REPLY IS MADE TO PROTEST OF 21 REPUBLICS

Britain Claims Safety Zone Can Not Be Enforced

ANSWER SENT IN FORM OF A NOTE

Dispatched to Panama Government for Presentation of Pan-American Permanent Committee

London, Jan. 15.—(AP)—British sources stated today that Great Britain had replied to the protests of 21 American republics against violation of their neutrality "safety zone" by taking the position that the zone was unenforceable under international law.

The British reply was in the form of a note transmitted to the Panama government for presentation to the permanent Pan-American neutrality committee, it was said. Its contents were withheld.

Replies to the United States government on its protests against the diversion of mail and the bringing of United States vessels into contraband control ports in the war zone are expected to be forwarded soon.

The 21 American republics, including the United States on October 3 established a 300-mile "safety zone" around the Americas, from which it was desired to keep the European war. On December 23, just 10 days after the battle off Uruguay between three British cruisers and the German pocket battleship Graf Spee, the Pan-American nations protested to Britain, France and Germany against violation of the zone.

At that time representatives of the 21 nations also decided to meet again for further consultation in neutrality and this meeting was scheduled to open in Rio De Janeiro today.

Southern Finland Again Victim of Soviet Raids

Attacks Resumed following Offensive Yesterday

Helsinki, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The Russian air force, attacking again after unleashing yesterday the worst aerial offensive of the Russian-Finnish war, resumed bombing raids on southern Finland today.

Two air raid alarms were sounded in Helsinki shortly after noon. No damage was reported down town, but some bombs were reported to have fallen in the outskirts.

As a result of yesterday's widespread attacks Finns feared Russian strategy called for a powerful assault on the behind-the-lines morale to break military resistance at the front.

Civilians of a score of southern Finnish cities and towns surveyed the ruins of homes and public buildings caught in the sweep of Sunday's far-flung air raids.

It was indicated that Vasa, important coastal city and railroad center, suffered the severest damage among the larger cities, with twelve persons reported dead.

Flames spread in a number of smaller places, where fire-fighting equipment was inadequate.

It was believed nearly 20 towns and cities were bombed.

The Russians were reported to have swooped low to attack civilians with machine guns along the Turku-Helsinki railway.

A Finnish communiqué reported that 15 were known dead, "several dozen" wounded and that many private homes were destroyed by fire.

The former residence of the United States minister was damaged by bombs in Grankulla, but nobody was injured. The American minister and his staff had moved a few days ago to larger quarters.

The new legation here also narrowly escaped being damaged in Saturday's raid on the capital.

Resigns Position With Motor Club

Mrs. N. C. Brooks has resigned as manager of the local branch of the Carolina Motor club, the resignation having taken effect on Friday of last week. Mrs. Brooks has served as branch manager for the past 8 years.

On February 1, 1932, when the motor club decided to keep the Greenville office open throughout the year, Miss Ward Moore resigned and Mrs. Brooks became manager.

Since that time the work has expanded greatly as the public has grown more and more motor conscious.

In announcing her resignation, Mrs. Brooks expressed her appreciation for the cooperation afforded her, particularly by the dealers in the territory which she has served and also for the fine spirit of the public in general.

Assert Germany Still Intends to Avoid, If Possible, Extension Of War Area; Lowland countries meanwhile Continue To Mass Forces Behind Defense Frontiers Bordering Reich

Berlin, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Authorized Germans charged today that the present war scare in Belgium and The Netherlands was "made in Paris" and asserted Germany still clung to her oft-announced intention to avoid—if possible—an extension of the war area.

The war scare, it was said, was designed to provoke Germany into an aggressive step. The authorized sources said that Germany declined to be provoked.

As seen through German eyes, the precautions taken in the small western European countries has resulted from "suggestive information" given the Belgium and Netherlands governments by French Premier Daladier.

Amsterdam, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Under virtually complete mobilization, the armies of Belgium and The Netherlands were massed today behind frontier defenses to meet any German threat to lowland neutrality.

Close to 1,000,000 Belgium and Netherlands soldiers were reported already at or ordered to positions along the border—a three hundred mile wall through which Germany would have to smash to outflank the British-French allies on the Western Front.

In Belgium there were disturbing reports of new concentrations of Nazi attack troops, while in The Netherlands a government communiqué spoke of "certain less favorable symptoms in the international situation."

The semi-official Belga news agency, however, issued a note in Brussels denying what it called "alarmist stories" being "spread in Belgium and abroad" and said additional mobilization was proof only of the vigilance of the government.

Belgium bled about the task of stepping up her defensive powers. Throughout Sunday soldier-laden trucks rolled through Brussels toward the frontier, while messengers throughout the country summoned officers and men from their homes, churches, cafes and theatres.

Boston, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Police seized membership cards and literature today from the New England headquarters of the Christian Front.

Members of the police "radical squad" turned over the data to Police Superintendent Edward W. Fallon, who announced earlier he had "no evidence whatever" of any revolutionary plan, but added there was "evidence that the group was anti-Semitic."

Under command of Col Angelo Tondi, the Italian plane took off from Rome Sunday.

She had been in the air 34 hours and 25 minutes and had covered about 4,400 miles of her projected flight at the time given for the landing.

The mark fell far short of the world's record of 7,162 miles established by two British Royal Air Force planes November 5 through 7, 1938, in a flight from Ismailia on the Suez canal, to Darwin, Australia.

Tondi reported by radio earlier in the day that his fuel was escaping through a leak.

OFFICIALS SAY FIRST ARRESTS ONLY A START

Seventeen Men and Small Arsenal Seized In N. Y.

AGENTS UNCOVER TERRORIST PLOT

More Arrests Predicted in Scheme to Overthrow Government After Slaying Congressmen

New York, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Federal officials today declared the arrest of 17 men and the seizure of a small arsenal had merely "scratched the surface" of a terrorist plot to overthrow the United States government.

"More arrests" were predicted by United States Attorney Harold M. Kennedy, who said that FBI agents under J. Edgar Hoover were "virtually forced" to act now because their investigations indicated series of bombing outrages was imminent.

Kennedy disclosed that FBI agents closed in on the suspects Saturday night because they had received information of definite instructions issued to one of the plotters to set off a bomb in a public place.

The plot, he said, included plans to blow up buildings, raid utility plants and government offices, "liquidate Jews, assassinate a dozen anti-union congressmen and set up a dictatorship."

Hoover, in announcing disruption of the alleged plot, said those in custody were members of an inner circle of the Christian Front, an anti-Semitic organization. More than half the suspects, he said, served in armed forces of the United States.

