading "all well, don't worry" from her husband, J. V. Robertson, third assistant engineer aboard the City of Flint. The message was relayed through the Department of State from Tromsø, Norway, where it was sent October 21.

Berlin, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The American freighter City of Flint apparently was the quarry today in a game of hide and seek somewhere in the North Atlantic, according to the best available information here, but German officials were silent.

Unofficial sources said the United States-owned vessel still was in the hands of a German prize crew and attempting to dodge the British blockade on a run from Murmansk, Russia, to a German port.

But officials said that until the City of Flint docks "there will be no information about this ship."

The American crew, which was taken to the Soviet Arctic port with the City of Flint after its capture in the Atlantic, was said probably to be still aboard, but as "passengers" without any responsibility for navigating her.

In London naval experts said the British navy would be handicapped by nature in attempting to intercept the City of Flint. In the authorized British view the German prize crew readily could sail her down the coast of Norway to Germany, thus taking advantage of territorial waters to prevent the British from stepping in.

TWO BROTHERS OF CITY SUED

J. C. Youngblood asks $4,000 from Wyatt And Mack Brown

J. C. Youngblood, individually, and trading as the Sunshine Cleaners, has brought civil action against Wyatt Brown, owner of the Cascade laundry, and his brother, Mack Brown, seeking to recover $2,000 actual and $2,000 punitive damages, allegedly suffered when the two defendants supposedly entered the plaintiff's place of business and physically beat him.

The alleged attack took place last Wednesday about 12:30 o'clock. According to the complaint, the defendants entered Mr. Youngblood's place and in the presence of the plaintiff's wife and two other white women, addressed the plaintiff in a rude and insulting manner and that Mack Brown ordered the plaintiff to take off his glasses and go outside "that the defendants had a matter to settle" with Youngblood.

President Leo R. Meadows gave a most inspiring talk to the vesper group of the Young Womens Christian Association at the college Sunday evening.

President Meadows chose as his topic "Christian Citizenship" and applied it first to nations and then to individuals.

He began by referring to Russia, Japan, China, Germany and other countries, from which Christianity is banned. Turning again to the Orient, he described a plan once suggested of having a large group of Americans, not missionaries, but average Americans, establish themselves as citizens in the Orient to bring about a greater feeling of common interest and show in practice Christian citizenship.

Then taking up Christian citizenship in the life of the individual President Meadows raised the question of what the individual can do to further such citizenship. He answered his own question by pointing out with a wealth of illustrative material a number of things each listener could do, including learning to do well something that is of service and making himself economically independent, helping those around him in every way possible, conserving those things of value to the race, and developing a spirit of cooperation with the purpose and ideals of the college.

HUGH HERBERT

A CANDID TALK WITH—

WHO HE IS

HUGH HERBERT, born in Binghamton, N. Y., 48 years ago, has been writer, director, serious actor as well as "woo woo" comic. Began acting in stock 35 years back. First professional work was as a voice behind a movie screen in an early "talkie" attempt. He's a graduate of Cornell university and a gardener—for diversion. His trade-mark—"woo woo"—originated when he was playing in a movie with a flock of other comics, all wacky in style. To hold his own in the general nuttiness, he developed a nervous, irresponsible, timid type of personality, made it chirp "woo woo" on divers occasions. The preview reception pinned the label on him.

"You don't have to be crazy to be a comedian—but it helps. After reading letters from fans who apparently think I'm as goofy as some of my screen characters, I sometimes wonder if they aren't right.

"Simple things are often the funniest, but I feel that the old formula of plastering some fellow with a custard pie has been overworked. People laugh loudly when they see someone else in a fix that they themselves have found embarrassing.

"Good comedians have to be good listeners, too. By keeping alert, they can pick up comedy material from taxi drivers, waitresses, schoolboys, doormen and others—lines that are far more effective than those the funny men think up.

"How'd I get into comedy? I was scared into it—years ago. I was playing a doctor in a small stock show. On the stage I became so frightened I almost fainted. My knees started knocking together. I was stumbling awkwardly through my lines. The audience roared. The manager promptly christened me a comedian.

"I've read over 2,000 books on the psychology of laughter, but I still believe the only way to test a joke is to try it out on someone. It's up to the public to decide what's funny.

"I'd rather be funny than President. Nothing like a good laugh to clear up a feeling of blue depression. If we all laughed more and worried less, we'd live longer.

Water Into Wine.

To remove wine stains, soak cloth as quickly as possible in cold water. If the stain refuses to yield, try the boiling water treatment used for fruit stains. Tightly hold the cloth across a bowl, pour boiling water, held at a height of 2 feet, through the stain until it disappears. Often two persons are needed to do this, one holding the cloth as the other pours.

Pumpkin Pie Variety.

To flavor up your next pumpkin pie, put a few chopped nuts and some candied ginger in the filling. And then, for a new touch, try a meringue. When the pie is nearly done, roughly spread a flavored, sweetened stiff meringue over it and bake 10 minutes in a slow oven. Cool and serve.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR Monday, October 30, 1899

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Flanagan returned Saturday evening from their bridal trip north.

