be fashioned like unto his glorious body according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." (Phil. 3: 17, 20, 21).

NEED LAXATIVE? TAKE ALL-VEGETABLE ONE

Don't let impatience lead you into harsh measures for the relief of constipation!

There's no use. A little spicy, all-vegetable BLACK-DRAUGHT, taken by simple directions, will gently persuade your bowels. Take it at night.

That should give you plenty of time for sleep.

Morning usually brings punctual, thorough relief from constipation's symptoms—headaches, biliousness, sour stomach, loss of appetite and energy. BLACK-DRAUGHT's main ingredient is an "intestinal toner-laxative" which helps to tone the intestinal muscles. It's economical, too. 25 to 40 doses; 25c.—(Adv.)

PARENTHOOD REWARDS TOTAL $17,550,000

Rome.—(AP)—The Italian government paid 72,000,000 lire ($3,600,000) in rewards to parents of large families during the first eight months of 1939.

A total of 350,771,757 lire (about $17,550,000) was distributed to Italian parents from 1935 through August, 1939.

The government also helped along the campaign to encourage large families by approving 118,777 applications for marriage loans totaling 323,202,975 lire ($16,150,000) from July, 1937, through June, 1939.

Analyst Says Nazis' Publicity Has Been Best But They Haven't Made In The U. S.

It may not be our war, but we are subject to daily "hot air" raids—propaganda raids—that might well be as fatal to our neutrality as bombing attacks. In this article, a propaganda analyst tells how nations at war have attempted to win American favor. He considers also the results obtained.

By CLYDE E. MILLER
Director, Institute For Propaganda Analysis
(Written For The AP Feature Service)
New York.—So far, German war propaganda has been much better

German Propaganda

A warning that the Iroquois would be sunk was a German method of courting U. S. favor, says the analyst. Passengers were happy as she reached New York. Germans said their note saved the ship.

Photographs like this one of German soldier feeding Polish children can be cited by Nazis as evidence they were fighting a humane war.

than the British or French. This is due to the nature of the war itself. The Germans, amazingly successful in their military campaign in Poland, could afford to send out photographs, and to let newspapermen go right along behind their armies.

The British and French, on the other hand, have had very little news to give out. There has been little action on the Western Front. And a long, colorless campaign to strangle Germany by economic blockade will not produce many news stories.

One factor of enormous importance is the difference between 1914 communications and today's.

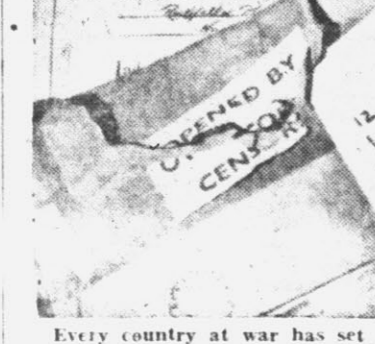

In 1914, the British cut the German cables. The result was that the Allies controlled most of the news. Today—thanks to radio and monograms—all the countries in Europe can reach us and our newspapers.

Results? Despite the work done by German propagandists to date, there is no sign that Nazi propagandists are beginning to win even mild U. S. approval of Hitler's alliance with Stalin or of Hitler's conquests.

The very efficacy of German propaganda has boomerang possibilities.

This is because Hitler is so generally distrusted. The better the dissemination of his propaganda, the more are the American people reminded of a conquest they don't like and of a leader they like still less.

Another propaganda act, from an unknown source, was the broadcast in Berlin announcing an armistice. This may have been perpetrated by Hitler's opponents operating a secret radio station. Or it may have been a

Every country at war has set up a censorship of pictures and news dispatches, thus making it doubly hard on American correspondents, trained to be impartial and send only the facts. This photo shows a package of photos received by The Associated Press from Great Britain. Twelve pictures were removed without explanation by the censor.

Britain's Eight-Ball
Pronounced as U. S. sentiment is in favor of the Allies, the French and British still have a great deal to overcome as a result of their previous concessions—notably at Munich—to Hitler.

The British propagandists are well aware that the memory of Czechoslovakia presents, in the case of many Americans, an extraordinarily difficult hurdle for the British.

Taking Winston Churchill, a bitter opponent of the Munich pact, into the British cabinet, tended to make some Americans forget the appeasement policy.

Hence Churchill's appointment was effective propaganda in America for England.

'Iroquois' Incident
On the other side, a recent German-propaganda act was the warning issued by Admiral Raeder that the S. S. Iroquois, an American ship, was to be sunk.

The Germans were clearly endeavoring to plant, in American minds, a suspicion of the Allies.

The Nazis are, I think, past masters at sowing suspicion at home. Their anti-Semitic campaign furnishes the proof.

Radio Waves
Another propaganda act, from an unknown source, was the broadcast in Berlin announcing an armistice. This may have been perpetrated by Hitler's opponents operating a secret radio station. Or it may have been a calculated act of the British, as the official German version had it.

Either way the result is the same in terms of a loss of morale in Germany. The German people were apparently delighted the war was over, and that delight, to judge from news dispatches, turned into despair.

When you consider the potentialities of radio, this incident is not surprising. The Germans themselves recently used the radio to spread reports of an important British naval loss, in an attempt to break down morale in England by making the British believe their navy is vulnerable.

British Propaganda

Appointment of Winston Churchill to her war cabinet, not only gave Britain an ace wartime administrator but also swayed public opinion in America, says Professor Miller.

Visits by Queen Elizabeth (shown with British soldier) to groups engaged in war work as supposed to help keep up morale. Such visits are one form of propaganda.