The armed forces of the United States or were members of the New York national guard.

Arraigned before Federal Judge Grover Moscovitz in Brooklyn, the men pleaded innocent and were held in $50,000 bail each for hearings February 5.

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-N. Y.) of Brooklyn, said he was one of the congressmen marked for assassination and declared that as ranking member of the House Judiciary committee he would recommend legislation to increase the penalty for sedition.

"The penalty now seems to me to be inadequate in this case in view of the plans these men had," Celler said.

Dr. Carr was born in this county near Farmville in July, 1874, the son of the late Albert and Alice Sheppard Carr. Sheppard of Hanover, Pa., donated Sheppard Memorial Library to the city, and acting in Mr. Sheppard's behalf, Dr. Carr personally superintended the construction and equipping of the library. BALTIC POWERS WARNED BY SOVIET RUSSIA

Replies To Protest on Finnish Aid "Unsatisfactory"

PRESS ATTACKS ALSO ASSAILED

Soviets Claim Sweden And Norway not Using Proper Resistance to Outside Influence

Moscow, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Soviet Russia warned today of "danger" in her relations with Norway "and especially Sweden", publishing both her protests to them charging violations of neutrality and their not "entirely satisfactory" answers.

In both cases the Russian protests dealt with anti-Soviet attacks in the press and in quarters close to the governments of the two countries and with men and materials going from them to the aid of Finland.

Similarly worded replies from Norway and Sweden disputed the Russian assertions and expressed hope for continued good relation with the Soviet union.

"The replies given by the government of Norway and especially Sweden can not be regarded as entirely satisfactory," said Tass, official Soviet news agency.

"The governments of Norway and Sweden do not deny all the facts proving violation by them of the policy of neutrality. Such a position by the governments of Sweden and Norway conceals danger."

"It testifies to the fact that the governments of Sweden and Norway do not offer proper resistance to the influence of those powers which try to involve Sweden and Norway in war against the U. S. S. R."

Sweden was warned that aid for Finland and attacks on Russia in the Swedish press "may lead to undesirable complications."

The Russian representation in Norway charged that the Norwegian press and quarters closely connected with the government "had been carrying on an 'unrestricted campaign against the Soviet Union which can not but cause harm and complications to Russian-Norwegian relations."

For example, she read a few lines from "Pilgrims Progress" and from Ruskin's "Seven Lamps of Architecture." Whitman she said, as well as many other writers of poetry, must have gotten his inspiration from the Bible. Figures of speech and many other expressions used by the best of authors can be easily traced to the Bible. Dr. Turner said.

Not only the old books but also many modern ones have either style or ideas taken directly from the Bible. She concluded her talk with the idea that there is no limit to the Bible's contribution to the literary field.

Paper white narcissus gave a hint of spring to the spacious and lovely living room of Mrs. Harris' home. The meeting was opened by the chairman Mrs. K. T. Putrell, who expressed appreciation for the opportunity of meeting in such a charming place. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Mrs. T. E. Hooker announced the open meeting of the Garden Club Friday evening at which Mrs. Charlotte Hilton Greene would be the speaker.

OVER THE LINE

Happens This Side of New Year

Every day's half gone.

There are numerous cases of the nature in the community.

That is an artistic display in C. T. Munford's centre window, representing a handsomely furnished bedroom.

There is no longer room for reasonable doubt that Snow Hill is to have a railroad. The right-of-way from Tarboro to Snow Hill has been bought, paid for and surveyed; and the road is now under construction, about one-third of it being already completed and before the close of the nineteenth century Snow Hill will be in gear with the outside world. Then it is the vast possibilities of our little town will begin to materialize.—Snow Hill Standard.

peaks to men because she is surprisingly intelligent.

Mrs. L. A. Stroud gave some very interesting current events.

Mrs. T. E. Hooker related her trip through Florida and New Orleans in such an interesting and vivid manner the group followed with intense interest.

A most delicious plate of dainties and hot spiced tea were served in the soft glow of lighted blue tapers.

About thirty members of the club and guests enjoyed this fine meeting, and the hospitality of Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Hart. —Reported.

Third Street P. T. A.
The P. T. A. of Third Street School met on Wednesday afternoon, January 10.

The auditorium was very pretty with its decorations of red blossoms and green leaves.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Helene Higon Kirkpatrick, and Mrs. J. B. Smith, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting.

Mrs. R. Leigh Lee passed around copies of worthwhile magazines for parents and listed many real help in the Parents magazine.

New ways of making money were discussed and voted upon.

Then the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Guy Smith of the program committee.

She introduced Miss Virginia Berger and Mr. George Thomason, Scout leaders.

Mrs. Berger told about the spirit of scouting and the good it did to growing girls, the high ideals of scouting and the helps in making good citizens.

Mr. Thomason told of the local and national set-ups of scout organizations. Both talks were very instructive and interesting.

Mrs. C. C. Hilton asked how many parents were interested in having supervised playgrounds for all Greenville children during the coming summer. The vote was unanimous for playgrounds.

The second grade again won the attendance prize. All grades had good representation for seventy-five of the children of Third Street School had parents present.

With Jimmy and Jean at the WPA Art Gallery

"When are you going to have another puppet show?" asked Jimmy. "Almost daily this question is asked by guests at the Greenville WPA Art Gallery, occasionally this inquiry comes from the grown up visitors but most frequently from the children.

This time it was a very attractive looking young woman who inquired.

"Have you seen any of the shows that our Puppet Guild members have been giving?" the gallery attendant asked.

"Yes, I have seen them all; the one about Simple Simon at the Pitt County Fair, the Indian one and the one characterized Jimmy and Jean at their Grandparents for Christmas." A merry twinkle came into the speaker's eyes as she added: "You see I am the mother of Jimmy and Jean."

The gallery attendant was delighted. "We have been hoping that you would come in and make yourself known to us. We wish that all the mothers of our club members had seen the same. Jimmy and Jean both are such ideal children that it is a pleasure to have them here."

The visitor made an unsuccessful attempt to conceal her pride in the said. "Thank you, I am delighted that they can have the opportunity to take a part in the production of the art gallery."

"You may be surprised to know that the Puppet Guild members have given nine performances of these shows and that 1000 people have seen these performances."

"That is rather astonishing. I think this is splendid training for the children. Through this Guild they become acquainted with material, art mediums, and learn to make good puppets. Then too, there is the experience of producing the shows, learning to pull together, to cooperate in a spirit of unselfishness for the good of the show. Jean is most enthusiastic about it all."

