RUSSIA CLAIMS NEW ADVANCES AGAINST FINNS

Army Victories Reported in South and North

NAVAL ATTACKS ALSO ANNOUNCED

Russian Press Alleges "The English" Taking Part in Attack on Soviet Territory

Moscow, Dec. 4.—(AP) Russia reported today her army was advancing both in the north and south against the Finns and her navy was making sweeping attacks on the Baltic and had captured a group of strategic Finnish islands in the Gulf of Finland.

Simultaneously the press at home denied she intended to convert Finland into a dependent country and attack the "democracies," naming Great Britain, France and the United States.

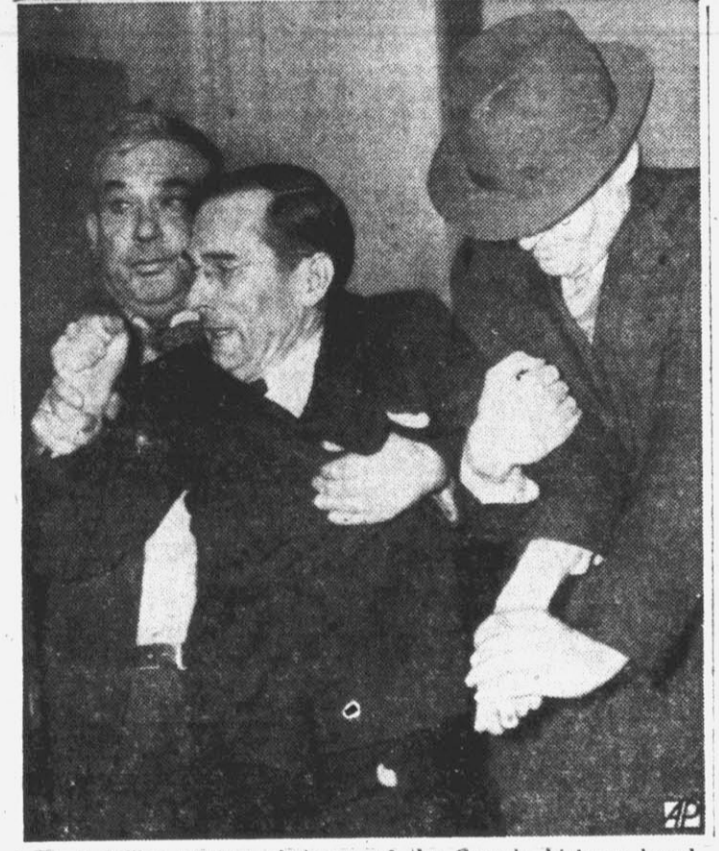

Pravda, Communist party organ, said editorially that the mutual assistance treaty signed between Russia and a communist-led "people's regime" eliminates forever the causes for mutual distrust and lays the foundation for a firm and unbreakable friendship.

A Pravda dispatch indicated a heavy battle near Kronstadt, Russian naval base, but said that Soviet ships, airplanes and the army "routed" the Finns and the English who dared to attack our shores.

There was no elaboration of the allegation that "the English" took part.

Great Britain and France Clamp Total Blockade On Nazi Imports and Exports

Georgia Hwy. Chief Dragged from Office

W. L. Miller (center), chairman of the Georgia highway board, is shown struggling with Representative of Gov. E. D. Rivers as they forcibly ejected him from office in Atlanta after the governor had ordered him to vacate. Miller's hand was cut and his eyeglasses were broken in his scuffle with W. C. Grimes (left), capitol custodian, and Clay Camp (right), an attaché of the executive department. The ouster climaxed a disagreement of long standing between Rivers and the chairman over highway affairs.

Most Powerful Weapon at Command of Allies Adopted in attempt to Strangle Germany; Direct Hits Declared To Have Been Scored In Air Raid on German Naval Base

London, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Great Britain and France clamped on Germany today a total blockade, one of the most powerful weapons at their command.

The beginning of the attempt to isolate Germany completely from her overseas markets shared attention with the raid yesterday by Royal Air Force bombers near the German naval base at Helgoland, hailed here as the most successful air offensive of the war so far.

The Air Ministry said the British fliers had scored "direct hits" in an attack on Nazi warships and an unofficial announcement said one of the ships bombed near the North sea stronghold was a cruiser.

The Air Ministry also announced one bomb from a Royal Air Force plane destroyed a German submarine in the North sea yesterday. Other reports listed four more German submarines as sunk in recent days.

In Berlin DNB official German news agency, said an attempted British air raid on Helgoland was driven off with only a fishing boat sunk and a few bombs dropped.

RIGHT WON BY UNITED STATES TO PUSH CASE

Court Decision Upholds Anti-Trust Proceedings

CHARGE MADE IN MILK INDUSTRY

Tribunal Holds That AAA Act Affords No Ground to Make Sherman Law Inapplicable

Washington, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The government won in the Supreme court today in its efforts to prosecute anti-trust proceedings charging a group of corporations, organizations and individuals with conspiracy to fix milk prices, control the supply and suppress competition in the Chicago area.