What It Means Staying Power Gives Alliee 9-5 Edge In Present War

By MORGAN W. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington.—If staying power makes a winner in modern warfare, then it's beginning to look as if the score is about 9 to 5 in favor of the Allies.

That's the consensus when you put economics first and military strength last in a comparison of the belligerent powers. A major factor tipping the scales in the Allies' favor is America's capacity to produce armaments for them.

Here's a table based on the best available estimates:

	Perfect Score	Allies	Ger.
Food Supply	20	20	10
Raw Materials	20	20	8
Financial Assets	20	16	4
Industrial Capacity	15	15	3
Military Strength	15	15	15
Organization For War	10	4	10
Total	100	90	50

Here's the analysis:

Food Supply
Germany can produce 83 per cent of the absolute necessities of life for her 81,000,000 people. You have that on the word of the usually reliable German Institute of Business Research. But Germany has a deficiency of vegetables, fruits, and fats. Germany has reserves of 6,600,000 tons of grain, more than a year's supply. On the other hand, the Americas and the British and French empires normally supply 5,000,000 tons of Germany's food deficiency, while only 2,250,000 tons normally come from sources closer to home. But supplies from the Americas and the British and French empires are barred by the British blockade. This draws Germany's good rating down to 10 points out of a possible 20.

The French and British have the money and the shops to bring in their food deficiencies, submarine warfare not withstanding. They rate the full 20 points.

Raw Materials
Official German figures indicate that Germany must import at least one-third of all her raw materials. Denied to her by the blockade are the nearly 3,000,000 tons of rubber, gasoline, and mineral oil, she has been getting from the Americas. Open to her are the 10,000,000 tons of war metals and chemicals she annually receives from the Scandinavian countries.

The important deficiencies of oil, rubber, and gasoline pull Germany's raw material rating down to 8 points out of the possible 20.

The Allies have the ships and the money to obtain raw materials. They rate the full 20 points.

Financial Assets
Great Britain leads all the belligerents with at least $4,700,000,000 in gold and investments abroad that can quickly be turned into gold. France comes next with $1,700,000,000 in gold reserves, and liquid assets abroad of some $700,000,000, most of which are in the United States. But the Allies cannot borrow money in the United States as they did in the last war. That pulls their financial rating down to 16 out of the possible 20 points.

The Reich is poor indeed when it comes to cash. The American Foreign Policy Association indicates in its October report that the Reich might be able to muster $800,000,000 in gold and foreign assets. In addition, however, the Germans have a bartering power to be reckoned with. They mobilized about $2,000,000,000 worth of bartering power in 1938. Some experts figure they can produce half that in wartime. But even so, German strength on the financial front is insignificant. They get four points out of a possible 20.

Industrial Capacity
Until the United States lifted the arms embargo, Germany had the advantage here. Neither France nor Great Britain could match her armaments output. But the lifting of the arms embargo puts America's capacity to manufacture military equipment at the disposal of the Allies, as long as their cash holds out. Some authorities say this may account for 25 per cent of the Allied industrial output on the basis of a long term war.

This factor boosts the Allied rating to the full 15 points, and pulls the German rating down to 3 points for the long pull, because none of her auxiliary sources of supply has anywhere near the industrial capacity of the United States.

Military Strength
Here the two powers will match up fairly evenly for some time to come, due to Germany's head start, in the opinion of most experts. The superior German air fleet, perhaps one and one-half to one in first line planes, balances the superiority of the French artillery. The British army is hardly a factor until a long training period has elapsed. And in view of the obvious stalemate on the western front, each gets a rating of 15 points on military staying power.

Organization For War
Here's where the Germans shine. The Nazis had a six year head start on the Allies. They have been practicing a rigid war regimentation in economics and industry ever since Hitler came to power in 1933.

The Allies did not begin large-scale military and economic organization for war until a year ago. And even though war itself has a tendency to unify moral and economic strength on both sides, Germany's start gives her a full score of 10 points on organization for war, against the Allies' four.

So We Guess They Won't Talk
Rome.—(AP)—Italians are urged to hold their tongues in public conversation speculating on what Italy is doing or might do as a result of the war.

Notices are posted conspicuously in hotels, restaurants, bars, cafes and other business places asking Italians not to make indiscreet observations about "high strategy or the high command."

The appeals appeared after Premier Mussolini denounced rumor-mongers.

It's Odd But It's Science

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(AP Science Editor)

New York.—Electricity is the explanation of the feeling of suffocation in badly ventilated, crowded rooms.

This is the report of Prof. Dr. A. L. Tchijevsky, of Moscow, of the International Congress of Biophysics, Biocosmos, and Biocracy. The electricity is due to charged particles of air.

Air always contains many charged particles, called ions, some of them positive, others negative. Prof. Tchijevsky found, however, that when breath is exhaled, there is a large increase in the number of charged particles.

The increase is almost wholly in positive particles. This is equivalent to exhaling a little positive electricity into the air.

In laboratory experiments, Prof. Tchijevsky says, he has proved that these positive electrical particles slow down the "exchange" of gases in the lungs. Exchange means taking up oxygen from the air and giving off carbon dioxide from the

Harvesting Started Last Week As Weather Clears

Raleigh, Nov. 13.—Clearing weather during the last part of the week just ended allowed picking of peanuts to be resumed in Eastern Carolina, it was reported today by B. T. Ferguson, northeastern district farm agent of the State College extension service. In most communities the harvest of the crop was resumed Thursday and Friday after a lunge. Consequently, in the crowded room, the lungs have to work a little harder, not because of lack of oxygen in the air, but due to the positive electricity.