Talk about fitness of things, today we caught Jesse Speight comfortably settled in a cozy corner reading "Reveries of a Bachelor."

We know of seven families right now who would like to rent houses in Greenville. No doubt there are more. This goes to show that more houses should be built.

Another Monday has come that brought Mayor Moye no cases to try in his court. During last week there were only three small cases disposed of.

Thirteen Pound Yam Produced in County

A sweet potato weighing 13 pounds and being only one of many unusually large ones grown by Shade Hardee of Swift Creek township, was brought to the offices of the Register today and left on display in the window.

Mr. Hardee, who lives about two miles from Chicod school, said that he found several potatoes weighing eight or 10 pounds. The one he brought to the city was said by many to be the largest they ever had seen. It was Puerto Rico.

The American farmers are using fertilizer which is indicated by figures showing that farm machinery sales were 350 per cent higher in 1938 than at the bottom of the depression.

TO FEEL FINE, USE VEGETABLE LAXATIVE

Here's the laxative that acts as thoroughly as harsher ones, but is a gentle persuader for intestines when used this way: A quarter to a half-teaspoonful of spicy, aromatic BLACK-DRAUGHT on your tongue tonight, a drink of water—there you are! Then this all-vegetable laxative usually allows plenty of time for sleep, acts thoroughly and gently, and relieves constipation's headaches, biliousness, irritability, bad breath. BLACK-DRAUGHT'S main ingredient is an "intestinal tonic-laxative," which helps tone the intestinal muscles. Millions of packages used prove its merit. Economical—25 to 40 doses, 35c.—(Adv.)

Robert Cobb, Negro of Bethel, route one, was arrested about two hours after a wreck Saturday afternoon, one mile east of Bethel, and charged with hit and run driving and also with careless and reckless driving. He is alleged to have been the driver of a car which struck one driven by D. M. Strickland of Bethel route three, who suffered a cut on his right arm.

All three accidents were investigated by Patrolman C. L. Teague.

Three Arrested In Week-End Wrecks

State Highway Patrolmen investigated three highway accidents in Greene-Pitt county during the week-end, but no one was seriously injured in any of the wrecks.

STATE JURIST 75 YEARS OLD

Justice Seawell Celebrates Birthday Today

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AVERILL
Raleigh, Oct. 30—His name seldom hits the headlines and no occasion has he ever sought the glare of publicity, but quietly and without ostentation one of North Carolina's outstanding citizens will have his seventy-fifth birthday party today.

To look at him, nobody would believe it; to talk to him, his mental alertness would enter a point-blank denial; but the records show that Justice Aaron Ashley Flowers Seawell of the North Carolina Supreme court made his first plea (probably for attention and bit of milk) near Jonesboro in Moore county on October 30, 1864, while Tar Heel mothers were scaring their babes with threats that Sherman would get them.

Pressed on the subject, he will admit it.

"Yes, it's so," he confessed, "every year when I walk down the street and see ghosts, goblins, pumpkins and other Hallowe'en decorations in the five and ten cent stores I know another one has come around—and this time it's the seventy-fifth."

Even so, it's hard to believe that he is the father of four sons and two daughters, all but one of whom has passed the age of attending the University of North Carolina; and not only that—but he is almost universally known as the "father of Lee county," a title he won back in the gay nineties when, as a state senator from Moore his strategy and determination put through the legislature over opposition so strong that it once beat him by one vote in the House, a bill carving Lee from parts of Moore and Chatham. Henry M. London, legislative reference librarian and himself one of the state "grand old men" can give a lot of interesting data on that—and Mr. London was on the other side, too.

The Seawell career has been noteworthy for its many solid substantial accomplishments for the people of North Carolina. Several times a House member of a Senator, his legislative record indicates that few, if any, law makers ever took a livelier interest in education and the general welfare of North Carolina youngsters.

As a private practitioner he won high acclaim at the bar. As assistant to Attorney General Hobe Brummitt his services were so notable that he was universally conceded the logical appointee to succeed to the chief's post upon Mr. Brummitt's death; and when he was named to the Supreme court bench to succeed the late Justice George W. Connor, his worth was so well recognized that there wasn't a dissenting voice even from others who had hoped for the honor.

As a member of the 1783 General Assembly, which waged the longest and stubbornest battles on legislative record in North Carolina, the Seawell light shone brightly. As an advocate of better school opportunities for North Carolina youth he was one of the leaders who finally forced some concessions from the pinchpenny economy bloc which would have set back the educational clock by a quarter-century. He was in the front ranks of those who wrought changes in the state's system of banking supervision—Changes now conceded to have been primary reason some vestige of solvency was salvaged from a crumbling, crashing debacle.

Today the justice is one of the most active, alert members of the state's highest court. Exceeded in actual age by only one member, Justice Heriot Clarkson, he writes as many opinions, asks as many piercing questions of pleaders, and gets about as spryly as any one of the seven judges.