"Yes, the gallery will hardly hold all the vigorous spirits that bubble over when the children are working up a show. 'May I pull the curtain?' Let me change the puppet. 'Please may I work my own puppet?' Questions tumble out."

"The shows are all original, aren't they?"

"All except the Indian shows have been thus far. But no matter how familiar the story or the plot the children are always encouraged to find their own words to express the thoughts of the puppet characters which they are portraying. This lends the performance a sparkle of spontaneity in the conversation that can rarely be attained by memorizing the lines. Often it is very amusing to hear the old time fairy tales told in modern language."

"How about giving an old fairy story sometime?"

"Good idea. We always welcome suggestions. It so happens that this very show is already in the making. But before this is ready there will come an original one written by a local high school boy who is one of our frequent gallery visitors. He has written it especially for the guild, after seeing a bunch of puppets that have already been made, and has suited his plot to the characters. He is going to supervise the production also."

"I wonder if I know that boy?" the visitor pondered.

"Perhaps you do—his name is Jimmy."

"When shall we expect the performance?"

"Oh perhaps in two weeks. Watch The Daily Reflector for the announcement of the date."

MAKING PLANS OF NUTRITION

Plans Discussed For Cooperative Movement in N. C.

Raleigh, Jan. 15.—Groundwork for consideration and discussion on a statewide basis of nutritional problems in the school and the home was laid at a conference held in the library of the State Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh and attended by representatives of various interested groups, including state and federal agencies. Plans were discussed for a cooperative movement to study nutritional problems, with a view to working out ways and means for the adoption of remedial measures.

Following the conference, it was decided to hold another meeting in February, to hear the report of a committee named to make a survey of publications used by the various agencies.

Those present at yesterday's conference included: Dean I. O. Schaub, director of the State College Extension Service; Miss Mary E. Thomas, nutrition supervisor for the State College Home Demonstration Service; Mrs. Louise Moore, nutritionist for the WPA lunch room, garden and canning projects; Mrs. Martha P. Noel, training consultant for the WPA garden, canning and lunchroom projects; Mrs. Stella Cusick, associate State director of the Farm Security Administration; Mrs. W. T. Bost, State Commissioner of Charities and Public Welfare; Dr. Walter Wilkins, coordinator of the State School Health Coordinating Service; Miss French Boyd, nutritionist for the State School Health Coordinating Service; Mrs. Pansy Fetzer, nutritionist for the National Youth Administration; Miss Isabelle Moseley, nutritionist for the State Department of Agriculture; A. E. Langston, State director of the Surplus Commodity Commission; Miss Catherine Dennis, vocational home economics supervisor; Miss Sallie Brooks, assistant nutritionist of the State College Home Demonstration Service; William J. Wingate, special representative for the Federal Surplus Commodity Commission, and Miss Rose Mills, representing the educational program of the WPA nursery school.

What It Means

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington.—About cherry blossom time 86 years ago in far off Japan, a miniature railroad train steamed around a circular track, heavily laden with Japanese noblemen.

The cars were too small to climb into, so the passengers mounted the roofs and hung on for dear life. Most of them seemed grimly determined to master the marvels of the white men had been trying to force upon them for 300 years and more.

There were two reasons for their ludicrous performance:

1. The black warships of the American gentleman-at-arms, Commodore Matthew Gallbraith Perry rode menacingly in the nearby harbor, symbols of danger for these kimonod noblemen.

2. The Japanese for the first time were really worried about their equality, whereas before that time they were cocksure all other races were barbaric and inferior.

Preferably Superior

Look into the relations of the Japanese with any other race or nation, from the earliest times to now, and you will always find evidence of this ruling passion of the Japanese to be equal or superior in everything they do—preferably superior.

It was the determination to be equal that built modern Japan. It was that same determination that produced her wars. And it's that same quality that governs her relations with the United States.

Back in 1854 Commodore Perry covered the mailed fist of his naval power as best he could. He had brought along his miniature engine and cars to impress the Japanese with the force and power of western civilization. His ships of war he kept battened down, in hopes he wouldn't have to use them.

Perry's mission was entirely practical and hard-headed. Aware that Japan lay athwart our trade route to the Orient, he wanted trade, coal stations, and help for shipwrecked sailors.

Perry did his work well. Where the Spaniards, Portuguese and English had failed, this gracious American seaman won the day.

By 1859, the powerful Shogun of Japan (Japanese for military dictator in those days) signed a treaty which blithely set out to establish between Japan and America "a perfect permanent, and universal peace, and a sincere and cordial amity."

The Short End

Under the forbidding guns of warships that taught the Japanese the meaning of modern warfare, treaties with other western powers followed, and as was to be expected, Japan got the short end of the stick. The foreigners insisted on clauses limiting Japanese tariff duties, and they demanded extra-territoriality—that device of the western world that gave foreigners the right to evade Japanese law and win trials in their own courts on Japanese soil. The westerners argued that they could hardly be expected to conform to bizarre Japanese codes and customs.

Interested In Profits

Most of the westerners were interested in profits, not friendship, and they acted accordingly. Only the United States felt impelled to try to carry out the aims of that original treaty and give the Japanese something close to equal rights. Naturally the Japanese hated the "foreign devils." Within 20 years of Perry's first visit, the treaty-making Shogunate had been shoved aside, and the Emperor of Japan

Spring May Bring Europe Showers Of Bombs

Many signs point to the probability of an Allied-German "war in earnest" in the spring. The character of modern land and sea warfare is well established. That of air warfare is still in flux. The AP's Aviation Editor here discusses what a large-scale war in the air would be like.

By DEVON FRANCIS
AP Aviation Editor

New York.—The creation of air fleets having striking similarity to surface navies promises a kind of air warfare in Europe—if big air offensives actually are launched in 1940—that will stir the shades of yesterday's flying aces.

Bombing raids by hundreds of planes operating in "waves" are more than a specter of the future. They are possible, even probable, now. Both sides in Europe's "big war" have built up tremendous air forces. The almost static nature of the air war since last September, the German campaign in Poland excepted, is an unnatural lull before a storm, in the opinion of many competent neutral military men.

New Combat Arm

At the close of the world war, aircraft were only auxiliary weapons, with indifferent effectiveness. In the whole of that war only 1,400 persons lost their lives in Europe from Zeppelin and airplane raids.

Today, air forces consist of bombing planes, comparable in function with battleships and possessing a striking power far beyond that of the lumbering bombers of 1918, and of swarms of smaller craft which, like those on the sea, have supporting missions.