As a further demonstration of this, Prof. Tchijevsky experimented with air containing an excess of negative electrical particles and found that this kind of electricity speeds up the breathing "exchange."

delay because of rains last week-end. Ferguson said that the current peanut situation report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture notes that picking of farmers' stock Virginia type peanuts was delayed by rains on Saturday and Sunday, November 4 and 5. "Very few farmers have threshed in the North Carolina and Virginia areas, weather conditions having interfered with their getting the peanuts from the fields to the thresher," the federal report continues.

The extension agent estimated that 80 to 90 per cent of the eastern Carolina crop is still in the fields, but prospects are good for a rapid harvest if the weather remains favorable.

Market reports show a slightly weaker tendency for farmers' stock, and the demand has been rather light. Lots of farmers' stock sold last week at 3 3-4 to 4 cents for Jumbos, with a few as low as 3 5-8 cents. Bunch brought 3 1/2 to 3 3-4 cents, and shelling stock was mostly 3 1/2 cents per pound. Spanish farmers' stock was quoted at $1.00 per bushel of 30 pounds.

In the southeastern section, the movement of peanuts from fields is over. Not many are left in farmers' hands.

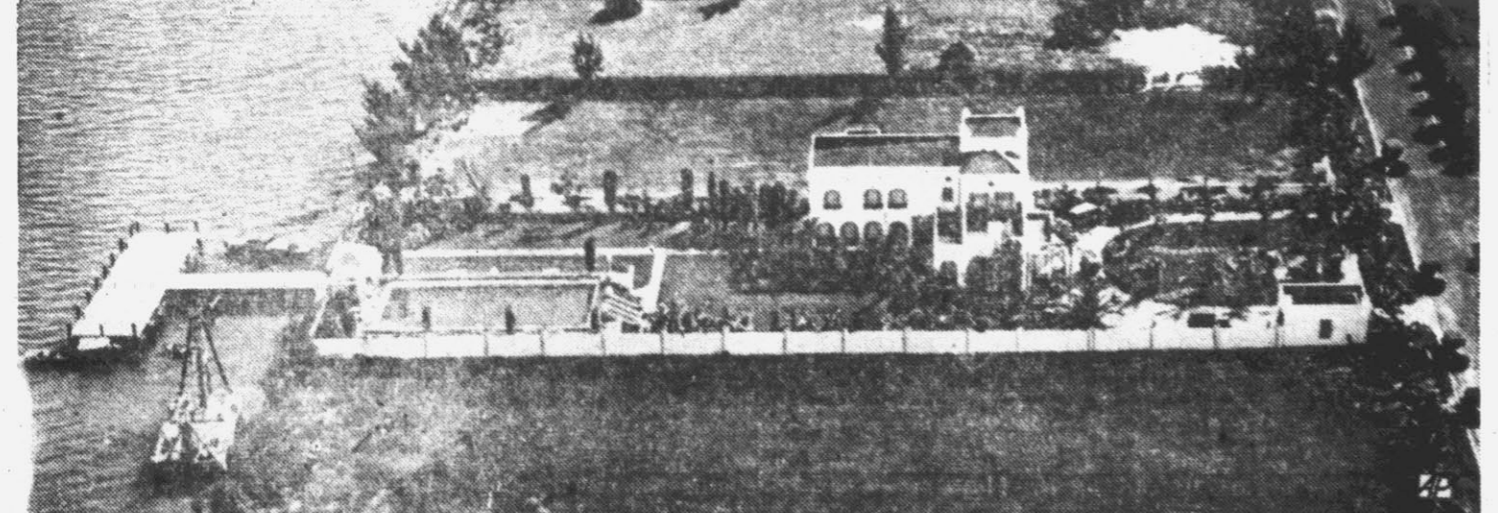

Inquiry is extremely light, the federal report says. The trade apparently needs peanuts, but is shopping for bargains and distress offerings.

Hitler Dodges Death In Munich, Scene of Putsch

Fuehrer Adolf Hitler narrowly escaped a bomb explosion in the famed Munich beer cellar, scene of his party's 1923 putsch, after he had spoken there on the 16th anniversary of the meeting that started him toward the dictatorship of Germany. Hitler and members of the Nazi leadership are shown marching along Koenigsplatz in Munich during the anniversary gathering a year ago. The Fuehrer's Munich palace can be seen in right background. Officials shown in the 1938 parade are Field Marshal Hermann Goerring (1), Hitler (2), Alfred Rosenberg (3), Grand Admiral Erich Raeder (4), Julius Streicher (5) with "blood flag" behind him, Col. Gen. Wilhelm Mitter (6), Col. Gen. Erhard Milch (7), Ulrich Graf (8) who protected Hitler and was wounded during the 1923 putsch, Heinrich Himmler (9), chief of the secret police, and Dr. Wilhelm Frick (10), minister of interior.

Capone May Live As A Gentleman of Leisure

Al Capone is expected to be released from Terminal Island prison, California, November 19, after serving seven years. This story tells how the former gang leader may resume life in the outside world.

AP Feature Service
Miami Beach, Fla.—As far as the city of Miami Beach is concerned, Alphonse Capone will not be molested at his white-walled Palm Island estate, as long as he behaves himself and keeps proper company. That was the immediate reaction of Police Chief H. V. Yocum when he learned the former gang chieftain planned to return here after serving a federal sentence for income tax evasion.