Chief Justice Hughes delivered the opinion in the litigation, one of the major cases brought by the Department of Justice in its recent anti-trust campaign. No dissent was announced.

The Chief Justice said that the agricultural marketing agreement act "affords no ground for construing the Sherman act as inapplicable" to the charges against the defendants.

His opinion also expressed the same view as to other farm legislation enacted since the 1890 Sherman act was passed.

A National Labor Relations Board order directing the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company to disestablish an "employees' representative committee as collective bargaining agency for the workers was sustained by the court.

Justice Roberts delivered the opinion that reversed a ruling by the Fourth Federal Circuit court that the company did not have to withdraw recognition from the labor organization. No dissent was announced.

"The law," Justice Roberts said in his decision in the case, "provides that an employee organization shall be free from interference or dominance by the employer."

M. K. Blount, Greenville attorney and former mayor, was elected county attorney by the Board of Commissioners in regular session this afternoon. County appointive officials are named for terms running from December to December.

Chairman Williams was called on to break a tie in the vote on the county attorney. Commissioners W. O. Jolly and G. H. Pittman voted for Mr. Worthington and Commissioner David T. Houge Jr. and G. S. Porter voted for Mr. Blount.

The reorganization of county appointive posts was not taken up until late in the afternoon and Mr. Blount could not be reached for a statement as to whether or not he would accept the post.

Finland Seeks Means For Peace and At Same Time Retain Her Independence

American Finns Pray for Homeland

This was the scene in the Finnish Evangelical Lutheran church in Brooklyn as the Rev. Mr. Joki led children in a prayer that little Finland might stand fast against Soviet Russia's might.

SWEDEN ASKED TO INTERVENE

Neighbor Country Requested to Consult Kremlin on Possibility of Settlement; Finns Report Heavy Casualties Inflicted On Invaders While Awaiting Soviet Reply

Helsinki, Dec. 4.—(AP) Finland sought a peaceful way today to settle her differences with Soviet Russia without sacrificing her independence or vital interests.

But while an answer from Moscow was awaited Finnish forces reported inflicting heavy casualties on the invaders and the civilians left in this capital steeled themselves for air raids they feared would be the most destructive of the war so far.

A heavy snowstorm which started last night continued this morning, protecting Helsinki and environs from any repetition of Russian air raids. Up to early afternoon no air alarms had been sounded and none were expected until the weather cleared.

The city, however, was almost empty. Such was the fear of new bomb attacks that only soldiers and civilians entrusted with vital tasks remained.

The Finnish command said the Russians had lost heavily when their troops crashed through thin ice along Finland's lake-studded frontier or had been mowed down by sharpshooters and machine-gunners guarding the frozen lakes.

The Finnish radio disclosed the peace effort last night, announcing the Helsinki government had asked the Swedish legation in Moscow to consult the Kremlin on the possibility of a settlement.

Prime Minister Risto Ryti declared in a broadcast to the United States today that Finland is "ready to negotiate the demands of Soviet Russia to the utmost limit without violating our independence or policy of neutrality."

But he declared, the Finns are determined to defend their liberty and independence.

The Finnish news agency put the nation's position as a search for agreement "without violating the independence and vital interests of Finland."

M. Eugene Newsom, Durham banker, who is the only North Carolinian ever to have served as president of Rotary International, will be the principal speaker of the evening.

The Street department today was being moved to the new headquarters on West Third street.

Number Cyle.—Martinsville, Va.—(AP)—It was a theft case but it had the earmarks of a "numbers" game. The Negro defendant was charged with stealing $72. He was fined $72 and was given a jail sentence of 72 days.

Paging Orson Welles.—Wichita, Kas.—(AP)—Miss Hazel Thomas, giving a lecture on fainting before a class of a Wichita hospital, described the symptoms so accurately that one listener fainted.

Firecracker Case In Today's Court

The first arrest on charges of shooting firecrackers on the streets this season was made Saturday night and the defendant, Herbert Taylor, was found guilty in Municipal recorder's court this morning and given a 10-day sentence, suspended upon payment of $5 on costs.

Two juveniles were caught shooting firecrackers yesterday. They were Jimbo Harris and George White.

Nine cases were tried in city court this morning in addition to the firecracker shooting case. They follow: Moses Vines, colored, drunk, 30 days or costs; George Shine, colored, drunkenness, 30 days or costs; John Harris, white, drunkenness, 30 days or $8 on costs; Sam Brown, colored, disorderly conduct and assault on a female, not guilty; John Mann, colored, drunkenness, 30 days or costs; Elizabeth Vines, colored, assault, 30 days or costs; Sam Rickers, colored, disorderly conduct, 60 days; General Henby, colored, drunkenness, 30 days or costs; Charlie Niles, colored, destroying personal property, not guilty; Jesse Speight, colored, assault with a deadly weapon, 30 days or $5 on cost and pay $5 doctor's bill.