A wholly new type of warplane, the bomber destroyer, has come out of the aeronautical laboratories. Armed with small cannon, it is designed to attack and shoot down invading bombers.

Another new type, glimpsed briefly in the German blitzkrieg in Poland and again during the December 18 defense of Heligoland against British bombers, is the bi-motored pursuit or fighting single-seater. The United States army also is experimenting with this type of weapon.

Must Be Protected

Squadrons of long-range pursuit planes to accompany bombing missions are being built up by both the had been restored to power. The Japanese were ready to drive the barbarians into the sea.

But they didn't do anything of the kind.

They listened, instead, to a cunning and powerful counselor among their own people. "Wait," he cautioned. "wait!"

Waves of bombers may help decide the war. These are British ships on dawn patrol.

Allies and the Germans, on the theory—borne out by losses in the abortive raids up to date—that bombers to be effective must have protection against defending pursuits.

Finally, Germany and, possibly, her adversaries are constructing four-motored, long-range bombers to reach objectives more than 1,000 miles from their home bases.

The aim of all warfare is to break an enemy's will to resist, and to be as economical as possible of blood and money in the process.

One school of thought contends that to defend on land and attack in the air is the quickest avenue to a final decision.

Air War In Spring

The stalemate on the Western Front, where armies are living comfortably in huge fixed fortifications, lends credence to talk that a spring offensive would be confined to air and sea warfare.

Germany was in a fair way of winning the war of 1914-18 with her unrestricted submarine attacks in 1917. Germany's counter-blockade of England was having a deadly effect. Air warfare on a 1940 scale might logically have as its objectives the destruction of factories producing vital war materials, roads and railways, nerve centers of electrical, gas and water supply services, wharves and, last but not least, enemy airdromes.

must come eventually . . . then we may become the chief nation of the Orient."

Stepping Out

Wait the Japanese did and patiently. The foreigners objected to their laws, so the Japanese reformed their courts along western lines. The foreigners hated their social customs, so they remodeled them to fit western forms, although they did not at first change the social air superiority, which would be necessary to victory in the air, would depend on neutralizing the effectiveness of the enemy's air force. It is an air force axiom that the best place to bag the eagle is in his nest.

To Smash Morale

Air attacks during the world war were made to destroy British morale. Today, both sides would have the same objectives.

To be economical of both men and materials, the belligerents would choose their bombing targets carefully. Visibility, depending on weather, would be a major factor—unless navigational bombing, in which bombers would fly at great heights out of sight of the ground, were attempted.

Waves of bombers, loosed at intervals of an hour, probably would be preceded by swarms of pursuit or ground-strafting attack planes to draw the fire of defending aircraft. The bombers themselves, approaching at great altitude and gliding down with motors silenced to thwart elaborate "warning nets," would drop demolition, fragmentation or incendiary bombs, depending on the nature of the attack and the character of the targets.

Just what effect such attacks would have is perhaps the biggest question facing the high commands of both sides to the conflict.

order fundamentally. The nobility gave the people a constitution, although they kept the emperor cleverly immune to man-made laws. One of their houses of Parliament was even named "House Terrribly destructive air raids helped crush Poland. This is a scene in Warsaw.

Certainly a mass bombing raid by either belligerent would be enormous, and immediately. And just as certainly, the destruction in lives and property would be enormous, regardless of what air defense measures were taken.

a world military power.

The rest of the world smiled tolerantly at the regeneration of Japan. But, by 1894, the Japanese were ready to strike powerful blows for empire and equality. Ten years later the world was no longer amused, but deeply concerned with the changing stature of Japan.

On January 28, a treaty of commerce and amity between Japan and the United States will be terminated by the American government.

The notice of abrogation, sent to Japan nearly six months ago, was the first knowledge most Americans had that any special treaty existed between this country and Japan.

Abrogation brings to a new climax the most fantastic trade relations of Americans in our short history. Why was a treaty necessary in the first place, and why is it now being abrogated?

An open letter to the motoring public

Advertising writers can't make gasoline.

A bombardment of claims and counter claims has broken loose—and it may confuse the purchaser of gasoline.

Since the public has a right to be accurately informed about the gasolines sold today, the American Oil Company wishes to make a statement of policy regarding its regular gasoline and special motor fuel.

Comparing the quality of crude is not enough. Comparing anti-knock is not enough. It is the sum total of all the desirable quality characteristics that makes a good gasoline or motor fuel.

This constitutes the only real yardstick for comparison. Fair comparisons should take in every quality a good gasoline or motor fuel should have.

During the 29 years of its existence, the American Oil Company has not found it necessary to change the names of its products. Throughout all of this period, it has kept faith by constantly improving its products.

The American Oil Company has the largest and most modern refining units in the world.

The achievements of its scientists and engineers have been recognized as among the most important advances in chemical engineering.

The American Oil Company has the resources and facilities to furnish the best products and the highest values obtainable from crude petroleum.

We know what goes into Amoco-Gas and American Gas. We know these products never have had—and still do not have—any equals in their respective fields. Regardless of competitive claims, we say this unqualifiedly and without reservation.

As to American Gas, we sell it for exactly what it is—a pure, "sweet," 100% petroleum product. It is not "hopped up" with added chemicals which are not combustible. Its full range of quality characteristics comes from petroleum only. We don't try to make it a premium gas by merely calling it one. American Gas is the best buy at regular gas price.

As to Amoco-Gas, it is our premium motor fuel. It costs more to make. It's worth more. It does more. It must sell for more. You can not get a real premium fuel at a regular gas price. Amoco-Gas is instantly recognizable as a premium motor fuel by the velvety smoothness of the car's operation.

You can't get something for nothing. We have faith in the inherent common sense of the motorist—and in his ability to separate fact from claim.

American Oil Company products are the finest obtainable. They are backed by the entire resources of the American Oil Company, and accepted by the public as honest values, honestly described.

The remarkable increase in the sales of American Oil Company products proves that the motorist continues to be discriminating and alert in recognizing the "Sign of Greater Values."

Washington Daybook

Washington—Vice-President Garner is putting the bee on fellow candidates to follow his example by announcing for the presidential nomination regardless of whether President Roosevelt seeks a third term.

He has suggested to Postmaster General Farley and Senator Wheeler of Montana that if they wish to court the favors of Dame Democracy they ought to give her an opportunity to "cuddle up" without fear they will run if Roosevelt eaves into the picture.

Reports has it that only a few minutes before the Jackson day dinner in Washington, Garner twitted Farley about his half and half candidacy and suggested that he address the assembly as "Fellow Candidates."