Capone must report to Chief Yocum for fingerprinting and "mugging" for the rogues gallery files. Any subsequent police action will depend on whether Capone is wanted elsewhere, and on his behavior.

When Al lolled at his palatial estate in the old days he was surrounded by underworld figures. He gave parties and went to the horse races and prize fights occasionally. But there was no real peace for him. The police were forever peering out from the shadows.

Now, apparently, he may live the quiet life.

He may take a morning dip in the estate's beautiful swimming pool, stroll around in the sun and even have his breakfast served outside in the patio. If he wishes to stretch his legs with leisurely walks, the grounds are ample.

The basic residence at No. 93 Palm Island cost $40,000 but Capone spent an estimated additional $200,000 for improvements that included the swimming pool and a wharf for his fishing cruiser.

The estate was blanketed by a federal income tax lien within an hour after his conviction in 1931, and his relatives had to pay $51,398.08 to save it.

Alphonse, Jr., educated in private schools here, gave several parties there last winter. Whenever the Capones were absent, the estate was cared for by Al's brother-in-law, Danny Coughlin.

The estate, which has two main buildings and servants' quarters, also has two entrances, both guarded by heavy gates. In one is a small slide opening through which prospective visitors may be inspected.

Around the grounds, except on the bay-front, is a ten-foot wall,

There's No Great Mystery about Cigarette Tobaccos

THERE ARE FOUR TYPES of tobaccos found in the more popular cigarettes, namely... Bright, Maryland, Burley and Turkish.

ALL THESE TOBACCOS except Turkish (which is bought direct from the planters in Turkey and Greece) and Maryland (which is bought through sealed bids under government supervision) are bought at public auction, just like any other auction where you might have bought in a table or a chair.

AT THE AUCTION SALE the tobacco is piled in baskets weighing from about 100 to 500 pounds and each purchaser buys all of his tobaccos by competitive bidding for the particular piles he wants.

THE CHESTERFIELD BUYERS buy the best of these mild ripe tobaccos for the Chesterfield blend. And it is Chesterfield's Combination... the right amounts of Burley and Bright... just enough Maryland... and just enough Turkish—that makes the big difference between Chesterfield and other cigarettes.

IT IS BECAUSE of this combination that Chesterfields are COOLER, have a BETTER TASTE and are DEFINITELY MILDER. They are made of the world's best cigarette tobaccos. You can't buy a better cigarette.

Washington Daybook

In this article, the first of two on the position of Belgium and the Netherlands in relation to the war. Preston Grover discusses the background of the two countries' peace efforts.

Washington—Strange as it may seem, the latest peace maneuvers by Holland's queen and Belgium's king are traced by many diplomatic minds straight back to the decision of the American Congress to repeal the arms embargo.

Here's the way they figure it out: The repeal of the embargo eventually will put at the disposal of the Franco-British Allies the arms output of American industry, including airplanes.

Some experts in the industrial and military fields suggest that American production can supply one-fourth of the Allied military equipment for the war continues for more than a year. That means the odds against German success in a long-term war are heavily increased by the new American neutrality law.

Of course, other factors besides the American arms embargo have given Hitler time—and cause—to delay getting into action. But the embargo under the neutrality act has been an important one.

The lifting of the embargo under the new neutrality act now makes delay more and more costly. With repeal, therefore, every day's delay in a final conclusion of the war favors the Allies. It gives the British more time to train and develop their infantry forces.

It gives the French more time to buy American planes. That will cut down Germany's advantage in the air. With close to 14,000 first line planes, the Germans now have a probable air superiority of 11-2 to one.

Further, entering the picture is the evident willingness—until now—of the Germans to give the western front a "breathing spell" in the wake of Hitler's strong peace offensive last month.

Law Changes Everything Wilhelm and Leopold must look upon that breathing spell as a German maneuver to demonstrate their earnest desire for peace—a demonstration as it were, of good faith, with nothing up the sleeve.

But now, with the neutrality law a fact, and great reservoirs of supply ready over here for the Allies, that demonstration is no longer of any value to the German high command.

Therefore, the Dutch and Belgian monarchs cannot see in the new neutrality law a definite spur to the German high command to act soon—while they still have plenty of supplies at home untouched by the British blockade, plus a modicum of military advantage in the air and on the ground.

Natural Battlegrounds Aix-La-Chapelle (Aachen) looms large in the history books. Belgium was the scene of the final military drama of Napoleon's career.

The Creeping Man

YESTERDAY: A check-up reveals that the letter dated after Murchison's disappearance was sent to Chicago General Delivery in a larger envelope, held, then taken out and mailed to Mrs. Murchison. Duncan asks Michael why he is being followed.

Chapter 32

Duncan's Story

"I'd better start at the beginning," Duncan said. "It might be better."

"It sounds utterly fantastic. That's one of the reasons why I haven't confided in you before. You must believe me. It was like this—when my brother told me he was going, he said that he had a very definite reason for leaving his wife as he did. He said—well, it wasn't what he said particularly. We needn't go into that. But he did tell me that he was leaving something for me, the only thing of real value that he possessed. He said he wouldn't want it where he was going, and he didn't want his wife to have it. He said he'd put it away in a safe place until he decided just what he wanted to do, and when he wanted to go, and then if he made up his mind very suddenly, I could go and get it. It sounds foolish until you think it over. You might say, why didn't he give it to me then? Well, because he didn't have it then. He couldn't get it. She—Marie—had it, and she wouldn't give it up. She said it belonged to her."