As to his attainments on the bench, the present Attorney General, Harry McMullan has this to say: "When Mr. Seawell was appointed as an Associate Justice of the Supreme court of North Carolina it was evident to those of us who were closely associated with him that the opinions of this court would be enriched by the pen of a thorough and versatile lawyer, endowed with a versatility rarely found amongst us. The anticipations of the friends of Justice Seawell were quickly realized in the opinions which he has been assigned to write, evidencing thorough familiarity with the precedents, while at the same time displaying an unwillingness to tie the progress of the law to the crust of the dead past. This attitude of mind is well illustrated in the recent case of Lilly and Co. vs. Caunders, sustaining the constitutionality of the North Carolina Fair Trade Act.

"With the hosts of friends of Justice Seawell I join in felicitations upon his seventy-fifth birthday and salute him as a great judge and a fine public servant."

No provincial Justice Seawell is still a North Carolina first, last and all the time. He recognizes that the Tar Heel state is a comparatively poor one, when measured by the financial standards usually applied; but he firmly believes that no state in the union has made greater progress in educational affairs, proportion to its wealth than North Carolina.

"There's no reason for that, too," he says firmly and with conviction. "Tar Heels just naturally want to know a little bit more than anybody else, and they want to do just a little bit better, too."

If it has been stated anywhere in this piece that Justice Seawell is seventy-five years old, that's wrong—he's that young.

The first sentence of death imposed by a federal court in the United States was passed in New Bern, N. C., in 1793, when four sailors were hanged for mutiny at Ocracoke Island, N. C.

New York.—Back from the nation's capital where Frank Capra had the audacity to hold the world premiere of his "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" it was audacious because you can't pick a tougher, more critical audience for any picture than the people it is about. "The Front Page" is about the only picture I ever saw that satisfied newspaper folk. Lawyers plead non compos mentis for almost all courtroom films. Doctors needle those sagas of medicine with the poison of righteous indignation. And I never heard of Joe Louis penning any testimonials for those back-of-the-count-of-nine-and-knock-the-bum-for-an-iceberg stories. The boys on the Appian Way probably would have hooted "Ben Hur" and I'll bet the Children of Israel would have smashed "The Ten Commandments." You get the idea.

On the whole, Mr. Capra came off very well. I think "The Daily Constitution" Hall was crammed with officialdom, society and National Press Club members to watch the two-hour opus unfold. Mr. Capra's memory of the event in its entirety should be very pleasant indeed. But one thing occurred that will, I wager, haunt Mr. Capra's nightmares for many years to come. Just as the picture reached one of its most tensely dramatic moments, the sound went out. Capra was sitting not far from me when it happened and he was on his feet and headed for the projection room before you could say "It Happened One Night." But he apparently couldn't help much. The sound was out for minutes. It wouldn't have been so bad if nothing but silence had come from the screen, but the sound track gave out something that can only be produced in type as an unorthodox repetition of "ubba-dubba-stubbarubba."

WIDEN YOUR ROADS WITH CONCRETE

RELIEVE CONGESTION SPEED TRAFFIC INCREASE SAFETY

NO community today can afford narrow, congested roads and streets.

Today's swollen traffic clamors for "elbow room." The practical answer is to widen crowded roadways with concrete. Restores normal speeds. Eliminates congestion. Provides ample room for passing. Saves countless hours. Increases safety. And wider roads boost business.

Whether you build new roads or widen old, be sure to demand concrete—the safest and most economical pavement for modern traffic.

Sloux Falls, S. D.—(AP)—Gabe Caffrey, local newspaper columnist, found a neat way of ducking an overtime parking ticket.

He pleaded, and the city prosecutor and Municipal Judge Gibbs agreed, that his aged car was not a vehicle. "I cannot dismiss the case," said the court. "There isn't any case—there isn't any car, so the court cannot take jurisdiction."

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—The Senate seems to have talked the nation out of the mild hysteria evident when Europe
went to war.

Before the President called the special session, there was agitation against it on the ground that thrashing out the issues before the public would create tension, excite unpleasant sentiments, and generally do harm to the country.

Scanning papers and talking to people who have toured the trouble belts of the U. S. convinces us that the reverse has been true.
Moreover, the tension in Congress
is lessened.

An explanation of the change
seems to lie in the fact that neither side has proved its case completely. One side at first laid so much stress on the danger of an embargo and the other laid so much stress on the danger of shipment of arms that anyone would have been justified in believing that a wrong vote would bring enemy airplanes over New York City.

U. S. Against War

The debate proceeded a month before the Senate really took hold of the bill and began shaping it for passage. In the first violent days, a shout that "a vote for repeal is a step toward war" made the shivers raked along the national back when some convincing radio talker shouted that if we didn't ship arms to the Allies Germany soon would have possession of the British fleet and where would we be then.

A month ago these rival arguments sounded convincing. They still sound significant. Anyone would be a fool to say that all the evidence points one way or the other.
The important thing is that both sides have expressed their determination that the U. S. shall not be led into war. Even more important is the increasing evidences found in polls of sentiment and in more casual matters that the country is solidly committed for the time being at one rate—against ever again making in a European war.
Sentiment could change. Our own experiences run back far enough to remember how our boyish enthusiasm for the Germans one year
changed the next to pitiless hate.