Farley did exactly that and got a great burst out of the hundred-dollar-a-plate guests. However, Garner people do not accept this little pleasantry on the part of Farley as any indications that he is "all out" for the nomination.

Nor has Wheeler made any statement which even approximately rivals the 48 word statement by which Garner put himself on the dotted line.

Of course, it is not dumb politics for Mr. Garner to try to get more candidates in his corner. Several candidates, taken in the mass, would constitute a solid "stop Roosevelt" bloc.

Eccles To Senate?
A little sister to the third term mystery is whether Marriner S. Eccles, Federal Reserve Board chairman and inventor of part of the New Deal, will run for the Senate in Utah.

Senator King, a foe of much of the New Deal, is up for re-election. Several possible candidates are in the picture. Utah has adopted a general primary since King was nominated last, so it poses a new strategy, both for himself and his opposition.

A constellation of minorities might stop King in a convention, but in a primary it simply would divide the opposition and virtually assure his nomination. That is the picture Eccles sees.

Our information is that he has authorized certain prominent Democrats in Utah to determine whether he can have the field to himself against King. If he can, and further research indicates he has a fair chance to uproot King, he will enter the race, so our informant has it. He won't enter the field just to divide the opposition to King, who has proved himself a formidable candidate in times past.

Defense Attacked
Reactions in Congress indicate that President Roosevelt, the army and the navy had not worked the best possible strategy in seeking more money for naval and army rebuilding. There is far more unannounced opposition to the increased defense program than finds its way into print.

Strategic fumble number one appears to have been the scheme for saddling the defense program with the burden of a special defense tax. Members who were not bold enough to come out in the open and fight a defense program of itself are finding the tax scheme a platform from which to hit at both.

Further, there were samples of wrath at what some members felt was an effort to hide a $4,000,000 appropriation to begin development of Guam as a more useful military base. It didn't show up in the budget. Not until Admiral Stark, chief of naval operations, was testifying before the House Naval Affairs Committee did it pop out.

Chapter 37
Pity Not Wanted

SUE waited; surely Bob would seek her out now. But five minutes passed, ten.

The suspense became unbearable. Her actual waiting began to seem an admission of wrong doing. She walked quickly across the room, across the hall. Bob was sitting in a deep chair, staring absently, almost sleepily, it seemed at first, at the fern-filled fireplace.

"Bob!"
The face he turned on her made her cry out.

"Bob, you mustn't—look like that, I mean! I've done nothing wrong. I don't know what Eric told you, but—"

"He told me that you'd loved him ever since you and he met; that you had left my house to go to him when Treddons failed, and my duty—"

"Sue brought you back. He told me you had admitted you never loved me. He said that even two weeks ago you—my wife and the mother of my children—had assured him that you never had felt toward me, you never could feel toward me, you felt toward him. Is this true?"

"The tight band about her heart began to loosen. This was something she could fight.

"Literally I suppose it is, Bob; actually—I mean in the spirit of the situation—it is not. I was young and very foolish when I met Eric. I thought I loved him. Perhaps I did. Certainly the thrilling, hot-and-cold, ecstasy-and-anguish feeling I'd read of and never felt before was awakened by—by Eric. I told you when we were married I was afraid it might be—by some man I'd never met. It happened to be Eric. But, Bob—"

"a forlorn little laugh escaped her pale lips. 'I found it—that sort of emotion—a much overrated thing! It didn't stand up again your need of me—against my desire to be with you when—the when the crash came. I—'"

"That's enough! I don't want a wife who lives with me because she is sorry for me!"

"I don't think I was exactly sorry for you then, Bob. And certainly I'm not now. I'm only sorry for myself if you're going to let Eric make trouble between us. Why—"

"she faced him with hands outspread in a gesture unconsciously dramatic—"what was his coming here tonight but the angry gesture of a man scorned, rejected? I'd hurt his vanity—badly, in New York; he wanted to punish me by trying to destroy my happiness with you. Are you going to let him, Bob?"

"He seemed not to hear her. 'All these years when I thought you were such a good little sport—when I told myself that you must love me all or you'd not have gone along—'"

"It was true, Bob!"

"—it was because you were sorry for me; you pitied the silly young ass who had thrown away his father's money, the business that had been left him. Pats was honest—"

"Sue! She would not stay with the husband she'd stopped loving. You were a traitor to both Faraday and me; to him when you turned back at Kansas City, to me when you left me."

"I came back to you, Bob!"

"Purely because of an accident. If the failure had come one day later, you'd have been with Faraday. All this—"

"he swept an arm about the room—"would never have been. The children would never have been born. Oh, my God," he groaned, "think of that! My children owe their very existence to the accident of a business failing one day instead of the next!"

Nothing To Forgive
SHE swallowed past the lump in her throat. "Most human relationships develop from chance, Bob. If you hadn't driven your car into mine on the top of Wyeth Hill, we'd never have met—the children would never have been born. And there was something more than accident in my return to you; there was my own will, my decision."

"He said: 'Faraday tells me that for days afterward he wired you, called you from New York. And I knew nothing about it! Fool that I was—kept telling myself that there was one bright spot in the mess I'd made of things, that you were standing by me.'"

"And wasn't I, Bob?"

"That I might have—have put aside," he said moodily, choosing his words. "It was a long time ago, people change. I've changed a lot myself. But to listen to that confounded smug voice telling me that now—now—two short weeks ago, you'd admitted to him in New York that you felt for him what you'd never felt for me—"

you were away? Pearson had bought out the old Treddon business in St. Joseph; it's to be Pearson's Peerless Treadons. I've had Allen angling for weeks to buy back our house—the one I bought for you when we were married. I was keeping it just waiting for you to come back for a surprise. I thought—the children can live in Sue's home town. She can have her old friends about her again. She and I can try to collect furniture as much like that first lot as it's possible. I can make up to her at last for what I lost. She was just waiting for Allen to bring the deed to surprise you with my news. Now—"

"Now," Sue's voice caught it up, "you're making a mountain out of a molehill, Bob dear. Nothing's changed between us. Except—"

"And now he's here. I love you as I always hoped to love my husband. You said yourself that I seemed happier since I came home from New York."

"Yes, with Faraday having promised to follow you!"

"The bitter words were cut short by the closing of the door.

'Model Pair'
"YOU'RE sure there's nothing I wrong, Sis?" Allen asked anxiously.

"What should be wrong, Buddy? Bob's gone East to see Mr. Pearson. He told you that when he telephoned you."