Negro Hangs Self In Jail At Ayden

Heber Williams, Ayden Negro about 30 years old, hanged himself in the Ayden city jail yesterday afternoon between 2 and 4 o'clock according to a coroner's verdict rendered shortly after the man's body was found.

Williams was jailed Saturday night about 9 o'clock on charges of drunkenness and was last seen alive about 2 p. m. yesterday after having been given his dinner. Officers found his body swinging from the cell by his belt when they went to lock up another Negro about 4 o'clock. A physician was summoned and the belief was expressed an hour. Negro had been dead about an hour.

The Negro was said by A. W. Sawyer to have been locked up several times recently after having had trouble with his wife. At his last trial he was ordered to stay away from her, but on Saturday night he met her on the street and a fight ensued, resulting in Williams being locked up.

Insane Trunk Murderess Invades Minister's Home

Note of Apology Left By Winnie Ruth Judd

PHOENIX, ARIZ., Dec. 4.—(AP)—The Rev. Robert A. Warren reported early today the fugitive Winnie Ruth Judd, insane trunk murderess, had stolen a coat, oranges and crackers from his home.

Mr. Warren told Sheriff Lon Jordan that the "blonde tigress" had entered his home while he was presiding at Sunday evening services in his First Free Methodist church there. That was within an hour or two after she fled the Arizona state hospital here a second time in less than six weeks.

Mrs. Judd left a note to Mr. Warren. He gave the message to Jordan, who did not reveal its contents.

Later it was learned Mrs. Judd's note was an expression of regret for having entered the pastor's home. Deputies sheriff said entrance was gained through a window.

She also left a note addressed to Gov. Bob Jones. It was understood that the minister delivered the governor's note to Mrs. Judd's parents before reporting the burglary.

Discovery of the theft was the first clue of Mrs. Judd's whereabouts since she fled the hospital at 7 p. m. 19 p. m. EST. last night.

Another Local Home Entered Last Night

Along with the announcement that another home was entered last night, Chief of Police George Clark said that he was holding two Negroes on suspicion and was conducting a thorough investigation into the recent series of robberies.

The home of S. G. Wilkerson is the latest to be entered. About 8:30 o'clock last night, while no one was at home except Mrs. Wilkerson, an unidentified Negro entered the home, cut on the light in a bathroom and stole some change from a pocketbook. Mrs. Wilkerson was upstairs and heard the noise. She started down the steps and called, but was quoted as saying she believed it was not a member of the family. As she got about half way down the steps the Negro ran out the front door.

THIS STORY PASSED THE FRENCH CENSOR

Surrounded by a bountiful amount of white space the portrait suspiciously resembles an uncomplicated drawing of Tom Sawyer's Aunt Polly. The blades of a huge, open pair of shears framed her countenance, and underneath was the simple caption "Anastasia."

HORTON ALONE AS CANDIDATE

No Definite Replies Made to Newspaper Queries

Charlotte, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The Charlotte News published today replies it received from four potential candidates for governor who were asked to reveal their plans in view of the announcement by Lieut. Governor Wilkins P. Horton that he was a candidate.

As published in the paper the replies said:

Revenue Commissioner A. J. Maxwell: "After the holidays, please. I'm not running against Santa Claus. Early in the new year I expect to present to the people of the state my conception of a balanced program of progress for the next four years."

Lee Gravelly of Rocky Mount: "Nothing to say now. Will advise later."

J. M. Broughton of Raleigh: "I will in due time make a statement concerning the gubernatorial campaign and will be glad to furnish you a copy of the same."

Mayor Thomas E. Cooper of Wilmington: "The next governor will be elected by the great masses of the people and when I say the masses I include among others, the teaching fraternity, labor, the merchants, the farmers and livestock dealers. Unless some candidate known to me to be a representative of the masses, announces I shall at the proper time announce myself as a candidate for governor as a representative of the great masses of the people of this state."

The news said former Speaker Willis Smith of Raleigh, mentioned as a likely candidate, was not available for comment today.

Three Accused Of Dealing In Liquor

Pitt county ABC officers arrested three men, one white and two colored, Saturday on charges of illegal dealing in liquor.

Jack Bullock, white, of near Gator's bridge, in Carolina township is charged with having two and a half gallons of illegal liquor in his home.

Roy Rollins, Negro, who lives on Cherry lane road, Pactolus township, is charged with having a gallon and a half of bootleg whiskey in his home.

Claude Clemons, former Greenville Negro, is accused of having seven pints of the contraband at his present home in Stokes.

He Got Some Sweet Money.—Paris.—(AP)—A farmer from Piescop sold two chickens for three pieces of chocolate—wrapped in tin foil to look like 10-franc pieces.

When the farmer returned from the market place he knocked together the "coins." They didn't clink. He unwrapped them, called the police, and ate the chocolate.

Yale Puppeteers At College.
Jim Farley and Tom Dewey in a boxing bout; F. D. R. in a fireside chat to the fish from a rowboat; Dorothy Thompson and Mrs. Roosevelt in a sister act; Alexander Woodcock in "Goodbye Mr. Chips"; Orson Welles as the wonder boy; Raymond Massey as Lincoln and Mayor LaGuardia in "Git Along, Little Flower" and many other headlines will march across the stage at East Carolina Teachers College on Wednesday night when the famed Yale Puppeteers present their new adult revue "It's a Small World" (second edition).