Slanted That Way

But another essential thing has happened. It is essential now that neither Germany nor England will be overwhelmily disposed regardless of how the Congress finally shapes
the bill. The month of debate reported copiously overseas at least among the leaders of the warring nations has doubtless demonstrated that a note one way or the other isn't such surefire proof that we are headed in the direction of any particular side.

It is true that there is more likely to help the Allies than the Germans. That is a most welcome development. This country has been slanted that way for at least three generations.
The advantage of the long debate
has been to let the country as well as the Senate, look at the thing from all angles. If the decision of Congress turns out bad and we finally get into the mess, nobody can say he was trapped.

Grapefruit Treatment

Broiled grapefruit, served hot and sprinkled with honey and chopped
raisins, often gives just the right amount of sweet need after a substantial meal. To broil the grapefruit, remove the seeds and loosen the segments—do not remove them. Spread lightly with honey and broil or bake until light brown and bubbly on top. Add a few

The Creeping Man

by Frances Sholley Wees

YESTERDAY: Tuck figures out that the scraps of paper are a puzzle. Put together in the right way, they make a pattern of the garden. A hole in the center resembles the usual. That's where they find the diamonds.

Chapter 20

Breakfast Guest

TWELVE sparkling stones lay on the desk in the study, dis-vested at last of the hard coating of wax which had dimmed their luster and concealed their brilliant beauty.

"On a snap guess, I'd say they're worth fifty thousand dollars," the District Attorney said.

Tuck drew a deep breath.
"We've accomplished something,"
she said. "We've made the first grade."

Bunny had a tinge of bright color in her cheeks. "I'm glad,"
she said happily. "Somehow it seems to clear the air. There's something tangible to fasten to.
Somewhere to start from."

"And," said Michael, "a million questions to answer. Who put the diamonds there? Are they Murchison's, or did he steal them, and hide them where they'd never be brought out as evidence against him? Or is there some other queer business wrapped up in them?"

"I shouldn't be surprised," his father said dryly, "if from what you've told me of her, his wife didn't have a hand in any thievery that went on."

"You mustn't be prejudiced,
dad. Wait until you get a look at her. She's very good looking."

Tuck sniffed, but her heart was not in it. There was, for the first time, a hint of some serious emotion in her eyes. "I don't just like it," she said. "I don't think I really believed any of it before. Now I know some of it's true. It makes me wonder . . ."

The District Attorney put his hand for a moment on her bright hair. He frowned. "How would you like to go down to the lake for awhile?" he inquired. "The cottage is empty. It's a nice lake."

Tuck leaned back and stared up
at him. "A lake?"

"Um. A lake. I hear there's a new pier, and regattas and the like. Dancing, perhaps."

"I think that's a fine idea, dad," Michael said enthusiastically. "It could drive down week-ends and the girls could stay there all the time."

"I like it here," Tuck said pointedly.

"No doubt you do, my dear. But I'm afraid they'll be wanting the house for a new professor. In fact,
I heard something to that effect
today. He knitted his brows."

"That's just too bad, Father Forrester. Bunny, do you want to go to the lake?"

"No," said Bunny flatly.

"And neither do I, since we've taken the house. Since we were involved into taking the house
for three months, we'll just stay right here. And that's settled." She smiled wickedly at him.

"But look here, Tuck," Michael began. "We've done what we came out to do. The diamonds are found."

She shook her head. "Nothing doing, you two. Your motives are as clear as crystal, and we know what's bothering you. You think that since this has turned out to be a real honest to goodness crime,
instead of just a simple little mystery you'll get out of here . . .
and have all the fun to yourselves.
Well, we're not going. At least,
I'm not going. They're not going to murder me, and they're not going to murder Bunny nor Michael.
We haven't done anything as far as they know . . . whoever they are. There isn't the slightest danger, and there's a tremendous lot of things I want to know. As I said before, I'm staying Bunny."

"Of course. If we must die, we die together."

"The case won't be in my hands,
my dear," the District Attorney abandoning all pretense.

"The Commissioner will take charge now, and put detectives to work again. You've done all you can. Anything else will be impeding
the course of justice."

Tuck looked at him critically.
"Detectives, poof," she said. "Still,
that last was a very very good line. Trying to impress the course of justice. It certainly was. How do you think those things up, Father Forrester? They're simply wonderful!"

Woman's Place

"It's no use, dad. She's on. We stay," said Michael ruefully.

"The Commissioner will be very glad to have us," Tuck explained
to her father-in-law carefully.
"He'll do everything he can to make our visit here enjoyable.
I'm sure he will."

"I wouldn't put it past him," he said gruffly. "He'll use your in-quisitiveness and your boldness to good advantage."

"Now, is that nice?" She patted his hand in swift contrition. "I'm sorry I'm just terribly sorry, but I'm not sorry enough to go away
and never find out anything more.
I believe firmly that woman's place is in the home."

"I think you're unnecessarily
alarmed," said Bunny. "No one really suspects us. The other night at the party we were accepted perfectly naturally. In any event, it doesn't seem possible that . . . that any of those people are really guilty of . . . that they know . . ."