"I know. But he was in such a tearing hurry to get hold of the house, he talked as if you'd be moving in—as soon as it could be refurnished. And now he's been gone almost a month. It's his pose—"

"he hesitated—"it was his manner when I talked to him. He seemed—unlike himself."

"Sue's hands went steadily on with her sewing. She was sitting with her brother on the side porch which overlooked the garden, beyond which lay the river. She was finishing a little dress for Susan, and she busied herself with it determinedly.

"Perhaps it was because he was so excited about the new company," she commented. "Revising the old name—at least combining it with the Peerless products; and getting our old house back." She changed the subject abruptly.

"Where, by the way, are you and Barbara going to live, Allen?"

"At once her affairs were forgotten. Allen launched gaily upon his own.

"You'll never guess, Sue! And it's Barb's choice, not mine. Not being in the shoe business, and the career engineering being his more prospective, he has for the last half dozen years, I can't afford country estates for my—my wife. There was something almost boyishly shy in the way he said the last word. 'I made a clean breast of my assets and liabilities to Barb; the old furniture in storage, my surplus bank account, my salary. And she's come out strong for—the brick dining room—kitchen place where you and Bob first lived after his firm's failure! What do you think of that?'"

"Good for Barb!" She laid down her work and looked at him with an affectionate smile.

"Don't I know it! Barbara, and the right kind of a home, and—children! Barbara wants children, she says. That's partly why we're renting the old brick house. It leaves us a nice margin for those kids we both are counting on. Yep, sis, yours one of these days, I hope!"

"Barb's coming to visit me soon?" She promised!

"She says if she knew when Bob expects to come back she's set the day. She thinks you're lonely without him."

"A sudden mist veiled the dark eyes which were gazing at him affectionately. 'I am, oh, I am, Allen! I miss him—terribly!'"

"You two!" He was indulgent, approving. "You're a model pair, Sis; and to think I had my doubts about your marrying him! Some—"

she got the impression that you how I love him enough. I was so wrapped up in Pats I guess I measured all emotion by my own. Well, I must be on my way! Give the old boy my best when you write!"

POSTAL ODDITIES

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN WAS NOT THE FIRST POSTMASTER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES NOR WAS HE EVER!!
U.S. STAMPS ON SALE
IN THE MONTREAL (CANADA) POST OFFICE!
DRAWN BY JOHN BAER

Although Benjamin Franklin served as Postmaster General of what is now known as the United States longer than any other person, he was never actually Postmaster General of the United States of America. The first Postmaster General of the United States was Samuel Osgood. Odd Isn't It?

An idea of the Roosevelt popularity in this state—but it will not be the delegation will, as usual, be selected, branched and controlled by politicians whose principal guiding star will be expediency and a sincere desire to be on the winning side. Your Raleigh reporter has talked with visitors from all sections of the state and from conversation with them has obtained many and various views; but not one single, solitary soul has flatly said he thought Roosevelt would lose the state. If he seeks a third term—and by far a majority of those interviewed believe he would be the choice of Tar Heel Democrats in a statewide presidential primary.

One University of North Carolina professor—himself an Anti-New Dealer—said he would give any Republican opponent of President Roosevelt a chance in only one Congressional District of the State—the Sixth.

One Wake county farmer, who dabbles in politics as a side issue said that in his immediate section there is very widespread resentment against the Administration's farm program—particularly at the manner in which it forced farmers to vote for tobacco control on threat to do absolutely nothing for them if they didn't support it.

"There's a heap of us who never voted anything but the Democratic ticket who will not vote for Roosevelt, or anybody who has supported the New Deal's farm policies," he said.

Others—in fact most of those interviewed have had something to say against certain features of the Roosevelt New Deal. Some objected to one agency or policy, others to different ones; but almost all wound up by saying they are completely in sympathy with the Roosevelt objectives and will vote for him in preference to anyone the Republicans might name.

It has been a very noticeable fact that practically nobody expressed opposition to a third term who didn't almost in the same breath indicate it is Roosevelt—and not a theoretical third term—to whom he is opposed.

All in all, it's this corner's opinion—given for what it's worth which probably isn't much—that FDR is still by far the most popular candidate for the Democratic nomination and for reelection.

HOME GARDENS BODY BUILDER

Should Contain At Least 12 Kinds of Vegetables

Raleigh, Jan. 11.—Every home garden should contain at least 12 different kinds of vegetables, exclusive of Irish and sweet potatoes, says H. R. Niswonger, horticulturist of the State College Extension service. The various types of vegetables serve different purposes in building up and maintaining health, he explained.

For growth and body repair, dried peas and beans are needed. For minerals, a person should eat tomatoes, cabbage, potatoes, greens, and root vegetables. For energy for work and play, the body needs Irish and sweet potatoes. For regulating body functions the recommended types are leafy vegetables, dried beans and peas, and bulk and water is supplied by leafy vegetables.

Here are 16 vegetables which Niswonger suggests that the home garden contain: Irish and sweet potatoes are "musts." The other 14, of which at least 12 should be grown, are: Cabbage, collards, carrots, cowpeas, beets, garden peas, kale and rape, lima beans, okra, onions, spinach, turnips, tomatoes, and sweet corn.

The horticulturist also said that a home garden plan is not complete unless it has one or more kinds of small fruits growing in connection with the vegetables in order to help balance the food supply.

"Fruits are fleshy and juicy, and contain 80 to 90 per cent water," he said. "The minerals constitute a goodly portion of the solids and help to regulate body functions. They contain natural sugars which furnish body energy. Fruits are laxatives similar to bottled mineral waters. Fruits offset the acid-forming conditions when consuming large quantities of cereals, meat, and bread."

Photographers Of The Press To Meet

Raleigh, Jan. 13.—The first State gridiron dinner will furnish at least one superlative for North Carolina. It will be the most photographed affair ever held in Tar Heel.

Thirty members of the Carolinas Press Photographers Association will be on hand with cameras and bulbs to see that their own little shindig is amply covered. An especially large and ancient camera will be secured, with which the camera boys say, they are going to compel Governor Hoey to make their picture. As the most-often pictured governor in the state's history, the governor will be asked to return the favor and make a picture of the lensmen.

The gridiron dinner will be held in Raleigh, February 4, with about 200 "most photographed" public figures of the state present. Jake Houston, of the Charlotte Observer, is president of the association.

Economy Records Set By Products of Ford

Los Angeles, Jan 13—Outstanding official records for fuel economy were scored by Ford, Mercury and Lincoln-Zephyr cars in capturing two firsts and one second place in the 1940 running of the annual Gilmore-Yosemite economy run January 4, the contest committee announced today.