"May we know what this thing was, Mr. Murchison?"

"Yes. It was a diamond necklace." He looked at Michael unhappily and made a hopeless gesture with his hand. "I know it sounds most unreasonable," he said. "It was mentioned that night at Deane's. I don't suppose any of you noticed. Marie said she'd never had a diamond necklace, it was only one made of brilliants. That is not true. When she said that I knew for sure that he'd gotten it away from her at last, and put it away for me."

"Why didn't he put it in a safety deposit vault for you?" Michael asked quietly.

Duncan put a hand over his eyes. "I knew you'd ask that," he answered. "Don't you see why? Because—even if he left me the key to the vault—the transaction of hiring a vault might be traced. The question would arise—how did the key come to be in my possession? Unless he left a signed paper to say that the diamonds were mine, I might be accused of stealing from him. He didn't want to leave that paper. He wanted to drop out. And he was afraid, too, that she would discover about the vault and have her lawyers attach the contents in her name. I may as well say right now that it might just be possible for her to prove that the diamonds are hers, rather, were at one time given to her."

"They were hers then? She had a right to them?"

"No. This is the part I am not at liberty to explain. It wouldn't be fair to a certain person. But that necklace... it was worth over fifty thousand dollars. Edgar paid for it. It took all of my share of my grandfather's money. He didn't want to buy it—but well, we went into that. He bought it. His wife afterward insisted that it was hers, that he gave it to her. His point of view was that he held that family inheritance in trust, to a certain extent, and that if he had no children it was to be mine. I don't want it. I don't need it, but since he wanted me to have the diamonds, and under the circumstances, I'm going to have them."

"There'll have to be something arranged for her support," he went on. "I'll have to do that, I suppose. And that raises another question. We discussed that, Edgar and I, and he said he'd leave papers for me which would guide me in that I don't know of what nature the papers are."

"And what can we do about all this, Mr. Murchison?" Michael asked.

"The Truth" DUNCAN looked him in the eye and flushed. He turned to Tuck. "Perhaps you'll remember the first day I came here, after you moved in," he said. "When you had been here only a few days, I came one afternoon and knocked at this door rather than at the front. I had a purpose. I thought I knew where Edgar had left the stones for me, and I wanted to get them. You came in too quickly, and I've only now mastered up enough courage to tell the truth, and ask if I may hunt for them in your presence."

"There was a silence. Michael's eyes were on his cigarette. Bunny gazed stonily into the garden. Tuck looked miserably at Duncan Murchison's face.

"Haven't you a key to the house?" she asked. "Couldn't you have come in for the diamonds before we came, when the house was empty?"

"No," he left the morning after Edgar did. I gave my key to Marie then. He turned to Michael. "You will give me permission to look for my property?"

"You saw the diamonds and the did what they could in the interests of humanity."

Now, most diplomats feel they are acting solely in desperation to protect their own people—which, after all, is their first concern.

It's in Belgium's Flanders field that the poppies grow—and in Belgium where the graves of thousands upon thousands of peace-loving Belgians bear witness to the ironic geographical fact that has made Belgium and Holland the scene of Europe's decisive battles through the centuries.

Can Duke Stop Tar Heel Passing Attack On Saturday?

STAGE ALL SET FOR BIG GAME

Record Crowd Of 50,000 Assured for Annual Classic

By TOM BOST, JR.
Chapel Hill, Nov. 13.—Tar Heel air power vs. Blue Devil ground strength. That's what supporters of the two institutions are banking their victory hopes on when North Carolina and Duke renew their half century old football classic before an overflow audience of 50,000 in Duke stadium next Saturday.

The Tar Heels, whose touchdown twins, General Starnweiss and Sweet Lalanne, have paved the way with their lightning, accurate passes for brilliant victories over NYU and Penn and a tie with mighty Tulane in addition to conquests of Citadel, Wake Forest, Virginia Tech and N. C. State, are being called the most colorful, thrill-producing team in the history of the University.

Carolina supporters have been fearing all season that the Tar Heel passing attack might bog down one of these days. Maybe they are thinking of Texas Christian University, the passing team in the nation, sporting the amazing record of 966 yards via aerials and 91 completions out of 175 tosses. And yet the Horned Frogs have won only one of six games this season. It just goes to show that the air show, as thrilling and effective as it is, can be stopped. Maybe Duke will be able to turn the trick next Saturday.

While North Carolina has displayed

ed the flashier passing game, Duke has shown superiority on the ground. Led by George and Wes McAfee, and by Frank Killian and Roger Robinson, the Blue Devils rolled over Davidson, Colgate, Syracuse, and edged out decisions over powerful Wake Forest and Georgia Tech. The Dukes have lost only once—a narrow-squeak 14-13 decision to Pitt—with two costly fumbles setting up the stage for both Panther scores. Duke outmuscled the Panthers 168 to 155 in gross yardage, and outpassed them 114 to 63.

In addition, Duke has a fine passing attack of its own. At one stage of the season the Blue Devils had completed 63 per cent of their aerials. Their air attack is all the more effective this season in that each of the McAfees can pitch and catch.

On the other hand, North Carolina has a number of light but fast and elusive backs who are mighty hard to stop when shaken loose. So the big questions that heighten interest are whether Duke can take away Carolina's advantage in the air and whether the Tar Heel speedsters can outclass the hard-running Duke backs.