SHORT SHOTS

Raleigh, Oct. 30—It is to be presented that the North Carolina Grange in adopting resolutions opposing higher wages for industrial workers where the wage minimums are set by law, spoke the mind of members, but whether or not it

Michael was regarding her thoughtfully.
The District Attorney spoke to Tuck again. "You haven't even a good dog?"
"No, but we've a perfectly lovely cat, Father Forrester."
He rose. "I'll give up, however unwillingly," he said. "But you must have a talk with the Commissioner, Michael, and tell him everything. Everything," he repeated firmly, looking Michael in the eye. "This is out of my department. And I've got my doubts," he said as a parting shot, "whether he'll want you here at all."
"He will," Tuck replied sweetly,
"if you don't go poisoning his mind."

Michael dropped into his chair
at the breakfast table next morning, with a cheerful remark about the state of the weather. He was answered in kind. There was not the slightest evidence that mystery and even crime were in the air.

"Everybody happy?" he inquired solicitously.

"Of course," Tuck replied. She straightened the asters in the bowl
on the table. "Why not?"

Charlotte Jean came in to report that a gentleman had called to see Mr. Forrester. "He says it is important, he'll wait," she repeated the message, but Michael had gone. He came back in a moment, followed by Professor Jared Devoe, who was rubbing his hands.

"Mr. Devoe called on a little matter of business," Michael explained to Tuck as she held out her hand to her guest, "and I insisted that he have coffee with us."

"Why, that's lovely," Tuck replied. "We're glad to have you, Mr.
Devoe. Michael, do hand me another cup from the cabinet, will you?"

Explanation

DEVOE bowed to Bunny and turned back to Tuck. "I'm sure I had no intention of intruding this way, Mrs. Forrester. It was just . . . I assure you I didn't dream of your breakfasting so early, and I saw Mr. Forrester out in the garden, and wanted to have a little talk with him."

"But you must have a cup of coffee first. Michael hasn't had any, and his mind will be terribly foggy until he does." She smiled at her husband, smoothed down her crisp yellow linen frock, and picked up the silver coffee pot.

"Cream and sugar, Mr. Devoe?"
He sat down, still with an air of hesitation, in the chair Michael had brought up for him. "Very well, then . . . just cream, please.
It is very kind of you. I . . ." he said gratefully. "The fact of the matter is, I haven't had any breakfast yet, although I rarely eat. I—I had rather forgotten about it."

"That is not a thing I'm at all likely to do," Michael replied. He took his cup from Tuck's outstretched hand.

"Nor I ordinarily, however
," he sipped his coffee, set down the cup and turned to Bunny. He surveyed her cool green dress and her smooth dark hair with evident approval. "I hope you are enjoying your stay on the campus, Miss Tuck."

Bunny's eyes, at his full-lidded
heavy glance, took on a look that Tuck always thought of as "fathomless." There was a veil before their gray depths as she answered,
"Very much, thank you."

"We must try to provide you with adequate entertainment," he went on. "There is very little to do out here on the campus. However, there are some interesting woodland paths hereabout," he said in-gratingly. "Do you care for walking?"

"Not particularly," said Bunny
coolly.

Devoe took his rebuff calmly.
"My mother and Mrs. Murchison will perhaps be calling on you within a day or two, Mrs. Forrester.
That is . . ." he turned to Michael with what he may have considered to be an engaging air of frankness. "I shall just discuss my errand this morning here in the presence of the ladies. After all, it is possible that an explanation of some sort will be due Mrs.
Forrester. That is, if my mother fails to call to see you. She may perhaps find herself unable to perform any social duties. It—it may become impossible."

Bunny buttered a square of toast leisurely. Michael frowned
in polite attention.

"I'm sure we shall understand," Tuck murmured at random. "Isn't your mother very well, Mr. Devoe?"

He put his coffee cup down on the table carefully. "It is not that,
he replied slowly. "I speak, of course, in riddles. I might say simply that she is ill and ask you to forgive her. But I prefer to tell the exact truth to you, since I intend to consult Mr. Forrester, as to my way on the matter. My mother," he said after a moment's pause, "is rather upset at this time.
Her mental equilibrium is a little disturbed."

Oh, temporarily, of course," he hastened to finish, perhaps at the astonishment in Tuck's face. "We are undergoing rather a trying time at our house. Mrs. Murchison is being very brave, but the strain
is telling on her, too."

"You have had bad news of some kind, Mr. Devoe?" Tuck broke the awkward silence again.
Michael did not seem disposed to speak, and Bunny was quite obviously determined not to.

was very expedient from a political standpoint to do so, is now the subject of lively debate.

First reaction in political circles
here is that the resolution almost automatically places the Grange and North Carolina's organized labors on opposite sides of the fence;
and that it is going to present a tremendous problem to governmental candidates desirous of getting support from both.

It's going to take a master piece of straddling for a candidate to appeal on the one hand to an organization which flatly says it is against higher wages and, on the other

Here's a bit of political rumor picked up on what lacks a whole lot of being unimpeachable authority but which has some of the earmarks of authenticity. It is given out without even a remote warranty of truth and veracity.

Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer, is said to have no less than 200,000 pieces of literature all ready packed and just waiting to go into the mail when there's a do if according to the gossip the farm expert announces his candidacy for governor.