The records were made the more remarkable by the fact the 306.5-mile run, which leads from near sea level to an altitude of more than 6,000 feet, was made in severe rain and sleet storms.

The Lincoln-Zephyr V-12 captured top honors in class H for the third straight year when a stock model sedan averaged 19.90 miles per gallon over the difficult route.

Official American Automobile Association tabulations showed that the Lincoln-Zephyr made 49,329 ton miles per gallon. The car obtained greater actual mileage per gallon than several cars in lower price brackets, as well as making a better showing than a 1939 model of the same make scored in winning its class in the same contest a year ago.

A 1940 Mercury 8 won in class D with a mark of 23.76 actual miles per gallon over the rainswept course. The Mercury, a stock sedan carrying a driver and four passengers, outclassed most of the 28 entries in the run by making a ton-mile average of 50,822, the official AAA contest figures show.

An 85-horsepower Ford V-8 far surpassed the two other volume production cars in its price class, and turned in a record of 24.92 actual miles per gallon and 51,420 ton miles per gallon. This was the highest mileage made in the run by any car not equipped with an over-drive.

The Ford was a stock model sedan, in competition with the winning car in class B which was equipped with overdrive and free wheeling. Rules of the contest forbade cars not having special equipment to coast down hills. Officials results showed a second volume production car to be next behind the Ford with a mark of 22.87 miles per gallon, followed by a third volume production car with 22.54 actual miles and 45,164 ton miles per gallon.

Rules of the contest required the drivers to negotiate the course in not more than 10 1-2 hours. Disobedience of traffic laws, as well as coasting or trick driving, were prohibited. Twenty-eight cars representing 14 makers competed in the run which took them from Gilmore Stadium in Los Angeles to the floor of picturesque Yosemite Valley in the Sierras.

The 140 hatcheries of the Kansas Hatcherymen's association are expected to hatch 27,000,000 chicks in 1940, officials of the organization reported recently at a convention here.

Seamen's Atlantic Mail Ride Waves In Tin Cans

AP Feature Service
Miami Beach, Fla.—Many a fishing cruiser captain off Miami Beach acts as an unofficial mailman these troubled days at sea.

The cruiser skippers keep a sharp lookout, not only for fish, but also for tiny buoys carrying the "Atlantic mail."

Merchant seamen, some of them homesick American sailors, place their letters in tin cans, seal the receptacle with wax, weigh them with scrap iron, attach white flags, and toss them overboard in the hope they will be picked up off-shore and mailed home.

Some of the letters are sent by seamen aboard freighters from beligerent nations, men who hope that their messages will reach relatives at home.

"Atlantic Buoy No. 18," picked up by Captain John Cass of the fishing cruiser Dolphin after the can had been floating four days, contained 32 Christmas greetings. It's pictured here.

College is Defeated in Last Seconds of Game

Loses to Norfolk Naval Base By 51-49 Score

Red Dunn of the United States Naval Base (Norfolk Division) sank a beautiful basket on the last play of the game here Saturday night as the Snakes faced East Carolina Teachers college 51-49 in one of the roughest and closest basketball games ever witnessed here.

The score was deadlocked 24-24 at intermission and was tied 49-49 only 42 seconds before the final horn. Last-half play was nip-and-tuck all the way, with George Lautares of Greenville, who saw little action in the first-half, running up ten points in this period.

The score was tied five times in the opening half. Fouls were rather frequent, 16 personals being charged against both teams.

Bill Shelton and Don Brock scored 13 points each to lead the Pirates' scoring. Lautares trailed with an even dozen.

Captain C. J. Foust, lanky forward, with 20, was the pacesetter for the rough visitors.

This was Norfolk's ninth win in an even dozen starts.

The ECTC junior varsity eked a 26-25 verdict over Jamesville high school in a preliminary game. ECTC led 17-13 at the half. Baucan with 9 led the junior varsity. T. Martin with 13 paced the losers.

Bill Shelton, who did plenty of shining last season, was up to his old playing standard in Saturday's encounter, but missed 8 free throws, which could have given the locals a triumph. Brock entered the game with a cold, but that didn't seem to retard his progress. Dave Watson played a nice game, as did Floyd Hinton and Tom Parrish, the latter being a former Greenville high school varsity star.

TRUCK OWNERS TO BE AT MEET

Fifty Expected to Attend First Safety School

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Jan. 17.—Director Edward W. Ruggles of the State College Extension Division announced today that advance registrations indicate that about fifty operators and others interested in safety will attend a two-day safety school for truck operators, at the College on January 17 and 18.

The school will be the first of its kind ever conducted in North Carolina, Ruggles said.

Practical methods for increasing safety on the highways will be emphasized, with experts leading discussions and presenting demonstrations. The course is open to operators, drivers, safety supervisors, dispatchers and anyone else interested in highway safety. Truck line officials, college technicians and safety experts will appear on the program.

The State Industrial Commission and the State Highway Safety Division are official agencies which will also give its full cooperation in participating.

Harry Tucker of State College, professor of highway engineering and nationally known authority on highway safety, will preside over the discussions. Operators will register from 8:30 to 11 a. m. Wednesday, January 17, in Room 207 of the Civil Engineering Building, and the safety school will begin immediately after a short welcoming address by Colonel J. W. Harrelson, dean of Administration.

First speaker of the instruction program will be Charles Ray, Richmond, Va., safety engineer. Methods of selecting and training personnel, proper selections of vehicular equipment, maintenance of vehicles, head the list of topics for discussion. Laboratory demonstrations will deal with drivers' reaction time.

(The popular fiction and screen team plunge into what they call a "stream of unconsciousness"—for Rabbin Coons, on vacation.)

Hollywood.—Now there's no use getting panicky. I guess if Coons can do it every day I can do it once.

Do what? Write a column. But what do you write? Why did I get into this anyway?

You know darned well why. Because you never learned to say the word "No." That's why. One little two-letter word, and you couldn't learn it. I suppose they cut it out of the dictionary you used in school. If you'd learned it you'd still have that lawn-mower and about $500.

And you wouldn't have been dragged into talk on glad, the past and future, at the Peter Pan club.

This isn't getting me anywhere. I'm hysterical, that's what. Hysterical. I've got to concentrate. I've season in an effort to topple the undefeated Serpents.

The probable starting lineup consists of Larry James, high-jumping junior at center, Charles Williams and J. B. Kittrell at guard posts, Burney Warren and George Sakas, dependable goal-shooters, as forwards.

The Phantoms will meet their old rivals, the Pam Pack, of Washington in that city Friday night of this week.