Andrew Carnegie

When in 1850, a 15-year-old telegraph messenger named Andrew Carnegie was given, along with other boys, free access to a private library on Saturday afternoons, he vowed to himself that if ever he made his fortune he would found libraries so that other boys might have the treasures of the world within their reach. How he kept this resolve is known all over the world and the name of Carnegie has been closely and rightly linked with public library development in America.

"urban" viewpoint on legislation, while Stone has been perhaps the most violent of all opponents of bills bearing endorsement of such organizations as the North Carolina League," sarcastically comparing it with the famed organization backed by the Duponts and run by J. P. Shouse.

Reapportionment whenever the opportunity offered itself, but even though he is a westerner this will hardly be held against him as very legislator recognizes the fact that self preservation is the first law of politics as well as of nature; and Rockingham is one of the counties which would lose a seat if ever a new division of House members should be made.

In the 1939 legislature Stone led the House fight for the opponents of diversion of highway funds. His side was beaten on every vote, but he fought for every point and returned to the battle repeatedly after what appeared to be knockout blows. In view of the fact that he was bucking the tremendous influence of Governor Clyde R. Hoey he lost little prestige through failure of his cause.

New Treatment Discovered For Destroying Borer

Raleigh, Nov. 13.—Agricultural research has made another important advancement. A new treatment for the devastating peach tree borer has been developed, and is being used this year by North Carolina orchardists. It was announced today by J. O. Rowell, extension entomologist of State college.

The victory left the Aggies in the undefeated bracket and virtually decided the championship in the Southwest conference.

The treatment is made with an ethylene dichloride emulsion, which has many advantages over the para-dichlorobenzene crystals, heretofore used for controlling peach tree borers. Rowell said it is effective at low soil temperature and can therefore be used late in the fall and early in the spring, when it is too cold for the P. D. B. crystals to work.

It also appears to be safer and more effective on young trees, and can be used on nursery stock as well as old trees, the entomologist said. Furthermore, the ethylene dichloride emulsion treatment requires a minimum of preparation of the soil before treatment, and no attention subsequent to mounding after treatment. Just as good results are obtained by pouring it around the trees as by the use of a sprayer.

Rowell said the ethylene dichloride emulsion was developed by O. F. Snapp of the U. S. Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine at

FUTURE-BOOK FOR All-America

By DILLON GRAHAM

Sports Editor, AP Feature Service

From coast to coast, week-end after week-end, football names jump into the headlines to merit All-America consideration. It takes a full season of consistent play to win the mythical honor and plenty of stars are banging away, game by game, toward that goal. No player has a spot clinched until the final whistle blows for the last game but these three are among those who've served notice they must be considered as candidates.

Jim Lalanne, (right) UNC, completed two touchdown flings in five minutes to tie Tulane and threw three more against Penn.

Bob (Jitterbug) Kelllogg, Tulane back, has turned in several sensational performances for the Green Wave. The blond 165-pounder wrecked Mississippi with a 106-yard touchdown dash and another scoring scramble of 27 yards.

STONE IS OUT FOR HOUSE JOB

Definitely in Race for Speakership In 1941

Reflector Bureau.
By HENRY AFERILL
Raleigh, Nov. 13.—Clarence E. Stone, veteran member from Rockingham county is definitely a candidate for Speakership of the 1941 House.

He was in Raleigh this week and said so in unmistakable terms.

His entry marks the first since John Caffey of Greensboro withdrew from Speakership consideration by announcing his candidacy for Congress from the Sixth District. Prior to the Caffey announcement the Speakership race had appeared, on the surface at least, to be almost entirely between the Guilford man and George Uzzell of Rowan.

There is yet time, of course, for other candidates to get into the ring, and there has been more than a little talk to the effect that Victor Bryant, having lost out by a scant two votes this year may try again and call the bluff, if that's what it was, of some who opposed him on the stated contention that Durham is in the West and Bryant therefore not entitled to consideration in a year the East was due to have the post.

Otherwise there appears to be no truly formidable contender in sight.

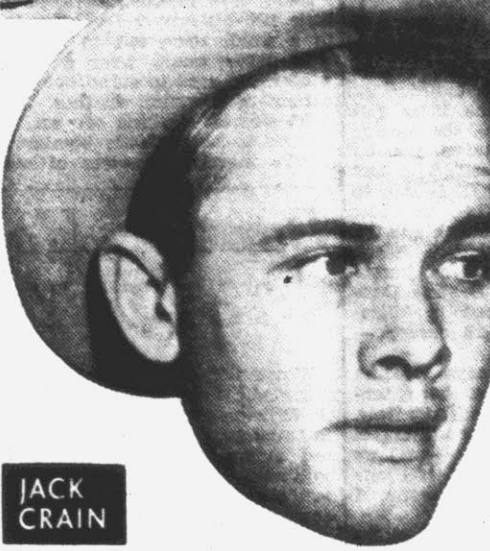

Should the race develop into a two-man affair between the Rowan and Rockingham members it will differ from the last one in that it will present a clash of issues as well as of personalities.

Uzzell, as is quite natural in a representative from such a railroad and industrial center as Salisbury, is classed quite distinctly as a supporter of measures backed by labor, particularly organized labor as represented by the railroad brotherhoods and the State Federation.

Stone, on the other hand, is a typically rural representative, and has been consistently opposed to any such "innovations" as a State Wage-Hour bill or any similar measure which has labor's blessing.