And from another source, slightly higher in the scale of reliability,
but still not completely beyond suspicion comes the word that Libby Ward isn't just playing with the gubernatorial bug in order to keep his name before the public. His intentions are said to be as serious and honorable as ever were those of an ardent suitor in the old days

when parents demanded to know them.

Gregg Cherry, Democratic state chairman, and other high party officials are on something of a lath-

duce State Senator John D. Larkins, Jr., of Jones county, to take charge
of next January's Jackson Day dinner.

But Gregg is almost as adept at using soft soap as the mailed fist,
and it's going to be hard for Lar-

Germans Mass On Holland Border

Concentration of German troops along the southern half of the Netherlands-German frontier has caused nervousness in border villages. The troops were visible from hills facing the frontier from Geneppe to Vaals, both of which are shown on this map. Indicated also is the area in which the soldiers were seen. The diagonally shaded area denotes German and French fortified regions and the broken line represents the Belgian fortification line. The Albert Canal in Belgium could be broken on to flood wide areas in event the Germans tried to reach France via that route.

WHAT IT MEANS

Washington—What Hitler and Stalin do about Rumania will tinkle out, for diplomatic ears, the news as to who gets the best of the bargain in eastern Europe.

Already many kibitzers on the diplomatic front have a feeling that Stalin is the winning checker player. Some of them even go so far as to suggest that Stalin has done to Hitler the same thing that Hitler did to Mussolini a couple of years ago—got him into the game, then grabbed most of the checkers in sight.

With a sly wink, your diplomat points to maps and dispatches to show you what he's talking about. He cites:

(1) The new military protectorates of Russia on the Baltic—Estonia and Latvia, possibly Lithuania and Finland.

(2) The new partitioning of Poland, giving Russia control of the former Polish-Rumanian border, and shutting the Germans out of Rumania's wheat and oil lands, except with Stalin's permission.

(3) Mysterious talk about a hurried trip by Rumania's foreign minister, Gregore Gafencu, to Moscow to see what Stalin wants with him, not to Berlin to see what Hitler wants.

A Split Rumania? If the diplomatic grapevine is as near right as it usually is, Gafencu may hear that Stalin wants Bessarabia back. He might even learn that Germany and Russia are establishing zones of influence that split Rumania in two, and give King Carol about as much freedom of action as a man in a strait-jacket.

If this should occur, the province of Transylvania would fall within the German orbit, and Moldavia, Wallachia and possibly Dobruja within the Russian.

Russia would then be in a position to set up a military highway across Rumania up the valley of the Danube, following the time-honored route of conquest between Europe and Asia to the Iron Gate of Roman fame.

At the Iron Gate, Russia would be in a position to deal with any European influence she wished by military threat alone. That goes for Hitler as well as anybody else.

Dardanelles If the diplomatic grapevine has the picture in focus, then it explains why Russia is so concerned about Turkey. For Turkey holds the Dardanelles, a back door route that could cut the Russian zone of Balkan influence in two, if it should fall into the hands of an enemy.

Clearer also become the tactics of Hitler in offering peace. For Hitler may well want to put all his talents, military and otherwise, into the show in eastern Europe. Russia may be a bit too close for comfort even on a peaceful basis of alliance.

If he is thinking that way, then lightning peace—or lightning war, like the war in Poland—would be his best bet on the West.

Leftover Cake Idea. Here is a new pudding idea: Toast leftover cake (plain or frosted) on both sides and serve warm, covered with your favorite fruit sauce. Grapejuice and pineapple go well together for a sauce mixture.

Non-Skid Ladder. To keep the legs of a stepladder from slipping or marring wooden floors, bind the tips with squares of discarded cloth held in place with stout cords or heavy rubber bands.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons

Hollywood—There was a movie once called "I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier" (1915), but I don't hear any stampede now for a re-issue.

Title trouble: Charlie Ruggles is in a movie called "Opened By Mistake," but they're looking for a new handle—because of the fear of obvious critical cracks.

"Destry Rides Again," in which there is no character called Destry, is really "The Man From Montana." The "Destry" title stuck from the day the studio announced it would undertake a super-western for James Stewart, and somebody yelled, "Ah, Destry rides again!"

See by the papers that Mrs. Basil Rathbone, the eminent hostess, is endorsing wine. All together now, the Grapes of Rathbone.

Said Director David Butler, to the little lady: "Now this scene calls for you to slide down this chute into that swimming pool, and the water's cold, and of course we'll use a double for you."

Said the little lady: "You'll do nothing of the kind. I don't want these producers to start thinking I'm too old to do anything I have to, anything any active woman of 50 or 60 can do. Water cold? It's no colder than my bath water every morning. I'll do it myself!"

And so May Robson, donning a one-piece swimming suit, went through her paces as required by her role in Kay Kyser's "That's Right, You're Wrong!" And they used a double only in the long shots.

A fellow was ribbing Bob Hope. Said he: "Why do you suppose the movies use a guy with a pan like yours? Such an ugly mug as you've got, when there are so many handsome guys out of work?"

Said Hope, quick-like-a-flash: "If you don't cut that out, I'm going to conk you over the head with a couple of my bank books!"