Of course the name "Puppeteers" implies these actors are not human, but are lifelike counterparts. This American marionette organization, which is now on its twelfth trans-continental tour, is a specialist in adult entertainment and the blending of the ancient art of puppetry with the sophistication of a Broadway review.

In New York, Hollywood, or on tour the Yale Puppeteers have been greeted by critics and public alike with enthusiasm. Forman Brown, who writes the lines, lyrics and music, is responsible for many songs heard on the stage, screen and radio. Harry Burnett, master puppeteer, creates and builds the marionettes that are so amazingly real, as well as being chief manipulator and one of the country's outstanding puppeteers.

This season's Yale Puppeteers, who took their name 12 years ago when Harry Burnett, their master puppeteer, attended the Yale Drama School under the late George Pierce Baker, are engaged on their most extensive tour to date. They will visit forty states with the new review, which Forman Brown changes from day to day to keep it truly topical.

The Yale Puppeteers have created many records in stock country for long runs. In Hollywood at their own theatre on Olvera street they ran for 98 consecutive weeks, and in New York they duplicated their western success with a run of 54 weeks. Last season they toured the first edition of "It's a Small World" for eight months. During the West Coast engagement last spring among their most frequent guests was Edgar Bergen and his dummy, Charlie McCarthy, who came to see

Puppets for adults is the keynote and feature of the unusual troupe and in the parking lines and smart music of the revue, the Yale Puppeteers have something different to offer the theatre-going public. In this respect they are different from any other marionette company in the world and offer a unique and unusually hilarious show with "It's a Small World."

With Jimmy and Jean at the WPA Art Gallery

The new exhibition on the walls at the Greenville WPA Art Gallery contains 26 paintings by young artists in Indian schools. Since it was hung there a little over a week ago several hundreds of little feet have expressed interested Greenville children into the gallery to see these pictures, created by their Indian brothers and sisters and sent all the way across the continent from tribes of the Northern Plains and the Southwestern Pueblos.

It was a happy coincidence that last week the Greenville High school showed an exhibition of art work by children from North Carolina schools.

Jimmy and Jean have been in line and again to enjoy the pictures of the Indian hunters and dancers, cow boys, horses, buffaloes, antelopes and deer.

"They've got a lot of paintings and art work by children from Greensboro, Durham and other places over in the high school!"

"Yes, Jimmy, I am glad, since you like to draw, that you can compare the two different types of work."

"They do look different, don't they?" Jimmy began to study the Indian pictures more closely. "I can't draw as good as these people. The North Carolina children have not drawn as carefully as these Indians, have they?"

"Well, the difference is in the approach and training. The North Carolina children have been taught to be free with brush and color and are encouraged to cover all the picture spaces with lines, colors and forms, while the Indian children have been more interested in drawing the actual objects, animals, people and plants. Some of the Indians have taken their subject matter from their daily surroundings, but most of them have painted with the express purpose of letting people know about the customs and religious ceremonies of the tribes."

"Our own pictures seem to me to have brighter colors in them." Jean ventured to say.

"Yes, you always work more hurriedly and with less care than the Indians have taken. You often dip brushes in the color just as it comes out of the paint jar and use it that way, while the Indian artists have taken the pains to combine or mix the paints to produce beautiful soft hues that blend with other colors in the pictures. And look at the detail in the costumes!"

"Their lines are so good, too."
"Jimmy, I am glad you noticed them. They are so sure of the direction they want to go. But they do not look as free as the ones you are making in your drawings here in the Sketch club at the Gallery."

"Which is better?"
"The Indian children's drawings need some of the freedom of the North Carolina children's work, and the North Carolina children's paintings need some of the care and study that have gone into the Indian paintings. Both are a little extreme. They need to find a happy medium."

"I am going to try for that in my next drawing. I see what you mean, because these two exhibitions show up so different from each other in this very way."

Making It Hot For The Cops.
Fulton, Ky.—(AP)—Fulton had a "three-alarm" fire when the back seat of its sole police car caught fire in front of the town hall, the station house, Mawredtha.

Firemen were summoned from the station house in the hall, but the fire burned stubbornly on. As a last resort, firemen carried the cushion into the fire station and turned a hose on it.

That did the trick.

Dog Gone
Mayfield, Ky.—(AP)—Deputy Sheriff Dalton Coleman has set up a "missing dogs" bureau for Graves county. Following receipt of a number of complaints of missing hunting dogs and pets, Coleman requested owners to file foot-prints and photographs of their dogs with the sheriff's office.

Washington Daybook. By Preston Graver. Washington, D. C. — Captain Joseph Aloysius Gaimard of the City of Flint is a mild-mannered man as sea-faring folk go, yet the gods of the seas have visited upon him such a set of experiences that he is becoming something of a national hero.