Uzzell has in the main held the

He tallied 41 points in October. Southern Methodist halted his touchdown parade but couldn't bottle him up. Some say he's the greatest runner in Southwest history. He's fast but it is his change of pace that befuddles tacklers. The 19 year old Nocona boy sells cowboy boots and works in the stadium locker for tuition money.

Common Courtesy When Facing A Receptionist

By JOAN DURHAM
(AP Feature Service Writer)

Approach the receptionist in a business office in a friendly, but business-like manner.

Don't try to bluff your way past her, but don't try to high-hat her, either.

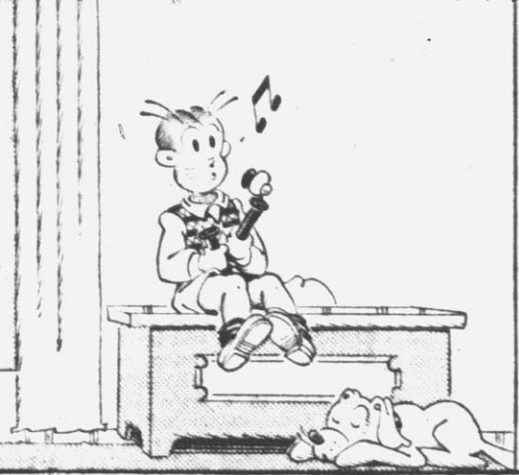

If you have legitimate business in the office, she'll help you gladly. Tell her who you are, whom you want to see and, if she asks, what it's all about. You don't have to go into details, but be specific, reasonably brief and to the point.

If she tells you Mr. So-and-So isn't in, you don't have to take no for an answer. But don't get huffy about it all. Ask her when he will be in, get her opinion of what would be the best time for you to call again.

Whatever you do, don't go in for a lot of wisecracking—unless you're awfully sure of your ground. A good solid sense of humor helps, but don't overdo it.

Final hint: If she makes an appointment for you, be on time for it.

JUNIOR ORDER MAKING PLANS

Grifton Council To Hold Initiations Thursday Night

Barboro, Nov. 13 - Initiatory degrees will be conferred on several large classes of candidates for admission to the Junior Order of United American Mechanics at district class initiations to be held during the week, according to E. F. Harris, state secretary of the fraternity.

Mr. Harris stated that six districts have notified the state office that these events will be held. In addition to these, the 11th district, composed of Wake, Cumberland, Hoke, Harnett, and Johnston counties, will hold its regular fall meeting at Smithfield on Monday evening, November 13. On the same date the class initiation of the 14th district will be held at Lasker with Vance Council, William Putrell, District Councilor will preside.

The Rocky Mount degree team will officiate at initiation ceremonies of the 13th district when candidates from Vance, Warren, Halifax, Franklin, Nash, and Edgecombe counties gather at Rocky Mount on Tuesday evening, November 14. Geo. R. Griffin, of Rocky Mount, is the district councilor.

The 16th district will hold its ceremonies with Vandemere council on November 23. G. P. Harris of Bayboro is district councilor, Washington Tyrrell, Beaufort, Hyde, Craven and Pamlico counties make up the district.

The 15th district will meet with Worth Bagley council at Elizabeth City, Currituck, Camden, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Chowan, and Dare counties make up the district of which J. H. Scarborough of Elizabeth City, is the councilor.

Grifton council will be host to delegates and candidates from the 17th district, composed of Wilson, Wayne, Greene, Pitt, and Lenoir counties. The initiation will be at 7:30 Thursday, November 16. John Hill Paylor of Farmville district councilor will preside.

The crack degree team of George Washington council of Wilmington will have charge of ceremonies at their hall when the representatives of councils in the 18th district gather there on Friday, November 17. The district is composed of Duplin, Jones, Carteret, Pender and New Hanover counties. W. H. Best, of Wilmington, district councilor, will preside.

Of special interest of each of these meetings will be a report by members of the state board of officers of the joint meeting of the North Carolina officers of the fraternity with the national officers and the trustees of the national orphanages which is to be held in Washington, D. C., on November 10 and 11. On Armistice day National Councilor Thia McFarland conducted special memorial services at the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

Hollywood - She's almost seventeen, and she's been kissed. Almost seventeen, the little girl who led Universal out of the wilderness of debt and confusion, just by singing and being herself. The kiss is accomplished. While it is safe to assume the stars rocked in their courses and the world shook quietly, a young actor named Bob Stack played the lips in approved juxtaposition to the lips of Deanna Durbin and in a big moment in "First Love" - and in Deanna's career - slipped into history.

"Any other way," says Deanna gravely, "it would have been terrible, but it was handled so nicely. We just kept talking - about Diesel engines - and then the kiss - and we kept on talking - about Diesel engines. It makes a nice scene. I think."

Because time will march, it seems superfluous to report that Deanna isn't the little girl she used to be. If she ever had an "awkward age," she's safely through it, and the growing-up Durbin is an attractive young woman. Arrived in fact, at the engagement-denying stage.

The boy is Vaughn Paul, assistant director and son of a studio executive. Although the 17-year-old girl next door to you probably goes out with boys occasionally, you haven't heard a commotion about it around your neighborhood. With Deanna now it's different. Deanna's having a date unchaperoned was a cataclysmic event in the local whirl. It's written about in the local paper. Deanna's picture but puts Deanna on a little spot.

"Some people," says Deanna, "seemed to think it was wrong. Why? Vaughn and I aren't engaged, but we enjoy being with each other sometimes, and dance sometimes. There's nothing wrong in that, is there?"