Funniest line in the new Marx brothers' picture, "At the Circus," is in that scene of Groucho and the wallet containing $10,000. Woman trapeze performer scoops up the prize, slips it into her bosom. Says Groucho, turning to the audience: "There ought to be some way of getting that back without getting in trouble with the Hays office!"

It's the funniest line, that is, if it doesn't get in trouble with the Hays office.

Inventor Alan Hale's latest invention: a compact fire-extinguisher, especially nice he says for fires started by incendiary bombs. Other Hale triumphs off-screen: a patented theater seat, an improved automobile brake, a formula for mass production of potato chips.

There's an "All Quiet on the Western Front" touch in the opening war scenes of "The Roaring Twenties." Cagney, Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn are crouched in a hideout, picking off Germans. Lynn raises his rifle, hesitates, lowers it. Bogart says, "What's the matter? Letting a hennle go?" Lynn says, "He's just a boy—can't be more than -5." Bogart takes aim, fires says, "He'll never see 16." And just then a courier rushes in, shouting "Aristaice!" (The line, "He'll never see 16," which buttonholes the Bogart character, was ad libbed on the set—by Cagney.

IT'S ODD! But It's Science

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE AP Science Editor

Beltsville Md. — A spray that prevents apples from falling off the trees is announced by the U. S. Horticultural Station here.

Premature falling of apples is one of the growers' great problems. As the fruit approaches the maturity and color for harvesting, in numerous varieties the danger of dropping becomes more acute. Orchardists gamble every day they let the fruit stay on trees.

The new spray contains a few drops of a chemical that promotes plant growth. These growth substances have been discovered in the last few years. In strong concentrations, they will make roots grow out of leaves or stems.

The spray reduced the falling of William Early Red apples from nearly total loss of the crop to almost no loss. By actual count trees that had dropped from 64.2 per cent to 90.8 per cent of their apples, dropped only a little more than one per cent.

The chemical used was naphthalene acetic acid. Its concentration was one thousandth of one per cent. Later tests with a spray containing only 25 ten thousandths of this acid resulted in mared inhibition of dropping of several varieties of apples.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Leading stocks slipped a shade in today's market, although real selling pressure was lacking.
Dealings, slow at the start. Frequently came to a standstill. A few issues managed to show modest improvement near the fourth hour, but fractional declines predominated.
Brokers attributed speculative indifference partly to the still confusing European war picture. Some thought of a flattening out of the business curve in the next few months and varying opinions as to just how much the allies will spend in this country if and when the House backs up the Senate on the arms embargo repeal. Bonds tilted a shade in either direction. Among commodities, silk futures exhibited strength, but other major staples were mixed.

Total Ships Lost Reported At 102

By The Associated Press
Sinking of four more ships, three of them British, today sent the known loss to all nations to 102 vessels, with a gross tonnage of more than 408,110.

Loss of five seamen aboard the 7,076-ton Cunard White Star Line freighter Malabar from which 70 were rescued sent the death toll to at least 1,850.

England's known losses rose to 56 ships with the Malabar sinking and destruction of the fishing trawlers St. Nidan and Lynx. II.

"Germany claimed last Saturday to have destroyed at least 115 merchant ships."

The crew of 10 on the 250-ton fishing trawler Lynx, II, was rescued as was the crew of 15 on the trawler St. Nidan, 565 tons, both destroyed in the North sea.

An unidentified Norwegian steamer sank in the North Sea yesterday after 30 of her crew were saved. It was neutral Norway's ninth loss in the current war and the 30th suffered by neutral countries.

Conducting Probe Into German Bund
New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The German-American Bund and its leader, Fritz Kuhn, are being investigated by federal authorities, U. S. Attorney John Cahill said today.

Cahill declined to divulge details, but said allegations of a "very serious nature" had been made against the organization.

James Wheeler-Hill, Bund secretary, has been before the federal grand jury several times, it was learned.

Kuhn, under indictment in New York county on charges of grand larceny and forgery, will go on trial November 9. His attorney moved today to have all Bund records seized by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's office in a raid last May returned to him.

Kuhn, who is charged with theft of $14,800 of Bund funds and forgery of Bund records, contended the seizure violated his rights under the state constitution.

Dr. Boyd to Conduct Revival in Missouri
Dr. Robert S. Boyd, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, left today for St. Charles, Mo., where he will conduct a series of services beginning Wednesday of this week.

The services will continue through Thursday of next week and Dr. Boyd will be back in Greenville on Saturday, in time to fill his pulpit on Sunday, November 12.

To warm up on a chilly day, drink pineapple juice mixed with cider and orange and lemon juices. Use equal parts of pineapple and cider and one-fourth as much of the orange and lemon. Serve piping. As a first course for luncheon or supper, serve in small glasses and hang an orange wedge, lightly dusted with cinnamon, over each glass.

Double Duty.
To save steps and energy in a two-floored house, double up on the cleaning equipment. Keep one set upstairs—floor mop, cleaning powders and cloths, dust pan and a broom—and another downstairs. This much equipment will last twice as long as one set, so it is not impractical.

Girl Scout Activities Great Benefit To City

Although only organized less than a year ago, the Greenville Girl Scout organization, which shares in the Community Chest, has taken an important place in the city.