Already he has had some of the joys that go with public excitement over heroic exploits, for Halifax, Nova Scotia, almost went wild when he cruised in there loaded to the deck rails with survivors from the Athenia.

It is international red tape does not hold him up too long when he returns to New York to bring the City of Flint from its fantastic cruise among the icebergs and torpedoes. There never has been quite such a case in American maritime history.

Torpedoed in World War Gaimard's life of excitement goes back even to the World War. Then he was a junior officer on the troop transport President Lincoln. A German submarine torpedoed it in one of the very instances when our troops had much of a brush with U-boats.

Captain Gaimard didn't have the lead in that show, but was merely one of those who floated around in lifeboats until rescued. Fate that time selected one of Gaimard's fellow officers, Edouard Victor Izak. The submarine which sank the President Lincoln came along side and took Izak prisoner as a sort of memento of the affair. Nowadays he is known as Representative Izak of California.

Gaimard first came to real public attention when his crew on the freight ship Alic maimed in the harbor at Montevideo, Uruguay. They refused to lend a hand at leading cargo being put aboard by strike-breaking Uruguayan longshoremen. It wasn't a blood-letting mutiny. It was in the days of the sit-down fever of 1937, and was more of a sit-down mutiny.

Gaimard was sick, but got up from bed and told the men to go to work. They wouldn't. He telephoned Joseph P. Kennedy, then chairman of the Maritime Commission. Kennedy, now ambassador to England, was not a mild man.

"If they refuse place the mine-leaders in iron," he told Gaimard. The mutiny ended.

Took Stranded Home Came the European War Captain Gaimard, a Maritime Commission shipmaster, was one of those designated to bring home stranded Americans.

Fresh out of England with a huge load of the City of Flint, his radio picked up news of the stricken Athenia. He headed toward it, but other ships had picked up the survivors. He met a Scandinavian yacht overloaded with survivors, took them all aboard, and night had returned to England, a couple of hundred miles away. Instead he took it the hard way, and continued across the Atlantic.

The Creeping Man by Frances Shelley Wees

Chapter 50 Happy Endings TUCK put her hand out and patted his. "Never mind Michael," she said softly. "It was a new experience. I'll sell it to a movie company some day, and make all our fortunes." But her lips were dry again at that terrible memory.

Michael's face was grim. He didn't answer. Duncan broke the silence. "What about the hat?" he inquired. Michael stirred and drew a deep breath. "That hat?" he repeated. "Oh, yes, I was forgetting. Well, that was a dead give-away. I don't know how Miss Lissey knew it was there. I suspect that knowing McBain was the man with the barrow, she went snooping as usual, bless her poor old heart. And she saw that that at McBain's I rather think he had carried it home with him that night from Murchison's, thinking it was his own, which he probably hadn't worn at all. I think he saw Duncan go out that night, leaving only Marie and Dr. Murchison in the house; then, later, he saw her slip out to meet Devoe. Of course, he knew about that affair, although probably not all the truth. But Gordon informs me that they were in the habit of meeting late at night after the professor was in bed. McBain would have seen them, and would have known they were out of the way that night. So he went into the study quietly and struck the fatal blow—a harder blow than he intended. Your brother put his hand up to his head dazedly. . . . reached out and grasped the paper lying on the desk and tore it. A piece of it fell into the drawer. The piece we found later with the pipe." He caught Tuck's astonished glance. "I found it, rather," he amended. "I didn't show it to you. It had blood stains on it."

"Michael," Bunny said crisply, "what about the time element? Miss Lissey said it was two o'clock in the morning when she saw that barrow on the path?" "I know. I don't suppose the blow was struck so late. Possibly McBain left Murchison drugged, and lying in the shadow of the hedge until he dared take him to the boat. In the meantime he removed all traces of the struggle from the study. Mrs. Murchison discovered the thing to warn her of the truth." He sighed. "I saw that business about the hat was a dead give-away. What I meant was this. Nobody had been at the McBain house that night. Mrs. McBain said, except Miss Lissey. Now, we know that Miss Lissey had been away that party down town. So that was an untruth. I am convinced that Mrs. McBain feared the truth. I think she mentioned the hat to him earlier, and he destroyed it. When I asked for it, and it was missing, she was sure. She has been in a state of collapse ever since, you know."

"I'm awfully sorry for her," Bunny murmured sympathetically. Duncan stirred. "I'm sorry for her too," he said. "She's a very fine woman. My brother—that was one of the reasons he was going away. . . . You see, he couldn't stand it. . . . his own unhappiness and his quarrel with her husband and you can see. . . ." he flushed.

Michael made patterns on the tablecloth. "I see," he said quietly. "Michael," Bunny said for the third time, "I want to know."

Questions And Answers "OF COURSE you do," he said soothingly. "I realize that. But just a minute. . . . Duncan you were threatening to kill Jared Devoe, weren't you, if the woman you supposed to be your sister-in-law didn't give him up?" "Yes." "Exactly. Well, please don't judge our police force or dad by the conduct of that inept officer the other day. I suppose you realize that the thing was more or less railroaded."