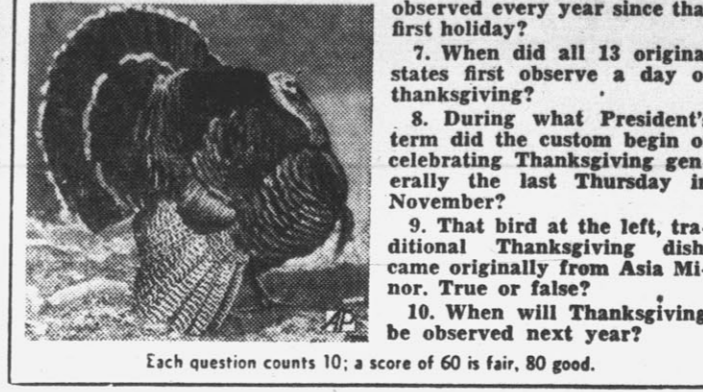

The fans don't think so, contributors Deanna's mother. Fans who didn't want Deanna kissed in her last picture, who objected to the original plan to co-star Charles Boyer in the picture, who thought Deanna was too old to have come out flatly in favor of a let-the-kids-alone policy as respects Deanna and Vaughn.

For all her new maturity, I caught Deanna rehanding on her old vice: fingernail-biting. Her right index's nail was a stub.

She referred to her agreement with her director, binding him to nail-checking. Deanna doesn't bowl herself, but she sponsors a team. "Somehow Deanna's bicycle, on which she used to ride around, now came up for discussion. Deanna wanted to give it away, probably as being too childish a vehicle for her advanced years, but Mrs. Durbin anything like that. I won't spend it thought she ought to keep it against bicycle riding. I'll want to do the day bike-riding became the thing I want to do."

Man About Manhattan

New York - Big Red always lived such a sane life and took such good care of himself that it was a shock to hear that he was dead. Red was a man of no consequence around town, but he was well known and well liked. He used to turn up at the scene of fires, or accidents, or murders, and invite the newspapermen down to the restaurant which he owned with his brother, and give them a free helping of hash.

He used to tell them they were foolish for staying up at all hours of the night, eating irregularly, and smoking so many cigarettes. "Look at me," he'd say. "I haven't smoked in 15 years. I walk five miles every morning. I live clean. I get eight hours' sleep every night."

But Red would say this in a way that you liked - didn't resent. They called him Big Red, but that was a misnomer, because he was only five-six. He was strong, though, and clear-eyed, because he lived right. But he is dead now, out-lived and mourned by his careless, irresponsible newspaper friends, who sit in smoky restaurants all night, eating improperly, keeping awake by drinking strong coffee, and living the life that robs you of pep and makes you an old man before your time.

Roark Broadford has left his banana trees and his cape jassamine in his old French courtyard in Toulouse street, New Orleans, to spend a long, busy, interested interval on Broadway - reading his music's drama, "John Henry," which Sam Byrd is going to produce.

Roark came in for the final casting, and he will remain throughout rehearsals. Outside of autumnal visits to New York, you seldom see around the man who wrote "The Green Pastures." He likes his plantation, made famous in his Saturday Evening Post stories, and his "Frenchtown" home.

It was the first time I'd seen Roark since I sat with him by a gurgling fountain in that old courtyard of his, watching his kid whoop 'em up with a new cowboy suit. Roark was planning the premiere of "John Henry" then - the story of a Negro of giant strength who runs into competition with the machine-age, and is destroyed.

Roark's case makes me think of a little two-bit lawyer I used to know in a small town out in Nebraska, who never would wear a coat in winter. He would stand out on the corner in freezing weather, in his shirt sleeves, showing off, and professing to be perfectly comfortable. "It's merely a matter of conditioning yourself," he'd say. "If you're healthy, you don't have to wrap yourself up like an old woman. What you need is blood - plenty of rich red blood."

In time he became quite a character, and he was known also for the fact that he never hesitated to neglect his practice to sneak off and play chess. Chess and fresh air, they were his gods.

But for all his zest for healthful living, he went out one day and shot himself. He must have got just one whiff too much of that fresh Nebraska air.

possible to complete their task before November 20, so that the campaign can go over the top in time," said Mr. Wilcox. "By correlating plans so that the enlarged hospital and the medical school can be built at the same time, a great saving can be made."

Baptist Hospital Aims To Aid Young Tar Heels

Winston-Salem, Nov. 13 - The new medical center that will be built at Winston-Salem will concentrate on two jobs, that of creating doctors and nurses out of North Carolina boys and girls who will stay in their own state, and that of healing the sick and injured irrespective of their creed or finances, according to a statement yesterday by Rev. D. H. Wilcox, chairman of the state-wide campaign committee and moderator of the Baptist Pilot Mountain association.

Meanwhile, the campaign to raise more than $200,000 before November 20 so as to enlarge the Baptist hospital to the medical profession, returned from both Winston-Salem and from Baptist churches and individuals throughout the state.

At present, it was pointed out by Mr. Wilcox, more doctors die each year in North Carolina than are supplied by the state. What is more, a majority of the North Carolina boys and girls at present who aspire to the medical profession complete their training outside of North Carolina where they usually establish their careers, he said.

On top of this, those who do become doctors in North Carolina are in a large proportion of cases young men and young women from other states who go back to their home regions when they graduate. "What we are going to do," Mr. Wilcox went on, "is to take our North Carolina boys and girls, and give them their medical training right here in our own state irrespective of their religion or how much money they have, so that they will remain here to treat our own people who are now deprived of sufficient medical attention."