There are 157 Girl Scouts in Greenville, two senior Girl Scout troops, three intermediate troops, one Brownie pack, 40 second class Scouts, five first class, 15 Brownies and 97 Tenderfoot Scouts.

Sponsors for Girl Scout troops at the Business and Professional Women's club, the Presbyterian church and the Woman's club, Greenville had, nine Girl Scout camps this summer, five at private camp and 25 at church camps. The local girls were program chairmen of the Campore held in Rocky Mount on May 20.

Civic projects engaged in include: entered into the clean-up week program; sang Christmas carols at the hospital; participated in the Christmas seal sale; conducted Christmas party for underprivileged children; gave Christmas baskets last year; acted as hostesses at leaders meeting at Rocky Mount; marched in Legion parade; marched in Memorial Day parade; maintain a child nursery for children of employed mothers; included in forces to maintain order at the Halloween street dance.

September 28 was the date chosen to begin the fall activities of the Girl Scouts. During the summer the enrollment had mounted from 110 Scouts to 140 and now stands at 160. At present, the majority is of Tenderfoot ranking, but by January Court of Award ceremony, it is hoped that one half will have attained second class ranking. The present organization of girls has only been in existence less than a year which accounts for the small group of first class Scouts—five.

Although the members succeeded in raising necessary funds for their activities last spring, it was realized that nothing had been set aside for the fall program. Rather than delay by waiting for outside help, it was suggested and voted upon by the girls themselves to maintain a booth at the county fair to obtain these necessary funds. But because of heavy expenses, profits were not so ample as hoped for.

Girl Scouting this year is being conducted in accordance with the "1940 Revised Program of Girl Scouting." This program lays less stress upon badge work as an indication of accomplishment but more toward the fuller development of personal interests in the hope that future hobbies or even perhaps occupations may evolve from the association with the ten fields of endeavor that are presented. The leaders have tried to include all possible interests in the ten fields so as in later life, a girl may have a leisure time activity in which she is especially interested and in which she has had enough instruction to prove worthwhile. Because of inadequate facilities, to date, the Scouts have undertaken but a few of the varied programs offered. Arts and crafts, campcraft, literature and dramatics are the choices this year. A definite program is planned for each and upon its completion a separate demonstration will be staged. The arts and crafts division is planning an exhibition of their work at an "open house" for parents sometime in January. The campcraft group plan to take numerous overnight hikes and outings to gain experience in camping in order to be prepared next spring for their week's camping trip to the western part of the state. The main objective of these girls is to learn woodcraft and resourcefulness while out of doors; meanwhile they are in charge of camping for the entire troop. The Literature and Drama group has charge of troop entertainments as well as public functions. A number of school assembly programs will be conducted by this division and two public performances are planned.

The second project of the Girl Scouts will be a public carnival held some time during the first part of November. A variety program has been planned including a general admission show, numerous concession booths, and an hour of social dancing. To help finance the carnival, a Girl Scout cookie sale will be held soon.

One evening during the Christmas holidays last year, was set aside for Girl Scout caroling. Carolers sang at the college, hospital, before various homes, and while walking. Because of the holiday spirit such singing expenses, it is to be continued annually to further a tradition. The Scout chorus will be its nucleus. Also in December there will be a Christmas party for the underprivileged children of Greenville. Each girl, by way of the party, will be responsible for making some small child's holidays happier.

During January a Girl Scout theater party is scheduled; the arts and crafts exhibit will be displayed, and merit awards presented at a Court of Award program.

Listed on the February calendar is a mother-daughter banquet, Scouts "open house" for parents, and a visitation of troops by the New York supervisors and Miss Oppenbender, regional field captain. The appearance of these leaders is indicative of notice from headquarters, and with definite indication of backing by the city, a local or even regional council will be centered in Greenville this spring.

March and April have been arranged especially for Scout entertainments. Only two public functions are in mind as yet.

May is a busy month for the Scouts. If plans can be arranged between the two organizations, a joint Boy and Girl Scout party is being considered. A Memorial day recognition ceremony will be staged and toward the last part of the month an Eastern Carolina Girl Scout rally will be held in Greenville. Those troops represented will be from Rocky Mount, Wilson, Kinross, Tarboro, Warrenton, and Henderson. Rocky Mount acted as hostess for the rally last May.

June will be the gathering together month of all loose ends of activity in preparation to summer disbanding. There will be a farewell dinner at which time awards of merit and distinction will be given; also a presentation of the 1939-40 Girl Scout pamphlet edited by the girls themselves. This book will be a memoir of the activities throughout the months, stories, pictures, exchanges, etc. A similar one was published last spring, but was concerned only with five months progress. This season's copy will be pictorial of all efforts from September, 1939 to June, 1940.

Not only are the Girl Scouts interested in the social and civic programs attempted, and in their own personal accomplishments, but they also try to keep in mind at all times the fundamental basis of the organization in order to lead more wholesome lives and be a service to humanity. Their pledge states simply their unselfish aims:
On my honor, I shall try:
To do my duty to God and my country,
To help other people at all times,
To obey the Girl Scout laws.