"I got it," Duncan said ruefully. "That's what was making me so angry." "Sorry," Michael replied. "I couldn't be helped. We had to do it that way. By the way—there's one thing more; what exactly did Miss Lissey say to you that Sunday afternoon? She told us just a moment before she died that this thing would spoil your life for you, was she laboring under some mistaken idea?" Duncan flushed again, as he always did when any mention was made of the tangled domestic affairs of his brother. "She said," he replied slowly, "that Devoe and Marie were carrying on scandalously. She knew they'd been shipping out on Edgar for months, and he was determined that something must be done. She thought I well, you're right, she thought I was in love with Marie too. She said she'd threatened to kill Devoe, you see, and she didn't think that was just the way to go about it. She wanted Marie to be driven all the campus and if I didn't do it, she was going to, and she was convinced that such action would bring me into a most unpleasant publicity and cause me to be disgraced."

Michael stirred and drew a deep breath. "That hat?" he repeated. "Oh, yes, I was forgetting. Well, that was a dead give-away. I don't know how Miss Lissey knew it was there. I suspect that knowing McBain was the man with the barrow, she went snooping as usual, bless her poor old heart. One's Beloved BY LOUISE PLATT HAUCK

Brother And Sister Chapter One SUE DAVENPORT came into the big living-room with her own peculiarly light-footed step. She was flushed and tingling from the crisp October air. Her dark eyes, which had a trick at times of seeming far too large for her small oval face, sparkled at the sight of the first wood fire of the season.

"Bless Maggie's heart!" she murmured, coming to rest one small brogue foot on the old brass railing which had enclosed the fireplace in her mother's girlhood home. She stood there for some time, smiling to herself in conscious enjoyment of well being. It was good to have walked for miles among the rustling leaves along the river bank until the rapidly falling dusk drove her homeward. It was good to come into this spacious room whose every furnishing had been familiar to her since her babyhood, though now it occupied a comfortable apartment instead of the big house where she and her brother Allen had been born. It was good—it was best of all to be twenty-four and not unattractive, and the youthful mistress of this new home!

"Want I should turn on the lights, Miss Sue?" Maggie asked, entering quietly. "Most time to set the table for dinner." Sue roused herself with a little laugh. "I suppose it is! And I must have a bath and change before then." She came close to the old woman. "I smell of woodsmoke and dusty leaves and walnuts. They're thick under the big tree on Wyeth Hill!" "Miss Sue, you haven't been up there alone again—and this late in the day besides? How many times do I have to tell you 'tain't safe up there? Jesse James used to hide in Dug Cut—"

The girl's laugh rang out again and she seized the old servant in her arms and hugged her. "Maggie darling, they laid Jesse James in his grave before I was born—before you were born, if it comes to that! It was grand up there, watching the lights come on in the city, the planes circling down to the airfield. And—"

She shook her head, shamelessly admiring herself in the long narrow mirror above the mantelpiece. "It's not really white yet, just sort of creamy; and it looks better at night than it does in the daytime. But considering the fact that Mother used to absolutely cry over me when I was dressed for parties, the change is most gratifying, most gratifying indeed!" She lowered her voice pompously over the last phrase, imitating the lawyer who had been her joint guardian with Allen after their father's death.

Presently they were at the table, devouring with healthy young appetites Maggie's delicious dinner. Allen put forward a finger to the silver bowl of violets, long-stemmed purple beauties with an expensive look. "The faithful Kettle?" She shrugged. "Yes, I must be losing my technique. I simply can't discourage him. Last night I deliberately picked a quarrel with him; and this morning he sent these to apologize for my unmanly words which, I assure you, astonished me far more than they can have done you. Isn't he an idiot, Allen?" "He's a darned successful lawyer, my dear young woman. You might go farther and fare worse, you know."

Sue laughed outright. "Sue Kettle! It sounds like a Salvation Army lass! I can just hear Forest Webb toasting the engagement. 'Here's to Sue and James Kettle, and all the little pots and pans!' To her surprise Allen remarked meditatively: "I think I wouldn't let a babbling fool like Forest influence me in the choice of a husband, my dear!" "The goblet she was lifting to her lips was restored to its coaster with a tiny thump. "Allen Davenport! Do I hear you calling your best friend a fool, and a babbling one at that?"

work in the state; and J. A. Park, president of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce. Everything was fine, except that no permission had been given by the faculty for any such events; and the instructional force, especially the military, was enraided. There were threats of expulsion or drastic disciplinary action; but it all simmered down to arrest of the boys at the Thanksgiving Day game. "All I minded was that they waited until they'd got our money for admission," sighs Commissioner Scott.