HIGHS TO FACE TARBORO TEAM

Journey to Edgecomb City For Battle Tonight

SPORTS. 42 HIGHS. J—MM
With a record of three victories and one defeat the Flying Phantoms will journey to Tarboro tonight to meet the Snakes of that city. The Snakes will attempt to insert their fans into Herman Dally's green wave at 7:30 sharp.

Coach Dally's fast-stepping Phantoms were handed their only defeat of the season by the Kingston Red Devils on their home hardwood last Friday night.

The highly-touted Tarboro quint has remained undefeated for two seasons up to the present date. Last year they boosted one of the strongest teams in Eastern Carolina.

The local varsity enters the game as the under dog, but it is expected to put up its best fight of the entire

Capitol's Page Boys Wage Political Fight

Republican and Democratic page boys in the House of Representatives at Washington settled the differences with a snowball fight in front of the capitol—and the result was a draw. When this picture was made, the Republican boys (note sign) were peppering their Democratic rivals with well-aimed missiles.

got to think what would interest the story about putting up the box people who read columns. What do people who read columns look like, anyway? Stop that. Stop that at once! You're only making things worse.

I wonder... would they be interested in rural stuff? Little stories about the ranch? ... No. Nobody's interested in a ranch unless he owns one, and then he wants to talk about the blue ribbons he won on his cauliflowers instead of listening to what the cutworms did to your cabbages. Awful bores, people who own ranches.

Would they be interested in animals? What's interesting about having three dogs, six cats, a cow, a horse, and two monkeys? Anybody can have three dogs, six cats, a cow, a horse and two monkeys. Anybody who's crazy enough. And if you tell

Maybe I could give a little good advice to young writers. They're always sending letters, asking how to write novels, and plays, and scenarios. Yeah—and you're always telling 'em. But who wants to work when it's easier to just sit down and write, like Saroyan?

How about doing a little business in the Who's Who line? Tossing in big names, casually, like dog meat. That always seems to get over. "As Greta said to me at lunch only last week—" or "As I told dear old Hughie—" because he doesn't wear a mustache, you know."

No. That won't work. You've got to have practice for that.

Speaking of time, how much longer have I? Ten minutes? Now I know just how the doomed man feels when he hears the firing squad marching down the hall. But all he has to face is death. I've got to face Coons.

Who does this Coons guy think he is, anyway?

Where does he get the idea he rates a vacation?

What work does he do just sitting at a typewriter and clicking out a column—one little, short column—a day?

Oh, he's on the phone, is he? Well, you just tell him I'm out. I've gone on a vacation. I'm counting on him as guest-novelist to write our next book... and it had better be good!

Terrier Cheats Demon Fire
Winchester, Ky.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. John Hackett and their four children slept soundly while fire slowly ate its way across the roof of their home.

Outside, neighbors turned in a fire alarm and sought to awaken the family by shouting to them inside, "Tucky," a bull terrier, was heard barking loudly.

Finally, the dog dashed upstairs, jumped on the bed of one of the children, and began scratching her face with his paws.

The girl quickly awakened other members of the family and all escaped without injury just before the roof caved in.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Jan. 15 - (AP) - The stock market tried to put a foot forward today, but stumbled after a mild advance at the start. Dealings, sluggish on the half-hearted recovery attempt, picked up a bit as prices gave ground. Losses of fractions to more than a point predominated near the fourth hour. U. S. Steel and Bethlehem were among the first to step down. These were followed by Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Anaconda, General Electric, International Mercantile Marine and Loft.

Inconstant Reader Catches Up

Reno, Nev. - (AP) - On Christmas day, 1914, Ernest C. Bennett was in a milk wreck at Imlay, Nev., but traffic was quickly restored and Bennett went on to his destination without knowing exactly what happened. Recently he gratified a longstanding curiosity, went to a newspaper office here, and looked up the story of the wreck in the files. Now he knows what occurred.

ROADSIDE ACCIDENT - AT SAME DISTANCE

Fern Prairie, Wash. - (AP) - Clay Roberts, Fern Prairie farmer, is going to build his fences farther from the road. Farmer Roberts went to his pasture recently and found a valuable milk cow straggled out stiffer than a side of beef in a meat refrigerator. The veterinarian said the cow was killed by a heavy, blunt object - perhaps a stone thrown by the tire tread of a passing car.

FARM AGENTS BACK ON DUTY

Return from Successful Meeting At N.C. State

Raleigh, Jan. 15 - The 280 farm and home agents of the Agricultural Extension Service were back on the job in the 100 counties today after a week spent at State College in conference on a program of "A Richer Rural Life in North Carolina." They voted the conference by far the best they have ever held, with more constructive discussion and planning than at any similar meeting of its type.

The agents carried with them a pledge of the Extension Service to support the Southern governor's campaign for balanced prosperity in the south during the next decade. They heard J. B. Hutson, assistant AAA administrator, warn that a more diversified system of farming is imperative in 1940 to counteract the effects of "an inevitable decline" in tobacco income.

The Extension workers heard themselves hailed by a number of speakers as "the leaders in agricultural education for the past 25 years," these speakers including Dr. C. W. Warburton, director of Extension for the United States Department of Agriculture; and R. Flake Shaw, Guilford county farmer and county commissioner.

Eleven counties were awarded certificates of recognition for earning more than 90 per cent of their soil building payments under the AAA program in 1938. The counties and their farm agents are: Anson, J. W. Cameron; Perquimans, L. W. Anderson; Hyde, A. J. Harrell; Tyrrell, H. H. Harris; Scotland, E. O. Mc-

Mahan; Hoke, A. K. Knowles; Mecklenburg, Oscar Phillips; Stanly, J. E. Wilson; Cabarrus, R. D. Goodman; Union, T. J. W. Brown; and McDowell, S. L. Homewood.

Prairie Polo

Wenatchee, Wash. - (AP) - Pat Kinzel, aviator for the Wenatchee Daily World, has found a new sport - chasing coyotes with a plane in eastern Washington's wheat country. It's the funniest thing I've ever seen," Kinzel says. "I swoop down and circle over a coyote. He'll run for a while and then lie down on his back, paw the air and snap his jaws at the plane, trying to bite it as it roars over him."

Riding Highwayman

Buenos Aires - (AP) - From far-off, tropical and under-populated Chaco territory, reports percolating through say, "Mate Cocido" ("Stewed Tea") is on the loose again at the head of his horshack gang of highwaymen, kidnaping teen-age girls, robbing from horse-drawn carts on the roads and taking banks and stores by storm. National forces are riding hard to catch him.