Bill Sharpe, head of the News Bureau of the Department of Conservation and Development, recently received quite a boost in the syndicated column of Frank Parker Stockbridge—a feature which appears in something like a thousand weekly newspapers all over the United States. Stockbridge gave out a few observations on "propaganda" noting that much of it is really instructive and necessary; and then went on: "What started me off on publicity and propaganda is a couple of mimeographed sheets I lately got in my mail from Bill Sharpe. Bill is an expert propagandist for his home state of North Carolina. If the things he sends out to the papers about North Carolina aren't true, they're at least interesting and get printed. Presumably they make people think it's a pretty good state. "Bill sends out a story, for example, about the town of Lenoir, N. C., where folks like to take things easy; so some of the sidewalks have been divided into three traffic lanes, the center one for walking and the two outer ones for sauntering, talking politics or just loafing. Sounds like a good idea for any town. "Then Bill comes along with a geographical discovery. The school books for years have taught that Mount Mitchell is the highest mountain in the east, with Clingman's Dome second. But Bill Sharpe reports that a North Carolina peak without even a name, one of the "Black Brothers" in Yadon county, is three feet higher than Clingman's Dome and only 39 feet lower than Mount Mitchell. Unimportant, perhaps, but interesting—and it's propaganda."

Crisp, duly of record in Book V-20 at page 170 in the office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, default having been made in the payment of the debt therein secured, the undersigned mortgagee will offer for sale and sell to the highest bidder for cash on Thursday, the 21st day of December, 1939, at 12 o'clock M., before the courthouse door in Greenville, N. C., the following described real property, to-wit: That certain tract of land located in Greenville Township, Pitt County, containing 24 acres, more or less, adjoining the lands of Richard Hardee and known as the George Tucker lands, and being the same lands devised by Henry Hardee to Richard Clarence Hardee by Will recorded in Will Book No. 5 at page 448 in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of Pitt County, the interest conveyed in said land is the life estate of Richard Clarence Hardee which is subject to the prior life estate of Emma J. Hardee, widow of Henry Hardee, therein. This the 20th day of Nov. 1939. K. B. PACE, S. M. CRISP, Mortgagees Harding & Lee, Attys.

"Getting easy to look at, Sue!" said Allen.

He selected a crisp bit of celery before he spoke. "You do, my lamb. He is a babbling fool—that's partly why we both love him, isn't it? His nonsense is sort of restful. But if you're going to take it seriously—let it count against Jim Kettle—"

"An Old Maid?" SHE pushed back her plate, rested a rounded elbow on the table and propped her chin in her hand. "For the love of Mike, Buddy! What's got you all excited over Jim Kettle? He's been under foot more or less for the past two years, and you never took him seriously before." She blinked suddenly. "Trying to get rid of me, Allen?" "Now it's you who are the fool, Sis. It would take more than a whole storeful of Kettles to come between us—you ought to know that!" "Well," she assented, mollified. Presently she went back to the subject. "You can't resist a dig at his name yourself! A storeful of Kettles, you said! I see myself marrying a man with such a name! For that matter," she went on busy now with her salad, "I see myself marrying James, if his name was Montague Montmorency! He's a pill," she said with finality.

"You don't—well—care for him at all, Sue?" She frowned with genuine annoyance. "I believe you are trying to marry me off, Buddy! Why in heaven's name should I, if this thing called love should descend on me out of a clear sky, select James Kettle as its object when the town is practically running over with eligible and—harming young men? James is a million years older than I am—eleven, at least. He—"

Allen interrupted her. "Honestly, Sue, haven't you ever been in love? Haven't you ever wanted to have your own home, order meals for your man, put your hand in his and go . . . wherever he wanted you to? A flush rose under his dark skin, but he kept on steadily. "I thought all girls had crushes! I know you're always telling me about Barbara. You're twenty-four, Sue dear; older than Mother was when she married Dad. Aren't you—haven't you—"

Really alarmed, she answered almost in a whisper. "Do—do you want me to, Allen? Are you afraid I'll hang around your neck, a—an old maid?" He laughed sheepishly. "No, you've only been out of college five years!" He chuckled. "You make me sound positively callow! Must I remind you that I emerged with my doctor's degree in three branches of engineering? That I'm a junior member of a somewhat important firm? And that," he added with a curious sort of deliberation, "Forest Webb and I are about the only bachelors left in our particular set?" He went on swiftly before she could answer: "It's your life we're talking about, Sue, not mine. It came to me all of a sudden tonight—as I said—that it's queer you haven't been in and out of love a dozen times, I wonder," he went on anxiously, "if it's because you know too many men? If your life wasn't all cluttered up with my friends—if you were really hard up for fellows to take you out, dance with you, send you flowers—"

Her low laughter halted him momentarily, but he began again, his kind eyes fixed on her worriedly, his affectionate voice full of brotherly concern. Continued tomorrow forest seedlings, it was pointed out today by State Forester J. S. Holmes, and F. H. Claridge, his assistant in the Department of Conservation and Development.

They have just received notice of the new allotment from A. Y. Floyd, state director for the Triple-A in North Carolina.

"Wording of the new allotment section, sent us by Director Floyd, is a bit involved, but when it is boiled down it seems to mean that any farmer who cooperates in the program can get an additional credit of $30 if he will plant four acres in forest trees," Claridge said. "This will more than pay for the cost of the trees and the labor needed to plant them."

"The seedlings can be had from the State Forest Nursery of the Department of Conservation and Development at a cost of $2 per thousand, and, delivered. While two men can plant about two acres a day. From 600 to 1,000 trees are needed to plant an acre. Thus the cost of the trees, including planting and the cost of trees, should not exceed $4 an acre. And so a farmer can plant four acres of seedlings for $16 and still have $14 left out of the $30 allotment to use for other purposes. We would suggest use of this money to plant several additional acres of forest seedlings in order to assure farms of good timber for future use."

Chapter One

THE SON OF LIGHTNING

These many, many years ago the God of Lightning was sitting thoughtfully at his desk in his great white castle in the North. He turned the pages of a calendar as though he were remembering his fiery deeds.

Then he turned to the page for the next day. There he found scribbled, "My son's twenty-first birthday." He leaned forward, his gaudy face broke into a flashing smile and he pulled a bell cord beside him. A gong boomed. Feet came running and a servant stuck his head in the door.

"Call the winds," shouted Lightning. In a twinkling there was a puffing against the window at his right. He opened it and in swooped a dozen ladies in long, gray mist. They flew up and down sighing, "Wh-wh-a-a-a!"

"Summon the fairy world here for tomorrow noon," said Lightning. "Then my son turns twenty-one. He shall have a feast and then set out on his adventures."

So off the winds swept, and the God of Lightning went to bed. At dawn he was up. He commanded great wreaths of glowing lightning hung at the gates. He swung festoons of Northern lights from the castle's towers; glowing mists of red, green and purple. He commanded a feast be laid and then he summoned his son. He sat down to wait. He heard light running steps. His son entered the room; a tall, graceful young man, handsome as a prince. His shoulders were broad, his head was carried proudly, his smile flashed so brightly from deep, mischievous eyes that it was hard to tell their color. He wore a blue jerkin, blue knee breeches, and about his slim waist, a silver belt.

The Silver Flute

He shouted with joy when his father told him that this was his first day of manhood. But just then both of them heard a great clamor at the front gates. The whole fairy world was arriving. Little rain fairies their pockets full of fireflies to keep them warm. Flower fairies wrapped in pussy willow catkins. Trolls that rode the back of snails. Three huge giants who had walked half way around the world since dawn, carrying between them a bar, big as a house, filled with fruits from the South. Even the witches came.

"Welcome," shouted Lightning. "Follow me. I have arranged a tournament." The whole company flew, ran, hopped after Lightning into the great, stone-walled courtyard where Lightning announced, "We of the fairy world can touch the bottom of the sea and the brightest rim of heaven. Today a new one joins our ranks and he must test his strength. I want a pale blue ribbon from the highest rim of the sky."

In a twinkling the sky was dotted with floating forms. The son of Lightning rose like a flash. Soon the soaring forms were lost in the heavens. Many minutes passed and then the sky was filled with forms dropping rapidly down. They all carried strips of pale blue. But the son of Lightning had the palest

one. He had flown the highest and the swiftest. He shouted with joy. Suddenly on his shoulder stood the tiny Queen of Fairies. She handed him a silver flute. "This, my son," she said, "will help you to win friends."

The Black Opal

The young man bowed and looked very pleased. But just then a little black witch dropped on his other shoulder. She handed him a black opal. "This," she said, "will make it less easy." You see she was angry that anyone could fly faster than she did.

Lightning frowned at the witch, and suddenly pulled a silver arrow from his left shoulder. He hurled it at the witch. It tore her long black cape and then spun through the air down, down to the villages of men.

The witch flew off whimpering. Lightning shrugged his shoulders, put his arm around his son, and led the whole party into a great feast that lasted until the moon stopped in to tell them the hour. The next day the son of Lightning set out on a year's adventures.

JUST ONE MISTAKE AFTER ANOTHER

Tulsa, Okla.—(AP)—Water Commissioner John Graham thinks this could go on forever.

His employes gave him a pair of boots. When Graham tried them on, both were for the left foot. Back to the manufacturer they went for mending.

An employe gave him a pair of spurs to fit the boots. Both were for the same boot. Graham discovered.

Then the boots came back—two sizes too small.

SAFER ROADS will decrease accidents!

Needed. More roads with built-in safety—that make it hard for accidents to happen!

Three Essentials of a Safe Road

MODERN ROADWAY DESIGN
Highway engineers know how to make roads safe by easing sharp turns, eliminating dangerous grade crossings, by providing ample widths, long "sight distance," AND a safe pavement surface.

SURE NON-SKID SURFACE
The safety answer is concrete—skid-resistant, wet or dry—durable, true of surface, free from bumps, ruts, waves and other accident-breeding defects.

UTMOST VISIBILITY
Concrete's light-colored surface reflects light without glare; makes headlights more efficient. Helps the driver see better.

CONCRETE SAVES—not only lives, but money. Concrete costs less to build than other pavements of equal load-carrying capacity. And far less to maintain than less enduring surfaces.
